Hawkeye assistant expected to leave Iowa

Assistant wrestling coach Terry Brands is expected to be named an assistant coach for Nebraska next week.

By Jeremy Schnitzer The Daily Iowan

Terry Brands, a former Iowa wrestler and an assistant Iowa coach, is expected to be named an assistant coach at Nebraska.

Iowa coach Jim Zalesky has confirmed that Brands had mentioned making the move, but, Zalesky said, Brands has not officially resigned. "It's more he's just trying to promote himself," Zalesky said. "Being the second assistant here, maybe he feels like he's not getting looked at in the future as a head coach. Maybe he figures he can get more experience leaving here."

Mark Manning, the former head coach at the University of Northern Iowa who was named as Nebraska's head coach last month, said Brands could be a top candidate but would not say if Brands has the job. A final announcement is expected on June 26.

Brands, who wrestled for the Hawkeyes from 1990-92, has been an assistant coach at Iowa for three years. He also has worked as a volunteer assistant and strength and conditioning coach for the Hawkeyes.

Brands' brother, Tom Brands, the head assistant coach at Iowa, is one of three finalists for the head coaching position at Northern Iowa. He joins current UNI assistant Brent Penrith and Iowa State assistant Thom Ortiz in the hunt for the UNI position, which is expected to be announced soon.

Griffith, former Iowa women's basketball player, is all-time blocks leader.

In the second round of the 1998 draft, Smith has finally found her niche. She spent parts of the past two seasons playing in Italy and Israel, and earned a starting role with Sacramento when the team's star forward, Yolanda Griffith, went down with an injury late last season.

During Griffith's hiatus during the final three games of the season, Smith averaged 20 points and nine rebounds per game. The show she put on was enough to keep her in the starting lineup even after Griffith's injury healed.

Court silences student-led prayers in school

Rulings on moments of silence and valedictorian speeches could follow, court observers say.

By Erica Driskell The Daily Iowan

In a 6-3 decision Monday, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that elected student officials are not allowed to lead groups of students in prayer on the grounds of public school. The ruling could lead to further debate over the legality of moments of silence and valedictorian speeches with religious undertones.

Elected student officials representing the student body led a prayer over the public-address system prior to each high school football game at a Texas high school, said Ben Stone, the executive director of the Iowa Civil Liberties Union.

In Santa Fe Independent School District v. Doe, two families — one Mormon and one Catholic, who wished to remain anonymous — took the case to the ACLU.

The School District claimed that any restriction on prayer by an elected student representative would violate the free-speech rights of students, Stone said.

The ruling marks the first time the Supreme Court has ruled on the constitutionality of school-sponsored prayer since 1992, when the court barred clergy-led prayers, invocations and benedictions at public school graduation ceremonies.

The ruling was perceived as a complete victory and important one for the ACLU, Stone said, because schools were influencing students through prayers.

"Governments are not there to help promote religious messages," he said. "It's not about restricting religious liberty, it's about protecting religious liberty. That's the essence of freedom — not to have to conform to the majority."

Citing a violation of the First Amendment, the court ruled in favor of the ACLU, saying the prayers involved governmental promotion of one religion.

Stone believes future rulings against public prayer could follow.

Moments of silence or religion mentioned in graduation speeches will most likely be the next issues brought to the Supreme Court because those issues were not specifically addressed in the current ruling, he said.

City to open facility for hazardous waste

The center will accept such items as paints, pesticides and auto oil, in addition to recycling paper and plastic.

By Bridget Stratton The Daily Iowan

A new recycling/disposal center will give Iowa City residents a place drop off their unwanted hazardous materials.

After six years of consideration, the city will build a facility for the disposing of hazardous household waste adjacent to the Iowa City landfill, 3900 Hebl Ave., said David Elias, the superintendent of the Landfill and Waste Water Treatment Plant.

The center will be the first of its kind in the area. Iowa City residents will be able to dispose of their hazardous household chemicals, such as paint, pesticides, herbicides and automobile oil, he said.

"I'm afraid to guess what people have been doing with the items until now," Elias said.

The facility will also recycle such items as paper, plastic and glass.

Cedar Rapids has a similar pollution-prevention facility. Floyd Pelkey, the operations manager of the Linn County solid-waste agency Blue Stem, said it is important to dispose of household chemicals responsibly.

"If someone were to throw old paint away, there is a possibility that it could contaminate the groundwater," he said.

The facility has been in operation for a little more than two years, handling 25 to 35 people a day, Pelkey said. The most common chemicals that residents have been disposing of are pesticides and Drano, he added.

The money for the new Iowa City facility was funded by a $100,000 grant awarded last summer by the Iowa Department of Natural Resources. The permit and contract were approved two weeks ago, Elias said.

Sixty percent of the grant money will go to promotion and education about pollution control, in addition to construction costs, said Brad Newman, a city solid-waste planner.

The completion date for the facility is projected to be late fall, Newman said. Johnson County residents who want to dispose of their hazardous chemicals will be able to make an appointment with the center, he said.

Not only will residents be able to dispose of the unwanted items, the facility will also serve as a trading center, Elias said.

"If someone brings in unwanted blue paint, and they are looking for pink paint, and we have it, we will trade with them," he said.

After the hazardous chemicals arrive at the facility, an outside contractor will come to dispose of them properly, Elias said. Negotiations for an outside contractor are in progress, he asserted.

The service will be free for Iowa City residents; small-business owners will have to pay a service fee.

Coralville firefighters (from left) Terry Sesker, John Saunders and Tom Connelly examine a minivan involved in a two-vehicle accident north of Coralville Monday night. An as-yet undetermined number of people were sent to the hospital, and the accident blocked Highway 965 just north of Interstate 80 Exit 240 for more than an hour, law-enforcement authorities said. The accident, which occurred shortly after 7:30 p.m., involved two vehicles, officials said — a Jeep Grand Cherokee traveling south and a minivan heading north. The Grand Cherokee allegedly made a left turn, hitting the on-coming vehicle, said Trooper Frank Burns of the Iowa State Patrol. The names and conditions of the people were not known at time of publication.

Mondo-microbrewery plans go flat

High costs have scuttled plans to replace Mondo's Sports Cafe with a restaurant/microbrewery, the owner says.

By Carolyn Kresser The Daily Iowan

High construction costs have caused the plans for a two-kettle microbrewery in the Whiteway 2000 Building to be scaled back, leaving a restaurant much like the former Mondo's Sports Cafe.

Good food and service will be the main focus of his restaurant, not brewing beer, said Jim Mondanaro, the owner of the planned Mondo's restaurant and also of Mondo's Tomato Pie, Micky's and Giovanni's. The construction of a micro-brewery would have cost $1 million more than what had been projected, he said.

"In a market such as Iowa City, with a population of 75,000, and to do it the right way, it just wasn't cost effective," Mondanaro said.

The new Whiteway 2000 Building, 212 S. Clinton St., is scheduled to be completed on Aug. 15, nearly a year and a half after fire destroyed the original building, which had housed Mondo's Sports Cafe and two floors of apartments.

"It became economically unfeasible," Mondanaro said of the micro-brewery. "The mechanical aspect of it was out of control."

While a new Mondo's much like the original Mondo's will most likely appear, Mondanaro said, there's a chance he may abandon the restaurant plan because of a lack of parking and the less-busy downtown location.

"We're 90 percent sure that we will be back," he said. "A very slim chance we won't be there."

While he would like some of his employees to return to the restaurant, Mondanaro said, he realizes many of them have moved on.

OPEC to pump more; prices stay high

The oil cartel will probably boost production, but experts say Americans won't see lower pump prices.

By Bruce Stanley Associated Press

LONDON — Under pressure from the United States and other oil importers, OPEC ministers are expected to agree this week to boost petroleum output by at least 500,000 barrels a day, a 2 percent increase.

But analysts warned Monday that such an increase wouldn't lead to cheaper prices at the pump for American motorists any time soon.

"No matter what OPEC decides, it's going to be a tough gasoline season in the United States," said Peter Gignoux, the head of the petroleum desk at Salomon Smith Barney in London.

Oil ministers from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will meet Wednesday in Vienna, Austria, to decide whether to increase supplies to consumer nations, which are paying more than $30 for a barrel of crude. OPEC pumps approximately 35 percent of the world's oil.

Prices of the main U.S. crude blend shot above $33 a barrel last week but began easing off ahead of the meeting as traders anticipated an increase in OPEC output.

July contracts for West Texas Intermediate, the U.S. benchmark crude, dropped 96 cents a barrel to $31.37 in Monday afternoon trading on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Contracts for August delivery of North Sea Brent crude slipped 42 cents to $27.93 per barrel on the International Petroleum Exchange in London.

A Nigerian delegate speaking Monday in Vienna said that OPEC members have accepted the need to boost output starting on July 1. Indonesian officials said last week that OPEC would raise production by 500,000 or more barrels a day.

"There is absolutely, definitely going to be an increase," said Richard Savage, an analyst at SG Securities in London.

But before OPEC decides on any increase, it must reconcile conflicting data about whether the world actually

'Sex and the City' may seduce Broderick

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — "Sex and the City" could become a family affair.

Sarah Jessica Parker says HBO has been wooing her husband, Matthew Broderick, to join the cast of the comedy about four single women in New York.

"They ask him often. But he's too busy," Parker said in this week's TV Guide.

Broderick starred in the 1996 movie Ferris Bueller's Day Off and has been active in plays and musicals on Broadway.

HBO's half-hour show focuses on the women's sex lives, with men appearing only briefly as romantic interests.

"Any of the women would be lucky to have him — I mean, play opposite him," Parker joked.

When Irish miles are hiking

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Jane Seymour on Monday helped inaugurate a hiking trail through Irish landscapes that have served as the backdrop for a number of Hollywood movies.

The actress is in Ireland filming Yesterday's Children.

The trail meanders through scenic County Wicklow. Hikers will guide themselves with the help of storyboards detailing the area's movie connections.

Among the movies featured on the trail are Michael Collins, Braveheart, Angela's Ashes, My Left Foot and The Spy Who Came in From the Cold.

Tom Rowley of Ireland's Millennium Committee, which helped to pay for the project, said he expects it to be a huge tourist attraction.

"Visitors will have the opportunity to walk in the footsteps of some of the legends of the cinema as they visit the places where memorable scenes were shot," Rowley said.

The thrill isn't gone

NEW YORK (AP) — At 74, B.B. King still plays 200 dates a year, but that's not all he's doing to keep the blues alive.

The B.B. King Blues Club & Grill will open today in New York's Times Square.

King plans to play the opening week. He will be followed by the likes of Koko Taylor, Chaka Khan, Robert Green and Pinetop Perkins.

The club will be run by the owners of the Blue Note, a famed New York blues and jazz spot.

"I'm a terrible businessman," King said. "Awful. But when you find people you trust, you'll be OK. These are good people."

Building the perfect beast

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Rep. Howard Coble, R-N.C., has crossed swords with Don Henley and upset other big-name musicians with a four-line amendment to copyright law.

Henry recently referred to the veteran congressman as "a pygmy" and complained that recording artists got "reamed in Washington" courtesy of Coble and some of his colleagues.

He even wrote a song about it; it is the title track of Henley's just-released album, Inside Job.

Coble, the chairman of a House subcommittee on copyright issues, seemed puzzled by Henley's anger over the legislation.

"This guy, I didn't even know until he started raising hell," Coble said. "Should I know him? I wouldn't know him if he walked in the door."

Performers are upset about an amendment to copyright law that Coble helped put into an unrelated bill on home satellites late last year.

The amendment received congressional approval.

Recording companies requested the provision, which affects ownership of recorded music 35 years after its release.

Artists believe the provision robs them of the right to reclaim ownership of their old recordings from record labels. The recording companies contend the artists never really had that right to begin with.

Coble said he believes the amendment merely put into law what is accepted practice in the industry.

Walters eyes the CBS eye

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) — If Barbara Walters is thinking about jumping ship when her ABC contract expires this fall, CBS News would gladly welcome her aboard, according to TV Guide.

Walters said she is open to exploring a future at CBS. CBS News President Andrew Heyward had dinner with her recently to discuss the possibilities.

"There are people (at CBS) whom I like and admire, and I'm happy to hear what they have to say," she said.

Walters denied that exploring options outside ABC, where she has worked for 24 years, had anything to do with a rivalry with Diane Sawyer — for example, the network's decision to schedule Sawyer's news-magazine "Prime Time Thursday" after the popular "Who Wants to Be a Millionaire."

"Diane and I are friends and colleagues. We have not had any problems with each other. I can't remember the last time we had any severe problems or situations," Walters said.

She insisted that her dinner meeting with Heyward was not arranged because she was dissatisfied, "but because it's always interesting to see what's out there."

3 UI graduates win Fulbrights

Three UI graduates have won prestigious Fulbright Fellowships to conduct research abroad, bringing this year's total number of UI winners to six.

Susan Bridenstine, a May 2000 graduate in global studies, Lisa Gihring, a double major in Russian and English who expects to graduate in August, and Nicholas Regiacorte, a 1998 M.F.A. graduate of the Writers' Workshop, were chosen from among more than 4,000 applicants for the approximately 960 grants awarded to students.

In addition, Michael Putnam, a UI graduate student in Germanic languages and literature, has won a Deutscher Akademischer Austauschdienst Grant, an award comparable with a Fulbright funded by the German government. The grant will allow him to study dialectology at Phillips University in Marburg, Germany, during the next academic year.

Bridenstine plans to travel to Venezuela to study economic decisions made by Colombian immigrant women in Venezuela, focusing particularly on women employed as domestic laborers.

Gihring will travel to Moscow, where she will examine the differences between the mass media's images of prominent Russian women engaged in politics and/or the emerging feminist movement and how those women shaped their own images through autobiographies and contributed articles to newspapers and magazines.

Regiacorte will live for eight months in Sorrento, Italy, gathering the stories, images and words left behind by his father and his mother's parents, who emigrated to the United States.

His goal is to complete a collection of poems that will deal with emigration and translation between continents and between generations.

The UI has previously announced three other students who had won Fulbright Fellowships for the 2000-01 academic year. They are Ned Bertz, a Ph.D. student in history, Carrie Messenger, an M.F.A. student in creative writing, and Lana Zak, a May 2000 graduate in journalism and political science.

The Fulbright Program is designed to foster mutual understanding between the people of the United States and the people of other countries. Annually, approximately 4,500 new grants are awarded through national competitions of students, teachers, scholars and professionals.

What started out as a fascination with computers for a quartet of UI students has blossomed into full-time work.

Four young computer "geeks" started the business two weeks ago to share their computer savvy with those who need it. Three out of the four employees have built their own computers from the ground up.

UI seniors C.J. Paul, Luke Quinn and Zach Simmons, along with UI junior Shawn Driscoll, proudly call themselves "Cheap Geeks." They specialize in PC repair, firewalls, servers, networks, custom-built PCs and routing.

"Our name gets the point across," Quinn said. "We're students who will work for nearly nothing. We have all had great student jobs and learned a lot. Now, we want to bring it to the community."

Paul said he was motivated by his friends and family, who always told him he should start his own business.

"Someone working out of the home can do it better, faster and cheaper," he said, comparing his services with those of big businesses.

■ UI students agree with a Harvard study that found under-age students binge-drink.

By Megan Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

UI students say the statistics on under-age drinking in a recent study by the Harvard School of Public Health hold up in Iowa City.

The study showed that 63 percent of under-age students had imbibed alcohol at least once in the previous 30 days, and 42 percent of those who had been drinking had at least five drinks each time.

"It's a problem," said UI junior Sam Lauterbach. "It's extremely easy to get alcohol. Bartenders and people who check IDs aren't that strict."

UI junior Doug Black is not at all surprised by the Harvard findings. Black admits that since he turned 21 this past year, he has lost the urge to binge-drink.

"I don't think it has much to do with the loss of restriction — more so, I have just outgrown the desire," he said. "I think I've become more mature about drinking."

The problem of binge drinking among college students is even more prevalent at the UI than what the national report reveals, said Peter Nathan, a UI psychology professor.

According to a study done by Nathan and his students, 19 per-

Four young computer "geeks" started the business two weeks ago to share their computer savvy with those who need it. Three out of the four employees have built their own computers from the ground up.

UI seniors C.J. Paul, Luke Quinn and Zach Simmons, along with UI junior Shawn Driscol, proudly call themselves "Cheap Geeks." They specialize in PC repair, firewalls, servers, networks, custom-built PCs and routing.

"Our name gets the point across," Quinn said. "We're students who will work for nearly nothing. We have all had great student jobs and learned a lot. Now, we want to bring it to the community."

Paul said he was motivated by his friends and family, who always told him he should start his own business.

"Someone working out of the home can do it better, faster and cheaper," he said, comparing his services with those of big businesses.

All four have fond memories of their first encounters with computers. Quinn's came in 1987, when his parents bought their first personal computer.

Quinn eventually became a computer resource for his parents and friends, which benefited him at a young age, he said.

The Cheap Geeks see the business as an opportunity for career advancement.

"I like not knowing where my career is going to take me," Simmons said. "I don't want to be involved in an industry where my work would plateau; I don't want things to be the same everyday." "It's awesome for a résumé, and it's easy money," Driscol said. "Obviously, there is stuff I don't know, but I'm learning for my profession."

Any individual or small business needing assistance can call Cheap Geeks and consult with one of the Geeks, who will make a house or office call, evaluate the problem, and decide on a price for the service.

The Geeks work nights and weekends through independent contracting. If the demand for their services is there, they say, they will consider expanding.

Engineering graduates being shown the money, survey says

■ Starting salaries for students with an engineering degree average $45,000-$50,000.

By Bridget Stratton
The Daily Iowan

Starting salaries are increasing for students who graduate from college with a B.S. in engineering, according to a recently released survey.

A report from the National Association of Colleges and Employers said the beginning

One reason for the increase is the growing need for engineers, said UI junior Kelli Goedken, an office assistant in the Engineering Career Services Center.

"There appear to be more employers looking for engineers than there are engineers looking for employment," she said.

According to the UI Engineering Career Services Web site, the reported average starting salary of a UI graduate with a B.S. in chemical engineering was $48,960, slightly lower than 2000 national numbers.

Russ Curry, the human resources manager of Diversified Software Industries, said the growth of the industry and the specific skills needed by employees are the major reasons for the increase in starting salaries.

Heather Stahmer, the registrar for the engineering school, said the engineering enrollment has remained the same for the past five years.

However, not everyone in engineering is in the field only for the money.

UI graduate student Jeremy Rentz graduated with a B.S. in chemical engineering and now attends graduate school in environmental engineering.

He said the high starting salaries are nice but added that he did not go to school for engineering based only on the high salaries.

"Right now, I could be working at a job making $50,000 a year," Rentz said. "I'm probably taking a salary cut going to environmental engineering, but that's OK."

UI students to weave an educational Web

■ UI students will be able to store files on the Internet starting this fall.

By Jessi Todden
The Daily Iowan

Beginning this fall, UI students will be able to create files and store them on the Internet through the Internet company iDrive.

Students will be able to access the files from any terminal connected to the Web, said Mark Hale of campus services division of the Instructional Technology Centers.

"The way it works is students go to iDrive's Web page and tell it they want to upload a file to their account," he said. "Then they identify the files that need to be sent to iDrive, which iDrive will save on the Internet."

The cost for the UI is only $1 per student, which will be paid for through student-computing fees, Hale said.

Students will access their accounts at iDrive with a password and will also be able to upload their own Web pages using iDrive as their server, Hale said. Web pages will be able to be accessed by any Web user, he said.

Students won't be able to use iDrive for personal profit or to post inappropriate material.

"Those students who would want to use iDrive to run an Internet business or auction won't be able to because iDrive, as well as the UI, will impose restrictions preventing any use other than UI-related material," Hale said.

The system promises to be quite convenient.

"Students won't have to carry around a floppy or zip disc anymore," said Virginia Drake, a coordinator for the UI Information Technology Services.

In addition to iDrive, the UI will have a new printing system in the ITCs this fall. The system will not require students to use print cards; instead, the university will charge students' U-bills immediately after they print material in the ITCs.

To print, students will log onto computers at ITCs using an identification called the Hawk ID, a digital identification code users will use for access, Drake said.

The system will be implemented in an effort to move away from the much-maligned printing cards to make printing more convenient for students, she said.

Students who still have printing cards can have the remaining amount credited to their accounts, Drake said.

Students will be allowed to print a certain number of pages for free with the Hawk ID system. However, the number has not yet been set, Hale said.

The system students will use will be similar to the one used to access e-mail, Drake said.

Currently, both programs are being tested in ITCs; they will be ready for students at the start of the fall semester, she said.

At least one student is already looking forward to the new system.

"The print cards are a pain, and charging to the U-bill will be more convenient," said UI junior Megan Tehel. "I'm excited about it."

Under-age students gulp it down, study finds

■ UI students agree with a Harvard study that found under-age students binge-drink.

By Megan Kennedy
The Daily Iowan

UI students say the statistics on under-age drinking in a recent study by the Harvard School of Public Health hold up in Iowa City.

The study showed that 63 percent of under-age students had imbibed alcohol at least once in the previous 30 days, and 42 percent of those who had been drinking had at least five drinks each time.

"It's a problem," said UI junior Sam Lauterbach. "It's extremely easy to get alcohol. Bartenders and people who check IDs aren't that strict."

UI junior Doug Black is not at all surprised by the Harvard findings. Black admits that since he turned 21 this past year, he has lost the urge to binge-drink.

"I don't think it has much to do with the loss of restriction — more so, I have just outgrown the desire," he said. "I think I've become more mature about drinking."

The problem of binge drinking among college students is even more prevalent at the UI than what the national report reveals, said Peter Nathan, a UI psychology professor.

According to a study done by Nathan and his students, 19 percent of college students nationwide were found to be frequent binge drinkers, while 40 percent of UI students frequently binge-drink.

The Iowa City City Council has difference, said UI senior Dan Dusel.

The bars have nothing to do with the binge-drinking problem among college students, adding that it is easier to get beer at liquor stores and gas stations with fake IDs than in Iowa City bars.

Julie Pbye, the director of the Stepping Up Project, said she will do as much as she can to get the information out to college students. She said she believes giving the students options to the bars will help curb binge drinking.

Southern Baptists devalue contributions of women

Last week, delegates at a convention of Southern Baptists voted to amend their Statement of Faith and Message to say that only men are qualified to serve as pastors and lead congregations.

The delegates' resolution is not binding, however. Each congregation is free to disobey the wishes of the denomination's leaders and hire a female pastor. Each Southern Baptist must make a personal choice to stay with the denomination in the face of this development.

Making these choices will be particularly difficult for those this development affects most directly — the 100 women who lead Southern Baptist congregations and the denomination's 1,600 clergywomen. The revised Statement of Faith and Message does not offer any advice on what these women should do now that their qualifications have been negated. Instead, it places them in a spiritual quandary. Do they resign the post they feel they have been called to and remain with the denomination they have served for years, or do they reject that denomination and continue to act as a pastor?

Questions of faith, identity and self-worth hang in the balance. The female pastors must wonder if their service to the Southern Baptist denomination was ever truly valued by its leaders or if their qualifications for their own jobs somehow disappeared overnight.

Some female pastors, such as Julie Pennington-Russell, who leads a Southern Baptist congregation in Waco, Texas, expect women to remain leaders. "In Baptist tradition, the local congregation is where it all happens," she told CNN. "As long as there are congregations out there with the courage to follow the spirit of God... then women will always find a place."

Pennington-Russell expects her own congregation will exhibit such courage and support her, but she must surely be left with nagging personal questions about her value to her male peers and doubts about how her decision fits in with the stated values of her denomination.

It's tempting to criticize Southern Baptists for openly advocating sexism (in a document that simultaneously condemns racism, no less), but the denomination is a private organization whose members are not forced to belong. Their crime is not in espousing sexism but in their alienation of women such as Pennington-Russell. It is astoundingly unfair for Southern Baptist leaders to devalue the work and qualifications of its female pastors and clergywomen without offering them any sort of compromise or help in handling the spiritual crisis that has been forced upon them.

Mental health no laughing matter

Normally, most would be excited about the release of a movie that is expected to be the comedy hit of the summer. But with a slogan such as "From Gentle to Mental," those with true concern for mental-health issues will not be standing in line to see Me, Myself and Irene when it hits theaters Friday.

The thin plot centers on Jim Carrey's character, who, the film asserts, has "Multiple Personality Disorder." His two "personalities" proceed to fight over one woman. The completely inaccurate, insensitive and ignorant portrayal of a person with such a serious mental disorder is offensive and flies in the face of anyone who has known the pain of mental illness. But then again, could one expect more from the actor who is famous for talking out of his butt?

One could expect more controversy in the media over this film, as it reinforces absurd stereotypes about all persons with mental disorders. Instead, the media have largely joined in the slur, incorporating politically incorrect terms such as "schizo" and "manic-depressive." While the film was done in the spirit of (sick) humor, intolerance isn't funny, nor is making money from intolerance.

The slogan "From Gentle to Mental" implies that persons with mental disorders are far from gentle — recalling antiquated notions of the violent "mental patient." The truth is that individuals suffering from mental illnesses are more often the victims of violent crime than the perpetrator.

And a couple of other misrepresentations to clear up: (1) Multiple Personality Disorder was officially renamed Dissociative Identity Disorder (DID) in 1994 because the earlier name was misleading. The majority of those diagnosed with DID are also diagnosed with Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder and an overwhelming majority were victims of child abuse. (2) DID and schizophrenia are NOT the same thing. (3) Mental disorders are serious disabilities and are not the product of weak character. Don't blame the victim.

Me, Myself and Irene is a huge step backward in the anti-stigma battle in which those concerned with mental disorders have been entrenched. Feel free to attend however, if painful illnesses are your idea of comedy. You might also enjoy the Tom Green Cancer Special.

Q: How many Americans receive the death penalty each year despite their innocence?

When the White House becomes a Milhouse

So there I was, sminding my own business, drinking some coffee, sitting at my computer in the newsroom and spell-checking, all of which I occasionally indulge in just to keep in practice. Not that it seems to do any good.

I was not, despite the picture, smoking a cigarette, of course. The university, in its infinite PC wisdom, would never allow you to be exposed to the slightest hint of second-hand smoke in a campus building, even though the UI will allow carcinogenic-spewing internal-combustion engines to parade through your campus at will.

Go figure. It's an intellectually free atmosphere here, sometimes.

Man, is it free.

And then the spell-checker, as spell-checkers do when they're using their anal drives, flagged a word it didn't recognize. Spell-checkers are like that, as you probably know. They come across a word they don't recognize, and they set off a hue and cry, though nobody's quite sure what color that hue is. Hey, what's this, they shout, like you were trying to sneak something by them.

Perfectly good words, too. "Discombobulated." "Retrodacity." "Kafka." Sometimes you get the idea that spell-checkers have even less of a vocabulary than college freshmen.

In this case, the story was about Richard Milhouse Nixon, who was president once, sometime back in the Middle Ages, before there were such things as spell-checkers.

— But what did you do when you had to check the spelling? The kids ask, gathering around, their eyes full of wonder at the notion of life before spell-checkers.

— Well, I say (trying to seem old and wise but not so old that I seem lame), we had these big books back then called dictionaries, and we had to use the dictionary to look up the words we didn't know how to spell.

— But how could you look up the words if you didn't know how to spell them?

— That's what we kept wondering. You could waste a whole semester trying to find "discombobulated," never once realizing that's exactly what you were. Times were a lot tougher back then. For one thing, Richard Milhouse Nixon was president.

And what a president he was. You can say all you want to about Bill Clinton and his peccadilloes — and I admit, there's plenty to say, and none of it's pretty — but compared with Nixon, Wild Bill comes out looking a whole lot more like Mild Bill.

I mean, sure, Bill had his intern and the cigar and the famous blue dress that somebody somehow forgot to take to the dry cleaners. Minor-league stuff. In the Nixon White House, they played hard ball.

Over and over, in all parts of the world, Nixon proved that he had no time for the niceties of democracy. Chile, Guatemala, Cambodia, Vietnam, Laos — it's a heady list of realpolitik, which is a fancy Latin word meaning tinhorn dictator.

All topped off, of course, by Watergate, the anniversary of which came and went last Saturday.

It's nearly impossible to convey to people who weren't around back then what it felt like to go through the Watergate saga. I mean, we on the left despised Nixon, totally and thoroughly. But as the revelations came trickling out, first in the Washington Post and then on TV, we were stunned. Nixon turned out to be far worse than even the most paranoid, stoned hippie could possibly imagine.

BEAU ELLIOT

We on the left despised Nixon, totally and thoroughly. But as the revelations came trickling out, first in the Washington Post and then on TV, we were stunned. Nixon turned out to be far worse than even the most paranoid, stoned hippie could possibly imagine.

For instance, just to hit some of the high points, he had a secret band of political operatives running around the country, breaking into offices to gather intelligence on his "enemies" and playing dirty tricks on his political opponents, financed by a secret slush fund. All entirely illegal. He used military intelligence, the FBI and the CIA to spy on the anti-war and the black activist movements. He used the CIA to reveal the FBI's original Watergate investigation. All entirely illegal.

Nixon was the closest thing to a dictator that country has seen, and he used the nation's intelligence organizations as his secret police. As a villain, he's in a class by himself.

Clinton's problems were the stuff of soap opera. But Nixon and Watergate? That was worthy of Shakespeare.

And the word my spell-checker flagged? It was "Milhouse." The spell-checker didn't care for the word.

It did come up with a suggestion to replace it, though:

"Jailhouse."

India's caste war more violent, milit

■ There have been eight major caste-related attacks in the last six months.

By Hema Shukla

PATNA, India — Militants fighting a class war in lawless, northeast India vowed Monday to carry out more massacres like one this weekend that left nearly three dozen women, children and elderly men dead.

The slaughter on June 16 in the village of Miapur, home to mostly lower-caste cattle herders, was the eighth major caste-related attack in the last six months in Bihar state, one of India's poorest. The landlords' militia that took responsibility for the killings said they were revenge for last week's massacre of 12 upper-caste landlords.

Two leftist groups that claim to represent the interests of the peasant classes said Monday they would pick an upper-caste village and avenge the killings in Miapur within 30 days.

"We will strike soon, and the toll will not be fewer than 150," said Badal, who uses one name and is a member of the Maoist Communist Center, which claimed responsibility for last year's Senari massacre of 35 upper-caste villagers. "This is a class war."

Upendra Singh, an area commander of Ranvir Sena, the group that carried out the Miapur killings, told the Associated Press in a telephone interview Monday that he was unmoved by the leftists' threat of revenge.

"We will kill 10 times the number they kill," he said.

The village was chosen, Singh said, because it was a "soft target" — a place where people don't have weapons to defend themselves. He also accused villagers of sheltering leftists involved in

Council, library board clash over parking

■ The City Council says "No" to guaranteed parking in the lot adjacent to the Public Library.

By Sky Eilers
The Daily Iowan

A proposal by the Iowa City Public Library Board of Trustees to guarantee access to a parking lot adjacent to the Public Library was met with resounding disapproval by the Iowa City City Council at Monday's work session. Mayor Ernie Lehman said the council cannot guarantee that the lot on Linn and College streets will continue to be used for parking for any definite period of time.

"It's difficult to make an argument that a parking lot located in central downtown is essential to economy," Lehman said. "If a $10 million to $12 million offer was made to purchase the property for commercial use, the council would be hard-pressed to say no."

Library board President Mark Martin said the public has pinpointed access as the most significant issue concerning an expansion plan for the Public Library. The board requested that the lot remain designated for parking for a period of five years.

Plans for the library call for an approximately 33,000-square-foot expansion westward into the Leno & Cilek building, 130 S. Dubuque St., leaving approximately 19,000 square feet available to lease for commercial space on the first floor and in the basement.

Without access to the adjacent lot, the nearest parking available for library patrons would be in the parking ramp on Burlington and Dubuque streets. Many library patrons have described walking from that ramp as a burden, said board member Jim Swaim.

Within two blocks of the library are approximately 3,000 parking spaces located in four parking ramps, Lehman said.

"Perception is reality, and the perception is that people don't like parking ramps," Martin said.

Ross Wilburn was the only councilor who seemed open to meet the board's request for a five-year guarantee.

"If there's the demand from library patrons, I'd be willing to set a time frame," he said.

Occupational health the focus of new UI center

■ The facility will provide training in and research of workplace injuries.

By Kelly Oulman
The Daily Iowan

In order to provide training and research opportunities in occupational health, a new center will open next month in the UI Department of Occupational and Environmental Health, which is part of the College of Public Health. The Heartland Center of Occupational Health and Safety will train health-care professionals in treating workplace injuries and researching occupational-health topics.

"There is a deficiency of trained occupational-health professionals in the Midwest," said Kelley Donham, a UI professor of occupational and environmental health.

There are only 12 occupational-health centers in the United States. The new UI center will serve Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and Missouri, Donham said.

The center's responsibilities will include providing support and training for students of occupational health, Donham said, and the department will provide financial assistance to students.

Providing more training opportunities will benefit Iowa, said Jerry Skeers of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

The difference in the abilities of small and large companies to provide trained occupational-health staff is one of the problems mentioned in a recent report issued by the Institute of Medicine in Washington, D.C.

Most workplaces employ fewer than 50 people, and those companies do not have the capacity to hire individuals trained in occupational health, said James Merchant, the dean of the public-health school and head of the committee that wrote the medical institute's report.

The report stressed the importance of extending training in occupational-health fields. The new center will give the UI more resources to do the training, Merchant said.

Nancy Sprince, a UI professor of occupational and environmental health, will be the director of the new center.

Two new programs will be added to the department to expand its training opportunities, one of which will offer occupational nursing training in cooperation with the College of Nursing.

"It will provide an opportunity to develop innovative programs," Merchant said. The National Institute for Occupational Health and Safety, a component of the Center for Disease Control, has provided the center with a $1.2 million grant.

City Council thinks flat water rate is all wet

■ The plan would charge for the amount of water used, with some business rates jumping 38 percent.

By Sky Eilers
The Daily Iowan

A flat rate for Iowa City water, which could raise the cost for some businesses as much as 38 percent, gained little support during the Iowa City City Council work session Monday.

Patrons consuming more than 3,000 cubic feet of water per month receive a rate reduction under the city's current system, City Manager Steve Atkins said. Those rates would increase under a flat rate, based on how much water they use.

Currently, 35 percent of the city's water is used by commercial patrons, who pay 25 percent of the total cost. The remaining 65 percent of the water is used by smaller businesses or private residences.

The smaller businesses or private homes would also pay for water based on how much they used, said Councilor Steven Kanner. Kanner, who favors the change in water rates, said the fairness of the current system deserves to be questioned.

Atkins presented a list of 1999's largest water consumers in Iowa City. The second- and fourth-largest consumers on the list of 21 were the UI Hospitals and Clinics and Mercy Hospital, 500 E. Market St., he said.

With a water rate based on use, Procter & Gamble Manufacturing Co., 2200 Lower Muscatine Road, would have to pay the largest increase: 38 percent.

"If you choose to make a political decision, you should consider whom that decision would affect," Atkins told the council.

The rate would also have a negative effect on future business prospects in the city, said Councilor Dee Vanderhoef.

"If we want to encourage new businesses, one of the things they're certainly going to look at is water rates," she said. "If that business uses a large quantity of water, we might exclude ourselves from new businesses or current businesses."

Because the council could not get more than four councilors to agree on hearing a presentation on the flat rate, it will not pursue the topic at this time.

India's caste war to get more violent, militants vow

■ There have been eight major caste-related attacks in the last six months.

By Hema Shukla
Associated Press

PATNA, India — Militants fighting a class war in lawless, northeast India vowed Monday to carry out more massacres like one this weekend that left nearly three dozen women, children and elderly men dead.

The slaughter on June 16 in the village of Miapur, home to mostly lower-caste cattle herders, was the eighth major caste-related attack in the last six months in Bihar state, one of India's poorest. The landlords' militia that took responsibility for the killings said they were revenge for last week's massacre of 12 upper-caste landlords.

Two leftist groups that claim to represent the interests of the peasant classes said Monday they would pick an upper-caste village and avenge the killings in Miapur within 30 days.

"We will strike soon, and the toll will not be fewer than 150," said Badal, who uses one name and is a member of the Maoist Communist Center, which claimed responsibility for last year's Senari massacre of 35 upper-caste villagers. "This is a class war."

Uendra Singh, an area commander of Ranvir Sena, the group that carried out the Miapur killings, told the Associated Press in a telephone interview Monday that he was unmoved by the leftists' threat of revenge.

"We will kill 10 times the number they kill," he said.

The village was chosen, Singh said, because it was a "soft target" — a place where people don't have weapons to defend themselves. He also accused villagers of sheltering leftists involved in last year's attacks in Senari, just 212 miles away from Miapur.

At least 5,000 people have been killed in the past decade in Bihar over caste-related disputes. The centuries-old Hindu system of social hierarchy dominates all spheres of life, and using violence to keep it in place is not new. But friction between the castes has intensified since India's Constitution gave lower castes rights to political participation, property, education, jobs and land — changes the upper castes resist.

For those reasons, Singh said, the fighting is in a way about scarce resources in a poor state where there is little development and rampant government corruption. Many of the state's legislators are convicted criminals.

In the June 16 attack, scores of gunmen dressed in black launched a 212-hour gun battle until villagers' ammunition ran out. The attackers then stormed in and executed 34 children, women and elderly men. Eighteen others were wounded.

"Always the innocent are killed," said Singh, who oversees Ranvir Sena's operations in Gaya, Jehanabad and Aurangabad districts, the areas most wracked by the caste violence.

"The men run away, leaving women and children behind," he said. "We don't want to kill women and children. But if they don't consider (them), why should we?"

He said it was important to keep the death toll high to show that revenge has been taken: "We need the numbers."

The Hindustan newspaper reported Monday that the Maoist Center and the People's War Group — also a leftist guerrilla outfit — had short-listed three dozen villages dominated by the upper-caste Bhumihar community.

All entirely illegal. He used military intelligence, the FBI and the CIA to spy on the anti-war and the black activist movements. He used the CIA to derail the FBI's original Watergate investigation. All entirely illegal. Nixon was the closest thing to a dictator that country has seen, and he used the nation's intelligence organizations as his secret police. As a villain, he's in a class by himself. Clinton's problems were the stuff of soap opera. But Nixon and Watergate? That was worthy of Shakespeare. And the word my spell-checker flagged? It was "Milhouse." The spell-checker didn't care for the word. It did come up with a suggestion to replace it, though: "Jailhouse."

CITY BRIEF

Pipe leaks 'clean' water into Clear Creek

A broken sewage main is leaking treated water into Clear Creek, which runs through Coralville and empties into the Iowa River near the First Avenue bridge.

Residents needn't be alarmed by the leak, said Allan Goldberg, an Iowa Department of National Resources field office supervisor. Because the leaking water is final effluent — meaning it has already been treated at the Coralville Wastewater Treatment Plant and, thus, has already been chlorinated — it is safe, he said. The leak will not be fixed for several days, Goldberg said.

Both the Iowa City and the UI water plants are downstream from the confluence of Clear Creek and the river. Both cities' water plants were notified when the leak was discovered on June 16, Goldberg said.

Heavy erosion after last week's excessive rainfall probably caused the break in the main, he said.

Repairs will cost an estimated $35,000-$40,000, Goldberg said. — by Michael Chapman

58 die in immigrant-smuggling

■ British officials rail against what they call "a profoundly evil trade."

By Audrey Woods
Associated Press

DOVER, England — Britain launched a major inquiry Monday into "the profoundly evil" crime syndicates that smuggle immigrants after 58 people — thought to be Chinese — were found dead in the unrefrigerated, sealed compartment of a tomato truck.

Two men huddled near the door at the back of the Dutch-registered truck survived the five-hour journey across the English Channel, from the Belgian port of Zeebrugge to the southeast port of Dover.

Too traumatized to be questioned immediately, the survivors were hospitalized at a secret location for fear they would be abducted or killed before identifying the agents who sold them their deadly, illicit passage to the West.

In London, Home Secretary Jack Straw said the 54 men and four women had died "a most terrible death," victims of crime syndicates that make millions from immigrant smuggling.

"Let no one be in any doubt whether this is a profoundly evil trade whose perpetrators have no regard for human life," Straw told the House of Commons. "We have been determined to crack down on this trade."

The National Crime Squad, a police body, will lead the drive to catch the traffickers, working with intelligence, customs and immigration officials. Officials said they will work to increase cooperation between European countries.

The measures will expand on Britain's recent attempts to clamp down on the rising tide of asylum-seekers — 71,000 last year, compared with 46,000 in 1998. Police and customs officers find up to 2,000 illegal immigrants hidden in trucks at or near British ports each month, and they believe many more slip through.

This year, Britain started imposing fines of $3,000 on truckers for every illegal immigrant found aboard and ended cash social-security payments to asylum-seekers.

Officials said they knew only that the smuggled immigrants discovered by British customs officials just before midnight Sunday were Asians, possibly from China. None carried any form of identity. The dead probably suffocated, said Wim de Bruin, a spokesman for the Dutch Public Prosecutor's Office.

Police arrested the Dutch driver of the 50-foot white Mercedes-Benz truck, which carried tomatoes. Its refrigeration unit was turned off, and police said it left Belgium on the hottest day of the year in England and parts of northern Europe. Temperatures outside the truck reached 86 degrees.

Dutch authorities joined British and other European police forces in trying to trace the truck's owner and its journey before it arrived at Zeebrugge.

The driver, who paid the fare in cash at Zeebrugge, aroused suspicion because the vehicle's owner — a Rotterdam-based company called Van Der Spek — had not used the route before, according to ferry operators P and O Stena Line.

Britain's Sky-TV said the company was registered three days ago by a 24-year-old Dutch man who had vanished Monday when police searched the Rotterdam apartment he shares with his parents.

European Union leaders, meeting in Portugal, said they would accelerate measures to curb illegal immigration and the trade in human beings. The 15 EU nations will coordinate their efforts with Europol, the bloc's law-enforcement agency, the leaders said in a statement.

In Geneva, the United Nations refugee agency said in a statement that it was "outraged" by the immigrants' deaths.

Soren Jessen-Petersen, an assistant high commissioner for refugees, said the deaths underscored the urgent need for the world to find a better way to manage the global movement of people "so they no longer fall prey to those who thrive and profit on human misery and abuse."

U.S. eases sanctions on N. Korea

■ The Clinton administration action comes in the wake of the two Koreas' historic summit last week.

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration moved Monday to lift a half-century of trade restrictions on North Korea, putting new regulations into place that will allow the United States to resume a variety of economic contacts.

The action was heavy in symbolism, coming one week after an historic summit between North and South Korea. But economists predicted that trade flows would remain tiny for a number of years, given that North Korea is emerging from decades of extreme isolation.

"There will be some interest on the part of American companies, but it won't happen overnight. North Korea is one of the world's poorest economies, and it has been closed off to the world for a long time," said Franklin Vargo, the head of international economic affairs at the National Association of Manufacturers.

The new rules, published in the Federal Register Monday, relax a once near-total trade embargo imposed on North Korea during the early days of the Korean War, in 1950.

The revised rules will allow North Korea to export raw materials and finished goods to the United States and will allow U.S. firms to sell American goods — without military uses — and farm products to North Korea.

The regulations also will open up air travel and shipping routes between the two countries as well as banking transfers between individuals and companies. It also eases restrictions on investment by American companies.

President Clinton had announced plans to ease the trade embargo nine months ago as a reward for North Korea's agreement to halt missile testing. But formal implementation did not take place until Monday — just days after the groundbreaking summit in Pyongyang between South Korean President Kim Dae-jung and North Korean leader Kim Jong Il.

State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said easing the trade embargo reflected the administration's view that North Korea will continue to observe the moratorium on testing long-range missiles.

Boucher said that members of the U.S. Chamber of Commerce in South Korea hoped to travel soon to North Korea on a fact-finding mission, but, he said, "I think we have to be realistic and understand that the actual opportunities for trade may be limited by the state of North Korea's economy."

Communist North Korea, one of the most impoverished and isolated nations in the world, has faced widespread famine and disease in recent years that have claimed the lives of hundreds of thousands of North Koreans.

It has an economy that has shrunk steadily throughout the 1990s after its support from the Soviet Union and other former communist-bloc countries in Eastern Europe was cut back.

Soccer violence

■ Hooligan fans affect England's and Germany's chances to host 2006 World Cup.

By Robert Millward
Associated Press

ROTTERDAM, Belgium — The sight of riot police firing water cannons at fighting English and German fans has become the shameful image of the European soccer championships.

But the violence could also have another, broader impact: helping to determine the host country for the 2006 World Cup. The rival bids by England and Germany for soccer's showpiece event may have been dealt a fatal blow by the violence of their hooligan fans on June 17 in Charleroi, Belgium, before the two countries met in a highly charged Euro 2000 game.

English Cup hopes appear to have been hit hardest by the violence, while the fighting could be a major boost to the bids of South Africa, Brazil and Morocco when FIFA decides next month on the 2006 host.

"On behalf of everyone involved in Euro 2000 — the players, the coaches, our hosts, the genuine fans and the police — we call on all visitors to show respect for law and order," said Gerhard Aigner, the chief executive of the European soccer union UEFA.

Supreme Court votes 6-3 against student-led prayer

PRAYER

UI senior Corey Hopkins agrees with the Supreme Court ruling but doesn't think moments of silence should also be restricted.

"I can see it being a problem if there are differences in religion on a team, but as far as moments of silence go, people can pray to whomever they'd like to," Hopkins said.

Students still have the right to pray before, during or after school, said Justice John Paul Stevens in the majority opinion for the court. But when the state sponsors the religious practice of prayer, the religious liberty protected by the Constitution is abridged, he wrote.

Justices Sandra Day O'Connor, Anthony M. Kennedy, David H. Souter, Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Stephen G. Breyer sided with Stevens on the ruling.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justices Antonin Scalia and Clarence Thomas dissented.

Rehnquist, writing in the minority opinion, said the tone of the court's opinion "bristles with hostility to all things religious in public life" and was more disturbing than the substance.

The Iowa City School District supports the teaching of multiple religions, said Helen Finken, a social studies K-12 coordinator for the district and a social studies teacher at City High School, 1900 Morningside Drive.

The ruling is consistent with previous court rulings, she said. Finken noted she believes that within City High's social studies program, there are many opportunities to learn about a variety of the world's religions.

"The role of the school is to teach about religions, not to promote one particular religion over the other," she said.

While the ruling will not be an issue at City High, nor change the way the school holds its activities, Principal Trudy Day said, the court's rule did not surprise her.

"I think the Supreme Court has been very careful in keeping the separation of church and state, and clearly the public school is an extension of the state," she said.

At West High School, 2901 Melrose Ave., the ruling will neither affect the athletics events nor cause change, said Marv Reiland, the school's athletics director.

"It's never been a problem for us at West High, so I do not know that it will be a problem," he said.

High costs scuttle Mondo microbrewery

One former Mondo's employee, Craig Davis, said he won't return to work at Mondo's because he has been promoted to management at Micky's, 11 S. Dubuque St. He maintained, however, that the return of the relaxed-atmosphere restaurant is needed.

"It's great food, a more-casual atmosphere than most restaurants, and you can get more than just fried food like at a normal sports bar," he said.

Though the restaurant is not scheduled to open until November, the rest of the building will be completed in time for the start of the school year, said Marc Moen, the building's owner.

The building will contain 39 apartments, including four studios, seven two-story penthouse apartments, and 28 one-bedroom apartments, Moen said.

"They are very different from other apartments and are leased by mostly students and a couple professors," he said.

Yankees rebound

BOSTON — Now these looked like the real New York Yankees — and then some!

The struggling two-time World Series champions handed the Boston Red Sox their most-lopsided home loss ever, breaking loose for five home runs Monday night in a 22-1 romp.

Shane Spencer hit a three-run shot in a nine-run eighth inning and Scott Brosius added a three-run drive in a seven-run ninth.

It was New York's highest-scoring game since July 12, 1953, when it beat Washington by the same 22-1 margin. Only the Yankees' 25-2 win over Philadelphia on May 24, 1936, was by a bigger score in team history.

It was the highest-scoring game against the Red Sox since Chicago beat them 22-13 on May 31, 1970. Boston's worst loss was 27-3 at Cleveland on July 7, 1923.

Brewers 2, Marlins 0

MIAMI — Jamey Wright came within three outs of his first career shutout as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Florida Marlins 2-0 on Monday night.

Wright (3-1) allowed three hits, three walks and struck out a career-high eight before being replaced after walking Mark Kotsay to lead off the ninth.

It was the sixth start of the year for Wright, who was on the disabled list until May 23 with a rotator cuff tear in his right shoulder.

Soccer violence hurts cup bids

■ Hooligan fans affect England's and Germany's chances to host 2006 World Cup.

Turkish and Belgium soccer fans clash in the center of Brussels Monday.

He spoke as UEFA threatened to throw England out of the continental championship if another round of hooligan violence occurred. That had English officials scrambling to control the fans and protect their country's image.

"I think everybody in England feels deeply ashamed at the way these hooligans have behaved," Prime Minister Tony Blair said. "They bring a disgrace to our country. They are not representative of the English or the British people. We are a decent people. We are a tolerant people."

"And these people who engage in these appalling acts of hooliganism and violence — they have no place in our national way of life at all. They disgrace our national way of life."

Jack Straw, the British home secretary, pleaded with hooligans to end the violence and keep England in the competition — both on the field and off.

"You will bear a very heavy responsibility in the end for the consequences of your mindless actions and the most patriotic thing you can do is to stay away," he said.

Yankees rebound in a big way

Atlanta's Greg Maddux pitches against the Philadelphia Phillies Monday.

Expos 2, Pirates 1

MONTREAL — Wilton Guerrero's tiebreaking single with two outs in the eighth inning led the Montreal Expos to a 2-1 victory Monday night over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Pittsburgh took a 1-0 lead in the seventh on John Vander Wal's sixth home run, off Carl Pavano (8-3).

The Expos rallied in the eighth when Chris Widger drew a one-out walk. One out later, pinch-runner Terry Jones stole second and scored on a double by Peter Bergeron off reliever Rich Loiselle (0-2). Guerrero followed with the game-winning hit.

Phillies 5, Braves 2

PHILADELPHIA — Mike Lieberthal's three-run homer capped a four-run eighth inning and lifted the Philadelphia Phillies to a 5-2 victory over the Atlanta Braves on Monday night.

The Phillies, who took three of four in the series, rallied in the eighth after Greg Maddux left the game. Mike Remlinger (2-2) relieved after a one-out walk to Ron Gant and allowed a base hit to Bobby Abreu and a game-tying RBI single by Scott Rolen.

Rolen is 6-for-12 off Remlinger with three homers, but Atlanta manager Bobby Cox kept the left-hander in to face the third baseman even though right-hander Kerry Ligtenberg was warming up.

Lieberthal then drilled a 1-2 pitch into the left-field bullpen off Ligtenberg for his 11th homer.

White Sox 6, Indians 1

CHICAGO — The Chicago White Sox won their eighth straight game, getting a homer from Herbert Perry and 6-2 scoreless innings from Kip Wells to beat the Cleveland Indians 6-1 on Monday night.

The White Sox, who won three games in Cleveland and four at Yankee Stadium to complete a perfect seven-game road trip, moved 8 1-2 games ahead of the Indians in the AL Central.

The eight-game win streak is Chicago's longest since the White Sox won eight in a row May 17-26, 1996. It was the Indians' seventh loss in their last eight games.

Two new teams prepare to pick same old players in expansion draft

■ General managers in Columbus and Minnesota are finding out there is a reason teams are willing to give up players.

By Rusty Miller
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The names get fans imagining instant success: Mark Messier, Paul Coffey, Claude Lemieux, Doug Gilmour, Rick Tocchet.

They, and others, are available to the Columbus Blue Jackets and the Minnesota Wild in Friday's expansion draft. But many of the big names on the list are past their prime, too expensive, damaged goods or a bad fit for a new franchise.

"You get a shot at them all," Columbus president and general manager Doug MacLean said. Yet he and Wild general manager Doug Risebrough also know that the list of available players is misleading.

Future Hall of Famers such as Coffey and Messier are unlikely to see the two expansion cities unless it is through the windows of a visiting team's bus. At the age of 39, they also have Hall of Fame-caliber contracts that put them out of reach for upstart teams.

"You're paying for what players have already done," said Atlanta Thrashers general manager Don Waddell, who called his team's shots in the expansion draft a year ago. "They're all there for a reason. Nobody's giving away star players for nothing."

Each of 26 NHL teams (Atlanta and Nashville are excluded because they joined the league the past two seasons) will make players available in the draft. The teams protect their best players and are prevented from losing too much talent.

Secret deals, delayed retirements and trades for "future considerations" allow teams to protect their best young players, while making available the old, the infirm, the overpriced and the underachieving.

The Blue Jackets and the Wild have scoured the expansion lists since they were made available last week, and staged dozens of mock drafts.

They also have prepared to compete with each for the available talent — something that Nashville and Atlanta didn't have to do because they entered the league in different years.

Finally, the list of 613 unprotected players includes many players who are unrestricted free agents on July 1. If a team selects such a player and isn't able to sign him, all it gets is an additional selection in the amateur draft.

"There's no value in taking them unless you take them to get a compensatory pick," MacLean said. "You're going to own them for five or six days and then they're going to go where they want to go."

The Blue Jackets and the Wild are permitted no more than six free agents in the draft — one goalie, two defensemen and three forwards — which further limits the new teams' options.

"It trims your list down," MacLean said. "Then you have some high-priced guys there who are not expansion-team type players."

That describes Coffey, now with the Carolina Hurricanes, and Messier, who played last year for the Vancouver Canucks. No one questions their value — great teams seem to have followed them ever since their days with the Edmonton Oilers' dynasty of the 1980s. But both are getting old and both have hefty contracts.

The list also includes players who carry around on-ice (Marty McSorley) and off-ice (Bob Probert) problems. Others have never majored in team chemistry.

"The biggest challenge is to pick the right people," said Jacques Lemaire, hired Monday as the Wild's coach.

The problems facing NHL expansion teams are not much different from those in other leagues.

"There are some guys on there who are surprising," Cleveland Browns director of player personnel Dwight Clark said as he perused the NFL expansion list a year ago, "but once you look into it a little more you start to understand why."

SOLO: IMPROVISATIONS FOR EXTENDED PIANO

Lyle Mays

The question that pervades what I will call this musical experience, is: What does it all mean?

After a 25-year, multi-Grammy-winning career, working with various bands and on soundtracks, Mays was hesitant to put out a solo album. However, from the fruits of his efforts emanates a melodic cacophony of piano and electronics.

Solo makes a lovely bedtime treat. Mays' music is artfully dominated by his smooth prophetic grand piano and skillfully backed by a chorus of synthesized and electronic compositions. The album, as a whole, has a serene, meditative effect that envelops the listener in its menacing ambience. Yet, at the same time, it makes the listener ask:

Are Mays' compositions a musical expression of the depths of human thought, or do his melodies defy the bounds of absolute truth and meaning? Are these ominous sounds the result of philosophical enigmas or profound and cathartic emotion? I can't figure it out. I suppose these secrets are locked in the keys of Mays' extended piano, but then again, what is an extended piano?

RIDING WITH THE KING

B.B. King and Eric Clapton

The "God" from muddy waters and the original Blues Boy close the 20th century with an album that serves as an apt culmination of the accomplishments of rock in the past century. Riding with the King is a collaboration of two blues artists, both so masterful that they are in awe of one another, and are also perhaps the most-hallowed survivors of the world of rock. Their music is genuinely a product of experience as well as talent and a valid record of Clapton's and King's stunning careers.

The collection draws from a wide variety of sources, borrowing from major artists for performance and composition. Clapton and King have compiled and restored the songs they feel defined and evolved blues. There are quite a few of King's classics ("Days of Old," "Three O'Clock Blues" and "Ten Long Years") as well as covers. Every song features King on vocals and Clapton on either vocals or guitar, yet the album is not without a star-lit roster of studio guests, including Steve Gadd, Nathan East, Susannah Melvoin, Doyle Bramhall II and Jimmie Vaughan.

Riding with the King closes on the slow ballad, made popular by Ray Charles, "Come Rain or Shine" — a phrase that crystallizes the soul from which the blues was born. The song is orchestrated, featuring all of the above artists with both King and Clapton on vocals and guitar. Their final sentiment for the continuation of the blues tradition, "I'm with you always, I'm with you rain or shine."

PUNK "O" RAMA

Various Artists

Another provocative collection, featuring NOFX, Rancid and the Voodoo Glow Skulls. Punk "O" Rama offers previously unreleased tracks, an economical price and lots and lots of power chords. A definite must for anyone "cool" under 40.

The 28 songs (no bands are repeated) are a pretty good sampling of punk, but the overall sound (as far as punk goes) is softer than hard. Kind of. I'll put it this way: For better or for worse, most of the songs would have fit on the Empire Records Soundtrack, whatever that means to you.

I thought Punk "O" Rama itself was very nice, but the title was rather generic. Considering its variety and vigor, I would have called it Punk for Beginners or Little Junior's First Punk Album — those titles may have fit a little better. But at the same time, I give due homage to the artists, especially because this album has achieved an aura that is particularly modern for punk. What I'm trying to say is, if you like boy bands, I'd go ahead and buy this disc; it's got quite a few sexy male vocalists.

TV museum launches Web programming

NEW YORK (AP) — With the click of your mouse, you see and hear Julia Child explain how she encourages people "just to have a good time in the kitchen."

Ted Danson sums up for you the work-and-play climate of his beloved sitcom "Cheers": "Anyone who showed any vulnerability, we would leap on them like a pack of wolves."

Veteran actress Tyne Daly, now co-starring on "Judging Amy," confides from your computer screen: "I learn from everybody."

Those are three of the TV and radio participants in "Perspectives," a new collection of personal musings on the mass media. This exclusive Internet programming, meant to showcase the Internet as the newest mass medium, is a co-venture of the RealNetworks Inc., and the Museum of Television & Radio. It will launch today.

Available on the Web sites of both RealNetworks and the Museum of Television & Radio, the specially prepared interviews are among the first Internet acquisitions to join the museum's permanent collection of more than 100,000 TV and radio programs.

"We approached 20 people with distinguished careers in television and radio and asked them two things: to offer a perspective on their own work, and to reflect on the media in general," said museum President

Indiana Jones and the temple of wind shear

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — A plane piloted by Harrison Ford sustained minor damage while landing in shifting winds.

The actor was at the controls of the six-passenger Beechcraft Bonanza when it touched down at Lincoln Municipal Airport Sunday night. The Indiana Jones star and an unidentified passenger were not injured.

The plane was bound for Lincoln from Fort Wayne, Ind., when Ford "reported wind shear as he was coming in for a landing and clipped the runway," said Elizabeth Isham Cory of the Federal Aviation Administration.

She said the plane damaged its wing tips. Ford could not immediately be reached for comment. His whereabouts were not disclosed. Both the FAA and the National Transportation Safety Board will investigate.

—The number of seats Iowa State plans to add to Jack Trice Stadium by 2002. Probably due to all those sellouts.

SAY WHAT?

7.5

—The overnight rating of the final round of the U.S. Open. The mark was yet another record set on June 18 at Pebble Beach.

POINTCOUNTERPOINT

Should Sammy Sosa be traded?

Sacrifice for the good of the team. Getting rid of Sosa would give the Cubs hope or perhaps an illusion of a future championship. Nonetheless, in return for Sosa, the Cubs would receive several outstanding prospects. The Cubs will count on these young players to help solidify their holes in the lineup. Shoring up the bullpen and defense will produce more wins in the standings than watching Sosa hit a 500-foot home run to put the Cubs within nine runs.

In many instances, trading away a marquee player has helped in gaining that elusive World Series ring. The 1989 Minnesota Twins opted to part with their ace southpaw and Cy Young Award winner Frank Viola. In return, the Twins received Kevin Tapani and closer Rick Aguilera. With substantial contributions from Tapani and Aguilera, the Twins captured their second championship in 1991.

Trading Sosa will validate the Cubs organization's effort to earn a championship. Sure, Sosa will fill up the stands, but the team will not be competitive enough to win the big one, something it hasn't done in nearly a century.

Sosa is a great hitter — period. Five-tool players win championships, not one-dimensional players. Heed what Chicago's own Elliot Ness once said: "Nobody is untouchable."

POINTCOUNTERPOINT

Should Sammy Sosa be traded?

Sacrificing for the team is good, but when the team is not any good, why get rid of its best player?

Sure, trading Sammy might bring in a couple solid pitchers, but does that really make up for the offense that Sosa produces? Probably not.

Sosa is the wrong place to look for guys to trade. Get rid of the mediocre guys on the Cubs, the guys who don't hit 50 home runs every year and drive in 100 RBIs — guys such as Henry Rodriguez and Brant Brown. Trade them for some better talent; don't trade a guy that's already talented.

Trading Sosa would not only hurt the Cubs' on-field performance but also their marketing and fans. As Mark McGwire has proved with the Cardinals, you don't always have to have a .500 team to sell out games. If you have a guy that hits a home run every other game, you'll keep the stands full and the income rolling in. Fans like Sosa, and they come to see him play. If the Cubs get rid of him, who else are the fans going to want to see play?

Keeping those fans in Wrigley will help the Cubs pay for some new young pitchers. Get rid of Sosa, and you get rid of those fans.

Iowa pitcher earns national honors

Iowa's Reed Pawelk has been named to the freshman All-America team chosen by the publication Collegiate Baseball.

Pawelk, a 6-foot-5 pitcher from Plymouth, Minn., led the school record and finished second in the Big Ten with 12 saves. He had a 3.18 earned-run average of 22 2-3 innings and shared Iowa's most valuable player award.

Iowa's Alex Dvorsky and Brad Carlson were named to the freshman All-America team last year.

Wilkins, Raptors moving closer

TORONTO (AP) — Lenny Wilkins is moving closer to becoming coach of the Toronto Raptors.

He has been negotiating with general manager Glen Grunwald to succeed Butch Carter, and several reports say the deal is done.

"There's nothing to announce," general manager Grunwald said Sunday. "I'm not commenting on the coaching thing until there is something to announce."

The New York Post, citing no sources, said Sunday the coach with the most victories in NBA history has been hired by the Raptors.

The Toronto Star, citing unidentified sources, said an announcement could come today.

Lemaire Call of the Wild in Minnesota

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Jacques Lemaire has won Stanley Cups as a player, a coach and in the front office. Now the Hall of Famer faces a new challenge: directing an NHL expansion team.

"This is a brand-new team. I know that I will have to be patient, the fans will have to be patient," Lemaire said Monday after being introduced as the Minnesota Wild's first head coach, "but I'm telling you, we will win our share of games."

Lemaire, 54, won eight titles in 12 seasons as a player, all with the Montreal Canadiens. He was an assistant general manager when Montreal won the Stanley Cup in 1986 and 1993 and coached the New Jersey Devils to the 1995 championship.

Tiger's finish clouded by weather update

TAMPA, Fla. — With Tiger Woods in the process of smashing records at the U.S. Open, one TV station cut away to a weather bulletin.

Thousands of viewers on WFLA-Channel 8 were irate at missing the historic finish for a thunderstorm report. They telephoned and e-mailed more than 3,000 complaints to the station and newspapers.

"It was a bonehead call," said Dan Bradley, WFLA vice president of news who rushed into the office Sunday evening to help answer the nearly 1,000 calls.

Sampras, Hingis seeded No. 1 for Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England — Six-time winner Pete Sampras was boosted above Andre Agassi and seeded No. 1 at Wimbledon on Monday, while top-ranked Martina Hingis, who won Wimbledon in 1997, was seeded first in the women's tournament.

Agassi was seeded second in the men's draw, while five grass court specialists — Tim Henman, Mark Philippoussis, Richard Krajicek, Pat Rafter and Greg Rusedski — gained higher than usual ratings among the top 16 seeded players.

On the women's side, defending champion Lindsay Davenport was seeded No. 2 in the two-week tournament that opens next Monday. The remaining 14 seeded players went according to the WTA Tour rankings.

French Open winner Mary Pierce was third and former Wimbledon champion and French Open runner-up Conchita Martinez was fourth. Among the unseeded women was Anna Kournikova, who reached the fourth round of Wimbledon a year ago and was a semifinalist in '97.

Bonds overtakes Sosa in All-Star voting

NEW YORK — San Francisco's Barry Bonds moved past Chicago's Sammy Sosa back into second place among NL outfielders in voting for next month's All-Star game.

New York Mets catcher Mike Piazza, a seven-time All-Star who has started the past six games, was the top NL vote-getter, with 1,016,757 in totals announced Monday.

Pittsburgh's Jason Kendall was a distant second among catchers with 278,903.

Ken Griffey Jr. of the Cincinnati Reds, a 10-time All-Star for Seattle before February's trade, topped NL outfielders with 844,339, followed by Bonds (693,858), Sosa (662,644), Montreal's Vladimir Guerrero (621,362), St. Louis' Jim Edmonds (578,677) and Arizona's Steve Finley (239,255).

National ratings down for NBC's coverage of NBA Finals

NEW YORK — NBC is on pace for the lowest-rated NBA Finals in two decades. Game 5 of the best-of-seven series between the Los Angeles Lakers and Indiana Pacers pulled in a national rating of 10 with a 20 share, the network said Monday.

That leaves NBC with a five-game average of 10.9, a drop of 4 percent from the 11.3 that 1999's five-game series between the New York Knicks and San Antonio Spurs averaged. Those Finals drew the fewest number of households since 1981 — when none of the six games between the Boston Celtics and Houston Rockets was aired in prime-time by CBS.

Indiana's 120-87 victory Friday night drew a rating 9 percent lower than the fifth game of last year's finals, which got an 11.

quick transition game with stingy defense to thrash Fitzpatrick's by 35 points. Terrence McGee, a point-guard from Kirkwood Community College, kept the pace of the game in favor of Goodfellow Printing. McGee constantly put Fitzpatrick's defense on their heels when he had the ball on the open floor. Glen Worley and Brandon Sain fed off his high-octane style of basketball by scoring 22 and 26 points, respectively. "If my role is to push the ball up the court or score, I'll do whatever it takes for the team to win," McGee said. Reggie Evans had 28 points and 10 rebounds for Fitzpatrick's. F.I.T. Zone 122

Monte Jenkins continued to prove that he is one of the top all-around players in the league. Jenkins led F.I.T Zone with 31 points on 12 of 18 shooting. Former UI guard Jason Price poured in 24 points and dished out four assists for Highland Park Development.

NBA FINALS

seconds left, but Bryant again went to the line and calmly sank two more to clinch it. As he walked to the bench, he pointed to his ring finger, the one that will soon be adorned with a championship ring. Purple and gold confetti streamed down from the rafters as owner Jerry Buss addressed the fans and commissioner David Stern presented O'Neal with his trophy. O'Neal held it aloft in his massive left arm and waved it to the crowd. "I want to thank Phil Jackson, the real coach of the year," O'Neal said. "I want to thank you all for believing in us. We're going to get one next year, too," he said. That'll be the next test for the Lakers, to see if they can build a dynasty to replace Jordan and the Bulls. For now, though, it's one title — the one O'Neal and Bryant have been waiting so long to win. O'Neal shot 19-for-32 from the field and grabbed 12 rebounds, while Bryant had 10 rebounds and four assists to buffer an 8-for-27 shooting performance. Rice added 16 for the Lakers, who outscored Indiana 37-27 in the fourth quarter. Rose had 29, Miller 25 and Davis 20 for the Pacers, whose quest for the franchise's first NBA title came up short. In the end, they simply couldn't keep up with the energy the Lakers got from a crowd that waited 12 years for this moment. For much of the game, it looked like that party wouldn't happen until Game 7 Wednesday night — or maybe not at all. The Lakers repeatedly whittled down deficits and got within one, only to watch the Pacers surge back ahead. But when Los Angeles made yet another charge early in the fourth and finally took the lead, it was the Pacers who had to play from behind. Brian Shaw stole the ball from Rose three minutes into the fourth quarter and O'Neal scored on a fast break while being fouled to give the Lakers their first lead since late in the first quarter. O'Neal, who stayed down for a minute clutching his left knee, missed a chance for a three-point play. But Rose then missed a reverse layup with O'Neal in his way and Rick Fox nailed a long 3-pointer for a 94-90 lead. It would be another 3 1/2 minutes before Indiana tied it, and Horry's leaper with 4:48 left gave the Lakers the lead for good. Their championship capped a season that included winning streaks of 19, 16 and 11 games. Their playoff run included a stunning comeback from a late 16-point deficit to defeat the Portland Trail Blazers in Game 7 of the Western Conference finals. The Pacers finished the first quarter with a 26-24 lead as Mark Jackson hit a 40-foot, turnaround heave at the buzzer. It was an unexpected shot of momentum for the Pacers, who seized upon it to start the second quarter with a 7-2 run for a 33-26 lead. Sam Perkins gave Indiana its first double-digit lead on a 3-pointer with 7:44 left that made it 42-32. Perkins hit another 3, the Pacers' seventh of the game, for a 47-35 lead midway through the quarter. The Lakers finally took back the momentum late in the quarter, getting a steal from Bryant, a dunk from O'Neal, a steal from Harper and a 3-pointer by Bryant — all in the final 47 seconds — to close to 56-53 at the half.

O'Neal, who stayed down for a minute clutching his left knee, missed a chance for a three-point play. Zalesky says he has no ill-will position at Nebraska. It's all about the two wanting to promote themselves as coaches and try to move up the coaching ranks, Zalesky said. "They'd like to be out there, coaching their own programs," he said Monday. "You can't blame a person for trying to promote himself." "Terry wants to move up, too." Moving up is what both would do in every scenario, except if Tom does not get the UNI job and stays at Iowa. But hey, staying as the top assistant for a team that has won six national titles in a row isn't necessarily a demotion. There is no ill-will among the three, Zalesky said, and the moves don't necessarily reflect any discontent with Iowa that the Brands brothers might have. Being the fierce competitors they are, they just want to advance in the coaching ranks. The two have been interested in pursuing other positions before, Zalesky said, but none has opened up recently. DI Sports Editor Jeremy Schintker can be reached at:

Els relishes Woods' challenge

TIGER WOODS

"You want those four. That's my goal in life, to win four of them, at least once," Els said. "But with Tiger Woods to contend with, I've got a pretty tough job ahead of me for the next 10 years at least." What does that mean for everyone else? They insist Woods is good for the game because he has raised the sport to unprecedented levels of popularity. Television ratings are soaring, and as a result, so is the prize money from a lucrative TV contract up for renewal next year. What that does for their psyche is another matter. "It's kind of like Texas in the old Southwest Conference," said former Longhorn Tom Kite. "You knew who was going to win before the game. It's certainly fun when you're pulling for Texas, but it's not real exciting for everybody else." Even with a 15-stroke victory, which broke the record for largest winning margin in a major set by Old Tom Morris in the 1862 British Open, Woods managed to provide a few thrills. He birdied four of the first five holes on the back nine at Pebble Beach and twice saved par, once with a 15-footer on No. 16 and by nearly holing a bunker shot from the 17th. And along the way, he made more putts that mattered than anyone else. "When he's putting the way he was this week, he's totally unbeatable," John Huston said. Woods was so true with the putter than he never made worse than par over his first 22 holes and his last 26. "Whoever beats him has to play their best," Fred Couples said. The victory was similar to three years ago at Augusta National, when Woods became the youngest Masters champion by finishing a record 12 strokes ahead of the field. Back then, Woods also talked about improving. To show how serious he was, Woods slowly revamped his entire swing and raised his game to a level of dominance not seen in more than 50 years. He has won 14 of his last 25 tournaments worldwide dating to last May, when all the swing changes finally felt comfortable. In five majors during that same stretch, he has won twice and finished no worse than a tie for seventh. How long can he keep this up? "It's not necessarily keeping your competitive fire," Woods said. "It's just sometimes you're going to go through streaks where you're not going to play well. Hopefully, you can get through those periods of not playing well quickly." That hasn't been a problem. He has finished outside the top 10 just twice in his last 26 tournaments. When he's on his game, the question is not whether Woods will win, but by how many. Just two weeks ago, he won by five strokes over Els and Leonard at the Memorial. Next up is the Western Open, a tournament he has won two of the past three years, then a journey to the Old Course at St. Andrews, where more history awaits. Els has finished runner-up to Woods five times, more than anybody, but still relishes the challenge of meeting him again. "I know St. Andrews pretty well, like Tiger knows this place," he said before departing Pebble Beach. "But I'll have to play out of my mind."

Grand Slam next for Woods

After a record-breaking performance at the U.S. Open, Tiger Woods heads to the British Open.

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — The next stop on Tiger Woods' record-breaking run into history takes him to the home of golf.

Woods will be an even bigger favorite next month in the British Open at St. Andrews, where he will try to complete the career Grand Slam in only his fourth year of professional golf, one fewer than it took Jack Nicklaus.

That should be the least of anyone's worries.

After his historic performance at Pebble Beach, where he won the 100th U.S. Open by shattering records set more than 100 years ago, Woods was concerned more with how much he can improve than how much he already has accomplished.

"We all play golf, we all have a bug," Woods said. "We're all trying to get better somehow. I'm going to continue to work on my whole game."

The record will reflect that Ernie Els and Miguel Angel Jimenez tied for second in the U.S. Open. It should also carry a footnote to explain that the 15-stroke margin is not a typo.

Only four times has a player won a major championship by at least 12 strokes — Old Tom Morris in 1862, Young Tom Morris in 1870, and Woods twice in the last three years.

And remember, he is a work in progress.

"What do we have to do to get to him? Hit everything you can, and then hope for the best," Els said. "Who knows what he's going to do from here?"

Woods tied the U.S. Open scoring record of 272, set at par-70 Baltusrol by Nicklaus in 1980 and Lee Janzen in 1993. Woods shattered the record in relation to par, 12 under, in a tournament where no one else came close to matching par.

That sums up Woods. Right now, no one is close.

And while Woods goes after the career Grand Slam, everyone else must be wondering how many scraps he will leave for them.

Els won his second U.S. Open title in 1997 when he was 27. This week must have aged him significantly.

California dreams come true

A seven-point run in the fourth quarter leads the L.A. Lakers to their first NBA title since 1988.

By Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Like Magic, Wilt and Kareem before them, Shaq and Kobe can now be described with just one word.

Champions. After so many years of coming up short, after hearing so much about weaknesses and unfulfilled potential, Shaquille O'Neal and Kobe Bryant won their first NBA championship Monday night.

In an exciting fourth quarter that ended Larry Bird's coaching career, O'Neal and Bryant led the Lakers to a 116-111 victory over the Indiana Pacers in Game 6 of the NBA Finals for the franchise's first title since 1988.

O'Neal scored 41 points, marking the third time he scored 40 or more in this series, and Bryant had 26 including four free throws that clinched it in the final 13 seconds.

"We finally got a championship and it feels great," Bryant said.

O'Neal was the unanimous choice for MVP of the series, adding to his MVP awards from the regular season and All-Star game.

The victory gave coach Phil Jackson his seventh title — his first without Michael Jordan — in just his first season coaching a Lakers team that had been ousted from the playoffs in each of the first three seasons since O'Neal and Bryant arrived.

O'Neal, 28, and Bryant, 21, hugged on the court after the final buzzer, and O'Neal was mobbed as he tried to leave the court. With his exit blocked, he turned around and headed to center court to receive the championship trophy.

As long as he worked to get to this point, it was only fitting that he stayed to get his rewards.

Los Angeles' Kobe Bryant reacts to a basket in the fourth quarter of Game 6 Monday.

It was the 12th title in franchise history for the Lakers, the seventh since they moved to Los Angeles in 1960. Magic Johnson, Kareem Abdul Jabbar and Wilt Chamberlain had earned the Lakers' previous titles, and this starstruck city had been anxiously awaiting the next one — especially since the 7-foot-1, 330-pound unstoppable force arrived from Orlando in 1996.

Even though they trailed for most of the first three quarters against a better shooting, more experienced opponent, the Lakers were the better team down the stretch.

Indiana tied the game at 103-103 on a 3-pointer by Jalen Rose with 5:04 left, but that was the beginning of the end.

Robert Horry, who won his third career title, hit a leamer from the lane, and Ron Harper, who won his fourth, stole the ball on the Pacers' next possession.

O'Neal hit a soft 10-footer from the baseline, Rose missed on a drive and Bryant calmly sank a 20-footer, bobbing and weaving and whistling ever so slightly as he sauntered back to the bench and Indiana called timeout with 3:28 left.

The Pacers then went to the Hack-a-Shaq defensive strategy, sending O'Neal to the line four times in a span of 21 seconds. He missed three of them before Jackson took him out with 2:27 left.

When O'Neal returned with 1:56 left, the Lakers' lead was down to 110-107 and Indiana had the ball. Austin Croshere was fouled with 1 second left on the shot clock. He made both to make it a one-point game.

Glen Rice answered with two free throws, Croshere airballed a turnaround jumper, Bryant missed a drive and Miller rushed a long 3-pointer and missed.

Bryant then was isolated at the top of the key and was hacked on a drive. He calmly made both free throws with 13 seconds left for a 114-109 lead.

Dale Davis dunked for Indiana to make it a three-point game with 5.4

Clutch shooting down the stretch leads Active Endeavors

Nike/Merrill Lynch's Rod Thompson battles inside against Active Endeavors/Lepic Kroeger's Luke Recker Monday in the Prime Time League.

Kyle Galloway's return sparked the first win of the season for Active Endeavors/Lepic Kroeger.

Ethen Lieser
The Daily Iowan

Active Endeavors defeated a tough Nike-Merrill Lynch team, 91-87, Monday night with clutch free-throw shooting late in the game.

Holding on to a three point lead with less than 30 seconds left to play, Active Endeavors' Luke Recker, Kyle Galloway and C.J. Barkema went to the free-throw line and iced all six shots.

Rod Thompson made two 3-pointers in a span of 40 seconds to bring Nike-Merrill Lynch within two points, but Galloway made both free-throws with 5.8 seconds left to put the game out of reach.

Active Endeavors' forward Donnie Dobbs, who played at St. Louis University, kept Nike-Merrill Lynch's defense off-balance the entire game. Dobbs was able to create his own shots in the paint — compacting Nike-Merrill Lynch's interior defense and providing open perimeter shots.

"I like to take advantage of mismatches," Dobbs said. "If I have a shorter guy on me, the team will take (Brad) Lohaus out on the perimeter and just work down low."

Active Endeavors' guard Kyle Galloway, who missed the first game with an injury, added 14 points and a team high 10 rebounds. Galloway's return alleviated Recker's pressure role as the go-to scorer. Recker responded with 32 points, including 8 3-pointers.

With Galloway back in the lineup, Active Endeavors instantly transformed themselves into being an upper-division team in the league.

"This is a good win for us because it showed us that we can play," Dobbs said. "We took a tough loss (last Thursday) and came back and won."

Rod Thompson led Nike-Merrill Lynch with 27 points on 9-21 shooting and collected 13 rebounds.

Lohaus had his second consecutive double-double, scratching for 11 points and 10 rebounds.

Coaching realignments could split Brands brothers

Iowa assistant wrestling coaches Tom and Terry Brands attempt to climb the ranks.

Jeremy Schintker

If you've tried to catch up on what's going on with the coaching situation for the Iowa wrestling team, you're probably a bit confused.

With one Iowa assistant expected to leave for another assistant-coach position, and another Iowa assistant coach waiting on word for a head-coach position, things have been anything but tame for the national-champion Hawkeyes.

The chaos will probably end soon.

Northern Iowa Associate Athletics Director Kevin Buisman said Monday morning the Panthers will submit a candidate to the human-resources department for approval, and an announcement on who the new UNI head coach will be could come as soon as today.

This would mean that Tom Brands, the current Iowa head assistant, will know whether he got the head-coaching job at UNI, which could clear things up slightly for Iowa.

Brands applied for the job last week and is one of three finalists for the position. Current UNI assistant Brad Penrith and Iowa State assistant Thom Ortiz are the other two.

Buisman would not speculate on whether any contender had an edge, saying only all three had "good interviews."

Iowa head coach Jim Zalesky said he hopes Brands gets the job but that he does not know who UNI will choose.

Here's how the situation will likely play out:

Zalesky said Monday that if Tom Brands does not get the UNI job, it is likely that he will stay at Iowa and continue to be the head assistant here.

Terry Brands, Tom's brother and the current Iowa second assistant, will likely leave for Nebraska to be an assistant there if Tom doesn't get hired at UNI.

Mark Manning, the former UNI coach who was hired by Nebraska last month, has said Terry Brands is a top candidate for the job, but he will not officially announce his coaching staff until June 26. Zalesky said on June 16 that Terry has shown interest in the Nebraska job.

Neither Tom nor Terry have been available for comment since June 16.

What all this means is that in either scenario, one coach will probably leave and one will likely stay.

If Tom gets the UNI job, Terry will jump up as the head assistant at Iowa. If Tom doesn't get the UNI job, Terry will move up to an assistant Martial arts will take Chris Weitz to Thailand and Council Bluffs this summer.

By Erica Driskell
The Daily Iowan

UI sophomore Chris Weitz will elbow, knee, and even kick his way into Thailand this summer, when he travels there to fight opponents in Muay Thai, a martial-arts sport.

Weitz will leave for the Fairtex and Phetnoi schools in Thailand, where Muay Thai is the national sport, in mid-August for a two-week training session with the best Muay Thai fighters in the world.

After training, he will have the opportunity to fight at the world-famous Rajadam Nern Stadium, in Thailand.

Weitz became interested in Muay Thai at age 12 through Dean Lessei, an instructor in his hometown of Dubuque.

"I didn't really know what I was getting into, but I started fighting and liked it a lot," Weitz said.

During Weitz's last fight in Green Bay, Wis., a promoter for Muay Thai saw his fight and decided to put him on the U.S. National Team, even though most team members were chosen from two elite training schools in the United States, Weitz said.

Training involves jogging for three to five miles every morning, weight-lifting in the afternoon and fight training for two-and-a-half hours six days a week, he said.

"By Friday, my body wants to stop, but it's a good time to push through it," Weitz said. "I get a break a couple of days before the fight to give my body a rest and make sure there are no injuries."

Claire Chenette, 13, of Grinnell and W
