UI uses reserve funds to buy Varsity House

The regents are expected to approve the university's purchase today.

By Kelly Oulman
The Daily Iowan

The UI purchase of a former fraternity house is expected to be approved by the state of Iowa Board of Regents today.

The Varsity House, an all-male, privately run dormitory at 322 N. Clinton St., will eventually be used for a "living-learning environment" that would allow organizations on campus, such as those for studying language or women's groups, to use the house, said Steve Parrott, the interim director of university relations.

Before the property becomes a place for student groups, the UI plans to lease the house to the Sigma Alpha Mu fraternity for approximately five years, beginning Aug. 1, he said.

The current owner, Omicron Holding Corp., is expected to turn over possession of the $570,000 property on June 30.

Although the UI is working with a reduced budget for the next fiscal year in the wake of the state Legislature's reduced funding, the university will still be able to purchase the Varsity House because the property will be paid for by income from Treasurer's Temporary Investments.

That income comes from money the UI routinely invests that is not being used for other purposes, Parrott said.

The money is separate from budget-related funds, he said.

"Treasurer's Temporary Investments is kind of like a reserve fund," said Phillip Jones, the UI vice president for student services. "It's money that can be used for things that come up."

Sigma Alpha Mu will rent the property at $6,250 per month ($75,000 per year) for the first year; the rent will increase by approximately 3 percent each year, resulting in payments totaling $84,408 per year in the fifth year.

The UI will use the income from the rent paid by Sigma Alpha Mu to let the house pay for itself, Parrott said.

The lease includes a term that allows the UI to use the property before the five years is over. However, the UI must give the fraternity 365 days' notice before taking possession of the property.

The Varsity House will be moved to a new location this fall, although no permanent place has been found yet, said John Phipps, who leased the house this year.

Phipps said he was upset about not keeping the house, but he had the option of buying it and declined. He chose not to buy the house because he preferred renting it, he said.

Before the house was leased to Varsity House's Phipps, it was the home of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity, a chapter that lost its charter because of accusations of drug and alcohol violations in 1999.

Court offers hearing on Microsoft appeal

The software titan wins the first round of legal battles over which court should hear the appeal.

By Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Acting at its first opportunity, the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals said Tuesday a full complement of its judges would hear Microsoft's appeal of a sweeping breakup order that was imposed for antitrust violations.

But the government may still be able to bypass that court in favor of a direct hearing before the Supreme Court.

In a preliminary victory for the giant software manufacturer, the circuit court acted before U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson could hear the government's request to bypass the circuit court and send the case directly to the Supreme Court.

The government and Microsoft are engaged in legal maneuvering to determine whether the company's appeal will go straight to the Supreme Court or first to the circuit court, where Microsoft won a ruling in an earlier phase of the case.

The circuit court said because of the case's "exceptional importance" and the disqualification of three of its 10 judges, it would hear the company's appeal with all seven remaining judges. This would skip the normal three-judge hearing, followed by a full court rehearing.

The circuit court acted shortly after Microsoft almost simultaneously filed a notice of appeal with Jackson and a motion with the circuit court to stay Jackson's penalties, even though Jackson was also con-

Tuesday's severe thunderstorms caused some inconveniences for thousands of Iowa City residents, ranging from fallen branches to lost power to canceled airplane flights.

The National Weather Service said more storms are expected today. Tuesday night's storms brought nearly two inches of rain.

On Tuesday, flash-flood watches for Iowa City continued through the night. A severe-thunderstorm watch for the Iowa City area was set to expire at 2 a.m. today.

A power outage caused 1,600 MidAmerican Energy Co. customers to lose electrical power; City High School, 1900 Morning-side Drive, and Lemme Elementary School, 3100 E. Washington St., also lost power.

Marge Burke, a MidAmerican media representative for Eastern Iowa, said a substation was in the process of being repaired. As of

Racking it up on the River City tables

Local pool players vary in skill but not in their love of the game.

By Andrew T. Dawson
The Daily Iowan

For Iowa City resident Stan Yoder, it started 15 years ago with a friendly game of pool against his 7-year-old cousin. He lost.

After the game, Yoder went home and read a book about the basics of pool. Then he went back and beat her.

"She was quick to point out the agony of defeat," Yoder remembers.

Today, Yoder, 39, plays in the Iowa City Eight Ball League and sells pool cues out of his barber shop, Stan's Barber Stylists, 111 S. Linn St. The cues range in price from $150-$750.

Two league trophies sit on a shelf, commemorating past victories.

"Oh, I kind of move (the balls) from one end to the other," Yoder said, laughing, as he modestly talked about his skill level.

Pool is played on a wood or slate table covered with felt. The tables are exactly twice as long as they are wide.

Not to be confused with billiards, which is played on a table with no pockets, pool is played by people across the country who take pleasure in the game's many variations.

In Iowa City, pool is a favorite pastime for students and residents, who can find a table at most bars, said UI junior Justin Stuedemann, as he played a three-person game called cutthroat with friends Monday at the College Street Billiards Club, 114 E. College St.

They enjoy playing but admit that they're not quite ready for ESPN.

"We're too embarrassed to play with other people," Stuedemann joked. "Everybody else probably just laughs at us, but we're competitive between friends."

For others, such as Iowa City resident Cody Mason, pool is not just a pastime, it's a passion.

Holding a leather-wrapped, handmade cue decorated with ivory and sterling silver, Mason passed a Monday afternoon at the billiards club engaged in a leisurely game of pool with a friend.

"It's a tough game to learn," Mason said as his ball rolled into the corner pocket.

Pool cues are an essential element for the game, and players are sometimes very particular about their selection, Mason said. Cues can cost as much as $3,000.

More skywalk problems: leaks, inverted Whitman

The recent snags follow broken window panes and an inaccurate rendering of a DNA molecule.

By Megan Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

Not even the pedestrians in the Dubuque Street skywalk could escape the rain as it poured down Tuesday afternoon.

A leaky roof is yet another problem for the recently constructed skywalk, which connects the UI Biology Building with the newly opened Biology Building East.

"Because of the unusual weather, I don't think the leaking will be a recurring problem," said Steve Buckman, a senior architect for UI facilities services. "The source of the leaking will have to be found to evaluate whether it will be necessary for us to fix it."

In addition to the leaks, the skywalk has had problems with broken window panes during construction, as well as recently discovered technical design problems.

Upside-down calligraphy letters mar Walt Whitman quotations set in the floor in the middle of the skywalk. Six instances of inverted S's, along with four upside-down N's, have been discovered in the two copies of the quotation, one of which faces east and the other west.

Although the average person may not notice the inverted letters, John Downer, a professional font designer, noticed the errors when he took a stroll through the skywalk.

"It was obvious to me that the person or persons who did this were incompetent and inexperienced," he said.

Turning those Brown eyes blue

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A judge has sentenced Bobby Brown to 75 days in jail for violating his probation for a drunken-driving conviction.

"I just want to continue on with my sobriety and get back home to my family," the singer told reporters after Monday's sentence. "It's been really tough."

A prosecutor agreed to drop the most serious charge against Brown, that he failed a drug test by testing positive for cocaine. Brown agreed to plead guilty to refusing to take a second drug test and failing to return from a trip to Beverly Hills, Calif., on time.

Brown has been in custody since May 10. He will remain in Broward County Jail until July 8. Brown spent five days in jail in 1998 and was placed on probation for one year after he was convicted of drunken driving and causing an accident on Aug. 17, 1996.

Brown

A warrant was issued for Brown's arrest last June, after his probation officer said he tested positive for cocaine in a urine test.

Bruce Lyons, Brown's attorney, said Brown and his wife, Whitney Houston, should be able to spend their July 18 wedding anniversary — their eighth — together.

The superstar singer has been absent from her husband's court proceedings, but Lyons said, she has visited him since his arrest.

"She wants to help him, not hurt him. If she showed up today, it would have been a major zoo," Lyons said.

Andy Griffith recovering slowly

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — Andy Griffith, scheduled to appear in the movie Daddy and Them with Bill Bob Thornton this fall, is recovering from a heart attack and quadruple bypass surgery.

Griffith, 74, underwent surgery on May 9 at a Norfolk, Va., hospital. Doctors anticipate a complete recovery, his agent said.

Long-time friend Barbara Forrest of Mount Airy, the actor's hometown and the inspiration for the fictional town of Mayberry on "The Andy Griffith Show," said Griffith's wife, Cindi, said her husband is still weak, but slowly recovering at his Manteo home.

Who wants to be a mannequin?

NEW YORK (AP) — Regis Philbin thinks he has the final answer in fashion: He's started his own clothing line featuring the stylish duds he wears on his hit show, "Who Wants to Be a Millionaire."

Philbin appeared at Macy's flagship store on 34th Street on Monday to launch the "Regis by the Van Heusen Company" line.

The star toured the window displays featuring wall-size photos of him at different stages in his life behind mannequins with Philbin masks wearing, of course, his trademark monochrome cotton shirt and satin tie ensembles.

"It brings back memories," he quipped of the photos in one of his few utterances to the press, between big, stiff smiles for the cameras.

Symposium to outline connections between urban stories, planning

Mayors, county supervisors, and other elected and appointed officials from around Eastern Iowa have been invited to join historians, literary theorists, geographers, urban planners and other scholars for a three-day symposium, "Planning as Storytelling: Sustaining America's Cities," at the UI Thursday through Saturday.

Symposium directors Barbara Eckstein, a UI associate professor of English, and James Throgmorton, a UI associate professor of urban and regional planning, say they hope to provide a deeper understanding of the relationship between urban planning and stories of urban life.

They say bringing historians and literary scholars together with those on the front lines of urban planning provides a unique opportunity for interaction between scholars and practitioners.

"What is at stake in such intertwined narratives is the fate of U.S. cities," Eckstein said. "This future depends on, in large part, the ability of various urban practitioners and theoreticians to hear the multiple stories of all those groups and individuals who have a stake in the economic well-being, environmental health, social justice and ethical vitality of urban life."

Historians record the past. Urban planners create projections for the future. Storytellers tell tales of life past, present, and future. Throgmorton said those involved in these seemingly disparate disciplines can learn a great deal from each other. "Planning could be thought of as a form of storytelling," he said. "It's how to connect the past of a city with its present and its future."

During the symposium, five practitioners will tell stories from their varied experiences in urban communities, and following those presentations, four "interpreters" will attempt to put those stories into the larger context of urban development.

While Napster has caused problems at colleges across the nation, UI students are still turning from their favorite groups' CDs to the computer program.

Napster, a music-trading program, was developed by Shawn Fanning, a 19-year old college dropout. It allows users to trade MP3s, which are CD-quality audio files that can be played on such programs as Winamp.

The program was released in August 1999 and has caught on at college campuses, but it is facing many problems from the music industry and college administrators.

So far, UI free of Napster problems

While many colleges have banned the program, the UI hasn't seen any problems yet, officials say.

By Carolyn Kresser
The Daily Iowan

While Napster has caused problems at colleges across the nation, UI students are still turning from their favorite groups' CDs to the computer program.

Napster, a music-trading program, was developed by Shawn Fanning, a 19-year-old college dropout. It allows users to trade MP3s, which are CD-quality audio files that can be played on such programs as Winamp.

The program was released in August 1999 and has caught on at college campuses, but it is facing many problems from the music industry and college administrators.

Hundreds of universities nationwide have banned the Internet application, asserting that Napster takes up too much bandwidth. Universities use high-speed Internet connections, which is why students download from them, said Steve Fleagle, the director of UI telecommunications and networks.

The UI doesn't have any plans to ban or restrict the use of Napster, but the potential exists, he said.

"We haven't seen problems yet," Fleagle said. "From a network aspect, we don't filter or ban any traffic."

Most colleges are more concerned with the number of students who are using the program, which overloads university network systems and slows them down.

"It's a result of commodity resources," said Susan Andrews, the director of information technology at Northwestern University, which has banned Napster on-campus.

"It was eating more than 20 percent of our bandwidth, and it didn't pertain to academic purposes," she said.

Andrews said Northwestern monitored its networks from October to December 1999, and Napster was listed as one of the five most-visited Web sites.

Napster is not available for use in the UI Instructional Technology Centers, but not because the UI blocks any sites, said Informational Technology Services Director David Dobbins.

License control of programs such as Napster in the ITCs is what prevents its use, Dobbins said.

Because most residence halls do not have Ethernet connections, which allows a much faster connection than a phone line, the UI hasn't seen any Napster problems, Fleagle said.

"Most Napster traffic is in the residence halls," he said. "Because only the 200 students in Quad are connected to Ethernet, it's not such a big problem."

Fleagle suggested that Napster might become a problem once all dorms have Ethernet connections — scheduled for early spring 2001.

But rather than ban Napster, he said, administrators should go to the students and ask their opinions for an effective use of the bandwidth.

"It's their bandwidth, not ours," he said. "I favor that route over a ban."

Big Ten schools banning Napster

Napster has been banned at more than 100 schools, including:
Indiana University
Northwestern University
Ohio State University
University of Illinois, Urbana/Champaign
University of Minnesota

MP3s can be found on Web sites such as www.mp3.com and www.scour.com. However, Napster has become the music downloading program of choice for UI junior Kelly Herbert.

"I tried to download songs from mp3.com, and it was much more difficult," she said.

But with recent legal issues over copyright infringement and the Napster-banning trend, some UI students think trading music online might not be as available.

"I think in a couple of years from now, there will be a lot more restrictions on the use of Napster," said Brian Bullis, a UI junior. "I'm just going to enjoy it while it lasts."

City to host Russians in democracy demo

Three Russian officials will visit Iowa City to learn more about the U.S.

By Jessi Todd
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City will host three Russian officials, beginning Thursday through June 23, as part of a program to demonstrate democracy to them.

The visit, sponsored by the Council for International Visitors to Iowa Cities in association with the UI Center for Russian, East European, and Eurasian Studies, is under the auspices of the Library of Congress Russian Leadership Program.

The program is designed to show democracy in action, said Tom Baldrige, the executive director of the international visitors council.

The three visitors are: Sergey Vasilyevich Labintsev, 38, the chief of the coroner's office in the Murmansk region, Irina Semenova Levit, 44, the press secretary for the head of administration in the Novosibirsk region, and Natalya Nikolayevna Shutova, 41, the deputy chairwoman of the Kirov Regional Duma.

While in Iowa City, the group will take a tour of the UI and meet with David Redlawsk, an assistant professor of political science.

Redlawsk said he is looking forward to talking to the Russians officials about the American political scene and the upcoming election.

The trio won't miss out on the American family experience — this weekend, the three will stay with Iowa City families.

Iowa City residents Richard and Jean Lloyd-Jones, John and Peggy Stokes, and Janusz Bardach will host the officials.

Jean Lloyd-Jones said some of the activities her family has planned for the visitors include dinner, going to church, discussion and whatever else they might want to do.

While in Iowa, the Russians will visit the Hoover Presidential Museum and Library in West Branch, meet with several local legislators, and have lunch with representatives from the League of Women Voters, he said.

The Russians will also attend meetings of the Iowa City City Council and the Johnson County Board of Supervisors, Baldrige added.

And the group will stop by the Iowa City office of Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, said Doug Wagner, Leach's press secretary.

Wagner said he hopes that the group will return home with a greater understanding of democracy.

Teen arrested after alleged threats

An Iowa City female was arrested Tuesday morning after allegedly threatening her mother with knives and scissors.

Tamia N. Middleton, 17, 1026 First Ave., was arrested on a charge of assault with a dangerous weapon at 6:08 a.m. Tuesday.

Middleton was upset with her mother, who allegedly owed her money. According to a police report that was verified by Middleton's mother, Middleton was trying to take the money from her mother's purse.

After her mother would not let her take the money, Middleton proceeded to enter the kitchen and return with a handful of knives and scissors, according to the reports.

Middleton allegedly stood two to three feet away from her mother, issuing oral threats.

"You think I am playing?" she allegedly asked her mother.

Local man charged in car-door assault

An Iowa City man was arrested Monday evening after he allegedly struck a woman with the door of his car.

Nicholas Birtcher, 20, 14 Navajo Trail, was arrested on charges of assault with a dangerous weapon and possession of a controlled substance.

Birtcher allegedly grabbed a female by her shirt and pulled her toward his car, two witnesses said. He then allegedly put his car in reverse and struck the victim with the door of his moving vehicle.

Alleged domestic-violence cases involving vehicles as weapons are fairly uncommon, said Iowa City police Sgt. Brian Krei.

"In the years I've been here, I've only seen one other case like it," he said.

Oh say can you see ... the rockets' red gl-errors?

Senate Democrat leader Tom Daschle says that Washington has to be certain of the reliability of a new multibillion-dollar missile-defense system and urged the Clinton administration to proceed cautiously.

He also recognizes the need for the consideration of international concerns of a possible new arms race, compliments of this $60 billion defense proposal.

President Clinton has pledged to decide later this year whether to deploy this detection system, which would aim to protect the United States against long-range missiles fired by what it considers "rogue states," such as North Korea and Iraq.

Earlier this week, the New York Times reported that some military experts and critics of the defense system said tests of it were rigged and appear to mask a fundamental flaw. The system seems to be unable to accurately distinguish between enemy warheads and decoys.

I can just see it now ... researchers in Iraq send up a weather balloon for the purpose of scientific exploration, and our brand-spankin' new missile system sees it and goes, "AAH!!! The enemy is attacking ... Destroy planet in 5 seconds." And suddenly the good old U.S. of A. is on the fast track to detonating the entire world. Come on, I don't think even the illustrious United States is ready to shoulder sole responsibility for the end of human existence. Washington should really learn not to waste so much of my (and your) tax money on systems that may or may NOT save us (the people who should be protected by the military) from complete obliteration.

And on Saturday, Russian President Vladimir Putin reiterated his warning that a U.S. missile shield could threaten disarmament pacts.

It's like my momma always said: Practice what you preach. How can the United States possibly expect to convince the world to do away with its militant weapons if we continue to enlarge our stash? It's like the dentist telling you that eating candy will give you horrible cavities while he or she is chomping on a mouthful of Skittles. Of course, you have to be careful who does this dental work for you. With the United States in control of the dental drill, it might misread the target and end up drilling you a third nostril.

The way I see it, missiles are like visits with your great aunt's cousin — they make you feel better about yourself, and they're maybe even somewhat necessary, but really, who needs a large number of them?

The government should probably reconsider the amount of money allotted for each section of the national budget. Hey, maybe if we spent a little more money on education, we could find a brilliant student who was capable of building an accurate missile-detecting system, one that wouldn't send 50 Smart bombs at a red-and-white kite flown by a youngster in North Korea.

Ten Commandments have meaning for more than just Christians

Having embraced the diversity so characteristic of both the UI and Iowa City for more than three decades, I am not at peace with the presence of the stone slab bearing the Ten Commandments (in English, I might add) that adorns the Johnson County Courthouse lawn.

Similarly, I am not at peace in reading this sentence in Micah Wedemeyer's recent editorial: "Posting the Ten Commandments is an unmistakable promotion for Christianity." Yes, they're sometimes heard in church. Still, I suspect that Moses, whose name is so closely linked with the text and with Judaism itself, would be amused to learn that these disclosures from Exodus 20 (or Deuteronomy 5 — take your pick) are foremost an advert for Christianity.

Vilsack-for-VP defies logic

After surviving a gubernatorial election that was more a Jim Lightfoot loss than a Tom Vilsack win, Iowa's new, barely recognizable governor is being considered as Al Gore's running mate. That's right, a guy that most Iowans had not even heard of two years ago is a candidate for the second-highest office in the land. How did this happen?

Former Secretary of State Warren Christopher, who is compiling a list of potential running mates for Gore, called Vilsack last month about the possibility. It is especially puzzling why the Gore team would focus on a first-term Iowa governor, from a state with a measly seven electoral votes.

Political experts who have addressed the matter have said there is little chance of Vilsack actually becoming the VP candidate. Democrats should hope so. Is Vilsack really one of the most qualified Democrats in the nation for the vice presidency?

The one thing that might make Vilsack attractive to Gore is that the Iowa governor is from the same political mold as Bill Clinton.

He is New Democrat to the core, who looks to promote his own political agenda whenever possible. Also, like Clinton, one of his first moves in office was promoting the gay-rights movement. Clinton immediately wanted to include gays in the military. Last October, Vilsack completely ignored the role of the Iowa Legislature and passed an executive order outlawing the discrimination of homosexuals and transgendered persons in state executive-branch employment.

Vilsack has proven little in his time as governor other than that he knows how to keep the standard leftists happy, such as homosexuals and labor unions.

While on the phone with Christopher, Vilsack suggested three things Gore should look for in a veep: first, someone with a compelling, unknown story to tell; second, someone who shares Gore's philosophies; third, someone from the Midwest.

Coincidentally, Vilsack fits all three of the criteria he gave. But so do Dick Gephardt, Tom Harkin, Bob Kerrey and, as Vilsack so humbly noted, former Indiana Gov. Evan Bayh, all of whom have much more political experience than Vilsack, who served in the state Legislature before becoming governor.

It is difficult to conclude why Vilsack would be a serious consideration for Gore's running mate with so many other more notable, more recognized Democrats available for Gore to choose from. But choosing the best man for the job has not always been a strong point for Democrats. Vilsack may not be the best man the Democrats have, but then again, neither was Clinton, and he won the presidency, twice.

time proclaiming that the fans are their highest priority, but many are more interested in their sports cars and sprawling estates. The group Offspring publicly declares its support for Napster in that it spreads the music to a larger number of people. Some artists, it seems, realize that the many of their fans do not have the carefree luxury of purchasing CD after CD at $16 apiece.

Indeed, record labels are guilty of their own variation of extortion, bribing retailers to keep CD prices astronomically high by offering "cooperative advertising" for retailers that comply. Yes, it is legal. But is it ethical? Not in the least. In fact, the fault lies here, not with Napster. If prices were less of an issue for buyers, Napster would be less of a threat.

Yet artists such as Metallica unfortunately miss the point. Lead singer Lars Ulrich recently said, hypocritically, "It is ... sickening to know that our art is being traded like a commodity rather than the art that it is." If his focus, and that of other artists, were truly on the quality of art, fan appreciation would be of more consequence than profit. And that's the way it should be.

The Iowa City School Board will hold a closed meeting to evaluate Superintendent Lane Plugge's performance despite the controversy the planned meeting has raised, the board decided Tuesday night.

Several people have expressed concern about the legality of holding a closed meeting to evaluate Plugge's actions in dealing with City High School's track coach, John Raffensperger. At the Drake Relays this spring, Raffensperger substituted an ineligible runner in a race.

Under Chapter 21, Section 5, of the Iowa Open Meetings law, a closed session is lawful if the intent is to discuss an employee's competency and if that individual has requested that the session be closed.

School Board President Matt Goodlaxson voiced concern about having a closed meeting for the evaluation in the wake of the incident. However, all board members ultimately agreed on a closed meeting for the evaluation.

At the suggestion of board member Nick Johnson, the board decided to hold a work session in a closed executive meeting on June 19 at 6 p.m.

During the session, board members will draft questions for Plugge, who will respond to them in writing.

After Plugge answers the questions, the board will have another executive meeting in which the board will evaluate Plugge's performance. Plugge will be present.

Mayor Ernie Lehman.

All offers have been full-price offers, he added.

The purchase agreement made with Sonjay and Jigna Jani is the first official sale since the Cottage Bakery agreed to relocate to the parking ramp on the first floor — an area designated for businesses.

Besides focusing on new downtown business, the council also discussed current downtown bars at its work session. The council scheduled a meeting with Iowa City bar owners on July 11 from 7-9 p.m. in council chambers.

The meeting will address how to better control underage and binge drinking in the downtown bars. One suggestion has been to raise the minimum entrance age for all the bars to 21. Currently, 18- and 19-year-olds are allowed to enter some bars. Councilor Dee Vanderhoef said the bar owners have the power to make corrections themselves, but, if nothing changes, the council will have to take action.

"By this fall, they have to have things under control," she said. "They've had a lot of time to make changes already." Lehman said that when the council began discussions about alcohol-related issues, some downtown businesses agreed to stop advertising beer specials in local publications. Last week, several of those businesses started running such ads again, he said.

Brotherly argument ends in stabbing

An argument between two brothers resulted in a stabbing at a Coralville home Monday night, police reports said.

An argument between Tommy Jones, 37, and Shawn Jones, 18, broke out at approximately 11 p.m., according to police reports. The argument quickly became physical, and the brothers' sister called the Coralville police, said Detective Rob Swank.

During the argument, Tommy Jones armed himself with a dumbbell, and Shawn Jones fought with a kitchen knife with a 4-inch blade, Coralville police said.

Shawn Jones suffered at least one blow to the head from the dumbbell, the reports said. Tommy Jones was stabbed by his brother in the center of the back near his spinal column, according to the police reports.

When police arrived, Shawn Jones fled the scene on foot but apprehended near the residence, Swank said. Police said he charged with willful injury. He remains in the Johnson County Jail on a cash bond placed at $15,000.

Both men were taken to the UI Hospitals and Clinics. Shawn Jones was treated for head injuries and released. Tommy Jones is listed in critical condition.

The two brothers have been living for several months with their sister, who was in the house when the fight broke out. Investigators are trying to determine whether others were present at the time.

Korean summit opens amicably

The leaders of the two Koreas pledge to hold open discussions on their differences.

By Christopher Torchia
Associated Press

SEOUL, South Korea — On the first day of a historic summit, South Korea's president pledged Tuesday to work toward eventual reunification of the divided Korean Peninsula, while North Korea's leader said he was ready to open "dialogue without reserve."

Meeting for the first time, South Korean President Kim Dae-jung and North Korean leader Kim Jong Il held hands during a limousine ride into the North's capital, Pyongyang, traveling along avenues lined with hundreds of thousands of people waving bouquets of pink paper flowers.

On a day mostly given to the pomp of an unexpectedly elaborate welcome, the two leaders expressed hopes for an end to more than a generation of hostilities.

Nearly 50 years to the week since the Korean War began, South Korea's Kim appealed for reunions of separated families and for the opening of land, sea and air routes.

"Let us open up the road that has been blocked off for half a century," Kim Dae-jung said. "Let us open new sea lanes of communication and air routes, to. "When that happens, all Koreans will be able to travel freely between the two sides and work toward reconciliation, cooperation and eventual reunification," he said.

Kim Jong Il, one of the world's most reclusive leaders, urged a "dialogue without reserve," according to South Korean pool reports. Non-Korean journalists were barred from traveling with the South Korean president to Pyongyang for the three-day summit.

Kim Dae-jung's visit began with a surprise welcome by Kim Jong Il at the airport on the outskirts of Pyongyang.

Italy pardons gunman who shot pope

Mehmet Ali Agca, who had spent 19 years in prison for the attack, has been extradited to Turkey.

By Ellen Knickmeyer
Associated Press

ROME — Italy on Tuesday pardoned the Turkish gunman who tried to kill Pope John Paul II in 1981, and he was immediately delivered to authorities in Turkey — taking with him the answers to the mysterious assassination attempt.

Mehmet Ali Agca must now serve time in Turkey for a killing that took place before the attack on the pope.

Agca

Agca, white-haired after nearly two decades in jail, left the Italian prison where he had been held after dark Tuesday, under heavy guard, carrying nothing but an armful of books.

He arrived at Istanbul's Ataturk International Airport earlier today. Police backed by armored personnel carriers blocked off the gate where he landed, CNN-Turk reported.

In his last hours in Italy, Agca offered profuse thanks to the pope, who had personally forgiven and comforted his would-be killer during a 1983 visit to Agca's prison cell. The Vatican in recent days had reassured the government that John Paul supported the act of clemency.

"That the granting of pardon comes during Holy Year celebrations makes the pope's personal satisfaction even more intense," papal spokesman Joaquin Navarro-Valls said.

On May 13, 1981, Agca pulled a trigger twice as John Paul rode smiling and waving in an open car through excited throngs of pilgrims in St. Peter's Square.

One shot hit the pope's abdomen, barely missing vital organs. Doctors say the wound never weakened the pope, then an athletic hiker and skier, now a frail, stooped 80-year-old suffering from symptoms of Parkinson's disease.

The former Soviet bloc was immediately suspected in the attack — suspicions that lingered over the years despite denials by former Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and the one-time spy chief for the former East Germany.

Soviet spy chiefs were seen as fearing the adamantly anti-communist pope would spur popular revolts against the Soviet bloc — as John Paul in fact did, above all in his native Poland.

Agca had told investigators he acted at the instigation of the Bulgarian secret service and the Soviet KGB. But Italian courts ruled there was insufficient evidence to support the accusations, and Agca himself went on to give widely varying accounts during his 19 years and one month behind bars in Italy.

Agca purposefully feigned insanity in court to cast doubt on the credibility of his own stories, a prosecutor said Tuesday.

"This extinguishes the last hope of reaching the truth," prosecutor Antonio Marini said of the pardon and extradition. Prosecutor Rosario Priore, who investigated the alleged conspiracy between Bulgarian agents and Agca, agreed that the truth has never emerged.

Nevertheless, he insisted, the pardon was the correct move. "It's the only possible act to take," Priore said. "You can't keep people in prison just to make them talk."

process of being repaired. As of Tuesday night, all but 200 people had their power restored.

Wind also played havoc with the 200 block of Dartmouth Street, causing branches to fall and partially block the street, while other branches became snagged in the power lines.

Firefighters were on the site, waiting for the power company to properly dismantle the tangle. No one was hurt, and there was no damage to any property, firefighters said.

Tuesday's storm also hit the intersection of Bloomington and Van Buren streets. A tree was blown onto power lines, which were subsequently damaged.

A fallen tree branch blocked off the street of Jane and Bob Vevera, who live at 2839 Friendship St.

"I was at home and could hear the wind, and then all of the sudden it came and started raining," Bob Vevera said. "It was in my kitchen window, and some of the newer trees in the back were bending clear to the ground."

He then heard a large snap, and Friendship Street was blocked by the tree, he said.

Fallen branches completely blocked the street until a car of teen-agers came along and helped residents move the branches, Bob Vevera said.

The storm also left some area travelers stranded Tuesday night, as the Eastern Iowa Airport canceled all flights to and from Cedar Rapids.

Meteorologist Ted Stimach of the National Weather Service said the continuing weather pattern will last through today and will contain storms with heavy rain and possible hail.

When asked if there is relief in sight, Stimach said, "Thursday will be the soonest."

Preliminary victory for Microsoft in appeals process sidering a Microsoft stay motion. Government attorneys were filing their expediting request with Jackson late Tuesday. They had to wait until Microsoft filed its notice of appeal.

If Jackson approves expediting the case, as he has indicated he is inclined to do, the Supreme Court itself would decide whether it would take the appeal directly from the district court or would have the circuit court hear the appeal first.

The Justice Department called Microsoft's filing in the circuit court as Jackson was considering its stay request "an ill-conceived attempt to end-run the Expediting Act," which allows for antitrust appeals to go directly to the Supreme Court in cases of major national importance.

"With seven judges sitting en banc to hear this, I think the Supreme Court is far less likely to take this case," he said. "The Court of Appeals has done its job, stepped up, and said, 'We'll handle this quickly and expeditiously.' That makes it easier for the Supreme Court to simply say no and let the Court of Appeals handle it."

Rich Gray, an antitrust expert with Outside General Counsel

Silicon Valley, a California law firm, said, "This puts tremendous pressure on the governing body now to move quickly and get this up for consideration by the Supreme Court."

Agca purposefully feigned insanity in court to cast doubt on the credibility of his own stories, a prosecutor said Tuesday.

Pool junkies know to 'Shoot soft, and stay low'

A participant in local tournaments held at Grizzly's South Side, 1208 Highland Court, Mason started playing four years ago after receiving some helpful advice from his uncle, he said.

"Shoot soft," he said his uncle told him. "And stay low."

Iowa City is home to a number of pool leagues, the largest of which is the Iowa City Eight Ball League. The league was started in the late-70s, said league President Mike Muller. "It's friendly competition," he said. "It's a night out, and anybody can play."

As the its name indicates, eight ball is the league's game. Each player has either the striped or the solid-colored balls to shoot in, and the eight ball is neutral, though not necessarily friendly.

The league season runs from September to March, with sign-up beginning at the end of the summer, Muller said.

There are more than 300 people who play on one of Iowa City's 30

10-member teams. Sponsored by area businesses, five members play one night a week, traveling to different locations.

Pool is a game anyone can play as long as he or she has patience and can learn the fundamentals, Yoder said. There are a variety of books and videos available that can help, but practice is the most important thing, he said.

"Have fun with it," Muller said. "That's about the best advice I can give."

Problems continue for Dubuque Street skywalk

Buckman said no one in the Facilities Services Group was aware of the lettering problem; he will look into what can be done to fix the mistake.

The skywalk's floor also sports an inaccurate representation of a

DNA molecule.

The UI has a one-year warranty with Taylor Ball, a Cedar Rapids contracting company, which will allow the UI to make adjustments to the skywalk as needed for the next year.

The skywalk was designed by Siah Armajani, an St. Paul, Minn., artist renowned for his unique designs of various skywalks across America.

Buckman said he believes Taylor Ball did a fine job of realizing Armajani's vision as more than just a skywalk. However, UI sophomore Greg Naughton feels that vision has been distorted.

"I think the skywalk looks tacky," he said. "The whole structure reminds me of hodge-podge."

Taylor Ball officials could not be reached for comment.

FILM REVIEW By Graham Ross

I have never liked a movie produced by Jerry Bruckheimer. His films never fail to be predictable, shallow and downright sloppy. No matter which director shoots his film, it always looks and feels the same: slow tracking shots, dark sets with overexposed windows and stiff acting. This time, I had high hopes. Who better to produce a car-chase movie than Bruckheimer, king of the high action/low plot genre? Once again, Jerry let me down.

The original version of Gone in 60 Seconds, directed by H.B. Halicki, was released in 1974. It became an underground classic, and its famous 20-minute car chase redefined how the chase scene should look and feel. Tragically, Halicki was killed in 1989 while filming a dangerous stunt for the sequel to the film.

Instead of a film about a thief who steals cars and evades police, the re-written story features Nick Cage as Memphis Raines, a former car thief who now works at a kiddie go-cart track. He discovers that his kid brother, Kip Raines (Giovanni Ribisi), screwed up on a major car heist and is being held hostage. Unless Memphis steals 50 cars in one night, his kid broth-

FILM REVIEW By Graham Ross

I have never liked a movie produced by Jerry Bruckheimer. His films never fail to be predictable, shallow and downright sloppy. No matter which director shoots his film, it always looks and feels the same: slow tracking shots, dark sets with overexposed windows and stiff acting. This time, I had high hopes. Who better to produce a car-chase movie than Bruckheimer, king of the high action/low plot genre? Once again, Jerry let me down.

The original version of Gone in 60 Seconds, directed by H.B. Halicki, was released in 1974. It became an underground classic, and its famous 20-minute car chase redefined how the chase scene should look and feel. Tragically, Halicki was killed in 1989 while filming a dangerous stunt for the sequel to the film.

Instead of a film about a thief who steals cars and evades police, the re-written story features Nick Cage as Memphis Raines, a former car thief who now works at a kiddie go-cart track. He discovers that his kid brother, Kip Raines (Giovanni Ribisi), screwed up on a major car heist and is being held hostage. Unless Memphis steals 50 cars in one night, his kid brother gets it.

The film continues to speed along as Memphis decides to assemble a team to help him with this seemingly impossible feat, among them his old mentor Otto Halliwell (Robert Duvall), his ex-girlfriend Sway Wayland (Angelina Jolie) and the Sphinx, played by world-famous soccer player Vinnie Jones. He also enlists some younger generation thieves with names such as Tumbler, Kenny and Mirror Man (comedian TJ Cross). Together, they set off to steal all the cars and save Kip's life.

At this point, the film slows down to a crawl, dishing out useless side plot after useless side plot. The romance between the two car thieves played by Cage and Jolie I found about as exciting as a Geo Metro with a flat tire. Jolie's character appears to serve no more purpose than to give the young boys in the audience something to gawk at. Although she is treated as an equal among the thieves, I found her character to be particularly offensive. It surprised me that an actress who won an Academy Award would be so willing to allow herself to be portrayed as simply a sex object.

Some of the characters I did find to be amusing, particularly the pairing of Cross and Jones.

Cross' humorous lines were some of the best parts of the film, and Jones' presence was enough to keep me interested when he was on the screen. I only wish they had given both of these actors more screen time, especially Jones, who has impressed me since his role in Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels.

Even the final chase scene disappointed me. Both Bruckheimer and Sena claim that they were trying to redefine the car chase in Gone in 60 Seconds. Instead of redefining, they filled it full of rapid editing, digital effects and unnecessary swish pan zooms. The overall effect is much like the music videos that fill MTV. In fact, the only thing that's preventing this film from becoming a 119-minute-long music video is the lack of a song title in the lower left hand corner and Britney Spears gyrating in the background. This is the kind of movie that wins an award at the MTV music awards for Best Car Chase and then years later gets hidden at local video stores behind countless copies of Death Wish 3 and Con Air.

If it's action, suspense and great car chases you want, avoid this movie at all costs. However, if it's a Jerry Bruckheimer film you want, this movie is for you.

ARTS BRIEF

A funny thing happened on the way to the film list

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Something about men in women's clothing obviously tickles people's funny bones: Some Like It Hot and Tootsie came in at Nos. 1 and 2 on the American Film Institute's list of the 100 funniest American movies.

Some Like It Hot, Billy Wilder's 1959 classic, starring Jack Lemmon, Tony Curtis and Marilyn Monroe, topped the list announced Tuesday on a CBS television special.

Sydney Pollack's Tootsie, starring Dustin Hoffman as a down-and-out actor who finds soap-opera success masquerading as a woman, came in second in voting determined by approximately 1,800 actors, directors, studio executives, critics and others in the movie industry.

Voters chose their funniest movies from a list of 500 nominees compiled by the institute.

The rest of the top 10, in order, were: Stanley Kubrick's Dr. Strangelove, Woody Allen's Annie Hall, the Marx Brothers' Duck Soup, Mel Brooks' Blazing Saddles, Robert Altman's *M*A*S*H*, Frank Capra's It Happened One Night, Mike Nichols' The Graduate and Jim Abrahams, David Zucker and Jerry Zucker's Airplane!

Mickelson remembers Stewart at U.S. Open

Phil Mickelson takes the emotional memories of Payne Stewart into the U.S. Open.

By Tim Dahlberg
Associated Press

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — Phil Mickelson stood with a wry grin masking his disappointment as Payne Stewart celebrated his winning putt last Father's Day. Then Stewart paused for a moment and took Mickelson's face in his hands, reminding him of greater things than being a U.S. Open champion. "Good luck with the baby. There's nothing like being a daddy," Stewart told Mickelson. Mickelson understood immediately.

"When he grabbed my face and spoke to me about fatherhood, it changed my feeling about the disappointment I had just felt to what's more important in my life," Mickelson said. "And Payne made it very apparent that that was what was more important to him, too."

The next day, Mickelson, who was prepared to leave the course if his wife, Amy, went into labor during the Open, became a father for the first time when his daughter, Amanda, was born.

The disappointment of losing the Open by one shot had faded some with Stewart's words. It completely disappeared with Amanda's birth.

"It was the biggest emotional swing that you could ever have imagined, from the lows of losing the greatest championship in the game of golf, following it with the most emotional high that I've ever experienced, sharing the birth of our child the very next day," Mickelson said.

The emotional roller coaster wasn't over yet, though. Four months later, Stewart would be dead, the victim of a bizarre plane crash. And Mickelson began to view the 18th hole ending at Pinehurst in a different way.

"In light of what took place, it was the way it was meant to be," he said Tuesday. "It was just the way things were supposed to unfold. I would never have changed the outcome of any of the events that took place, except for the tragedy, if I could."

Mickelson didn't realize it at the time, but the events of a year ago in North Carolina will forever be linked to his career and etched firmly in his mind.

He thought of them more this week as he prepared for an Open that will be played in the shadow of Stewart across the country from where he won his last title.

"Every time the U.S. Open swings around, I reminisce," Mickelson said. "I've been reminiscing the last couple of days, thinking about the match with Payne, thinking about the birth of our child, thinking about the last year that has taken place."

As he watches Amanda near her first birthday, Mickelson can't help thinking about Stewart's family, too.

"It's watching my child develop, thinking about how Payne Stewart's family no longer has

Lenny Ignelzi/Associated Press

that opportunity," he said. "Payne does not have the opportunity to watch Aaron and Chelsea grow up, and that's the biggest tragedy of all the occurrences that took place last year."

Mickelson spent the better part of an hour Tuesday talking about his family, Stewart, the tournament last year and the state of his game going into the 100th Open.

He then requested something of the media — that they not ask him any more questions about Stewart so he could concentrate on trying to win his first major title.

"I would appreciate it if we could kind of keep that to just today, so that I don't have to keep reminiscing about it each day, as the tournament goes on," Mickelson said. "I really want to try to focus solely on playing and not so much reminiscing on last year's occurrences."

The way Mickelson is playing, he may have some new U.S. Open memories to talk about after Pebble Beach.

A three-time winner already this year, Mickelson comes into the Open with his short game better than ever and with an understanding built on eight years on the PGA Tour that course management and patience are sometimes just as important as talent.

Storms postpone College World Series games

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Tuesday's College World Series games were postponed when severe weather swept through the Omaha area.

Clemson and Louisiana-Lafayette were scheduled to start an elimination game at 2 p.m. CDT, but the grounds crew rolled out the tarp just before game time. Rain started about 20 minutes later and was expected to continue through the night.

The game was postponed around 4 p.m.

At almost 36, Bonds is back, better than ever

After being overshadowed by such players as Mark McGwire and Sammy Sosa, Barry Bonds is back on top.

By Dennis Georgatos
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Barry Bonds doesn't like to talk a lot about his sensational start or spend time trying to figure out what's behind it.

He'll try to tell you he's just a ballplayer doing his job. Yeah, right.

"Great starts can turn into slow starts very fast," said the Giants' left fielder, who's leading the majors in homers (25) and slugging percentage (.815) going into Tuesday night's games.

"If you go into a situation thinking that you're high and mighty right now, something can humble you very fast — and all that high-and-mighty-ness can just go down the tubes."

He should know. In the last couple of years, Bonds' place among baseball's elite seemed to fade as Mark McGwire, Sammy Sosa and Ken Griffey Jr. fought for home-run supremacy.

But this season, the only player in major league history with more than 400 homers and 400 steals has regained his spot at the pinnacle of baseball.

He won the last of his three MVP awards in 1993, his first year in San Francisco after spending his first seven seasons with the Pittsburgh Pirates. He's now bidding to become baseball's first four-time MVP.

Along with his homers, Bonds was batting .339 with 57 runs scored, fourth in the majors. And he's doing it all at 35 — he turns 36 next month — after injuries limited him to a career-low 102 games in 1999.

"There wasn't anything to worry about once I got back," said Bonds, who fought through elbow, groin and knee problems last season, when he batted .262, his lowest average since hitting .248 for Pittsburgh in 1989.

"It was just a matter of trying to get 100 percent strong again. The problem last year was that you didn't have time because you're playing games every day."

Bonds has gotten a power boost from San Francisco's inaugural season in Pacific Bell Park, which has a short right-field porch (309 feet) that plays to the strength of left-handed sluggers. He has hit four homers into a slice of San Francisco Bay dubbed Willie McCovey Cove. So far, he's the only player to put a ball in the bay.

"Nothing he's done has surprised me because I get to see it day in and day out," San Francisco first baseman J.T. Snow said. "I think the new park suits him pretty well. I'm not saying they built the park around him, but the more you watch games there, the more you wonder."

San Francisco manager Dusty Baker said Bonds puts himself in position for a great year every year.

"He has a good body, and he works out over the winter," Baker said. "Thirty-six-years old is only a number, basically. I mean, why can some cars go 999,000 miles and some cars can't? It's how the car is built and basically how you take care of that car while you have it. Barry takes care of himself, and he's in outstanding shape."

Bonds has 470 career homers, ranking him 20th. He's just five shy of Stan Musial and Willie Stargell, who are tied for 18th.

Despite missing a week with a back injury, Bonds' 25 homers are the most he's had before an All-Star break. His previous high was 24 in 1993, when he finished with an NL high 46. He also hit homers in a career-high four straight games from June 3-6 (five homers total), the longest such streak of his career.

"I'm just out there being aggressive," Bonds said. "If it's somewhere I think I can hit it, I'll be hacking. I have three opportunities every at bat."

Bonds said he'll just try to ride his renewed wave of success as long as he can with the Giants.

San Francisco 49ers sign Mirer

Following Steve Young's retirement, the Niners sign Rick Mirer.

By Dennis Georgatos
Associated Press

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — A day after Steve Young retired, the San Francisco 49ers on Tuesday signed Rick Mirer, a nomadic veteran who immediately becomes the most experienced quarterback on their roster.

Mirer, 30, got a one-year contract worth $440,000.

He's expected to back up Jeff Garcia, who started 10 games last season, his first in the NFL, after Young went down on Sept. 27 at Arizona with his fourth concussion in three years. Young, 38, didn't play again and Monday announced his retirement.

The only other quarterbacks on San Francisco's roster are rookies Giovanni Carmazzi and Tim Rattay, who were both drafted in April.

Mirer joins his fifth team in five years after coming into the league in 1993 as the second overall choice by Seattle behind Drew Bledsoe of New England.

Garcia, a former Canadian Football League star who completed 225 of 375 throws (60 percent) for 2,544 yards and 11 touchdowns, is in line to succeed Young.

"But if something should happen to Jeff, you have to make a decision: Do you go with a rookie or two rookies or do you try to train another veteran quarterback who has had some of this already?" Coach Steve Mariucci said. "So in some ways, this is an insurance policy, a security blanket for us, and we'll see where it takes us."

Mirer's mediocre play cost him his starting job in Seattle, and since leaving the Seahawks after the 1996 season, he has been a backup with Chicago, Green Bay and the New York Jets.

Over the course of his career, he has a passer rating of 63.1 and has thrown 71 interceptions and 46 touchdowns.

"We know what his career was," Mariucci said. "He's been through a lot of different coaches and coordinators. He's had very little continuity. Maybe he's been unfortunate a little bit and not fit into some other systems. But he seems to be able to do everything we want our guys to do. Maybe our system will be good for him."

Mirer, who took part in a mini-camp workout Tuesday, said he's settled down in San Diego and was happy to get a job with a California team after moving around the country in recent years.

"That's one of the nice parts and one of the reasons I wanted to get here," Mirer said.

Mirer also said he feels he's best suited for a West Coast-style offense, which San Francisco employs.

"It's an offense I'm fairly familiar with," he said. "There's obviously going to be some changes, different people, but for the most part it definitely looks familiar."

Mirer passed up a chance for a job with Minnesota because he felt San Francisco was a better opportunity for him, and he's hopeful he'll get a chance to play.

"It's a long season. Crazy things happen," Mirer said. "But I'm very supportive of how ever it's going to go. Jeff has been here and he's proven he can play."

CEDAR FALLS, Iowa (AP) — Northern Iowa didn't have to look very far in its search for a new wrestling coach. All four finalists are from Iowa programs.

The university said Tuesday that the finalists are, UNI assistant Brad Penrith, Iowa State assistant Thom Ortiz, Iowa assistant Tom Brands and Warburg coach Jim Miller.

"In this group, we've got the top three assistants in the state of Iowa, the nation's hottest for college wrestling," UNI Associate Athletic Director Kevin Buisman said. He called Miller "arguably the best Division III coach."

Buisman said the university hopes to have a coach by as early as this weekend. The job opened when Mark Manning left to become coach at Nebraska.

Penrith has been at Northern Iowa for the last three seasons and wrestled in college at Iowa. Brands also wrestled for the Hawkeyes and has been an assistant there since 1992.

Coaches try to persuade Congress to ban betting

NCAA leaders urged Congress to end legal betting, but some lawmakers say the plan is misdirected. By Bart Jansen Associated Press WASHINGTON — Kentucky basketball coach Tubby Smith and South Carolina football coach Lou Holtz urged Congress to end legal betting on amateur sports, saying it has helped create a world where point spreads matter as much as wins and losses. In testimony Tuesday before the House Judiciary Committee, the coaches said players are tempted to throw games or shave points so the final score is within the spread. Holtz, who coached Notre Dame to the national championship in 1988, said he has had teams cheered and booed for winning. "The difference was the point spread," he said. Smith, who coached Kentucky to a national championship in 1998, said point spreads have become part of the sports landscape. "It hits home because I remember my wife one day saying, 'Tubby, we should be OK tonight because the line says we're going to win.' She never gambled in her life," he said. "I have people come into my office and say, 'Tubby, you're just not winning by enough.' I see it all over." But lawmakers and gambling interests from Nevada — the only state offering legal betting on sports — say the criticism is misdirected. "I do not believe a bill banning college sports gambling in Nevada will eliminate or significantly reduce gambling on college sports," said Bobby Siller, a Nevada Gaming Control Board member and former FBI agent who investigated gamblers. The amount of legal sports betting in Nevada is $2.3 billion a year, with about $650 million on college sports. Illegal sports gambling has been estimated at $80 billion-$380 billion a year. Rep. Jim Gibbons, R-NeV., argued there is no evidence that legal gambling in his state is "in any way responsible for the illegal sports wagering that plagues our nation's college campuses." Rep. Shelley Berkley, D-NeV., said eliminating legal bets in Nevada won't solve the problem any more than "suggesting that outlawing aspirin would stop the sale of illegal drugs." The House bill, sponsored by Reps. Lindsey Graham, R-S.C.,

Erving makes nation wide plea for info on missing son SANFORD, Fla. — Julius Erving pleaded for help in finding his 19-year-old son, who has a history of drug problems and has been missing since May 28. "This bad dream has gone on for 16 days now, 16 bad days," the basketball great said Tuesday. "We are in dire need of help." A $25,000 reward was offered for the safe return of Cory Marvin Erving, who was last seen by his family when he went to a Lake Mary shopping mall, about 20 miles from Orlando. Erving spoke at a nationally televised news conference with his wife and their three other adult children. "I'm begging, wishing, hoping, and I'm praying," Erving said. Sheriff Don Eslinger said Cory might have had a confrontation with someone before he disappeared, but he did not elaborate.

Former FSU kicker Janikowski acquitted on bribery charges TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — A jury needed only 50 minutes Tuesday to acquit former Florida State kicker Sebastian Janikowski of a charge he tried to bribe a policeman to release his roommate. Janikowski, the first-round draft choice of the Oakland Raiders, was accused of offering the officer $300 to release his friend, who had been arrested on a trespassing charge after not being allowed into a nightclub. The defense argued that the 22-year-old native of Poland was simply trying to help out a friend and never had any intention of breaking the law. They contended Janikowski might easily have misunderstood what was happening because he's only been in the country for six years and is still learning English. "On that evidence, I just couldn't see how that jury could return a verdict of guilty with the doubt that permeated this whole thing,"

Boston bullpen shuts down Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — Jason Varitek homered into the upper deck off Orlando Hernandez, and the Boston bullpen shut down the New York Yankees on one hit for 6 2-3 innings, giving the Red Sox a 5-3 victory Tuesday night.

Carl Everett contributed a triple, double and single as the Red Sox moved into a virtual first-place tie with the Yankees in the AL East.

A calm crowd of 52,142 came to life with two outs in the sixth inning when Hernandez got two strikes on Varitek. But after taking a close, 2-2 breaking ball, Varitek teed off for a two-run homer deep into the upper deck in right field for a 5-3 lead.

Orioles 3, Rangers 2

BALTIMORE — B.J. Surhoff and Charles Johnson homered, and Scott Erickson overcame eight walks as Baltimore beat Texas 3-2 Tuesday night, extending the Rangers' losing streak to a season-high six games.

Erickson's eight walks matched a career high, and he also allowed five hits in seven innings. But Texas went 1-for-9 with runners in scoring position and hit into three double plays, all started by shortstop Mike Bordick.

Cubs 4, Mets 3

CHICAGO — Pinch-runner Damon Buford scored from second on a throwing error by shortstop Kurt Abbott in the eighth inning, lifting the Chicago Cubs to a 4-3 victory over the New York Mets on Tuesday night.

With the game tied 3-3 and one out in the eighth, Henry Rodriguez singled off John Franco (2-2) and was removed for Buford. Joe Girardi singled, advancing Buford to second, and pinch-hitter Glennell Hill hit a grounder to first baseman Todd Zeile. He threw to Abbott at second for the force, but Abbott's throw to Franco, covering first, was wide and bounced against the fence near the Mets dugout.

Oakland's Miguel Tejada avoids Minnesota's Jay Canizaro after getting the force out Tuesday.

Felix Heredia (3-1) picked up the win with a perfect eighth, while Rick Aguilera got three outs for his 13th save in 17 appearances.

Cardinals 8, Padres 3

SAN DIEGO — Darryl Kile became the third 10-game winner in the majors, thanks in part to a three-run homer by batterymate Eli Marrero, and the St. Louis Cardinals beat the San Diego Padres for the fifth straight time, 8-3 on Tuesday.

Kile (10-3) allowed three runs — two earned — and nine hits in seven innings to join Arizona's Randy Johnson and Toronto's David Wells as 10-game winners. Kile already has two more wins than he did all last year, when he was 8-13 in his second season in Colorado.

Kile, who also beat the Padres 4-3 in St. Louis on April 19, won his third straight start. He struck out three and walked three.

Pirates 7, Braves 6

PITTSBURGH — Wil Cordero led off the bottom of the 10th inning with his 10th homer as the Pittsburgh Pirates rallied from a three-run ninth-inning deficit for a 7-6 victory over the Atlanta Braves on Tuesday night.

Cordero hit a 3-2 pitch from Don Wengert (0-1) into the left-field seats as Pittsburgh got its 16th come-from-behind win among 28 victories this season.

Jose Silva (5-2) pitched a one-hit 10th for the win as the Pirates beat the Braves for the first time in five tries this season.

White Sox 4, Indians 3

CLEVELAND — Ray Durham homered in the top of the 10th and Chicago survived a scary bottom half Tuesday night as the White Sox held on for a 4-3 win over the Cleveland Indians to open a four-game lead in the AL Central.

By winning the first two games of the key series and 11 of 13 overall, the White Sox have their largest lead in the division since May 28, 1994, when they also led by four.

Chicago has won four of the first five meetings this season with Cleveland, and with the win improved the majors' best road record to 22-14.

With one out in the 10th, Durham hit a 1-0 pitch from Speier (0-1) 419 feet to dead center for his 11th homer and third in three games. On Sunday, Speier gave up a three-run homer to Ken Griffey Jr. as the Reds rallied to beat the Indians.

Angels 5, Devil Rays 3

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Seth Etherton won his first major league game, and Mo Vaughn hit his first homer this month, as the Anaheim Angels beat the Tampa Bay Devil Rays 5-3.

Etherton (1-1) allowed two runs and five hits over five innings in his fourth career start. He put himself in position for the win by striking out Greg Vaughn with runners on second and third and led the fifth inning.

Iowa women's basketball.

Siech said if it is promotion that the UI is going for through its camps, it is doing a good job. She enjoys her time at Iowa, she said, although she wishes the walk from Rienow to Carver was just a little bit shorter.

Camps Director Dean says what brings the kids back year after year is seeing friends and having an enjoyable experience away from home.

"The kids enjoy coming back and seeing the friends that they've met the year before," he said. "They also enjoy getting to work with college coaches and student athletes whom they can go home and watch on TV."

Pacers sport regained confidence pays for it? Glen does."

Rice's wife, Christina Fernandez Rice, said she has counseled her husband to keep quiet about the situation until she thought it was hurting the team.

"How many players would have stayed as quiet for as long as Glen has? But finally, when the team is affected, you have to say something," she said. "Now if it was me, I would have already been Latrell Sprewell II."

Asked about his wife's comments, Rice said he agreed with them. "Definitely. Why not?" he said.

"I'm going to come out and be very aggressive on the defensive end," Rice said. "If I get beat, I never claimed I was the best defensive player on this team individually. Jalen's a great player, and when I get beat, I expect the help to be there."

That's right, Rice said "when" he gets beat.

It was a comment typical of a second straight day off in the Finals when you couldn't exactly believe what you were hearing, reading or seeing.

Take Jalen Rose, for instance. In a five-minute stretch of interview time, he repeatedly used the phrase "When we tie the series" and "When it's 2-2."

Every time he said it, the media mob did a double-take. Someone asked Rose: Didn't he mean "if" the Pacers win Game 4?

"It's when," Rose said.

Players could ride subway to games

METS-YANKEES

according to the Elias Sports Bureau, baseball's statistician.

On Sept. 7, 1903, which was Labor Day, the New York Giants beat the Brooklyn Superbas (the team's nickname eventually became the Dodgers) 6-4 in the morning before 9,300 at Washington Park in Brooklyn. In the afternoon, rookie Henry Schmidt's four-hitter led Brooklyn to a 3-0 win before 23,623 at the Polo Grounds. That split doubleheader was on the original NL schedule.

"I think it's fine," Yankees manager Joe Torre said before Tuesday night's game against Boston. "It'll be different. It takes you back to the old days when they relished doubleheaders. They loved to rain out games so you could play a doubleheader on a Sunday and get more people."

Yogi Berra, who managed both teams, appreciated that issue. "They don't want to get cheated out of an attendance," he said.

Berra recalled playing day-night doubleheaders with the Yankees for four times in Boston.

"It's lousy, but sometimes you got to do it," he said. "You hang around and play cards between games."

For the Yankees and Mets, the only game will be bridge — as in "Triborough." They will be doing a commuter dash from Queens to the Bronx.

The teams have just one mutual day off, Aug. 31, for the rest of the season. But playing in New York that day would be a problem for the Yankees, who have a night game in Seattle on Aug. 30. A makeup game that day also would give the Yankees a stretch of 41 straight days on which they have games.

The alternative is to make up the game when the Yankees and Mets play at Shea in July. That series begins with a night game, Friday, July 7, followed by day games on Saturday and Sunday, July 8-9. The proximity of the stadiums makes the unusual double dip possible.

Friday was ruled out because of traffic concerns. Traveling from Queens to the Bronx over the Triborough Bridge on a Friday evening in July is no picnic, even with a police escort. That left Saturday or Sunday — which is likely to be switched to a night game by ESPN.

The teams agreed on the Saturday doubleheader and the players' association approved it.

"We think it's a great idea," said Gene Orza, associate general counsel for the union after talking with player representatives for both teams. "There are some potential promotional aspects. If we can get players to take the subway, maybe we can have some fun with it."

McGrady's comments final straw for Carter

house, it's not for discussion with you people," Carter told reporters.

But Carter, who called his coaching style "workaholic," was obviously not happy at the way some team beefs were aired outside the locker room and in the media.

Carter made plenty of news himself, however.

In a book written with his brother Cris, he attacked Indiana coach Bobby Knight for his behavior while Butch Carter played there. He sued former Raptor and current New York Knick Marcus Camby for calling him a liar and then dropped the lawsuit after his legal challenge received widespread criticism.

Carter made headlines again after a report that he had asked for Grunwald's title in his annual job review before Grunwald and Peddie. Carter said he did not want Grunwald's powers but only his title for added influence in dealings with free agents.

Carter also came under fire from veterans Antonio Davis and Charles Oakley when he said there was a lack of leadership in the Raptors' locker room.

Perhaps the last straw came last week when McGrady, on the verge of free agency, cited the veterans' dissatisfaction with Carter and ensuing turmoil as reasons why he wouldn't be back in Toronto.

"It is clear that this change, while disappointing to me on a personal and professional level, is necessary if we are to continue to build towards an NBA championship," Grunwald said.

On the issue of McGrady's future, Carter said: "The kid is smart enough to make his own decision."

"Signing Tracy McGrady was no slam-dunk regardless," he added. Grunwald praised Carter's work as coach.

"His accomplishments in Toronto should not be discounted. However, in the end that success was clouded by off-court distractions that were disconcerting to our fans and our organization," he said.

Rocker recalled from Richmond

John Rocker will replace Rudy Seanez on the Atlanta roster after three stints in the minor leagues.

By Hank Kurz Jr.
Associated Press

RICHMOND, Va. — John Rocker is going back to the major leagues. Moments after finishing the least impressive of his three one-inning stints for the Atlanta Braves' Triple A farm team at Richmond, Rocker was recalled by the parent club following an injury to Rudy Seanez, Richmond pitching coach Mike Alvarez said.

Rocker got the news after working the ninth in a 6-2 victory.

"I don't know if it was because Rudy got hurt," Alvarez said after Rocker allowed two hits and a run in the ninth inning. "They didn't give us details."

Rocker thanked the Richmond Braves for having him and helping him during a six-day stay, his first in the minors since he pitched here early in the 1998 season.

"I think it's always exciting to go to the big leagues," Alvarez said.

The Richmond locker room was closed after the game and Rocker was unavailable.

Only a short time earlier, he was welcomed like a returning hero by a huge crowd that stood roaring when the exiled reliever sprinted into the game to start the ninth. Only a smattering of boos were audible from the crown of 6,459 who waited out a 2 1/2-hour rain delay.

Rocker struggled for the first time at Richmond, giving up singles to Toledo's Billy McMillon and Gabe Alvarez to start the inning before retiring Javier Cardona on a fly ball to left center that allowed McMillon to tag and move to third.

It was the first out he recorded that wasn't a strikeout since he joined Richmond last Thursday.

IOWA SUMMER CAMPS

Camp Hawk

Nearly every Iowa sport uses summer camps as a crucial first step in recruiting.

By Molly Thomas
The Daily Iowan

Melissa Siech has been going to Lisa Bluder's basketball camp for as long as she can remember. Siech, a junior at Waterloo Columbus, travels to Iowa City every day in order to experience the coaching style she has grown to enjoy so much in the Iowa girls' basketball camp.

Siech is one of the many in-state high school players whom Iowa coaches hope to entice to come to Iowa through their summer athletics camps.

Summer camps are a very effective recruiting tool, Bluder said. When Bluder coached at Drake, she recruited Tammy Blackstone, a third-team All-American, through many years of Drake summer camps.

"I've recruited many players through camps," Bluder said. "In the future, we are hoping to expand to the point where we can host an elite camp especially for our recruits."

This week, the UI athletics programs are hosting camps in football, girls' basketball, swimming and tennis. UI camps Director Anthony Dean said the camps' purpose is to give kids from all over the country a taste of the UI.

"We do these camps to give kids a chance to get on the Iowa campus and to work with college coaches, as well as student-athletes," he said. "It shows campers what the UI has to offer."

Iowa athletics camps also give student athletes a chance to work with younger players who admire them. Iowa athletes participate in the camps' activities by working with players at fundamentals stations. They are rewarded for their interaction with an hourly wage.

While the camps draw mostly in-state athletes, Dean said, 42 states were represented at last year's camps. The ages of eligible athletes vary from camp to camp, but Iowa does not turn campers away based on their ability level.

While promoting the program to the young athletes is one of the most important goals of many Hawkeye coaches, the monetary benefits don't seem to be a factor in the camps. Some of the coaches don't even know where the money from the camp ends up.

Iowa men's swimming coach John Davey said the Iowa swim camp is important in terms of promoting Iowa athletics all the way around, and monetary benefits are not even an issue.

"Our program doesn't get any money from these camps," he said. "They are important in terms of getting kids from all over the area to see all of the different sports we have here at Iowa."

Though the coaches said monetary benefits are not a factor in the camps, the resident fee for a young athlete to attend a camp is somewhat pricey, ranging from $260-$310.

Dean declined to comment about where the proceeds of the camps go, and Iowa men's Athletics Director Bob Bowsby was unavailable for comment.

Jenni Fitzgerald, a women's assistant basketball coach and camp director, said her program's camp is directed at getting kids excited about women's basketball in general.

"It is not about the money for us," she said. "It is more about being excited to work with younger players and getting them excited about

Rice stands by wife's comments on Jackson

Glen Rice's wife spoke out against Laker coach Phil Jackson the eve of Game 4 of the NBA Finals.

By Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — All remained not so perfect Tuesday in Lakerland, while the Pacers were starting sentences with phrases like "When we win Game 4 ..."

Something strange has happened since the NBA Finals switched cities.

The team that's trailing 2-1 in the best-of-seven series seems a little more tranquil, a little more self-assured. The team that's winning — the Lakers — is dealing with various and sundry serious issues regarding its best players: Shaquille O'Neal, Kobe Bryant and Glen Rice.

O'Neal, shooting 38 percent from the free throw line in this series, will be fouled plenty more in Game 4. The Pacers pretty much promised it.

Bryant, who missed Game 3 with a sprained ankle, was unsure how effective he would be when he returns Wednesday night.

And then there was Rice, still miffed after sitting out 10 minutes of the fourth quarter in Game 3.

He remained embroiled in a clash with coach Phil Jackson — a controversy further fueled by comments from Rice's wife alleging that Jackson's supposed anti-Rice bias stems from a power struggle with two guys named Jerry and a secret affection for Scottie Pippen.

Sounds almost like the Chicago Bulls circa 1998, doesn't it?

"When there's frustration, you try to keep it in the community. But when it seeps out, you have to do some damage control," Lakers forward Rick Fox said. "And we're dealing with that now, here."

Moments before Fox spoke, Rice had ended his interview session with these words: "If people don't think I can be out there doing things to get this team a win, then, I shouldn't be here."

An NBA public relations official quickly ended the interview, hustling Rice away after he had spent the better part of 10 minutes explaining his frustration with being benched and offering insight into his less-than-rosy relationship with Jackson.

Meanwhile, beneath the stands at Conseco Fieldhouse, Jackson was sounding like another coach from down the road in Bloomington as he explained why he and Rice were supposedly on the same page.

"I play whom I want to play when I want to play them, and how they play and what I think is best for the team. That's it," Jackson said.

Michael Conroy/Associated Press
Kobe Bryant's status for the NBA Finals is listed as day-to-day because of an injured ankle.

What the Lakers seemed to need was a sit-down between Rice and Jackson, a few minutes for the airing of grievances, or perhaps some aromatherapy (Don't laugh, Jackson does it).

The Rice controversy is "not a distraction to us," Jackson said. "That's nothing to us."

Rice didn't agree, admitting "it plays with your head a little bit."

He was asked: Had he talked to Jackson about it?

"No, I have not."

Did he plan to talk to Jackson about it?

"No, I do not."

What harm would it do to simply discuss it with the coach?

"I've been down that road before. The best way is to go out there and let my actions speak for themselves."

Rice said the relationship between himself and Jackson was not a "bad" one, while Jackson said the two have had a good relationship all year.

Rice's wife, however, sees it differently.

In an article published Tuesday in the Los Angeles Times, she claimed Rice was being used as a pawn by Jackson in his dealings with Lakers owner Jerry Buss and team president Jerry West.

"Jackson has never wanted Glen, he's always wanted somebody like Scottie Pippen, and this is his way of getting back at management for not letting him make a trade," she said. "This is Jackson's way of showing the people on top of him who is in control. It's crazy."

"It's all a mind game. It's all about control. Jackson did not get his way with the general manager or the owner about trading Glen, so who

Carter canned as Raptors coach

Butch Carter's off-the-court guffaws cost him his job as Toronto's head man.

TORONTO (AP) — Praised for his work on the basketball court, Toronto Raptors head coach Butch Carter was fired Tuesday for his actions off it.

Raptors general manager Glen Grunwald cited Carter for his work in turning around the team but said ultimately the coach was paying the price for the cloud of controversy that has swirled around the team in recent months.

There was no immediate word on Carter's successor.

Carter's comments and actions have resulted in criticism from the team's veterans, perhaps cost the club a chance to re-sign coveted young forward Tracy McGrady, and forced Grunwald into damage control mode.

On Tuesday, Grunwald put an end to the distraction that Carter had become, saying there was no other alternative.

"We have a great team, we have some great guys in our locker room," Grunwald told a news conference. "We have great ownership. We play in a great arena before some magnificent fans. Our future is very bright."

"But I think we've lost track of that story a little bit in some of these off-the-court things and I think we need to refocus upon that and keep improving."

Carter was calm and seemed almost relieved when he met reporters later in the day at a separate news conference at the Air Canada Centre.

"I feel OK," he said.

He thanked team ownership and said he loved Toronto.

"I didn't want out of Toronto. I wanted out of a bad situation. I'm not running out of town," he said with a laugh.

Carter led the Raptors to their first postseason berth in the franchise's history and was rewarded in December with a contract extension that takes him through the 2002-03 season.

Team president Richard Peddie declined Tuesday to discuss details of the settlement between the club and Carter.

Carter has been in the spotlight in recent months for actions away from the court. He declined to get into specifics.

Oddest of twin bills in New York

On July 8, the Mets and Yankees will play a day game at Shea and a night game at Yankee Stadium.

By Hal Bock
Associated Press

NEW YORK — This is Ernie Banks' dream, taken one step further. Banks loved doubleheaders because they meant he could play two games in one day. Now, the Mets and Yankees are about to play two in one day, but in two different New York ballparks.

With all parties agreeing Tuesday, a June rainout will become part of a unique baseball bonanza for New York: A day game between the Mets and Yankees at Shea Stadium on July 8, followed a few hours later by a night game between the same teams 10 miles away at Yankee Stadium.

This is the ultimate day-night doubleheader, the solution to a schedule squeeze created by a rainout last Sunday, the final game of the season's first interleague series between the teams at Yankee Stadium.

It would be the first time teams played two games at different ballparks on the same day in 97 years.
