Mud Hens next up for Rocker

John Rocker has not reported, after he was optioned to the minor leagues.

By Paul Newberry Associated Press

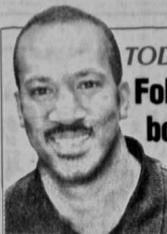

ATLANTA — As John Rocker goes to face teams such as the Mud Hens and Tides, the rest of the Atlanta Braves seem glad to be rid of their erratic closer. Clearly, he didn't have a lot of fans in the clubhouse. Asked if he spoke to Rocker after the pitcher was optioned to the minor leagues, third baseman Chipper Jones scoffed. "I didn't talk to him when he was here," Jones said. "Why should I talk to him when he leaves?" Rocker, who was sent to Triple-A Richmond on Monday, had three days to report to the International League team. The Braves had not heard from Rocker as of late Tuesday afternoon, but general manager John Schuerholz said he had no reason to believe he will refuse his assignment. Rocker left Turner Field without talking to reporters after his demotion. "We never hear from guys when they're optioned out," Schuerholz said. Richmond was playing a home game Tuesday night against the Norfolk Tides, then goes on the road to meet the Toledo Mud Hens. If Rocker doesn't report by Thursday night, he could be fined and possibly suspended. Ordinarily, guys show up, so we've never had to deal with that," Schuerholz said. The Braves also fined Rocker $5000 for threatening the Sports Illustrated reporter who wrote the story revealing Rocker's offensive comments about gays, minorities and women. After the story came out, Rocker was

I don't think that I would want to live there. But it was really neat to see, because you have legalized prostitution and marijuana, which is really different, but then their crime rate is so low. It is really interesting. Q: What do you think will be your team's biggest challenge this season? A: I think that we lost a lot of our leadership. We lost six great seniors, five of the six being All-Americans. I think that it is just going to be a rebuilding, but there is still so much talent on our team that if people can step up, we will be all right. We are young, but I think that we will be OK.

Federal judge takes ax to Microsoft

Many local observers are skeptical about the effects of a judge's plan to break up the software titan.

By Kirsten Veng-Pedersen The Daily Iowan

Federal judge Thomas Penfield Jackson ordered a breakup of Microsoft Wednesday, having previously found the company guilty of antitrust violations related to its Web browser. The suit against Microsoft was filed by the Justice Department and 19 states, including Iowa.

At a news conference in Washington, D.C., Iowa Attorney General Tom Miller said he felt that Wednesday's ruling was "a strong, yet fair and measured" act. In his ruling, Penfield mandated both "conduct modification and structural reorganization." Structural reorganization of the software giant would break Microsoft up into two separate companies, one of which would control the Microsoft operating system, Windows. The other would control all of the Microsoft applications, such as its browser Internet Explorer and other software.

Penfield gave Microsoft four months to complete the split. Howard Cha, a business software developer for Samsung, was skeptical about the split. "I think that even though it'll be divided by two, there'll be a cross-relationship," he said in Iowa City Wednesday. The conduct modifications imposed by Penfield would force Microsoft to make technical information about its operating systems available to software developers. In effect, this would force Microsoft to share its computer code and make it easier for others to develop compatible products, which could create more competition. Penfield said such positions were necessary. "Microsoft as it is currently organized and led is unwilling to accept the notion that it broke the law or to accede to any order amending its conduct," he said. "I think that the remedy that the federal government is providing isn't strong enough," said Doug Jones, a UI associate professor of computer science. Jones said the government could have taken an extra step and prohibited the bundling of hardware and software. "Everytime you buy a PC, you get a copy of Windows," he said. Jones was quick to point out that even if he chose to use another operating system on a new computer, he would have already, indirectly, paid royalties to Microsoft, which is always pre-installed. Although restrictions could be more intense, Jones said, the proposed code-sharing measures "would make it possible for a competitive marketplace to re-emerge." Not everyone feels that all aspects of the Microsoft monopoly have been negative.

All the stage's a park as festival opens

Olivia (Susan Lynskey) and Viola (Angela Brazil) act out a scene from William Shakespeare's Twelfth Night Tuesday night in City Park.

The inaugural show of the Riverside Theatre's Bard Festival will be tonight.

After a year of development and planning, the Riverside Theatre Shakespeare Festival will open with the comedy Twelfth Night or What You Will to a sold-out audience tonight. The Riverside Festival Stage, which was modeled after the Globe Theatre, where many of Shakespeare's plays were originally performed, is located in Lower City Park. The stage was designed by Neumann Monson PC Architects of Iowa City. "There's nothing better than Shakespeare outside," said JoAnn Goerd, the marketing director for Riverside Theatre. "We've always had a lot of cultural diversity in this city, and the Shakespeare festival just adds to it." The theater is, as was the Globe, a wooden "O." It is surrounded by an area of grass and trees. The floor of the theater space is also grass, and steps lead up to the stage. Folding chairs will be set up for the performance, and all 450 will have a good view of the stage, said Mary O'Sullivan, who plays Maria. The theater hopes to have permanent seating available in the future. The show will go on even in light rain, but, O'Sullivan said, that is just part of performing in an outdoor

I.C. area farmland value rises

The worth of Johnson County farmland increased by 7 percent during the first quarter of the year.

By Carolyn Kresser The Daily Iowan

Farmland values in Iowa are increasing for the first time in almost two years, with values in Johnson County and surrounding areas reporting the biggest increases during the first quarter, according to a survey of Iowa bankers. The Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago reports in the AgLetter, its agricultural newsletter, that farmland values were up, with Iowa reporting a "surprisingly large" increase of 3 percent from Jan. 1 to April 1.

It also reports that the southeast portion of the state, which includes Johnson County, reported a 7 percent increase for the first quarter. There are many reasons that land in Iowa, and Johnson County in particular, is increasing in value, said Greg Brenneman, an agricultural engineering specialist with the Johnson County Extension Office. "There has been additional federal farm payments to help with low commodity prices," he said. "This helps to stabilize and may help increase land prices." Brenneman also suggested that where there is higher income, such as near the area of a university, surrounding land area is of higher value.

"It goes more into pricing the ground, rather than pricing the land's agricultural production capabilities," he said. Migration from cities to rural settings also has an effect on the value of land, said Chick Meade, an accredited farm and land broker who works at Iowa Land Corp., Coralville. "A lot of Iowans grew up on farms and want to move back to the country," he said. Andy Tygrett, a farmer who owns

Virus potential worries cell-phone users

Although a new virus targeted at cellular phones with text capabilities was discovered Tuesday before it could be sent to any phones, experts and cellular-phone users are concerned about future viruses. Some experts believe that the incident is a preview of attacks by hackers on such handheld devices as Palm Pilots and Microsoft PC pocket computers, in addition to cellular phones, according to Associated Press reports.

Pataki blows some smoke

ALBANY, N.Y. — The tobacco industry whistle-blower portrayed in the movie The Insider was barred from speaking at a state youth-smoking conference because he planned to criticize the governor, a newspaper reported Wednesday.

Wigand

Jeffrey Wigand wanted to air several complaints about Gov. George Pataki last weekend, including his recent veto of a bill that would have imposed fire safety standards on cigarettes, the New York Times reported.

"It's reminiscent of my Brown & Williamson days," Wigand said. "It's déjà vu. I can't believe that somebody tells me I can't speak about what is factually true."

Wigand worked as a researcher for Brown & Williamson Tobacco. He revealed, first to "60 Minutes" and then to state officials, the industry's manipulation of nicotine levels in cigarettes and its secret research on nicotine addiction.

A state Health Department spokesman, John Signor, said Wigand violated an agreement not to inject politics into the event. Wigand and the consulting company that organized the conference dispute that.

As for his fee, Wigand said, "I'm not sure I'm going to send my bill to them."

LONDON (AP) — The girlfriend of the late INXS singer Michael Hutchence won substantial damages Wednesday from the publishers of a book that said she deliberately became pregnant to trap him into a relationship.

Paula Yates also received an apology from the Mail on Sunday tabloid, which published excerpts from the book by Vince Lovegrove last year.

Yates, a TV personality and author, was Hutchence's partner from 1994 until his death in November 1997. Their daughter, Heavenly Hiraani Tiger Lily, was born on July 22, 1996.

Yates said after the hearing she was pleased. "I think when people start to tell lies about a 3-year-old child who has lost her father, anyone would take action," she said.

Sums of the settlement with the book's British publishers, Faber & Faber, and its original Australian publishers were not disclosed.

She found herself a sweet summer job

■ An Iowa City resident will spend her summer racing around the country, tossing candy along the way.

By Bridget Stratton
The Daily Iowan

As she drove through downtown Chicago earlier this week, Katy Gordon honked her horn and shouted out her car window. Unlike those of the other commuters, however, her actions were not due to rude drivers or congested traffic.

Instead, she was getting the attention of the "Jelly Belly Bug" and throwing candy at people on the street from her bright green-and-yellow Chrysler PT Cruiser.

Gordon, an Iowa City resident, is spending her summer as a member of the Goo Crew, a group of 16 people traveling around the country promoting Twizzler's new Twist 'n' Fill candy.

After applying on the Internet, Gordon, a recent graduate of the Brown Institute in Minnesota Heights, Minn., snagged herself a summer job. In the fall, she will pursue a marketing career.

"This job is so much fun," she said. "We drive around handing out candy and trying to get the media to pay attention to us."

So far, Gordon's job has allowed her to visit Navy Pier with the "Hershey Kiss Mobile" and race alongside the "Jelly Belly Bug" handing out candy.

Among some of her stops on the East Coast, Gordon will visit New York and attend a lobsterfest in Bangor, Maine.

And although the job is not a traditional post-college career, Sue Gordon, Katy's mother, said the family is excited about Katy's new career.

"We are very, very proud of her. We can't wait to meet her in Maine for some lobster," Sue Gordon said. People are interested in not only the candy but also the flashy PT Cruiser.

"One guy came up to me and wanted to know what the dimensions of the trunk were," Gordon said.

North Liberty resident Jane Brown said she is not at all surprised that Gordon is in this line of work now.

"It is right up her alley," she said. "She could always talk to a 2-year-old or a 92-year-old without a problem."

Her favorite part of the tour so far has been the reactions of people she has met.

"It is really great. We get all these crazy looks from people," Gordon said.

The closest the Goo Crew will be to Iowa City is Davenport, from July 16-22, and Des Moines, from Aug. 6-12.

Parking plan still upsets some staff

■ Although they will keep their spots, UI staff members feel new parking policy is unfair.

By Andrew T. Dawson
The Daily Iowan

Although the UI is proposing changes to the UI's faculty parking system, and staff members are not in danger of losing their current spots, some staff members are still concerned.

Under the proposal, faculty members could eventually make up half of the parking spaces in some lots though UI staff out-number faculty 4-1.

Faculty members are professors, associate professors and assistant professors. All other UI employees are considered to be staff.

Under the proposed change, any new space that becomes available will be issued alternately between faculty and staff, said David Ricketts, the UI director of parking and transportation.

Faculty and staff will be put on separate lists that will be reorganized by seniority, he said. Those who have been employed by the UI the longest will be granted the first spots that become available.

Staff members who already have a permit at a campus lot are not in danger of losing their spots.

Currently, spots are assigned according to the amount of time an employee has been on a waiting list. The wait can be as long as six years.

Ricketts was asked to draft the proposal by the UI administration, which hopes increased faculty parking will give the UI an edge when recruiting new professors.

This year, the UI has already lost twice the number of faculty members as last year, he said.

Staff members also benefit from the faculty-recruitment process, Ricketts said. New faculty members are "employment generators" for staff members, whose positions are funded by research dollars, he said.

Although not in danger of losing parking spots, staff members aren't in favor of the new plan.

"It's one of the most arrogant abuses of authority I've seen in my 26 years at the UI," said Tom Jacobs, a water-systems operator at the Power Plant. "If the faculty representatives think that the campus can't get by without (professors), they can try getting by without electricity, which is where I work — at the Power Plant."

All matters concerning parking and transportation at the UI must first go through a 10-member advisory committee made up of four students, three faculty and three staff members. An alternate version of the proposal was submitted to the group in March passed.

After being reviewed by a council of UI staff members, some changes were made. The new draft will be presented to the advisory committee on June 29. If passed, the proposal is scheduled to take effect no later than Aug. 1, Ricketts said.

Donald Revis, 41, of Coralville was charged with theft in the first degree, a Class-C felony.

If convicted, Revis faces up to 10 years in prison, and he could also be subject to a fine of at least $500 but no more than $10,000.

According to court documents, between February and June 6, Revis allegedly misappropriated property that he had control over and disposed of it in a manner inconsistent with the owner's rights.

The Coralville Police Department did not have an exact amount of money stolen, said Lt. Ron Wenman, but the provisions of a first-degree theft indicate an amount in excess of $10,000.

Revis was responsible for deposits, which were lost, according to court documents. He allegedly voided transactions on daily receipts of employees at the restaurant and did not deposit the money. Written and computer account information was recovered that implicated Revis, according to court documents.

On Wednesday, Revis was released into the custody of the Department of Corrections.

Officials with the department could not be reached for comment.

Revis' lawyer, John Beasley, declined to comment on the case.

The investigation continues, and Coralville police plan an audit of Bennigans' business records to determine the amount of money lost and how it occurred, Wenman said.

Bennigans also declined to comment on the case. Revis could not be reached for comment.

Authorities: Man linked to missing women was investigated in 1980s

LENEXA, Kan. (AP) — The prime suspect in the deaths of five women whose bodies were found in barrels in the past week was investigated in the disappearances of three women and a baby in the mid-1980s, authorities said Wednesday.

No bodies were found in the previous cases, and authorities were never able to prove foul play. Now, investigators are working to find out if any of those women are among the dead.

John Edward Robinson Sr., 56, was being held on $5 million bond on sexual assault charges following complaints from two women. He is considered the prime suspect, but has not been charged, in connection with the discovery of two women's bodies at a Kansas farm he owns and three more in a Missouri storage locker that he rented.

Authorities said he met women through Internet sadomasochism chat rooms, where he used the name "slavemaster."

Robinson is being represented by a public defender, who was not available for comment. Robinson's wife is in seclusion at the trailer park where the two lived, and neighbors have declined to comment.

Hatfields, McCoys ready to mix it up — at softball

PIKEVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A hundred years after the end of their legendary feud, the Hatfields and the McCoys are getting together this weekend for their first reunion — and they will be leaving the shotguns behind.

"We are going to be on our best behavior," said reunion Chairman Bo McCoy, a Waycross, Ga., minister whose ancestors took part in the 19th-century shooting war between the two families that left 12 people dead and cemented the image of Appalachia as a place full of hillbillies with guns.

Two thousand descendants are expected to attend, as well as thousands of others, including the governors of Kentucky and West Virginia.

The only confrontation this time will come during a tug-of-war and a softball game between the families.

The families say the goal is to learn about their shared history. There will also be banquets, bus tours to feud sites, bluegrass and gospel music, an arts-and-crafts festival and lectures about the feud and how it helped perpetuate stereotypes of the people of Appalachia.

"We want people to see where the families have actually gone," said Sonya Hatfield, a storyteller and teacher from Belfry, Ky. "We are not ignorant, illiterate hillbillies who killed each other over a pig."

Mugabe eyes all white lands for seizure

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — Unbowed by criticism of his plan to seize more than 800 white-owned farms, President Robert Mugabe said Wednesday his government is eyeing all white-owned land.

If whites are allowed to remain on their farms, Mugabe said, it will be out of charity from the nation's majority black population.

Last week, the government announced it would immediately begin nationalizing 804 white-owned properties. On Wednesday, Mugabe said those farms were not enough to satisfy landless blacks.

"We are looking at the totality of our land. It must come, and if we allow others to have portions of it, that must be on the basis of our own will, our own desire and our own charity," Mugabe said in an address to ruling party candidates in the parliamentary elections, set for June 24-25.

Mugabe's announcement was criticized by the United States, Britain — the former colonial power — other donors and opposition parties.

Girl's body found in Des Moines River

DES MOINES (AP) — A 13-year-old girl found dead in the Des Moines River had drowned, and authorities are treating the case as a homicide, police said Wednesday.

Linda Williamson was discovered floating near the riverbank on Des Moines' North Side shortly before 3 p.m. Tuesday. She was last seen around 11:30 p.m. Monday at her home, which is approximately four blocks from where her partially clothed body was found.

"It was not an accidental drowning," Des Moines police Sgt. Bruce Elrod said. "Exact details, of course, I can't get into, but the cause of death was drowning."

Cancer society official charged with embezzling

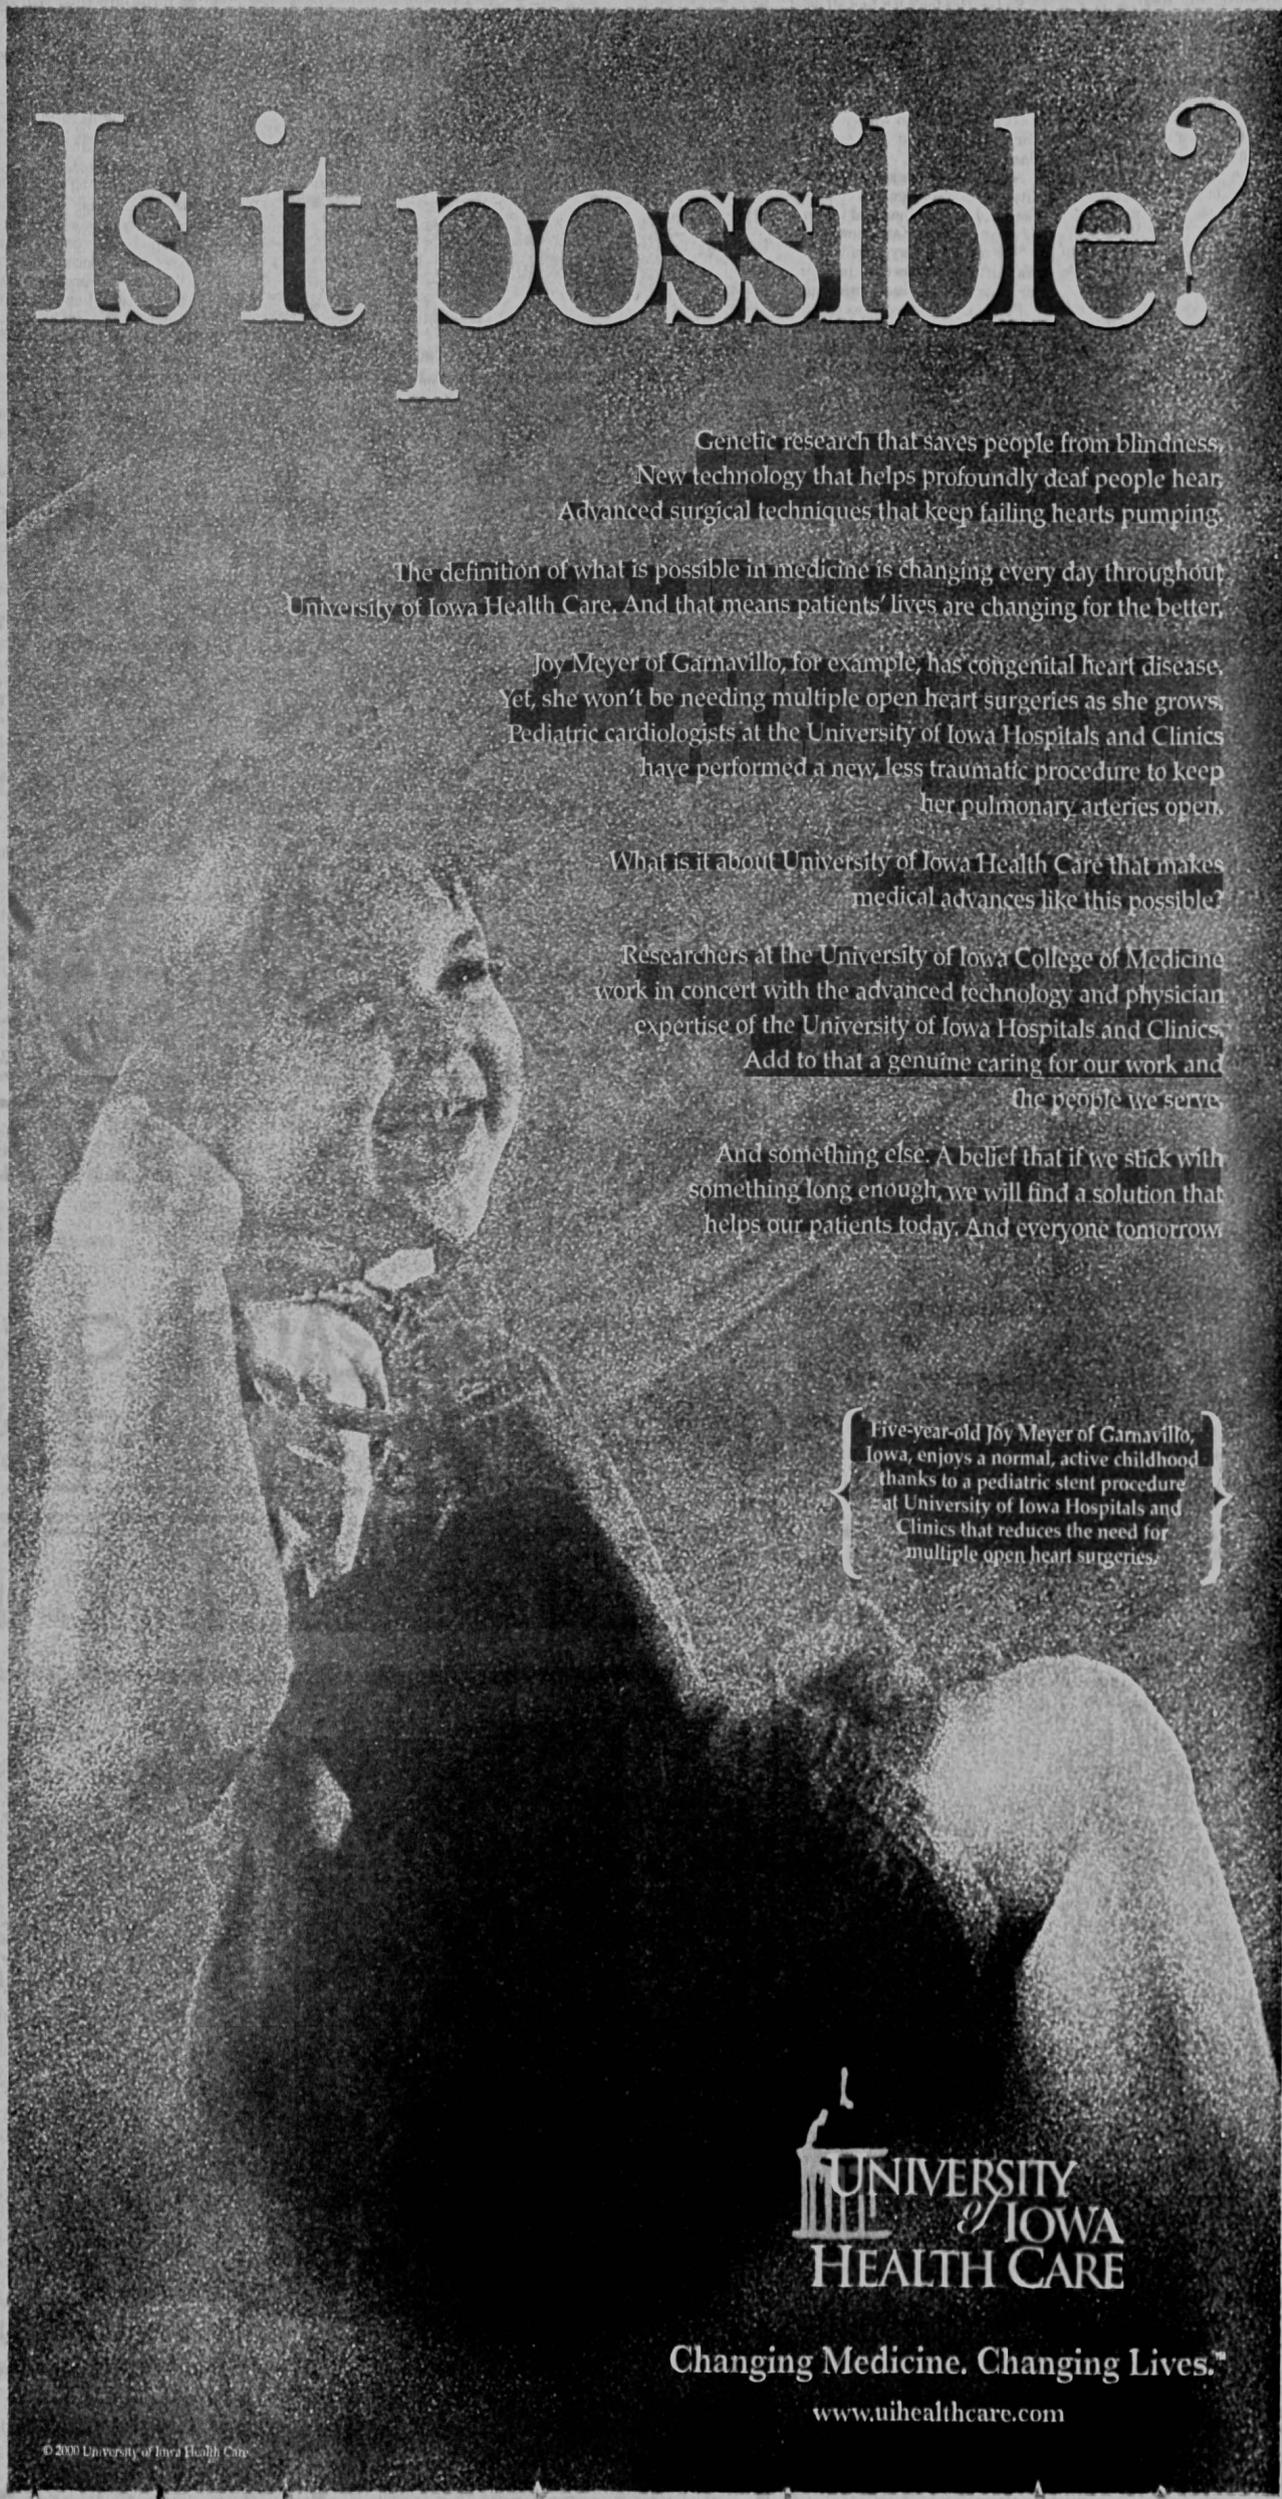

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — An American Cancer Society official is accused of embezzling $6.9 million from the charity by having the money sent to an overseas account.

Dan Wiant, who oversaw computer and financial operations in the society's Ohio division, allegedly had a bank wire the money to an account in Austria, according to an FBI complaint filed in a U.S. District Court here.

The FBI said Wednesday Wiant has been charged with bank fraud, which carries a maximum 30-year prison sentence and $1 million fine.

Wiant's attorney, Kevin Durkin, said he did not know where his client was Tuesday night, but, he said, he had spoken with Wiant.

Is it possible?

Genetic research that saves people from blindness.
New technology that helps profoundly deaf people hear.
Advanced surgical techniques that keep failing hearts pumping.

The definition of what is possible in medicine is changing every day throughout University of Iowa Health Care. And that means patients' lives are changing for the better.

Joy Meyer of Garnavillo, for example, has congenital heart disease. Yet, she won't be needing multiple open heart surgeries as she grows. Pediatric cardiologists at the University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics have performed a new, less traumatic procedure to keep her pulmonary arteries open.

What is it about University of Iowa Health Care that makes medical advances like this possible?

Researchers at the University of Iowa College of Medicine work in concert with the advanced technology and physician expertise of the University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics. Add to that a genuine caring for our work and the people we serve.

And something else. A belief that if we stick with something long enough, we will find a solution that helps our patients today. And everyone tomorrow.

Five-year-old Joy Meyer of Garnavillo, Iowa, enjoys a normal, active childhood thanks to a pediatric stent procedure at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics that reduces the need for multiple open heart surgeries.

Job time

■ Students seeking jobs will be in luck in this summer, unless they want a job in retail or food.

By Beth Conklin
The Daily Iowan

Those in the ranks of the unemployed will most likely find jobs in construction, education and services, according to a recent report from Manpower, an Iowa City job placement firm.

But for jobs in food or retail, junior Ryan Espe is proof that the pickings are slim.

"I've tried bars, restaurants, clothing stores," he said. "I've been two months looking for a job."

According to the Manpower report, while 23 percent of local firms expect their payrolls to increase during the July-Sept. period, 3 percent say workers will be needed, and 74 percent intend to stay at current levels.

One retail store, the Athlete's Foot Old Capitol Town Center, has a wealth of applications, said manager Christine Hickey, a UI senior.

"We've had a ton of people, but we're not hiring," she said.

UI junior Thor Theis recently ended his job search when he was hired at QuikTrip. Theis said he filled out approximately 20 applications at various gas stations, department stores and a coffee shop.

Job time, summer in the city this town, it's pretty easy to get a job," he said.

Manpower Temporary Services has seen a fair number of students seeking summer employment, said branch manager Cydney Lovell.

"A majority of what I've seen are students with various schedules to work around. Many are available from now until August," she said. "It's a constant new-employee base."

UI junior Kevin Lewis advises students not to settle for a bad summer job even if desperate. He worked in a kitchen at a restaurant.

"It was horrible. If I wore something in there, it was ruined. It was hot, and I had to work with grease. They gave you a locker, but the locker already smelled, and your only protection was wrapping your stuff up in a plastic bag," he said.

Employment agencies have been kept busy this summer with students seeking jobs, said Jennifer Yoder, the staff supervisor for Norrell Professional Services.

"Most of the jobs we hire for are light-industrial positions and clerical work," she said. "We get a lot of businesses who need people to fill in for regular employees."

Iowa pilot stumbles on cave drawings

The drawings found by a helicopter pilot trainer in Egypt could date back to 7000 B.C.

By Mae Ghalwash
Associated Press

AIN SOKHNA ROAD, Egypt — Archaeologists aren't exaggerating when they say ancient treasures are abundant in the sands of Egypt. So many, in fact, that even a pilot from Iowa, out on a desert outing, can make a notable discovery: cave drawings that could date back thousands of years before the birth of Christ. George Cunningham was in the desert 25 miles southeast of Cairo, looking for fossilized sea urchins, shells and plants — a favorite hobby — when he spotted "an interesting looking wall" late last month.

On Wednesday, Cunningham led Egyptian scholars to the site to investigate the find — a sort of cave in a limestone hill.

"We were astounded that this wall was there and that we had never seen it," said Cunningham, of Algona, Iowa, who has worked in Cairo for 2½ years as a helicopter pilot trainer for an oil company. He is a frequent visitor to the stretch of desert where he made the discovery.

The cave drawings appear to be from three eras, according to Egyptian experts. The earliest, which could date back to 7000-6500 B.C., are hunting scenes: men and women carrying bows alongside what appear to be dogs or wolves.

A later drawing appears to be religious: two gods or goddesses in an arch alongside three shapely women — probably goddesses as well. It could date to the early Pharaonic dynastic period, around 3,000-2500 B.C., the experts say.

Courthouse commandments constitute establishment

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof...

Most Iowa City residents tend to associate law and order with the Johnson County Courthouse, not constitutional infringement. However, sitting outside the courthouse since 1964, fully on government property, is a large slab of stone engraved with the Ten Commandments. Although it may seem harmless, this is a direct violation of the civil rights of the residents of Johnson County who are forced to enter this public building. This flagrant attack on the First Amendment is especially grievous in a supposedly diverse community such as Iowa City.

First of all, dozens of different religions are represented in a large university community. The UI has Muslim students, Jewish students and Hindu students, not to mention many others from diverse religious backgrounds. In America, where religious freedom and tolerance are supposed to be paramount, these people are forced to enter a courthouse that apparently favors those of the Christian faith. There was quite an uproar over the recent dental school minority controversy, and the UI went to great lengths to prove its commitment to an ethnically diverse community. The Johnson County authorities, on the other hand, are apparently stating their own commitment to religious uniformity.

Second, from a legal perspective, posting the Ten Commandments in a public building is plainly unconstitutional. The Bill of Rights guarantees religious freedom to anyone in the United States, and this has been interpreted by the Supreme Court to mean that the government, including state and local governments, may not interfere with or promote any religion in any manner. Posting the Ten Commandments is an unmistakable promotion for Christianity. Many legal precedents have been set on this particular issue, some dating back as far as 1980, when the U.S. Supreme Court decided in a Kentucky case that it was unconstitutional to post the Ten Commandments in public schools. Many other federal judges have used this precedent to expand the ruling to all public buildings. The display outside the Johnson County Courthouse is a blatant attempt to defy these rulings and topple the wall of separation between church and state.

Jerry Hynes/The Daily Iowan

Taking poll positions in the presidential race

In an attempt to peer inside the mind of the female voter, the Gore campaign recently convened a focus group of women and asked them, "Which presidential candidate would make a better date?"

The response: Vice President Gore, a man thought to be sincere and thoughtful, topped Gov. Bush, who was characterized as the type of guy that would drive up in a convertible, honk the horn to get his date's attention, and then talk about himself all night.

On the May 31 edition of "Hardball" with Chris Matthews, Bush responded to report, saying, "I don't need a focus group... I make my decisions and let the chips fall where they may."

Somewhere, Karl Rowe, John Kasich and Ralph Reed struggled to maintain straight faces.

The two major parties' national conventions loom on the horizon, and I dare say that the "better date" question will be the last of the comical collections of public opinion Everyman (or, at least, EveryVoter) will find pushed in front of him between now and November. In what looks to be a close race, Team Bush and Team Gore will look for every edge they can find.

Deferring to my civic duties, I have compiled a brief list of other issues that, dare I say, peer even deeper into the hearts of the voter than the above question did.

1. Which demeaning stereotype will be thrust upon a demographic minority, shining the spotlight on this group as the "pivotal" voting bloc?

In '96, "Soccer Moms" kept the president in office in the face of the Republican Revolution of two years prior. This year, I'm leaning toward "Tall, Awkward White Guys with Laughable Moves on the Dance Floor." Unfortunately, the early leader is "Republicans."

2. Which idealistic rock anthem will be thrust upon baby boomers in the hopes of rekindling the passions of the 1960s?

In 1992, Clinton-Gore campaigned across the country to the tune of Fleetwood Mac's "Don't Stop Thinking About Tomorrow." This year, look for both sides to call John Fogerty for a performance of "Fortunate Son" and miss the irony altogether. "Come Together" would have been nice, but Nortel Networks already uses it for an idealistic campaign of its own.

3. Which candidate would you rather see play the lead in a revival of The Music Man?

G.W. Bush wins this one hands down. With his quick wit and ever-present smirk, he could sell ice to Eskimos... not to mention a pro-choice running mate to the Christian Coalition. The role would suit him like a second skin:

Oh yes, we got trouble Right here in Li'l D.C. With a capital T. And that rhymes with B. And that stands for Bill. Call Ticketmaster quick, folks - seating is limited.

4. Do you find it hypocritical that Rosie O'Donnell, head gun-control cheerleader of the Million Moms, recently allowed her bodyguard to apply for a concealed-weapons permit?

Sorry, but there is no answer to this. Any pollster posing this question to one of Rosie's dedicated followers would be responsible for the subsequent explosion of cognitive dissonance capable of ripping holes through space and time. Some questions are better left unanswered.

5. Which adorable child will be the next to dominate the 24-hour cable news networks?

For several years FoxNews, MSNBC and CNN have followed the saga of Jon Benet Ramsey. When the trail grew cold (again), the nation turned its eyes to Elián González for a few months of entertainment. Both of these stories are beginning to wear out their life spans, though, and a new child star is needed. The smart money is on "Son of Webster." He is followed closely by the runner-up, "Anyone but that Pepsi girl."

6. Finally, as a pollster, am I irrelevant to the real world?

Surprisingly, the answer could turn out to be "yes." UI political science Professor Michael Lewis-Beck made the pages of the Washington Post and other national newspapers when he predicted that Gore will beat Bush in November, winning 56.2 percent of the popular vote.

According to the Post, Lewis-Beck based his mathematical model on gross domestic product growth from the last quarter of the pre-election year through the first quarter of the election year, as well as the president's approval ratings.

ADAM WHITE

In '96, "Soccer Moms" kept the president in office in the face of the Republican Revolution of two years prior. This year, I'm leaning toward "Tall, Awkward White Guys with Laughable Moves on the Dance Floor." Unfortunately, the early leader is "Republicans."

In other words, nothing that the politicians do between now and November will have any bearing on the outcome of the general elections. His track record speaks for itself: Lewis-Beck predicted President Clinton's victory within 0.1 of a percentage point.

For those demanding a second opinion, on June 1 the much-ballyhooed Iowa Electronic Markets also had Gore beating Bush, 48.8 to 47.0 percent. The IEM, a forum in which members buy "stock" in candidates, also has an impressive track record in predicting election outcomes.

On the other hand, twice a year the IEM is flooded with several hundred bids from largely IEM-ignorant students who are required to do so in a mandatory business course. I should know - I had to do it last September, and it took me several bids before I figured out what I was doing. In the meantime, I bought three shares of Rudy Guiliani, and I know I wasn't the only one.

Whom do we turn to, then, for a glimpse of what November holds? Michael Lewis-Beck? The IEM? A room of Soccer Moms?

Whatever you do, don't ask this Tall, Awkward Guy with Laughable Dance Moves. After all, he put his money on Guiliani.

Securities not so secure

A presidential election must be nearing, because irony is in the air. This time, it's particularly pungent in the noses of young Americans, the future beneficiaries of our nation's floundering Social Security plan. That name may have to be changed, though, as the "security" element seems to be expendable — at least if George W. Bush has his wishes.

Presidential candidate Bush has now added to his platform the typically condemned option of allowing Americans to have portions of their Social Security invested in the stock and bond markets. A little history: A part of the New Deal, Social Security was implemented after the Stock Market crashed in 1929 to guarantee income for the elderly in times of a fickle economy. The rudimentary motivation for Social Security was, in effect, market downturns. Interesting.

Bush, trying to finesse his way into the hearts of skeptical Americans, recently voiced his praise for these privatized retirement accounts. Avoiding the increase of payroll taxes and re-allocation of Social Security funds, Bush claims that this option is, in conjunction with market play, "the best and safest way to build personal wealth," according to a CNN report. In reality, this plan merely displaces the fault, directing it away from the government and into the hands of the public.

True, in the long run, stocks and bonds tend to grow, but there is no guarantee. A program based on the principle of certainty defeats its purpose when it adopts a free-wheeling, invest-at-your-own-risk policy. The government has better things to do with its energy than manage a nationwide personal investment vehicle. People can do that without assistance.

Instead, perhaps Bush should focus on revamping certain shady government policies. End the deceitful practice of using Social Security allotments to minimize the appearance of the national debt. Then, make the funds off-limits for political expenditures. In the future, Social Security will likely taper off, but frankly, governmental dignity is a more substantial priority.

Social Security should not be seen as a right or an allowance, but a privilege. Giving young people risky privatized options clearly contradicts the fundamentals of the program.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Students Against Sweatshops continues its fight to disassociate UI from sweatshop labor

By refusing to continue discussing the issue with SAS and the rest of the campus community, and by devolving responsibility for policy from Coleman back to the UI Committee on Human Rights, the UI has indicated that it is more concerned with public relations than the human rights of workers who toil to make Hawkeye apparel.

SAS has pursued every "appropriate channel" in its efforts to inform advisory groups about sweatshop labor conditions, including the Committee on Human Rights, which passed a resolution recommending to Coleman that she immediately withdraw the UI from the Fair Labor Association because of its inherent inability to correct sweatshop labor abuses. When Coleman rejected this recommendation, it became abundantly clear that the president has the power to wholly disregard university committee advice, thereby avoiding responsibility for human-rights issues. This was an open challenge to the campus community to respond by showing strong public concern for sweatshop workers, and it warranted the escalated public actions to hold accountable the sole decision-maker, Coleman. SAS requested and continues to request direct meetings with Coleman to discuss the UI's sweatshop policy, as she has the final and absolute say in all policy decisions. However, at the May 11 meeting, Coleman definitively severed all lines of communication between the UI administration and SAS by refusing any future meetings with SAS representatives and sending us back to the very same Human Rights Committee that had recommended immediately disaffiliating with the FLA months ago.

Phillip Jones, the UI vice president for student services, has suggested to the press that we "don't understand how the university operates"; unfortunately, we understand all too well. Students' grievances, no matter how serious, are unheard amid the excessive bureaucracy of a fundamentally undedemocratic university. University committees serve the illusionary purpose of offering a legitimate forum for students' concerns, but in reality, they are ultimately useless if the president's position prioritizes public relations and profits over the integrity of the UI and the workers who sweat to make our collegiate apparel.

While we remain open to dialogue with university decision-makers, the meeting with Coleman, Jones and other administrators forces us to pursue new avenues through which to effect change. This summer and beyond, we are combining statewide outreach and mass education with unrelenting public pressure that could result in future escalated direct-action campaigns. SAS would like to thank everyone who has so generously supported our work this year. Please join us at this important moment in the struggle for workers' rights.

theater. When performing outside, a lot of unexpected things can come your way, she said, but the experience is worth it.

"It's interesting to look out and see the people sitting in the setting sun," O'Sullivan said.

Saying he likes the idea of an outdoor performance, Iowa City resident Clare Kreiter plans to attend the Twelfth Night on opening night.

"It adds to the ambience. The plays were written with this kind of presentation in mind," he said.

Members of Riverside Theatre first presented the idea for the project to Terry Trueblood, the director of parks and recreation. A proposal was made to the City Council in January 1999, and the council gave approved it in June 1999.

The construction of the theater began last September. Finishing touches are still being made, but the bulk of the construction was finished last month, Trueblood said.

The construction project cost $400,000. The city contributed $320,000 and the remaining $80,000 came from the state, he said.

"The City Council was quick to approve and embrace the project," Goerdts said.

The festival was made possible by donations to the Shakespeare in the Park Campaign. The goal of $400,000 was recently achieved with a $3,000 donation from Firststar Bank.

Twelfth Night will run today through June 18, Thursdays through Sundays. There will be a Family Night on June 14, when families will be able to purchase tickets at the youth price.

Picnics, provided by Devotay, 117 N. Linn St., can be ordered through the Riverside Theatre Box Office. Pre-ordered picnics can be picked up starting two hours before the show but cannot be taken into the theater space.

Mark Hunter, the play's director, said it is a tremendous honor to be inaugurating Iowa City's new Riverside Festival Stage. The festival is a chance for Iowa City to take its place as a regional theatrical center, he said.

"It is the perfect summer and also the perfect romantic experience," O'Sullivan said.

Area farmland shoots up in value

LAND

117 acres of land north of Allison, Iowa, roughly 45 miles northwest of Waterloo, said the price is just a trend that goes along with the increased price of living.

"Everyone is getting paid more, and gas costs more," he said. "The land yields more crops per acre, but the price for those crops isn't up."

Increases in land prices will continue as long as the agriculture economy improves, Breneman said.

"Statewide, the values depend on the profitability of agriculture in the state," he said.

"I don't see land prices dropping within 30 to 40 miles of Iowa City," Meade said. "They will continue to go up unless someone restricts the number of people that move to farms."

Breneman does not foresee land prices dropping, either.

"Everybody wants their own little piece of country," he said. "Land pricing is influenced by the aesthetic and intrinsic value of living on it."

Virus scare worries cell-phone users

Association.

The possible cell-phone complications concerned Keith Bell, a UI junior and owner of a cell phone.

"There's nothing anyone can really do to regulate it," he said. "It's probably only going to get worse."

In addition to an increase of cell-phone use, there has also been a rise in the number of cell-phone owners, said Jason Zeman, an employee of Iowa Wireless, 201 S. Clinton St.

"Last year, the average person would go for the 20 minute-a-month plan; now, many people come in here and want 1,000 minutes a month," he said.

Steering away from conventional phones, UI junior Chris Linn said he has switched to wireless communication and uses his cell phone the majority of the time.

"It's more convenient for me because I'm never home," he said. "You also get all the benefits of a regular phone, such as call waiting and voice mail."

Safety precautions were the main reason that UI junior Nicole Dhooge has her cell phone.

"I got my cell phone two years ago for safety purposes when I commute to and from school, but now I make all my long-distance calls on it, too, because it's a lot cheaper," she said.

Although some users are experiencing the benefits of wireless communication, there also have been dangers cited in addition to the recently discovered virus.

A 1997 study done by The New England Journal of Medicine showed that the risk of being in some type of traffic incident while using a cellular phone was nearly four times that of the average driver.

UI junior Carrie Bauer said that while she was bothered by the results of the study, she will most likely continue to use her cell phone while driving.

The Associated Press and DI reporter Erica Driskill contributed to this article.

CITY BRIEF

Appearances set for student charged in rape

September and October court dates have been set for Daniel J. Macchia, a UI junior charged with third-degree sexual abuse in February.

A pretrial conference has been scheduled for Sep. 28 at 2 p.m. At the conference, Macchia will either reaffirm the not-guilty plea he entered at his arraignment, enter a plea of guilty, or come to a plea agreement.

A jury trial is scheduled for Oct. 9 at 9 a.m. A speedy trial was waived.

Macchia, 20, allegedly raped a woman after she fell asleep at the Kappa Sigma fraternity house, 724 N. Dubuque St., according to court records.

Macchia is a member of Kappa Sigma.

According to Iowa City police, the woman awoke to find Macchia engaged in sexual intercourse with her.

executive director of the festival.

The biggest draw, she predicts, will be the concert by Shawn Colvin, perhaps best known for her 1998 song of the year and No. 1 Billboard hit "Sonny Came Home." She will perform at 8:30 p.m.

Local folk-music legend Greg Brown describes Colvin's music as a dark river flowing through fields of snow.

"Her influence is unbelievable. She is a fantastic rhythm guitar player. Plus she's just fun," he said.

Acts ranging from local favorite Dave Zollo to party-music and zydeco-masters Terrance Simien Band will perform each evening.

Last year, 40,000 people showed up in downtown Iowa City to take part in the music and other festival activities. Jennings said she expects a similar number this year, or perhaps even more.

Washington Street will display the culinary arts in a food court that will include 16 vendors, allowing people to choose from a wide variety of summer treats and ethnic foods, including Greek, Indian and Italian.

Nearby, Dubuque Street and other sections of Washington Street will be filled with tents housing more than 80 artists in the festival art fair. The artists featured at the festival were selected from approximately 120 entries sent to the festival office in March.

Iowa City artist Tom Wegman will have his work on display at the festival.

"Every arts show that I go to is always a great surprise — both in quality and in variety of items," he said.

The festival also includes activities for kids. All day Saturday and Sunday, kids can show off their artistic abilities, making collages and sculptures in the Black Hawk Mini Park. The pieces created will be displayed in the park throughout the festival, Jennings said.

Stars far away from repeating as champs

Dallas is wishing on its lucky stars that they can prolong this season, down 3-1 in the series.

By Alan Robinson
 Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J.—The Stanley Cup will be so close Thursday, the Dallas Stars can touch it. They hope it won't be only to hand it to the New Jersey Devils.

The NHL often refers to the Stanley Cup as the oldest trophy in major pro sports and, because of the two months of playoffs required to earn it, the most difficult to win.

However, no defending champion has come this far back to win the Stanley Cup finals. Twenty-five teams have attempted to rally from a 3-1 deficit; only the 1942 Toronto Maple Leafs accomplished it, and they weren't trying to repeat, like the Stars are.

"When a team's down like they are, you've got to bury them," Devils rookie Scott Gomez said.

The Stars certainly didn't show much life in Game 4, appearing tired, leg-weary and, well, old, in losing 3-1 in Dallas. They looked much like the confidence-depleted Penguins did in losing their five-overtime second-round game against Philadelphia, and Pittsburgh never won again.

However, the Stars feel they got a break by getting two days off before Game 5 in the Meadowlands, rather than the customary one day. Instead of having to fly immediately to New Jersey, they got an extra day and a half at home to rest and regroup.

They needed it, too. The Stars double-shifted some of their stars in the first four games, including center Mike Modano, a factor that may have weighed into them losing their 1-0 lead in the third period of Game 4.

The Devils, by contrast, played each of their forwards at least 11 minutes but no more than 18 minutes Monday. That's the kind of strength-saving move few teams can afford in the finals, the kind of depth that has them one victory away from the going-away present outgoing owner John McMullen asked for — namely, the Stanley Cup.

Norman makes another conquest in Paris

PARIS — Magnus Norman had nothing to worry about until Marat Safin smashed his second racket, decapitating the crimson head from the neck after losing the first two sets.

Then, for most of the next two sets, Norman couldn't stop worrying until the fiery young Russian broke a third racket when his final forehand flew long.

Norman, the hottest player on the men's tour this year, survived a ferocious duel with Safin, a 20-year-old whose talent is almost equal to his temper, winning 6-4, 6-3, 4-6, 7-5 Wednesday to reach the French Open semifinals.

Illinois pursuing Oklahoma's coach

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. — Illinois athletic director Ron Guenther is pursuing Oklahoma basketball coach Kelvin Sampson for the Illini job vacated two weeks ago by Lon Kruger, who left to coach the Atlanta Hawks.

A clerk at the Sheraton Four Points Hotel near the Oklahoma City airport said Guenther was a guest there, but checked out early Wednesday morning. Oklahoma athletic director Joe Castiglione confirmed that Guenther had contacted him to speak with Sampson.

Wednesday morning, the University of Illinois' board of trustees, which would have to approve any coaching hire, scheduled a closed meeting Friday in Chicago to discuss "a matter of personnel." University officials would not say if the personnel matter involved the basketball program.

Technician: Defendant's blood on victim

ATLANTA — Blood from a defendant in the trial that once included NFL star Ray Lewis was on one of two men stabbed to death after the Super Bowl, a crime scene technician testified Wednesday.

The technician, Dawn Pierce, said that blood from Reginald Oakley was found on the coat of JaCinth Baker who was wearing when he and Richard Lollar were killed.

Of three bloodstains on the coat, two came from Baker and one was a mixture of blood from Oakley and Baker, she said.

In his opening statement, District Attorney Paul Howard promised jurors evidence of a "blood trail" that would link the defendants to the slayings.

 New Jersey goaltender Martin Brodeur follows through on a shot during practice Wednesday.

"We're up 3-1, this is the fifth game and this could be the closing game of the Stanley Cup," said Claude Lemieux, who is trying to win his fourth Stanley Cup and his second with New Jersey. "You have to focus on it and make it happen."

However, Stars coach Ken Hitchcock liked the look of his team in practice Wednesday, even

Patrol to investigate speeding warning given to Kurt Warner

DES MOINES (AP) — The Iowa State Patrol will investigate whether a trooper violated rules by only giving Kurt Warner a warning for speeding.

Sgt. Randy Jones said he stopped a vehicle driven by the Super Bowl and NFL MVP on March 23, as Warner was headed to a Red Cross benefit in the Cedar Falls area. Warner was driving 74 mph in a 55 mph zone, but Jones issued a warning instead of a ticket.

The patrol said in a statement Tuesday that troopers are given discretion, but "it is not the policy of the Iowa State Patrol to issue a warning for speeding 19 mph over the posted speed limit."

The patrol said the results of the investigation will remain confidential.

Warner, quarterback of the St. Louis Rams, told of the encounter last month, when he was in Iowa to have his jersey number retired by his former Arena League team, the Iowa Barnstormers.

"He comes up and recognizes me and says, 'Hey, it's a pleasure to meet you,' Warner said. "I'm thinking, 'All right, I'm in good shape.'"

Warner did have to do one favor: "He asked if I would get out of my truck and go back in front of the squad car and wave into his camera so that his son would really believe that he pulled over Kurt Warner."

Crouch back on team after paying for sandwich, plane ride

LINCOLN, Neb. — Eric Crouch is back on the Nebraska football team after paying for a plane ride and ham sandwich he recently received that raised some questions with the NCAA.

The team's starting quarterback was temporarily suspended from the team after the university learned he had not paid for the ride and sandwich, which is not permitted under NCAA rules.

Nebraska director of compliance Bob Burton said Crouch's seemingly innocent mistake was quickly rectified when the quarterback recently wrote a check to charity for the amount of $22.77.

As a player for the Hawkeyes, Morgan's playing time was limited at first. He eventually worked his way up to playing behind Roy Marble in Iowa's 1987 and 1988 Elite Eight and Sweet Sixteen appearances in the NCAA tournament.

Morgan said the atmosphere at Iowa is a lot different being a coach from what it was as a player. Yet even with the change, he still feels familiar with the UI setting and is looking forward to his future with the Hawkeyes.

"The biggest thing for me was just coming to a place where I felt at home, and Iowa City could give that to me," Morgan said. "Iowa is a place that I am so familiar with, so when the opportunity arose to come back, it was just like a dream come true."

For the past 11 years, Morgan has been living in Urbandale, Iowa, where he was the Urbandale High School assistant boys' basketball coach. He also has experience coaching AAU basketball teams as well as helping Bluder with her past camps at Drake University.

Bluder said Morgan will bring a lot of knowledge to the program. "Michael is an exceptional coach," she said. "He brings with him an extensive knowledge of the game, a love for basketball and a love for the university. He will make a great addition to our program, especially in the area of recruitment."

Morgan has come to know Bluder on a personal level through working with her at Drake University in different capacities. He said her ability to be a great coach as well as a great person had a major effect on his decision to come back as a coach.

"I really appreciate the opportunity to be a part of this great staff," Morgan said. "Coach Bluder has been confident in my abilities as a coach and as a recruiter. She is a coach who is definitely going to take this program to another level, and I feel so fortunate to be a part of that."

have a letdown. We wanted to set the tone for this series."

As well as things went for O'Neal, they were equally bad for Miller as he missed all six of his shots in the first quarter.

Miller had his first shot of the second quarter emphatically rejected by Robert Horry and didn't score from the field until past the midpoint of the third quarter. He missed every shot he took the rest of the night.

"I've never really seen him off for two straight games," O'Neal said. "I know he'll come ready Friday."

Indiana pulled within six early in the third on a 3-pointer by Rose, but O'Neal scored on a put-back, Horry dunked off a feed from Bryant and Fox scored on a give-and-go layup off an assist by Derek Fisher to quickly build the lead back to 12.

The Lakers were having their way with ease, no matter which end of the court they were on. Midway through the third quarter, Jackson drove to the basket and had his shot swatted away by Bryant. O'Neal then converted a short jumper, drew Smits' fifth foul and banked in a put-back for a 69-57 lead.

That was about the point when the Pacers started executing their offense as well as they had all night. Three foul shots by Miller, a three-point play by Jackson, consecutive baskets by Dale Davis and a reverse layup by Jackson made it 71-69, giving the Lakers their first scare of the night.

But Los Angeles got its lead back to six by the end of the third quarter, and O'Neal had a dunk and two assists in the first two minutes of the fourth as the Lakers quickly got their lead back to double digits.

an in-your-face guy. Sammy's our main guy on the team. Don's our manager. They're both grown men. They need to get on the same page and get on with business.

"It's like a couple of big ol' bulls fighting over territory," Grace said.

Over the weekend, Baylor said the team would have to consider a trade if the Cubs fell further out of contention.

"Of course, with any possible trade," he said, "you'd want to hear what you could get in return."

Sosa declined to respond when asked if he believes he might not be with the Cubs for much longer. As a player with 10 years in the major leagues and five with the same team, Sosa has the right to refuse a trade.

"I don't know what's going to happen," Sosa said. "I really want to stay here in Chicago."

Sosa is concerned the negative comments might harm his relationship with the fans. "I come here to play hard for my fans, the people who love me out there," he said. "I don't want those negative comments to get to the people who really love me and care about me, have them turn against me."

Rocker says he might become a stockbroker the minors. But it was unclear if Rocker planned to follow their advice, the source said.

Several players reacted with amusement when told that Rocker was considering a new career path. Outfielder Brian Jordan, who called Rocker a "cancer" after Sunday's confrontation with Pearlman, smiled in disbelief and held his hands over his ears.

"Unbelievable," Jordan said. Reliever Kerry Ligtenberg added, "I knew he was interested in that, but I don't know if he's qualified. I don't think you can just become a stockbroker. Maybe he could be a day trader."

Rocker, who has not spoken with reporters since his demotion, has made regular appearances on WKLS, known in Atlanta as "96 Rock," since joining the Braves in 1998. Last month, the station arranged a meeting with Andrew Tellers, the 24-year-old California man who mooned Rocker during a game at Dodger Stadium.

Rocker was originally scheduled to be on the morning show Monday but backed out after the confrontation with Pearlman, said Christopher Calandro, the show's executive producer. The pitcher called in Wednesday, however.

"We have been wanting him to come on for a while," Calandro said. "Then all the stuff happened with Pearlman. He was committed to do the show, so we were the benefactor."

Rocker, who had 38 saves last year but has 25 walks in 18 1-3 innings this season, said he might quit rather than go to the minors. He has until Thursday to report to Toledo, Ohio, where Richmond was playing a three-game series.

"I got a pretty raw deal of raw deals this time," Rocker told the radio station. "There's plenty of things I can do besides dealing with the headaches of this garbage every single day."

He talked of returning to college to earn his business degree.

"There's something to be said for having a job that is not just a complete headache," Rocker said.

Most of the interview focused on his run-in with Pearlman, which occurred in a tunnel near the Braves clubhouse a couple of hours before Sunday's game against the New York Yankees. The reporter was in Atlanta to do a story on the rematch of last year's World Series.

"For a minute and a half, I yelled at him," Rocker said. "I didn't use profanity. I told him what a bad article I thought it was. ... I told him a lot of stuff he put in the article didn't need to be said."

He said he blames Pearlman for causing the public outcry that followed publication of the remarks in December. Rocker was suspended for a month and fined $20,000 by commissioner Bud Selig, but an arbitrator reduced the sanctions to a two-week suspension and $500 fine.

Rocker also believes he should get an apology from Pearlman for "the pain and suffering he caused."

"He, of course, put the blame for everything on me," the pitcher said. "He said he was just doing his job."

Rocker said the confrontation with Pearlman was blown out of proportion.

"I scold this guy for a minute and a half and instead of standing there and taking it like a man, he has to run back and say, 'John Rocker yelled at me,'" Rocker said. "Looking back, maybe I shouldn't have. But the only repercussions that guy got to face was to get scolded for a minute and a half, instead of being a man and saying, 'I'm sorry for everything you've been through.'"

According to Pearlman, Rocker made threats like "Do you know what I can do to you?"

Finals answer: Apparently, few want to watch NHL's millionaires

Game 1 of the NHL Finals draws 800,000 fewer viewers than the first day of the WNBA.

By Alan Robinson
Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — No, the NHL isn't desperate enough for TV ratings to sign Nancy Kerrigan and Tonya Harding for the rest of the Stanley Cup finals.

Another game in a tuned-out and often tediously played finals between the Dallas Stars and the New Jersey No-Stars — make that the Devils — and the NHL might be tempted.

ABC will bump its big-ratings "Who Wants to Be a Millionaire" for Game 5 Thursday, but it appears only hockey purists and hard-core sports fans are watching these millionaires.

Game 1 between two defense-driven teams built around the numbingly boring neutral zone trap drew 1.5 million viewers on ESPN, about 800,000 fewer the first day of the WNBA regular season. That's W-NBA.

The overnight rating for Game 3, the first on ABC, was 3.1, but dropped to 2.3 in the final national numbers. That means only 2.3 of every 100 homes nationally were watching.

Apparently, the other 97.7 percent have something better to do than watch Brett Hull attempt to weave his way through four defenders jammed between the blue lines just to get into his own offensive zone.

Even in Dallas, the Game 1 ratings were down 25 percent from the Stars-Sabres finals of a year ago; in New York, the Devils' home base, Game 3 was barely a blip on the ratings map. That's not surprising, however, since the Devils are arguably the No. 8 or No. 9 game in town behind the Yankees and Mets, Giants and Jets, Rangers, Knicks and Nets.

ABC knew it wouldn't get big numbers when it shelled out $600 million for NHL TV rights, an investment made mostly to preserve hundreds of nights of live programming for corporately owned ESPN and ESPN2. Still, the Game 3 ratings Saturday were the lowest for any ABC prime-time show this season.

The Game 4 ratings Monday improved slightly to 3.3, but were down 60 percent for ABC's normal prime time programming. The Game 5 ratings will likely be a fraction of the 17.5 rating that "Millionaire" normally attracts.

Looks like the only New Jerseyite that TV viewers are inclined to watch is Tony Soprano.

Still, NHL commissioner Gary Bettman said, "I am comfortable where we are. We are getting great production. They are giving us a big-event feel and, over time, I think we are going to see sustained growth in a market where everybody else seems to be declining in all programming."

Unlike a quarter of a century ago, when the three networks were about the only live, in-home evening entertainment choice, millions of homebodies now can choose between scores on channels on cable or the satellite dish, surfing the Net or watching DVD movies.

As attention spans grow shorter, it is becoming even harder for the NHL to grow fans for a sport that, to the newcomer, can be prohibitively hard to learn and, because of the small puck, hard to follow on TV.

Those who like it love it, but it seems everybody else pays almost no attention to hockey at all, not without big stars (Wayne Gretzky and Mario Lemieux are owners now, not players) or compelling story lines.

Need proof? Ask a neighborhood kid who Jason Arnott is. (P.S. He's the top-line center for the team that is one victory away from winning the Stanley Cup.)

Women wrestler guns for Olympics

The Olympics doesn't have women's wrestling yet, but a Cedar Rapids native hopes there will be soon.

CEDAR RAPIDS (AP) — A wrestler from Iowa City with Olympic aspirations is nothing new — unless that wrestler is a woman.

Dominique Smalley, a 1997 graduate of Iowa City High, will compete in the junior world championships next month in France. Women's wrestling is not an Olympic sport yet, but Smalley is hoping it will be added for the 2004 Games in Athens.

If that happens, "I figure I'll have three Olympics I'll be able to compete in," Smalley said.

Smalley, 20, earned a berth in the world meet by winning the title at 165.25 pounds at the junior national championships and world team trials in Battle Creek, Mich., last weekend.

She also finished second in the senior nationals to earn a spot on the national team for the third straight year.

"Everything I've done has been real good training," Smalley said. "I feel that I'm in really good physical shape. I feel I'm ready to go."

Smalley has been wrestling for eight years, starting in middle school and then wrestling for coach Brad Smith at City High. She spent a season on the women's team at Minnesota-Morris before transferring to Iowa State.

But she felt her training suffered in Ames, so she moved to Colorado Springs, and she has spent the past year at the Olympic Training Center there. This fall, Smalley said, she will join the women's wrestling team at Missouri Valley College in Marshall, Mo.

Ideally, she'll enroll at Missouri Valley as a world champion. Smalley said she likes her chances at the junior meet because she'll be wrestling down a level after competing in senior tournaments recently.

She finished fifth at the Poland International Open in 1998 and placed second at an international tournament in Sweden earlier this year.

"I'm definitely confident," Smalley said. "Both the national coach and I are expecting me to win the junior worlds."

Smalley started wrestling because she liked athletics but, as she put it, "wasn't into basketball." She has seen women's wrestling grow significantly in the United States and around the world.

Approximately 1,700 women compete in USA Wrestling's programs, compared with 760 in 1994. Growth also has been strong at the high school level, where the number of girls competing rose from 112 in 1989-90 to 2,361 in 1998-99.

"Each year, it kind of builds up," Smalley said. "You don't get to see the depth (in other countries) at tournaments because it's only their national team. But it's real popular in Europe."

Teams ready for CWS

The College World Series is set to start Friday in Omaha.

By Doug Alden
Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — San Jose State baseball coach Sam Piraro didn't get a whole lot of time to prepare the day after the Spartans qualified for their first College World Series.

Phone calls from reporters, former players, even a college roommate kept Piraro busy throughout initial innings. If they get through those I think they'll be fine."

"It's been a zoo. But it's been a fun zoo," Piraro said.

San Jose State and Louisiana-Lafayette are the two newcomers to the CWS, which opens Friday at Omaha's Rosenblatt Stadium. The Spartans open the tournament Friday against Clemson, which is unbeaten since losing in the Atlantic Coast Conference title game.

Louisiana-Lafayette (47-18) and Stanford (47-15) play in Friday's late game.

Stanford is making its 12th trip to Omaha, two ending with national championships, and Clemson is in the CWS for the ninth time. San Jose State (41-22) had not been in the NCAA tournament since 1971 and had never advanced to Omaha.

"Now we get to a different level," said Piraro, in his 14th season at the school. "Going into that stadium probably will give everybody goose bumps. There's going to be a bit of adrenaline, but I'm hoping that will carry them through initial innings. If they get through those I think they'll be fine."

The Ragin' Cajuns and Spartans are in the bracket with Stanford, the top-ranked team in the tournament and ranked No. 1 in the latest Collegiate Baseball and Baseball America polls.

Having two CWS rookies in the bracket doesn't mean an automatic trip to the championship. Stanford coach Mark Marquess said.

Louisiana-Lafayette went to Columbia, S.C., and, after losing the first game, won two from South Carolina, which spent five weeks at No. 1 this season. San Jose State made it to Omaha for the first time by beating Houston on the road. The Spartans also went 1-1 against Stanford this season.

San Francisco quarterback Steve Young runs a victory lap after the 49ers beat the San Diego Chargers in Super Bowl XXIX.

Young weighs either returning or retiring

While he has been cleared to play by some doctors, Steve Young has yet to decide on his future.

By Dennis Georgatos
Associated Press

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — An unconscious Steve Young crumpled on the turf. It's an image that sticks in the mind.

And the fear it could happen again with more devastating consequences is at the core of the question of whether Young plays again or walks away from football.

A dazzling runner and passer who overcame the shadow of Joe Montana to lead the San Francisco 49ers to their fifth Super Bowl title in 1994, Young hasn't played since Sept. 27, when a hit from blitzing Arizona cornerback Aeneas Williams left him with his fourth concussion in three years.

For the first time, Young also endured for weeks post-concussion symptoms of nausea, dizziness, headaches and lethargy.

Now, at 38, he must decide his future. By the end of this week, Young says he will decide from three options: resume his career with the 49ers, a remote possibility for the cap-stressed, rebuilding team; ask for his release and play elsewhere, mostly likely Denver; or retire from a game he has played for 30 years, 17 as a professional.

He must make the choice amid public debate, divided medical opinion and his own confusing mix of feelings.

"It's not hard to figure out that this is something everyone has an opinion on," said Young, who spent eight months consulting with neurologists on what he calls "one of the most fundamental decisions in my career."

"Everywhere I have been to see experts across the country, clinically I passed with flying colors. We talked about the mystery involved. I have to weigh out the risks inherent with playing football and what I have been through. But as far as being strong and healthy and clinically cleared, I am."

That said, Young has yet to go back to his primary neurologist, Dr. Gary Steinberg, who already has made a long-term recommendation. At Young's request, Steinberg has kept it confidential, but it's believed he urged Young to stop playing.

San Francisco general manager Bill Walsh says Young couldn't return to the 49ers without a clearance from Steinberg and a few other doctors.

Young has resisted returning to Steinberg because, according to a source close to Young requesting anonymity, the neurologist became "politicized" by public opinion and colleagues pressing for him to rule out Young's return to football.

There are risks associated with repeated concussions, including premature senility. And there's no way to predict the impact from more hits should Young keep playing or the damage they could cause.

"To me, one of the problems is that if Steve decides to come back, somebody has to give him the green light," Carolina coach George Seifert, who coached Young in San Francisco, said in March. "How would you like to be the person who gave him the green light and have something happen to Steve Young?"

Friends, family, including brother Tom, who is a doctor, and Walsh, who as 49ers coach pulled off the 1987 trade that brought Young to San Francisco from Tampa Bay, all have told Young he's accomplished enough and should retire.

Walsh even raised the analogy of a punch-drunk fighter in airing his concerns.

The timing for retirement, they say, is perfect. He's already well prepared for life after football, having earned a law degree, and he's financially set.

In March, he married Barbara Graham, and the couple is expecting a baby in late December. Young has worked for ABC as an analyst, and there is speculation he is among the leading candidates for the Monday Night Football slot left vacant by the firing of Boomer Esiason.

But the Broncos would like Young to help them make another Super Bowl run.

Paint the town (not necessarily) red

■ A piece of artwork could involve hundreds of people during the Friday Night Concert Series this summer.

By Emily Maher
The Daily Iowan

This summer, area residents will have the opportunity to contribute to artwork that will be displayed in Hancher Auditorium during the 2000-01 season.

Hancher has teamed up with the Downtown Association's Friday Night Concert Series to "paint the town" all summer on the Pedestrian Mall. The project is based on the 2000-01 Hancher theme, "Come on, babe, why don't you paint the town? And all that jazz..." from the hit Broadway musical Chicago, which will appear at Hancher in March 2001.

Hancher is providing 15 4x8 plywood boards for the public to paint an anthropomorphic town using acrylic house paint during the Friday night concerts.

The project is something that everyone can take part in, said local artist Deanne Wortman, who is working on it. All people have a bit of an artist in them, she said.

"I think people would enjoy it if they would just pick up a brush and give it a try," Wortman said. "These projects allow people to give it a try."

The project will open at Friday evening's Dave Zollo show. At that time, City Manager Steve Atkins will "take off his good suit" and paint the first strokes.

Wortman designed the basic outline for the town, an "imagined fantastical cityscape." She painted the outline on the boards, and for the rest of the summer, the community is invited to come and fill it in.

"It will be like painting a comic book, and anyone can paint a comic book, so anyone can paint this city," she said.

The aim of the project is to allow people to express their creativity while also serving as a promotion for Hancher. Everyone above the age of 8 is welcome to contribute; there are "no artistic skills required," said Chuck Swanson, Hancher's associate director.

UI sophomore David Müller said he plans to be out helping "paint the town" sometime this summer. "It's a really good idea," he said. "It's a great way to see the art that the community can do."

Wortman will attend every session to provide any artistic advice the participants ask for. She will be a sort of "conductor of the color orchestra," she said. Wortman has the background and experience to be the ideal "conductor"; she has done several similar projects both locally and overseas.

When the boards are finished, they will be hinged together to create a "complete environment that people can walk around in," Wortman said. They will be arranged in zigzags and squares to create a set-like city. The "city" will also include holes for people to look through so they can explore the painted city.

The finished project will be displayed in the Hancher lobby during the 2000-01 season.

The chance to contribute to artwork that hundreds of people will see can be rewarding, said UI junior Casey Wilmesmeier, whose artwork was displayed while she was in high school.

"People stand around and talk about it, and it's really interesting to hear other people's opinions," she said. "It's nice to know that you've done something that has some kind of meaning in it."

The boards will be available to the public during the concerts from 6-9 p.m. Friday on June 16, 23 and 30, and on July 1 and 2 during Jazz Fest. They will also be a part of the Arts Fest Saturday and on June 11 from noon to 5 p.m.

ARTS BRIEF

Praising Generation Us

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Steven Spielberg challenged his and future generations to follow the example set by those who fought in World War II.

"The baby boomer generation has been drifting along, redefining itself every few years through music, fashion, popular culture and technology," the director of Saving Private Ryan told a crowd of approximately 13,500 during Tuesday's opening ceremonies for the National D-Day Museum.

"Unless we are united in our battles against cancer, AIDS, or — as we were under JFK and Martin Luther King — in our fight for civil rights, then we have been living more for ourselves, for our own individuality, fighting to achieve our 15 minutes of fame."

Silence then turned to applause as Spielberg commended the veterans for what he felt they stood for.

"My dad's generation, the greatest generation, wasn't the 'me' generation but the 'us' generation," said Spielberg, whose father was in attendance.

Since filming the 1999 Oscar-winning war film, Spielberg has worked on two other World War II projects: a documentary about military cameramen and Band of Brothers, a yet-to-be released HBO series about a D-Day parachute company.

Museum officials said Spielberg also donated his time and more than $1 million toward the project.
