Voters may decide First Ave. fate again

■ A petition halts the grading part of the First Avenue extension project.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

A second petition with the necessary signatures to stop the grading project of the First Avenue extension will likely turn the fate of the hotly debated proposal over to voters again.

This could be second time voters decide whether to extend First Avenue to Captain Irish Parkway. Approximately 4,977 voters were against the extension in a 1997 referendum, which delayed the extension until 2001.

If the Iowa City City Council does not vote to drop the grading project from its Capital Improvements Plan permanently, it must hold a special election or put the extension proposal on the general election ballot in November.

Iowa City resident Jean McCollister brought the second petition to City Clerk Marian Karr before Monday night's council work session.

"This is definitely an outcome we were expecting," she said. The first petition brought to the council failed to have the 2,500 signatures needed to prevent the grading, Karr said. The second petition has not been certified but has enough valid signatures — approximately 2,800 when added to the first petition — to stop the grading, she said.

"I think most of (the councilors) expected them to get the number of necessary signatures," said Councilor Ross Wilburn, adding that he expects the council to let the voters decide whether to proceed with the extension.

Some of the signatures on the first petition were deemed to be invalid because they were not legible, did not include their birth date or the person had moved and her or his voter registration did not indicate a new address, said Iowa City resident Brandon Ross.

"Nearly 5,000 people signed to stop that project in only three weeks' time," he said. "This represents the majority of citizens who want that road stopped. If the council plans to serve its voters, it will vote the road out."

Councilor Dee Vanderhoef said she expects a close vote among the council to move the issue to a special or general election but said she hasn't heard of any councilor who doesn't support the extension.

The council will discuss whether the extension should be moved to an election at its May 15 work session.

In SAS protest, silence is golden

■ SAS takes a silent stand to support oppressed workers.

By Michael Chapman
The Daily Iowan

Members of the UI Students Against Sweatshops voiced their concerns about sweatshop labor Monday night without saying a word.

A group of approximately 20 SAS members and supporters protested at UI President Mary Sue Coleman's fireside chat for 30 minutes with red tape over their mouths. The demonstrators "silenced" themselves in representation of suppressed workers in sweatshop conditions.

"We stand in silence to represent the many apparel workers who have and will continue to be silenced by a system that effectively hides worker abuses," said UI senior and SAS member Heidi Sabers, one of two group members who spoke on behalf of the group. "The Fair Labor Association governance and structure will only continue this suppression of workers' voices."

After the silent demonstration, Ned Bertz, a UI graduate student and SAS member, said the group will hold similar protests "indefinitely" in front of Jessup Hall at 12:20 p.m.

daily beginning today.

The group also presented Coleman with a letter, asking her to meet with SAS in a discussion about the UI's continued involvement with the FLA, which allegedly monitors the production of Hawkeye apparel. SAS wants the university to drop its membership in the FLA and use the Worker Rights Consortium as its sweatshop monitor.

Coleman said she would be "happy to hold a meeting" and would try to schedule it as soon as possible.

While his fellow group members stood silently around him, David

Disney/Time Warner spat blacks out ABC

■ ABC stations were dropped from Time Warner cable systems in various parts of the country as sweeps start.

By David Bauder
Associated Press

NEW YORK — In an escalating corporate dispute, ABC was blacked out in the homes of 3.5 million Time Warner cable customers around the country Monday — just as the "sweeps" period was beginning and Regis Philbin was about to quiz celebrities on "Who Wants to Be a Millionaire."

Instead of ABC programming, Time Warner customers saw a message saying, "Disney has taken ABC away from you" on the channel that normally carries WABC-TV in New York.

Around the country, the only way many viewers could see ABC shows was the old-fashioned way — by disconnecting the cable and rigging up an antenna — or finding a friend with a satellite dish.

The Walt Disney Co., ABC's corporate parent, is fighting over how much money Time Warner must compensate Disney for the right to carry some of its cable channels.

The affected customers were in seven markets served by ABC-owned television stations. Approximately 1.5 million were in the New York City area, 665,000 in Houston and 440,000 in Raleigh-Durham, N.C.

Smaller numbers of customers in the Los Angeles; Philadelphia; Toledo, Ohio; and Fresno, Calif., markets also lost service.

The blackout was particularly ill-timed for ABC, the top-rated broadcaster in the United States. Its most popular show, "Who Wants to Be a Millionaire," began its first celebrity week Monday. Viewers who saw the opening night of the miniseries "Arabian Nights" Sunday risked missing the conclusion.

In the coming weeks, ABC is airing the Kentucky Derby, the Daytime Emmy Awards and virtually all of the season finales of its regular series.

'Sesame Street' icon glitters in IMU speech on role models

■ Sonia Manzano speaks about the importance of role models.

By Avian Carrasquillo
The Daily Iowan

When Sonia Manzano first watched the movie West Side Story, she remembers weeping with relief.

It was the first time Manzano, who has portrayed Maria on "Sesame Street" for 27 years, saw someone like herself — a Latina — portrayed in the media.

"It was the first time I had seen anything in the media that reminded me in the slightest bit of anything I knew," she said.

Manzano spoke about the difficulty she had as a child finding Latino role models to some 300 "Sesame Street" fans, who packed the IMU second-floor ballroom Monday night. Some audience members had brought "Sesame Street" paraphernalia with them.

Manzano emphasized the importance of Latino role models and how a lack of such role models in her childhood had her searching for her identity.

The audience was shown recent clips from "Sesame Street" to demonstrate how diversity and Latino culture are important parts of the show.

"Sesame Street" takes the issue of role models very seriously. I was cast on the show to be a role model for Hispanic children. I actually think that I became the role model I needed when I was a kid," Manzano said.

For UI alumnus Mateo Salazar, watching "Sesame Street" as a kid was a driving force in his decision to pursue theater at the UI.

"I saw positive role models —

Georgia campus somber as death toll grows

University of Georgia students Cherie Donnard, left, and Dara Jobes hold candles Monday at a memorial service held outside the school's chapel in Athens, Ga. The service commemorated fellow students and faculty members who have died during this school year.

■ The University of Georgia holds a memorial service for the 11 students who have died since January.

By Erin McClam
Associated Press

ATHENS, Ga. — The University of Georgia student newspaper is usually filled Monday mornings with stories of overzealous weekend partying or sports results. But this semester, death has pushed it all off the front page.

Since January, 11 young students on this campus of 30,000 have died of various causes — a heart attack, cancer, a drug overdose, a wreck on the way home for Easter and a fraternity prank gone wrong.

The campus has been shaken by so much death among those so young. Three weeks ago, the death toll was eight, and school officials scheduled a memorial service at sunset Monday. Since then, three more students have died. "It's profoundly sad," said Rick Rose, an assistant vice president whose job is to offer the university's condolences to parents and friends of students who die.

The University of Georgia has never lost more than eight students in one term. Any more than three in a semester is out of the ordinary.

At Monday's service, the chapel bell, usually silent except for victorious football Saturdays and late-night student pranks, tolled 28 times — once for each university faculty and staff member and student who died this academic year, including the 11 since January.

The idea, administrators said, was to get the campus to think of the deaths as more than just a number.

"This is not a tally sheet," Rose said. "Each one of these people is the most important thing."

Kim Weld, a freshman, came to remember one friend — Philip Walsh,

Saying sayonara to dull dining

■ Vinai Sukcharoen cooks up a storm at Three Samurai.

By Andrew T. Dawson
The Daily Iowan

It takes the right tools, years of practice and a love for cooking.

With twirling knives and towering flames, Vinai Sukcharoen entertains his guests as he prepares traditional Japanese food.

"Watch your eyebrows," he cautions customers, seated around the grill, as he ignites a ball of fire.

As head chef at Three Samurai Japanese restaurant, 1801 Second St., Coralville, the 30-year-old Sukcharoen brings the Habachi style of cooking to area residents.

"Food tastes better when you're happy," he said.

In keeping the customers happy, he keeps his customers entertained as he cooks for them.

A favorite of his show is the "onion volcano." Made of a sliced onion, separated and stacked like an inverted funnel, Sukcharoen fills it with cooking alcohol and lights it on fire.

"Choo-choo," he jokes as he slides the smoking chimney across the grill.

"You've got to cut the onion very neat," Sukcharoen says.

He learned Habachi-style cooking from a Korean friend who was a chef in Champaign, Ill. While studying computer science at Illinois State University, Sukcharoen said his love for cooking brought him to the grill seven years ago.

"I like cooking because nobody tells me what to do," he said. "They trust that I know what I'm doing."

Brian Ray/The Daily Iowan

Vinai Sukcharoen, assistant manager and head chef at Three Samurai Japanese restaurant in Coralville, tosses an egg in the air with his spatula as he prepares a meal for the Yousef family Sunday night.

Following his apprenticeship as Habachi chef, he has lived all over the country, cooking in several restaurants, he said. When performing for guests, Sukcharoen said, he is very concerned with what he is doing. Habachi cooks have to be confident and in control, he said.

While telling jokes and juggling pepper shakers, Sukcharoen said the hardest part about his job is managing the 400-degree grill. Making sure everyone's food is prepared as requested can be difficult.

"It takes a lot of practice," Sukcharoen said.

A quality knife is important because it is continually being used on a hot grill, Sukcharoen said. His knife, kept in a holster on his hip, was brought back from Japan by a friend three years ago.

Since he began cooking at Three Samurai, Sukcharoen's cooking has grown in popularity. People who experience his cooking often come back for more, said Three Samurai hostess Shannon Toomey.

"He gets a lot of requests," Toomey said.

A favorite of parties and family outings, guests come to see the show.

"I've never seen a place like this before," said Cedar Rapids resident Tom Angellotti, who recently ate at Three Samurai with his family. "The kids loved it. It was really entertaining."

Obermann Center awards 7 UI professors

Seven UI researchers have won grants from the UI Obermann Center for Advanced Studies for five projects studying children and their families. These Center for Advanced Studies Spelman Rockefeller Grants are supported by the UI Laura Spelman Rockefeller Fund and by the UI Office of the Vice President for Research. The $5,000 grants will fund research to be carried out this summer.

This year's award recipients are Elena V. Gavrusseva, assistant professor of linguistics; Elizabeth Heineman, associate professor of history; Kathleen F. Janz, associate professor of sport, health, leisure and physical studies; Steven M. Levy, professor of preventive medicine; Trudy L. Burns, professor of biostatistics; Patricia Kelley, professor of social work; and Rita K. Noonan, assistant professor of sociology.

Jay Semel, director of the Obermann Center, said that since its inception, the program has resulted in about $7.8 million in external grants and in numerous publications. In recent years the grant recipients have gone on to win grants from the National Institutes of Health and have published research findings on children's accident injuries, market women in Peru and family stress.

Rhodes 'joke' draws fire but no sanctions

■ There is no basis for an official civil-rights complaint, a state official says.

By Andrea Mason
The Daily Iowan

A "joke" about white males made by Ann Rhodes, the vice president for university relations, during a press conference on April 20 will not bring about official repercussions, state officials said Monday. A UI spokesman declined to comment.

The remark — made by Rhodes after announcing that a black UI dental student had been arrested for allegedly sending threatening e-mails to members of the UI dental school — has amassed more than 300 complaints, said Steve Parrott, the interim director of university relations.

David Leaming, a complaint intake officer for the Iowa Civil Rights Commission, said a comment directed toward a group is not valid for complaint with the agency.

"What (Rhodes) said was a blanket statement; it didn't single out anyone ... There's nothing to be done by us," he said.

Controversy surrounds Rhodes' response to a reporter's question about whether she was surprised that the person who was arrested was a black female dental student.

At the press conference, Rhodes said, "I figured it was going to be a white guy between 25 and 55 because they're the root of most evil ... but what do I know?"

Rhodes

is to write to the newspapers or to complain to the UI, he said.

In a prepared statement, UI President Mary Sue Coleman said that although she does not condone Rhodes' comment, she believes "(Rhodes) deeply regrets any pain her comment may have caused."

Coleman went on to say: "(Rhodes) tried to relieve the tension with a very inappropriate comment. She made a mistake that was totally out of character for her."

Parrott would not comment on whether Rhodes would incur any repercussions from the UI.

Rhodes was unavailable for comment Monday. In a release dated April 20, Rhodes apologized for the remark, calling it "a poor attempt at humor."

UI sophomore faces sexual-abuse charge

■ The criminal charge comes in addition to an unsettled 1999 lawsuit.

By Lisa Livermore
The Daily Iowan

Already facing an as-yet unresolved civil lawsuit that has gone on for more than six months, a UI sophomore has now been charged with third-degree sexual abuse in connection with an alleged November 1998 incident.

Xenon Varvel, 19, was arrested on April 28 at his residence, the Beta Theta Pi fraternity, 816 N. Dubuque St., for allegedly committing a sexual act against the will of a former UI student at Burge Residence Hall on Nov. 20, 1998.

A civil suit filed on Sept. 10, 1999, asserted that the woman "sustained injuries and damages" as a result of the alleged incident. Criminal charges were filed on April 28 because the alleged incident was only recently reported to UI Public Safety, said Chuck Green, the director of the department.

Further details involving the nature of the case cannot be released because of possible interference with upcoming court hearings, he said.

Varvel was released from the Johnson County Jail after bail was posted for his release, jail officials said. He could not be reached for comment.

The civil suit has yet to be resolved; a Dec. 4 deadline has been set for the close of the discovery period and pleadings, according to court documents.

The woman is seeking a judgment against Varvel "to compensate her for the injuries and damages she suffered as a result of the defendant's actions," the suit says.

The woman knew Varvel prior to the alleged actions, Green said, adding that Varvel is not considered to be a threat to the community. Both the woman and Varvel are originally from Lancaster County, Neb.

Filing a civil suit before criminal charges is not unusual, said Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White. He said each case is different.

Eighty percent of rapes are acquaintance rapes, said Christie Munson, the director of the Rape Victim Advocacy Program. It is a common problem between individuals between the age of 16 and 30 years old, she said.

Police board asks City Council for support

■ The Police Citizen Review Board wants city councilors to require officer cooperation in complaint investigations.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

The Police Citizen Review Board appealed to the Iowa City City Council during Monday's work session to assess the board's performance and to address operational concerns as it nears the end of its third year.

The police board, which monitors the Iowa City Police Department, asked the council to consider requiring the cooperation of Iowa City police officers in name-clearing issues regarding public complaints. Extending the life of the board beyond its predetermined termination date — August 2001 — was also requested.

Since its inception in September 1997, after the shooting death of Iowa City resident Eric Shaw by an Iowa City police officer, the police board has received 38 complaints regarding Iowa City police officers, said John Watson, the board chairman.

"We are interested in reviewing police complaints, but right now we don't have the tools to do that," he said. "You can't dismiss a complaint on its face as frivolous."

Reports by the police board are written from information in Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake's reports, he said. Incidents are not investigated further if the reports are deemed to be adequate.

The majority of complaints by citizens to the police board have been about the excessive use of force and traffic violations, Watson said.

He said 10 complaints alleged that an officer used excessive force, and six complaints asserted that officers acted on racial motivation or discrimination.

"It's just better knowing someone is there evaluating what the chief has done," said Mayor Ernie Lehman. "I do believe the credibility (of the police) is greater because you're there."

The police union — which not all Iowa City officers belong to — has said it is not interested in the mediation processes between a complainant and an officer, Winkelhake said.

The decision to participate in mediation processes and release statements made during such meetings is at the discretion of the individual officer, City Attorney Eleanor Dilkes said.

Although last year some councilors expressed concern about the cost of the police board, Watson said the board is operating 35 percent below its budget. Most of the expenses to the city are attorney fees and paying for the time the city attorney and the police department devote to board matters, he said, adding that their involvement with the board is decreasing.

In other council news, the council decided not take action regarding the UI Students Against Sweatshops' resolution before the council, asking it to support the UI's withdrawal from the Fair Labor Association.

"I don't want to get into it," Councilor Connie Champion said.

The issue will be addressed after a recommendation from the Iowa City Human Rights Commission, Lehman said.

Palestinian state seen after Sept. 13

■ Despite goodwill gestures, no progress is made in the Mideast talks.

By Dana Budeiri
Associated Press

EILAT, Israel — Trying to improve the climate in peace talks after a bungled start, Israeli officials said Monday they've resigned themselves to Palestinian statehood, and the Palestinians acknowledged Israel's pain on Holocaust Remembrance Day.

Despite such goodwill gestures, negotiators reported little progress and awaited the arrival of a U.S. mediator today to help draft an outline of a final peace treaty.

Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat said he would declare statehood sometime after Sept. 13, the deadline for the treaty itself, regardless of whether he had reached agreement with Israel by then on the terms of independence.

"The independent Palestinian state is the natural right of the Palestinian people," Arafat told reporters at his Gaza City headquarters.

Israeli officials said they would not oppose a Palestinian state in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, but said the Palestinians should accept that some Jewish settlements there will become part of Israel.

A second day of negotiations in this Red Sea resort took place amid Palestinian anger over Sunday's disclosure that Israel has authorized construction of 174 new homes in Maale Adumim, the largest Jewish settlement in the West Bank. U.S. envoy Dennis Ross was to join the talks as a mediator today for the first time.

Arafat said the ongoing construction had a "negative effect" on the Eilat talks.

Israeli Cabinet Minister Haim Ramon, who often speaks for Prime Minister Ehud Barak, said the Palestinians knew well that Israel planned to annex Maale Adumim as part of a peace treaty.

"The same as the Palestinians say it is clear to them that they will have a Palestinian state," Ramon said, "It's clear to them as well that we will insist that Maale Adumim will become part of the state of Israel."

Ramon said that "de facto, a Palestinian state exists," and that negotiations would address, in part, Israel's request to bar it from signing military treaties and acquiring heavy arms, such as tanks and artillery.

Barak has never said publicly that he supports the creation of a Palestinian state. Barak's office said in a statement that the "nature of the Palestinian entity" was one of the issues to be addressed by the negotiators.

A senior Palestinian negotiator offered Israel a goodwill gesture of his own as the talks wound down for Israel's national day of mourning, which began Monday night, to remember the 6 million Jews who died in the Holocaust.

"We share with the Israeli people the feeling of pain and sorrow on this day, a day of tragedy in Jewish history," Yasser Abed Rabbo told reporters. "We also want our days of tragedy to become a distant memory and to put an end to the suffering of the Palestinian people that has lasted until today."

The friendly atmosphere at the talks continued, with negotiators joking with each other while posing for photographers and calling the atmosphere "constructive."

But little progress has been made on four key issues — borders, Jerusalem, Jewish settlements and Palestinian refugees — and Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erekat complained that Israeli negotiators had not been given a mandate to make the necessary concessions.

The final peace treaty addresses the issues at the heart of the Arab-Israeli conflict, and neither side can afford to be seen as giving in.

Sharp disagreements also remained Monday on the scope of a third and final interim Israeli redeployment from the West Bank, mandated by the 1993 Oslo accords, which lay the groundwork for the current peace process.

The redeployment is to give the Palestinians all of the West Bank except Jerusalem, Jewish settlements, border area and specified military locations. Erekat said there were "large differences" over how much land those areas constituted.

Barak is trying to overcome opposition from hawkish members of his Cabinet to giving the Palestinians three suburbs of East Jerusalem as a trust-building gesture ahead of the redeployment.

On Monday, Palestinians hurled stones at a convoy of Jerusalem Mayor Ehud Olmert and Interior Minister Natan Sharansky as they toured Abu Dis, one of the suburbs being considered for handover. A few stones hit their cars, but no one was injured.

Also Monday, the army removed Jewish settlers who set up two mobile homes on a hilltop near the Elon Moreh settlement in the northern West Bank.

Colombian prison sweep nets arsenal

■ Authorities confiscate AK-47s, pistols, explosives and attack dogs.

By Margarita Martinez
Associated Press

BOGOTA, Colombia — After a bloody inmate riot, security forces conducted a sweep through a high-security prison, confiscating two AK-47 assault rifles, as well as pistols and explosives, police said Monday.

The three-day search by 2,000 heavily armed soldiers and police at Modelo prison also uncovered moonshine distilleries, sophisticated communications equipment and even attack dogs, national police chief Rosso Jose Serrano said.

Authorities mounted the raid, the first comprehensive sweep of the Bogota prison in 15 years, after a battle between rival inmate groups on April 27 that claimed 26 lives and left 16 inmates wounded.

"This was a center of crime, extortion, kidnapping, prostitution — even satanic sects," Serrano told reporters at a news conference at which the confiscated weapons were displayed.

Along with the AK-47s, 26 pistols, 11 pounds of plastic explosives, eight hand grenades and 5,000 rounds of ammunition were also found.

Corruption among guards has made it easy for prisoners to smuggle weapons into Colombia's perilous, overcrowded prisons, which have become increasingly unruly in recent years. In most lockups, inmate subgroups virtually control separate cellblocks.

Criminals have used Colombia's prisons to organize extortion and kidnapping rings and other rackets, something President Andres Pastrana's government has vowed to stop.

Some 5,000 inmates are jammed into Modelo prison, which was built for 1,900 inmates and is divided into dominions controlled by right-wing paramilitaries and common criminals — the combatants in last week's bloodletting — as well as by leftist rebels.

Pastrana declared a prisons emergency in February, and authorities have suspended 110 prison guards. Since 1997, nearly 500 inmates have been killed, and more than twice that number have escaped.

WORLD BRIEF

In Mexico's burro capital, every donkey has his day

OTUMBA, Mexico (AP) — This mountain-pass town saluted international workers' day Monday with its annual homage to the hardest worker of all: Mexico's prized burro.

Thousands of people flocked to the 16th-century town of Otumba for a festival of sport, savagery and beauty in what is most likely the world's only donkey fair. They came for the donkey races, polo on donkey and bucking donkey rodeo, along with prizes for the best-costumed donkey — and, of course, the crowning of Miss Donkey.

Imbued with tradition and more than a dose of tongue-in-cheek, the 36th annual National Donkey Festival drew a record crowd to Otumba's tree-lined central square northwest of Mexico City.

"Donkeys serve us all day, so we have to realize that they deserve their fiesta," said Martin Coyote Balderas, 70, who traveled 60 miles with his family to see the festivities.

The day started off eruditely enough with the polo match. The players, four on each side, were mounted on a mangy assortment of donkeys. They used brooms to hit both the beach ball and their trusted steeds.

Much of the game was spent motionless, as only two of the eight players seemed to have even minimal control of their notoriously stubborn animals. Spectators hooted as the goalie's mount — a particularly ornery white burro — bucked him to the asphalt as the ball rolled into the goal.

And there were the costumes: donkeys decked out as everything from presidential candidates to Pikachu, the Pokémon monster.

Clinton eyes privilege in e-mails

■ The White House was prepared to disclose and fix an e-mail glitch last year, documents show.

By John Solomon
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House is raising the possibility it may invoke executive privilege to keep Congress from seeing some documents in the controversy over missing e-mails that are under subpoena, documents disclosed Monday.

Meanwhile, investigators are poring over memos suggesting presidential aides could have begun retrieving the missing messages more than a year ago to see if they should have been turned over to investigations, ranging from Whitewater to impeachment.

The White House sent the House Government Reform Committee, which is investigating the controversy, a one-page list of documents it is not turning over under subpoena because they are considered covered by executive privilege and attorney-client confidentiality.

Among the documents on the list, which was obtained by the Associated Press, are handwritten notes by White House lawyers involving discussions they had with computer experts about the e-mails.

The list states the notes "reflect mental impressions" of the lawyers for the White House Office of Administration, which oversaw the e-mail system at the center of the controversy.

The list is the first step in the executive-privilege process. In past investigations, the White House has sometimes relented and turned over documents, and in other cases, administration officials invoked the privileges to shield memos.

The decision prompted an angry reply Monday by the chairman of the Government Reform Committee.

"The White House is obstructing the investigation," Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., said in a letter to the White House counsel's office. "This meaningless legal mumbo-jumbo is obviously a transparent ploy to provoke wasteful and time-consuming squabbles over documents."

A White House spokesman, Jim Kennedy, responded: "We have already turned over a lot of material to Mr. Burton. What he is seeking is not historical information about the origins of this problem but current information generated only as a result of his inquiry."

Kennedy added that the White House "would like to reach an accommodation with the committee to provide it with what it legitimately needs in a way that doesn't interfere with our ability to do our job."

Meanwhile, the AP obtained an internal memo showing that presidential aides prepared to notify Congress as early as February 1999 about a glitch in their e-mail system and to begin retrieving thousands of unarchived messages that might be relevant to investigators. But they never followed through.

The February 1999 memo, which included talking points for possible testimony before congressional appropriators, laid out the history of the e-mail problem that has now become the focus of criminal investigators.

The memo disclosed that presidential aides had solicited a proposal on Oct. 20, 1998, from contractor Northrup Grumman to "recover the missing records" that weren't properly archived because of the glitch.

"The approximate cost for the system design is $602,000," Karl H. Heissner of the White House Office of Administration wrote.

First ADHD guidelines issued

■ The pediatrics academy hopes to mediate the distribution of medication.

By Lindsey Tanner
Associated Press

CHICAGO — The American Academy of Pediatrics Monday issued its first guidelines for diagnosing attention deficit/hyperactivity disorder, hoping to prevent merely rambunctious youngsters from being overmedicated while ensuring that other children get the help they need.

Recent research shows dramatic increases in the use of drugs such as Ritalin to treat children with ADHD, suggesting the disorder is either becoming more common or is being overdiagnosed. Many experts worry that some doctors and parents are treating typical childhood misbehavior as an illness.

The academy, the nation's largest group of pediatricians, said it is unclear whether the disorder is being overdiagnosed, because there are such wide variations nationwide in how doctors define and treat it.

The academy said it believes the new guidelines will standardize the diagnosis and make it easier to identify those children who really need help. Guidelines for treating ADHD are still being developed.

"We'd like to help us all (diagnose) more accurately," said Dr. James M. Perrin, an author of the guidelines and an associate professor of pediatrics at Harvard Medical School.

Between 4 percent and 12 percent of school-age children — or as many as 3.8 million youngsters, most of them boys — are believed to have ADHD. Symptoms include short attention span, impulsive behavior and difficulty focusing and sitting still.

Ritalin is often prescribed to increase a child's alertness.

But many experts have pointed out that its long-term effects on children are unknown.

For a diagnosis of ADHD under the new guidelines, a child must exhibit symptoms in at least two settings, such as at home and at school. The symptoms must harm the child's academic or social functioning for at least six months.

The guidelines are for children 6 through 12. Most ADHD research has involved that age group, and the academy also said it recognizes that some symptoms can be chalked up to normal rambunctiousness and contrariness in preschoolers.

This is the first time the academy has drawn up guidelines for a behavioral ailment. The academy began developing them three years ago, said Dr. Martin T. Stein, co-author and a pediatrics professor at the University of California at San Diego.

■ Federal regulators take steps to halt profit claims by 14 online firms and individuals.

By Marcy Gordon
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Fourteen online trading firms and individuals, have agreed to stop making claims that the trading strategies and systems they sell can bring investors easy money with little risk, federal regulators said Monday.

The Federal Trade Commission, the Commodity Futures Trading Commission and the Securities and Exchange Commission announced settlements with the firms in which they agreed to drop unsubstantiated claims of profits.

The federal agencies also warned consumers to be wary of false and misleading claims on Internet sites touting trading strategies or systems.

"The Internet provides many benefits to the investing public, but it can also provide a means for some Web operators to make misleading or fraudulent claims about their investment strategies," said William Rainer, chairman of the commodities oversight agency. "Today's actions ... should help remind consumers to be very skeptical when someone promises amazing investment profits with little or no risk."

The firms and individuals neither admitted to nor denied wrongdoing in the settlements with the three agencies.

Eleven, cited by the commodity commission for alleged fraudulent promotion of computerized trading systems and advisory services for such commodities as foreign currencies, also agreed to pay civil fines of $10,000 each. The fines will be waived, however, for those that can demonstrate they are unable to pay.

The three firms named by the FTC provide strategies for day trading, in which investors make bets on the tiniest changes in stock prices, squeezing profits by rapidly buying and selling shares electronically.

The online firms — CompuTrade LLC, Granite Investments and Day Trading International of Kirksville, Mo. — sold combinations of "real time" training, computer software programs, trading manuals, e-mail newsletters and mentoring services at prices from $79 to $4,995, the FTC said.

They made advertising claims such as "Make money regardless of the market going up or down" and investment returns of 2,041 percent, the agency said.

Under the settlements with the FTC, which have been approved by the agency's commissioners but require 30 days of public comment before final adoption, the three firms would have to include this sentence in all future advertising: "DAY TRADING involves high risks, and YOU can LOSE a lot of money."

The SEC announced a settlement of civil fraud charges against Robert Garganese and his online company, Genesis Trading, for allegedly using false and misleading advertising to lure day traders to his stock-picking service. Garganese, who is serving a one-year prison term for money laundering and telemarketing fraud, agreed to refrain from future violations and to publicize the agreement to customers for one year.

Wells Fargo Bank unveils ATMs that show movie previews and news headlines.

By Michael Liedtke
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Movie previews are coming to automated teller machines.

Wells Fargo Bank is rolling out a new type of ATM that will be more than a cash dispenser. It will be a multimedia center, offering previews, advertisements and news headlines.

Some consumers worry the new bells and whistles will mean longer lines to get cash.

"I just want to get my money and get out of here," said Glenn Lie of San Francisco. "That's why I use (ATMs) instead of waiting in teller lines."

Users will continue to slide an

ATM card into the machine and enter an ID number.

The difference is that movie previews will play continuously until a customer steps up and begins a transaction. Gladiators is showing this week. As the customer starts banking, advertising will pop up on the screen, and customers can choose if they want more information about a product.

The latest news headlines and sports from MSNBC will scroll across the bottom of the screen at all times. MSNBC eventually will provide stock market and weather reports, too.

"We are beginning to see a blurring of delivery channels," said Robert Chlebowski, a Wells executive vice president. "The online banking experience and the ATM experience are starting to converge."

The typical ATM transaction averages 45 seconds. Wells officials said their research shows customers won't spend more time than that at the new machines. To move customers along, the ATMs will beep at customers once their cash has been dispensed.

"We recognize this is not an online banking experience where you are sitting down in your bathrobe," Chlebowski said. "We understand most ATM transactions are conducted on the street by people who are standing up and just want to get their cash."

Three ATMs in the San Francisco Bay area and one in Los Angeles are scheduled to go online today. Wells plans to convert 650 of its 2,856 ATMs in California and 170 ATMs in Arizona by the end of this year. Wells' remaining 5,500 ATMs in 21 states will be upgraded over several years.

Wells said it isn't raising its ATM fees to pay for the new machines. But the bank expects to recoup its investment — and beyond that, to make money — with advertising revenue from movie studios and businesses.

Disney/Time Warner tiff cuts off ABC

TIME WARNER

Disney appealed for help from the Federal Communications Commission Monday.

Each side angrily blamed the other for the blackout, and each said FCC law was on its side: Time Warner said it was against the law to carry a station without a transmission deal, while ABC said a cable operator cannot stop airing a broadcast station during a sweeps period.

The sweeps, a period when ratings are used to set local advertising rates, began on April 27 and will run until May 24.

The two sides had no negotiations scheduled but were to meet with FCC staff members late Monday.

Preston Padden, the executive vice president of governmental relations at Disney, said it was a "damnable lie" to blame Disney for pulling the plug.

"These people are arrogant manipulators," Padden said. "Some deranged individual has deprived all of these people of ABC."

Disney had offered a series of deadline extensions after the original national transmission deal expired Dec. 31. The most recent deadline, offered in March, expired at 12:01 a.m. Monday.

Time Warner said Disney's demands to carry the Disney Channel and separate cartoon and soap opera networks on its system would have added $300,000 in costs to its customers; Disney said it had offered a fair market price.

"It's abundantly clear to anybody who understands the real situation — this is about extorting money from cable customers," said Michael Luftman, a Time Warner spokesman.

Because the blackout affects less than 4 percent of the nation's 100 million TV homes, the dispute isn't likely to shake ABC's hold on the top spot in the season's ratings, said Jon Mandel of Grey Advertising. But advertisers are expected to demand ABC compensate them for the lost customers, he said.

It's not the first time such a dispute has deprived cable customers of their favorite stations, but it is the largest outage, said Simon Applebaum, the senior editor of Cablevision magazine. Earlier this year, a fight left some 400,000 Cox Communications customers in the Washington, D.C., area without the FOX network for a week.

Disney stock fell on Wall Street Monday, as investors worried that a drawn-out battle could have an impact on the Disney's earnings, which have been boosted recently by ABC's comeback. Disney shares were off $1.62 at $42 on the New York Stock Exchange. Time Warner shares slipped $1.06 to $88.87.

ABC filed a petition for emergency relief from the FCC. It is unclear what the commission might do. Typically, the FCC does not get involved in private contractual matters.

The staff of the FCC's cable bureau met with both parties separately Monday, and agency officials continued to urge the companies to work out their differences. In the absence of any agreement, the commission has asked Time Warner to respond by the end of today to the petition filed by ABC so that the agency can conduct an expedited review of the matter, an agency spokeswoman said.

Both sides seemed to be settling in for a long haul; Time Warner was offering to reimburse customers who bought a device enabling them to switch to antennas, and Disney was mulling a plan to give rebates to customers who buy satellite dishes.

New York City Mayor Rudolph Giuliani said that given the city's canyons of tall buildings, the idea of getting an antenna is "almost insulting."

"This is an example of what happens when you allow monopolies to get too big, and they become too predatory, and then the consumer is hurt," he said. "For the life of me, I can't figure out why the Justice Department has spent so much time on Microsoft and so little on this industry."

Hundreds of phone calls complaining about the blackout came in to the studio where "Live With Regis and Kathie Lee" is produced, a spokeswoman said. Philbin discussed the situation with his co-host, Kathie Lee Gifford, calling the blackout a shame.

"Can we go home?" Gifford jokingly asked.

Voters could decide First Ave. fate said Councilor Steven Kanner.

"We have to do this as soon as possible," said Councilor Connie Champion.

A special election would not maximize the number of voters,

Wilburn said, who favors the general election, during which voters will also vote for U.S. president, state representatives and most likely, the Iowa City Public Library expansion.

The acquisition of property for the Captain Irish Parkway extension, which was originally planned to coincide with the First Avenue grading project, will not be affected by the petition, said City Attorney Eleanor Dilkes.

The installation of a 24-foot-long water line along First Avenue will continue if approved by the council during tonight's formal meeting.

SAS gives Coleman the silent treatment

Deifell, a UI graduate student and SAS member, questioned Coleman and Phillip Jones, the UI vice president for student services, about possible violations of free speech in the April 8 arrests of SAS members in Jessup Hall.

Public Safety officers made the arrests when five group members refused to leave the building during a protest.

Jones said the arrests were made because of violations of health and safety codes. He added that no students were stopped from expressing their rights to free speech during the protest.

Coleman also informed the fireside chat attendees of the UI's involvement to prevent sweatshop labor. She defended her decision to remain in the FLA as well as the WRC, saying that even WRC officials thought it was fine to be a part of both labor-monitoring organizations because both groups could work together to prevent sweatshop labor.

"Nothing in the (FLA) that I can find shows that corporations are calling the shots," she said.

However, Bertz said, what Coleman stated about dual affiliation was a "blatant lie," asserting that the WRC has taken a neutral stance regarding the FLA.

In addition to the red tape, the group also taped signs to their bodies that had the names of workers and the nature of human-rights abuses they had been subjected to. SAS taped the signs outside the room where the fireside chat was taking place after leaving the chat.

In related news, Nike canceled its contract with the University of Michigan on April 27, Bertz said, because of Michigan's affiliation with the WRC. Having previously only targeted small schools such as Brown University, Nike is trying to give a show of force to other schools with contracts, he said.

"They've stopped messing around," Bertz said. "They're going for the big ones now."

On Georgia campus, 11 students have died since January who was killed in a car accident last month. But she was struck by the magnitude of the death toll.

"The bells kind of make you think," she said. "It doesn't seem like such a big number until you see it in front of you."

Travis Denison, a member of the university's student government whose friend Chris Moseley also was killed in a car crash, said students opened the campus paper every Monday almost expecting to read about another death.

"Every weekend they were dying," he said. "It's so hard to believe."

The students left behind mourning families across the state, from the beaches of St. Simons Island to the mountain town of Dahlonega to the suburbs of Atlanta.

Only one of the deaths received much attention outside this college town: Ben Grantham, a 20-year-old student from St. Simons Island, was killed in a late March car crash that authorities say was a fraternity initiation prank.

Grantham was riding in the cargo hold of an Alpha Tau Omega brother's sport utility vehicle, handcuffed and possibly blindfolded, when the vehicle flipped and hit a tree, police said.

The most recent death was that of Katie Elizabeth Turner, a first-year graduate student from Columbus who died April 22 of lymphoma — the second student to die that weekend.

To one of her professors, Robert Nozza, she was a star — a student who had taken to a hearing-impaired child at a summer camp and devoted her life to helping similarly disabled children. She had the perfect balance of intense study habits and gentle patience to succeed, Nozza said.

"All these students, they don't realize this of course, but we kind of think of them as more than just numbers," he said. "More than just names on a transcript. We get attached to them in ways they don't even realize."

Mourners who attended Monday's service said the tremendous loss had united the campus in grief.

"I wish this evening that I could give you some explanation for what we have endured as a community," university president Michael Adams told the crowd. "But I'm sometimes at a loss for answers, and this is one of those times."

Before crying racism, consider motivation

In the wake of Tarsha Claiborne's arrest nearly two weeks ago, the question everyone, including the authorities, wants answered is: What was her motivation?

Another question seems to present itself, however: If racist e-mails and hate crimes against minority dental students were not allegedly perpetrated by a minority student, would we all still be as baffled by the motivations?

In a very real sense, it is easy to label Claiborne's alleged actions as ignorant and racist. But isn't this kind of labeling just an easy way out?

That question, more than any other, seems to come to light when hate crimes are perpetrated on a minority group by a minority.

No one may fully understand the motivation of anyone who would send racist threats. Ignorance is a good insult to throw at a person capable of such acts of violence, but ignorance isn't a motivation. So what's left: racism. Being a racist is another good insult, and racism is an age-old motivation for hate crimes.

But there seems to be a paradox somewhere when racial threats are directed at one's own racial group. A parallel can be drawn to the aftermath of the O.J. Simpson trial. His acquittal in criminal court was not based on race. It was based on the incompetence of the prosecution, which failed to convince a jury of Simpson's guilt. But the verdict split the country along racial lines. The news media's coverage painted a picture of blacks proclaiming how well America's judicial system worked, while whites pointed to how it needed reform.

Even when there is no inherent racial card being played, this country is very racially minded. Sad but true, we are not color blind.

So in a case such as Claiborne's, the first question we ask is: What could her motivation have been? If it were a member of the majority who sent the e-mails, the motivation would have been passed off as racist.

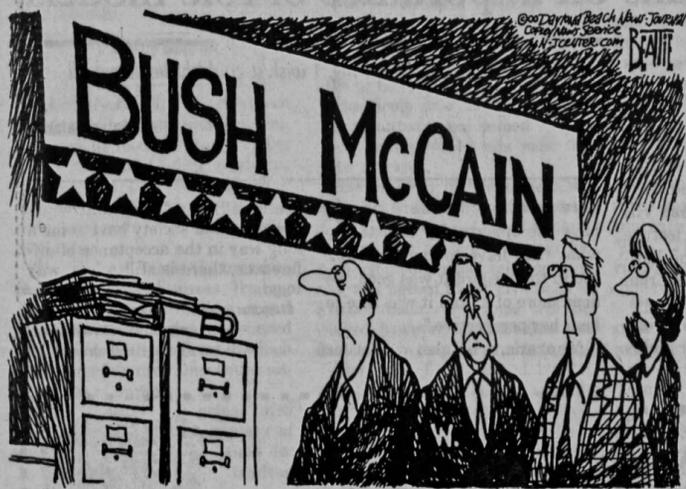

But her own skin color seems to lend a shade of gray to our ability to take that easy way out. So the debate over Claiborne's motivation continues because we cannot fall back on such clichéd terms as "ignorance" and "racism." Perhaps we need to take a moment to reconsider the actual definition of racism.

Today, we seem to look closer at the skin color of the perpetrators than the skin color of the victims as we attempt to determine our level of societal ignorance. In our desire to take the easy way out, we pass off members of society who perform "ignorant" acts as "racist" before closely evaluating their actions.

On making some shootings seem worse than others

The public's reaction to the zoo shooting on April 25 was a little more than disappointing. Barely anyone even batted an eye when a 16-year-old boy allegedly shot seven children at the National Zoo in Washington, D.C. So why doesn't anyone care? In the past, outrage remained in the air for weeks after this type of violence. Take Columbine, for example. The city's name can sit alone — with no mention of Colorado or last year's shooting — and it stirs strong emotions in people's hearts. So why are so many people still upset over that incident and not last week's shooting?

Maybe the location had something to do with it. It appears by the public's reaction that violence is acceptable in a town laced with crime and with low-income blacks as the majority. But in an affluent neighborhood of mostly whites, such as Columbine, such an incident is horrific.

People shouldn't think a spat between teens should be solved with a gun. Whatever happened to the good old days of fistfights and hair-pulling? That seems like mere child's play in comparison to the 9mm handguns children are toting today. And when the public turns the cheek the other way when children kill other children, as it has with the National Zoo shooting, it sends the message of "no big deal." It is quite the opposite — it is a big deal — and should be seen as horrible.

Society needs to set a precedent so no mixed messages are sent out to the youth. We should be upset every time a child kills another child. No matter the location, age, race or gender, people must be outraged by these tragedies. We can't only be upset when a shooting seems out of context.

There may even be a larger and scarier issue behind why people don't care about the shooting — people are becoming accustomed to the idea of children shooting one another. We shouldn't.

Obviously not all killings can receive equal media attention, but the ones that are covered should be treated equally. If the public is consistent with its shock over crimes, then the children will get a solid message: Killing is not OK.

In the brave, new whirl of capitalism, everything goes Swoosh

In a more-perfect world, people who worked for a living would actually get paid enough to have a living. Or at least some kind of life. Imagine all the people, as John Lennon once intoned.

Corporate executives would only get paid if they knew how to program the photo-copy machine. Successfully. Not to mention punctuate their letters all by themselves, just as if they were big boys. And lawyers would work for free, except for public defenders, who have been doing that for quite some time. In a more-perfect world, PDs would actually get paid as much as, say, athletic-apparel executives. So would teachers.

I don't say this, of course, simply because both of my parents were teachers and three of my friends are public defenders. I am your typically objective journalist, concerned only with the truth and whether jean shorts or khakis are fly.

In a more-perfect world, there would be no need for a group such as Students Against Sweatshops, irritating everybody with such unreasonable ideas as, say, brown-skinned pubescent girls shouldn't be mass producing your beloved Tigger Hawk sweatshirts for about 5 cents per beak, or 2½ cents per arm pit, whichever comes first.

We don't, of course, live in this more-perfect world, because, for one thing, it sounds an awful lot like communism, and our Founding Fathers sacrificed their lives fighting communism and that whole notion of representation without taxation.

We live in a Swoosh-ticized world. One in which the godfather of the Swoosh can financially cut off universities that have the temerity to suggest they might not be interested in being part of a system in which pubescent girls get paid Charles Dickens wages in a William Gibson world. Brown, Michigan, Oregon — swoosh, goes the Nike scythe. It gives a whole new meaning to the corporation's ad slogan, Just Do It.

Just Do It to whom? you have to wonder. And how often? Not questions that the Swoosh-meister wants you to ask. Yours is not to reason why, yours is but to buy and buy.

As the University of Oregon found out recently. Concerned about sweatshops, it joined the Worker Rights Consortium. Scythe you, said the Swoosh-meister, as soon as it was brought to his attention. Apparently, the freedom of thought traditionally associated with universities is all fine and good so long as it doesn't irritate those who are enjoying the freedom of making a buck.

This is the story of our times — you're free to think whatever you want, as long as your thinking doesn't interfere with the business of America, which is business. It's kind of like that old joke about Henry Ford; you can have your Model T in any color you want, so long as it's black.

You have to wonder what the UI will do in light of the Swoosh scything its way through academia. You'd like to think that President Mary Sue Coleman would show some initiative for once and tell Nike that it can't muscle universities as if it were some character out of a Grade-B Mafia flick.

You'd like to think that she would have the gumption to say, Look — we'll go barefoot before we'll ever Swoosh ourselves. You'd like to think that she'd tell the Swoosh-meister exactly where the moon don't shine and how his contract would look quite nice there.

You'd also like to think that she would ditch the Fair Labor Association, saying that any organization so influenced by corporations cannot possibly monitor what those same corporations are doing — as Nike's actions against Brown, Michigan and Oregon show.

You'd like to think all this. Of course, if you actually do, you probably also would like to believe in Santa Claus.

There is no Santa Claus. There's only a Grinch.

And the sound it makes as it goes stomping out freedom of thought is this: Swoosh, Swoosh, Swoosh.

Kronos, Upshaw to go global

The celebrated quartet and the renowned singer will team up in Hancher Wednesday.

By T.J. Besler
The Daily Iowan

In the final event of the Hancher season, the Kronos Quartet, with a little help from Dawn Upshaw, will premiere its new world folk-music collaboration, "Tonight is the Night," at 8 p.m. Wednesday.

A concert featuring eight world premieres, "Tonight is the Night" is titled after the Indian song that opens the program and features original compositions based on folk sources by Argentine composer Osvaldo Golijov and Mexican composer Gabriela Ortiz.

The concert also includes a globe-spanning series of traditional songs arranged for Kronos and Upshaw, coming from Portugal, Spain, Egypt, India and including the Stephen Foster song "Ah, May the Red Red Rose Live Always."

"Dawn Upshaw can contribute so much to what Kronos does because she's stretching her own boundaries all the time," said Kronos founder and first violinist David Harrington. "She puts all herself into what she does, and she's one of the best singers I've ever heard."

Harrington also said the way languages that he doesn't necessarily understand became musical melodies was amazing and that sharing this with the audience is something he is looking forward to.

"One of the things I'm looking forward to in this collaboration is to explore different musical styles and to hear many different languages," he said. "Dawn will sing in several languages, including Spanish, Portuguese, Arabic and Hindi, and in the case of the piece that Gabriela Ortiz is writing, in Mayan. I'm hoping that our concert is going to end up being a celebration of diversity."

Upshaw says that for her, the songs are about the words.

"For me, singing is foremost about words. I trace this back to my experience with the American folk songs that I sang and listened to as a child — songs whose entire premise rests on immediate and forthright expression," she said. In this respect, these songs from distant lands remain, in aesthetic terms, quite close to home.

Since 1973, Kronos has emerged as a leading voice for new work, without boundaries. More than 400 works have been written or arranged for the quartet.

Upshaw has become one of the world's most celebrated singers, spanning genres such as musical theater, opera, art-song recitals, popular songs, recordings and television. She is most noted for her commitment to performances of new music.

Actors strike TV, radio commercial industry

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actors who star in TV and radio commercials went on strike Monday, demanding a bigger cut from the booming cable market, in the first major Hollywood walkout in 12 years.

Hundreds gathered in a Los Angeles park and marched past Wilshire Boulevard ad agencies. Several hundred striking actors also rallied in New York City.

The Screen Actors Guild and the American Federation of Television & Radio Artists, representing approximately 135,000 actors, authorized the strike. The walkout centers on the pay structure for commercials.

TV commercials offer actors a minimum of $478 for a day's work. Actors also get royalties of roughly $50 to $120 each time a spot airs on network television. When it comes to cable TV commercials, however, actors receive only a flat fee of $1,000 or less for each 13-week run.

Now, with two-thirds of all TV ads being made for cable, actors are demanding that royalties be extended to cable as well. Advertisers, however, want to extend the flat fee from cable to the networks.

The current fee structure dates from the '50s and '60s, when ABC, NBC and CBS claimed up to 95 percent of the audience. Today, six networks fight for 50 percent of the audience, while cable and satellite channels claim the rest.

Blasphemy forward

The Iowa Playwrights' Festival will continue tonight in the UI Theatre Building. The annual festival is a week-long celebration of new plays written by students in the Iowa Playwrights' Workshop.

This year's festival, titled A Blast!, features six premiere plays. One play will be shown at 5:30 and 9 p.m. each day through Saturday. The festival will also include staged readings in the Cosmo Catalano Acting Studio in the Theatre Building at 1:30 every afternoon. This year's festival promises some of the strongest plays ever presented at the festival, said Alan MacVey, the chairman of the theater department.

The festival has a show to fit just about everyone's taste in theater. The plays presented range from a screwball melodrama called Strange Attractors about love, sex and morality in the 21st century to Nightwatches, a love story about the complicated relationship in an arranged marriage at the turn of the 20th century.

The festival will also include a panel discussion at 3:30 p.m. Thursday with guests from the world of professional theater, including UI alumni playwright Lee Blessing, dramaturges Sydney Mahoney and Morgan Jenness, and literary agent Mead Hunger.

For more information about the plays being presented, contact the theater department at 335-2700. Tickets to all evening productions are $6 and $3 for students and senior citizens.

Hawks to take on Bulldogs this afternoon

The Iowa softball team will take a break from conference play today against Drake.

By Melinda Mawdsley The Daily Iowan

For Iowa's successful week as a team, two players were recognized.

Sophomores Alicia Gerlach and Kristi Hanks were named the Big Ten Player and Pitcher of the Week, respectively, for their efforts in the Hawkeyes' last five victories.

Gerlach, a native of East Moline, Ill., batted .368 last week with two game-winning RBIs and four home runs. Her season dinger total is now seven, placing her second on the team behind Jessica Bashor. Her line-drive single in the seventh lifted Iowa to the crucial 3-2 win Friday over Penn State, keeping the Hawkeyes' Big Ten title hopes alive.

Hanks, a native of Santa Fe, Texas, tallied 29 strikeouts in 24.2 innings and posted a 0.57 ERA during the week. Hanks currently ranks third in the Big Ten with 185 strikeouts in all games and second with 65 in conference contests.

Gerlach, Hanks and the rest of the Hawkeyes are in the home stretch of the regular season, but their four remaining games are on the road. Iowa heads to Drake today for a doubleheader slated to begin at 3 p.m.

"You have to have the ability to have composure in a foreign environment," said Iowa coach Gayle Blevins. "We need to keep having opportunities at-bat and to keep our offense in a sharp spot."

Today's contest is the final game for the Bulldogs who look to improve upon their 22-31 overall record. Drake is led by Michelle Markham's .324 batting average and Mollie Murphy's nine doubles, 18 RBI and .304 average. Carol Thompson is the ace of the staff. She has a 2.13 ERA and 107 strikeouts.

Iowa leads the all-time series 19-4, including a 4-2 win last year.

Brands submits application, waits for word

Assistant Iowa wrestling coach Tom Brands submitted his application for the head coaching position at Nebraska.

By Greg Wallace The Daily Iowan

Tom Brands is playing the waiting game.

The Iowa wrestling team's top assistant has submitted his application for the head coach opening at the University of Nebraska. He is currently waiting to see whether UNL will interview him for the slot, which opened when 15-year head coach Tim Neumann resigned April 18 amid allegations of NCAA violations.

Tom Brands offered little insight into his interest Monday. "I'm going to wait until they call, wait until they want to interview me," he said. "It's not stressful, it's just that nothing's happened yet."

Nebraska has formed a national search committee, although the timetable for hiring Neumann's replacement remains uncertain.

"It could be anywhere from two weeks to a month," Iowa head coach Jim Zalesky said.

Messages left with Nebraska athletic director Bill Byrne were not immediately returned.

This is not the first time Brands has flirted with leaving the Iowa program. He was a finalist for the head coaching jobs at Oregon in 1997 and Missouri in 1998, but was passed over both times. He has been an Iowa

I don't think we could replace them. We'd just have to replace them the best we could. I think that it's going to be damn near impossible to do. They're a huge part of this program.

Zalesky said that he's ready for the possibility of replacing his top assistant.

IOWA MEN'S TENNIS SEASON WRAP-UP

Iowa junior Jake Wilson will be one of many Hawkeyes coming back next season. Iowa has high hopes for 2000-01.

Narrow losses force early end to Iowa's season

Junior Tyler Cleveland racked up Big Ten honors during the team's final week of play.

By Lisa Colonno The Daily Iowan

Junior Tyler Cleveland's achievements this season put a positive spin on an otherwise dismal season for the Iowa men's tennis team.

Although the Hawkeyes finished 5-16 overall and 1-10 in the Big Ten, Cleveland always managed to get the job done in Iowa's No. 1 position.

He finished 32-6 overall, 19-2 in spring duals and 10-1 in the Big Ten. During the Big Ten Tournament, Cleveland was named Big Ten Player of the Year and Big Ten Sportsman of the Year at the annual awards banquet.

"It's rare to win both," J.R. Chidley said. "It's a huge achievement. I'm proud of him."

He is the first Iowa tennis player to receive Player of the Year honors, and is the fourth Hawkeye in seven years to win Sportsman of the Year honors. Sportsman of the Year is usually awarded to No. 1 or 2 players who are respectful of their opponents and the officials throughout the season.

"We've had a monopoly on Sportsman of the Year," coach Steve Houghton said. "We have good players and good role models. It's a nice reflection on the program."

Cleveland beat out Illinois' Cary Franklin who had the same Big Ten record of 10-1. Although Franklin defeated Cleveland in a spring dual, Cleveland won the Big Ten Singles Championship at the beginning of the season and also won the Rolex Regional tournament in the fall.

Cleveland had a stellar year individually, but as a team, the Hawkeyes were continually one match shy of victory throughout the season.

The Hawkeyes lost nine 4-3 matches during the season, including five in Big Ten competition.

Duncan cleared for full workout but status still uncertain

The Spurs are still holding out hope that Tim Duncan will break into tonight's lineup.

By Bob Baum Associated Press

PHOENIX — Tim Duncan and Jason Kidd, the missing superstars in the San Antonio-Phoenix first-round series, are back practicing with their teams.

The chance that either would play tonight in Game 4, however, was somewhere between uncertain and unlikely.

Trailing 2-1 in the best-of-five series, the defending NBA champion Spurs must win on the Suns' home-court or they're out of the playoffs.

Duncan, due to become one of the most coveted free agents when the season ends, was cleared for a full contact workout with the Spurs on Monday.

"I'm excited to be out there," Duncan said before practice. "I haven't been out on the floor for three weeks. That's the longest I've been out forever. I can't remember ever taking that much time off, even in the summer."

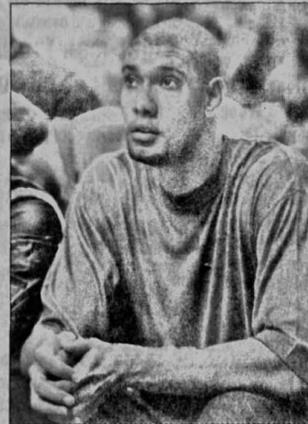

Duncan has missed seven games, four in the regular season and the three playoff games, with torn cartilage in his left knee. He said he will wait to see how his knee reacts to Monday's workout before a decision is made about Tuesday.

Duncan said he's trying not to allow the importance of the game to affect that decision.

"I do want to be out there, but I don't want to be out there when I'm not close to 100 percent, where I'm not playing well and not doing good for the team," Duncan said. "I'm not going to go out there and hurt us just because we're on the verge of elimination."

Coach Gregg Popovich said Duncan spent a few minutes going one-on-one against teammates on Sunday.

"It's understandably a real tentative situation for him," Popovich said. "He doesn't plant real well yet and can't really explode off of it, but time will tell."

Paul Connors/Associated Press Injured Spurs forward Tim Duncan can only sit on the team bench and watch as his team is defeated by Phoenix 101-94 Saturday. The champion Spurs face elimination tonight when they meet the Suns in Game 4.

Should the UI consolidate its athletic departments?

It is time for Iowa to keep pace with the rest of the nation and consolidate its athletic departments.
Iowa is one of the few schools in the country where the men and women are not governed by the same department. While the two departments already share funds, Iowa athletics would be a smoother sailing ship if there was only one person at the top.
It is not like either Christine Grant or Bob Bowsby is doing a poor job, but there is less and less of a need for two athletic directors as the years go by because the two departments are becoming increasingly intertwined.
The two departments already share office space at Carver, practice facilities, and a mascot so it should be only a matter of time before they share a common leader.
Collegiate athletics is a business and the logical corporate hierarchy around the business world is to have one leader. There is a Philadelphia advances to the second round after their 3-1 series win.

PHILADELPHIA — Aaron McKie shrugged off what might have been the best game of his career. His teammates and coaches won't let him forget it anytime soon.

McKie, starting in place of the injured Eric Snow, hit four consecutive 3-pointers and scored 13 straight points midway through the fourth quarter as the Philadelphia 76ers beat Charlotte 105-99 Monday night to win their first-round series 3-1.

"They were giving me looks throughout the game and I had it in my mind that I was going to take the shots if they were there," McKie said. "I just got in a groove. I just wanted my team to win."

Philadelphia plays the winner of the Milwaukee-Indiana series in the Eastern Conference semifinals. Game 1 is scheduled for Saturday afternoon.

Philadelphia's Allen Iverson grimaces in pain after injuring his already hurt elbow Monday.

McKie's career high in any game. Allen Iverson, playing with a chip fracture in his right ankle and an inflamed right elbow, scored 26. Substitute Matt Geiger scored 17 and grabbed 10 rebounds.

"That was a phenomenal shooting display," Geiger said of McKie's performance.

After Charlotte took its biggest lead, 85-77 in the first minute of the fourth period, McKie took over. He nailed consecutive 3-pointers from the wing to cut it to 85-83.

Elden Campbell's jumper made it 87-83, but McKie tied the game by hitting another 3 and making a free throw to complete a four-point play. After Campbell sank a pair of free throws, McKie gave the Sixers the lead for good, 90-89, with a 3-pointer from near the top of the circle.

Iverson set up the shot by holding the ball at the top of the circle, faking a drive and waiting for McKie to come open.

"It's nice to see Allen, one of the best scorers in the league, sit there and wait for Aaron to come off a screen," Geiger said.

Then it was Iverson's turn to score. He had seven straight points on a driving layup, a 3-pointer and baseline jumper to give the 76ers a 101-95 lead with 3:09 left.

After the jumper, Iverson cupped his ear and circled the floor, encouraging the raucous sellout crowd of 20,712 to make more noise.

"There are teams with more talent, but nobody has more heart," Iverson said.

Charlotte did not get closer than four points the rest of the game.

Red Wings get one back at home

Detroit beat Colorado 3-1 to get back in their best-of-seven series.

By Harry Atkins
Associated Press

DETROIT — The Detroit Red Wings turned to their Russian connection for new life in their second-round playoff series with the Colorado Avalanche.

The Red Wings got goals from Igor Larionov and Sergei Fedorov on Monday night in a 3-1 victory over the Avs, who eliminated Detroit in the Western Conference semifinals last season.

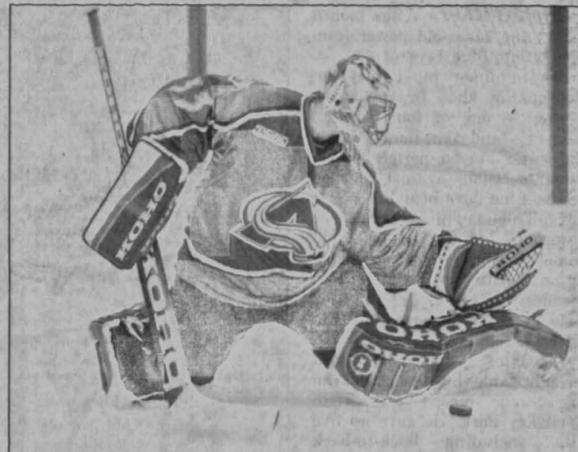

Brendan Shanahan also scored for the Red Wings who lost the first two games of the series in Denver.

Peter Forsberg scored for Colorado, which had won 14 of its previous 15 games.

The best-of-seven series continues with Game 4 on Wednesday night at Joe Louis Arena. Game 5 will be Friday night in Denver.

The first three goals came on power plays and Shanahan scored into an empty net with 40 seconds remaining.

The Red Wings, who had looked a tad old and a step slow during the first two games against the high-flying Avs, looked more like a team bent on reclaiming the Stanley Cup championship during the first period. Detroit outshot the Avs 36-23.

Colorado goalie Patrick Roy stops a Detroit Red Wings shot during the first period in their playoff game in Detroit, Monday.

The Avs had outshot their opponents in every playoff game this season, but the Red Wings — flashing the speed and precision that made them the top-scoring team in the NHL during the regular season — had a 14-6 edge in shots during the first 20 minutes.

And they also had the lead for the first time in this series.

The Red Wings, scoreless in their first nine power plays of the series, took a 1-0 lead on Larionov's first goal at 9:38 while Colorado forward Milan Hejduk was off for holding Tomas Holmstrom's stick. The goal was set up by Nicklas Lidstrom who patiently glided through the left circle with the puck before passing it to Martin Lapointe near the left post.

Lapointe tipped it to Larionov who had an open shot on the right side before Colorado goaltender Patrick Roy could recover.

Forsberg, who had scored the winning goal in three consecutive playoff games, tied it 1-1 with his fourth goal at 9:39 of the second while Larionov was off for holding.

Brodeur stones Maple Leafs, Devils win

New Jersey slaughtered Toronto 5-1 to take a 2-1 lead in the series.

By Tom Canavan
Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — If the Toronto Maple Leafs have hopes of ending their 33-year Stanley Cup drought, they'd better find a way to beat Martin Brodeur and the New Jersey Devils soon.

Brodeur withstood Toronto's best period of the series and stopped 22 shots overall, and the Devils got three goals from their special teams in posting a 5-1 victory over the Maple Leafs on Monday night.

"We did a lot of stupid things early that we hadn't done in the first two games and luckily, Marty kept us in it," coach Larry Robinson said after the Devils took a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal series.

Jason Arnott, Scott Gomez, Patrik Elias, Petr Sykora and Alexander Mogilny scored, while Elias added two assists as New Jersey dominated for the third straight game.

New Jersey could easily have a 3-0 lead if Curtis Joseph hadn't stolen the opening game with a 32-save performance in a 2-1 Toronto victory.

"It's not over," Maple Leafs coach Pat Quinn said. "That's why they play seven games. Hopefully, we can scramble back."

Game 4 will also be played at New Jersey.

"Now we have to come back strong on Wednesday night," said Brodeur, who has allowed nine goals in seven playoff games. "We don't want to have to go up to Toronto, knowing we have to win that game."

The Maple Leafs, who generated only a couple of scoring chances in the opening two games at home, had seven outstanding chances in the opening 20 minutes. Brodeur stopped odd-man rushes by Wendel Clark, Igor Korolev and Dmitri Khristich and some good close-in chances by Sergei Berezin and Adam Mair.

"I felt pretty good, I had to make a lot of big saves early," said Brodeur, who came within 4:17 of posting his second straight shutout. "You have to be in a zone in the playoffs."

The only shot Brodeur missed was a meaningless short-handed tally by Kevyn Adams with the game already decided.

Joseph was just as good at the other end for a period, stopping 14 shots. However, he never had a chance once New Jersey got rolling in the second period.

Mair picked up a four-minute high sticking penalty for cutting Daneyko and it only took the Devils 37 seconds to cash in. Sykora made a nice play getting the puck into the offensive zone and Arnott eventually tipped a Bobby Holik shot past Joseph from right in front of the crease at 9:42.

"When they scored on the first power play, it turned the tide and we weren't up to it after that," Quinn said.

Gomez, who was in danger of being benched for Game 2 despite his rookie of the year credentials, stretched the lead to 2-0 at 15:03.

Suns' Rogers wins Sixth Man award

Rodney Rogers received 86 percent of the first-place votes to win the award

By Bob Baum
Associated Press

PHOENIX — Rodney Rogers, soured by years of losing with the Los Angeles Clippers, capped his season of renewal Monday as the overwhelming choice for the NBA's Sixth Man Award.

The Phoenix Suns' forward received 104 of a possible 121 votes from a panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

"It's sort of like Shaq for MVP," Suns coach Scott Skiles said, referring to Shaquille O'Neal's expected runaway with that award. "I almost feel like, how could anybody vote for anyone else?"

Rogers received 86 percent of the votes, the second-largest percentage in the 18 years the Sixth Man Award has been presented. Cliff Robinson, now Rogers' teammate, received 90.8 percent of the votes for the award when he was with the Portland Trail Blazers in 1992-93.

"He's had big games when we needed big games. He hit shots when we needed big shots," Skiles said. "He's done that for us all year long."

Four unhappy seasons with the Clippers left Rogers embittered and disillusioned, attitudes that vanished once he joined the Suns.

"All I wanted to do was come in and be a winner and not lose all the time," Rogers said. "I'd been losing my whole career."

Rogers, who signed a free-agent contract with Phoenix for the $2 million exception allowed over the salary cap, averaged 13.8 points and 5.5 rebounds in 27.9 minutes per game for the Suns.

The 6-foot-7 forward was a threat inside and outside. He was fourth in the NBA in 3-point field goal percentage at 439.

The Suns were 35-11 in games in which Rogers scored at least 13 points.

"Everybody wants to start but everybody can't start," Rogers said. "My main thing always has been if you're in there when the game is on the line, that's more important than starting, when you can help your team win ball-games."

Late inning homer downs Sox

CHICAGO (AP) — A new month meant the same old power from the Toronto Blue Jays.

Brad Fullmer hit a two-run, tiebreaking shot in the sixth inning — one of four Toronto homers — and right-hander Chris Carpenter stayed perfect in six career decisions against Chicago as the Blue Jays beat the White Sox 5-3 Monday night.

Toronto led the AL with 43 homers in April and picked it back up on the first day of May. Raul Mondesi, Jose Cruz Jr. and Alex Gonzalez also homered off Kip Wells (2-3).

Carpenter (3-3) won his third straight game this season and ran his career record to 4-0 in Comiskey Park. He gave up five hits, including back-to-back homers on successive pitches to Chris Singleton and Carlos Lee in the fifth, and was replaced after issuing two-out walks to Ray Durham and Jose Valentin in the eighth.

Pirates, Reds ppd.

PITTSBURGH — This isn't the way the Pittsburgh Pirates wanted to get Ken Griffey Jr. out.

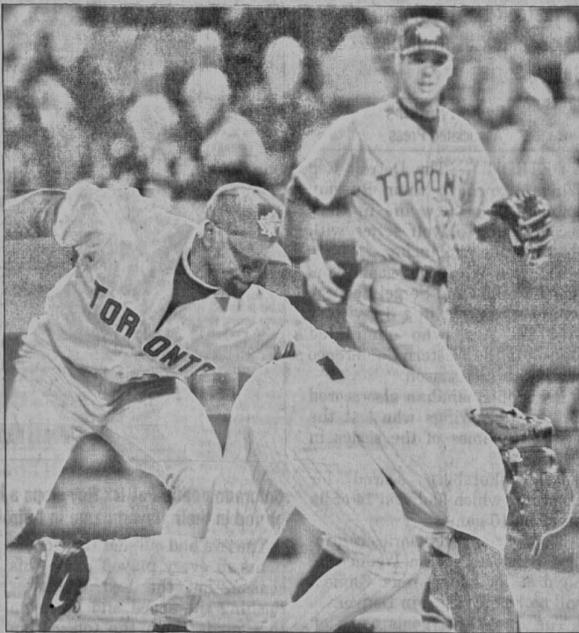

The Reds-Pirates game Monday night was rained out and will be made up as part of a Sept. 8 two-night doubleheader.

Denny Neagle (2-0), the Reds' scheduled starter Monday, will start Tuesday night in Philadelphia, with Steve Parris (1-3) moving back a day to Wednesday and Pete Harnisch (0-3) starting Thursday.

Red Sox 10, Tigers 6

BOSTON — Detroit broke its 25-inning scoreless streak against Boston, but the Red Sox scored in six of the first seven innings and beat the Tigers 10-6 on Monday night.

Mike Stanley's third homer in three games, a two-run shot in the first, and Carl Everett's eighth homer of the season gave Boston a 3-0 lead after two innings. Brian Daubach also homered.

Ted S. Warren/Associated Press

Chicago's Greg Norton fails to escape Toronto's Carlos Delgado in a third-inning rundown Monday.

Detroit tied the game in the third, ending its drought against the Red Sox that began with five scoreless innings last season, continued with 7-0 and 10-0 losses on April 18 and 19 and grew in the first two innings Monday.

Astros 5, Brewers 0

MILWAUKEE — Octavio Dotel combined with three relievers on a two-hitter, and Mitch Meluskey went 2-for-4 with a two-run homer and three RBIs to lead the Houston Astros over the Milwaukee Brewers 5-0 Monday night.

Steve Woodard (0-4) extended his winless streak to 16 starts since he beat Kansas City last July 16. Woodard, 0-7 in that span, allowed three runs, nine hits and four walks in 5 2-3 innings.

Houston took three of four in the series, blanking the Brewers twice. Milwaukee has been shut out three times this season.

Athletics 7, Royals 5

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Terrence Long drove in four runs and Omar Olivares won for the first time since April 5 as the Oakland Athletics beat the Kansas City Royals 7-5 Monday night for their fourth straight win.

Long, recalled from Triple-A Sacramento on April 24, hit a bases-loaded triple in the second inning and an RBI single that capped a three-run in the eighth. The rookie is batting .290 (9-for-31), getting hits in six of seven games.

Derby could be blacked out for millions

■ NHL Playoffs, Kentucky Derby may not be shown due to a dispute between Disney and Time Warner.

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The stretch run of ABC's 26 years of Triple Crown coverage could be off-limits for millions of viewers.

A dispute between the Walt Disney Co. and Time Warner Inc. over transmission rights left seven Disney-owned ABC stations off local cable systems as of Monday.

If the sides don't settle their differences by Saturday, 3.5 million cable viewers in seven markets, including New York City and Los Angeles, won't be able to see the Kentucky Derby unless they rig their TVs to get an ABC station the old-fashioned way — through an antenna.

"It's something we have no control over," said Karl Schmitt, senior VP of Churchill Downs Inc., which owns the track and the Derby itself. "We're hopeful it all will be resolved before Saturday at 4:30, when the show goes on the air."

ABC's long association with thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown ends after this year's series, when its current contract expires. Last October, NBC outbid ABC and signed a five-year deal, worth a reported $51.5 million, to televise the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes.

ABC, led by commentator Jim McKay, has televised the Derby since 1975 and covered all three races since 1987. The Preakness is May 20, the Belmont June 10.

Those affected by the Disney-Time Warner impasse could also miss out on NHL playoff games slated for ABC on coming weekends. The network, in the first season of a five-year, $600 million deal it and ESPN have with the league, is slated to air a second-round game — from either the Colorado-Detroit or Pittsburgh-Philadelphia series — Sunday.

The NHL, like Churchill Downs, has been in constant contact with ABC to stay abreast of developments.

"We're obviously watching the situation closely. We understand from ABC it's a very fluid situation. A week is a long time," said Bernadette Mansur, NHL group VP for communications.

The network's upcoming sports schedule also includes the final two rounds of the PGA Tour's Compaq Classic on Saturday and Sunday, the International Figure Skating Challenge on May 13, and Indy 500 time trials May 20-21.

The move comes during a sweeps period, when ratings are used to set local advertising rates. Sweeps began Thursday and end May 24.

"It could have a damaging effect on ABC Sports," said Neal Pilson, former president of CBS Sports and head of his own consulting firm.

Advertisers could ask ABC to compensate them for lost viewers.

About 1.5 million cable customers in New York were without ABC programming Monday. Other areas affected include Los Angeles; Houston; Raleigh-Durham, N.C.; Toledo, Ohio; Fresno, Calif.; and Philadelphia.

Time Warner and ABC have tried for months to reach a new national transmission deal.

Disney-ABC offered five deadline extensions after the original deal expired Dec. 31, 1999. The most recent deadline gave Disney-ABC the authority to withhold its programming from Time Warner cable systems if no deal was reached by 12:01 a.m. Monday.

But Disney said Monday it gave Time Warner permission to carry the seven stations through May 24.

ABC and other over-the-air networks have had the right to demand compensation from cable providers in exchange for their programming since Congress passed 1992's Cable TV Act.

ABC wants Time Warner to put some of its products on basic cable instead of pay channels. ABC also has asked Time Warner to pay rates for programming tantamount to those it pays its own networks, such as CNN.

Postal Service awards envelope to MSU

■ A commemorative envelope will be produced for the NCAA champions.

By Amy Franklin
Associated Press

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Winning the men's national basketball title is still producing benefits for the Michigan State Spartans.

On Monday, the U.S. Postal Service announced it's printing a commemorative envelope for the NCAA champions.

"I guess some people get their heads on stamps and we get a whole envelope, so maybe this is better than the presidency," said Spartan coach Tom Izzo. "Looking at the envelope, it's kind of an impressive deal."

Michigan State fans won't be able to mail the $10 envelope, which is being printed only as a collector's item. It features the Spartan logo set against a basketball background, the final score of the championship game over Florida and a 33-cent flag stamp postmarked Indianapolis, April 3, 2000.

The Postal Service printed 20,000 envelopes to be sold in post offices throughout Michigan and on the Internet, said Greg Chamski, finance manager for the U.S. Postal Service in Michigan. If demand exceeds the number printed, another 20,000 will be made available.

"We believe that ... we will be able to go through 40,000 rather quickly," Chamski said. The East Lansing post office will have 2,000 Spartan envelopes for sale, said East Lansing Postmaster Lois Kassuba, who helped unveil the envelope at a ceremony at the Breslin Center basketball arena.

Similar commemorative envelopes have been printed for Super Bowl winners, including the St. Louis Rams, Chamski said. The postal service is working on printing commemorative envelopes for Division III NCAA champion Calvin College in Grand Rapids.

Izzo, who last month led the Spartans to their first national basketball title in 21 years, said he and Michigan State administrators are working out the final details of his new contract, which would include a raise and an extension past 2004, when his current contract expires.

"The president and the board and athletic director all just made me a great offer," Izzo said Monday, while not disclosing details. "There's not a lot of negotiating to it. It's a lot of 'Gee, thanks.'"

Spartan fans planned to gather Monday night at Wharton Center at Michigan State to view the premiere of a CBS-NCAA Productions film of the Spartans' championship season.

The video, which includes behind-the-scenes footage of Michigan State's playoff run, is to be released to the public Tuesday. ---

Priors inadmissible in Lewis case

■ Previous assault charges cannot be used in Ray Lewis' murder trial.

By Patricia M. LaHay
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Three previous assault charges against NFL star Ray Lewis cannot be used against him in his murder trial but evidence taken from his home can, a judge ruled Monday.

The assault charges against the Baltimore Ravens' linebacker, all of which were dropped, stem from cases in 1994 and 1995 in Miami, and in December 1999 in Baltimore. In all three, Lewis was accused of hitting a woman.

Prosecutors argued that the cases should be admitted because they demonstrate Lewis' "intent, bent of mind and course of behavior" when faced with a dispute.

But defense lawyers Ed Garland and Don Samuel said the assault charges, which Lewis denies, are not relevant. The judge agreed, ruling that they weren't similar enough to the charges Lewis now faces.

"It's the same argument of, 'If he did it before, he'll do it again,'" Judge Alice Bonner said.

Lewis and co-defendants Joseph Sweeting and Reginald Oakley are accused of stabbing two men to death after a Super Bowl party in Atlanta on Jan. 30.

Lewis maintains he was a peacemaker during the street fight in which Jacinth Baker, 21, and Richard Lollar, 24, were killed. Lewis is free on $1 million bond.

In another ruling, the judge denied a defense request to keep evidence seized at Lewis' Baltimore home out of the trial, which is expected to begin May 15.

Samuel said police did not have probable cause to look for evidence there because Lewis had not been home since the slayings.

He also argued the search warrant was too broad. It allowed police to take any photographs showing people and any documents with names, phone numbers and addresses.

Prosecutors said police searched Lewis' home because most of his things, including clothes he was wearing the night of the killings, were gone from his Atlanta hotel room by the time police arrived.

Also, police suspected that Oakley or other members of Lewis' entourage might have returned to Lewis' home.

Also, Bonner denied a request by Bruce Harvey, lawyer for Oakley, to hold a news conference despite a gag order.

Harvey argued that prosecutors and Lewis' lawyers had made their cases public, so he should have that opportunity, too.

In denying the request, Bonner reminded all parties that they need to ensure that prospective jurors aren't tainted by information released outside of the trial.

On another matter, Bonner was expected to rule soon on a request from Garland for a separate trial for Lewis.

In his request April 17, Garland wrote that a joint trial would not be fair and that some evidence might be admissible against one defendant but not against another.

U.S. upsets Russia in rowdy hockey finish

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia (AP) — Goalie Bob Esche turned in the best performance of his career as the United States upset Russia 3-0 Monday night at the World Hockey Championships in a game that ended with fans pelting the ice.

It was the second biggest shutout loss for a Soviet or Russian team in the championships.

Ottawa Senators holdout Alexei Yashin, cleared to play in this tournament by an arbitrator Sunday, played his first game of the season but did not make an impact on the Russian team.

"We knew we had to win and that was pressure on our minds," Yashin said. "The U.S. team used that very well. Their win was well-deserved."

Before a sellout crowd of 12,350 in the new Ice Palace, Jason Blake, Phil Housley and Dave Legwand scored for the Americans, who had only three practices before the championships.

Only 13 NHL players accepted invitations to play for the U.S. team. The rest are minor leaguers, collegians and European-based players.

"We lost mostly because of lack of hunger and spirit," Russian coach Alexander Yakushev said.

The fans littered the ice with cans, plastic bottles and other items. Two high Russian officials, St. Petersburg vice governor Gennady Tkachkov and Russian Hockey Federation president Alexander Steblin, apologized to the U.S. delegation.

"We are very sorry and we'll make sure it won't happen again," Steblin said.

The Americans did not plan to file a protest.

"We're not mad," coach Lou Vairo said. "We're just happy that the puck bounced our way tonight."

Road to Derby not a sentimental journey

The trainers of Hal's Hope believe their horse is a legitimate contender in the Kentucky Derby.

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Harold Rose and Roger Velez might appear to be taking a sentimental journey with Hal's Hope in the Kentucky Derby. The 88-year-old owner-trainer and 43-year-old jockey have a different view.

They believe the Florida Derby winner is a legitimate Derby contender despite finishing last in the Blue Grass on April 15 at Keeneland.

"When I walk around a lot of people come up to me and say, 'We're still going to bet on your horse,'" Rose said Monday. "So the public hasn't lost faith on this horse."

Of course, many might be betting on Hal's Hope because of what he's done for Rose and Velez. Rose had quadruple bypass surgery last year after a stroke. Velez was a rising star in the late 1970s whose career was wrecked by alcohol.

Rose was told he'd be hospitalized for eight weeks but got out in three weeks.

"One of the reasons I got back so quickly is I had Hal's Hope," Rose once said. "I knew I had something special the first time I saw him."

"Wherever he finishes Saturday, he's my hero," said Velez, who will be riding in his first Derby.

Velez has ridden Hal's Hope in all of the colt's nine starts.

"He was able to get more out of some of my horses than other riders did, and he did what I told him to do," Rose said.

Timothy D. Easley/Associated Press

This will be the second Derby for Rose, who finished 10th in 1984 with Rexson's Hope, a horse he bred and the maternal grand sire of Hal's Hope.

"The last horse was definitely a long shot," Rose said. "He was here so I ran him. I think Hal's Hope is a contender."

Rose throws out the colt's performance in the Blue Grass.

"He didn't like the track as well as I thought he would," Rose said. "He wouldn't be the first horse who didn't like the Keeneland race track, then won the Derby."

Sea Hero (1993) and Thunder Gulch (1995) each won the Derby off of a fourth-place finish in the Blue Grass.

Hal's Hope was eighth in the Blue Grass, 15 lengths behind winner High Yield.

Kidd's return against Spurs unlikely

"Part of that's probably a little bit of fear to test it too much, until you keep doing it a few times and you get more and more confident and you push it more. And part of it is a strength factor in being able to plant and push." Down the hallway on the Suns' practice court, Kidd went through a halfcourt five-on-five drill for the first time since he broke his left ankle on March 22.

"We had contact, we went live, but we didn't go up and down the floor," Phoenix coach Scott Skiles said. "He looked pretty good. He needs to be re-evaluated and everything. We're in no hurry. We're not going to rush him."

Kidd has said all along that he's aiming for a return in the second round, but could he play tonight? "I would say it's unlikely,"

Skiles said.

Those who will play are expecting an intense game, with the Suns wanting to end it at home and the Spurs attempting to send the series back to the Alamodome for a Game 5 Thursday night.

"I believe it's going to be very difficult for us to win because they're the world champions," Skiles said. "There's a lot of character, a lot of heart on that team, and a lot of talent."

Terry Brands unsure if he would join brother

BRANDS

"He's got to do what's best for him," Zalesky said. "It's not what I want, it's what he wants. If he wants a job, I'll support him 100 percent."

Brands' twin, Terry, also an Iowa assistant, said that he's not ready to become a head coach just yet.

"I would be very interested, but, realistically, I haven't been a head assistant anywhere and I don't have the experience," Terry said. "I feel like I could run a program, but from an administrative point of view, I don't feel like I have the experience necessary for them to look at me as a realistic candidate... Tom's the better man for the job."

Terry Brands added that he was unsure of whether or not he would join his brother if Tom was offered and took the Nebraska position, saying he was focusing on making Iowa's wrestlers better.

The Husker program is one of the nation's elite, and is a perennial Top-20 national contender. This season, Nebraska finished eighth at the NCAA Championships, led by 197-pound national champion Brad Vering. 9 of 10 starters will return in 2000-01.

Despite the possibility of sanctions against the program for Neumann allegedly distributing cash to his wrestlers, Zalesky said Tom Brands wasn't fazed, telling him "he's got to look past that."

"The (Nebraska) program's been good," Zalesky said. "They've been up in the national standings, the past 10 years, so that's pretty appealing. They have a good budget, and a good athletic program. That's pretty appealing to good coaches."

Hawkeye wrestlers had mixed emotions on the possibility of Tom Brands taking a head coaching position.

"Tom's ready to be a head coach," Jessman Smith, who completed his freshman season in 1999-2000 as a 184-pound national qualifier, said. "Things are good for him here at Iowa. It's the ideal situation for him, right here, right now. But you can't blame him for wanting to have a head coach position somewhere. I want him to stay, but he has to do what's best for him."

The Brands brothers provide a fiery, intense presence to the Iowa wrestling room, a perfect contrast with the more laid-back Zalesky. Although they mainly work with lighter wrestlers, the loss of either would be felt throughout the team, according to Smith.

"I don't think we could replace them," Smith said. "We'd just have to replace them the best we could. I think that it's going to be damn near impossible to do. They're a huge part of this program."

Home run stats show how game has changed

HOME RUNS

Jermaine Dye of the Kansas City Royals led the majors in April with 11 homers, while San Francisco's Barry Bonds, Atlanta's Andres Galarraga and the Dodgers' Gary Sheffield shared the NL lead with 10. Mark McGwire and Sammy Sosa each hit eight.

"The poor pitchers go home at night and turn on ESPN and there's 28 minutes of balls reaching the seats," Kansas City manager Tony Muser said. "The mindset of the game today is try to pound the other team into oblivion and win 12-11, and say, 'Man, what a ballgame!'"

Pacific Bell Park in San Francisco averaged 2.5 homers per game, identical to last year's April average at 3Com Park, the Giants' old field.

Only Comerica Park in Detroit has been a pitcher's friend among the new sites. This year's average was 1.36, down 36 percent from last year's average of 2.11 at Tiger Stadium.

"It's one thing for the legitimate home-run hitters to be going out there and doing it," Glavine said, "but it's everybody else that makes you kind of wonder what the heck's going on."

Some say it's due to stronger batters or the lowered quality of pitching due to expansion. New York Mets manager Bobby Valentine says that hitting has improved so much that pitchers sometimes are afraid to throw strikes.

"The players are bigger and stronger," Tampa Bay's Vinny Castilla said. "It's not just the pitching."

Commissioner Bud Selig says he isn't concerned about the increase, and that as far as major league baseball can determine, the ball isn't any different.

It's one thing for the legitimate home-run hitters to be going out there and doing it, but it's everybody else that makes you kind of wonder what the heck's going on.

— Atlanta pitcher Tom Glavine

"Over the past 20-25 years, I think it's pretty obvious that something has changed in that period of time," Brown said. "There's no doubt when you stand around and you watch balls jump off guys' bats in BP and during the game."

"I can't remember seeing so many guys hit home runs the other way," Cleveland manager Charlie Manuel said. "It used to be you could pitch a guy on the outside part of the plate and not worry about it hurting you. Not anymore."

Hawkeye men have high hopes for next year ended in a 4-3 loss to Northwestern in the Big Ten Tournament.

"It was unbelievable," Cleveland said. "It came down to the wire. It was close as a match can be. We are disappointed because we were right there. We lost 10 matches in a row. That is definitely not a sweet way to end."

Houghton attributed the losses to injury and youth. Tom Buetikofer sat out the season due to injury and Eric Kozlowski and Petar Mandic also missed their fair share of the season due to injury.

"Our final record is terrible, but it's not representative of the season," Houghton said. "In the end (we were often) one player short and that one player could have been Tom Buetikofer. We also had four freshmen who played a lot and it was their first time through the Big Ten. They also were playing up a position or two too high because of injuries." Next season, Buetikofer may be back and everyone will have a year of experience under their belts. Chidley, a senior, will be the only player to leave the team.

"Basically we'll have the whole team back," Cleveland said. "Some guys can step up. It depends on what guys do this summer. If people take it seriously, and I think they will, I feel really optimistic for next year."
