Frat may take over Varsity House

The Clinton Street property was recently purchased by the UI; it soon may house Sigma Alpha Mu.

By Avian Carrasquillo
The Daily Iowan

The UI's purchase of the Varsity House, 322 N. Clinton St., could mean a new location for the 27 members of Sigma Alpha Mu fraternity.

Scott Weisman, a UI sophomore and the Sigma Alpha Mu president, said the fraternity has been looking at the house for several months.

"We're looking at the property and working out the details with the UI," he said.

Linda Annis, an administrative assistant for the UI business office, would not comment on the UI's role in the negotiations. She said more information could be available within the week.

The property was owned by Omicron Holding Corp., which is composed of Delta Tau Delta alumni who had been leasing the property to Varsity House for use as a private men's dormitory.

While the UI would not divulge any information regarding the situation, Mike Manfull of the Omicron Holding Corp. said the deal with the UI was set in early March, and the university would take possession of the property on June 30.

"The price was set, and they accepted the offer, but they did not specify what they were going to do with the property," Manfull said.

Manfull would not release the terms of sale, but said the property had been appraised as high as $600,000.

John Phipps, who currently leases the property, said he was aware of the possibility of losing it.

"It doesn't surprise me that the UI purchased the property," he said. "I know it's had its eye on it for a while, but there's still a possibility it could lease it to me."

The private dormitory was established after the Delta Tau Delta fraternity was suspended by its national headquarters for alleged drug and alcohol violations.

The Sigma Alpha Mu fraternity house is currently located at 707 N. Dubuque St.

"Even though we're in a house, we think the property would be an ideal location — right on campus near the dorms," Weisman said. "If the transaction is completed, it's uncertain how long it would be before we move in."

Two injured in downtown stabbing

Two rugby players, one from the UI and one from Northern Illinois, were stabbed early on April 29.

By Christoph Trappe
The Daily Iowan

Two college students were injured on April 29 in a stabbing incident on South Dubuque Street at approximately 2 a.m.

Paul Zepezauer, a UI senior and rugby player, and Mike Bennett, a freshman at Northern Illinois University and also a rugby player, were walking northbound on Dubuque Street when both were stabbed by an unidentified individual during an altercation.

A group of people passed Bennett and Zepezauer, who were walking with three other people. One of the passing individuals asked Bennett for a cigarette, Bennett said.

"I said, 'No, smoking is bad,' and then this one guy came back and got all aggressive," Bennett said.

"He pushed me around a little bit, and then somebody started yelling that the cops were coming." The alleged assailant ran northbound on Dubuque Street, Bennett said.

"The weird thing is, we can't even figure out who stabbed us," he said. "We even walked a couple more feet until we realized we had been stabbed."

The assailant is described as a white male, 20-23 years old, approximately 6 feet tall, weighing 180-200 pounds. Two women accompanied the man and were described as having blonde, medium-length hair.

Bennett was stabbed three times, and Zepezauer was stabbed four times.

Both individuals were taken to the UI Hospitals and Clinics Emergency Trauma Center by car and cab, Bennett said.

"Paul took a cab, and I got a ride from some people to the emergency room," he said.

Zepezauer underwent surgery early on April 29 and will remain in the hospital for at least a few more days. He is listed in fair condition. Bennett spent the day in the hospital and was released late on April 29.

"My wounds were bigger, but Paul's were deeper," Bennett said. "That's why they didn't have to operate on me."

Bennett was in Iowa City because his Northern Illinois rugby team faced the Iowa rugby team on April 29.

Tasting & racing under beautiful blue skies

RiverFest ended Sunday with the Old Capitol Criterium and Taste of Iowa City.

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

Under blue skies and 70-degree temperatures, RiverFest 2000 raced to a close Sunday afternoon.

Among the final day's activities were the Old Capitol Criterium Bike Race, the Taste of Iowa City and carnival rides in Hubbard Park, which drew people from around the area to the UI campus.

"We simply couldn't ask for a better weekend," said UI sophomore Eric Harlan, the RiverFest volunteer coordinator. "The weather was just awesome. We had an excellent turnout, especially on Friday night, and everything ran smoothly. It's a big relief it's over, but it was well-worth the work."

Jason McCartney took the title in the category pro I and II bike race. The race featured the most experienced racers in the cycling field. McCartney is training for the Olympic trials and is considered one of the top cyclists in the United States, said race announcer Ben Krieg.

Jay Friday won the category III race Sunday, while Aaron Rukgaber beat out more than 60 other competitors in a crowded category IV and V race, held for those with little racing experience.

One race accident did put a damper on the festivities, however, when Iowa City resident Josh Tack

Local church offers support to Claiborne's mother

The pastor says Lillie Claiborne is going through a process of "spiritual healing."

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

The mother of Tarsha Claiborne clapped and sang along with approximately 20 members of a local church in a special prayer service Sunday afternoon.

The service at the Bethel African Methodist Episcopal Church, 411 S. Governor St., was held in an effort to help the Claiborne family heal, said the pastor of the church, the Rev. Orlando Dial.

"Our purpose isn't to address the legal issues. We'll let the courts do that," he said. "We just want to reach out and show that God cares."

Although Lillie Claiborne, Tarsha Claiborne's mother, is not a member of the church, she has been regularly attending the church's services, Dial said. The Claibornes are active members of Greater King David Baptist Church in Baton Rouge, La.

Lillie Claiborne continues to go through a process of spiritual healing, Dial said.

"She's doing better. Emotionally, physically and spiritually, she's getting stronger," he said.

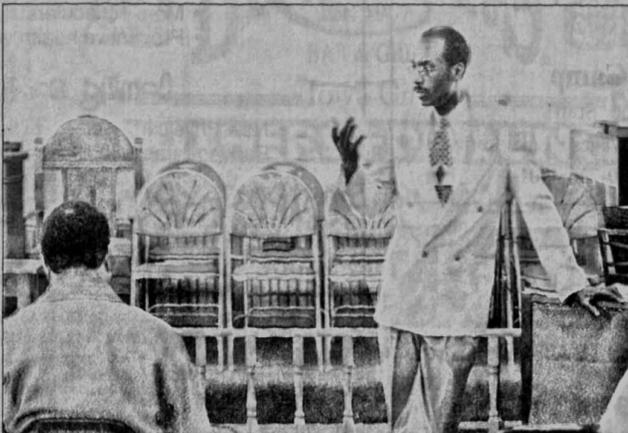

Sunday's prayer service was "very moving," said Jacinda Townsend, a UI graduate student who was in attendance.

"This is what church is all about — sharing compassion and trying to offer spiritual healing," she said.

Like the Claibornes, Townsend is originally a member of a Southern Baptist church. She said the atmosphere of the church is similar to her original church in that it offers a sense of community.

Tarsha Claiborne is being held on a $53,500 cash-only bond in Johnson County Jail after allegedly admitting to threatening the lives and safety of her classmates through a series of e-mails and incidents in the past month. One of the e-mails included a bomb threat that shut down the Dental Science Building.

On April 20, authorities arrested Tarsha Claiborne at her residence, 2427 Bartelt Road Apt. 2A, and charged her with six counts of third-degree harassment, criminal trespass/hate crime, threats in violation of individual rights and possession of a schedule I controlled substance. County Attorney J. Patrick White said Sunday that evidence in the case that may be used to file federal charges against Tarsha Claiborne is still being reviewed by his office.

Lillie Claiborne did not comment Sunday.

Tarsha Claiborne, 23, will appear in the Johnson County Courthouse Tuesday at 3 p.m. for a bond-reduction hearing. The court will consider

Mathematician receives $200,000 NSF grant

Laurent Jay, a UI assistant professor of mathematics, has received a five-year, $200,000 grant from the National Science Foundation to study the numerical solution of differential-algebraic equations and use the software tools resulting from the study in joint projects with industry, research laboratories and universities.

The project results are expected to have application to a variety of research fields, including rigid and flexible multi-body dynamics, classical molecular dynamics and flight formation of multiple coordinated spacecraft.

The project will include opportunity for undergraduate participation and for graduate students to collaborate with industry and to write master's and doctoral theses. Particular attention will be paid to reaching out to minority students.

Lord of the prance

PALOS HEIGHTS, Ill. (AP) — Michael Flatley took a break from the European tour of his latest dance extravaganza to drop into his old neighborhood with a check for $100,000.

Flatley, creator and star of "Lord of the Dance," donated the money on April 28 to Elm Christian School, which serves students with developmental disabilities, including Flatley's 14-year-old niece. Flatley grew up in nearby Oak Lawn, Ill.

He came in from Germany, where the sold-out tour of "Feet of Flames" was touring.

"I love this school," Flatley said, as his niece stood by during a check presentation ceremony. "They've done such a marvelous job taking care of my niece ... That's worth all the money in the world to see her smiling and being very content in her environment."

The money will go toward a $3 million project to expand and renovate a house where some of the students, including his niece, live.

Passing the friendship reins

ATLANTA (AP) — A son of former President Jimmy Carter is taking over the Friendship Force, the international cultural-exchange organization founded during Carter's presidency.

James E. "Chip" Carter III will take over leadership of the nonprofit, Atlanta-based group today. The next day, he leads 57 Friendship Force ambassadors on a two-week trip to the Middle East.

Wayne Smith, who established the organization with the help of Jimmy and Rosalynn Carter in 1977, is retiring but will remain a consultant.

Chip Carter, 50, was active in the early years of the organization and has served as its vice president of international development for two years.

In 1999, the organization conducted 275 exchanges with 6,000 citizen ambassadors traveling to 55 countries.

Russian mammals take over Sycamore Mall

After losing its space at the Old Capitol mall, the exhibit will head for Sycamore Mall.

By Christoph Trappe
The Daily Iowan

An international mammal exhibit will open in Sycamore Mall May 10 and run through September 15.

The "Great Russian Mammals" arrived in Iowa City April 26 and will be on display in the former Children's Museum space at the mall, said Jim Larew, the president of the Iowa City Area Science Center.

"We have a total of 77 species that will be on display," said Peter Kondrashov, a scientist at the Paleontological Institute of Russia, in Moscow. "One of them is a 30-foot-tall mammal."

Although Larew said he is happy with the space at the mall, Sycamore Mall was not his or the Russian center's first choice. "We had a contract with Old Capitol mall," Larew said. "When we went over there on Wednesday, they basically denied us the keys because they had just rented the space out to another tenant."

The owners of Old Capitol Town Center offered Larew another space for the exhibition, but it was not large enough, Larew said. He then called Gerry Ambrose, one of the owners of Sycamore Mall, and asked him for help.

Lisa Rowe, the Old Capitol Town Center property administrator and marketing director, could not be reached for comment Sunday.

"We had available space, and it's a great exposure for Sycamore Mall," Ambrose said. "We thought it's a worthwhile organization, and it will bring some traffic to the mall."

All the revenue generated from the exhibit will go to the Russian scientists, Ambrose said.

Alexei Vlasov, a technician for the Russian Paleontological Center, assembles a cave bear at Sycamore Mall Sunday afternoon.

"Some of the scientists make $40 per month in Russia," Larew said. "This can help them in their research and their life."

The times for the show are not definite, but it will be open during most mall hours, Larew said. Tickets for the exhibition will be $4 for adults and $3 for children and students.

Council cool to SAS proposal to withdraw from FLA

The council will discuss the SAS proposal tonight.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

UI Students Against Sweatshops is bringing its fight to rid the UI of sweatshop-made apparel to the Iowa City City Council — but some councilors say that is not within their jurisdiction.

"We don't own that land, we don't have jurisdiction over that land, we have zero say over what the university does," said Councilor Dee Vanderhoef.

Tonight, the council will discuss a resolution drafted by SAS to recommend that the UI "immediately" withdraw from the Fair Labor Association, a sweatshop-monitoring group that has been criticized for the number of its representatives who are apparel-makers.

On April 3, the UI officially joined the Worker Rights Consortium, a student-based coalition of schools targeting sweatshop conditions overseas. The move came one day after an SAS sit-in at Jessup Hall, which lasted six days and ended with the arrest of five SAS members.

"I would not support the resolution at all," said Mayor Ernie Lehman. "For us to get involved, I think, is very inappropriate. It's something that doesn't really

I think there are a lot of folks making a whole lot of statements without facts. Who's right? If we don't know what we're doing, we should stay out.

— Ernie Lehman,
Iowa City mayor

involve the city of Iowa City."

SAS was encouraged to solicit the council's support after March 30, when the city stopped the purchase of city apparel suspected to be made in sweatshops, said UI junior Kristen Gast, an SAS member.

"Because a plurality of their constituents are employed or go to the university, they need to take a responsibility," she said. "I think that stating their support, at this point, is the most they can do."

Students' traditionally limited involvement in city government does not show them to be an active constituency with a voice that the council is likely to listen to, Lehman said.

The mayor said he doubts whether there will be interest among the councilors to support the resolution, even though no one supports sweatshop labor.

"I think there are a lot of folks making a whole lot of statements without facts," he said. "Who's right? If we don't know what we're doing, we should stay out."

Earlier this year, the Philadelphia City Council passed a resolution supporting University of Pennsylvania students in their fight against sweatshop labor, said UI graduate student Ned Bertz, a member of SAS.

"The university and the town should be in constant communication," he said, adding that the council is an example of the leadership the UI should follow.

Councilor Steven Kanner, who supports the resolution and has participated in SAS demonstrations, said the material he has seen has impressed him.

"I find the evidence presented to me to be overwhelming that the FLA is not an organization successful in stopping sweatshop labor," he said. "We should look at our actions and the actions of others in our own city and worldwide."

Nike Chairman Phil Knight's announcement last week that he would no longer donate money to his alma mater, the University of Oregon, because it had joined the WRC is an example of the FLA's failure to protect workers' rights, Kanner said.

Nike's refusal on April 27 to renew a six-year contract with the University of Michigan, a member of the WRC, is an important decision that could affect the UI's association with the FLA and WRC, Bertz said.

"It's clear the UI isn't pulling out of the FLA because of its fear of retribution from Nike," Bertz said, adding that Michigan is the largest market in collegiate apparel. "I wish the UI would take a similar, courageous stance."

SAS will hold a speak-out on the Pedestrian Mall at noon and hold a picnic today, he said. Protests to take place this week will be announced today, Bertz said, adding that future presentations will be given at UI residence halls.

The resolution is only one aspect of a multi-faceted program, Gast said. SAS is currently working with local and nationwide schools and meeting with local religious groups, she said.

Sprinkler accident floods dorm floor

A Mayflower resident accidentally breaks a sprinkler head by tossing a ball.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

With two weeks left in the academic year, some UI students living in Mayflower Residence Hall wonder who will pay for damages caused to their property during a fire sprinkler accident on April 27.

A sprinkler head on the fifth floor of the AB tower in Mayflower showered water for 20 minutes after UI freshman Nathan Stuart accidentally broke it at approximately 8 p.m. The break set off the fire alarm and displaced the building's 1,050 residents for approximately one hour.

UI freshman Karen Larsen, who lives on the fourth floor of the AB tower, estimates the damage caused to her books, bedding, clothes, disc man and other personal belongings at $300 to $400.

"It seems like (my roommate and I) had the most water damage," she said. "I was very upset because I know the school doesn't pay for it. The smell is absolutely terrible. It smells like a swamp."

Water reached the third floor of the AB tower in Mayflower, said David Coleman, the UI assistant director of residence life, adding that damage estimates are not available.

"Typically, when water of that magnitude strikes, it travels down, and the initial appearance of what is damaged may not represent the total damage," he said.

Residents were asked to fill out damage-assessment forms; information is currently being gathered, Coleman said.

Fourth-floor resident and UI sophomore Ben Segreto's new laptop was damaged by the water, but he said he understands it was an accident.

"I'm only concerned because I don't know when or who's going to pay for the damages," he said. "I think it's just ridiculous if (the UI) knows accidents will happen, and it can't plug the water."

Responsibility for the damages has not been determined, Coleman said; that will be discussed this week. The UI typically doesn't pay for such damages, but its actions are subject to the information being collected, he said.

"I hope we can get something figured out," Stuart said. "I'm really sorry this happened."

For students such as Segreto and Geoff Buchanan, a UI sophomore and fourth-floor resident whose printer has stopped working since the incident, insurance will cover the damages.

"I understand mistakes are made," Buchanan said. "I wouldn't go for a lawsuit against the kid."

Stuart will attend a hearing later today with Residence Services to determine what actions, if any, will be taken as a result of the accident.

Stuart said he was telling two friends he couldn't join them for a game of football outside and threw them a ball from his room. The ball struck the sprinkler head.

"I was quite shocked," he said. "I knew right then when it happened, 'Oh shit, this is going to be a big deal.'"

Stuart immediately contacted his residence assistant, who then informed the front desk, which was unable to turn off the sprinkler, he said.

The UI can not turn off any fire equipment until given the approval of the Fire Department, Coleman said.

"There were a few people who were upset, but the guy who did it was a really nice guy," said UI freshman Chalen Hunter, who lives across the hall from Stuart. "He's never really caused any problems."

Stuart said he spoke with the majority of the fifth-floor AB residents who were affected by the water, and most of their belongings were intact. The residents on the fourth floor are his main concern, Stuart said.

A professional cleaning service has been hired by the UI to service the areas damaged by the water, Coleman said.

'Maria' to talk on importance of Latino role models

■ Sonia Manzano will speak tonight in the IMU.

By Christy B. Logan
The Daily Iowan

In an age in which many television shows, newspapers and magazines gave little to no representation for the Latino community, Sonia Manzano dared to challenge the mainstream media.

The actress who portrays "Maria" on PBS's "Sesame Street" has a list of accomplishments that proves her desire for change.

Manzano will share her story tonight in a lecture titled "The Importance of Hispanic Role Models," an event sponsored by the UI Lecture Committee. The lecture will be held in the IMU second-floor ballroom at 7:30 p.m.

As a child growing up in the South Bronx, Manzano said, she rarely saw images of herself in television. With encouragement from high school teachers and a role in the off-Broadway play Godspell, Manzano spent her junior year at Carnegie Mellon University. Manzano set her sights high in creating positive Latino role models.

"I really think I've grown up to be what I needed to see on television," she said.

For nearly 28 years, Manzano has been an influential role model for children, and she is committed to positive portrayals of Latinos in broadcast media. She said her message of determination and persistence is one that she carries wherever she goes.

"You have to see obstacles sincerely and truthfully," Manzano said. "There is something to be said for showing real people and dealing with life. Minorities have to become decision makers."

UI senior Inez Cruz, a member of Sigma Lambda Gamma Latina and Native American sorority, said Manzano's presence on the show offers young people an identity to aspire to.

"It's important that we see ourselves represented in the media, because we are the largest-growing minority in the nation," Cruz said.

In 10 years as "Maria" on the set of "Sesame Street," Manzano has earned 12 Emmy Awards as part of the "Sesame Street" writing staff. She has also been honored by the Association of Hispanic Arts and Congressional Hispanic Caucus in Washington and has been nominated twice for an Emmy Award as Outstanding Performer in a Children's Series.

"We were looking to bring someone to the UI that could speak on an issue we hadn't addressed — Latin American studies," said UI senior Chad Doobay, the chairman of the Lecture Committee. "She's someone that many people are familiar with and recognize from childhood television."

FILM REVIEW

By Van Griffin

Sometimes accepting the infinite possibilities of an alternate reality can make sense of the reality in which we all exist. Often times, it's hard to accept wild notions when the only things tangible are the problems we face in our daily lives. But on the flipside, letting the irrational become temporarily rational and thus renegotiating our perceptions is a means of cultivating hope and understanding. And these intangibles can mean everything when things fall apart. Frequency is a good example of this mind-muddling notion. It's a film that travels through genres as much as it travels through time. It's a sci-fi/thriller/drama that bends reality as much as it straightens it out.

Jim Caviezel (The Thin Red Line, Ride With The Devil) plays John Sullivan, a cop on the outs with his girlfriend and in a spiritual bind.

When he finds his late father Frank's (Dennis Quaid) old ham radio, he discovers that he is able to communicate with him in the past. John informs Frank of his impending doom the day before it happens, saving his life and thus reorganizing history. But what at first seems like a supernatural blessing quickly gets slippery as the lives of others are also altered, even terminated. Seven lives hang in the balance because Frank's life is forsaken, and his wife and John's mother, Julia (Elizabeth Mitchell), is among those marked for murder.

Frequency is two movies squeezed into one fantastical and rearranged reality capsule. There is the 1999 world in which John exists, and there is the 1969 reality, the year of the Amazing Mets, in which Frank lives with his family. There are obvious loopholes in the story, such as why Frank doesn't immediately reappear after his life has been salvaged. Technicalities such as this could arouse mutiny in the script, but Toby Emmerich's morphing tale is too interesting to let go of so easily. It's more fun and rewarding to believe in the rationale set forth and to accept the movie for what it is. Essentially, Frequency is science fiction, but it's also metaphorical drama, asking the eternal question, "What if?" This is both the film's central M.O. and its literal message — What if?

Director Gregory Hoblit (Primal Fear, Fallen) does well in muddling reality and maintaining two worlds as one. The film is very dark, and its sulking atmosphere is only broken up by the intense action. A balance is established that grounds Frequency in its own reality, and this is a necessity if the fantastical aspect of the film is going to work. It holds together tightly, and the tweaked reality becomes more and more sensible.

Quaid's performance as the good-natured, fearless, fire-fighting family man is believable. Caviezel follows suit as less heroic and more human and discombobulated. Their diverse personae create a good interaction that acts as the nucleus of the film. Mitchell is great as the mother and wife of the two time crusaders. And the supporting cast of Andre Braugher and Noah Emmerich help to strengthen the overall narrative.

The script stutters a bit and feels too simplistic at times. The small arguments between Frank and Julia, and John and his girlfriend are close to clichéd, and it's good that both the scenes were short. These scenes feel like functional inserts that are supposed to dramatize things. But they're unneeded because better conceived and more subtle sequences clue us in on the respective dispositions and relationships of each character.

Miscues aside, Frequency is a good little Hollywood movie that trips up more in its dramatic aspect. There's a bit of irony there — it's easier to believe the unreal than the reality at times. Nonetheless, Frequency communicates its message with peculiar clairvoyance and minimal interference.

EDITORIAL BOARD

UI should withdraw from FLA

In recent years, few issues have sparked debate in the UI community like Students Against Sweatshops' demand that the UI withdraw from the Fair Labor Association and join the Worker Rights Consortium. While some students back SAS and others side with the administration, the majority of students simply seem alienated and ambivalent, wanting nothing more than an end to the whole subject.

These students are right — it is time for an end. It is time for the UI administration to bring closure to this debate by withdrawing from the FLA. Beyond the FLA's current inadequacy, withdrawal is justified by the symbolic message it would send to the organization and other universities. It would show the FLA that its members will not stand for inaction and demonstrate to other universities that risking an athletic-apparel contract to better guarantee sweat-free clothing is a worthy action.

Despite the appearance of legitimacy, questions about the FLA's ability and its constituents' desires to seriously fight sweatshop labor abound. Despite three years of existence, the FLA inexplicably has yet to take any action. Also, the FLA's accountability system is grossly inadequate. While a corporation receives a full report of an inspection's results, the FLA itself must wait two months for a simple summary — and the public sees nothing. Without this information, the public is prevented from exercising its economic muscle in favor of companies that follow the rules.

In addition, while many have argued for remaining with the FLA, believing that it and the WRC can together fight sweatshop abuses more effectively, many of the association's corporate players have no intention of cooperating with WRC. The lack of corporate influence in the WRC combined with its more stringent standards of only unannounced inspections creates a monitoring system that simply doesn't sit well with companies whose principal reason for involvement is public relations. As the manager of Nike's labor-practices department, Simon Pestridge, said in the March 31 The Chronicle of Higher Education, "We don't agree with its founding principles."

Some suggest that the UI's hesitancy springs from its ties with Nike. Judging by the corporation's recent actions, withdrawal from the FLA would put the UI's lucrative $125,000 annual shoe contract at risk. The company terminated its uniform and equipment contract with Brown University's ice-hockey teams after Brown joined the WRC. Nike founder and President Phil Knight recently halted his multi-million dollar donations to the University of Oregon, his alma mater, and cut off negotiations with the University of Michigan on April 27 for the same reason.

Withdrawing from the FLA will not cripple the labor association or the UI. Such a move will not hamper any future action the FLA may be contemplating, nor will it bankrupt the UI Athletics Department. It will, however, accomplish something positive for both parties.

Withdrawing will instead be a symbolic gesture, a message to the FLA that it must get its act together and commence inspections. It will show that the UI supports Brown and Oregon in their precedent-setting action. It will demonstrate to other universities pondering similar action that withdrawal is a viable option, that it is OK to stand up and fight the intimidating corporate behemoths that prefer making shoes at $1.10 an hour rather than $6 an hour.

Should the FLA remedy its current shortcomings, the UI could rejoin in the future. Until then, the labor association needs to realize that it is not accomplishing the task that is its charge. And it will take bold action by its constituent parts to convey this message.

Withdrawing from the FLA will not cripple the labor association or the UI. Such a move will not hamper any future action the FLA may be contemplating, nor will it bankrupt the UI Athletics Department. It will, however, accomplish something positive for both parties.

The DI Editorial Board has been created to address issues of the UI and Iowa City community. It consists of seven members: the editor, managing editor, the Viewpoints editor and assistant editor, and three editorial writers. The opinions presented will be that of the majority, who will sign the editorial.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Reno made the right call

Evan Peterson's April 26 editorial, "Reno transforming U.S. into police state," was way off the mark. Strange how those who find conspiracy and "jackbooted thugs" behind any show of strength, whether it be Waco or Ruby Ridge or Little Havana, are the same revisionist historians who argue for allowing Americans to run around armed all the time, necessitating a show of force the likes of which we saw on April 22.

No, Attorney General Janet Reno's decision to finally rescue little Elián González was the right one, done in the right way. It is ironic that the shrill few who were calling for Elián to remain here in the United States, or now demand congressional inquiry into the feds' actions, do so in the name of "individual rights." After all, it is these same few — whether for political reasons, like Tom DeLay and Orrin Hatch, or for some demented sense of self righteousness, like the "Miami relatives" — who are willing to sacrifice the well-being of a six-year-old boy by keeping him in the clutches of some Cuban-American crazies.

As for me, I liked the April 22 show of force. For nearly five months, a little boy was manipulated and taken advantage of by a ratings-hungry media and a powerful interest group with only its own self-preservation in mind. Today, thanks to the decisive actions of Reno, Elián González is finally out of the glare of the cameras and back where he should be. With his father.

I urge all sensible UI students to write the Honorable Sen. Charles Grassley (<http://grassley.senate.gov>), and remind him that the raid in Miami was a successful one. Grassley would do well during next week's Senate Judiciary Committee "investigation" to remember that he represents Iowa, not Little Havana, on Capitol Hill.

of power." How right he is! And because he is a member of the oppressor class, I heartily endorse his new-found egalitarian consciousness!

Now, will the professor, in deference to correcting his unjustly pampered position, please hand in his resignation? His position should obviously be assigned to a woman or minority candidate. Better yet, if Davidson balks, perhaps our enlightened administration will accept his resignation for him, along with that of Rhodes?

Should white males give up their posts?

As an alum of the UI, I have been following the stories of Tarsha Claiborne's hoax and Ann Rhodes' improper joking with some interest. Certainly, the entire episode has done little to enhance the reputation of my alma mater.

Professor Osha Gray Davidson has advised us not to worry about the inequalities of the administration's response to the Claiborne affair. He assures us that white males are "over-indulged" and "control all institutions

Iowa City's drunken hordes are composed of quality individuals

Today is May Day — a big pagan holiday, a celebration of the labor movement, and also the birthday of my brother.

Mike turns 20 today, but I remember the day he was born. My sister and I jumped on the bed, singing gleefully, "We've got a baby bruuuuuuther! We've got a baby bruuuuuuther!"

I could spend columns listing the accomplishments of my sister and brother. Cathy organized alternative Spring Breaks in college; Mike just played his first saxophone recital — usually a senior's privilege — as a sophomore at Southwest Missouri State. But that's nothing compared with the rest of the list. I'm proud to have them as my siblings. They are individuals, shining in detailed relief, solid and clear in my mind.

That's a contrast to people Mike's age and younger in Iowa City. When I envision the Ped Mall at night, I see hordes. Clumps, flocks, herds — students, moving in tight, drunken clusters. They scare and infuriate me. I've never been a drinker — partially because I'm diabetic, partially because my addictions run more towards Diet Coke — and I don't admire people who drink to excess.

I'm thinking about the students who get smashed every weekend or every night, neglecting their school work and their lives. I'm disgusted by the masses reeking of cheap beer. To those who complain that there's nothing else to do, I want to say, "Grow the hell up! There's plenty to do, if you're not too stupid to find it — Hancher, plays, readings, sports, learning. Duh."

This is my dirty little secret: My name is Suzi, and I'm a judgmental holic.

But the lemmings moving en masse from Brothers to the Union to Vito's are more than just drinkers. I know because I've heard drinking stories from my sister, who has been known to party once or twice in her life, from my musician brother, who plays in bars and has told me about a few of his escapades, and from my students. I know that my students go out on Thursday nights, that they're the ones who anger me so.

If you've been reading my columns, you'll know that I rather adore teaching rhetoric, and I've always enjoyed my students. But this semester, through reading journals and some fabulous students, I've grown particularly close to my class. They are no hordes. They are no lemmings. They are not stupid, and I'd fight anyone who told me they were. They, like my siblings, shine in my mind, clear and bright. Young and energetic. Young and smart. Young and completely stressed out.

And, of course, young and drinking. For years, I've tried to fit in how much I like my students in particular with how much I hate the wild drunken packs in general. How to reconcile this disparity of passions?

Suzi Steffen

So when I envision groups of kids emitting toxic alcohol fumes, I'll try to think of my brother and my students, and I'll try to remember that each kid out there glows with reality. Some of that reality is ugly, but some contains heartbreaking beauty.

Perhaps I don't have an answer. But in my search, I know I need to learn from the specific, understanding people on a level not compromised by their group identities. This is something I want my students to get: that the people we read about — let's say, a man who's spending his life in jail for murder — are not only anything.

Robby, the jailed man, was indeed a criminal. But though he's an African-American man who was involved in a murder and in that way part of several groups, he's also "Robby Wideman" in the full complexity of his being.

And it's something I try to get about my students. Frat boys, sorority girls, jocks, Campus Crusaders, neo-hippie chicks, farm kids, computer geeks — I've taught them all. And I don't see a single one of them "only" in this way. They appear blank sometimes, but they contain an astonishing variety of thoughts and experiences.

So when I envision groups of kids emitting toxic alcohol fumes, I'll try to think of my brother and my students, and I'll try to remember that each kid out there glows with reality. Some of that reality is ugly, but some contains heartbreaking beauty. And I hope that when each of them was born, someone — friends, relatives, siblings — jumped on the bed yelling, "Look who's come into the world!"

The full recognition of humanity. I give it to my brother and sister; I try to give it to my students. And with time, perhaps I can spread that recognition out even to embrace the drunken hordes.

Congrats to Diana Fahimy, Bree Gering, Angie Lellig, Megan Levad and all the rest of you May graduates! Good luck!

Citadel's top female cadet demoted

■ The cadet, one of the first women at The Citadel, was disciplined for her reaction to a prank.

Associated Press

CHARLESTON, S.C. — The Citadel's top-ranking female cadet, one of the first women to attend the school, has been demoted over her reaction to being targeted by a mess hall prank.

Petra Lovetinska went from cadet major and battalion executive officer to senior private and received 20 demerits. She also was ordered to do 40 marching tours in the barracks. Each tour is 50 minutes, at a pace of 120 steps per minute, while carrying a rifle.

Lovetinska, who will graduate on May 13, was targeted by the prank called "wiping out the shoes," said Citadel spokeswoman Heather Anderson.

The prank — part of the 154-year-old military school's tradition — goes like this: An upperclassman tells a freshman cadet, called a knob, to crawl under the table and pour condiments such as ketchup or salad dressing on an upperclassman's shoes without getting caught.

Success wins the knob the admiration of classmates, commanding officers and upperclassmen. Failure typically results in a pitcher of tea being poured on the knob.

What got Lovetinska in trouble is the way she reacted, Anderson said. She grabbed the knob, a male cadet, and wiped her shoes on his trousers.

The commandant of cadets, Brig. Gen. Emory Mace, issued the punishment on April 27.

Lovetinska, one of the first four women to attend The Citadel in 1996 after the school dropped its all-male admissions policy, has done well at the school. Lovetinska has consistently made the Dean's list. She was the first female cadet major. And in March, Lovetinska received The Citadel's highest honor, the Palmetto Medal.

But Lovetinska was punished as any other cadet charged with gross poor judgment, Anderson said.

Disciplinary matters generally are kept secret. But Lovetinska gave school officials permission to discuss the situation with the (Charleston) Post and Courier.

A telephone message left Sunday at Lovetinska's residence by the Associated Press was not immediately returned.

Lovetinska cannot regain her rank, but Citadel policy will allow her to wear her cadet major stripes — the highest rank she attained — on her uniform during graduation.

The knob who put what was thought to be French salad dressing on Lovetinska's shoes April 20 and the upperclassman who asked him to do it were not disciplined.

STABBING

"We were wondering where Paul was when he didn't show up at the game, then Anne (his girlfriend) told us what happened," said Iowa rugby coach Jim Lloyd. "It definitely gave us a new outlook on things, but we still had to play a game."

The families of the victims are offering a $5,000 reward for any person whose information will lead to the arrest of the alleged stabber.

"This was right at bar-close, and somebody must have seen it," said Anne Bannister, Zepezauer's girlfriend. "This is Iowa City, and nobody gets stabbed here."

Managers of some Dubuque Street bars said they did not see what happened, and none have heard anything about it.

"I was working, and I didn't see anything going down," said Craig Davis, manager of Micky's Irish Pub, 11 S. Dubuque St. "I haven't heard anything either, and usually the bartenders hear some gossip."

The Iowa City police are investigating the case. Individuals with any information can call the police at 356-5275.

lost control on a turn onto Madison Street and ran into a tree. Tack broke his left clavicle and was taken to Mercy Hospital for treatment.

Mike Kienzle, the UI medical school associate dean of clinical affairs and biomedical communications, who was part of the medical team for the race, saw the incident and immediately ran to Tack.

"The wheel just turned on him, causing him to hit the tree," Kienzle said. "I went over, and the first thing Tack said to me was 'What's my bike look like; what's it look like?'"

When Kienzle told Tack the bike looked OK, Tack responded, "That's all that counts."

Aside from the one accident, the race went well, said Dave Burman, the race's chief referee. The different races included approximately 175 competitors ranging from professionals to those just beginning. A big-wheel race was included for younger cyclists.

Event organizers were happy with turnout not only for the race but for all RiverFest events. After at least one day of lousy weather each of the last four years, the beautiful weather helped get people out, said Cristina Torres, a UI senior and the RiverFest financial director.

Another new attraction that drew a lot of attention from students was mud volleyball, she said.

"They are the hardest audience to get down there," Torres said. "They came for the mud volleyball and saw there were food and rides, so they jumped on them."

Students also came to check out the bands, magicians and UI gymnastic teams perform on stage over the weekend, she said.

"The best part was the Ekoostik Hookah performance Friday night," said UI junior Bret Libigs.

The band drew 10,000 to 12,000 people to Hubbard Park, Torres said.

As for food, people could taste their way through Iowa City, sampling anything from pizza to hot wings to crabmeat ragoon. Half of all proceeds from the food sales will go to the Ronald McDonald House.

"It's for charity and a good cause, so you really can't beat it," said Hieu Nguyen, an employee at Mekong restaurant in Coralville. "Plus, the weather is so beautiful, it's just fantastic."

In Vietnam, war scars remain unhealed

■ On the 25th anniversary of the fall of Saigon, some stay away from the victory celebrations.

By Mort Rosenblum
Associated Press

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam — Bay Lop's family skipped the dancing pink dragon and all the hoopla Sunday celebrating the 25th anniversary of victory in Vietnam. As with so many others, their war is not over.

Bay Lop is missing. His wife last saw him in that famous photo of 1968, shot point-blank in the head with a snubnose .38 pistol by South Vietnamese police chief Gen. Nguyen Ngoc Loan. She has never found his body.

"I could understand if it was the Americans, outsiders," Nguyen Thi Lop said in an interview, deep in a poor neighborhood of Ho Chi Minh City, formerly Saigon. "But a Vietnamese did this barbaric act. How can I forgive until he is decently put to rest?"

In fact, she explained, Bay Lop was guilty and proud of it. Born Nguyen Van Lem in 1933, he fought the French with Ho Chi Minh as a teen-ager. When captured in Saigon during the Tet offensive, he was a Viet Cong captain with a nom de guerre.

"That photograph did much to turn Americans against the war," she said. "He would have been happy to see his goal achieved, a socialist state free of foreign occupation. Now the government is duty-bound to find his remains."

Across Vietnam, 300,000 soldiers are still missing. The impoverished government has few forensic tools to follow old clues. And that is only part of Vietnam's postwar problems.

In the heart of Ho Chi Minh City, cameras focused on 25 couples in traditional robes and head dress as they placed flowers on a monument to Uncle Ho. Their mass wedding was part of official festivities, along with a parade and outdoor concerts.

Huynh Van Dung watched from the side, in battered shoes and a dirty T-shirt emblazoned, "A little creativity ..." He seemed glum, with few fresh ideas about how to change his future.

He was 4 years old when the war ended. His father, in the South Vietnamese army when it surrendered, disappeared in a reeducation camp. His mother left with another man, abandoning her son.

"Now I have a wife and two kids of my own, with no way to support them," he said. "Sometimes I get odd jobs here and there, but only when I'm lucky do I make more than 15,000 dong (just over $1) a day."

NATION BRIEFS

Hundreds of thousands march in D.C. in support of gay rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of gays and supporters marched Sunday on the Capitol, transforming the National Mall into a sea of multicolored flags and joining hands in a show of unity they hope will transform recent victories into wider protections for homosexuals.

"We're only asking for the same rights as anyone else," Adam May of Atlanta declared as he walked with the throngs of marchers. "Depriving one person ... puts everyone at risk of losing."

In a crowd dotted with openly gay celebrities, the marchers celebrated a week of victories that included passage of a new law in Vermont giving gays marriage-like rights and a renewed plea by President Clinton for a federal Hate Crimes Prevention Act.

But participants vowed not to rest until same-sex couples get equal rights in all 50 states, and some wore costumes or carried signs calling attention to fights still on the horizon.

Anti-immigration manifesto found in suspect's home

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The man arrested in a killing spree that left three immigrants, a Jewish woman and a black man dead had a history of mental illness and irrational fears that he was being watched, a former friend and his attorney said Sunday.

Police searching the home where Richard Scott Baumhammers, 34, lived prior to the April 28 attacks also found a three-page manifesto indicating he was trying to form a political party opposed to immigration, the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette reported.

The document, which included Baumhammers' signature as "chairman" of the Free Market Party, advocated the rights of European Americans and denounced Third World immigration, according to a prosecution source whom the newspaper didn't name.

"From what I saw and from what I read, it seemed to advocate violence," the source said.

Dominican bodyguards kill political official

■ The shooting was a response to an assassination attempt, bodyguards for the leading presidential candidate say.

By Susannah Nesmith
Associated Press

SANTO DOMINGO, Dominican Republic — Bodyguards of the leading presidential candidate shot and killed a governing party official and another man in what the opposition claimed was a response to an assassination attempt.

The most violent confrontation yet in the campaign was an indication of rising tensions and the high stakes involved in May 16 elections in this Caribbean nation of 8 million people.

The opposition Dominican Revolutionary Party said that on April 29, someone shot at the car of its presidential candidate, Hipolito Mejia, and that his security guards returned fire, killing two men.

But President Leonel Fernandez's Dominican Liberation Party said the security guards shot first.

The shooting took place in Moca, 90 miles from the capital, as Mejia's car was passing in front of the house of Luis Terrero Gil, 41, a local official of the Liberation Party.

Terrero, the director of the National Center for Science and Art, was killed, as was Rafael Penalo, 29, who was on the street in front of the house along with other supporters of the Liberation Party.

Francisco Javier Garcia, the Liberation Party campaign manager, denied anybody shot at Mejia's car and said the killings were "a premeditated assassination."

He said Terrero was on the patio when the shooting erupted. Terrero called out to his three children to come in from a small garden in front of the house, and was then struck by eight bullets, he said.

MAJOR LEAGUE BRIEF

Wood to pitch Tuesday

CHICAGO (AP) — Start breaking out the K signs, Chicago Cubs fans.
 After missing all of last season, Kerry Wood will make his return to the majors Tuesday against the Houston Astros.
 The 1998 NL Rookie of the Year hasn't pitched in a major league game since Oct. 3, 1998, Game 3 of the first-round playoffs against the Braves. He blew out his elbow in spring training last year, and had "Tommy John" reconstructive elbow surgery last April.

PITCHER PERFECT

Iowa's Chad Blackwell throws his final pitch in Saturday's 4-0 win against Northwestern. Blackwell pitched a perfect seven-inning game.

Blackwell throws Iowa's first no-hitter since 1979

By Greg Wallace
 The Daily Iowan

Perfection. It is chased by everyone, in all walks of life. A flawless anything is the most sought after, yet the most elusive aspect of existence. Saturday, Chad Blackwell achieved it.
 The Iowa junior needed only 69 pitches Saturday at Iowa Field to complete the Hawkeye baseball team's first no-hitter since 1979, exasperating Northwestern 4-0 in the first game of a doubleheader by pitching a perfect game.
 The perfect, the first Iowa no-hitter since Bill Drabbel achieved the feat against Kansas State in 1979, was seven innings long, as are all doubleheader games in the Big Ten. Blackwell (5-7) also became the first Hawkeye to throw a no-hitter against a Big Ten opponent.
 Iowa keeps no distinctions between no-hitters and perfect games.
 "I was just trying to throw a lot of strikes," Blackwell said. "They swung at the first pitch a lot, and it kept the pitch count down."
 Blackwell got all the help he needed in the first inning. After Northwestern starter Gabe Ribas walked No. 2 hitter Kurt Vitense, Alex Dvorsky ripped a liner just inside the third-base line, scoring Vitense and giving Blackwell a cushion that would stand solid as a rock.
 After the junior right-hander set down the first nine Wildcat hitters, a buzz began to circulate in the Iowa dugout. Blackwell started to notice his teammates shying away from him between innings. And thoughts of deja vu began to circulate in Hawkeye heads.
 "My roommates and I watched 'For the Love of the Game' (a Kevin Costner movie about a pitcher who throws a perfect game) Friday night," designated hitter Jason Edgecombe said. "I'm sitting (in the dugout), and saying, 'No, this can't be happening.'"

Iowa still has chance for Big Ten berth

By Greg Wallace
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa took 3-of-4 games against the Wildcats over the weekend, and the team is hoping for the sixth spot in the Big Ten Tournament.

For two weeks, the Iowa baseball team had watched its line drives find leather, and opponents' grounders squib past outstretched gloves.

The Hawkeyes wondered when the breaks would fall their way. This weekend, they finally did.

Riding the momentum of the program's first no-hitter in 21 years, the Iowa baseball team (16-30, 9-15 Big Ten) got all the breaks necessary to claim the final three games of its weekend series with Northwestern, taking control of its own conference tournament destiny.

The Iowa bats and arms kept things close, but in reality, the Northwestern defense was its own worst enemy. Iowa clinched Saturday and Sunday wins with 5-run innings. Both were started by grievous Wildcat errors.

"Well, it's about time we got some breaks," catcher Alex Dvorsky. "We've been hitting the ball all year, but it's not evident in our batting averages. We're way better than that. We've been hitting piss-missiles at people, and they've been robbing us, diving in the dirt. (This weekend), everything finally fell."

Sunday, Northwestern put up four runs in its fifth inning to grab a 6-3 lead. Wildcat starter J.J. Standing left after six innings with the cushion intact.

After two singles to begin the Hawkeye seventh, shortstop Kurt Vitense hit a grounder to first baseman Travis Tharp, who appeared ready to turn a 3-6-3 double play that would cripple Iowa's rally.

Instead, Tharp rifled the ball past

Steele becomes first Iowa Drake champ since 1994

Stetson Steele won the 5,000 meters at the Drake Relays Saturday.

DES MOINES — It's hard to complain when so many things go well in one of the best track and field events in the world: You have a champion in the 5,000 meters, two placing shot putters, a third place in the hammer throw, and sixth place in the 400-meter hurdles.

"I'm pleased with how everyone gave a good effort," Iowa coach Larry Wiecek said, of his team's performance at the 91st Drake Relays. "When you have a guy come to a meet like this and place in the top eight — that's pretty outstanding."

The Hawkeyes had a total of five competitors place in the top eight, highlighted by Stetson Steele's victory in the 5,000 meters.

After a neck-to-neck race between Steele and Drake's Jason Lehmkuhle, Steele pulled ahead in the last 100-meter leg and earned Iowa its first individual champion at Drake since Anthuan Maybanks won the 400 meters in 1994.

"We said before the race that we'd help each other out," Steele said of him and Lehmkuhle. "I knew that I had stuff left in me with 150 meters left, and it just worked out."

"It feels great. It's going to be fun to take this (trophy in hand) back to the university and show it off."

Next to Steele's race on the highlight list is Arno van der Westhuizen's third-place finish in the hammer throw, followed by Jeremy Allen's fifth-place finish in the shot put. Mix in Chris Cassata's 10th-place finish in the shot put, and the field event guys had a pretty good weekend.

"There's a lot of work to be done, but I'm happy with the distance of my throws," van der Westhuizen said.

Some more notable finishes for the Hawkeyes were Andy Morris' eighth in the steeplechase, Nick Nordheim's sixth-place behind Steele in the 5,000 meters and Russell Peterson's sixth in the 400 hurdles.

Dave Peterson/Associated Press. Iowa's Stetson Steele wins the invitational 5,000-meter run Saturday, at the Drake Relays in Des Moines.

The Hawkeyes keep it going with big meets as they head back home Saturday for the Twilight Meet.

Hawks honor Blevins with win

After adding more wins to its record, Iowa hopes to host the Big Ten Tournament in two weeks.

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

A Hawkeye win topped off a perfect Sunday.

On Gayle Blevins Day and Senior Day, a 4-1 victory over Ohio State, assured the Iowa softball team that it will determine its own fate. Win two next weekend, and the Hawkeyes will host the 2000 Big Ten Tournament.

Mistakes plagued the No. 15 Hawkeyes early Sunday, and they found themselves tied with Ohio State heading into the fourth.

Then the Buckeyes fell apart. Megan Atkins reached first on an error, and Amber Morrow entered to pinch-run. Lisa Rasche, who hit .700 on the weekend, singled. With runners on second and third, Katy Jendrzewski executed a perfect suicide squeeze to score Morrow.

"I've got quite a bit of confidence right now," Rasche said. "I'm seeing the ball really well. I'm just going to let things keep going, and I'm not going to mess with anything."

Iowa came back to add two more in the fifth highlighted by Alicia Gerlach's fourth home run of the week and seventh of the year.

Pitcher Kristi Hanks took over and shut down Ohio State for the win.

Brett Roseman/The Daily Iowan

Iowa's Alicia Gerlach gives Iowa coach Gayle Blevins a high five as she rounds third base after hitting a home run against Ohio State. Gerlach has hit four home runs in the past week.

Belfour leads Stars past Sharks

■ Ed Belfour had his third postseason shutout to give the Stars a 2-0 series lead over San Jose.

By Jaime Aron
Associated Press

DALLAS — Ed Belfour is proving that his phenomenal goaltending in last year's playoffs was no fluke.

Belfour posted his second straight shutout and third this postseason, making a first-period goal by Mike Modano hold up as the Dallas Stars beat the San Jose Sharks 1-0 Sunday night.

"I'm feeling strong and focused," Belfour said. "That's the key for me. I'm seeing the puck well and the guys are playing great in front of me."

Although Belfour was a hero of Dallas' Stanley Cup championship last summer, some still don't consider him an elite goalie, preferring to remember his reputation as a big-game choker. He wasn't chosen for the All-Star game and a recent arrest further tarnished his image.

Love him or hate him, Belfour hasn't allowed a goal in 138 minutes and 53 seconds. That streak will be on the line in Game 3 Tuesday night at San Jose, where fans still haven't forgiven him for leaving the Sharks and signing with Dallas two years ago.

"Going there 2-0, it's a good feeling going into that building," he said.

Belfour was at his best in the final minute when a power play and an empty net gave San Jose a 6-on-4 skating advantage.

In the first 10 seconds, he made a kick save up close and snared a long shot by Gary Suter with his glove, bringing 17,001 fans to their feet with

I'm feeling strong and focused. That's the key for me. I'm seeing the puck well.

— Ed Belfour,
Dallas Stars goalie

chants of "Ed-die! Ed-die!" He kicked away another Suter shot with 17 seconds left, then the Sharks' last two attempts went wide of the goal.

"Suter's shot went through five or six bodies," Modano said. "Eddie made a great save, the save of the game."

The Sharks' scoring drought can be traced to the injuries hampering leading scorer Owen Nolan. Team doctors forced him to miss this game because of the foot and-or shoulder problems that made him ineffective in the opening 4-0 loss.

Gophers put Hawkeyes on the NCAA bubble

■ The Iowa women's tennis team lost to Minnesota in the Big Ten Tournament, putting its NCAA hopes in doubt.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

There is no worse feeling on a team than to be unable to control your own destiny.

The UI women's tennis team would like its season to continue with a berth in the NCAA tournament, but a 4-1 loss to Minnesota in the second round of the Big Ten tournament may hinder its post-season plans.

The No. 5 Hawkeyes (10-12) fell to the No. 4 Gophers for the second time in just under two weeks Friday, failing to earn an automatic bid to the NCAA and leaving their fate in the hands of a selection committee.

"You always want to keep playing," said coach Paul Wardlaw. "It's important to keep the program building."

Iowa picked up the doubles point for an early 1-0 advantage with wins from Shera Wiegler and Toni Neykova at No. 1 doubles and Natalya Dawaf and Jen Sinclair at the No. 2 spot.

The nationally-ranked duo of Wiegler and Neykova defeated Sandra Olsen and Michaela Havelkova 8-5, while Dawaf and Sinclair dispatched Kim Simonsen and Tammy Wang 8-3. Megan Kearney and Erica Johnson's No. 3 doubles match was abandoned once the point was decided.

Just as Iowa swept up the doubles point, Minnesota quickly finished off the match, winning four singles points to eliminate Iowa from the tournament.

Wiegler, Neykova and Steffi Hoch fell in two sets each, leaving the outcome of the match to Dawaf, Kearney and Johnson. With Dawaf and Johnson both ahead of their opponents, Kearney's match was the first to end as she fell to Amy Thomas in three sets, 5-7, 6-0, 2-6.

"It's hard to play the 4/5 matchup because you don't get to

Rowers not perfect, but pleased

■ The Iowa women's rowing team was happy with its performance at the first-ever Big Ten Regatta.

By Molly Thomas
The Daily Iowan

Though the final results do not reflect an incredible performance, the Iowa women's rowing team is pleased with the way it raced in the first-ever Big Ten Regatta Saturday in Madison, Wis.

Two of the three Varsity boats qualified for the finals of their race, which required being in the top two of their preliminary heat. The Varsity 8+ missed the finals by 1.87 seconds, though their heat's times were significantly faster than the second heat's times.

Coach Mandi Kowal said that the Iowa Varsity 8+ had the toughest situation of the day in their first heat, but the Hawkeyes fought to the end and made the race the most exciting competition of the entire event.

"The Varsity 8+ really had a knock-down, dragged-out heat," Kowal said. "The team was pretty disappointed, but I thought they dealt with it very well."

The Varsity 4+ and second Varsity 8+ boat both qualified for the final round, but finished just shy of earning a medal in fourth place. Kowal said that both boats had some of the best racing she had seen all year. The Varsity 4+ missed winning a medal by .48 seconds.

The second Varsity 8+ also held a close race in the finals. The Hawkeyes held second place throughout the race but a small mistake in their sequence caused some speed problems and they dropped back to fourth place. The difference between Michigan's first-place finishing time and Iowa's finishing time was 5.83 seconds, approximately the length of one boat.

"The second Varsity 8+ race was so exciting, but there was no room for mistakes," Kowal said. "I was pleased to see that they were in the hunt."

Iowa's next competition will be the Central Sprints in Oakridge, Tenn., a qualifying meet for the NCAA Championships. Kowal said that after Big Ten competition she got a sense that the Hawkeyes were still in the ballpark for national contention.

Hawkeyes depleted, but solid at Drake

■ Despite missing several key members, the Iowa women's track team had a solid Drake Relays.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

DES MOINES—All things considered, the Iowa women's track team's performance at the Drake Relays was not bad.

With injuries to some of their top runners before and during the meet, the Hawkeyes were a little short-handed, but according to coach James Grant, performed well.

"Based on what events we were in, I think we did fairly well," Grant said.

One event the Hawkeyes did fairly well in was the 100-meter hurdles. Senior Paula Ruen ran hurdles on two different occasions, the University event and the special event, which featured world star Kim Carson. She placed in the top five in both.

"Paula did not place as high as she wanted, but she ran a faster time than she has before — that's somewhat comforting," Grant said of Ruen, who won the event at Drake two years ago.

Senior Colleen Prendergast placed seventh in the 100-meter hurdles behind Ruen.

In the javelin, Mandy Beck turned in a sixth-place performance, and Jessie Strand placed 22nd in the pole vault.

By having star distance runner Sarah Arens out of the lineup due to injury and Lakeya Boatwright come up with a groin strain on Friday, Iowa wasn't able to get some of the performances they wanted, according to Grant. But he wasn't discouraged.

"We've still got some people on this team that can score," Grant said. "Next weekend we need to try to regroup and do our best."

The Hawkeye women will perform under the lights of the Twilight Meet in Iowa City Saturday night.

Poor first round dooms Hawk women

■ The Iowa women's golf team placed 10th at the Big Ten Tournament.

By Molly Thomas
The Daily Iowan

The Hawkeyes' hopes were high, but their golf clubs just weren't swinging the way they should have been this weekend.

The Iowa women's golf team finished in 10th place at the Big Ten Championships held on the par-72 University Ridge Golf Course in Madison, Wis., over the weekend.

The Hawkeyes (329-301-315-317—1,262) were led by senior M.C. Mullen who finished with a 72-hole score of 309 and tied for 34th place in the field of 66. Mullen placed third in the Big Tens last year, but struggled through this year's first round, along with the rest of her teammates.

Mullen shot an 83 in the first round, along with Leslie Gumm and Kelli Carney. Meghan Spero, Mollie Shearen and Heather Suhr all turned in first-round scores of 82.

"We just shot ourselves in the foot during the first round," coach Diane Thomason said. "After the first day we were 30 shots behind everybody. Everyone played poorly the first round and I'm not sure what caused it."

The Hawkeyes shot a team score of 329 on the first 18 holes Friday, and turned around to shoot a 301 on the second 18 of the day without the help of senior Kelli Carney. Carney, who was suffering from a back injury, had to withdraw from the round but returned to Iowa's lineup Saturday.

Gumm stepped it up in Carney's absence, shooting a team-low 70. Spero chipped in a 74, while Mullen shot a 75.

Thomason said that the team also could have performed better in the third and fourth rounds where Iowa shot 315 and 317.

"This was definitely not one of our best tournaments and it was really a big one," Thomason said. "A lot of people will judge our season through this meet, but we really didn't have a poor season."

Purdue (287-289-298-293—1,167) won the meet, its first-ever Big Ten Tournament, by 27 strokes over second-place Michigan State. The Spartans (1,194) narrowly edged out Ohio State (1,195) by one stroke. Emily Bastel of Michigan State was the individual medalist scoring an even-par 288 for 72 holes.

Hawkeyes end roller-coaster trend

■ The men's golf team finished strong at the Bruce Fossum Invitational.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

The UI men's golf team bucked its recent trend of poor finishes after placing high the week before. Coach Terry Anderson's squad finished in the middle of the pack at the Bruce Fossum Invitational in East Lansing, Mich., on Sunday.

"Our bad weeks are getting better," said Anderson.

The Hawkeyes began the tournament by shooting a 607, which was good enough for 12th place. Adam Turner led the Hawkeye effort on day one shooting two rounds of 74 for an opening day score of 148.

The Hawkeyes fired their best round of the tournament on the final 18 holes, closing with a 302, and pushing the team into 11th place. Anderson said the Hawkeyes played better than most of the field on Sunday, but still gave a few shots away, which prevented the team from placing higher.

Turner and Jason Wombacher led the Iowa effort by both shooting 224 for the tournament.

"We definitely had our chances Sunday," said Anderson.

The effort was the final tune up before the Big Ten Tournament this weekend in West Lafayette, Ind. The Hawkeyes have placed higher than several Big Ten opponents in recent weeks.

Arizona's Big Unit shuts down Cubs 6-0, sets April wins record

CHICAGO (AP) — April belongs to Randy Johnson.

Johnson became just the third pitcher in modern baseball history to win six games in April, striking out 11 and giving up just five hits over seven innings Sunday as the Arizona Diamondbacks beat the Cubs 6-0.

He came out at the beginning of the eighth inning, but then walked off the mound and Mike Morgan pitched the last two innings.

The 1999 NL Cy Young winner also won his last three decisions last year, giving him a nine-game winning streak.

Johnson only got into trouble once, in the seventh inning. After Sammy Sosa led off with a walk, Johnson struck out the next two batters, Glenallen Hill and Roosevelt Brown. But Damon Buford singled and Joe Girardi followed with another single, this one off Johnson's glove, to load the bases.

But Johnson got Shane Andrews on a called strike, ending the inning and the threat.

Brewers 4, Astros 3

MILWAUKEE — Jeromy Burnitz's two-out double in the ninth scored Marquis Grissom and gave Milwaukee a victory over Houston.

Burnitz smacked Henry's second pitch to deep center. Roger Cedeno, playing exceptionally shallow, was a step too slow as Burnitz's hit bounced on the warning track, chasing Grissom home.

Cardinals 4, Phillies 3

PHILADELPHIA — Not even Curt Schilling's return could end the Phillies' losing ways.

Schilling, starting his first game after offseason shoulder surgery, struck out eight over six innings but it wasn't enough as St. Louis beat Philadelphia.

The Phillies have lost three straight and 13 of 16.

Mark McGwire hit a two-run homer and Jim Edmonds had two RBIs, including a solo homer as St. Louis swept the series.

Red Sox 2, Indians 1

CLEVELAND — Pedro's still perfect against the Indians. And perfectly despised by them.

Pedro Martinez, who has owned Cleveland's soul the past two years, remained unbeaten against the Indians on Sunday by taking a shutout into the eighth before being ejected for hitting Roberto Alomar in Boston's 2-1 victory.

Yankees 7, Blue Jays 1

NEW YORK — Paul O'Neill hit a three-run double and Roger Clemens got his 249th career win in New York's victory over Toronto.

Clemens (2-2) allowed one run, seven hits and two walks in seven innings. He struck out eight and moved into 38th place on the career victory list.

Reds 6, Pirates 2

PITTSBURGH — Ken Griffey Jr. hit a three-run homer in the seventh inning after the Cincinnati Reds constantly squandered scoring chances before rallying to beat Pittsburgh 6-2.

The Reds stranded seven runners in the first six innings, leaving two on in the fifth and the bases loaded in the sixth, before Griffey hit a 1-0 pitch into the right-field seats with two on and two outs. The home run was Griffey's seventh of the season.

Mets 14, Rockies 11

DENVER — Edgardo Alfonzo went 4-for-5 with four RBIs, and Todd Zeile

capped a successful weekend at Coors Field with his first homer of the season as New York beat Colorado.

Zeile, who came into the series hitting .254, went 8-for-15 with seven RBIs in three games to raise his average to .302. Alfonzo, Melvin Mora and Todd Pratt also homered for the Mets, who have won 13 of 17.

Dodgers 7, Marlins 1

LOS ANGELES — The Los Angeles Dodgers opened the vault and paid

Kevin Brown and Shawn Green a combined $189 million for days just like this.

Brown allowed a run and three hits over seven innings and Green homered twice as the Dodgers completed a three-game sweep of Florida.

Expos 4, Giants 3

SAN FRANCISCO — Pinch-hitter Rondell White hit a sacrifice fly in the ninth inning to lead Montreal to a victory over San Francisco.

Andy Tracy and Peter Bergeron each singled with one out in the ninth off John Johnstone (2-2). White, who hadn't started the last three games because of a bone bruise in his left knee, hit a drive to deep left field that scored Tracy without a throw.

The Giants lost for the seventh time in their first eight games at new Pacific Bell Park.

Tigers 4, White Sox 3

DETROIT — Bobby Higginson's RBI

single in the 12th inning lifted Detroit to a victory over the White Sox, snapping Chicago's four-game winning streak.

The Tigers scored twice in the ninth off Bill Simas, pressed into the closer's role in part because of Bob Howry's suspension. Howry missed the three-game series because of his role in last week-end's brawls with Detroit.

Rangers 8, Orioles 4

BALTIMORE — Ivan Rodriguez broke out of a slump with two homers and a double as Texas snapped a four-game losing streak by beating Baltimore.

Mark Lewis drove in two runs for the Orioles, whose nine-game home winning streak came to an end. Baltimore, which held an early 3-0 lead, had not lost at Camden Yards since opening day.

Royals 6, Mariners 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Joe Randa and Mark Quinn homered, and Jermaine Dye hit an RBI double to cap one of the most productive Aprils in Kansas City history, as the Royals beat Seattle 6-3 Sunday.

Dye is the first player in history to have 10 home runs and 10 doubles before May 1.

Angels 5, Devil Rays 2

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Kent Bottenfield pitched seven steady innings, and Darin Erstad completed a major league record April with his 47th and 48th hits of the month as Anaheim beat Tampa Bay.

Bottenfield (2-3) went seven innings and struck out nine. He allowed five including Vinny Castilla's two-run homer in the seventh that trimmed Anaheim's lead to three runs.

Bottenfield (2-3) struck out nine in seven innings, including Gerald Williams and Greg Vaughn all three times he faced them.

'Bench Mob' pushes Kings to victory

■ Kings hope to even the series with the Lakers Tuesday in Sacramento.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Shaquille O'Neal lost his shooting touch. Kobe Bryant was slowed by foul trouble. And, suddenly, the mighty Los Angeles Lakers were far from invincible.

Chris Webber had 29 points and the Sacramento bench finally came alive, sparking an 18-2 run in the fourth quarter, as the Kings defeated the Lakers 99-91 Sunday to stay alive in the playoffs.

The Lakers won the first two games by comfortable margins in Los Angeles. Game 4 in the best-of-five series is Tuesday night at Sacramento.

"I want them to be down, they should be embarrassed by the way they played today," Lakers coach Phil Jackson said. "This was not a good performance."

O'Neal had 21 points and 17 rebounds, but went 8-for-22 from the field and 5-for-14 from the foul line. Bryant, who picked up his fourth foul early in the third period, had 16 of his 35 points in the fourth quarter.

"I just missed some chippies, shots that I usually don't miss. I need to be a lot better Tuesday," said O'Neal, who hit 63 percent of his shots while averaging 34.5 points in the first two games of the series. "We didn't play well all day and they played the best ball they possibly can."

Predrag Stojakovic had 19 points and Tony Delk added 11 as the Kings' self-proclaimed "Bench Mob," which had little success in the first two games of the series, outscored the Lakers' reserves 34-11.

T-wolves 94, Blazers 87
MINNEAPOLIS — The only smudge on Terrell Brandon's career day was that it came at the expense of his hometown pal from Portland.

Brandon scored 28 points in his best play-off performance ever and shut down Damon Stoudamire as the Minnesota Timberwolves staved off elimination with a 94-87 victory over the Trail Blazers on Sunday.

Brandon, who added 12 assists and seven rebounds, helped hold Stoudamire to two free throws, 14 points below his playoff average.

"No matter who wins, our neighborhood wins," Brandon said after the Wolves pulled within 2-1 in the best-of-five series. "This is something we'll talk about for years after the season is done."

Stoudamire would just as soon forget about his dismal day. He was 0-for-8 from the field with one rebound and had as many assists (six) as fouls.

Knicks 87, Raptors 80

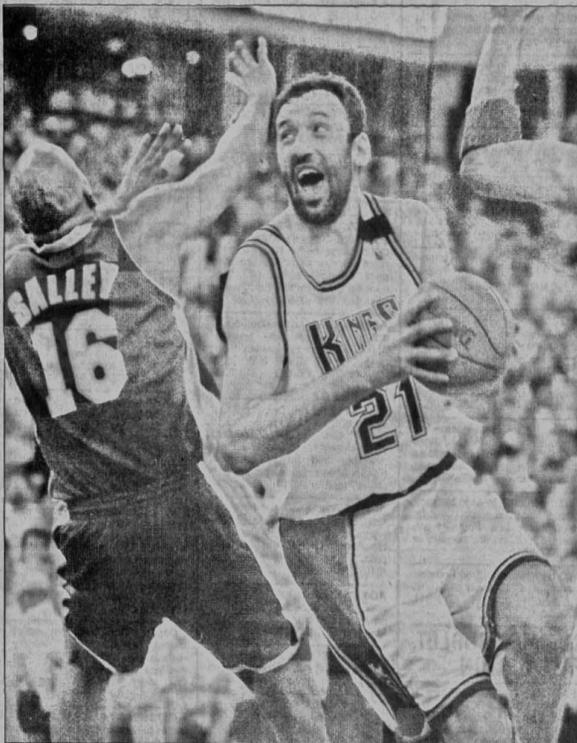

TORONTO — Larry Johnson had no trouble picking a nickname for the shot of the game, a 3-pointer that banked in off the backboard from a nearly straight-away angle.

"The lucky one," he called it.

Johnson's 3-pointer with 24.2 seconds left Sunday led the Knicks to an 87-80 victory over the Toronto Raptors in the first NBA playoff game in Canada.

New York completed a three-game sweep to advance to the second round against its bitterest rival — the Miami Heat.

"Definitely, the gods were with me," Johnson said. "I didn't call a bank on that one."

The Knicks and Heat will meet in the playoffs for the fourth straight season. This time, both teams are coming off 3-0 first-round victories.

"It's going to be a war going up against with those guys," Johnson said. "My four years here we've played them four times in the playoffs, and we're looking forward to this challenge."

Vince Carter had another below-par game, scoring 15 points on 5-for-17 shooting. He were honored as well.

"It was a great day. We had a wonderful crowd," Blevins said. "I just couldn't be more appreciative. It's a great statement by our university in all the promotional efforts that went into this, and our community and all the communities around us to come out and support us."

Ohio State coach Megan Bryant said Blevins deserved to be honored.

"I think Gayle is very well respected," she said. "Not just for the wins, but for the type of program and type of young ladies that she has representing her program. It was good to see her get this recognition, and certainly when she received the Hall of Fame award, there was pride from all the Big Ten coaches."

Iowa began the weekend by splitting with Penn State. Both games were decided in the bottom of the seventh. In Game 1, Gerlach, who had two strikeouts already, was told to grab a new bat. It worked, and she played the hero, singling to right center to score Katie Boney.

"It was exciting to get the game-winning hit," Gerlach said. "I have to say I've never done anything like that before. I just wanted to put the ball in play somewhere because I hadn't done that during the game yet."

Gerlach tried to lift Iowa to the second-game win with her towering home run, but the Nittany Lions' Colleen Kersey came through with the bigger hit, marking only the second time this year Iowa has lost at home.

Iowa rallied Saturday to pound Ohio State, 10-2 in six innings.

Six Hawkeyes recorded two or more hits on the day. Pitcher Kelly Zeilstra gave up four hits and notched her 20th win this season.

Iowa travels to Drake for a 3 p.m. doubleheader on Tuesday. Then Iowa's off to Northwestern to try to secure its fourth Big Ten title in history.

Blackwell's nerves set in during historic game

Although Blackwell made his teammates' jobs easy by allowing only two fly-ball outs, he still needed some breaks. And as with all perfect games, those breaks went his way.

The first inning's third hitter, left fielder Bob Dainton, roped a screamer down that looked destined to land in left field as a base hit. But third baseman Ian Mattiace cheated him with a leaping grab.

Two innings later, right fielder Jim Reid robbed NU's Brandon Ackley with a highlight-film sliding grab.

"It sure helps," Blackwell said. "I don't know if you have to (have breaks), but I have to do something special for those guys. I owe them big-time: Mattiace, Jimmy Reid, everyone out there. They backed me up."

How overpowering was Blackwell? He only allowed one three-ball count the entire game. To put Blackwell's 69-pitch game in perspective, Iowa starter Matt Gruber threw 62 on Friday — in two-plus innings.

"Dominating," Iowa coach Scott Broghamer said. "That's what we needed — to have one guy go out there and take the bull by the horns, which is what he did. He had (NU) off balance, he kept the ball down, and for what Chad did, you have to look at what his infield did for him, too."

Contrary to superstition, Blackwell acknowledged his bid for history. In fact, he couldn't stop thinking about it.

"I was watching every inning. I'm a stat-rat," Blackwell said. "It started to become realistic in about the sixth inning. I just thought, I've got to keep doing it."

Alex Dvorsky, who called and caught Blackwell's magical game, was a study in courage. While batting in the fourth inning, he was plunked on the fingers by a Ribas fastball, but stayed in the game.

After all, a perfect game practically comes along once in a lifetime; only five Hawkeyes were alive when Drumbel threw the no-no in 1979.

"It's a great feeling when you can throw down signals, and he just hits ground balls," Dvorsky said. "You can't ask for anything better than that."

"It felt like Don Larsen was hovering over us today."

Larsen was is the only Major League pitcher to have pitched a perfect game in the World Series, in 1956 for the New York Yankees.

Aura or not, Blackwell still had to finish the job in the top of the seventh. He looked calm and cool on the mound, as always, but it was a mere front for his true emotions.

"I was nervous," Blackwell said. "You couldn't see my legs shaking?"

After Jeremy Kurella grounded to Vitense, the pressure built. Blackwell didn't feel it. J.P. Williamson struck out on three pitches. By then, perfection was nearly inevitable. Dainton didn't have a chance, swinging on a 1-2 pitch away.

A mob ensued. "Relief," Blackwell said. "All the pressure was finally gone."

Iowa wins 'crucial' weekend

One batter later, a struggling Brad Carlson golfed a 3-1 Ryan Bos fastball over the right field fence, giving Iowa a 7-6 lead, which it wouldn't relinquish.

"One word: Finally," Carlson, who hit his first dinger since March 25th, said. "I just nipped up, finally, and got it done for my team. I had to pick up my team."

Going into Saturday's doubleheader, Iowa had lost nine-straight Big Ten games, and sat in ninth place in conference.

But Chad Blackwell's perfect game in the day's first contest provided a boost that carried through the rest of the weekend.

In the day's second game, Iowa trailed 3-1 in the sixth inning despite a salty pitching performance from Ryan Prahm (5-1). With two on and one out, Jason Edgecombe hit what looked like a sure inning-ending double play grounder. Until Wildcat second baseman J.P. Williamson booted it into right field.

Three hits later, the Hawkeyes had a 6-3 lead and were in total control.

"We put the ball in play, and it bounced right off his glove," Iowa coach Scott Broghamer said. "Sometimes you need luck. We've hit balls right on the screws, and haven't been able to convert it. It's nice for the sun to shine on us once in a while."

Iowa now sits in eighth place with one conference series remaining, 1.5 games out of sixth place, currently occupied by Northwestern. The Wildcats have series left against Penn State, currently second, and Purdue, third.

A non-conference series with Illinois-Chicago looms this weekend, allowing Iowa a chance to collect itself and let the picture settle before the final conference series May 12-14 at Michigan.

"It's crucial," Carlson said of Iowa's winning weekend. "It puts us right there, on the bubble. If we don't win today, we don't have a shot at it. Our team knew that if we didn't sack up today, we'd be probably in a no-win situation. We got it done, put ourselves in position. Now we have to take care of business in Michigan."
