Philippine police dissect Love Bug virus

A man is arrested in connection with the virus, but relatives say police have the wrong person.

By Oliver Teves Associated Press

MANILA, Philippines — Accompanied by FBI agents, Philippine police raided an apartment in Manila Monday and arrested a bank employee who, along with his girlfriend, is suspected of links to the "ILOVEYOU" virus that has overwhelmed computer networks around the world.

But relatives of the man, Reomel Ramones, said they believe the real culprit may be a third person who lived in the apartment — the girlfriend's unemployed sister, who recently graduated from a computer school that a U.S. security firm has linked to the "Love Bug" virus.

Investigators entered the apartment in Pandacan, a lower-middle-class Manila neighborhood, and seized computer diskettes, wires, telephones and other computer accessories.

No one was home at the time of the raid, but Ramones later returned and was arrested by agents from the country's National Bureau of Investigation. His girlfriend was contacted by investigators and promised to appear at NBI headquarters, NBI Chief Federico Opinion said. He did not give her name, and her sister's whereabouts were not immediately known.

Local radio reports said Ramones denied any involvement with the virus. An investigator said Ramones had "opted to remain silent."

The virus has caused a flood of e-mails with the subject line "ILOVEYOU" to course through computer systems in more than 20 countries since it appeared last week. When opened, the virus can destroy graphics and other saved files. Several variations appeared soon after — one masquerading as an e-mail joke, another as a receipt for a Mother's Day gift. Several FBI agents are in the Philippines cooperating in the search for the virus programmer.

No charges were immediately filed against Ramones, Opinion said. By law, charges must be filed within 36 hours. Philippine investigators were faced with a difficult task because their country has few laws tailored to high-tech computer crimes. Opinion said they plan to use a law against improper use of commerce "access devices" such as credit cards, account numbers and passwords to charge the virus creators. The law carries a maximum penalty of twice the amount obtained by fraud plus up to 20 years in prison.

"This is a new type of crime," Opinion said, adding that investigators were led to the apartment by informants.

At a news conference Monday in Washington, Attorney General Janet Reno sidestepped the question of whether those taken into custody in the Philippines were suspected of actually creating the virus.

"They've presently been questioning individuals in connection with the investigation. We continue to pursue all relevant leads," she said.

Although Ramones works in the computer department of a bank, he is an accounting graduate and his specialty is computer hardware, not software, his relatives said. They said the computer in the apartment was almost always locked in the room of Nine courses added to general curriculum

The areas include natural sciences, humanities, cultural diversity, and quantitative and formal reasoning.

By Nicole Schuppert The Daily Iowan

The College of Liberal Arts will offer nine additional general-education courses this fall to increase the number of courses available and to keep curriculum consistent with current issues.

The Educational Policy Committee approved the courses for the fall 2000 semester in natural sciences, humanities, cultural diversity, and quantitative and formal reasoning after receiving recommendations from the General Education Curriculum Committee, the policy committee's advisory subdivision.

The new courses are not listed in the printed version of the Schedule of Courses because it was printed prior to the decision, but they can be viewed at the UI's Web site, said Miriam Gilbert, a UI English professor and the chairwoman of the curriculum committee.

A department must apply to have a class approved for general education, said Harold Goff, a UI chemistry professor and a member of the policy committee.

A description of the course, its requirements and a syllabus or exam may be included in the five pages of Courses that enhance communication skills and ones taught or supervised by the "best and most experienced members of a department" are normally selected as general-education requirements, Goff said.

"The general-education program should develop each student's ability to use effectively oral, written, visual and research skills appropriate to liberal arts and sciences," he said.

McCain all set to endorse Bush campaign, aides say

After two often-acrimonious months, John McCain and George W. Bush will hold a summit.

By Ron Fournier Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Failed Republican presidential candidate John McCain has decided to endorse former rival George W. Bush at their summit today, despite misgivings about the Texan's agenda, advisers close to McCain said.

The Arizona senator had been expected to endorse Bush later in the campaign, but he determined after a series of events — including a weekend telephone conversation with the probable GOP nominee — that he didn't want to wait any longer.

McCain

The advisers, speaking on condition that they not be identified, said Monday McCain had grown tired of the circus-like atmosphere surrounding the pending meeting and didn't want to deal with the endorsement issue again. "He wanted to get it behind him and move forward," said one adviser as dozens of reporters descended on this campaign battleground state to cover the private meeting.

Though McCain has told advisers he will formally back Bush today, those aides left open the possibility that he could change his mind if the meeting went sour. However, they said, that is not expected to happen.

McCain signaled his intention during a news conference in Pittsburgh. Asked if he would consider endorsing Bush immediately if he "liked what he

2nd suspect in alleged attempted homicide jailed

Shane Weese was arrested in Salinas, Calif., in connection with an alleged choking incident.

By Christoph Trappe The Daily Iowan

A second suspect in a 1999 alleged attempted homicide has been arrested in California and transferred to Johnson County Jail.

Shane Weese, 31, was arrested by authorities in Salinas, Calif., where he attended a trucking school, said Iowa City police Sgt. Bill Campbell.

According to court documents, Weese and Wesley Moore, 33, met John Krohn, a UI graduate, at the Deadwood, 6 S. Dubuque St., on May 29, 1999. Later that night, the three men went to Krohn's downtown apartment, where Moore became upset and allegedly started to choke Krohn with his hands, court records said.

Krohn lost consciousness, the documents said. When he regained consciousness, Krohn said he thought he heard one of the men say, "He's getting up," according to court documents.

Krohn allegedly heard Moore tell Weese to tighten a towel around his neck, court records said. After a towel was allegedly tightened around Krohn's neck, he was left bleeding and unconscious in his apartment.

Iowa City police became aware of Weese's presence in California after his job coordinator at the Private Industry Training Center sent a letter to Johnson County District Court requesting the clearance of Weese's driver's license, which was suspended at the time, said Iowa City police Detective Robert Gass.

Josh Stewart, who wrote the letter, could not be reached for comment Monday.

"After we found out that Weese went to a trucking school in California, I called them and asked for his address," Gass said. "They tried to be very helpful, but they didn't have his address."

After calling the training center, Gass called the Salinas police, who arrested Weese.

Grad student fights binge drinking

■ A UI grad student's research focuses on underage binge-drinking at the UI.

By Christy B. Logan
The Daily Iowan

Unlike most students her age, Sara Dolan knew the long-term effects that are associated with binge-drinking long before her 21st birthday, thanks to early education from her parents.

Dolan, a UI graduate student in psychology, has worked for the past four years conducting research on substance abuse as part of work for her doctorate.

She has found the UI has the highest binge-drinking rate among underage college students in the nation. With statistics and data collected in her research, she and her adviser sent their findings to Iowa City Mayor Ernie Lehman, hoping to make city officials aware of the problem.

"When people drink, there is a perception that it enhances sociality and reduces tension," Dolan said. "It's a placebo effect."

During her research, Dolan said, she discovered that schools with high levels of underage drinkers fall into three distinct categories: universities located in the north-central part of the country, residential campuses and location within one mile of places to drink.

"If you limit access to alcohol, overall rates of consumption stop," she said. "Drink, but do it responsibly, without consequences."

Although her research indicates that the average age for underage drinkers at the UI is 20, Dolan said, it never indicates why. The problem stems from a culture in Iowa City, where owning bars yields economic profit, she said.

With the number of bars in town, many students are left with few alternatives to drinking, she said.

"A lot of students who come to the UI haven't learned how to be creative with their time," Dolan said. "When I was 21, I went to a university that had a 'dry' campus, so drinking wasn't an issue."

Julie Pbye, the coordinator of the Stepping Up Program, said 36 percent of UI freshmen drank while in high school, but the amount they drink increases in college.

Current laws need to be enforced and increased to combat underage binge drinking at the UI, Dolan said. She also supports restricting bar entry to people over 21.

"(Research indicates), over a previous two-week period, students drink on average 17 drinks," Dolan said. "As their responsibility grows and they (students) get jobs, they grow out of it."

Dolan is submitting her research on substance abuse to a scientific journal for possible publication.

The aging mystique

BOSTON (AP) — Four decades ago, Betty Friedan's The Feminine Mystique became the bible of the women's movement. Now she wants to liberate the elderly — a group she also sees as overlooked.

"In recent years, I've had a sense of déjà vu," Friedan, 78, said Sunday after a visit to a Boston senior citizens center. "Just as women used to be treated as less than full people, now older people are also seen as less than full people."

Friedan has set out to change that image in books such as her recent memoir, Life So Far, and The Fountain of Age, in which she tries to debunk some of the negative stereotypes of aging.

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Harry Connick Jr. pounded nails to help raise money and a house for Habitat for Humanity. But he said he'd rather have done it unheralded.

"I wish there was another way to do it 'cause I'm not into all this," Connick said after a hammer ensemble on May 5. "I just want to get the homes built."

Connick's donation of 1,000 tickets to his Thursday night concert, plus his appearance at a reception for people who bought those tickets for $130 or more apiece, raised approximately $100,000, said board President Andy Lee.

Connick and others raised a master bedroom wall as Beryl Lowery, who eventually will own the house, sang their praises.

UI pediatrician to give talk about digital library

Plug the word "pediatrics" into any popular Internet search engine, and you are bound to get more links than you care to sift through. Plus, how do you decide which are the best and most reliable sites? Not to worry. A UI Health Care researcher has made the job of finding quality pediatric information on the Internet a much easier task.

Donna M. D'Alessandro, a UI assistant professor of pediatrics, has created a digital library (<http://www.general-pediatrics.com>) to provide physicians and their patients and families with quick and easy access to useful, authoritative pediatric information. D'Alessandro will make a presentation on the digital library at the Pediatric Academic Societies and American Academy of Pediatrics Joint Meeting on May 14 in Boston.

"This is a digital library and not a Web site," D'Alessandro said of her creation. "A Web site is a very general term. A digital library is an organized collection of digital information that has a structured approach to the use of the information and building of the collection. This format is similar to the way a bricks-and-mortar library works. The digital library also involves curatorship, similar to the way a museum takes a structured approach to the creation of exhibits and building of its collection."

UI alters class-enrollment policy

■ The move is an attempt to broaden diversity and raise the level of education, an official says.

By Glen Leyden
The Daily Iowan

A recent change in a UI policy will allow smaller classes to operate without jeopardizing their status.

Currently, undergraduate classes of 10 students and graduate courses of six students are classified as having low enrollment and may be reviewed for possible changes. Courses could be canceled or offered less frequently.

The modification, expected to go into effect this fall semester, will lower enrollment status for undergraduate courses to fewer than eight students and graduate courses to fewer than five.

The policy is expected to broaden diversity and heighten the level of education, said Fred Antczak, the associate dean for academic programs in the liberal arts school and a member of the education-policy committee.

"It sends a message to faculty and students that curriculum quality is a priority that cannot be compromised," he said.

Monitoring courses could become more flexible and efficient than before, said Harold Goff, a chemistry professor and education-policy committee member. Instead of being reviewed semester by semester, courses will be investigated over a series of semesters by each department.

While the new policy may enable a more diverse curriculum, the UI will continue to look closely at any waste of departmental resources, he said.

"This kind of policy will answer questions of effective use of resources and show legislators that we are monitoring course enrollment," Goff said.

Altering the size of classes is often discussed, but seldom does it make much of a difference, said Archibald Coolidge, a professor of English.

While he says the change may enable some professors to introduce new or unique courses with less of a concern about the class being canceled, he says the change may be too small to make much difference.

"From time to time, legislators have tried to create larger general education courses taught by fewer graduate assistants," he said. "But the English department has objected because we believe literature is best taught in discussion sessions, especially with younger students in the beginning stages of learning literature."

UI study links alcohol abuse with depression

■ A UI professor says half the young people who are alcohol-dependent are "self-medicating."

By Lisa Livermore
The Daily Iowan

Like many who develop mental illness during adolescence and early adulthood, "Mary," an Iowa City resident, first developed symptoms of depression while in college.

"I couldn't sleep or think. I had low self-esteem, and I thought I couldn't pass my classes," said Mary, who has been diagnosed with other mental illnesses. "I remember thinking my senior year, I wouldn't pass anything, but I passed with honors. I wasn't in syncope with reality."

In an ongoing study, UI psychology Professor Peter Nathan has explored alcoholism among college-aged students and learned that alcohol abuse is often a result of depression, a common mental illness among young adults.

"Half of people who are alcohol-dependent are using it to deal with emotional problems," he said.

Students commonly "self-medicate" by binge-drinking, Nathan said.

"If you start out depressed, you end up depressed and alcohol-dependent," said Nathan, whose studies on alcohol use among college students have revealed it is the most commonly used medication for depression.

According to local health professionals, mental illness most frequently occurs between early and later adolescence. If left untreated, it could result in danger to oneself or the community, said Gerald Stone, the director of the university counseling service.

An abrupt move away from home, academic stress or the pressure of meeting new people can potentially trigger depression or other mental-health problems, he said.

Brain development during adolescence is one reason mental-health problems emerge during the college years, said Rose Marie Friedrich, an associate professor in the nursing school and the co-president of the Alliance for the Mentally Ill.

"Often, depression can be triggered by losses you're going through," she said. "It could be a difficult time in class or academic events."

Mental illness has many warning signs, Stone said, including sleeping problems, changes in appetite and energy, ability to concentrate and the ability to get along with others. He also said when the sense of one's thoughts change from clear and coherent to disoriented, a person should get evaluated for mental-health problems.

"What keeps people from doing this is there is a lot of stigma," Friedrich said. "Most people don't want to admit they have a problem."

People who are experiencing symptoms should talk to family and friends. The next step is to get evaluated by an expert or attend support groups and meet other people who have similar problems, she said.

The counseling service treats approximately 2,000 UI students a year, offering relationship counseling, group counseling and psychological assessment.

Prevention programs are designed to help with stress management, interpersonal and study skills. Approximately 5,000 students have been involved in these programs each year, Stone said.

'The most powerful diversity tool in Iowa'

■ A newspaper owner will publish a "massive" black community resource guide.

By Carol Ann Riha
Associated Press

DES MOINES — A massive resource guide aimed at empowering Iowa's black community through better communication, interaction and networking is due to be published by the end of the month.

"It's the most powerful diversity tool ever in Iowa," said Jonathan Narcisse, a weekly newspaper owner who led the research effort.

The guide, called "For My People," runs more than 1,000 pages. It identifies key black talent and resources throughout the state. "Literally, it allows individuals interested in working with the community to network," Narcisse said.

It provides data from a variety of federal, state and local sources on black employment, economics, education, health, justice, race relations and politics. It identifies problems, but also provides the tools with which to craft solutions, Narcisse said.

That's what impressed Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, who praised the effort in a recent letter to Narcisse.

"You are to be commended for this comprehensive and detailed report of the problems that have plagued black Iowa," the senator wrote. "Notwithstanding the problems, 'For My People' accentuates the positive, offering proactive proposals to improve conditions within the black community."

Corlis Moody, the executive director of the Iowa Civil Rights Commission, said she was excited by the effort and impressed at the volume and detail of the information that was compiled.

"I think his approach was that we want to be positive about what Iowa has to offer ... He is writing to the African-American community. I think it's a great attempt," she said.

"It's just going to be helpful in what we do here, understanding communities and the state better," Moody said.

Among other things, the report:

- Provides a primer to the workings of state government, including a guide to state agencies and commissions and how to deal with them. It even outlines the specific steps necessary to setting up a small business and getting business funding in Iowa.

- Lists information about black institutions, churches, restaurants and cultural contacts.

- Details 10 steps to fight hate crimes in communities, provides health care contacts, resources and information about stroke and heart disease, helps people understand their finances and even offers tips to improve children's performance at school.

"This is a powerful, comprehensive toolbox designed to foster communication, interaction, networking and unity within the African-American community for the purposes of reconstruction of the African-American community in Iowa," Narcisse said.

Iowa," Narcisse said.

Narcisse is the owner of two weekly newspapers: the Communicator and the Bystander, which is billed as the oldest black newspaper west of the Mississippi.

The project, he said, "was uniquely born out of the legacy and tradition of the Bystander ... which has a long tradition of service."

Narcisse said it took approximately 9,000 staff hours over an 18-month period to produce.

"We worked with state, federal and local agencies. We worked with community groups. We interviewed leadership in detail. We also consulted extensively with recognized experts in the various fields from economics through education to health in order to gain additional insight," he said.

Moody praised Narcisse for "living what he was researching. He went to the sights and researched their vision and their purpose for Iowa. That took a lot in terms of pure determination. Some of the information wouldn't have been known."

House set to OK environmental bill

■ The measure calls for spending $45 billion over 15 years to conserve lands and restore beaches.

By H. Josef Hebert
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — To critics it's a pork-barrel land grab, but to others an environmental landmark. It's a massive conservation bill that calls for spending nearly $45 billion over 15 years to buy public lands to create new urban parks, protect wildlife and restore eroded beaches, and the House is expected to approve it this week.

Despite the bill's endorsement by 314 of the 435 House members, it has infuriated some Republican conservatives, mainly from the West, particularly because it's being championed by a staunch ally in the property-rights debate — Resources Committee Chairman Don Young, R-Alaska.

Young, who was instrumental in crafting the Conservation and Reinvestment Act, calls the property-rights advocates' concerns "utterly ridiculous" and maintains that the bill specifically protects landowners from having to give up their property.

"It makes a permanent commitment," said Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., who crafted the bill with Young. "The people who run the parks, who enjoy our trails and open spaces, who support recreation and wildlife tell me they desperately need this bill or irreplaceable resources are going to be lost forever."

Added Young: "The legislation will guide our nation's conservation, recreation and wildlife program for decades to come."

That Young and Miller, the top

Democrat on Young's committee, would so vigorously agree on any environmental legislation has astounded longtime observers of Congress.

Young, often an outspoken foe of environmentalists, and Miller, a favorite of the green groups, have clashed repeatedly on environmental issues, from oil drilling in an Arctic refuge to protection of California desert lands and Alaska's Tongass forest.

The reason behind their joint effort for this bill is simple, says Rindy O'Brien of the Wilderness Society, who has watched the congressional debate on the measure: Young wants to leave a legacy and, perhaps more important, "This is legislation that would give Alaska a lot of money."

And even the bill's critics acknowledge that House approval is virtually ensured, as lawmakers find it hard to oppose a measure that would funnel billions of federal dollars to their states while letting them show support for the environment during an election year.

The Clinton administration — which announced its own, more modest $1.4 billion "land legacy" initiative last year — supports the bill. Shortly before Earth Day last month, President Clinton met with the measure's Democratic and GOP sponsors and urged that the bill be passed this year, lawmakers said.

The bill's prospects in the Senate, where one or two senators can stall legislation, remains unclear. The legislation is to get its first Senate test next month in a committee vote. Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, whose Energy and Natural Resources Committee will consider the measure he is co-sponsoring, said, "We still have a long way to go."

Chaos spiraling in Sierra Leone

■ Kofi Annan calls for Western nations to send in a rapid-reaction force to stabilize the country.

By Alexandra Zavis
Associated Press

FREETOWN, Sierra Leone — Already badly frayed from a week of political violence, Sierra Leone's capital began to rip along the seams Monday as a rally turned into a shooting spree, with rebel soldiers gunning down at least four protesters.

The chaos that broke out at the demonstration at rebel leader Foday Sankoh's house quickly spiraled, and soon heavily armed soldiers from all the country's factions cruised the streets of this West African coastal city, gripping machine guns and hanging out the windows of their vehicles.

U.N. spokesman David Wimhurst said Sierra Leone's peace process had been "seriously dented" by the violence that erupted Monday. "It remains to be seen if we can retrieve it," he said.

Foreign nationals and aid groups were evacuating, including hundreds of British citizens who poured into one of the city's two main hotels, clutching passports and suitcases and waiting for a British military force to get them out.

A Sierra Leonean woman who said rebels had killed her husband and four of their children last year waited in a hotel courtyard with her 9-year-old daughter — a British citizen.

"I don't want to lose her, too," she said, holding her daughter's shoulder as she waited to send the girl away to safety.

The United Nations ordered the evacuation of most of its civilian staff Monday, and U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan issued a statement saying he was "extremely concerned about the rapidly deteriorating situation."

He repeated his call to Western governments to send in a well-equipped rapid reaction force to restore order.

In Washington, the Clinton administration notified U.N. officials Monday that Air Force aircraft will fly a battalion of Bangladeshi peacekeepers — roughly 700 to 800 soldiers — to Freetown in coming days, a senior administration official said.

UI adds 9 classes to general curriculum

GE COURSES

In the past, courses were approved for general education by committees in each individual area of discipline. This system was discontinued, and the curriculum committee was established last fall, Goff said.

"The old system had become unworkable," Gilbert said. "It was cumbersome having so many different committees, and the notion was to try to get more consistency and speed in the process and to apply the standards fairly and consistently."

The curriculum committee is made up of seven faculty members from the three divisions of the College of Liberal Arts: natural sciences, social sciences, and arts and humanities, Goff said. There is also one student member of the committee, UI sophomore Carmen Nidey.

"My input can be a little unique," she said. "I had taken a few of the courses we looked at, and I feel that my firsthand experience was pretty valuable."

The curriculum committee will evaluate the current general-education courses on a five-year cycle beginning this fall, Goff said.

For several days, information culled from various Philippine Internet service providers has indicated that the virus programmer was a 23-year-old living in Pandacan who claimed to be male. Ramones is said to be in his mid-30s.

A U.S. computer security company, ICISA.net, said comparisons of the "ILOVEYOU" virus with a password-stealing program written earlier indicate the author was a student at AMA Computer College.

McCain ready to endorse Bush heard" in the meeting, McCain replied, "Sure."

Across town, Bush was telling reporters he would welcome McCain's help in the tight race against likely Democrat nominee Al Gore.

"That's going to be up to John. Of course, I'd like his help," Bush said. "He has said out loud on more than one occasion he was looking forward to campaigning for me for president. I take him for his word."

Unity serves the political ambitions of both men.

Bush needs McCain's help to court independent-minded voters and unite the GOP for a tough race against Vice President Gore.

McCain, whose presidential ambitions didn't perish with his campaign, wants to persuade Republicans that he is a party warrior worthy of a second look. That may be why he dropped the pretense of a lengthy courtship and decided to endorse Bush immediately.

On the other hand, McCain can't look too eager to cozy up to Bush without tarnishing his image as a straight-shooting outsider. And Bush can't be seen begging for McCain's support, because doing so would make him look weak or desperate against Gore.

Advisers for both men said they expected a cordial meeting, at which the former rivals would discuss political reform, military reform, education, Social Security and McCain's role in the campaign, including the Republican National Convention.

2nd suspect in alleged attempted homicide arrested

Gass said. "The cooperation nationwide is fantastic."

Moore was arrested in Iowa and has been in jail since March 11 on the charge of attempted homicide. Weese was transported from California on May 6 and is being held in the Johnson County Jail on an attempted homicide charge and a probation violation. The bond for Weese's release was set at $250,000, and the bond for Moore was set at $50,000.

"I think Moore left the state for a little while and then came back," Gass said.

A preliminary hearing for Weese has been set for May 17 in Johnson County District Court. Moore awaits a June 12 trial. Attempted homicide is a class B felony; conviction can carry a maximum sentence of 25 years in prison.

Microsoft should be content with break-up

The government has proposed to split the Microsoft company into two separate companies as punishment for its alleged monopolistic practices. Microsoft, founded by Bill Gates, obviously isn't too happy, but it should be thankful the punishment is not more severe.

The Justice Department and 19 states sued Microsoft for violating antitrust laws. A federal judge ruled on April 3 that the company crushed competitors with monopolistic practices — a violation of antitrust law. Microsoft should count its blessings that it could be getting off with such a minor punishment. Breaking the company into two parts is a mere slap on the wrist, and most likely will not drastically hurt sales.

The proposal holds that one section of the company will sell Windows, a computer-operating system, and the other will sell application software. Even if Microsoft is eventually divided in two, both sections will remain the dominating forces in the marketplace. The companies will profit as before, but separately. People are not going to stop buying Microsoft products just because the company is split in two.

The break-up, meanwhile, is much needed and will help smaller businesses. Other companies will have a better chance at competing with two smaller companies, as opposed to one giant monopoly. Smaller companies will also have a better chance to advance technology for the consumers without the threat of a monopoly lurking over their shoulder.

Microsoft has until Wednesday to respond to the government's proposal to split it up. Microsoft is asking for an extension to think about the split, but does it really need the extra time? It is getting away with very little punishment as it is. Microsoft should just accept the proposal and be thankful it was not more severe.

The Microsoft monopoly needs to be broken up, and making two separate companies will improve the marketplace and free flow of technology. Nothing but positives will come from the much needed split.

IF MICROSOFT IS SPLIT

Leave the joke-telling to comedians and the conquering to white males

So, as we churn our way in the direction of the 21st century, with a slouching towards Bethlehem here and a Wassup? there, it's nice to see that Iowa City, bastion of liberals, is taking the time to consider the plight of the white male.

For far too long — going on 500 years now — has he been known as the root of most evil: conqueror, enslaver, murderer and rapist. Talk about bad press.

Of course, had white males not spent a great portion of the last 500 years conquering, enslaving, murdering and raping their way around the globe — and then around again, in order to get the spots they had, in their haste, overlooked — they might not have had such bad press.

Then again, that's just like journalists, first cousins to hyenas that they are, accentuating the bad, ignoring the good.

For instance, did you know that white males introduced the ice-cube tray to the Eskimos?

Probably you didn't. But that's OK, you're not to blame; this is the brave new MTV world, and blame is, like, so lame.

Unless, of course, you're poor, and then that's your own damn fault. In this society, anybody with half a brain can be rich. Just look at Dan Quayle. Or George W. Shrub.

The ice-cube tray introduction, by the way, was at a formal reception, and a great number of introductions were being made. Not to mention martinis. White males hadn't invented mineral water yet.

The forlorn plight of the white male has been a big deal around Iowa City recently because a UI vice president tried to make a small joke about white males. Well, she got the small part right.

She should have known better. Humor, much like metaphors, metaphysics and all the other god metas, is best left to experts — such as Richard Pryor or Norm MacDonald. Or even Nietzsche and his Shrubness, if you want to go all the way to slapstick.

But vice presidents? There should be a warning label on humor: Vice presidents, don't try this in public. You only have to listen to one George W. Gore speech to understand why.

Especially jokes about white males; Ann Rhodes should've known that's the one not-quite-a-minority group you dare not touch. White males have gotten so sensitive these days. You'd think that they needed a support group or some more red meat or something.

Maybe it's because they're no longer allowed to conquer, enslave, murder and rape their way around the globe anymore. At least not overtly. These days, they have to use the WTO and the IMF to control things, and where's the fun in that? John Wayne and Dirty Harry would never have resorted to abbreviations to get their way, that's for sure.

Accountants just can't do a good "Make my day."

So maybe Rhodes needs some sensitivity-training to help her with this white-male thing. Perhaps the good folks at Stepping Up could get a new grant to combat binge-joking and then hold some humor-free events. I hear they're already pretty good at that last bit.

As for the downtrodden white males, it's hard to know what to tell them. Human history — and vegetable and even reptilian — is replete with groups who have been discriminated against and made the butts of cruel attempts at humor. Republicans, for instance.

Though no one is quite sure whether their background is human, reptilian or vegetable.

And yet, all of these people have managed to fight their way past discrimination, jokes, and the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune to make their way in this world. I'm fairly sure the poor white males can, too.

Maybe even one day, they can conquer and enslave once again. Which does, after all, seem to be their talent.

It's not as if there aren't a couple of role models out there for them to follow. Some white males, anyway, have got the outrageous fortune part down pat.

Rhodes controversy masks more important issues

The hubbub surrounding Ann Rhodes' comments is totally out of proportion to its relevance. All she is "guilty" of is poor judgment, trying to make a sarcastic remark at an inopportune moment. Nothing more. A surprising mistake for a person whose job it is to weigh every word carefully when speaking for the university, and she should certainly know better, but let's not crucify the woman for this one misstep.

In this society it helps to be taller, blonder, blue-eyed and male. There is nothing new about this to the majority of people who don't fit that description. It doesn't matter what you think about it; it's a simple fact of life for many people.

Anyone who's given this matter some serious thought (i.e., anything beyond a perfunctory exercise in political correctness) will know this to be generally true. I find it hard to believe that this group would feel persecuted by Rhodes' comments. Until members of this group get pulled over regularly as a result of racial profiling, e.g., driving while black or airport security regularly selecting them for special searches, I think they are fairly safe within their status position in society.

In any case, there are much more pressing and important issues on campus than Rhodes' careless comments. For a moment, during the search for the person sending those e-mails, it seemed that there were the beginnings of some discussions regarding these real issues.

Why is it that the university cannot attract and retain minority students?

What causes a person to get into a situation where she feels compelled to act against her fellow students and college?

Why does an atmosphere exist on campus that makes it possible for a Caucasian person to verbally assault a minority student out in the open for 30 minutes, spewing vile comments such as "fucking foreigner" and "go back to your country" without any of the many passer-bys intervening?

Of course, it is much more convenient to just tell ourselves that no problems exist in Iowa City, and the whole problem can be attributed to "a nut" (as someone described Clairborne to me), and therefore, now be put aside. Needless focusing on Rhodes' comments only further detracts from what the community could and should focus on.

There is no shortage of real problems to address. The energy expended on chastising

Rhodes for her mistake would be much better spent focusing on some of those problems.

Boy Scouts must maintain strong moral values

A recent editorial in The Daily Iowan, ("Supreme Court must end Boy Scouts' homophobic practices," April 17) attacked the Boy Scouts' policy of prohibiting actively gay individuals to serve as Scout leaders as unjust and discriminatory. The Supreme Court is currently reviewing Dale v. Boy Scouts of America, in which the Boy Scouts could potentially lose its ability to place such restrictions. What would be the long-term consequences of such legislation?

As an Eagle Scout and former Scoutmaster, I praise scouting for teaching boys how to become men who will be good fathers and strengthen the moral integrity of this nation. Some may argue that Scouting sends a message of discrimination to the boys by prohibiting gay leaders. This would depend on one's definition of discrimination. Is it individual discrimination to prohibit smokers from smoking in public buildings? No. Why? Because a practice or activity is being discriminated against because it could potentially harm nonparticipating individuals.

I have two young sons who will eventually participate in Scouting. Can I trust that someone participating in sexual activities out of wedlock — whether homosexual or heterosexual — is qualified to teach my boys the "family values" skill award or the Scout oath of keeping one's self "morally straight and clean"? I would submit that you cannot teach the ideals that this private organization holds to if you do not subscribe to them in your personal life.

If we continue to weaken organizations that preserve the integrity of the family unit, we're simply sentencing ourselves to read more articles in the paper about youth violence, drug use and crime in which the final paragraph of the article often states, "the perpetrator came from an unstable and dysfunctional family background."

Stop the "hating game"

People fear hatred like children fear the dark. They fear its power, stealth and invisibility. Where is it? Who feels it? What can we do? We wrestle with these questions when bigotry intimidates our fellow citizens, as recent death threats did at the College of Dentistry.

Johnson County is home to highly educated people, but hatred is feared here, too. A show of hatred brings out emotions of shame and anger in its watchers. But our response should not depend on which thoughts started the trouble. Acts are acts, and thoughts are thoughts. The act of threatening death needs punishment and resolution, but the thoughts behind it need tolerance.

Prevention of violence and intimidation is worthwhile, but most efforts at prevention try to shove behavior out of sight; don't speak of race, gender or class but hire according to pre-approved race, gender and class formulas; don't say this word, that word, or the other word — it's rude and sometimes illegal.

We can't control thoughts of other people. We can try to understand them instead.

Let's open our ears and our forums to ideas that we disagree with, even if they are narrow-minded. Listening to them doesn't make us the same way. Just the reverse, by listening to their ideas, we show tolerance for our fellow humans first. The rest of us won't learn how to counter arguments that we never hear.

A mind holds hatred and fear in the same dark place. It's a protected place that won't be opened with clubs and crowbars, or scathing and scorn. It will be opened when there is trust that actions will be punished, but beliefs won't be.

Hatred starts with ignorance and festers under oppression. It's time to lift the oppression of politically correct behavior and to open hearts and minds to sunlight and fresh air. It's time to change the rules of the hating game, and let all the pawns go free. Let's tolerate people around us, even bigots, and let them have their thoughts in peace.

Divas, desserts to benefit RVAP

What could be better than an evening of music and art by some of Iowa City's finest female performers? Add some of the area's sweetest entrees, and you have the second Divas and Desserts, an event to benefit the Rape Victim Advocacy Program.

Too Much Yang member Michelle Coleman will host the evening's entertainment, which will include a performance by singer/songwriter Jennifer Danielson, on return from a tour for her CD Human Nature. Kelly Carrell and Laurie Haag, who have performed at the Iowa Women's Music Festival, and folk artist Patty Ankrum, formerly of the group Black Sheep, will also provide musical entertainment.

Dramatic readings will blend some performance art into the lineup. Rachael Lindhart will perform a piece out of the play Blue Yonder by local playwright Kate Aspengren. Local actor and playwright Amy Wheeler will also perform.

"Desserts will be served in the lobby at 7 p.m. by celebrity servers from the UISG," said RVAP board member Kristie Doser.

Area restaurants and cafés will provide the desserts. Chef Mickey's Catering Shop, the Moveable Feast, the Cottage, Sweet Visions Bakery and Coffee Company, Cafe Bella, the Sanctuary and the Motley Cow are just a few.

"It's gonna be a crowd. We're really excited," Doser said.

Proceeds will benefit RVAP in several ways, including support for the new Johnson County Sexual Assault Response Team. Tickets are available at RVAP, the Women's Resource and Action Center, RSVP, Emma CLEVELAND (AP) — Some life tips from Drew Carey: set goals, drink beer with friends and value what's in your heart and mind.

Carey, who dropped out of Kent State University, told 2,800 Cleveland State graduates Sunday that he got drunk and overslept on the last day students could drop courses without penalty. He got D's and F's.

"But look at me now," Carey said. "I'm a millionaire."

But material goods aren't the most important things in life, according to Carey, a Cleveland native. "Things don't make me nearly as happy as talking and having a beer with my friends. And that's something everyone can do."

He thanked Cleveland State for awarding him an honorary doctorate.

"I've always wanted to walk up to women and say, 'Hey, baby, trust me. I'm a doctor.'" Carey said.

Reggie Lewis' doctor cleared in malpractice suit

The doctor who said the former Celtics star had a "normal athlete's heart" was cleared of all charges Monday.

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

BOSTON — A cardiologist was cleared of malpractice Monday in the case of Boston Celtics star Reggie Lewis, who dropped dead shooting baskets in 1993 two months after the doctor said Lewis had a "normal athlete's heart."

A jury rejected a lawsuit brought by Lewis' family against Dr. Gilbert Mudge, who had suggested that cocaine use by Lewis hindered his ability to diagnose the 27-year-old player's condition.

A previous trial ended in a hung jury. The verdict this time came after a little more than three days of deliberations.

After being informed that the 16 jurors couldn't muster the 13 votes required to avoid a deadlock, both sides agreed to accept a verdict based on 12 votes. Moments later, the jury decided Mudge did not provide Lewis with substandard care.

Lewis first collapsed during an NBA playoff game in 1993. After a "dream team" of doctors diagnosed him with a potentially fatal heart problem, he walked out of the hospital and transferred care to Mudge.

The distinguished cardiologist said at a news conference at the time that Lewis had a "normal athlete's heart" and that he suffered from a benign fainting disorder. Two months later, Lewis died while shooting baskets.

The autopsy and death certificate said Lewis' heart was enlarged and extensively scarred from a viral infection that left him vulnerable to the abnormal heart rhythm that killed him. Other doctors have said the scarring could also have been caused by cocaine.

The Lewis family sued for the basketball star's lost earnings, an amount that was put as high as $75 million during the first trial but was not specified during the second.

The first trial ended last year when the jury deadlocked over Mudge's culpability; two consultants were exonerated and a fourth doctor settled out of court.

The first trial was dominated by allegations of cocaine use. At the retrial, Mudge testified that Lewis had admitted using cocaine. But Judge Thayer Fremont-Smith instructed the jury to disregard any testimony about drug use, saying there was no evidence it contributed to Lewis' death.

Pacers survive scare

Indiana survived a late scare to take a 2-0 lead in the Eastern Conference semi-finals.

By Hank Lowenkron

INDIANAPOLIS — Game 1 was all Jalen Rose and Reggie Miller with 40 points each. Austin Croshere got a piece of the scoring for the Indiana Pacers in Game 2 against the Philadelphia 76ers.

Rose scored 30 points and Croshere added a career playoff-high 20 as the Pacers, despite not making a field goal over the final seven minutes, beat Philadelphia 103-97 Monday night to take a 2-0 lead in the Eastern Conference semifinals.

"I didn't feel that I carried my weight in the first round. There was a little bit of nervousness in that first series," said Croshere, who saw only one minute of playoff action in his first two seasons. "The key for me wasn't 'I've got to come out and score' but to play hard and be aggressive."

The Pacers scored their final 10 points on free throws, starting with two by Rose that put Indiana ahead 95-73 with 5:53 to play.

The 76ers rallied with a 33-14 run in the fourth quarter, including scoring 17 straight points.

The best-of-seven series shifts to Philadelphia for Game 3 on Wednesday and Game 4 on Saturday. Only seven teams in NBA history have rallied from a 2-0 deficit to win a series.

"Squarely, the pressure is now on Philadelphia. We can play a little bit more freer, a little bit more loose," said Miller, who had 19 points.

Allen Iverson led the 76ers with 28 points, but was only 9-for-25 from the field. He had 10 assists.

The 76ers also found out that starting guard Eric Snow, who missed the final two games of the opening series against Charlotte because of a fracture in his right ankle, will not be able to play the

Devils hold Leafs to just six shots

Toronto set a record for fewest shots on goal Monday, sending New Jersey to the Eastern Conference finals.

By Ira Podell

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — After waiting five years, the New Jersey Devils didn't waste a minute in their rush to return to the Eastern Conference finals. They barely allowed any shots, either.

Petr Sykora scored 18 seconds after the opening faceoff and the Devils yielded just six shots, the fewest in modern NHL history, as they beat Toronto 3-0 Monday night to win the best-of-seven second-round series in six games.

Jason Arnott got a goal 25 seconds into the second period and John Madden added an empty-net goal with six seconds remaining to seal the victory for the Devils.

New Jersey will play the winner of the Philadelphia-Pittsburgh series which Philadelphia leads 3-2 with Game 6 in Pittsburgh on Tuesday night. The Devils advanced past the second round for the first time since winning the Stanley Cup in 1995. The Maple Leafs did not win the NHL championship for the 33rd straight year.

Toronto has only reached the conference finals four times since its 1967 title, including last year's loss to Buffalo.

Toronto's elimination assures that the Stanley Cup will be won by a franchise from the United States for a record seventh straight season, dating to Montreal's victory in 1993. The only time U.S. teams won the Hawkeyes return fully loaded next year

Iowa men's golf coach Terry Anderson is looking forward to the future after losing just one player to graduation.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

All anyone needs to do is look back to the fall season to see how much the Iowa men's golf team improved this spring. With the exception of one second-place finish, Iowa was usually on its way home when the awards were being given out last fall.

That changed for the Hawkeyes this spring, and in a big way. "We learned that it wasn't strange to be in third place or in the lead," said coach Terry Anderson.

Junior Matt Stutzman turned in the highlight of the season for the Hawkeyes, shooting a 214 on his way to winning the prestigious Marshall Invitational. His teammates also did their part on the way to finishing fourth.

However, two weeks later, Iowa would finish in third place at the First Energy Invite with senior Adam Turner tied for third place after shooting a 216. Turner's score was only two strokes away from medalist Dave Wagenseller's 214 finish.

While Anderson said the Hawkeyes had their share of poor showings, the Marshall and First Energy meets show the true potential of his young squad.

As with last season, the Hawkeyes will remain almost entirely intact as only Turner will graduate. While he was one of the top players on the

Iowa's Brad Carlson struggles to regain 1999 form

After hitting 21 home runs as a freshman, Carlson has hit just five this season.

By Greg Wallace
The Daily Iowan

Brad Carlson takes a big swing and golfs a fastball from Northwestern's Ryan Bos over the right-field fence. Gone. It's a three-run homer, and it gives Iowa an 7-6 lead it won't relinquish on this day.

"One word. Finally," Carlson says. Finally, you ask? From a guy who hit 21 home runs last season and was tabbed as having the best raw power in the Big Ten, not to mention being a preseason first-team all-conference selection?

Yes, finally. That longball on April 30 broke a 25-game homerless streak for the sophomore. His numbers of five home runs and 30 RBIs are a far cry from his freshman numbers of 21 dingers and 71 RBIs, and have Carlson wonder what's gone wrong.

"I don't know, what do you think?" Carlson said. "I don't know the answer. I've been thinking about it myself.... I really don't feel the pressure, I'm just not getting the job done.

Maybe I'm thinking too much."

Carlson entered college baseball last season relatively unheralded, despite his lofty high school stats. He was a two-time first team all-state selection at Lisbon (Ia.) High School, just east of Cedar Rapids, and had a .457 average and 13 home runs his senior season in 1997.

He terrorized college pitching in 1999, his freshman season. By the end of the season it was an upset if he didn't have at least one home run in a series.

Everyone took notice. Baseball America, (who named him a freshman all-American) the Big Ten, and most importantly, opposing pitchers.

"The book," a mythical scouting report for pitchers, was re-written on Carlson. And it included this pronouncement— "Thou shall not give him anything to hit."

This season, a fastball is a special treat for Carlson. His at-bats consist mainly of off-speed and outside pitches; and while he leads the team in

POINTCOUNTERPOINT

Is watching baseball more exciting than watching softball?

Slap hits. Bunts. 1-0 games. If that's your thing, I understand. Just head down Highway 6 into Coralville. Pearl Field's on the left. Right across from Hardee's.

But if you want 20 runs per game, base-stealing, monster home runs, and runners gunned down at the plate from right field, Iowa Field, home of the Hawkeye baseball team, is a left turn away from Kinnick Stadium.

If you want to see the most exciting spring sport, that's the place for you.

I just don't get excited by bunts. Or a 2-hour pitching duel. I prefer the majestic flight of a home run heading over the fence. It's something everyone should see in their lifetime.

The best part about a college baseball game? Anything can happen. You can see a perfect game, like the one Hawkeye Chad Blackwell twirled earlier this year, or a 14-13, 13-inning slugfest, like the one I witnessed between Iowa and UNI in 1999. There's something for everyone here, from the casual fan to the baseball strategist.

Admittedly, the Iowa home run and hitting production are down quite a bit this year. But it's not uncommon for a college hitter to have 35 home runs in a 60-game season. The single-season record for Iowa softball? Nine.

It's a true event when a ball is hit over the shortened softball fence. And no one ever gets thrown out at first base on a hit into right field in baseball. They do in softball.

Maybe I don't have a discriminating enough taste to enjoy softball. But I know that if it's action-packed you want, Iowa Field is the place.

— Greg Wallace

There's nothing like sitting and waiting a minute or so between pitches while the baseball pitcher shakes off a few signs, looks to first several times, throws to first several times, then decides to make the first pitch to a batter.

Meanwhile, over at Pearl Field, the No. 15 Iowa softball team has already scored a couple of runs. Not only is the softball here more exciting, it's more exciting across the country. The only reason people may find baseball more popular is because they haven't watched enough softball.

I've played and watched softball since I was about six, but I've also been to the baseball field plenty of times. The biggest difference between the two is the speed of the game. From fielding to pitching and even base running, softball is played at a quicker pace. The softball field is shorter, so there is little room for error and more room for strategy.

Oh, but the baseball players score so much more and hit the ball so much farther. Well, two Iowa softball players have eight home runs, while the baseball team's leading home run hitters have five. I would much rather watch a close battle between two teams than watch one get pounded into the ground by the other.

If you're a huge baseball fan, go join Greg at a collegiate softball game. I guarantee, you'll both appreciate the strategy and speed with which they play. Heck, you might even enjoy yourself.

Dawson makes U.S. field hockey team

The University of Iowa will have a representative on the 2000 U.S. National field hockey team. Junior midfielder Natalie Dawson was named to the team on Friday. She left Monday for the national training center in San Diego, where she will train with the team before going to a tournament in Holland, May 16-28.

Dawson was a key member of Iowa's 19-3 Final Four team in 1999 as a second-team All-Big Ten selection. She had been invited to the U.S. "A" camp earlier this year.

"This will be a great opportunity for Natalie," Iowa head coach Beth Beglin said. "She will get great exposure to international play and see what it's like to travel with the team. It will be a great benefit for her individually, and it will be a big benefit for us when she comes back to the team."

Bluder to hold girls' basketball camp

Iowa women's basketball coach Lisa Bluder has announced her first Iowa Girls Basketball Camp. The camp will be held June 10-18, and is open to girls 10-18.

Campers will receive instruction in the game of basketball, hear lectures from Bluder and her staff, meet Hawkeye basketball players, play at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, and take home an official Iowa women's basketball camp basketball and t-shirt.

"I'm really excited for my first camp here at Iowa," Bluder said. "I think it will be a great experience for every young basketball player out there, as we'll provide an intense, yet fun atmosphere to learn the great game of basketball."

For more information, or a camp brochure, call Anthony Dean at (319) 335-9297.

Cubs sign Worrell, release Ayala

CHICAGO — (AP) The Chicago Cubs signed right-handed pitcher Tim Worrell to a minor league contract Monday and released reliever Bobby Ayala.

Worrell, 32, was released by the Baltimore Orioles on May 1. He'd been designated for assignment to make room for infielder Mark Lewis, who was claimed from Cincinnati. Worrell was 2-2 with a 7.36 ERA in five relief appearances for the Orioles.

Worrell is 22-34 with four saves and a 4.50 ERA in 244 games with San Diego, Detroit, Cleveland, Oakland and Baltimore. He's expected to join Triple-A Iowa on Tuesday.

Ayala, who spent the final month of the 1999 season with the Cubs, signed a minor league contract April 4. He went 1-2 with a 4.61 ERA in 10 games for Iowa.

Holocaust escapee, champion walker dies

COCONUT CREEK, Fla. — Henry Laskau, who slipped out of a Nazi labor camp, made his way to this country and ended up in the National Track and Field Hall of Fame after dominating race walking for more than a decade, has died. He was 83.

Laskau won 42 national titles, held five national records and made three Olympic appearances. He died Sunday at Vitas Hospice.

"He was suffering from Alzheimer's. He had an operation from which he did not recover," his widow, Hilde Laskau, said Monday from the couple's Coconut Creek home. "He died a very peaceful death, for which we are all very grateful."

Agassi returns to European red clay

ROME — Andre Agassi returned to European clay Monday for the first time since his dramatic French Open victory last year and found the slow red surface still to his liking.

Playing steady if unspectacular tennis, he held off big-serving fellow American Todd Martin 6-2, 7-6 (4) in the first round of the Italian Open.

"There's no question," it felt good to be back in Europe, said Agassi, playing his first tournament since he was sidelined in April by a thigh injury and happy he wasn't forced into a third set.

"I felt like I played solid enough, but the tests will be coming more and more."

U.S. topples Sweden 5-3 at hockey worlds

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia — Brian Gionta scored twice and the United States on Monday extended its surprising run at the World Hockey Championships by handing Sweden its first loss of the tournament 5-3.

The Americans, who had already secured a berth in the quarterfinals, will end the second round atop the Group E standings with eight points, ahead of Sweden, Latvia and Belarus.

"Our goal was to qualify for the quarterfinals, and now we've done that," said American head coach Lou Varso. "Now we have to win our game Thursday or we go home. Now we might be able to advance to the medal round."

Yankees make Gooden feel unwelcome

NEW YORK (AP) — Dwight Gooden didn't feel at home in his first road game in New York.

Gooden, who spent the first 13 years of his career with the Mets and Yankees, was pounded for six runs and three homers before being knocked out in the fifth inning of Tampa Bay's 6-3 loss to the Yankees on Monday night.

Tino Martinez hit a three-run homer in the first inning, and Clay Bellinger and Paul O'Neill finished the job with homers in the fifth off Gooden (2-2), who was pitching in New York for the first time since Sept. 19, 1997, when he was with the Yankees.

Andy Pettitte (2-1) allowed three runs and nine hits in 6 2-3 innings as the Yankees won for the ninth time in 11 games. Mariano Rivera, who blew his second save chance Sunday against Baltimore, pitched the ninth for his 12th save.

New York has been the scene of some of Gooden's best moments of his career, including the no-hitter he pitched against Seattle at Yankee Stadium on May 14, 1996.

But he also went through drug and alcohol abuse that derailed a potential Hall of Fame career and sidelined him in 1995.

Cleveland tried to keep Gooden, a crowd favorite in New York, from pitching at Yankee Stadium the past two years out of fear he would put too much pressure on himself.

Those fears might have been warranted as Gooden struggled with his control early, walking three batters in the first. Two of those walks scored when Martinez hit a shot into the upper-deck in right field for his fourth homer.

Blue Jays 6, Orioles 5

TORONTO — Darrin Fletcher hit a grand slam in the fourth inning as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Baltimore Orioles for the 11th straight time, 6-5 Monday night.

Tony Batista also homered for the Blue Jays, who have hit 48 homers in 19 home games and are on pace to finish with 207, which would shatter the major league home record of 149 set by Colorado at Coors Field in 1996.

Fletcher's fifth career slam gave Toronto a 6-2 lead. After Jason Johnson (0-2) loaded the bases in the fourth inning on singles by Carlos Delgado and Batista and a walk to Brad Fuller, Fletcher homered to right center, giving New York a 3-0 lead.

Royals 4, Tigers 1, 11 innings

DETROIT — Jermaine Dye hit a two-run double in the 11th inning and Kansas City beat the Detroit Tigers 4-1 Monday night, snapping the Royals' nine-game road losing streak.

Rey Sanchez singled off Doug Brocail (1-2) to start the 11th and Johnny Damon sacrificed. With two outs, Mike Sweeney beat out an infield hit.

Dye followed with a line drive over leaping right fielder Luis Polonia and the ball rolled to Yankees outfielder Tino Martinez belts a three-run home run off Devil Rays pitcher Dwight Gooden in the first inning Monday at Yankee Stadium in New York.

Red Sox 3, White Sox 2

BOSTON — Brian Rose, who failed to get out of the second in two of his other four starts, pitched six strong innings and Carl Everett homered as the Boston Red Sox beat the Chicago White Sox 3-2 Monday night.

Rose (2-2) started with three perfect innings and left after six with a 3-2 lead after allowing just four hits and no walks. He began the game with a 9.20 ERA following his appearance last Tuesday, when he gave up four runs in 1 2-3 innings in a 7-6 win over Detroit.

Derek Lowe pitched 1 1-3 innings for his eighth save in eight chances, lowering his ERA to 0.87 in 20 2-3 innings. After Paul Konerko's leadoff single and a sacrifice, Carlos Lee grounded out, Greg Norton walked and pinch-hitter Herbert Perry bounced into a forceout.

Marlins 3, Braves 2

MIAMI — John Rocker balked home the winning run with two outs in the ninth inning, and the Florida Marlins scored three unearned runs to beat the Atlanta Braves 3-2 Monday night.

With a 2-2 count on Cliff Floyd and Danny Bautista at third, Rocker took his position on the rubber and the ball fell out of his glove to the ground. Second base umpire Mike DiMuro signaled a balk, and Bautista trotted home.

Rocker and Braves manager Bobby Cox briefly spoke to DiMuro as the umpires left the field.

It was the first game-ending balk in the NL since July 4, 1993, when the Braves beat the Marlins 4-3 at Atlanta. Deion Sanders scored on rookie Matt Turner's balk with one out in the bottom of the ninth.

Rangers 10, Mariners 1

ARLINGTON, Texas — Rick Helling pitched six shutout innings and Chad Curtis drove in three runs as the Texas Rangers beat the Seattle Mariners 10-1 Monday night.

Royce Clayton led off the Texas first with a triple and the Rangers went ahead for good with three runs, highlighted by Curtis' two-run single.

Helling (4-1) allowed just three singles before he left with swelling on his pitching hand, a result of being hit by a comebacker that ended the second. He struck out three and walked just one.

Rockies 3, Astros 1

HOUSTON — Pedro Astacio pitched a three-hitter and Todd Helton hit a two-run homer as the Colorado Rockies, snapping a string of 22 scoreless innings, beat the Houston Astros 3-1 Monday night.

Astacio (4-2) allowed Richard Hidalgo's leadoff homer in the fifth, which hit the top of the left-field wall and bounced over for his 10th home run of the year.

Astacio, who also gave up Bill Spiers' leadoff single in the eighth and Hidalgo's single in the ninth, struck out 10, walked two and hit a batter in his first complete game this season, the 21st of his career.

Indians 3, Twins 2, 10 innings

MINNEAPOLIS — Manny Ramirez's RBI single off Bob Wells with two outs in the 10th gave the Cleveland Indians a 3-2 victory over the Minnesota Twins on Monday night.

Wells (0-3) gave up a one-out double to Omar Vizquel before striking out David Justice. He had two strikes on Ramirez, who poked a single up the middle, scoring Vizquel from second.

Ricardo Rincon (2-0) got the victory, striking out the only batter he faced — Corey Koskie looking — to end the ninth with runners at first and second.

Knicks to Heat: Let's get physical

■ The New York Knicks want to challenge Miami physically in Game 2 of their Eastern Conference series.

By Mark Long
Associated Press

MIAMI — Chris Childs wants the New York Knicks to be more physical, knocking players to the floor instead of allowing layups and dunks. The Miami Heat welcome the challenge.

Now this is more like a Knicks-Heat playoff series. The Heat made about 10 layups, many of them uncontested, and had almost as many dunks in their 87-83 victory in Game 1 on Sunday. Even guard Tim Hardaway, with his bad knees and sore foot, dribbled coast to coast for any easy basket.

"We never fouled them once," Knicks coach Jeff Van Gundy said Monday.

So the Knicks plan to put a stop to their soft play, starting Tuesday night in Game 2 of the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinals.

"It has to change around — no layups," Childs said. "I mean, 21 points in transition? Nine dunks? And I don't know how many layups. That has to change. You have to put guys down. Not to hurt them, but to make them earn it at the free throw line."

"Whoever goes to the basket, you have to foul them and make them earn it."

That's just fine with the Heat. "As far as knocking people down, I mean, whatever," forward P.J. Brown said. "It doesn't bother me. It's going to be a tough, physical game as always, so it doesn't matter what they bring. We'll be ready."

No two NBA teams have sustained a better — and more bitter — rivalry over the past several seasons than the Knicks and Heat. And the series has had its share of physical play.

Knicks point guard Charlie Ward boxed out Brown at the knees in the 1997 playoffs as they battled for rebounding position. Brown then flipped Ward to the ground, and several of the Knicks ran off the bench to join in the melee.

The following year, Van Gundy clutched onto Alonzo Mourning's leg while the Heat's center and Knicks forward Larry Johnson exchanged punches.

So Childs' remarks shouldn't surprise anyone, although both teams refrained from such exchanges prior to Game 1.

"If it's a hard foul and it's legal, you get up, knock your shots down and continue to play," Childs said.

Or tempers flare and fights erupt. "Why don't you just raise the ante, Chris?" Heat coach Pat Riley quipped. "What the hell. Here it comes. All right, I'm going to knock people down."

Allen apologizes for handling of complaint

■ Kansas football coach Terry Allen handled a sexual abuse charge against two players by making them run steps.

By Doug Tucker
Associated Press

LAWRENCE, Kan. — A contrite Terry Allen, speaking so softly he could barely be heard, apologized Friday for the way he handled a woman's charge of being sexually abused by two of his Kansas football players.

"The way this situation transpired was wrong," the fourth-year head coach told members of the Kansas University Athletics Corporation.

"I feel very, very, very bad about this."

Athletics director Bob Frederick also apologized and announced an internal investigation was being launched into the way the situation had been dealt with. "Clearly, I've spent a lot of time in the last week thinking about all this. We've taken a lot of shots and deservedly so," Frederick said.

The young woman is a Kansas soccer player. Neither she nor the two football players have been publicly identified. The case is now in the hands of police, and charges have not been filed.

The woman said two drunken players approached her in the parking lot of a Lawrence nightclub in February and one grabbed her around the waist, lifted her into the air and ignored her requests to leave her alone.

Holding her face down on the hood of a truck, she said, the players fondled, spanked and taunted her.

The woman didn't immediately go to police about the incident, she said, because Allen promised he would punish the players in an "appropriate way" if she did not press charges.

"The only punishment they got was they had to run stairs at the stadium one day," she said Tuesday.

On April 26 she went to police, who made the report public Tuesday.

In a prepared statement earlier in the week, Allen said: "I was not, in any way, trying to make a deal with the student-athlete for her not to report this matter to the police. The actions that I have taken related to this incident are not limited to what has been reported by the media."

Nevertheless, Frederick appeared angry Friday when he admitted to KUAC, "We made some mistakes when the student-athlete approached members of our staff to report the Feb. 26 incident."

"It would be another mistake if we didn't learn from this," he said.

Allen, 14-20 in three years as Kansas coach, kept his hands in his pockets during his brief remarks at the opening of the meeting of the faculty/student group that oversees athletics.

Anderson pushes 'A' game for golfers team this season, the team got a taste of things to come at last weekend's Big Ten Championships when Turner had the worst scores on all three days and the scores were not counted.

Anderson said he is looking forward to essentially having his entire roster back.

"The things I've said this season are going to be further ingrained in their heads," he said.

Anderson said he will continue to stress the importance of playing competitive golf while not trying to do too much. He said many players tried to carry the team at the Big Ten Championships, a factor which contributed to poor individual scores.

Among the returning players, Stutzman and Jason Wombacher will be counted on heavily next season.

Anderson said Stutzman's medalist performance this season proves he can win tournaments, but he must learn he will not be able to play with his "A" game every time.

As for Wombacher, Anderson said he was pleased with the strides the junior from Marion made in his game, especially in becoming more patient.

In addition to those two, several other Hawkeyes will return with much needed experience. Among that group will be sophomore Tyler Smith, as well as freshmen Bo Anderson and Mike Tapper.

"We're sitting in really good shape for next season," said Anderson. "Not only that, but for years to come as well."

Iowa slugger says he's his own worst critic

strikeouts, he also leads in walks, by a wide margin.

Carlson won't use that as an excuse.

"I won't say that they aren't throwing me some different pitches, like throwing me a curveball to start," he says. "But that's what you're going to face in Division I at the 3 or 4 spot. That's just how it goes. I'm not going to say I'm not getting pitched different, but at the same time, I'm getting plenty of pitches to hit and I'm not taking advantage of them."

He began the season as the cleanup hitter, but was recently moved to the No. 3 slot, ceding No. 4 to Alex Dvorsky until Dvorsky broke his wrist last week. Now, third baseman Ian Mattiace hits fourth.

Too many at bats have wound up with Carlson getting jammed and lofting lazy pop flies to the shortstop or right fielder. Pitchers no longer quake in their cleats when he steps to the plate.

Iowa coach Scott Broghamer, who has told Carlson to "keep swinging," said that his slugger's reputation after last year's amazing freshman campaign has preceded him to the plate.

"He was an all-American last year," Broghamer said. He hit a lot of home runs, and teams have decided they're not going to give him the opportunity to beat them."

The season would be great for most players. A .287 average, tied for the team lead in home runs (5) and fourth in doubles (10). But Carlson's 1999 totals of a .367 batting average and 17 doubles, in addition to the homer and RBI drops, make 2000 seem like a bust to him.

"I'm embarrassed with myself," he said. "I can't remember a time when I was hitting this badly. I'm frustrated because I have so many expectations for myself. Everything everyone else expects from me is so minute. I expect myself to do what I did last year, and then some. It's not going that way."

Carlson wants to carry the team. But for now, he'll settle for taking the team to the Big Ten tournament. With one four-game series left, beginning Friday at Michigan, Iowa sits in seventh place, two games behind Northwestern for the sixth and final slot for the tournament.

"I don't know if I can hit it that far anymore," Carlson says of hitting home runs. "I just want to go up there and get the job done for my team, help us win. If we make the Big Ten tournament, it'll make the season."

He has rebounded somewhat lately, with two long home runs in the last five games. A light has appeared at the end of his tunnel.

"I feel all right right now, I think I'm swinging a little better lately," Carlson said. "I'm not worried about it. But at the same time it's like, I'm going to figure it out, I'm going to change, and it's only going to get better from here."

Power play hinders Leafs

DEVILS-LEAFS

Cup six years in a row was from 1936-41.

The Maple Leafs need to look no further than their top line and their power play for why they could not match the regular season success they held over the Devils. Jonas Hoglund was the only one of the trio, including Mats Sundin and Steve Thomas, to get a shot past Martin Brodeur in the series.

Toronto's previous playoff low for shots was 13 in a 3-0 loss to Philadelphia on April 15, 1975. The Leafs had three shots in the first period Monday, two in the second and just one in the third. No team since 1967, the year of the league's first expansion, has been held to so few shots in a regular-season or playoff game.

Brodeur was hardly tested in earning his eighth career playoff shutout and second of the series. The Devils won 1-0 at Toronto in Game 2. The Maple Leafs, 3-0-1 this season against New Jersey, failed in all 20 man-advantage situations during the six games.

It was by far the fewest shots taken by a Devils opponent in a playoff game, besting the 13 by Pittsburgh in a loss last year.

The best chance the Leafs had Monday was on their first shot of the game. Igor Korolev sent a blind backhand from the slot at 7:35 that Brodeur swatted away.

Alleged cocaine use not a factor in Lewis trial

Lewis' widow, Donna Harris-Lewis, said the one victory for the plaintiffs was that the player's reputation was not tainted again.

"We got cocaine out of the case once and for all," Rossman said.

The two sides agreed last week that Mudge and Harris-Lewis would not be in the courtroom when the verdict was read. After the jury was dismissed, the lawyers called their clients.

"She's very disappointed, but obviously it's time to move on," Rossman said. "She needs to compose herself and deal with what has happened here. She'll never get over the loss of her husband, and the children will never get over the loss of their father. But she's had the opportunity to have this question answered by a jury of her peers."

Mudge and his wife said in a statement that they felt no ill will toward Lewis' widow.

"We wish them peace and comfort as we all move along from this place," they said.

Mudge contended even though he said publicly Lewis could eventually resume his NBA career, he had not ruled out a heart problem. He also cautioned Lewis to take his medication and not exert himself — instructions Mudge said his patient ignored.

The Celtics had no comment. The jurors also had no comment, according to a court clerk.

The jury was asked to decide whether Mudge was negligent and, if so, whether that caused the player's death. In Massachusetts, a civil case usually requires a five-sixths vote, which would be 14 jurors on a 16-member panel, but it can be as low as a simple majority if the parties agree.

"I think everybody wanted to have this case resolved," Rossman said. "We took our chances."

Croshere comes through

BASKETBALL

rest of the season because of the injury. He played just four minutes in the second half Monday night.

Philadelphia, which trailed by as many as 26 points in the third quarter, got within 95-88 when Iverson made two free throws with 2:44 remaining.

Two free throws by Rose made it 97-88 with 1:15 to play. Tyrone Hill's layup made it 97-90, but he missed two free throws with 37 seconds to go. A free throw by Croshere gave Indiana a 98-90 lead and a 3-pointer by Toni Kukoc made it 98-93.

Rose then made one free throw with 18 seconds to go. After a basket by Iverson, Miller made two free throws for Indiana with 12 remaining and Rose sealed the victory by making two more with 4.3 seconds to go.

Indiana, which pulled away as it shot 55 percent in the first half, also got 14 points on 7-of-9 shooting from center Rik Smits.

Croshere was 4-for-4 from 3-point range.

"He had a fantastic overall game," Miller said of Croshere, who sprained his right ankle in the fourth quarter but was able to return to the game.

"Croshere and (Derrick) McKey, their contributions were phenomenal," Philadelphia coach Larry Brown said. "They (Indiana) were the aggressor on both ends of the court. ... They got every loose ball. They executed."

Mark Jackson scored seven points but had 14 assists and also did much of the defensive work against Iverson.

"He's a phenomenal basketball player. He can score against anybody, believe me," Jackson said of Iverson. "We collectively tried to contain him. We want to make him work for everything he gets."

Hill added 15 points for Philadelphia.

The 76ers went over six minutes without a field goal in the second quarter. A jumper by Aaron McKie brought the 76ers within 42-33 with 6:47 left in the half. The 76ers, who shot 22 percent in the second quarter, didn't get another field goal until Matt Geiger's dunk in the final second of the half.

Indiana led 55-40 at half-time.

Indiana, which swept the 76ers in the semifinals last year, came out hot for the second consecutive game. The Pacers, who never trailed, made 11 of their first 15 shots.

"When we start like that, it takes us to another level. It takes us from being a dangerous basketball team to being an awfully dangerous basketball team," said Jackson.
