UNI placed 11th at this year's NCAA Championships and crowned its first NCAA champion ever — 149-pound Tony Davis. According to Intermat Magazine, the Panthers inked the top recruiting class in college wrestling.

This news could affect the future of Terry Brands, Tom's brother and a fellow assistant at Iowa. Zalesky had said that if Tom does not get the UNI job, he will likely stay at Iowa next year, and Terry might go to Nebraska, where he has reportedly been offered a job by Manning.

O'Neal after the Lakers defeated Indiana in a dynasty

A scary thought for the rest of the NBA's teams: the Lakers with a scoring power forward (P.J. Brown, Brian Grant?) to make opponents pay for double- and triple-teaming Shaquille O'Neal. Throw in a new long-range sharpshooter and a big-bodied backup center, and the Lakers certainly would look like a dynasty.

"Jerry West has always done an excellent job with this ballclub and I'm sure he's going to make the right decisions again," Kobe Bryant said. Johnson said there was really not for working with him.

Also contenders for the job were Byron Scott, a former Pacers player who is now an assistant with Sacramento, and Rick Carlisle, a former Boston teammate of Bird and current Pacers assistant.

Sacramento, which originally gave Indiana until June 1 to talk with Scott, extended the deadline while the Pacers were in the playoffs.

"All of us as candidates have said, while the Pacers are in the heat of a championship run, we all have to respect the position they're in, whether it be Byron Scott, Rick Carlisle, myself or whoever the other candidates are," Thomas said last week.

He would not be more specific about the likelihood he would become the coach.

"I don't care if you ask it a different way, that way or around the corner, you're still going to get the same answer," he said.

Texas death case spawns national rallies

■ The planned execution of Gary Graham has many questioning capital punishment.

By Sky Eilers
The Daily Iowan

The fairness of a Texas man's trial who is scheduled for execution today has citizens across the nation, including many in Iowa City, wondering if he was wrongly accused and convicted.

Gary Graham, 36, was convicted of killing Bobby Lambert, 53, on May 13, 1981, during an attempted nighttime robbery in the parking lot of a Safeway supermarket. The prosecution's case rested on the testimony of a lone eyewitness, Bernadine Skillern, who watched from inside her car 40 feet away as Lambert was confronted by the gunman, struggled with him, and was shot. The competency of Graham's trial lawyer, Ronald G.

Graham

Mock, has also been questioned. At least a dozen Texas death-row inmates have had Mock as a lawyer, several newspapers have reported. Texas defense lawyers refer to one section of the Texas penitentiary as Mock Wing.

A noon rally today on the Pedestrian Mall, sponsored by the Iowa Chapter of the National Lawyer's Guild, will give community members an opportunity to voice opposition to the death penalty and to show support for Graham.

As demonstrators rally for Graham, the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles will be reviewing his application for clemency.

Should Grant be executed, his sentence would not be the first that Texas Gov. George W. Bush has carried out after being confronted with post-trial evidence, said UI graduate student Ned Bertz.

"Bush has done it repeatedly, and that's why we need to take it to the

FLA schools call for disclosure

■ All the schools associated with the FLA will disclose the locations of apparel plants.

By Erica Driskell
The Daily Iowan

The 137 universities that belong to the Fair Labor Association, which includes the UI, unanimously agreed Tuesday to disclose the locations of all factories in which their licensed goods are manufactured — contrary to the UI's current policy.

All Hawkeye apparel producers have already been notified about making labor practices of their factories public, although the UI does not disclose factory locations, said Steve Parrott, the interim director of University Relations.

The policy will mean corporations must tell universities where their factories are located, said Robert Durkee, the vice president for public affairs at Princeton University and the college representative on the FLA board. This will become a condition of membership to the FLA and is expected to be implemented by Dec. 31.

"While many schools already have this policy implemented into their requirements, other universities that don't will have to adapt to them," Durkee said.

Although public disclosure is a positive development, Michael Rack, a UI graduate and member of Students Against Sweatshops, said his group remains skeptical about the FLA.

"It seems to indicate that these universities are feeling some pressure from the students," he said. "It will be interesting to see how this works out."

Maria Roeper, the coordinator of the Worker Rights Consortium, said that while public disclosure is a step in the right direction, internal monitoring of factories is still most important.

While the WRC considers itself independent of the companies it monitors, the FLA presents a list of possible monitors for its companies to choose from, Roeper said.

"That is allowing them essentially to write their own report card," she said.

The UI's decision to join the WRC, improvements in the FLA's structure and the UI's own actions have helped resolve some of the UI sweatshop problem, Parrott said.

"Working through the FLA and WRC, monitoring will

Who's afraid of a big marital brouhaha?

■ Edward Albee's legendary Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? will raise the curtain on Summer Rep tonight.

By Luc Hunt
The Daily Iowan

It's been called lamentable. Neurotic. Life beyond reasonable questioning. It's the dark comedy Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? and it will be on the UI stage starting tonight.

Summer Rep, which this season will celebrate the works of American playwright Edward Albee, will begin today at 8 p.m. with Albee's most famous play, Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?

A Delicate Balance and Seascape, both winners of the Pulitzer Prize, will run concurrently through July 23.

The plays will be performed by members of Iowa Summer Repertory, one of the oldest continuously operating companies in the country and the professional company of the UI theater department.

Fifteen years ago, Summer Rep began featuring one contemporary playwright during each season's festival. Selecting Edward Albee is unique and special for many artistic reasons, said Eric Forsythe, the Summer Rep artistic director and an actor in Seascape.

"These are his greatest works," he said. "Each of the plays complements the others, and there is a richness of experience because of this common purpose."

"Albee burst onto the scene, and his initial greeting shocked," Forsythe said. "To me, he means power and wit combined in breathtaking ways. Albee is a master of biting humor and was certainly a man ahead of his time."

In the late '50s and '60s, Albee established a reputation as a serious playwright, aided by the popularity of a movie version of Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf? starring Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton.

In the '60s, Albee's work received attention for being controversial. Since then, his work has won three Pulitzer Prizes.

The festival's opening play, Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?, is a comedy about a married couple driven to dare each other with words to the point of madness.

"It is relentless, ruthless and tragic," said director Mary Beth Easley. "The dialogue is some of the most brilliant in the 20th century. It serves as a mask of protection for the characters' lost hopes and dreams."

Albee employs language like no other playwright, said Judith Keith, the director of theater relations.

"It's beautiful, poetic writing," she said. "All of the plays deal with relationships and ourselves. The situations are very human, truthful and ugly. You find out a lot."

Low student participation in recycling at the UI and in surrounding neighborhoods have some Iowa City recycling center employees racking their brains in order to come up with ways to improve the habits of students.

The number of UI students who recycle is low compared with the number of Iowa City homeowners who recycle, said Jim Croy, the UI supervisor of roads, walks, equipment, recycling and biowaste.

"We don't get much from the dorms, and what we do get is contaminated because students throw in other garbage," he said.

Sunday would have been Kurtus Miller's 21st birthday had he not been killed in a March 6 fire at 845 Cross Park Ave. Authorities have ruled arson to be the cause of the blaze.

His wife, Laura Miller, 21, who now lives in Ames, said she is getting on with her life. However, because no one has been charged in conjunction with the arson, she has had little closure.

"The police act like there are suspects, but they are having a problem trying to prove it," she said. "Sometimes it seems like they're never going to solve it, which is kind of frustrating."

In addition to the Iowa City police officers working on the case, Laura Miller said, she has hired two lawyers who are also compiling evi-

Medal ain't just peanuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four months after his death, Charles Schulz is getting an honor he always wanted. President Clinton signed a bill Tuesday giving the creator of the "Peanuts" comic strip the Congressional Gold Medal, the country's highest civilian honor and the one thing that Schulz — a World War II veteran — had desired. "Peanuts" fans across the country started a letter-writing campaign advocating the tribute to the artist who brought to life the angst-ridden character of Charlie Brown for nearly 50 years. Schulz gave the nation "a unique sense of optimism, purpose, and pride. Whether through the Great Pumpkin Patch, the Kite-Eating Tree, Lucy's Psychiatric Help Stand, or Snoopy's adventures with the Red Baron, 'Peanuts' embodied human vulnerabilities, emotions, and potential," the measure said. The 77-year-old cartoonist died in February of complications from colon cancer. His wife, Jeannie, is expected to accept the award.

UI hosts seminar on history of technological innovations

The UI Obermann Center for Advanced Studies recently awarded 11 Obermann Summer Fellowships totaling nearly $30,000 to faculty members from the UI as well as other U.S. institutions to participate in a three-week seminar, "The Usable Past: Historical Perspectives on Digital Culture." Participants in the interdisciplinary Summer 2000 Faculty Research Seminar, which runs through June 30, are examining the history of introducing new technologies as a way of studying the current digital culture. Seminar Director Lauren Rabinovitz, a UI professor of American studies and cinema, said focusing on historical models allows scholars to determine what is different about the current digital revolution. "Thinking about present relationships between technology and culture in a historical context is helpful for a range of applications," she said. "From public policy planning to how we teach our students about ethical decisions regarding the world in which we live to how we as academics and scholars may intervene and effect some power in dramatic, wide-sweeping technological changes in all our lives." Discussions will focus on how intellectuals from various fields have examined the impact of new technologies as well as how to produce a history that is responsive to the present. The goal of the seminar, Rabinovitz said, is to publish a volume of essays on a number of related topics, including ways that medical and communication technologies have affected definitions and understanding of the human body, the integral historical role of the digital in American political beliefs, and entertainment media as a model for preparing us for the digital age.

UI law student tosses hat in ring

■ Steven Drahozal will face incumbent Dick Myers, D-Coralville, in the House District 49 race.

By Beth Conklin
The Daily Iowan

Believing that he is the man for the job, UI law student and member of the Libertarian Party Steven Drahozal announced Wednesday he will run for the state House District 49 seat currently held by Dick Myers, D-Coralville.

Drahozal has not always been a member of the Libertarian Party; he started out as a registered Democrat.

"I then became disenchanted with that (the Democratic Party) and turned to the Republican Party, where I became disenchanted again," he said.

He then looked for a party that, according to him, was in tune with what the Constitution says and the ideas with which America was based on.

Drahozal described the Libertarian Party as believing the answers to problems don't lie with government and government intervention but with personal responsibility.

Local Libertarian Party Chairwoman Christy Welty said Drahozal is one of the first from the party to run for office in this area. She noted that the local party has approximately 20 members, and the state has more than 200.

The libertarian idea of personal responsibilities appeals to many people, Welty said.

"Social liberalism is an idea that both parties hold, but libertarians believe in voluntary associations. That goes over well in Johnson County," she said.

Drahozal has worked for the Church State Council in Westlake Village, Calif., where he dealt with issues separating church and state. His experience led him to write a brief for the 2nd Circuit Court of Appeals on First Amendment issues in the state of New York.

As a prosecuting intern for Muscatine County, he helped the county attorney and assistant county attorneys with everything from trials to sentencing and he prosecuted simple misdemeanors.

Drahozal was also involved in the Child in Need of Assistance in Muscatine County, representing children going into the foster-care system.

The adoption and foster-care system are two areas in need of reform, Drahozal said. He also wishes to weed out what he says are unnecessary laws, such as public intoxication.

Allison Drahozal, the Libertarian Party treasurer and Steven's wife, believes her husband will fare well in the race.

"I think if people are willing to listen, then his chances are good," she said.

Allison Drahozal said the Libertarian Party is planning fund-raisers and events to support her husband and give the public a chance to meet him.

The District 49 seat includes Coralville, North Liberty, northern Iowa City and Penn Township.

Drahozal will face Myers, the current House Minority Whip.

"I have a lot of respect for Myers," he said. "But I think my ideas on how state government should be run are better suited for citizens."

Moving day for Jones and Student Services

■ Campus improvements continue, as Students Services moves out of Jessup and into the IMU.

By Disa Lubker
The Daily Iowan

The Office for Student Services has moved to the IMU as a part of the Master Plan for Student Services, bringing the office closer to the Student Life Center.

Part of that move brought Phillip Jones, the vice president for Student Services, to the IMU Monday.

"It's a very welcoming space," he said. "The offices are a welcoming environment for students."

Although his job will essentially stay the same, Jones said, he hopes to interact with students more in the new location.

Student Services' move will give student groups more contact with the administration and vice versa, said Matt McDermott, the vice chairman of the UI Lecture Committee.

"(Student Services) has a lot of decision-making power, and having it where the action is makes it more accessible," he said.

The Master Plan for Student Services comprises four parts to be accomplished over 10 years.

The office's move and the IMU renovations are both a part of the Town Square portion of the plan, said David Grady, the director of University Life centers. The Town Square will also include a Student Services Super Center.

The West Campus Neighborhood will include the existing wellness and recreation facilities, as well as new dining facilities, Grady said. The renovation of the dining area currently in progress in Hillcrest will move the facility towards a marketplace concept, he said. Planning is in progress for the subsequent renovation of the Quadrangle dining center.

The East Campus Neighborhood includes a new recreation and wellness facility as well as plans to have a Burge dining area embrace more of a marketplace theme, Grady said.

The North Campus Neighborhood is already in progress at Mayflower. The lobby was recently renovated and a coffee shop put in place, Grady said.

The entire process of the planning has been going very smoothly, said UI President Mary Sue Coleman.

"There has been a lot of student input," she said. "It's really important to get a feel for what students want."

University repays $189,000 in flood aid to FEMA

■ The university received nearly $200,000 in aid for the '93 floods that it didn't deserve.

By Kirsten Veng-Pedersen
The Daily Iowan

A Federal Emergency Management Agency audit shows that the UI owed $189,295 in misappropriated flood aid that it received during the 1993 floods.

After the '93 summer floods, FEMA assisted the UI to the tune of $1.74 million in damages. However, an audit covering the period 1993-97 showed that the UI had received money to which it was not entitled.

An Associated Press report stated that all overpayments were refunded to the Federal Emergency Management Agency by the university, according to an audit memo dated Aug. 5, 1999.

The UI repayment has added to the nearly half-billion dollars that FEMA has already recovered from states and organizations across the nation for disaster aid that wasn't warranted or was disallowed under FEMA regulations.

Doug True, the UI vice president for Finance, said most UI facilities were covered by commercial insurance at the time of the flooding. FEMA's role was to help the facilities that were not insured, he said.

As a result of the '93 floods, the UI was forced to repair underground utilities, fix storm sewers, and deal with erosion problems, True said. Mayflower Residence Hall also experienced serious flood damage.

The UI recreational and athletic facilities experienced the most extensive damage, True said, citing the low-lying softball complex on Highway 6, along with the soccer and track areas, as being the hardest hit.

Most of the money that the UI owed — $184,149 — stemmed from a disputed insurance claim. The UI deducted insurance money for both property damage and business interruption during the floods.

However, FEMA doesn't cover losses due to business interruption. Other expenses questioned by FEMA were labor overcharges, mistakes on calculating insurance payments and duplicate charges.

Suspicious, along with gas prices, on the rise

■ Some politicians and local gas station workers are skeptical about the reasons behind the high price of gas.

By Betsy Lam and Kelly Oulman
The Daily Iowan

As gas prices rise, so does controversy. While national gas prices average $1.68 per gallon, prices in Iowa are 10 cents higher per gallon that.

On Wednesday, Sen. Chuck Grassley met with Carol Browner, the Environmental Protection Agency administrator, and representatives of the American Petroleum Institute and Midwestern oil refineries to discuss the soaring gas prices.

Wholesale costs of gasoline have dropped 25 cents since June 15, but there has not been a reduction in the price at the pump, Grassley said. He said this represents price-gauging by the oil companies.

"The excuses of the oil companies to increase the price of gas because of the EPA and ethanol are unjustified, and they're taking advantage of the situation," Grassley said.

Iowa Gov. Tom Vilsack wrote a letter to President Clinton, requesting that an investigation into the rising gas prices be conducted by the Federal Trade Commission, said Joe Shannahan, Vilsack's press secretary.

"We think it's suspicious that gas prices have risen so much in the Midwest," he said.

The FTC probe will look into the possible connection between companies involved with refining, distributing and selling gasoline and the inflation of prices.

Vilsack is a supporter of renewable fuels, such as ethanol, and sees no connection between the price of renewable fuels and rising gas prices, Shannahan said.

Store managers determine the gas prices of at their stores by looking at the prices of other local stations, said William Goodwin, the sales manager of the Kum & Go, 513 S. Riverside Drive.

Goodwin, who transferred to Iowa City from Des Moines a week ago, said the Des Moines Kum & Go he worked at received a call from the main office that dictated the gas prices.

"Someone in the home office ultimately makes the decision — where they get their information, I have no idea," Goodwin said. "The price increase is legitimate until the government proves otherwise in its investigation."

Carly James, a Citgo employee, does not agree. She said the price changes do not coincide with the

Milosevic may face more charges of war-crimes

■ The lead prosecutor of the U.N. war-crimes tribunal is probing Serbia's conduct in Croatia and Bosnia.

By George Jahn
Associated Press

PRISTINA, Yugoslavia — Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic, now indicted in connection with the bloody ethnic purges in Kosovo, might face additional charges for his role in previous Balkan wars, the chief prosecutor of the U.N. war-crimes tribunal said Wednesday.

The prosecutor, Carla Del Ponte, also announced that Milosevic's archenemies in Kosovo — the former commanders of the Kosovo Liberation Army, which fought Milosevic's forces until a year ago — are being investigated on suspicion of war crimes.

Milosevic is already indicted by the tribunal for his alleged role in atrocities during the Serb crackdown on Kosovo's ethnic Albanians, which ended a year ago. Del Ponte's denial that the tribunal might drop the indictment was a response to news reports that the United States is considering offering Milosevic safety guarantees in exchange for his stepping down.

"My investigators will continue their forensic work in Kosovo to gather additional evidence concerning the existing indictment of Slobodan Milosevic," Del Ponte told reporters. "We have no intention to withdraw this indictment."

It is unclear what kind of international pressure could be brought on the court, which answers to the United Nations, but Del Ponte's comments were an indication that the court itself was not aware of any kind of deal for Milosevic.

There is no indication in any case that Milosevic is contemplating a deal that would see him step down in exchange for safety guarantees. While facing international isolation, he has managed to consolidate his rule by outmaneuvering a split political opposition.

In her comments Wednesday, Del Ponte said the tribunal is "investigating the criminal responsibility of Milosevic for (wars in) Bosnia and Croatia."

Milosevic fomented Serb rebellions, first in Croatia and then in Bosnia, in response to decisions by the non-Serb majorities in those two republics to secede from Yugoslavia. Hundreds of thousands of people died in those two wars.

Del Ponte's comments on the Kosovo Liberation Army, meanwhile, appeared calculated at least in part to dispel Serb criticism that the war crimes tribunal is biased against Serbs. Serbs have accounted for the majority of those indicted as a result of the Croatian, Bosnian and Kosovo wars, and no Kosovar has been publicly indicted for the Kosovo conflict.

"We are investigating KLA activity during the conflict," Del Ponte said. "Our mandate is always to look at the highest responsibility in the chain of command, and that is also the case for the KLA."

Serbia has barred tribunal officials from entry since the end of the Kosovo bloodshed. Del Ponte urged Serb officials to allow them in so they can interview Serb victims and witnesses of atrocities in Kosovo who later fled the province.

At the United Nations in New York, Yugoslavia denounced a report on Kosovo by U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan, accusing him of anti-Serb bias and of failing to condemn attacks on Serbs in Kosovo.

In the June 6 report, Annan said revenge attacks by Kosovars against the province's Serb minority appeared to be an "orchestrated campaign" of violence.

But Yugoslav envoy Vladislav Jovanovic said in a letter circulated Wednesday that Annan's report "obfuscates the true situation in Kosovo." He said the report emphasizes the security for the Kosovar population "and the lack of it for the Serbian population is marginalized."

Israel mum on U.N.-Hezbollah confab

■ Kofi Annan praises Hezbollah for its restraint and predicts a resolution of the Lebanon border dispute.

By Laura King
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — With Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak smiling tightly by his side, U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan Wednesday defended his meeting with a Hezbollah chieftain, the first ever between a top international official and a leader of the Shiite Muslim group.

Annan's groundbreaking parley with Hezbollah leader Sheikh Hassan Nasrallah Tuesday was yet another sign of how some long-standing Middle East realities were abruptly rearranged by Israel's troop pullout last month from south Lebanon.

And so was Israel's decision to refrain from kicking up a fuss about the meeting when Annan arrived in Jerusalem a day later.

Neither Barak nor his foreign minister, David Levy, breathed a word of public criticism about the secretary-general's discussions with Nasrallah — an encounter that would have been unthinkable during the nearly two decades when Hezbollah's guerrillas fought to drive Israeli troops from southern Lebanon.

For all the show of public politeness, however, Israel radio reported a sometimes tense atmosphere in Barak's closed-door talks with Annan. It said the U.N. chief backed Lebanese claims that Israel is in violation of some parts of the newly redrawn border between the two nations.

Hezbollah is now the de facto authority in the former occupied zone — as Annan matter-of-factly acknowledged at a joint news conference with Barak. And that, he said, was good enough reason to include the group in talks about southern Lebanon's future.

— Ehud Barak,
Israeli Prime Minister

"Hezbollah has been, and is, a player in the South of Lebanon," Annan said as the Israeli leader looked on. The U.N. chief added that Hezbollah fighters had exercised "restraint, responsibility and discipline after the (Israeli) withdrawal."

"In my opinion the meeting ... is to be welcomed," said dovish Justice Minister Yossi Beilin.

Barak said nothing about the meeting, but some in his government expressed hopes it would encourage Hezbollah to continue enforcing the uneasy calm that has prevailed in southern Lebanon since Israel's withdrawal.

The prime minister, meanwhile, took the opportunity to underscore Israel's view that Syria — now undergoing a leadership transition in the wake of President Hafez Assad's death on June 10 — bears the responsibility for keeping a tight lid on Hezbollah.

Asked whether Annan should deliver any message to Bashar Assad, son of the late president and his near-certain successor, Barak spoke of past "Syrian activities, terror activities with proxies" in southern Lebanon.

Israel radio said Barak warned Annan that if an expanded U.N. peacekeeping force does not soon deploy throughout the former Israeli-occupied zone, "hostile elements" might take advantage of the power vacuum and bring about bloodshed. As well as urging a full U.N. deployment, Israel is eager to see Lebanese army troops policing in the South.

Annan, who is touring the Mideast to supervise the implementation of the 1978 U.N. resolution demanding Israel's pullout, predicted a speedy settlement of the border disputes, as did Barak.

"We are going to clarify (the issues) in the next 24 hours, I hope, or maybe 36 hours, but basically we are determined to follow on with the implementation," the Israeli leader said.

3rd man jailed in death of 58 illegal immigrants

■ Police arrest the Dutch owner of the truck that carried 58 Chinese immigrants to their deaths.

By Maureen Johnson
Associated Press

LONDON — Police Wednesday arrested the owner of the trucking company that carried 58 illegal Chinese immigrants to their deaths in an unventilated truck. An attorney said the vehicle was so full that eight other stowaways were turned away.

Arie van der Spek, 24, surrendered to police in the Dutch port of Rotterdam Tuesday night, the third person in custody in the suffocation deaths of the immigrants, who were found Sunday by inspectors in the English port of Dover.

The 58 victims, along with two survivors, were discovered when customs officials opened a truck arriving by ferry from the Belgian port of Zeebrugge. The immigrants, all in their 20s, were stowed with a cargo of tomatoes. They died of respiratory failure.

Meanwhile, Wah-Piow Tan, a London lawyer who represents Chinese asylum-seekers, said one of the eight would-be stowaways called his family in China to let them know he had not made the disastrous trip.

"Sixty-eight people were supposed to board that truck, but eight were bumped off because it was so full," Tan said. "One of them called his family when he heard of the deaths to let them know that he was all right. He'd been swearing and cursing when he wasn't allowed on the truck."

The disaster has prompted an international police operation to hunt down immigrant-smuggling racketeers.

Belgium and British police began checking fingerprints of a group of Chinese migrants who were detained in April at two villages, Bornem and Puurs. The migrants fit the description of those found on Sunday.

After fingerprinting the group, Belgian authorities ordered them to leave, and placed them unescorted on a train to Antwerp. The migrants disappeared, and

WORLD BRIEF

A circus, a washing machine, a TV: enticing voters in Mexico

NAUCALPAN, Mexico (AP) — Used to be, a Mexican candidate could draw a crowd by serving sandwiches and soda pop. As the electorate becomes more sophisticated — and races become more competitive — the price of wooing voters is rising.

So, over the past few weeks, candidates have given away televisions, tool sets and washing machines and delighted crowds with pop concerts, circuses and strippers. All this in a nationwide election many observers say is Mexico's cleanest ever.

Jose Woldenberg, head of the independent institute running the July 2 elections for president, governors, the legislature and local offices, has said reports of vote-buying are exaggerated and that even if somebody bought 400,000 votes — "a deliriously high figure" — that would represent only approximately 1 percent of votes cast.

That doesn't mean candidates aren't trying. Across Mexico, politicians are regaling voters with presents. Some gift-giving appears to be legal, such as when candidates act on their own initiative and with their own money. Other practices are more dubious, such as when government officials hand out gifts bought with taxpayers' money. Most of the accusations have been lodged against the Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, which has been known for vote-buying throughout its 71 years in power and whose presidential candidate, Francisco Labastida, is locked in a tight race with opposition candidate Vicente Fox.

"It seems there's a calculation of the votes needed to make a difference, and a decision they can be gotten more easily by paying for them than by convincing people," said Rogelio Gomez Hermosillo, director of the watchdog group Alianza Civica.

"Unfortunately, there's a sector of the population that defines its vote by the question: 'What are they giving me?'"

PRI leader Dulce Maria Sauri, however, defended the party against allegations of vote-buying, saying authorities were working within the law to encourage people to participate in the electoral process.

One of the most creative attempts to buy votes can be found in this gritty industrial suburb of Mexico City, where the ruling party mayoral candidate has been picking up the tab for a circus since April 14.

Already, 160,000 people have come to the big top — actually, it's a rather small one — to see lions, jaguars, trapeze artists and clowns — with a campaign speech by candidate Guillermo Gonzalez fit into the intermission.

If the bars close their doors, minors might grow up

Oh, how I miss the drunken masses tripping through the Ped Mall ... I miss the endless screaming, laughing and drunken stupor of the freshman and sophomore students. I even miss the bleached blonde women clad in tie-back halter tops and black "bar" pants.

I can't wait for the good times to start up again in the fall. But what am I going to do if they take all of this fun away from me for good? If a 21-ordinance passes in the city, I will have virtually nothing left to make fun of.

Many local bar owners had ceased to run drink-special ads on the radio and in newspapers in an effort to lower the number of under-age and binge drinkers. These local taverns and bars were trying to show respect for and support the goals and ideas of the Stepping Up Project, a UI group that deals specifically with these two alcohol issues.

The idea of trying to curb under-age drinking is a good one. I'm just as tired of mindless drunks roaming the downtown area as any other Iowa City resident is. I suppose the

If a lack of money and time can't keep underclassmen away from binge drinking, I highly doubt whether a lack of advertising by the bars will help.

People accept responsibility for themselves and their bodies. Amazing. Can you even fathom it? A city full of rational students who know their limits and don't behave like infants when they go out alone for the evening.

Oh, I seem to have forgotten. College students are in control of themselves and their lives. They're also self-sufficient. My only question is this: Where do your bar funds come from? Do you think it's really fair to expect Mom and Dad to foot the bill for the 15 mixed drinks you had last night? "Gee, Mom ... I had to buy a few new textbooks."

I just really don't understand. Sometimes it seems like I'm the only person in the world that has no money to go out, let alone the time. Do these kids never go to class? I know I stay pretty busy all day and usually at night. I guess everybody just has to make the time to "party."

So, the two biggest problems I have with going out to the bars — lack of time and lack of money — seem to be nonexistent in the realm of college life. If these two major problems can't keep underclassmen away from binge drinking and possibly out of the drinking scene altogether, I highly doubt whether a lack of advertising by the bars will help in getting rid of alcohol-related problems. Students of all ages will drink if they feel like it and will drink as much as they feel like drinking.

And this is all well and good, but how we just grow up a little while we're out drinking? If students expect to be treated like adults, they should learn to consume alcohol like an adult, in reasonable amounts and at reasonable times, instead of acting like toddlers in a candy store with a complete lack of self-control. You came to college to grow up. Now, try it.

Regents finally get it right

The Board of Regents recently approved a bill that would provide for same-sex partners of UI professional staff members who provide an affidavit of domestic partnership the same insurance benefits spouses of professional staff members receive.

The UI should not have ever discriminated against the sexual orientation of gay or lesbian employees or against the gender of the employees' life partners. This discrimination violates individual rights and equality under the law. The public owns the UI. No public institution should neglect, except when another's individual rights are violated, the sanctity of the individual's natural right as a human being to live according to her or his identity and conscience. UI employees, regardless of their sexual identity, deserve respect as valuable and justly compensated workers. The UI offers married professional staff members, in exchange for their services, a salary and paid insurance for their spouses. Homosexual employees in domestic partnerships receive a salary but no paid insurance for their life partners. Are their contributions less valuable to the UI than are married persons' contributions? Of course not. Married professional staff members get a better deal out of their employment at the UI than do professional staff members emotionally and economically bonded to a person of the same sex because public agencies consistently assume (how dare they!?) the imaginary right to choose for people how to live.

People who discriminate against homosexuals and bisexuals frequently cite moral reasons. All important choices are moral in that they are chosen to support life and happiness. Nobody has the right to make the most personal decisions — life partner, for example — for another person. Only the couple has an objective interest in that relationship.

Same-sex domestic partnerships should be common-law marriages. Consenting adult partners should be allowed to make their union official. No, that's not quite right. They should not be prevented from making their union official. Madison's ideas were right: We don't give as special privileges human rights not granted to the government by the consent of the people; the people already had them.

The private sector respects individual rights and dignity much more than do public agencies. Parties in all private exchanges act willfully and with respect for the person at the other side of the table. One pays rent in exchange for a place to live. One loves another person in exchange for bringing joy into one's life. Exchanges with the government, on the other hand, are not freely chosen. Most people pay income tax because if one fails to do so, one is punished. More and more private institutions, including American Express, Coors

KIMBERLY ANDERSON

Businesses owned by the private sector are increasingly respecting the sanctity of the individual's right to live and choose as he or she sees fit. It's about time the public caught on.

Brewing, Disney, Microsoft, Sun Microsystems and Time Warner, are offering homosexual domestic partners of employees the same benefits offered spouses of employees. Even the notoriously conservative automobile industry is moving toward offering insurance for same-sex partners of employees. Businesses owned by the private sector are increasingly respecting the sanctity of the individual's right to live and choose as he or she sees fit and are inadvertently reinforcing the rights of private businesses. It's about time the public caught on.

The regents' decision to respect equally professional employees' married relationships and same-sex domestic partnerships is a start. Respecting all merit employees' domestic partnerships and compensating with equal insurance options the employees' services would be another step. Merit is the only objective standard upon which to base the hiring and compensating of employees.

SAS representatives declined to participate in the founding conference of the Worker Rights Consortium, the very group they endorse to monitor conditions in apparel factories.

SAS declined to participate in drafting the UI's code of conduct for manufacturers.

Other than continuing to insist that the UI withdraw from the Fair Labor Association, the SAS has raised no new items for discussion. By contrast, the UI agreed to join the Worker Rights Consortium and sent three representatives to that organization's founding conference. The UI has also appointed an ad hoc committee that has developed the university's own code of conduct for apparel manufacturers who seek licenses to make products with UI logos.

All told, the UI accepted and acted on three and one-half of four recommendations from the UI Committee on Human Rights. Although the administration chose not to accept the committee's recommendation to discontinue its affiliation with the Fair Labor Association, it seems fair to say that members of the Committee on Human Rights acknowledge that this is an issue on which reasonable people can disagree.

The only stumbling block to any further discussion between the SAS and UI administrators is the SAS itself. Its leaders seem not so interested in dialogue as in forcing UI administrators to say, "You are right. We are wrong."

The time for those words may yet come. But for now, UI administrators are simply saying, "It's too early to know whether the FLA or the WRC can be effective in ending sweatshop abuses. Let's not prejudice either of these organizations. Let's give them both a chance and then judge them by the fruits of their labor."

Article missed spirit of study

We appreciate the June 13 story ("UI tests new STD vaccine") about our cervical cancer/HPV vaccine trial; however, I am not sure that the article captured the spirit of our research. Perhaps the best way to emphasize the importance of a cervical cancer/HPV vaccine is to review some statistics. Cervical cancer is the second-leading cause of death for reproductive-age women worldwide, with 500,000 deaths. Nearly all of these women with cervical cancer have an infection with human papilloma virus (HPV). In the United States, there are 15,000 cases of cervical cancer every year, with 5,000 deaths. In Iowa, there are 100-150 cases every year. A recent study in the New England

Journal of Medicine revealed that 43 percent of college-age women have a cervical infection with HPV. Few of these women will develop cervical cancer, but the same study showed that HPV-infected women are 20 times more likely to have an abnormal pap. There are several excellent Web sites reviewing these facts, including the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (<http://www.cdc.gov>), the American Social Health Association (<http://www.ashastd.org>) and the American Cancer Society (<http://www.cancer.org>). Our vaccine trial is in collaboration with Merck & Co.; its Web site (<http://www.merck.com>) contains some additional information.

WASHINGTON — A sharp-eyed spacecraft camera orbiting Mars has spotted v-shaped gullies and trenches that appear to have been carved by fast-flowing water, say experts familiar with a new study of the Red Planet.

While the finding by the Mars Global Surveyor spacecraft is tentative, experts said Wednesday the presence of liquid water would profoundly improve the chances of life existing on Mars.

"Life tends to like liquid water," said Hugh H. Kieffer, a planetary scientist with the U.S. Geological Survey in Flagstaff, Ariz. "Lots of people are searching very hard and would like to find water."

City Carton has a 24-hour drop bin for recyclable materials and is close to campus, so students can take material there, she said.

"Most apartments don't have private contractors for collecting recyclable material, and the only option students have is to bring it to us," Croy said.

Education and providing a simple, easy-to-follow program is needed in Iowa City to make people more aware of recycling, said Dave Klockau, the recycling coordinator at City Carton.

"We've got to educate them on what we're doing, how, and why we're doing it," he said.

However, past plans have failed, and City Carton is at a loss for new ideas on how to improve students' recycling habits, Klockau said.

Several years ago, a three-month pilot recycling program was started at various apartments in Iowa City and Coralville, said Brad Neuman, the Johnson County solid-waste planning coordinator.

"We put white Dumpsters in both student- and family oriented apartments that allowed residents to recycle paper," he said. "What we learned was that the volume from the students was very small compared with the volume from the families."

Residents in the apartments were made aware of the service by the owners, by managers and by door hangers, Neuman said. The

In a study to be published next week, scientists Michael Malin and Ken Edgett report that high-resolution photos from Surveyor clearly show channels heading steeply downhill on the interior walls of craters gouged from the Martian surface by asteroids. NASA scheduled a news conference for today to announce the findings. Science, a leading peer-reviewed journal, advanced by a week the embargo on the study but did not plan to release the paper until today. Malin and Edgett, both staff scientists for Malin Space Science Systems in San Diego, are said to report that the Surveyor photos suggest strongly that there is liquid water in the upper crust of Mars and that it has flowed in relatively recent times.

"Their interpretation of the photos is that these (the channels) are signs of water seepage and runoff," said an expert familiar with the study who asked not to be identified. "The key finding is that the photos give evidence of water in the Martian crust."

"If you saw these channels on Earth, you would know they were cut by water," added a second source familiar with the study.

This source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said there are very few craters and other erosion features near the water flow channels. This smooth surface indicates that the water flow was "very recent in geologic time."

Clinton plans for $1 trillion rise in surplus

The president wants faster debt reduction and deeper tax cuts because of the new figures.

By Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Clinton is preparing to announce a mammoth $1 trillion increase in the administration's 10-year budget surplus projection, and he will propose using it for faster debt reduction, beefed up Medicare benefits and deeper tax cuts, Democrats say.

The new forecast is expected to bring projected surpluses for the decade ending in 2010 to $1.9 trillion, without counting Social Security. That would more than double the $746 billion the White House predicted in February, a deluge of cash fueled by the formidable economy.

A deep, long-lasting recession could make the projected surpluses shrink or vanish. Nonetheless, with Treasury Department figures showing that it has been collecting unexpected mountains of revenue in recent months, the projected deluge of cash has been expected.

As a result, it has already influenced election-year politics.

George W. Bush, the Republican presidential nominee-in-waiting, is using the bigger numbers to fend off Democratic arguments that his plans for tax cuts and Social Security are irresponsible. And Vice President Al Gore, the likely Democratic candidate, has trotted out a parade of spending and tax-cut proposals that would be financed from federal surpluses.

White House officials were refusing Wednesday to discuss the announcement, which Clinton could make as early as June 26. But on the condition of anonymity, some congressional Democrats, lobbyists and others discussed its general framework.

Clinton said Tuesday he would use some of the surplus — $40 billion over 10 years — to boost Medicare reimbursements to hospitals and other health-care providers. Lawmakers say the payments are aimed at restoring cuts made as part of the 1997 budget-balancing deal that went deeper than expected.

But when he announces his new surplus figures, he will also propose making his prescription-drug plan for Medicare recipients more generous.

Democrats said they expect him to propose beginning a portion of that plan aimed at helping people with catastrophic illnesses earlier than expected. They said he might propose starting it in 2003, when his overall prescription plan would begin, instead of 2006, which he proposed in his fiscal 2001 budget in February.

streets in order to inform policymakers and decision-makers on the will of the people," he said. "It's clear the death penalty is misapplied and barbaric."

While questions about Graham's trial may be legitimate, it is very difficult to overturn previous evidence, said Tim Hagle, a UI associate professor of political science who holds a law degree.

"(Bush) is certainly not going to execute an innocent man if there is any doubt within the court system in terms of evidence," he said.

Graham was arrested after a week-long crime rampage that followed Lambert's murder. He pleaded guilty to 10 armed robberies in which he shot and wounded two people.

New defense attorneys are insisting Graham is innocent of the murder and are pressing for a postponement of his execution and a second trial.

Two people besides witness Skillern said they saw the killer. However, both described the man as shorter than Graham.

Graham trial lawyer Mock did not call these witnesses during the trial because, he said, they wouldn't have helped his client. The Texas Bar Association has reprimanded Mock several times in his career for professional misconduct.

A trial lawyer needs only to be considered competent by the court, Hagle said. If the ineffectiveness of the lawyer is a serious problem, that complaint should have been brought up in appeals court, he said.

"You can't retry the case at this point," Hagle said. "It's been 20 years. Where has this evidence been?"

The national anti-death penalty movement has been rallying around Grant's case, said Brian Henninger, a program coordinator for the national coalition to abolish the death penalty, Washington D.C.

"Our ultimate goal is to keep the pressure on Bush, to keep telling him we don't want this execution going forward," he said.

Because the national press is covering the Graham case, the execution has become a campaign issue for Bush, Henninger said. A reprieve was granted only one other time by Bush, but the Texas governor has never been under this much pressure before, he said.

The media have been attacking Bush for something he cannot control, said Christian Kurasek, a UI junior and the chairman of UI

Students for Bush.

"(Bush) is using all the power he has to make sure justice is done," he said. "He's not the one who is reviewing the case, so I don't understand how blame can be accredited to him."

Whether or not Graham is granted clemency, local lawyer and rally organizer Bruce Nestor said growing momentum is being established against the death penalty.

"More people are discovering the death penalty is inherently unfair and leads to the execution of innocent people," he said.

Nestor is the president-elect of the National Lawyers Guild, a group that opposes the death penalty and is seeking a national moratorium that would stop capital punishment in the United States.

Even the notoriously conservative automobile industry is moving toward offering insurance for same-sex partners of employees. Businesses owned by the private sector are increasingly respecting the sanctity of the individual's right to live and choose as he or she sees fit and are inadvertently reinforcing the rights of private businesses. program did not work, and none of the apartment owners continued the project, he said.

The UI currently offers students the opportunity to recycle in the dorms, collecting four different paper products: office paper, newspaper, magazines and cardboard.

Most students living in the residence halls don't even know facilities exist, said Seth Nieman, the former president of the UI Environmental Coalition.

"We used to have a recycling committee that would go to floor meetings at the dorms and inform students where recycling facilities were," he said.

For UI students who live off-campus, recycling is not as convenient, said Bill Flinn, a UI junior who lives in an apartment complex near downtown.

"I don't recycle because I wouldn't know where to start," he said. "There are no recycling bins to put anything in."

Flinn and his roommates used to recycle their aluminum cans but now put their cans out by the Dumpster for other people to pick up, he said.

"I used to recycle in the dorms because they had bins for us," Flinn said. "I'm going to sound lazy, but it's not convenient in an apartment. I just don't have the time with work and two classes."

Many students recycle only aluminum cans solely because of refunds, said Craig Remsburg, a UI senior who lives off campus.

"My parents used to recycle, but it's too much work, and I expect someone else in my house to do it," he said.

Focusing on the people who want to recycle is the key, Klockau said. "People either care or don't care about it," he said. "Those who don't care never will, and those who do care either don't have the resources or don't know how, so we need to educate those people."

'Dining with flowers' is more than art, it's a cultural statement

■ The art museum will feature Haviland china in a study of culture and concepts of beauty.

By Catherine M. Swanson
The Daily Iowan

Once enormously popular in the homes and on the tables of America's most famous and wealthy families, today Haviland china has become a work of art for collectors all over the world.

Tonight, the UI Museum of Art will open an exhibit featuring this famous china, titled "Dining with Flowers: Haviland Porcelain from 1860-1910." The collection is made up of pieces on loan from private collections from all over the country, including Iowa, Wisconsin, California and Florida.

The exhibit will examine "the different concepts of what is beautiful" by showing the pieces in chronological order, said Robert Rorex, a UI associate professor of art and the author of the exhibit catalogue.

"It will give insight into the way people lived, concepts of our grandparents, great-grandparents and great-great grandparents," he said. The exhibit does this because china can be seen not only as art but as a part of culture.

"The Haviland reflects a cultural entity ... we can learn about a culture, how they eat, how food was served," said Wallace Tomasini, the former director of the UI art school and the organizer of the exhibit.

The porcelain will be decorated with flowers and set up along with the silver, crystal and linen that would have completed a formal table setting in the late 1800s. Photographs and prints of the real flowers used for the design of patterns will also be on display, along with floral arrangements by Cedar Rapids and Twin Cities garden clubs.

Haviland china is unique because of how it was produced, said Tomasini. Before Haviland china, most porcelain was handmade by individuals in smaller shops. That changed in 1842, when American David Haviland moved to Limoges, France, to start his own porcelain company. The Haviland Co. instituted a more forward-looking approach to making porcelain, Tomasini said.

It produced porcelain on assembly lines. Using the technological advances of the day, the company was able to move porcelain china from small shops into industry, while maintaining quality — which proved to be a huge success. Within 25 years, the Haviland Co. was the largest exporter of Limoges porcelain to the United States.

Haviland china is often associated with elegant dining. Wealthy and famous people of the late 19th century, such as kings, queens and U.S. Presidents Lincoln, Grant and McKinley used Haviland china. More recently, Presidents Kennedy and Johnson commissioned sets of Haviland china.

"The company always catered to wealthy people," Tomasini said. Rorex will present a lecture titled "Flora Triumphant: The 1879 Haviland and Co. Catalogue and Multifloral Patterns" at the opening of the exhibit today at 7:30 p.m. at the art museum. The lecture will detail the chronological phases of floral decoration of Haviland porcelain from the end of the Civil War through World War I.

A catalogue including more than 60 pages of porcelain pictures that chronologically "takes into account Haviland porcelain's use of flowers and decorations" will be for sale all through the exhibit, Rorex said.

"Dining with Flowers" coincides with the 11th annual Haviland Collectors Conference running this weekend in Iowa City. The conference will include workshops, lectures and an all-Haviland show and sale.

Hanson fever throbs in Des Moines

DES MOINES (AP) — More than 500 screaming, sobbing fans — mostly adolescent girls — packed Merle Hay Mall to see Hanson, the trio of teen-age brothers promoting their new album, This Time Around.

Some arrived as early as 6 a.m. for the Tuesday afternoon concert, hoping to be among the first 107 in line to get a wristband allowing them to meet the band.

"We waited seven hours," said Renee Oehlerking, 14, of Des Moines. Hanson — Isaac, 19, Taylor, 17, and Zac, 14 — became a hit in 1997 with their first album, Middle of Nowhere, which included the pop song "MMMbop."

"If Only," the second release off the group's new album, is one of the most requested songs on local radio station KKDM-FM, which sponsored the band's appearance.

Fans carried signs professing love for the group. Some wrote "Hanson and "I love you" on their arms, foreheads and hands in hopes the band would see it.

After three songs, the group held an autograph session.

Courtney Blaine, 14, sobbed: "I was right there. They all touched my hand." "Just call me," said one fan as she handed Taylor Hanson her phone number. He politely declined.

"It's insane," he said later. "I mean, it's great to have fans, but you don't let it go to your head."

Janikowski arrested for drug possession

■ The Raiders kicker is arrested again for having GHB, one week after he was acquitted of bribery.

By David Roysse
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — A week after he was acquitted of trying to bribe a police officer, former Florida State kicker Sebastian Janikowski was arrested on charges of possessing the "date-rape drug."

The Oakland Raiders' first-round draft choice and two friends were found with GHB at a nightclub early Wednesday during a police sweep for under-age drinkers, Florida State University police said.

Janikowski, a native of Poland, and the two others were charged with one count of felony possession of a controlled substance. The All-America kicker who helped the Seminoles win the national championship was released from jail after pleading innocent and posting $2,500 bond.

Janikowski, the first kicker in 21 years taken in the first round of the NFL draft, was scheduled to leave this week to begin workouts with the Raiders. He has yet to sign with the Raiders.

Janikowski, 22, is a resident alien. After his prior arrest, federal immigration officials said they routinely look at cases of any alien who is charged with a felony.

Neither the INS nor the Raiders was immediately available for comment on the new charge.

Lt. Linda Riley, a spokeswoman for university police, said a plainclothes officer saw Janikowski and the two other men pull into the parking lot of a bar on the edge of campus, noticed one of them pouring a small amount of clear liquid into a container and decided to investigate further.

Janikowski arrested for drug possession

The Raiders kicker is arrested again for having GHB, one week after he was acquitted of bribery.

By David Royse
 Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — A week after he was acquitted of trying to bribe a police officer, former Florida State kicker Sebastian Janikowski was arrested on charges of possessing the "date-rape drug."

The Oakland Raiders' first-round draft choice and two friends were found with GHB at a nightclub early Wednesday during a police sweep for under-age drinkers, Florida State University police said.

Janikowski, a native of Poland, and the two others were charged with one count of felony possession of a controlled substance. The All-America kicker who helped the Seminoles win the national championship was released from jail after pleading innocent and posting $2,500 bond.

Janikowski, the first kicker in 21 years taken in the first round of the NFL draft, was scheduled to leave this week to begin workouts with the Raiders. He has yet to sign with the Raiders.

Janikowski, 22, is a resident alien. After his prior arrest, federal immigration officials said they routinely look at cases of any alien who is charged with a felony.

Neither the INS nor the Raiders was immediately available for comment on the new charge.

Lt. Linda Riley, a spokeswoman for university police, said a plainclothes officer saw Janikowski and the two other men pull into the parking lot of a bar on the edge of campus, noticed one of them pouring a small amount of clear liquid into a container and decided to investigate further.

Penrith officially announced wrestling coach at UNI

UNI snubbed Iowa assistant coach Tom Brands, opting to look in-house for a coach.

By Jeremy Schnitker
 The Daily Iowan

Brad Penrith, a former national champion at Iowa and an assistant coach at Northern Iowa, was named UNI's head wrestling coach at a 9 a.m. press conference Wednesday morning.

Rick Hartzell, the UNI athletics director, had offered Penrith the job Tuesday while on a golf outing.

"There was not the thought process, 'How much is my salary,' — it was like, 'Yeah,'" Penrith said. "All the details were just minor. I wanted to stay here."

Penrith beat out Iowa top assistant

Tom Brands and Iowa State associate assistant Thom Ortiz, the other two finalists for the job.

Brands, an assistant at Iowa for eight years who won three national wrestling titles and an Olympic gold medal, has been denied a second head-coaching position in two months. He applied for the head job at Nebraska on May 2 but was not granted an interview.

Hartzell, who spoke very highly of Brands, said the decision had nothing to do with his personal relationship with Penrith, even though they spent the day before the hiring on a golf outing.

"I don't think it was anything personal," Hartzell said of hiring Penrith over Brands. "If you look at him, he's like a puppy dog — that's how he feels to me. The more I was with him, the more I like him."

Brands, who has been in Dallas helping Olympic hopefuls in the Hawkeye Wrestling Club since Tuesday, had not been in contact with UNI officials until Hartzell called him last night to tell him he was going with Penrith.

"I don't think there's any problem with Tom," Hartzell said. "I was really, really impressed with him. Unfortunately, the guy internal was very similar, and that's what tipped it. In this case, he got nudged by somebody who had been here."

While Penrith has been at Northern Iowa, the team has placed 30th at the NCAA Championships in 1998, 17th in 1999 and 11th at this year's tournament. In the off-season, the Panthers signed the best recruiting class in the nation, according to Intermat Magazine.

Gaining ground

Incoming Iowa freshmen Glen Worley and Jared Reiner are getting valuable experience playing on the same Prime Time team.

By Jeremy Schnitker
 The Daily Iowan

You've heard so much about them, read about them in all the recruiting magazines, and hope they can take the Hawkeyes to the promised land.

People know all about freshmen Glen Worley and Jared Reiner — but until June 15, nobody knew how good they'd be on the court together, in the same uniforms.

If Prime Time League play is any indication of what chemistry could bond between the forward (Worley) and the center (Reiner), Hawkeye fans will be pleasantly surprised.

After teaming up for 62 points on on June 15 for Goodfellow Printing, and another 35 Monday, it looks like the blue-chip recruits could live up to their high billing.

"We've definitely developed a chemistry between us so far," Worley said. "We got off to a sluggish start (Monday night), but, other than that, we've been doing a really good job."

Reiner, the 6-9 Tripp, S.D., native, said it has been a delight to play with Worley. "It's definitely fun playing with Glen," Reiner said. "He makes it a lot easier; he's always looking for a good pass."

With a recruiting class that most have called one of the top five in the country, Reiner and Worley are the two that are likely to be expected to contribute early in their careers.

Worley, a 6-6 forward from Iowa City, led West High to a state title this year.

Reiner, who will likely play center next year, will be the tallest player coming in for the Hawkeyes and has a good chance to start as a true freshman.

For now, though, it's all fun and games in the Prime Time League.

"The only position keyed-in already is Deano (senior point guard Dean Oliver)," Worley said. "I'm not really worrying about that now."

While both are considered top-notch, aggressive players, their styles are contrasting.

Jenkins to try to D-up Rod Thompson

The F.I.T. Zone hopes to remain undefeated in the PTL.

By Ethen Lieser
 The Daily Iowan

F.I.T. Zone will put its perfect record on the line in tonight's tilt against a veteran Nike-Merrill Lynch team in one of the most intriguing matchups of the night.

The game will feature defensive whiz Monte Jenkins against Rod Thompson, who has scored 73 points in the first two games.

One week ago, F.I.T. Zone (2-0) guard Jenkins brought his team back from a double-digit deficit against Active Endeavors with his tenacious defense, causing three turnovers that provided the necessary spark to pull out the win. Tonight, Jenkins will have the unenviable task of trying to contain Nike-Merrill Lynch's (1-1) 6-foot-6 Thompson.

The 6-5 Jenkins, who was first team All-Conference and Conference Defensive Player of the Year at Southern Illinois, is also a devastating force on the offensive end. Jenkins scored a team high 31 points on Monday's 122-98 win over Highland Park Development.

Ex-Iowa City High standout Leroy Watley has been a pleasant surprise in easing the scoring load for Jenkins and David Kruse. The 21-year-old Watley has efficiently positioned his 5-11 frame in open spaces for great looks at the hoop. Watley nailed three of four 3-pointers and scored a quiet 23 points Monday.

Other games: Active Endeavors' (1-1) Donnie Dobbs and Luke Recker will try to carry their team to its second victory of the season against Goodfellow Printing (2-0), a team coming off a 123-98 laugher against Fitzpatrick's.

Fitzpatrick's (0-2) and Iowa City Ready Mix (0-2) will square off to see which team will finally have one in the win column. Fitzpatrick's Reggie Evans and Ready Mix's Rob Griffin should provide ample supply of creative moves around the basket.

Strong performances from Dean Oliver and Duez Henderson will be needed against Highland Park Development (0-2) if Goodfellow (2-0) wants to solidify first place.

Subway goers mixed about Rocker's impending ride

Mayor Rudolph Giuliani urges compassion for Rocker, but some Mets fans say he is likely to face some retribution.

By Lukas I. Alpert
 Associated Press

NEW YORK — Riders on the No. 7 train Wednesday offered a bit of advice to loudmouth lefty John Rocker, who intends to ride the subway next week: Watch the closing doors, John. Watch 'em ve-r-r-ry carefully.

"Yeah, let him ride," said Wendy Strauss as she rode the No. 7 train to play tennis at the Arthur Ashe Tennis Center, directly across from Shea Stadium. "Good luck to him. He'll definitely be hassled."

Robert Illa, standing at the Shea Stadium stop Wednesday morning, wondered if the pitcher's promise to ride the line — the one that he vilified in an interview with Sports Illustrated — was just bravado. Rocker and the Atlanta Braves come to New York on June 29 to face the Mets.

"I don't think he has the guts to get on this train," Illa said. "This isn't Atlanta. He may be able to pull this stuff down South, but this is New York."

Rocker, in an interview with USA Today Baseball Weekly, said he planned to ride the No. 7 train through Queens next week and entertain questions from straphangers.

"I'm taking it to Shea Stadium," said Mets fans' public enemy No. 1. "I won't be in a cab. I won't be on the bus. I'll be on that train."

The city is taking the potential for retribution seriously when Rocker and the Braves come to town.

"Obviously, there's going to be more security," Mayor Rudolph Giuliani said Wednesday. "And I could begin now by urging New Yorkers to have a counterintuitive response and that is just be nice. No matter what he's said or the way he's acted, whatever you think of it, the best reaction to his action is to be classy."

Even before his rant in Sports Illustrated, Rocker had annoyed Mets' fans by describing them as "stupid" and "a tired act."

In the magazine interview, he said: "Imagine having to take the 7 train to (Shea Stadium) looking like you're

Robert Illa and his son Elijah ride the No. 7 train to the Shea Stadium stop Wednesday. Asked what he thought of John Rocker's vow to ride the subway next week, Illa said, "I don't think he has the guts to get on this train."

Karrie Webb gunning for LPGA Grand Slam

Webb has a chance to get the second leg of the Grand Slam as the LPGA Championship begins today.

By Doug Ferguson
 Associated Press

WILMINGTON, Del. — Karrie Webb has a chance to do something not even Tiger Woods can accomplish this year — win the Grand Slam.

No one has ever won all four major championships in the same season, and Webb is the only player on any tour who can still even dream about it. Three months ago, she turned in the first overpowering performance in golf this year with a record 10-stroke victory in the Nabisco Championship.

She goes after the second leg Thursday when the LPGA Championship gets under way at DuPont Country Club. "It would be great, and very important to me if I win this week," Webb said. "But it's only Wednesday, and I've got a long road ahead of me before I even have a chance to hold that trophy on Sunday."

Webb also won the du Maurier Classic in August, so a victory this week would make the Australian the first player since Pat Bradley in 1985-86 to win three straight majors. Ben Hogan in 1953 was the last male to win three straight.

These days, however, the most natural comparisons are to Woods.

Webb has won five tournaments worldwide and finished out of the top 10 just once this year, same as Woods. And while her 10-stroke victory at the Nabisco wasn't quite the same as Woods' 15-stroke victory in the U.S. Open at Pebble Beach on Sunday, it spoke volumes about her dominance.

"Some have accepted that she's going to win a lot," Nancy Lopez said. "I don't think they sit back and say, 'Well, Karrie is going to win this week.' But they know who they are going to have to beat if they're going to win."

Webb is the favorite this week because, like Woods, she is the favorite every week. And just like on the PGA Tour, some of her peers aren't ashamed to admit it.

"If I was a betting person, I would put my money on Karrie every week. I'd be very rich right now," said Juli Inkster, whose victory last year in the LPGA Championship made her only the second woman to complete the modern career Grand Slam.

Speaking of money, there's more at stake for Webb than the $210,000 to the winner. Thanks to a bonus pool established by Nabisco, she can earn an additional $250,000 by winning her second major.

That goes up to $1 million if she wins the U.S. Open next month, and $2.5 million — more than Webb won all of last year — if she wins all four.

But that's getting a little far ahead. What helps keep Webb's mind off her pursuit of history is the fact she has never played DuPont Country Club particularly well. In fact, she missed the cut last year.

"I don't have the high expectations that I do going into the Nabisco Championship," she said. "I'm just trying to get myself into contention come Friday night, and hopefully have a good weekend and then see what happens from there."

Unlike the PGA Tour, at least Webb has some competition. "Two-time U.S. Open champion Annika Sorenstam, who lost to Webb in a playoff in Hawaii earlier this year, repaid the favor by beating Webb with an eagle on the first playoff in the Evian Masters last week in France.

Ordonez out for season

NEW YORK (AP) — Infield defense isn't a strength for the New York Mets, anymore. Rey Ordonez, their three-time Gold Glove-winning shortstop, is out for the season because his broken left forearm is not healing properly.

Ordonez, who broke the bone May 29 at Los Angeles, was expected to be back by the All-Star break. But a checkup Wednesday with Dr. Andrew Weiland revealed the bone is not healing properly, and Ordonez will need a plate and screws inserted into his arm.

"I am surprised by the findings today, because everything was normal in the first checkup," Mets general manager Steve Phillips said. "We're a better team with Rey Ordonez. But I think we will be able to compete and overcome it."

Dolphins, Madison agree to richest deal in team history

MIAMI — The Miami Dolphins signed cornerback Sam Madison to a seven-year contract extension Monday, giving him the richest deal in team history.

Terms of the deal were not disclosed, but team president Eddie Jones said Madison's contract was the largest in team history.

"This is a great day for the fans and the organization," coach Dave Wannstedt said. "Everyone knows Sam from his interceptions and from going to the Pro Bowl. He has as good a work ethic and as good a leadership skill as we have on this team."

Richard Petty talks about grandson's death during appearance

SAN FRANCISCO — Right after Adam Petty's fatal accident, stock car legend Richard Petty questioned whether he should have encouraged his grandson's racing in the family's tradition.

But that night when he got home, he saw on the news that some young boys had drowned that day. He realized that everyone's time is limited.

"It could happen when you're walking down the street," Petty said. Adam's death, he added pragmatically, "just happened to come up in a race car."

Petty did not dwell on his family's recent tragedy during an appearance in San Francisco on Wednesday. NASCAR's winningest driver was touting his long-time alliance with STP along with John Andretti, a driver for Petty Enterprises.

Petty's father, Lee — the patriarch of the four-generation racing family — died in April of complications from a stomach aneurysm. He was 86.

Then, on May 12, 19-year-old Adam Petty, an up-and-coming star on the racing scene, was killed in a wreck during a Busch series practice at New Hampshire International Speedway.

TV coverage finalized for CU-CSU game

DENVER — Though it won't be a prime-time affair, this year's game between Colorado and Colorado State will receive national exposure on Sept. 2.

The rivalry game at Mile High Stadium will start at 4 p.m. MDT and be televised by ESPN2, the athletics directors for both schools said Wednesday.

Colorado State beat Colorado 41-14 last year, but the victory was marred by a post-game clash between fans and police in riot gear. Several people threw plastic bottles and cans at police, and officers responded by spraying people with tear gas.

The confrontation prompted discussion of returning future games to Colorado's campus in Boulder and CSU's campus in Fort Collins.

"In the past two years, we have seen overwhelming support for the game as witnessed by the attendance at Mile High Stadium, and we are excited to continue that tradition in the future," Colorado State Athletics Director Tim Weiser said.

Spain, Yugoslavia advance in Euro Cup

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands — Spain beat Yugoslavia 4-3 with two goals in injury time Wednesday to put both nations in the European Soccer Championship quarterfinals, and German coach Erich Ribbeck quit a day after his team was eliminated.

The Netherlands beat France 3-2 to ensure home-field advantage for the rest of the tournament, but the game wasn't truly a preview of a possible final. Both countries, already assured of advancing, rested top players.

In the day's other two games, Norway and Slovenia played a scoreless tie, and the Czech Republic beat Denmark 2-0.

With the first round complete, the quarterfinals are set: Portugal-Turkey and Italy-Romania on Saturday, and Yugoslavia-Netherlands and Spain-France on Sunday.

On Tuesday, Germany's 3-0 loss to Portugal ended the long international career of defender Lothar Matthaus, who made his world record 150th international appearance.

Kansas linebacker coming to NDSU

FARGO, N.D. — Kansas linebacker Andrew LeClair, who led the Jayhawks in tackles last season, said he will transfer to North Dakota State in the fall and play for the Bison.

"This is 100 percent for academic reasons," LeClair said. "It has been a very difficult decision, but this will be in my best interest in terms of my career goals."

LeClair and his wife, Lindsay, both want to pursue degrees in agricultural sciences. Those degrees are not available at Kahsas.

BOWLING GREEN, Ky. — Northern Iowa will have some new competition. Western Kentucky University's football program has been invited to join the Gateway Football Conference.

Western decided earlier this month to leave the Ohio Valley Conference after the OVC voted to no longer allow associate memberships. Associate members were allowed to belong to the conference in only one sport.

L.A.'s victory parade rolls past the riot scene without further trouble.

By Ken Peters
 Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Where stores were looted and police cars burned two days before, a quarter-million Los Angeles Lakers fans hailed the new NBA champions Wednesday in an adoring sea of purple and gold.

They heard speeches from the mayor, promises of more titles and a pledge from their biggest star to try to undo some of the damage from Monday night's violence.

"The other night after the game, a couple of bad things happened, a couple of people trashed two police cars," Shaquille O'Neal said. "So on behalf of the Lakers and (coach) Phil Jackson, we're going to get them two new police cars."

"We want to say that when we get one (championship) next year, we just want to be safe. We want everybody to be safe and do the right thing because we're going to get one next year, too."

The fans roared, and said the outbreaks of crime after the title clincher seemed far away. "I had no reservations at all about coming out today," said Dorothy Rhan, a member of the enthusiastic crowd stretching nine blocks to the Lakers' home at the Staples Center.

"I love it. It's wonderful," she said. "L.A. has it's unity now and it's all due to the Lakers."

A mob looted stores, smashed windows, and torched police cars and news vans outside the arena after the Lakers defeated the Indiana Pacers 116-111 for the NBA crown. Eleven people were arrested and four police officers were hurt.

Police vowed zero tolerance for parade violence, and a highly visible force of more than 300 officers was stationed along Figueroa Street to keep the peace. Reinforcements were on hand nearby as a precaution.

There were no arrests, and no trouble reported. "This is a festive event. If there was some type of problem, we'd be ready," police Lt. Horace Frank said. He estimated the crowd at about 250,000.

Los Angeles Lakers star Shaquille O'Neal waves to the crowd as the Lakers and thousands of their fans celebrate the team's NBA championship Wednesday.

Jackson got a huge ovation when he joined the Lakers on stage outside the Department of Water and Power building prior to the parade kickoff. At least seven helicopters buzzed overhead.

"We appreciate this a lot. This is for the city of L.A. We are starting a new millennium right now," Jackson said. Signs in the crowd called it a "new Phillenium."

Mayor Richard Riordan declared it Laker Day in the city celebrating its first NBA championship in 12 years and a skywriting plane spelled out "LA Lakers" overhead.

"What a great day," Riordan said to the wildly cheering throng. "You are the first champions of the 21st century, the start of a great dynasty. But most of all, you are No. 1 in the hearts of all Angelenos."

Then, it was time for O'Neal, the 7-foot-1 center who swept Most Valuable Player honors in the regular season, the All-Star Game and the playoffs.

"I cannot hear you all," the gum-chomping O'Neal said, egging on the crowd as it chanted "MVP! MVP! MVP!"

O'Neal also declared that his era as "The Big Aristotle," spouting philosophy in lockerroom interviews, was over.

"I want to be known as 'The Big Shakespeare,'" he said. "Because it was Shakespeare that said,

"Some men are born great, some achieve greatness, some have greatness thrust upon them," and it was great doing it this year for the city and for everybody else. And we're going to try to get one next year. I love you."

Fans had staked out prime spots along the parade route during the night and several thousand were on hand by dawn. By the 11:15 a.m. start of the parade, people squeezed 20 and 30 deep on Figueroa.

Sunshine bathed the jubilant crowd on the first full day of summer. Many wore purple-and-gold Lakers colors and hoisted signs reading "Honk for Kobe Bryant," "Lakers rule 2000," "AC Green, Will you marry me?" and "Bling Bling."

"Bling Bling" was O'Neal's explanation for the sound made when light bounces off a diamond NBA championship ring.

Five open-air, double-deck buses carried the team, politicians, family members and the Lakers Girls down Figueroa through a blizzard of confetti. Players blew kisses, fans blew horns. Everyone waved, smiled and cheered.

Raptors try to lure back star by hiring Wilkens

■ Toronto hopes the hiring of Lenny Wilkens will be enough to keep Tracy McGrady with the team.

By Tom Cohen
Associated Press

TORONTO — Lenny Wilkens never stopped smiling Wednesday as he ticked off the reasons why, at 62, the winningest coach in NBA history was coming to a Canadian franchise that recently seemed in disarray.

He cited an organization that "exudes class," a great city, Vince Carter and the chance for something new with a team coming off its first playoff appearance.

Wilkens

"I'm excited about it and can't wait to get started," Wilkens said after signing a reported four-year, $20 million deal to become the fourth head coach in Raptors' history. "I like the team, I like the city, ... I thought last year they made a tremendous stride getting to the playoffs and I think their future is all upward."

Sitting next to Wilkens, general manager Glen Grunwald also alluded to an opportunity he hopes to exploit. By hiring Wilkens, he said, the Raptors showed their commitment to building a championship team, and that could entice free-agent forward Tracy McGrady to stay instead of heading south.

"I think for our franchise, this is the best thing possible," said Grunwald, adding he recently spoke with McGrady. "The move we just made makes us more attractive to any free agent."

In Wilkens, the Raptors landed a basketball legend, the only person named among the NBA's top 10 coaches and 50 greatest players of all time. He and John Wooden are the only two men in the Hall of Fame as both players and coaches.

He succeeds a series of first-time head coaches in the franchise's five-year history — Brendan Malone, Darrell Walker and Butch Carter.

Carter was fired last week for unending off-court controversies, including a bid for the general manager's title, that marred the first winning season and playoff berth in franchise history. By the time Toronto got swept by New York in the first playoff round, veteran forwards Charles Oakley and Antonio Davis were against him.

Center Kevin Willis, who played for Wilkens in Atlanta, called the hiring a smart move, saying: "The older guys will respect Lenny instantly, and to me, that's the most important thing."

Wilkens has coached in Seattle, Portland, Cleveland and Atlanta, leading the SuperSonics to their lone NBA title in 1979. He has a record of 1,179-981 and in seven years with Atlanta had a mark of 310-232.

This year, though, Wilkens quit after Atlanta finished next to last in the Eastern Conference with a 28-54 record, the worst season of his 27-year coaching career and the worst for the Hawks since the franchise moved to Atlanta in 1968.

The Sun newspaper reported Wednesday that Wilkens was owed $10.4 million by the Hawks over the next two seasons, and his Toronto salary would be deducted from that amount.

Pacers face tough offseason rebuilding

■ Indiana needs to find a new coach and figure out what to do with their six free agents, four being starters.

By Steve Herman
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — The offseason may be just as tough for the Indiana Pacers as their Game 6 loss to the Los Angeles Lakers.

Not only must team President Donnie Walsh find a new coach, which should be the least of his worries, he also must deal with six free agents, four of them starters.

But first comes next week's draft without knowing which players — if any — he will have to replace.

"As far as the players, you really can't do anything until July 1," Walsh said of the earliest date allowed by the league for teams to negotiate with free agents. "So the first two things coming up will be the coach and the draft."

Larry Bird, who took the Pacers to the conference title game three straight years and to the NBA Finals for the first time in franchise history, said all along he would not return as coach.

He might stay in the front office, which could work to the advantage of assistant coach Rick Carlisle, a former teammate of Bird's in Boston. He is one of three coaching candidates to have spoken with Walsh.

If Bird leaves altogether — and he was leaning that way after Monday night's 116-111 loss to the Lakers — Walsh might be inclined to bring in Isiah Thomas or former Pacers player Byron Scott, now an assistant in Sacramento.

Walsh also expects to hear from others interested in succeeding Bird.

With the third-best record in the NBA — behind the Lakers and Portland — the Pacers will pick 27th in the first round on

John Lehmann/Associated Press

Isiah Thomas smiles, a top prospect in the Pacers' search for a head coach, during a news conference in Toronto in 1997.

Wednesday. But it's not necessary to have a new coach in place by then, Walsh said.

"They'll have opinions, but in many cases they haven't followed the draft," he said.

"There may be one exception to that, and of the guys I've talked about that would be Byron Scott," he said. "That's one reason Sacramento kind of put guidelines around his involvement, because he is involved in their draft."

"If a guy's working for someone else, then normally he's in the draft with them, and they get real ticklish about you talking to them before the draft. If the guy is not working for someone else, then basically he's probably not been keeping up with the draft."

The uncertainty involves starters Reggie Miller, Mark Jackson, Jalen Rose and Rick Smith, whose contracts expire on July 1. Austin Croshere and Sam Perkins, two of the top reserves, also will become free agents, and Perkins, who turned 39 last week, has said he likely will retire.

Smits, bothered for several years by sore feet, also has considered retirement, which would leave little-used Zan Tabak the only returning center.

"If there was a guy at 27 that we thought would help us, we'd draft him," David Morway, the Pacers' vice president for basketball operations, told the Indianapolis Star.

"But we're not going to be compelled to do it because our expectation isn't that we're going to replace Rik with the 27th pick," Morway said. "If somebody drops to that spot who we feel like can help us right away, or is somebody we can develop, then that's what we'll do."

Last year, the Pacers drafted guard Vonteevo Cummings of Pittsburgh on the first round and then traded him to Golden State for 6-foot-11 Jeff Foster, a first-round pick out of Southwest Texas State.

Also, 6-11 Jonathan Bender was drafted by Toronto out of Picayune (Miss.) Memorial High School — the fifth pick in the first round — and then traded to Indiana for forward Antonio Davis.

Athletes stealing actors' ad jobs

■ Sports figures are jumping on commercial opportunities that striking actors have left.

By Lynn Elber
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Famous athletes who moonlight as commercial pitchmen are proving a thorn in the side of actors on strike against the advertising industry.

Although the union rank-and-file has been holding the line during the nearly 2-month-old strike, sports stars including Shaquille O'Neal and Olympic sprinter Michael Johnson have filmed commercials.

"They're getting very bad advice from their management people," Screen Actors Guild spokesman Greg Krizman said Wednesday.

An advertising industry representative played down the importance of the athletes' role in the labor dispute involving SAG and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists.

"Obviously, it's something people see as symbolically important," said Dan Jaffe, the executive vice president of the Association of National Advertisers. "But far more important is the fact the advertising community has great solidarity in the face of union demands."

Besides high-profile athletes, a number of models have quietly filmed commercials during the strike, said Ira M. Shepard, whose Washington-based law firm is representing the ANA and American Association of Advertising Agencies.

Shepard declined to provide names, saying that could expose the models and ad agencies to picketing or harassment.

SAG members who work during the strike do face the possibility of fines, suspension or revocation of their membership, Krizman said, and that applies to the athletes or anyone who makes commercials and thus is required to be a union member.

The ad industry is putting "athletes in a situation where they are forced to choose between honoring the strike and their responsibilities as a union member and having a bunch of money waved under their nose," he said.

Not all sports stars have ignored the strike. Tiger Woods declined to film a Nike ad the day after the walkout began May 1, and Boston Red Sox shortstop Nomar Garciaparra said no to Dunkin' Donuts spot.

"It wasn't a big decision for me because I respect what the SAG members are doing," Garciaparra commented on athletes.com, a Web site for sports figures.

Athletes offer different reasons for ignoring the strike.

O'Neal agreed to film an "I'm going to Disneyland" commercial after the Los Angeles Lakers clinched the NBA championship Monday because the fee went to his charity for disadvantaged children, said his agent Leonard Armato.

Wood throw

ATLANTA (AP) — Kerry Wood had one of his best outings and John Rocker had one of his worst.

Wood beat Tom Glavine by allowing just four hits in seven innings, and the Chicago Cubs defeated the Atlanta Braves 8-1 Wednesday night.

Rocker sprinted in from the bullpen to the cheers of the crowd of 44,698 in the ninth but left to jeers after throwing 20 balls and just 10 strikes. He allowed five runs, four walks and a hit batter, his ERA swelling to 5.85.

The controversial reliever, who says he will take the subway to Shea Stadium next week when he returns to New York, retired first hitter, Augie Ojeda, then walked pinch-hitter Gary Matthews Jr. and Eric Young on 3-2 pitches and allowed an RBI single to Damon Buford that made it 4-1.

Sammy Sosa was intentionally walked, and Rocker forced in two runs by walking Mark Grace and hitting Brant Brown with a pitch.

Rocker was removed, and Jeff Reed hit a two-run single off Don Wengert.

Blue Jays 6, Tigers 0

TORONTO — Kelvim Escobar pitched a four-hitter for his first shutout in 55 career starts, leading the Toronto Blue Jays over the Detroit Tigers 6-0 Wednesday night.

Carlos Delgado hit his AL-leading 25th homer and Shannon Stewart hit a three-run homer to back Escobar (6-8), who pitched his third complete game of the season. He struck out six and walked three.

Detroit was shut out for the ninth time this season, the most in the major leagues.

Wood throws gem, Rocker rocked in 8-1 Chicago victory

ATLANTA (AP) — Kerry Wood had one of his best outings and John Rocker had one of his worst. Wood beat Tom Glavine by allowing just four hits in seven innings, and the Chicago Cubs defeated the Atlanta Braves 8-1 Wednesday night.

Rocker sprinted in from the bullpen to the cheers of the crowd of 44,698 in the ninth but left to jeers after throwing 20 balls and just 10 strikes. He allowed five runs, four walks and a hit batter, his ERA swelling to 5.85.

The controversial reliever, who says he will take the subway to Shea Stadium next week when he returns to New York, retired first hitter, Augie Ojeda, then walked pinch-hitter Gary Matthews Jr. and Eric Young on 3-2 pitches and allowed an RBI single to Damon Buford that made it 4-1.

Sammy Sosa was intentionally walked, and Rocker forced in two runs by walking Mark Grace and hitting Brant Brown with a pitch.

Rocker was removed, and Jeff Reed hit a two-run single off Don Wengert.

Blue Jays 6, Tigers 0

TORONTO — Kelvim Escobar pitched a four-hitter for his first shutout in 55 career starts, leading the Toronto Blue Jays over the Detroit Tigers 6-0 Wednesday night.

Carlos Delgado hit his AL-leading 25th homer and Shannon Stewart hit a three-run homer to back Escobar (6-8), who pitched his third complete game of the season. He struck out six and walked three.

Detroit was shut out for the ninth time this season, the most in the major leagues.

Marlins 5, Brewers 4

MIAMI — Mark Kotsay hit a grand slam to help the Florida Marlins rally past the Milwaukee Brewers 5-4 Wednesday night.

Kotsay was 4-for-4 with three singles and his second career grand slam for the Marlins, who have won five of their last six.

Braden Looper (2-1) got two outs in the seventh for the win, and Antonio Alfonseca pitched out of a jam in the ninth for his 21st save in 24 opportunities.

Pirates 8, Expos 3

MONTREAL — John Vander Wal homered twice, including a grand slam in Pittsburgh's season-high seven-run third inning, as the Pirates beat the Montreal Expos 8-3 Wednesday night.

Francisco Cordova (5-5) allowed seven hits and two runs in six innings as the Pirates won their second straight following a four-game losing streak.

Chris Peters pitched the last three innings for his first save this season,

Brian Moehler (4-4) allowed five runs and nine hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Rockies 6, Reds 4

CINCINNATI — Neifi Perez and Darren Bragg singled home runs and Ken Griffey Jr.'s throwing error let in another as the Colorado Rockies rallied in the eighth inning for a 6-4 victory Wednesday over the slumping Cincinnati Reds.

Colorado got its eighth victory in 11 games by taking advantage of another wild performance by reliever Scott Williamson (2-4), who's failing to duplicate his NL rookie of the year season.

The Reds have lost 12 of 14, failing to win consecutive games since June 3-4. The tailspin has dropped them a distant second in the NL Central.

Red Sox 9, Yankees 7

BOSTON — Yankees relievers Jason Grimsley and Mike Stanton couldn't find the plate. Red Sox runners did it five times in the seventh.

After wasting a lead in the top half of the seventh inning, Boston rallied in the bottom half to beat New York 9-7 Wednesday night after sleeping through the first two games of the series.

New York's Clay Bellinger leaps over Boston's Jeff Frye after Frye was beaten to first base Wednesday.

— and a sacrifice fly by Paul O'Neill.

Phillies 10, Mets 5

NEW YORK — Pat Burrell hit his first career grand slam, his second key ninth-inning homer off Armando Benitez in as many nights, to lead the Philadelphia Phillies to a 10-5 win over the New York Mets on Wednesday.

Burrell, who hit a game-tying homer off Benitez on Tuesday when Philadelphia won 3-2 in 10 innings, also homered in the sixth inning for the rookie's first career multihomer game.

The last-place Phillies have won seven of eight against the Mets, dating to last season. They have also won five of six during the past week against New York and Atlanta, the top two teams in the NL East.

Giants 4, Cardinals 1

ST. LOUIS — Kirk Rueter outdueled Garrett Stephenson, and Doug Mirabeli's home run snapped an eighth-inning tie as the San Francisco Giants beat the St. Louis Cardinals 4-1 Wednesday night.

Rueter (5-4), from nearby Hoyleton, Ill., raised his record at Busch Stadium to 5-0 with a 2.06 ERA in seven career starts. He worked seven innings, allowing a run on four hits with five strikeouts and three walks.

Dodgers 7, Astros 6

HOUSTON — Gary Sheffield hit two homers, including a tiebreaking solo shot in the eighth inning that lifted the Los Angeles Dodgers over Houston.

Sheffield, who went 4-for-5, had his third multihomer game of the season and 18th of his career. He has 23 homers, third in the NL behind Barry Bonds (26) and Mark McGwire (25).

Jose Cabrera (0-2) gave up Sheffield's game-winner just hours after arriving from Triple-A New Orleans.

Judge dismisses lawsuit by secretly taped athletes

Wrestlers, who were secretly videotaped, lose a lawsuit against Internet service providers.

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal judge Wednesday dismissed a lawsuit against two Internet service providers by a group of athletes who claim they were secretly videotaped in locker rooms, with the tapes later sold through several Internet sites.

U.S. District Judge Charles P. Kocoras ruled that GTE Corp., GTE Internetworking and PSINET Inc. were immune from a lawsuit under the Communications Decency Act of 1996. The law relieves Internet service providers of any liability for the words or actions of their customers.

The lawsuit remains in effect against operators of the Web sites that offered the videotapes for sale.

Laurin Mills, an attorney for Ashburn, Va.-based PSINET Inc., said he and his clients were gratified by the judge's decision.

"We are happy we got a judge who understands the Internet," he said.

Telephone calls to the offices of Louis Goldstein, one of the attorneys representing the athletes in the lawsuit, for comment on the judge's decision were not immediately returned.

The videotapes, with names such as "Straight Off the Mat" and "Voyeur Time," came to light last year. The hidden-camera videotapes reportedly included footage taken during a 1995 wrestling tournament at Northwestern University.

Hidden-camera videos are also known to have been made at Illinois State, Eastern Illinois and the University of Pennsylvania.

The lawsuit alleged invasion of privacy, unlawful use of the plaintiffs' images for monetary gain, and mail and wire fraud under the federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act.

The plaintiffs, who have been granted anonymity by the court, are described in the lawsuit as 28 "John Does" and "unknown Illinois State University football players."

The lawsuit says they are past or present athletes at Northwestern, Illinois, Indiana State, Eastern Illinois, Penn., Iowa State and Michigan State.

The lawsuit names distributors Franco Productions, Rodco, Hidvidco, Hidvidco-Atlas, Video release, AMO Video, Logan Gaines Entertainment, D.I.Y./Triangle Video, Cal Video and TVRP; and Dan Franco, George Jachem, Logan Gaines, Alan Gould, Brad Theissen and Kevin Gleason.

Two teammates bring contrasting styles

REINER AND WORLEY

Worley is more of a perimeter-type player, while Reiner likes to make his presence felt in the middle. Reiner rebounds and plays with a scrappy style. Worley, in contrast, plays with a swinging swagger.

"He's a physical perimeter player, and we're really going to need that next year," Reiner said. "I like to be inside banging around in the middle."

Worley agrees. "He's more inside; I'm more of an outside slash-type player." In last week's game against Fitzpatrick's, Reiner led the team with eight rebounds while Worley scored 22 points.

Another difference between the two is that, unlike Worley, Reiner is not from Iowa City, or even Iowa for that matter, and has to deal with adjusting to the new town and new team.

He says all is well so far.

"I love it," Reiner said of Iowa City, a town he's only been living in for a few weeks. "It's all that I thought it would be and more."

About the team? He says they get along great.

"Everybody on the team is cool with everybody," Reiner said. "There's no one prick on the team; everybody is cool with each other."

They talk smack to each other occasionally — but that's what makes Prime Time games interesting.

Reiner said it's all for fun — none of the trash talking among Hawkeye players leaves the court. "It's just competitiveness — it builds good team chemistry," he said.

Who talks the most? "I'd have to say Glen," Reiner said, laughing. "He'll probably get mad at me for saying that, but he likes to do a little talking."

Kicker poured date-rape drug before being arrested

JANIKOWSKI

She said a field test found the liquid was GHB.

GHB, also known as "scoop," is colorless and odorless and sells for $5 to $10 a dose. A teaspoon of the compound, mixed with alcohol, can render a person unconscious within 20 minutes.

Also arrested and charged with possession of the drug were Janikowski's two companions, Jesse Harris and Jay Hoffman, both Florida State students, Riley said.

In the earlier case, police accused Janikowski of offering an officer $300 to release his roommate after an argument with a bouncer who wouldn't let the roommate into a nightclub.

Janikowski's lawyer argued successfully that his client simply thought he could pay the fine on the spot. It took less than an hour for the jury to find him not guilty.

(in) Beirut next to some kid with purple hair, next to some queer with AIDS, right next to some dude who got out of jail for the fourth time, right next to some 20-year-old mom with four kids. It's depressing."

What else bothered Rocker about the Big Apple? "The foreigners," he said. "You can walk an entire block in Times Square and not hear anybody speaking English. ... How the hell did they get into this country?" In the case of Syed Munawar from Bangladesh, he got a visa to study microbiology at Rutgers University. Munawar, not a big baseball fan, needed a briefing on the whole Rocker story before offering his take.

"If he's riding the 7 train, I think it means that he has realized what he has done wrong," Munawar said. "I'd welcome him because you shouldn't return hate with hate. It's like biting the dog that bit you."

"It generates nothing."

Heavyweight Tyson arrives in Scotland with rumors abound

■ Former champ Mike Tyson prepares for a Saturday night fight against Lou Savarese.

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

GLASGOW, Scotland — Mike Tyson is in Scotland with the British Boxing Board of Control's blessing for his fight against Lou Savarese Saturday night.

The former heavyweight champion also arrived Wednesday night with what seems to be a constant companion — rumors.

The juiciest rumor was that he had broken fight promoter Frank Warren's jaw a couple of days ago. Kevin Francis, the boxing writer for the Daily Star, said he telephoned Warren at his London home Tuesday night to check and that Warren laughed and said, "It's total rubbish."

There is ill feeling, however, between Tyson and Warren, who promoted Tyson's second-round stoppage of Julius Francis last Jan. 29 at Manchester, England.

At the time, Tyson bought a diamond watch and bracelet for more than $1 million. He still reportedly owes $500,000 and thinks Warren should pay. Warren thinks differently.

Tyson arrived at the Hilton Hotel at 8:55 p.m. local time after a flight from London.

Approximately 100 people, many of them newspaper photographers and television cameramen, were outside when Tyson's limousine pulled up. About 700 people had greeted Tyson outside his Manchester hotel, but that hotel was more accessible because it fronted the street. There is a driveway up to the Hilton.

Perhaps another 50 onlookers were in the lobby as Tyson made his way to the elevator. Several took pictures, and he stopped to pose with one man and to sign some autographs. He was heard to say "Thank you," before disappearing into the elevator.

Several hours before Tyson's arrival, the board of control announced it had granted Tyson a license to fight, subject to the results of a pre-fight physical.

The board had expressed concern about Tyson's use of an anti-depressant. Tyson, however, was using the drug even before he stopped Francis. He stops using the drug before he fights.

"Mike Tyson has had to comply with the same requirements as every other overseas boxer," said Simon Block, the board's general secretary. "His case was very high profile, and there were some specific reports which need to be addressed, but we're satisfied."

Tyson's second trip to Britain has been much less hectic than when he fought in January. There again have been protests from women's groups, but none outside the hotel Wednesday night, about the government allowing a convicted rapist into Britain again. But there has not been the media hysteria that surrounded the Francis fight.

The Scottish Daily Mail and Scottish Daily Express on Wednesday each had one story on Tyson and lots of stories and pictures about England's elimination from the European Soccer Championships on a 3-2 loss to Romania.

That competition and actions of British soccer hooligans in Belgium have dominated the news for a couple of weeks.

The story in the Daily Express concerned Tyson's state of mind in the wake of the shooting death of a close friend, Darryl Baum, last week in Brooklyn, N.Y.

Olympic Committee denies drug allegations

■ Former U.S. Olympic Committee drug chief claims many athletes got away with testing positive for drug use.

DENVER — Facing a lawsuit from its former drug chief, the U.S. Olympic Committee on Wednesday denied a claim that half of all American athletes who tested positive for banned substances went unpunished in recent years.

Dr. Wade Exum, who resigned as the USOC's director of drug-control administration earlier this month, plans to pursue the accusation in a federal lawsuit expected to be filed next month, his lawyer, John Pineau, said.

"We find it incredible that the individual charged with the direction and the success of our own drug program now is criticizing it and challenging its effectiveness," USOC spokesman Mike Moran said. "He's going to have to back up those allegations with facts, and we expect to be able to effectively deal with those allegations."

Exum, one of the Olympic committee's highest-ranking black staff members, resigned on June 5 after nine years with USOC, saying he had become a "racial token" subjected to a hostile and intolerable working environment.

His resignation letter also said the USOC encouraged the doping of athletes without regard to their health. The accusations intensified Tuesday when he and his lawyers issued a news release saying: "In recent years, absolutely no sanction has been imposed on approximately 50 percent of all the American athletes who have tested positive for prohibited substances."

"What kind of enforcement is that?" Pineau asked.

Pineau declined to cite specific names or examples of athletes who tested positive but said he would be able to provide evidence to support Exum's claim.

"I don't think they're going to be in for an awakening," Pineau said of USOC officials. "I think they're fully aware of all of this."

Exum's lawsuit also is expected to include claims that he was asked to take part in a project that involved testing prohibited substances on humans "using a protocol that amounted to racial profiling."

The USOC recently participated in a study to develop tests for the banned substance EPO and the Human Growth Hormone.

The multimillion-dollar study, funded by the International Olympic Committee and the Australian government, involved 74 athletes at the Olympic Training Center in Colorado Springs and volunteers at the U.S. Air Force Academy.

"We absolutely provided athletes which are a cross-section of United States Olympic team based on gender, race, age and place of residence for that study," Moran said. "To call it racial profiling is reckless and without merit."

It is still unknown what kind of damages Exum will ask for in his lawsuit.

■ The Texas inmate receives a lethal injection despite claims of an unfair trial.

By Andrew T. Dawson
The Daily Iowan

Following a three-hour delay as his defense team desperately worked through the legal system Thursday, searching for a way to spare his life, Gary Graham was executed in Huntsville, Texas, by lethal injection at 8:49 p.m.

In a six-minute final statement made at the Huntsville Prison, 39-year-old Graham reasserted his innocence,

WASHINGTON — Al Gore's political fund-raising problems were revived with a vengeance Thursday, as government officials confirmed that the most recent prosecutor to question Gore about his 1996 fund raising is recommending a special counsel investigate whether the vice president lied.

The recommendation came weeks ago from Robert Conrad, supervising attorney for the Justice Department's campaign finance task force. Conrad interviewed Gore on April 18 and questioned him about a Buddhist temple fund-raising ■ Growing Internet use is contributing to online addiction problems, experts say.

By Kirsten Veng-Pedersen
The Daily Iowan

Iowa treatment experts are attending a national conference in Boston that began Thursday to examine the expansion of gambling opportunities, including the proliferation of online casinos.

Because Internet gambling is both accessible and acceptable, it has the potential to increase addiction, said Bernard Horn, the political director of the National Coalition Against Gambling Expansion.

Approximately $651 million worth of online bets were placed during 1998, according to a May 1999 article which appeared in The Wager. With the number of online casinos rising, legislators are scrambling to push the Internet Gambling Prohibition Act of 1999 into law, which would prohibit Internet gambling. The act is under review by both Senate and House committees.
