SAS: UI cut off dialogue on sweatshops

The final meeting of the school year with UI administrators doesn't go as expected for SAS members.

By Michael Chapman
The Daily Iowan

Members of UI Students Against Sweatshops say the UI has cut off any further chance of a compromise between the group and the university.

Four members of the group met Thursday afternoon with UI President Mary Sue Coleman, Phillip Jones, the vice president of student services, and Vice Provost Joe Knight, among others.

SAS had hoped to reach a form of compromise with UI administration at the meeting on the issue of sweatshop labor.

UI graduate student and SAS member Ned Bertz said he was pleased to learn that the UI is doing to prevent sweatshop abuses but was upset at the tone of the meeting.

He said Coleman presented a separate agenda after she had asked the group to create one for the meeting. She also informed the group she was not interested in any further dialogue, Bertz said, and the group must take its complaints to the UI Committee on Human Rights in the future.

"The UI slammed the door shut on any future dialogue and negotiation," he said. "That the UI is not willing to compromise is disappointing and outrageous."

Jones said the meeting was not intended for a compromise but a discussion of what the UI is doing to prevent sweatshop abuses, and both groups gained a better understanding of what issues they agreed and differed on.

"I think this was an information-sharing meeting, and that is what was accomplished," he said.

Lo Moeller, a UI associate professor of management and organization, presented an update on the continuing development of the UI's Code of Conduct, and Jones said he expects the code to be completed within a matter of days or weeks.

Coleman said in a statement that the UI continues to receive information about progress the university is making to ensure humane working conditions in the production of Hawkeye apparel. She said to date, the UI has received 171 responses from the 542 licensees of Hawkeye apparel, and not one has refused to provide the public disclosure of factory sites that was requested.

Despite the end of the school year, Bertz said, many SAS members will remain in Iowa City and plan to keep the public aware of the sweatshop issue over the summer. "The issue does not go away because school is over," he said. "We will not rest."

That was the year that was

From threats at the dental school to a Hawkeye's perfect game, the UI ran the gamut.

By Michael Chapman
The Daily Iowan

As the 1999-00 school year draws to a close, The Daily Iowan takes a look back on the 10 most important stories of the past school year:

The dental school threats

In early February, fear spread when anonymous e-mails were sent to the dental school administration and students, demanding the college rid itself of all minorities. A bomb threat at the college followed and closed the school for the first time since the 1960s. On April 20, Tarsha Claiborne was arrested and charged. She is undergoing psychological evaluation at the UI Hospitals and Clinics and awaiting trial for six counts of third-degree harassment, threats in violation of individual rights, criminal trespass/hate crime and possession of a schedule I controlled substance.

SAS vs. Coleman

The anti-sweatshop group protested against the UI's involvement with the Fair Labor Association throughout the 1999-00 school year. Conflicts between the group and UI President Mary Sue Coleman eventually led to a six-day SAS occupation of Jessup Hall and the arrest of five group members.

UConn? UGone!

The men's basketball team would eventually finish two games under .500 at 14-16, but for one night, the Hawkeyes were among the nation's elite in many fans' eyes. In a 70-68 thriller, the Hawkeyes knocked off No. 1 UConn on Nov. 11, 1999, the UI's first upset of a No. 1 team in 25 years.

Age of admittance at local bars

Underage patrons may have to find other avenues of entertainment in the near future if a proposed ordinance by the Iowa City City Council changes the bar-entrance age to 21. However, councilors said any likely action will be delayed until fall 2000 while they gather information from Iowa City residents.

UI Student Support for policy changes

Offer alcohol-free social opportunities	91%
Make rules clearer	89%
Offer alcohol-free residence halls	81%

Memmer charged

Almost a year after the killing of Laura Watson-Dalton and Maria Therese Lehner, Jonathan Memmer, already charged with third-degree burglary at the apartment where the bodies of the two women were found, was charged on Feb. 25 with two counts of first-degree murder. Local authorities blamed a slow state crime lab for the delay in charges.

Blaze roars through deserted Los Alamos, destroying homes

Up to 400 homes burned in a wildfire out of control in the home of the atomic bomb.

By Chris Roberts
Associated Press

LOS ALAMOS, N.M. — Driven by swirling wind of up to 55 mph, fire rolled from block to block in abandoned Los Alamos Thursday, burning scores of homes down to their foundations in the town where the atomic bomb was built.

Firefighters rushed to save houses as orange flames and billowing smoke rose over the town. Whole neighborhoods were reduced to ruins, with everything from trailers to mansions going up in smoke in a blaze that had been set by the government to clear away brush in the wilderness but raged out of control over the weekend.

The wildfire first reached Los Alamos Wednesday — forcing the evacuation of the entire town — and exploded in size from 3,700 acres to 18,000 Thursday, fanned by blow-torch wind so strong it made parked cars sway.

"I can't believe how many homes are gone," said Don Shainin, a fire battalion commander from Albuquerque who came to Los Alamos to help.

At the Los Alamos nuclear-weapons laboratory, flames scorched a research building, rolled over concrete bunkers containing high explosives, and came within 300 yards of a plutonium storage facility. But lab officials insisted that dangerous materials were protected in fireproof facilities strong enough to withstand a crash of a 747 jetliner.

"We can assure the country and New Mexico that our nuclear materials are safe," said Energy Secretary Bill Richardson, a former New Mexico congressman.

Meanwhile Thursday, the National Park Service superintendent who ordered the brush-clearing fire that has raged out of control was placed on leave while officials investigate.

Roy Weaver, the head of the Banderlier National Monument, has taken responsibility for ordering the "controlled" burn, saying he thought conditions had been just right for the park's yearly practice of clearing brush.

The fire was set on May 4 by the National Park Service to clear brush near Banderlier National Monument,

For a few dollars more

CARMEL, Calif. (AP) — Clint Eastwood says he wasn't given enough time to comply with a request to make his Mission Ranch Hotel more handicapped-accessible.

The actor and former mayor of this seaside town is fighting a lawsuit filed three years ago by a hotel guest who uses a wheelchair.

The guest claims Eastwood didn't comply quickly enough to her complaint that the parking lot and at least one bathroom were in violation of the federal Americans With Disabilities Act.

Eastwood

Eastwood is supporting a bill that would give business owners 90 days to comply with the act.

He said his beef isn't with the law but with trial lawyers who are "extorting" businesses with unwarranted lawsuits over the act.

Eastwood bought the $4 million hotel and spent $6.7 million to renovate it but will not spend the $7,000 or so it would take to fix at least the women's bathroom in the hotel office, said Paul Rein, lawyer for Diane Zum Brunnen, who brought the lawsuit.

"I had no idea he was going to use this case to try and emasculate the law," Rein said.

Stern instruction

NEW YORK (AP) — Isaac Stern, who has coached budding violinists for decades, took on a new group of students — school administrators.

The 43 administrators, many of them touching violins for the first time, played the role of students Wednesday at Carnegie Hall.

"Just put the violin on the shoulder, voompl!" Stern said, lifting his own instrument to the proper position.

By the end of the squawky half-hour lesson, the superintendents had participated in several rounds of "Ach, du Lieber Augustin," a German folk song. Stern played most of it, with the superintendents joining in on the last two notes of each line.

Interim Schools Chancellor Harold O. Levy persuaded Stern, 79, to give the superintendents a lesson in hopes they would place a higher priority on music instruction for students.

Stern said he was thrilled to participate and called music "the biggest key I know to a truly educated life."

City eyes 'over-packed' ballot

A full plate during the general election worries those who say various projects may feel the bite.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

The potential for a packed general election looks unfavorable for local projects, say councilors and city leaders, as the Iowa City City Council prepares to put the First Avenue extension grading and library-expansion proposals on a referendum.

The council will discuss when this will occur during the May 15 council work session.

"The more things that appear at the same time ... the chances of them passing are less likely," said Mayor Ernie Lehman.

Councilor Connie Champion said she is concerned there may be too many projects on the general-election ballot. A proposal for a new county jail may also be added to the ballot, which will likely include the First Avenue extension and library expansion projects, she said.

"There are so many things on the ballot in November, it's easy to get it lost in the shuffle," Champion said, adding that she can see the possibility of all three projects being voted down.

Champion said she prefers to hold a special election before November for the First Avenue extension project because it will still be "fresh" in people's minds, but, she said, she is open to the decision being made during the general election.

The project would extend First Avenue by 1,600 feet to connect with Captain Irish Parkway.

A city-wide special election costs approximately $20,000, Lehman said.

The council was faced with the choice of dropping the extension project from its Capital Improvements Plan or letting voters decide its fate after being presented with a petition that had enough valid signatures to stop the grading project. The extension was defeated by approximately 4,977 voters in a 1997 referendum.

According to city ordinance, the city must wait two years before taking further action on a proposal that has been put to a referendum, said Councilor Steven Kanner, who is against the First Avenue extension project.

If the project is voted down a second time, Lehman said, a different councilor will have to take up the cause.

"I do believe it will be built one day," he said. "I've been fighting with this thing for six years, and I'm absolutely not interested in going around with it again."

The library referendum, which the Library Board recommends be put on the Nov. 7 general election, will be difficult to pass because of a sewer- and water-rate increase and property tax increase, said Councilor Mike O'Donnell.

"My guess is the more bond issues we have on the ballot, the more difficult it will be for all of them," said Mark Martin, the president of the library board of trustees. "It would be preferable to have the library referendum by itself, but the board doesn't want to suggest it is more important than any other project."

Plans to expand the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., from its current 47,000 square feet to 80,000 square feet will cost $18.4 million, said Elizabeth Nichols, the library's assistant director.

The expansion into the Lenoch & Cilek building, 130 S. Dubuque St., will cost the public approximately $15.6 million after fund raising and leasing commercial space, she said.

"I don't think the city or Library Board would put it on the ballot if there wasn't a potential for it to pass," Nichols said.

Senate race murky after Giuliani bombshell

The N.Y.C. mayor angrily fights speculation that he's dropping his bid for Senate.

By Beth J. Harpaz
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Mayor Rudolph Giuliani fought off speculation Thursday that he is about to get out of the Senate race because of his prostate cancer, his crumbling marriage and reports of his alleged affairs.

"I made no decision yet to drop out of the Senate race," he insisted at a news conference. "I didn't discuss that with anyone. I didn't say that to anyone."

Leading New York Republicans

said publicly they still support his candidacy against Hillary Rodham Clinton, but behind-the-scenes plans were already being made to back another candidate should the mayor drop out.

On Wednesday, Giuliani announced he and his wife of 16 years, Donna Hanover, are discussing a legal separation. Hanover responded by dropping her own bombshell, alleging that their marital woes began a few years ago over his relationship with a former press aide.

Hanover also said that just as she and the mayor began to reconcile, he took up with yet another woman. Giuliani, 55, has acknowledged a relationship with a healthcare executive, Judith Nathan.

On Thursday, the mayor lashed out at reporters who shouted questions about the alleged affairs.

"Don't you guys have the slightest bit of decency?" he said. "Do you realize you embarrass yourself doing this in the eyes of just about everybody?"

He also reiterated that his Senate run is contingent on his treatment for prostate cancer, which was diagnosed two weeks ago. "I haven't made up my mind if I have the energy and the capacity to run," he said.

He angrily complained about news reports that he is on the verge of abandoning the campaign, calling them "false rumors."

'Real life' comes calling for new grads

GRADUATION

New York, Cortland.

It has been a really good year for placement in the humanities, which Jackson attributes to high turnover in the field.

"It's time for those old guys to go and give those of us in our 20s and 30s a chance," he said.

Some of the best fields right now are those dealing with technology, financial service and retail management, Hurst said.

Starting salaries for recent UI graduates with bachelor degrees are ranging from $25,000-$45,000, she said.

Though students will put on their black caps and gowns for this week's festivities, many don't know what they are going to do with their newly earned degrees.

"I don't have a job lined up yet, but I might go back to school to get my teaching certificate," said graduating senior Josh Wolver. "And if everything fails, there is always construction. That's an area that always needs work, and I wouldn't mind it."

As long as students are proactive in their job searches and diversify their opportunities, the job market is looking really good right now, barring an economic catastrophe, Hurst said.

Some UI students were still searching for a profession at Thursday's job fair at the Radisson Hotel, 2525 N. Dodge St.

"I have no idea what I want to do," said graduating senior Jeremy LeGare, a finance major. "I don't want to start something that I might hate, and that's why I'm going to the job fair."

Travel is another option for the jobless graduate, and parents can still help with payments, said Nickole Lanham, a graduating dance major.

"I don't have a job, yet, but I'm planning on traveling a lot," she said. "I want to go to San Francisco and New York to check out the area."

Last year was also a strong year for graduates, such as those in the UI law school, which had a 99 percent employment rate nine months after graduation, said Karen Klouda, the director of law placement. Similar estimations have been made for this year's law class, she said.

Starting salaries for law students range from $28,000-$175,000, depending on where students go and what type of law they practice, Klouda said.

"Obviously, salaries will be the highest in Chicago and New York at private firms," she said.

Statistically, Iowa comes in second to Illinois with the highest hiring of UI students in the Midwest, which is where most UI graduates stay, according to the Business and Liberal Arts Placement Office's Web site.

Iowa and Illinois "flip-flop" with the highest job placement, Hurst said. It is difficult to predict which state will have the highest placement this year because Iowa worked really hard to keep people in the state, she said.

Fire rips through empty Los Alamos

FIRE

but it burned out of control in the dry, windy weather. A special National Weather Service forecast faxed to the park beforehand said fire-growth conditions were at their highest.

In Los Alamos, fire crews with hand tools and bulldozers worked feverishly to protect homes by clearing away vegetation and cutting firebreaks ahead of the flames. Helicopters dropped water on the blaze, while airplanes bombarded it with pink fire retardant.

County Manager Joe King estimated that 100 homes burned. Rep. Tom Udall, whose district includes Los Alamos, said federal officials estimated 300 to 400.

The number of people evacuated grew Thursday to more than 20,000, with residents to the north and northeast of Los Alamos also fleeing the fire.

"Somebody made a mistake and obviously we have to find out who," Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., said as he visited the fire zone.

"It should never have happened. That's the only thing I can say unless you want me to curse," said Gail Bolger, who was forced out of her mobile home park in Los Alamos to a shelter at a Santa Fe high school.

Whoever made the decision for the deliberate fire "should have known better," she said. "This is the windy season. We have it every year, and I think he should have used his head."

6. The Cross Park Avenue arson

A March 6 fire at 845 Cross Park Ave. claimed the life of Kurt Miller, 20, and injured his wife, Laura. Arson was later ruled to be the cause of the blaze. No one has been charged in connection with the incident.

7. Caucuses

Iowa kicked off the 2000 presidential campaign on Jan. 24. George W. Bush held off a late surge by Steve Forbes to win the Republican race, while Al Gore triumphed by an almost 2-1 margin in the Democratic caucuses.

Officer, teen hurt in shooting

■ A 12-year-old was heading toward his school with a shotgun when he encountered a police officer.

By David A. Lieb
Associated Press

PRAIRIE GROVE, Ark. — A police officer exchanged gunshots with a seventh-grader Thursday as the boy headed toward his junior high school with a shotgun, authorities said. Both were wounded.

The officer, who was assigned part-time to the school, was treated and released from a hospital. The 12-year-old was in stable condition after being shot in the abdomen.

"There's stuff that indicates he was heading back to school," said Police Chief Robin Casey. "I think the good Lord was on our side today. I think he helped us out and prevented any kids from getting hurt and hopefully prevented this kid from dying."

Prairie Grove Superintendent Tom Louks said the boy had skipped school Tuesday and Wednesday after being involved in a dispute Monday. The boy was brought to school by at least one of his parents Thursday but left shortly after classes began, Louks said.

Louks said the boy had not been suspended because of Monday's incident and had not been a discipline problem before.

"I know the boy from church. A nice young man," Louks said.

The superintendent would not say what happened to the boy Monday, but a classmate said she heard that he had been punched. Students said the boy, whose name was not released, was friendly.

"He wasn't violent. We talked about school and stuff," said John Gladwin, 13, who said he has known the boy since kindergarten. "He was a smart guy."

Police said a resident called Thursday morning, concerned that a boy seen walking down a road might have been skipping school. Sgt. Greg Lovett was dispatched from his office at the Prairie Grove Junior High School.

8. Tiger Hawk gets a face lift

On March 23, the UI revealed a new Tiger Hawk, giving the familiar logo its first change in more than 20 years. The move drew criticism from many fans and coaches, and UI officials eventually said the original logo would remain on certain memorabilia and sports uniforms.

9. All the money's gone

Gov. Tom Vilsack Wednesday signed a controversial education bill that has sent the UI administration scrambling to compensate for budget shortfalls. Administrators are not ruling out another hike in tuition and fees; students faced a 6.9 percent increase last year. Currently, improvements to some campus facilities as well as programs aimed at faculty retention are in jeopardy.

10. Blackwell's perfection

On a chilly, sunny April afternoon, UI men's baseball pitcher Chad Blackwell took the mound against Northwestern University with a sub-par 4-7 record. Seven innings, six strikeouts, no balls and no hits later, he had thrown a perfect game — and the first Hawkeye no-hitter since 1979.

House passes massive land bill

■ The $45 billion fund would create and conserve parks and wildlife in every state.

By H. Josef Hebert
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Ignoring complaints the government already owns too much land, the House agreed Thursday to create a $45 billion, 15-year conservation fund to buy parks and open spaces, pay for wildlife protection, and restore environmentally damaged coastal areas.

Despite the overwhelming 315-102 approval in the House, the massive measure faces uncertain prospects in the Senate, where Western property rights advocates have promised to fight it when it comes up for consideration next month.

Republicans were sharply divided, voting 118-93 for the bill. Among Democrats, the vote was 196-8. The two independents split their votes.

The bill is the most ambitious environmental action before the Congress this year. It would commit nearly $3 billion a year over 15 years for a myriad of programs from buying scattered private property within federal parks and rebuilding eroded beaches and coastal wetlands to helping communities set aside land for soccer fields and bike paths.

During two days of debate, supporters of the measure voted down more than a dozen amendments — many offered by property-rights advocates — aimed at reducing the ability of federal and state governments to buy private land. The federal government already owns a third of the country, the critics declared.

A substitute proposal offered by Rep. Mac Thornberry, R-Texas, that would have delayed the spending for five years and added new private property protections was defeated 291-126. He had argued that conservation funding should not be automatically put ahead of defense, education, health care and other important programs.

"What this is about is the federal acquisition of new land," complained Rep. Richard Pombo, R-Calif. Pombo's amendment to slash money for federal land purchases failed 315-109.

Supporters of the bill — including Reps. Don Young, R-Alaska, and Billy Tauzin, R-La., both long-time allies of the property-rights movement — insisted the legislation provides increased protection for landowners, not less.

"This bill doesn't hurt private property," insisted Young, the chairman of the Resources Committee. He compared the legislation, developed during months of negotiations, to a "delicate house of cards" — a balance of political interests that will fall apart if tinkered with. All but a few of the more than 24 amendments offered were defeated.

Hailed by most environmentalists as a long-overdue federal commitment to conservation and preservation of open spaces, the legislation attracted an unusual alliance of conservatives and liberals.

Young, a longtime foe of environmentalists, teamed with Rep. George Miller, D-Calif., to craft the legislation — an alliance that stunned many congressional observers because of the two lawmakers' numerous clashes over environmental protection in the past.

Critics said the bill's broad support — there were 316 co-sponsors at the start of floor debate — stemmed from the large amount of federal dollars being offered to states and local communities. While four states — Alaska, California, Louisiana and Texas — together would share more than $1 billion, every state gets some money — down to landlocked Vermont at $8.9 million.

S.C. flag move pleases NCAA

■ While the NAACP is not satisfied by the state's action, the athletics association says it's reasonable.

By Pete Iacobelli
Associated Press

COLUMBIA, S.C. — The South Carolina Legislature's efforts to remove the Confederate flag from the Statehouse dome may not satisfy the NAACP, but they are apparently good enough for the Southern Conference and the NCAA.

Commissioner Alfred White, whose 12-team league includes four South Carolina schools, had said the Southern Conference would not hold championships in the state until the flag came down. "That is happening," White said Thursday. "The feeling among our chief executives is that the (state's) action seems reasonable."

The NCAA, which last month said it would not bring future championships to South Carolina as long as the flag flew, released a short statement.

"The focus of the NCAA Executive Committee was the flag's presence above the dome of the Statehouse," it said. "We are pleased that the governor and state Legislature have been able to reach agreement on the matter."

NCAA spokesman Wally Renfro said the governing body would not answer questions about the flag.

The South Carolina House Thursday gave final approval to a bill removing the flag from the dome and placing a similar one at a monument to Confederate soldiers on Statehouse grounds. The Senate passed a similar bill in April.

The NAACP said its tourism boycott of the state will continue because the flag will be too prominent at the new location.

Supporters say the flag represents Southern heritage. Opponents say it's a symbol of hatred and slavery.

South Carolina's sports scene has faced constant scrutiny since the NAACP's boycott began Jan. 1.

The New York Knicks pulled out of a pre-playoffs training camp in Charleston; USA Track and Field condemned the flag before the women's Olympic marathon trials in February; tennis star Serena Williams withdrew from the Family Circle Cup tournament in Hilton Head; and the NCAA said that if the flag was not down by mid-August, it would remove the 2002 men's basketball regional from Greenville's Bi-Lo Center.

Judges skeptical as Elián case begins

■ The appellate court judges say it could take weeks to rule on the Cuban boy's fate.

By Russ Bynum
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Three federal appeals judges listened skeptically to both sides in the Elián González case Thursday, questioning whether a 6-year-old boy can comprehend an asylum application and whether it's in his best interest to be raised in a communist country.

With the chants of sidewalk demonstrators audible in the packed courtroom, the judges' persistent questioning of lawyers for the government, Elián's Miami relatives and his father pushed the hearing to an hour and 20 minutes, double its scheduled length.

The panel of the 11th Circuit U.S. Court of Appeals, one step below the Supreme Court, said it would take weeks to decide whether Elián is mature enough to seek asylum despite the father's wishes to take him back to Cuba.

Circuit Judge Charles Wilson, the panel's only Clinton appointee, peppered lawyers for the Miami relatives about the boy's ability to understand complex questions on an asylum application they filed for him.

"I'm sure Elián González is a very bright and intelligent 6-year-old, but he didn't even have the ability to sign his last name on the asylum petition," Wilson said.

Before the government's lawyer could begin stating his case, Circuit Judge J.L. Edmondson fired off "the two problems" he had with the decision to deny Elián an asylum hearing.

Edmondson, a crew-cut Reagan appointee, noted that the boy's great-uncle, Lazáro González, had custody of the child when the asylum application was filed, while his father was still in Cuba. Also, Edmondson seemed particularly worried about Elián's fate in Cuba, twice calling it "a communist, totalitarian state."

Edmondson added that it is not uncommon for courts to rule that the best interests of a child override parental rights. He likened Elián to children whose parents reject medical care for religious reasons.

Abortion a risky procedure at any clinic

The Emma Goldman Clinic in Iowa City is facing its first lawsuit in almost 27 years. After a Waterloo woman claimed to be the victim of complications from a procedure, Emma Goldman risks a court battle over the validity of the patient's complaints.

The clinic has provided health care for women since September 1973, even to women in less-than-ideal financial situations. The clinic offers examinations, information on birth-control devices and many other services involved in maintaining women's health. The mission of the clinic includes the "promotion of participatory health care, informed decision making, client rights, advocacy for women, and expansion and support of women's choices." Among these "choices" is abortion, a procedure also performed by the clinic.

According to the clinic, the patients always have a right to and will be given total information about medical diagnoses, procedures and possible complications involved in taking part in the abortion procedure. Information about medications and their side effects are also given to each patient treated by the Emma Goldman Clinic.

As with any medical procedure, occasional side effects and problems are possible. The patients of the clinic are informed of these and are given the opportunity to make their own informed decisions. The decision to have an abortion was the choice of the woman. When she chose to have the procedure performed, she chose to accept any possible complications or consequences that would result. With the information required by law presented to the patient, the decision made by the plaintiff was a personal one.

For almost three decades, Emma Goldman has been dedicated to providing women with safe abortion services, to provide quality health care that allows every woman to be in control of her body. Emma Goldman strongly affirms every woman's right to make decisions about her own health care. The clinic stands behind its belief that "... All women share one common need — the need for choice." Every choice has certain consequences, and when a woman chooses to take part in the abortion procedure, she needs to recognize the potential side effects and be prepared to deal with them if and when they occur.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Sellers' comments out of line

As I thumbed through the May 10 DI, the article "S1 tequila lands I.C. man in jail" caught my eye. While reading it, I was deeply disappointed and disturbed by the statement made by Iowa City police Lt. Dan Sellers. The statement reads, "If somebody would come up to me like this, I would tell him to get away and play with his own friends. If he pulls the knife out, I would have hit him with something."

Sellers had no standing to make that statement. Apparently, the victim was frightened enough that he reported the incident to police instead of taking matters into his own hands. Whatever happened to "avoid violent behavior" or "get help if someone threatens you"? By saying that he should "get away and play with his own friends," the victim could have infuriated the perpetrator and been the victim of a threatening act of violence. As if that wasn't enough, he goes on to say, "If he pulls out a knife, I would have hit him with something." Maybe a police lieutenant would have hit a person bearing a knife, but the average civilian would be less than prepared to further a confrontation with a man who says he has a knife. In my perspective, Sellers encouraged destructive behavior that could lead to a harmful situation. This is not the type of encouragement that I expect coming from an "officer of the law."

Women can try to avoid trouble

In her letter of April 26, Heather Light declares that "women have the right to dress and act as they choose, and especially to drink, without being raped. When an individual chooses to consume drugs or alcohol, this behavior alone does not give anyone the right to have sex with her." True enough, but Light omits precautions that women can take to avoid trouble. Getting drunk at a fraternity house is not wise. When the Orlando, Fla., Police Department offered handgun training for women, rapes in that city dropped 90 percent. Women deserve respect, but depending on the fox to guard the hen house can lead to the GOP guarding the unborn.

Jeppson was misleading, deceptive

Michael Jeppson (DI, May 9) cleverly attempts to mask his true beliefs while arguing for continued exclusion of gays in the Boy Scouts.

He asserts that homosexuals defy family values by engaging in "sexual activities out of wedlock." For this reason, he continues, homosexuals "cannot teach the ideals this private organization holds ..." Despite perpetuating sexual stereotypes of homosexuals, sexual activity out of wedlock does constitute a violation of tradition family values.

Because Jeppson argues no objection to homosexuality, I propose a simple solution: Allow homosexuals to marry. This obvious solution should appease Jeppson, as homosexuals would no longer be performing sexual activities out of wedlock. But instead of recognizing denial of marriage for homosexuals as the problem, he chose to focus on a symptom caused by this discrimination as a way to promote further discrimination.

I doubt whether Jeppson will like my solution, as I believe he does have a fundamental problem with homosexuality. And I would rather he just said so than engage in a misleading and deceptive argument.

UI again a big hit in national dance festival

The university's "The Poetry of Physics" has been invited to the national festival.

By T.J. Besler
The Daily Iowan

The UI dance department has once again triumphed in the regional American College Dance Festival.

A student production of choreography by Assistant Professor Charlotte Adams has won an invitation to the National College Dance Festival of the American College Dance Festival Association. It will be held May 18-20 at the University of Maryland, College Park.

Adam's choreography to music by Rossini, "The Poetry of Physics," which premiered in November 1999 at the UI Dance Company's annual Dance Gala in Hancher Auditorium, was one of 24 dances in the country invited to the national festival.

Adam's says that her choreography challenges her students while still keeping it fun.

"The choreography is very physically demanding and aerobic; however, because it is a comical piece, the students are also having a lot of fun with the humor of the piece," she said.

Twenty-four UI student dancers performed at the regional festival March 15-18 at Wichita State University, both in Adams' pieces and in choreography by graduate students E.E. Balcos and Simone Ferros.

UI sophomore Tarek Halaby will be performing at the national festival. He says that the biggest thrill is the performing itself.

"For me, the biggest reward is just being able to perform," he said. "It's such a rush to be on stage, knowing that people are there to see you and to witness what you can do. Whether the audience likes it or not doesn't matter — just having the opportunity is wonderful."

Alessandra Hershkowitz, a UI junior, says the biggest thrill for her is seeing the audience's reaction.

NATIONAL COLLEGE DANCE FESTIVAL

When: May 18-20

Where: University of Maryland, College Park

"Because I love what I am doing so much, it is a big thrill for me to see how the audience reacts to it, and hopefully they are also enjoying what I am doing," she said.

However, Halaby admits that while he loves performing in front of an audience and has a lot of fun doing it, there is also a lot of hard work involved.

"The dance we are doing demands a lot of me physically," he said. "There's a lot of running, jumping and pushing each other around, so it's hard work. All semester, I have had to try to find ways to keep my endurance and to breathe correctly so that I could sustain myself through the entire piece. But the fun makes up for it."

Although Adams hasn't been at the UI for an extremely long amount of time, she says she has enjoyed the university and the students whom she has been able to work with.

"All the students are very talented here," she said. "Not only that, but there's a lot of audience support as well. And of course we have great venues, such as Hancher, in which we are able to perform. So we have a lot to be proud of here, and this latest accomplishment will expand it on a national level."

The UI's strong showing at the regional festival continues a remarkable run of success. In the 1990s, dance productions from the dance department were selected for every regional festival gala concert, and UI dances were showcased at all but one of the biennial national festivals.

Rimes suing father and former co-manager

DALLAS (AP) — LeAnn Rimes says her father and her former co-manager took more than $7 million from her over five years.

The teen-age country crooner, in a lawsuit filed May 2 in Dallas County District Court, claims Wilbur C. Rimes and Lyle Walker funneled money away from her personally and from the company set up in 1995 to manage her finances.

The lawsuit asks for unspecified damages because attorneys don't know how much money is gone, attorney Tom Rhodus told the Dallas Morning News in a story published on Thursday.

"It would appear that her father didn't always act in a fatherly way to her," Rhodus said Wednesday. He is representing Rimes, 17, and her mother, Belinda Rimes.

Brad Rhorer, a Baton Rouge, La.-based attorney representing the singer's father, called the accusations "completely false" and said his client's "compensation was fair."

Walker's lawyer said the singer's company owes the ex-manager money.

"Lyle Walker is the one who has been wronged here," Keith Trent said. "This effort will not be successful."

The lawsuit claims Walker and Wilbur Rimes charged unreasonable fees and manipulated LeAnn Rimes Entertainment Inc. for their own gain, at times getting as much as 30 percent of the star's income.

The singer, whose parents divorced last year, lives with her mother in the Dallas area.

Rhodus said accountants hired by the singer's mother last fall to investigate the two men discovered that the pair had received more than $8 million in royalties — $5 million more than did LeAnn Rimes.

Busting Bobby Brown

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Singer Bobby Brown was back in a Florida jail Thursday after being arrested by customs agents in New Jersey on an outstanding warrant accusing him of violating probation in a drunken-driving case.

Brown, who owns a home in Mendham, N.J., with Whitney Houston, his wife, was arrested Wednesday at the Newark, N.J., airport after arriving from the Bahamas.

The warrant was put out last June, when Brown's probation officer reported that cocaine showed up in a urine test, that Brown refused to take another test and that he didn't return from a trip to Beverly Hills, Calif., on time.

The original case developed after Brown smashed his wife's sports car into a condominium sign.

No date for a court appearance was set.

Blazers only one game away

Portland takes a 3-0 lead in its series against Utah.

By Tim Korte
Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — Arvydas Sabonis scored 22 points and Steve Smith had 21 as the Portland Trail Blazers beat the Utah Jazz 103-84 Thursday night for a 3-0 lead in the Western Conference semifinals.

Bonzi Wells scored 10 of his 19 points in the fourth quarter to help the Blazers hold off a second-half Utah surge, leaving the Jazz one game from being on the losing end of the first best-of-seven series sweep in franchise history.

Game 4 is here Sunday and the Jazz will try to become the first team in NBA history to rally from a 3-0 deficit.

The Jazz, who played for the NBA title in 1997 and 1998, trailed by 21 points in the second quarter but trimmed the margin to 55-49 at half-time and then tied it three times in the third quarter.

But Utah never led in the second half. And while Karl Malone scored 28 points, he had only two in the fourth quarter and the Jazz were outscored 28-14 in the final period.

Rasheed Wallace scored 17 points for the Blazers, who held Utah to 40 percent shooting.

Jeff Hornacek, whose 14-year NBA career will end if the Jazz lose Sunday, played like his career was at stake, scoring 24 points on 9-of-17 shooting. Bryon Russell added 18 points for the Jazz.

The Jazz had beaten Portland in 10 of the previous 13 playoff games in Salt Lake City, but the Blazers weren't intimidated.

In fact, the Blazers, who beat the Jazz in six games last year in the Western Conference semifinals, have made it look easy this year.

Portland has started fast in each game, taking advantage of size and

Hanks hurls Hawks to round 2

The Iowa softball team will face No. 2 Michigan tonight at 5 p.m. at Pearl Field.

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

Big Ten Pitcher of the Year Kristi Hanks stood on the mound staring at Big Ten Player of the Year Brooke Siebel. With runners on first and second and one out, the Wildcats looked poised to dent Iowa's 1-0 lead.

After all, Northwestern's Siebel tattooed the Hawkeyes for two home runs and five RBIs last weekend.

No problem. Hanks sent Siebel back to the dugout, recording one of her eight strikeouts in Iowa's 2-0 win over Northwestern, Thursday night.

"I told myself to relax and that I've been in this situation before," said Hanks. "My off-speed was working a lot tonight. It's something we don't usually use that much, but it seemed to work with Northwestern last time. We added my off-speed and my change up and it worked. There was a lot of excitement out there tonight, especially with the big ol' crowd. Everyone was getting into it with me."

Iowa got on the board in the first. Kristin Johnson walked and came all the way from first to score on Alicia Gerlach's RBI double to the left centerfield fence. The crowd, dugout and Iowa coach Gayle Blevins all jumped in the air.

"I slowed up towards second because if (the centerfielder) would have dove she might have caught it, so I had to stop," Johnson said. "I ended up making it home. I saw (Blevins) jumping. It was fun."

When Iowa gets ahead, it's pretty tough for opponents to come back, but the Wildcats were looking for their second come-from-behind win against Iowa this year. They had their chance in the top of the third.

With runners on first and second and no outs, Hanks got Erin Jancic to

Source: Knight may be asked to step down

By Steve Wilstein
Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Bob Knight's coaching career at Indiana is in jeopardy with trustees considering asking him to resign, a high-ranking school official told The Associated Press.

The official, speaking on condition of anonymity after talking to several university trustees, said the decision could be "tantamount to dismissal."

University trustees will meet Sunday, apparently to decide whether to expand an investigation into Knight, who has been accused of physical and verbal abuse during his 29 years as Indiana's basketball coach. The probe is expected to be completed by mid-June.

In one of the latest damaging allegations to emerge, Knight is accused of throwing a vase near a secretary 12 years ago, shattering it against an office wall.

In another, the Chicago Sun-Times reported Thursday that Knight attacked former assistant coach Ron Felling last Nov. 30 after overhearing him talk about problems with the program. The two had to be separated. Felling left the team five days later.

A third incident surfaced when

With all the things he's done for this university, and the kinds of players he's produced, I can't imagine that this hullabaloo will amount to anything.

— Edgar Williams,
Indiana's former vice president and chief financial officer.

Indianapolis television station WRTV reported Thursday that Knight attacked sports information director Kit Klingelhoffer 10 years ago during a confrontation over a news release. Klingelhoffer was knocked out, the station reported.

Klingelhoffer would not comment when contacted Thursday by The Associated Press.

Despite the mounting evidence against Knight, some people at the school believe he will keep his job, and many of his former players still support him.

"With all the things he's done for this university, and with his record over the years and the kinds of players he's produced, I can't imagine that this hullabaloo will amount to anything," said Edgar Williams, Indiana's former vice president and chief financial officer and Knight's close friend throughout his tenure.

University vice president Christopher Simpson denied the trustees are considering asking Knight to resign.

"They have not reached a conclusion. To suggest otherwise is incorrect," Simpson told the AP on Thursday.

If the Knight investigation is expanded, it could include the accusation about the vase, which reveals as much about him as it does the campus culture that has loved, feared and tolerated him for three decades.

Venting his fury at the athletic director at the time, the late Ralph Floyd, Knight allegedly grabbed a vase in the office of Floyd's administrative assistant and flung it across the tiny room, shattering the glass on a framed picture.

Pieces of glass and porcelain flew in front of the administrative assistant, Jeanette Hartgraves, as she recoiled in terror.

"I hadn't been here too long and I didn't know what to do," said

Baseball team fights for Big Ten

Iowa will travel to Michigan this weekend, and hopes to clinch a spot in the Big Ten Tournament.

By Greg Wallace
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa baseball team will have a divided focus this weekend.

One focus will be on its four-game series with Michigan, in Ann Arbor, Mich., the final series of the Big Ten series.

The other focus, equally strong, will be on the outcome of the Penn State-Northwestern series, in Evanston, Ill.

Iowa (17-33, 9-15 Big Ten) trails the Wildcats by two games for the sixth and final spot in the Big Ten Tournament. Even if Iowa sweeps Michigan (18-30-1, 8-16 Big Ten), the Hawkeyes must hope for the Nittany Lions and Wildcats to split the series to qualify for the tournament.

Iowa holds the tiebreaker, having beaten the Wildcats in the season series 3-1.

"It would have been a lot better if we'd had everyone healthy all year," coach Scott Broghamer said. "But that's not the way it's turned out. The kids are still giving us an opportunity to get into the Big Ten tournament, and I think that's a real positive thing."

Michigan, for all intents and purposes, is playing for pride. After winning the Big Ten Tournament last year, the Wolverines are all but eliminated from post-season play.

Penn State is a different story. The Nittany Lions are vying for the top seed and hosting privileges for the conference tournament, May 18-21. They trail Minnesota by 2.5 games for first place.

Third baseman Ian Mattiace said that he feels no impetus to win, despite the must-win atmosphere that will surround the Hawkeyes this weekend.

"It's like Shaq said, 'Pressure's not knowing where your next meal's coming from,'" Mattiace said. "We're just playing baseball. I don't feel any pressure."

Broghamer will use his two strongest starting pitchers, junior

A relaxed Love in difficult winds shares the lead

Tiger Woods shot 5-over-par, as Davis Love III and Blaine McCallister share the lead.

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — Winless in his last 53 starts on the PGA Tour, Davis Love III decided to stop being so obsessed with beating Tiger Woods or anyone else and start concentrating on playing good golf.

The first round of the Byron Nelson Classic on Thursday proved to be quite a test.

On a brutally tough day of hot, whipping winds that bewildered Woods, Love holed a 40-foot chip and a couple of 30-foot putts for a 4-under-par 66 on the TPC at Las Colinas to share the lead with Blaine McCallister.

Among those two strokes back were two-time U.S. Open champion Lee Janzen — no stranger to tough conditions — and Sergio Garcia. Masters champion Vijay Singh was in a large group at 69.

"I hung in there real good. I did everything I could to shoot a good score," Love said.

It took everything he had.

Gusts were up to 38 mph and blew sideways, the kind of wind that makes fairways look like tiny strips of land and requires near flawless contact to keep the ball on line. The better proof was on the scorecards.

Only 17 players managed to break par on Las Colinas or Cottonwood Valley, compared to 103 scores under 70 in the first round a year ago.

Woods, who opened with a 61 last year, was 12 shots worse this time. Baffled by approach shots that sailed over the green, he took a double bogey from the bunker on No. 14 and played the last five holes in five over for a 73.

It matched his worst score in relation to par this year, and put him in

Finally: A DI sportswriter selects the year's best

Greg Wallace

It's my last day at the DI. I'd like to stay here forever, but there's something called graduation — apparently they're making me do it on Saturday. Over the past year and a half I've covered and seen more than my share of amazing stories and incredible feats from Hawkeye athletes.

It's been a privilege to cover them all as I rose from a women's gymnastics reporter to the assistant sports editor and baseball, football and wrestling beat writer. I, like every other sportswriter, have my favorite people and moments. If you don't mind, I'm going to share a few of them with you.

Best interview: It's a tie between Matt Bowen and Alex Dvorsky. Bowen, the sixth-round pick of the St. Louis Rams, always managed to fill up my tape recorder with the best insights on an Iowa football team devoid of them. And Dvorsky deserves a mention for crafting the most original quotes this side of Mark Grace, including, "They're the kind of team that pops in a dip and swings from the hip," and "We were hitting piss-missiles all over the place."

Best individual interview: I will never forget Jay Bickford's outpouring following the final football game of the 1-10 Iowa season. Bickford, an offensive lineman, talked at length about anything and everything, including archival Iowa State: "The only time they can fill up their crappy 50,000-seat stadium is when we play there," and his future plans: "I'm staying in Iowa and becoming a history teacher. When I'm 50, I'm gonna be that bald guy with a beer belly in the stands, screaming, "GOOOO Hawks!!"

Proof positive that offensive linemen get a bad rap. I had some favorite moments, too. Not all of them are Iowa-related, per se, but they were all amazing. Why top 9? Well, why not?

9. Mikkel Brown's moment of fame: Most of America wouldn't be able to pick Iowa cornerback Mikkel Brown out of a lineup. But ask most of the football fans, and they'd remember Brown getting run over by Nebraska quarterback Scott Frost on his way to the end zone Sept. 4. The highlight was a staple of end-of-the-year highlight films.

8. Iowa vs. UNI baseball: This 1999 game was the most exciting I have ever covered. The 17-16, 11-inning game featured Iowa blowing a 15-9 lead in the sixth inning before rallying for the win.

7. Cubs vs. Expos, August 1st, 1999: OK, so this has no relevant Iowa connections. But I was in Chicago, covering the Big Ten football meetings, and new sports editor Mike Kelly, former sports editor Wayne Drehs, and I took in a game. In between beers, we saw Sammy Sosa's 41st home run and Mark Grace's 200th career hit. The Cubs lost, but what else is new?

6. Doug Schwab's third-place match at the 2000 NCAA wrestling championships: After 141-pound Doug Schwab lost in the 2000 NCAA quarterfinals, there would have been every reason for him to roll over and die. But he came out in his third-place match against Clarion's Mark Angle with every intent of ripping Angle's leg off, throwing him to his back within 30 seconds and forcing him to default due to an injured knee two minutes later.

5. Eric Juergens wins NCAA title: Juergens' takedown of Iowa State's Cody Sanderson in overtime at the 2000 NCAA wrestling championships gave Iowa its only champion, and helped clinch the Hawkeyes' sixth-straight NCAA wrestling title.

4. Iowa beats No. 1 UConn in Madison Square Garden: OK, OK, so I didn't cover this one. (Outgoing DI sports editor Megan Manfull took all the good assignments.) Just kidding, Meg — I watched this one in the opulent DI newsroom lounge. But it was an upset of Goliath proportions nonetheless, and deserves mention.

3. Wes Hand defeats Brock Lesnar at Minnesota: Going into this match Feb. 20, no one thought Hand had a chance against the mammoth Gopher heavyweight. But after a stunning throw put Lesnar on his back in the first period, Hand held on for the stunning upset. He should have defeated Lesnar in St. Louis for the NCAA title, but lost due to poor refereeing and a lost coin flip in double overtime that allowed Lesnar to escape for the win.

2. Iowa wrestling wins NCAA's for the sixth year in a row: Before the final day of the NCAA wrestling championships in St. Louis, fellow writer Jeremy Schnitker and I conceded that Iowa had no chance of overcoming the 10-point deficit to Iowa State that faced Iowa. But a determined performance in the consolation and a little help gave the Hawks their sixth-straight title. They showed what Iowa wrestling is all about.

1. Chad Blackwell's perfect game: They say that watching a perfect game is a once-in-a-lifetime experience. Chad Blackwell gave me that experience April 29, when he pitched a perfect game against Northwestern in a seven-inning contest. He threw only 69 pitches and had one three-ball count. It was a thing of wonder, and my favorite moment as a DI sportswriter.

This place has been a blast, and has proved my theory that being a sportswriter is the best job on Earth. But before I leave town, I have one question.

Kirk Ferentz, are you sure Ryan Loftin gave that playbook back?

Hawks offer coaching job to Izzo

■ A newspaper report said Tom Izzo was offered a $15 million deal to coach the Atlanta Hawks.

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Hawks have offered their head coaching job to Tom Izzo, who led Michigan State to this year's NCAA championship, according to a newspaper report.

The Atlanta Journal-Constitution reported today that the Hawks have offered Izzo a five-year contract worth more than $15 million and expect a decision by the end of the week.

Hawks general manager Pete Babcock said the team would not comment "on any phase of our coaching search."

Michigan State spokesman John Lewandowski said Izzo was on a cruise with his wife Lupe and daughter Raquel, and would not return until Sunday.

"Tom said they had expressed some interest," Spartans assistant coach Stan Heath told the Detroit Free Press. Heath said he spoke Wednesday with Izzo. "But he didn't say that's what he wanted to do.

"I don't think there's much there. I think it's all smoke and mirrors because it's been business as usual around here. If it would have been serious, he would have brought us all in and had a meeting or something."

Lewandowski said as far as he knew, the Hawks had not sought permission from Michigan State to interview Izzo.

Lenny Wilkens resigned as coach of the Hawks on April 24 after a 28-54 season.

Izzo, 45, received a raise to $1.1 million a season, plus bonuses, from Michigan State after winning the school's first national title in 21 years. He has a five-year roll-over contract that renews itself each year.

Izzo has a 120-48 record in five seasons as head coach. If he accepted the job, he would be the second college to coach to win an NCAA title and leave the next season for the NBA. Former Kansas coach Larry Brown is the other.

The newspaper also said the Hawks have cooled on former Pistons guard Isiah Thomas as a coaching candidate.

Gosper becomes daughter's torch relay run

LONDON (AP) — Australia's senior IOC official saw nothing wrong with his daughter's prominent role in the Olympic torch relay, saying it was her right to carry the flame and that he was "astounded by the drama."

Kevan Gosper faced accusations of nepotism and cronyism after his 11-year-old daughter, Sophie, became the first Australian to run with the torch in Wednesday's flame-lighting ceremony in Greece.

A 15-year-old Australian-Greek student, Yianna Souleles, had been expected to be the first Australian to carry the torch, but Gosper's daughter was a late selection.

Iowa track team pumped to host Big Tens

Iowa looks to improve on its eighth-place finish at the Big Ten Indoor meet.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's track team likes performing in front of a home at Cretzmeyer Track in Iowa City — it showed last week when the team won the Twilight Invitational at home.

So when the Hawkeyes host this year's Big Ten Outdoor Championships in two weeks, don't be surprised to find some smiles on their faces and some hop in their step.

"It's going to be real exciting," freshman Tony Leick said of having the meet at home. "Being a freshman, it will be a great experience and should help us be loose — having the home crowd."

Matt Holst/The Daily Iowan

Iowa discus thrower Jeremy Allen will try and qualify for the NCAA Championships in the discus this weekend.

The Hawkeyes always seem to do better in outdoor Big Ten meets than they do indoor. Last year, after placing seventh at the indoor meet the Hawkeyes came back to place second in the outdoor meet.

Iowa placed eighth at this year's indoor meet, and junior Jeremy Allen said he would like to see his team place anywhere from third down this year.

"We can place anywhere from third to sixth," Allen said. "It all depends on who steps up and how many guys have big meets."

Last week's Twilight meet saw Russ Peterson step up and provisionally qualify for the NCAA Outdoor Championships in the 400-meter hurdles. According to Leick, Iowa could have some more guys like Peterson step up at the Big Ten meet.

"I think Peterson can have another big week," Leick said. "Also guys like Scott Williamson and Tony Branch, now that he's had a couple meets under his belt, could do good."

This weekend, the men are traveling to the Wisconsin Invitational to try to get some more NCAA provisional qualifiers. One performance to highlight that meet will be Jeremy Allen in the discus.

Hawkeye women strive to overcome injuries

The Hawkeyes will be looking to hit on all cylinders at the Big Ten Championships.

By Robert Yarborough
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's track team is limping to the finish, but there is no loss of determination.

The 2000 Big Ten Outdoor Championships are being held at the Cretzmeyer track on May 19-21. After finishing ninth a season ago, the Hawkeyes are looking to finish the season on a strong note.

"It is pretty obvious to everybody that we could have had a better season this year," freshman Sarah Steffen said. "A lot of both our top sprinters and distance runners have had some injuries, but there is nothing you can do. You have to keep on moving on and getting better."

Iowa is trying to cope with the loss of its top distance runner Sarah Arens who went down with a strained ligament at the Drake Relays and also a recurring strained groin by sprinter Lakeya Boatright.

Last weekend, Boatright proved that she is up to the challenge of competing with arguably her best performance ever as an Iowa Hawkeye. Boatright won the 100 and 200 meter dash with personal bests for the team. For her last competition, the senior is hoping to go out with a bang.

"I would really like to be competitive and possibly have a chance at winning the 200," Boatright said. "That would be my ultimate goal. However, I will be satisfied knowing that I ran the best I can."

Senior Paula Ruen and juniors Colleen Prendergast and Mandi Beck are among the other Hawkeye athletes that will be gunning for individual titles, as well as achieving qualifying times for the NCAA Championships. Ruen has provisionally qualified in the 110 meter hurdles and Mandi Beck is looking to do the same.

Among the contenders for the title include defending Big Ten champion Purdue, who won last year's competition when it took first-place in Indiana. Wisconsin and Illinois also look to contend for the title. Iowa coach James Grant said that he will be happy if the Hawkeyes can finish in the top six.

Finals week no hinderance to Hawkeye rowers

The Hawkeyes compete in the NCAA Regionals in Oakridge Tenn. Saturday

By Molly Thomas
The Daily Iowan

While many Iowa students are finishing up with the most stressful week of the year, the Iowa women's rowing team has been trying to take it easy.

Final exam week was a strong concern of coach Mandi Kowal as her team prepared for its most important regatta yet the NCAA regionals in Oakridge, Tenn. on Saturday.

"I don't think that the team has let their exams get in the way of their practice," Kowal said. "They've been in great spirits."

We've had a really good two weeks."

The Hawkeyes will face a 20-team field in Oakridge, including many of the same teams they faced at the Big Ten Championships. Kowal said she'd like Iowa to upset some of those higher ranked teams this weekend.

From the regional meets across the country, ten teams will qualify for the NCAA championships. The regatta's winner will get an automatic bid to nationals, and a regional advisory committee will decide which other teams will attend the meet.

"I am expecting every one of our boats to medal," Kowal said. "We are ready — now we need to do the work."

In order for the entire team to qualify for nationals, the Hawkeyes must win the regatta or get an at-large bid. Otherwise, their only chance is to qualify their Varsity 8+ boat for the competition. The Varsity 8+ is the only individual boat able to qualify for NCAA's.

All three of the boats, the Varsity 8+, second Varsity 8+, and Varsity 4+, are ranked in the top five of the region. According to Varsity 8+ rower Meghan Martin, Iowa's goal since the beginning of the season was to make it to nationals as a team.

"We are ready to show people what Iowa is about," Martin said. "I hope that we can come off the water when we are done with a good feeling that we raced the best we could. After we do that, it is out of our hands."

Kowal said she would like to leave Oakridge with the feeling that the team earned itself a good position to get into the NCAA championships. She said she feels that the team is well prepared for competition, and ready to step up and take action.

"It is now or never with this regatta," Kowal said. "They know what they have to do to get there and now they have to get out there to do it. It is time for them to perform."

The Hawkeyes will face some tough competition in Oakridge, but Kowal thinks the team has the talent to perform better than the rest of the field. Kowal said the team has rowed a lot faster and better over the past two weeks than it did at Big Tens.

Hawkeye women's tennis off to Malibu

■ The Hawkeyes face No. 32 LSU in the opening round of the NCAA Tournament.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

Last season the Iowa women's tennis team traveled to the NCAA tournament not knowing what to expect. They wound up winning two games and making it to the Sweet 16 for the first time in school history.

This season coach Paul Wardlaw hopes his team's experience from last year will give them an advantage.

"The reality is how different teams deal with the pressure," said Wardlaw. "The better teams are the ones who know the NCAA and how to handle it."

The Hawkeyes, who finished the regular season at 10-12, begin first round play at the 2000 NCAA Tennis Championships today against Louisiana State in Malibu, Calif.

Wardlaw did not know much about the Tigers before they were matched with the Hawkeyes, but said they will definitely be a tough match. The Tigers compete in the SEC, which Wardlaw said is one of the toughest tennis conferences in the nation. LSU finished the regular season ranked No. 30 in the nation, and brings a 14-10 record into today's action. The Hawkeyes enter the match ranked No. 42 in the nation. Wardlaw stressed the match will be even.

"Last year taught us that rankings don't mean a thing," Wardlaw said.

Players do not believe the rankings tell the entire story, either.

"We played a very hard schedule and are used to playing good teams," said Toni Neykova. "We just do not care what the other team is ranked." During their first ever trip to the NCAA tournament in 1999, the unheralded Hawkeyes upset two higher seeds, Florida State and Notre Dame.

Iowa's portion of the draw also includes intrastate rival Drake, which opens up against the host school, Pepperdine. While the Hawkeyes do not have much experience against the Wave, they do have the edge on the Bulldogs. Iowa dismantled Drake at the Rec Building earlier this year. Wardlaw said if Iowa survives LSU, they will most likely play Pepperdine.

"We got a good draw in the fact we open up with a No. 32," said Wardlaw, "but then the next round we will have to face a No. 6."

Iowa will have two advantages going for them should they once again return to the Sweet 16. Malibu will offer perfect playing conditions and it is also the site of the finals, which means Iowa would be very familiar with the facilities, having played two matches there.

Players are excited about the trip to Malibu as well.

"We got a great draw," said Shera Wiegler. "I think the odds are in our favor."

Wiegler, a native of Bell Canyon, Calif., will be busy on her trip home. She and doubles partner Neykova also qualified for the NCAA doubles finals, which will be held beginning May 22 with the championships being held on May 26.

The duo finished the season ranked first in the Big Ten and No. 21 in the country. However, Neykova said the ranking was lower because they did not defeat anyone better than they were.

Top-seeded Agassi ousted in Italian Open

■ Andre Agassi failed to find his "next level" and was upset by Dominik Hrbaty.

By Victor Simpson
Associated Press

ROME — Top-ranked Andre Agassi failed to raise his game and find that "other level" Thursday, falling in straight sets to hard-hitting Dominik Hrbaty in the third round of the Italian Open.

The American lost 6-4, 6-4 to the No. 15 Hrbaty in just over an hour, drawing disapproving whistles from the capacity center court crowd at the Foro Italico. A double fault on match point seemed to sum up Agassi's futility.

"If a match goes like this a couple weeks from now, it's a big problem," Agassi said, looking ahead to May 29 and defending his championship in the French Open.

"He played too well, and closed me out," Agassi said of Hrbaty, after earlier saying, "I feel like I had another level there waiting for me."

Hrbaty set the pace throughout and hit aces and service winners that kept Agassi from getting back in the match.

"I probably could have changed it up a little bit more," Agassi acknowledged, "but he was hitting it with conviction and hitting it pretty consistently."

Ninth-seeded Lleyton Hewitt, a 19-year-old Australian rising quickly in the rankings, moved into the quarterfinals with a 7-6 (6), 2-6, 6-3 victory over No. 7 Thomas Enqvist.

Also moving into Friday's quarterfinals was No. 3 seed Magnus Norman, who defeated Andrei Medvedev 7-6 (4), 6-1.

Brand, Francis share rookie award

■ Elton Brand and Steve Francis are the third pair in NBA history to share Rookie of the Year honors.

By Nancy Armour
Associated Press

CHICAGO — When Elton Brand and Steve Francis talked to each other this week, their conversation went something like a game of hot potato.

"You're going to get it."

"No, YOU'RE going to get it."

Relax, guys, you both got it.

Brand and Francis, the first two picks in last summer's draft, were co-winners of the NBA's Rookie of the Year Award Thursday.

It's only the third time two rookies have shared the honor. Jason Kidd and Grant Hill were co-winners in 1994-95, and Dave Cowens and Geoff Petrie shared in 1970-71.

"Any rookie will tell you they want to be the sole winner, but I was going up against the No. 1 pick and it's tough to beat him out," Francis said.

Brand said, "I have a part of it, a part of history. You can't be disappointed about winning rookie of the year. Even if it's co-winners..."

Brand said he also was sharing the award with his mother, Daisy, who moved to Chicago with him and attended all but one of his games. He surprised his mother with flowers and gave her a kiss after accepting the award.

"Without my mom, it would have been a lot tougher," Brand said. "At 21 years old, it helps having your mom in the area."

Brand and Francis each received 58 of a possible 121 votes from a panel of sportswriters and broadcasters. Lamar Odom of the Los Angeles Clippers received three votes, and Andre Miller of the Cleveland Cavaliers got two.

Brand is the second Bulls player to win the rookie award. Michael Jordan won in 1984-85.

Purdue powers to top in first round of NCAAAs

By Rusty Miller Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — These are uncharted waters for Purdue and also for the Big Ten.

Led by the Boilermakers and freshman Kari Damron, the conference came up big Thursday, the first day of the NCAA women's East Regional at Ohio State's Scarlet Course.

No northern school — let alone a member of the Big Ten — has even finished in the top four in the NCAA finals since the tournament originated in 1982. But Purdue served notice that this might be the year that string ends.

"We won the conference championship, the first in Purdue history," Damron said after a 4-under-par 68 that featured a course-record eight birdies. "We're coming in here with a lot of confidence and that's something we lacked at times during the year. This helps us a lot today, knowing we're playing against Duke and LSU because they're some of the strongest teams in the nation."

The Boilermakers shot a 295 to take a four-stroke lead after the first round of the 54-hole regional that features several national contenders.

"Obviously, the 68 from Kari was the ball-carrier for us," said Purdue coach Devon Brause, the Big Ten's coach of the year this spring. "You feel good anytime you can break 300 on this golf course because it's so tough. We still need a little more consistency through the lineup."

Damron bunched three birdies in a row on the front side and then added four straight on the back nine.

"I pretty much made all of my putts," she said. "My irons were OK. I wasn't staking them, but if I hit it to 30 feet, I'd just say, 'This one is going in.' And it would go in."

Three other Big Ten schools — host Ohio State, Northwestern and Michigan State — shared second place with Central Florida, at 299.

Despite the conference's strong play, the early northern assault doesn't mean much. The East Regional is one of two qualifiers. The top 11 teams and half of the six individual players qualify for the national championships May 24-27 at the Sunriver Resort in Sunriver, Ore.

fly out to deep centerfield. The Santa Fe, Texas, fooled Siebel and Jenn Schull to retire the side.

"We used Hanks effectively today. In terms of mixing her pitches and keeping a lot of really fine hitters at bay," Blevins said. "That's key. When you look back at our series, all the runs they scored were off big hits. None of those today."

Iowa added another run in the bottom of the fourth. Liz Dennis started things off with a single up the middle. Erin Doud came into run, and Lisa Rasche sacrificed her over to second. One out later, Hanks stepped into the batter's box and took Wildcat Brie Brown's pitch to the left center-field fence, scoring Doud.

With their opening round win, the No. 15 Hawkeyes (43-12) will play second seed Michigan today at 5 p.m. at Pearl Field.

"It was kind of a strange series the last time we played," Blevins said. "We got beat 5-0 then turned around and beat them 5-0. Not what I would call a traditional Big Ten series with Iowa and Michigan. It'll be a good matchup. Our kids are playing well. We'll be ready (Friday.) We're not getting ahead of ourselves. We're just taking care of every opportunity we have along the way."

speed mismatches throughout the lineup.

On Thursday night, the Blazers posted up Smith on Hornacek and Sabonis on Olden Polynice, following the same script they had used in dominating Game 2, and it helped them build a double-digit lead in the second quarter.

Once again, the Jazz offered little resistance early, and Portland's lead swelled to 53-32 4:50 before halftime on a basket by Schrempf. It seemed the Blazers would put the Jazz away.

Boos echoed across the Delta Center, and the message seemed to invigorate the Jazz. Utah closed the half with a 17-2 run, with Malone and Hornacek each scoring six points, to trail 55-49 at halftime.

The crowd was with the Jazz throughout the second half, but Utah couldn't break through. Leading 75-70 at the end of the third quarter, the Blazers regrouped, opening the fourth with an 11-2 run.

From there, Portland pulled away. Wells came off the bench to burn the Jazz with jumpers and dunks. At one stretch, he scored three straight baskets for the Blazers.

jeopardy of missing the cut for the first time in 48 PGA Tour events.

"With the wind blowing this hard, mis-hit shots are going to be magnified to the point where you hit it in some places you probably shouldn't be," Woods said.

Asked what he would work on after his round, Woods said, "Probably my right thumb on the remote. In this wind, it really makes no sense to hit balls."

David Duval had one of only four birdies on No. 18 for an even-par 70. All in all, a decent day, especially compared to some of the other horror stories.

Justin Leonard, a favorite among his hometown gallery and the 88-year-old tournament host, failed to record a birdie in his round of 80. Five others were in the 80s, although none has ever won a British Open.

The field averaged a 73.7 on Las Colinas and a 72.4 at Cottonwood Valley.

Love surged into the lead with a birdie on No. 15, one of only two on the day. The real shot in the arm — and maybe in the first round — was on the par-5 16th, which played dead into the wind.

Love watched Brandel Chamblee hit a wedge that reached the back of the green in flight, blow back 10 feet above the hole and then spin back 40 feet away. He tried to play a low chip with his wedge, but pulled it to the left.

From there, he lobbed up a chip that hit the pin running fast and fell for birdie.

"I thought it was very good strategy," he said.

Love and McCallister are each coming off disappointments. For Love, it stretches over two years dating to his last victory in the 1998 MCI Classic.

McCallister only has to look back four days to the final round of the Compaq Classic in New Orleans, where he three-putted the 18th to fall into a playoff, missed a 4-footer to win on the first extra hole and eventually lost to Carlos Franco.

"That hurt," he said. "But I came here with another goal, and that was to play well and I'm off to a good start. I'm excited about that."

Chad Blackwell and sophomore Ryan Prahm, in Saturday's doubleheader, which consists of two seven-inning games.

Today's starter is undecided, but Broghamer is leaning toward freshman Nick Jensen (3-4, 6.64 ERA), who struggled in the Big Ten season as a starter, but has rebounded in a bullpen role.

"We've got to get good pitching out of all our starters," Broghamer said. "We've got to get some quality innings. Anyone who takes the mound has to make Michigan swing the bats. They've got to get it in good locations."

Scoreboard watching will be the pastime of the weekend. But Blackwell said that it won't distract him from the business at hand.

"We're going to be keeping our eyes on both games," Blackwell said. "It might help make things more intense. But I don't think it will take away from our (focus). We have to win. It's a must-win situation."

And if things fall right for the Hawkeyes, the program's first bid to the Big Ten tournament since 1990 would make the entire season of injuries and losing streaks worthwhile.

"That was a goal we had at the beginning of the year," Broghamer said. "And for us to go through all the adversity we've gone through, if we get an opportunity to get into the Big Ten tournament and get a chance to play, that would be something that we have looked forward to all year long. And that's what we're going to (Michigan) to play for."

IU officials still deciding if code of ethics was broken

Hartgraves, who holds the same position under current athletic director Clarence Doninger. "I was frightened to see someone that mad."

Hartgraves spoke of that unreported episode reluctantly only to correct certain details after a faculty member mentioned it in an interview regarding the current probe of Knight's conduct by the university's board of trustees.

"We're not supposed to be talking to the press," she said. "But I've seen his temper other times ... the shouting and the cursing, things like that."

Knight, who refused to be interviewed by The AP while under investigation, never apologized and never was reprimanded, Hartgraves said. Nothing about the thrown vase, the danger it posed to Hartgraves, or the insubordination to the athletic director was put in Knight's file.

"It was just put aside," Hartgraves said, indicating that no one in the athletic department wanted to challenge Knight's power at the university shortly after he won his third NCAA championship in 1987.

It's just the latest in a series of accusations against one of the nation's best known coaches in any sport.

Former player Neil Reed accused Knight of choking him in practice three years ago; Knight reportedly once brandished soiled toilet paper "to motivate" his team; and Butch Carter, a former player and now the Toronto Raptors' coach, said Knight told a black player in 1980 that he would end up like "all the rest of the niggers in Chicago." Other players there at the time have said they never heard Knight use the racial slur.

Knight's alleged outburst in Hartgraves' office reveals the type of behavior that other faculty members argue is against the university's code of conduct and would lead to their dismissal or reprimand if they acted the same way.

"There's been one set of rules for everyone in this university and another set for Bob Knight," said Murray Sperber, an English professor, author of three books on college sports, and Knight's most vocal critic among Indiana faculty.

Hartgraves told the Indianapolis Star that in February 1998 she received a call from Knight's secretary asking if the coach could speak to someone who was in a budget meeting with Doninger. When Hartgraves asked if she could tell the person what the matter concerned, Knight got on the phone and swore at her, she said.

Hartgraves said Knight then slammed down the telephone and stormed into the waiting area in Doninger's office. She said Knight, called her other expletives and advanced toward her in anger before Doninger restrained him.

Doninger said he was present during the encounter but declined to discuss it further.

"We're not going to comment on anything related to the investigation until it is complete," he said.

The trustees also are examining whether Knight intimidated Doninger, and nearly came to blows with him, following a loss to Ohio State in February.

Hurst takes two-stroke lead

Pat Hurst leads the LPGA Electrolux USA Championship.

By Teresa M. Walker Associated Press

FRANKLIN, Tenn. — Pat Hurst is finally getting her swing back after giving birth to her first child, and it paid off Thursday with a 7-under-par 65 and a two-stroke lead after the opening round of the new Electrolux USA Championship.

Hurst had four of her six birdies on the back nine into gusting winds and added an eagle and a bogey for her lowest round this year.

Cindy Figg-Currier and Kristal Parker each shot

67s, while Meg Mallon, who won this event in Nashville last year, was among six players at 69.

Winds slowed play as golfers struggled with the Ironhorse Course at The Legends Club. Some called it tricky, and Amy Fruhwirth, who had a 69, said it was a little unfair with some players fighting to reach par-4s.

Hill's blast highlights longest game in NL history

CHICAGO — Mark Loretta went 5-for-5 and Jeremy Burnitz had three RBIs Thursday as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Chicago Cubs 14-8 in the longest game in National League history.

The 4-hour, 22-minute game featured 35 hits and 19 walks as the teams tied the major league record for a nine-inning game set by Baltimore and the Yankees in a 13-9 game on Sept. 5, 1997.

The longest previous NL game took 4 hours, 20 minutes, between Los Angeles and Colorado on June 30, 1996.

Steve Woodard (1-4) snapped a seven-game losing streak despite giving up a towering 490-foot homer to Glenallen Hill that landed on the roof of a three-story building across Waveland Avenue behind the left-field bleachers. It was believed to be the first time a ball landed on top of the apartment building.

Indians 16, Royals 0

CLEVELAND — Manny Ramirez's first-inning grand slam got Cleveland rolling and Jaret Wright pitched 7 2-3 shutout innings Thursday night, leading the Indians to a 16-0 thrashing of the Kansas City Royals.

The shutout was Cleveland's most lopsided in 45 years, when the Indians beat the Boston Red Sox 19-0 on May 18, 1955.

Ramirez added a two-run homer in the sixth and David Justice and Jim Thome hit solo shots as Cleveland took out some frustration while snapping Kansas City's five-game winning streak.

Red Sox 11, Orioles 4

during a six-run sixth inning that lifted the Boston Red Sox to an 11-4 victory over the Baltimore Orioles on Thursday night.

Carl Everett, who entered the game in a 2-for-14 slump, went 3-for-5 with a homer and four RBIs. He leads the Red Sox with 12 homers and 33 RBIs.

Devil Rays 1, Yankees 0

NEW YORK — Steve Trachsel extended his scoreless-innings streak to 17 and Fred McGriff knocked in the only run with a seventh-inning homer as the Tampa Bay Devil Rays beat the New York Yankees 1-0 Thursday night.

It was also the second straight 1-0 victory for Trachsel (3-2), who gave up three hits, struck out five and walked one in seven innings before being relieved by Albie Lopez. He allowed one hit the last two innings to get his first save.

Reds 11, Padres 9

CINCINNATI — The slumping San Diego Padres blew two sizeable leads, had a starter and reliever injured and wound up losing their sixth consecutive game Thursday, 11-9 to the Cincinnati Reds.

Aaron Boone's two-run homer with one out in the ninth off Matt Whisenant (2-2) finished off a deflating day for the Padres, who came away with only their third 0-6 road trip in the franchise's 32-year history.

Marlins 5, Braves 4

MIAMI — Young Jason Grilli and 37-year-old Joe Strong, both making their big-league debuts, combined to pitch eight innings as the Florida Marlins overcame a triple play and beat the Atlanta Braves 5-4 Thursday.

Strong became the oldest player to make his major-league debut in nearly 40 years when he took the mound in the seventh. He pitched 1 1-3 hitless innings.

The Braves turned their first triple play in nearly 14 years in the fifth, going around the horn on Mike Lowell's grounder to third.

Mets 3, Pirates 2

PITTSBURGH — The New York Mets remained unbeaten with Al Leiter on the mound, getting an eight-hitter from the left-hander and a solo homer and two RBIs from Todd Zeile to beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 3-2 on Thursday night.

Leiter (4-0) allowed seven hits and two runs — one earned — and struck out eight as the Mets improved to 7-0 when he starts this season.

The Mets had lost 10 of 14 and were 4-8 on a season-long 13-game road trip until Leiter pitched his first complete game of the season.

No-call, poor final play haunt Phoenix

■ The Lakers have a commanding 2-0 lead as the series heads back to Phoenix.

By Bob Baum
Associated Press

PHOENIX — A no-call against Shaquille O'Neal and a lousy last-second play still haunted the Phoenix Suns on Thursday as they tried to turn their attention to Game 3 against the Los Angeles Lakers.

The Lakers are up 2-0 as the best-of-seven Western Conference semifinals switch to Phoenix for games Friday night and Sunday.

Penny Hardaway was still shaking his head that no foul was called against O'Neal on the Suns' next-to-last possession in Wednesday night's 97-96 loss in Game 2.

"I've gone over in my mind a million times what would have happened if they'd call that foul or if I'd taken the baseline when I had it," Hardaway said.

The Suns were leading 96-95 when Hardaway drove to the basket and O'Neal, his old teammate in Orlando, got in his way. Hardaway said O'Neal hit him in the shoulder, causing him to lose control of the ball as he shot.

"That's the MVP. He just had received the trophy before the game," Hardaway said. "There was a lot of pressure on the refs not to make that call even though it was a foul. Hopefully we'll get that call when we're here at home."

The foul wasn't flagrant enough for the officials to make it in front of the pro-Laker crowd at that point in the game, Hardaway said.

"In the first quarter, that call would be made, easy," Hardaway said. But late in the game, "you'd have to get your head taken off or knocked to the floor or something so the fans won't react to it if they call it," he said.

Suns coach Scott Skiles said videotape showed it was obviously a foul.

"It's frustrating, but all year long we've had a hard time getting to the foul line for whatever reason," Skiles said. "Maybe that reputation is hurting us or something. That's clearly a foul, but it's just one of those things."

"The Lakers can point to plays that clearly are fouls on us. It's not like there's a conspiracy or anything. It was just, in my opinion, a call that should have been called and was missed."

Kobe Bryant won the game with a 15-footer under tight defense with 2.6 seconds to go.
