Rivals to unveil map of the human genes

Many experts say the human genome project is just the beginning of a genetic revolution in medicine.

By Kirsten Veng-Pedersen The Daily Iowan

The human genome project, a 10-year publicly funded effort to develop a blueprint of the human being, and Celera Genomics, a private company, have essentially completed a map of the human genes and will jointly present a draft of it today. The government project and Celera are expected to unveil their results at the White House. Since 1990, the National Institutes of Health, along with the U.S. Department of Energy, have funded research into the mapping of the human genome, which has been carried out research institutions across the nation. Two years ago, Celera joined the race, building on government findings made available to the public. "Celera getting into the race sped up the way the NIH did its work," said Jeff Murray, a UI professor of pediatrics. Murray directed the Cooperative Human Linkage Center, a human-genome project based at the UI. Genome-project researchers were faced with the monumental task of determining the correct order and location of the 3 billion DNA base pairs within the body's 23 chromosomes. They also worked to identify 100,000 genes in human DNA. The UI genome center's contribution to the project was preliminary genetic mapping, which Murray compared to a road map. "We can tell you how to get to Newton or Grinnell," he said. "But they (the people constructing the current map) can tell you where everyone lives in Newton." Although today's genetic map will not change anything, Murray said, society will begin to see results from the genome project in a few years. "It will provide a powerful resource for understanding diseases," he said. "The sequence of the human-genome project will serve as the backbone for the development of a number of studies," said Bento Soares, a UI associate professor of pediatrics, physiology and biophysics, who also worked on the project. Knowledge of the sequence facilitates understanding of how genes work, he said. But in addition to its positive aspects, genetic knowledge brings with it potentially dangerous consequences, said Robert Weir, a UI professor of pediatrics and director of the program of biomedical ethics and medical humanities in the College of Medicine. "We have moved into a new era in human history," he said. Issues of privacy, informed consent

Monday Night Live

Former Saturday Night Live comedian Dennis Miller is heading to the booth to do Monday Night Football.

By Howard Fendrich Associated Press

NEW YORK - Are you ready for some wry observational comedy with your football? Dennis Miller - yes, THAT Dennis Miller - is bringing his ranting schtick to "Monday Night Football" as the wild card in ABC's bid to overhaul a program with declining ratings.

Miller and Hall of Fame quarterback Dan Fouts, a straight Xs-and-Os analyst, will join holdover play-by-play announcer Al Michaels in the broadcast booth this season. "Monday Night Football" was not as special as it used to be and that's why we've taken the dramatic steps we've taken," ABC Sports president Howard Katz said Thursday. "We wanted to remove some of the sameness. We wanted to reinvent a little bit."

Miller was a regular on NBC's "Saturday Night Live" and now has an HBO comedy show, while Fouts has shown a low-key style in his work for ABC on college football and for CBS on the NFL. Eric Dickerson, like Fouts a member of the Pro Football Hall of Fame, and ESPN's Melissa Stark, 26, join the show as sideline reporters, replacing Lesley Visser, 46.

Asked about the disparity in ages between Visser and Stark, the show's producer, Don Ohlmeyer, dismissed the question as a "non-issue."

Peace hopes brighten on Korea War anniversary

By Christopher Torchia Associated Press

On the 50th anniversary of the start of the Korean War, the prospects for peace seem better than ever before.

SEOUL, South Korea - Old soldiers in suits and crisp uniforms marked the 50th anniversary Sunday of the start of the Korean War, fanning themselves in the summer heat and wiping away tears as they remembered fallen comrades. But unlike previous commemorations, there was also joy: President Kim Dae-jung said democratic South Korea and communist North Korea are poised to repair the legacy of their Cold War conflict, which has endured for half a century.

Kim warned, however, that the specter of war was still vivid after his June 13-15 summit in Pyongyang with North Korean leader Kim Jong Il, during which they pledged to work toward reunification. Their border remains the most heavily armed in the world, a symbol of the depth of animosity between the two countries. "In Pyongyang, I stressed that if another war broke out, it would be different from the one we had," Kim said. "If that happened, the whole nation would be decimated by the use of extremely advanced weapons of

Iowa's fallen firefighters honored in local service

An estimated 1,000 people turned out Sunday to remember the Iowa firefighters who sacrificed their lives.

By Andrew T. Dawson The Daily Iowan

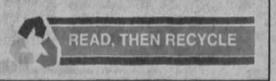

Of the 20,000 Iowa firefighters who dedicate themselves to saving lives each year, a few give the ultimate sacrifice - their own lives. In honor of these men and women, a record crowd of nearly 1,000 gathered for the sixth annual memorial service at the Iowa Firefighters Memorial in Coralville Sunday morning. Attendees of the service were greeted by fire trucks from Coralville and Iowa City parked on both sides of the road. Each truck had its 102-foot ladder raised and angled across the road with an American flag suspended between them. The sound of bagpipes and a single snare drum rang throughout the crowd, as color guards wearing pressed red uniforms raised the American flag. "Gone but never forgotten" was the sentiment repeated throughout the service, as family and friends of fallen firefighters wept. Last year, six Iowa firefighters were killed serving their communi-

Not so gay

NEW YORK (AP) — Controversial radio talk-show host Dr. Laura Schlessinger says efforts by gays and lesbians to have her upcoming television show axed has taken its toll.

Schlessinger

"I've cried more at times than I would like to admit," Schlessinger told Time. "It's been agonizing."

In the issue on newsstands today, Schlessinger expounded on her earlier controversial remarks concerning homosexuality.

"Not being able to relate normally to a member of the opposite sex is some kind of error," Schlessinger said in the interview. "We were biologically meant to give birth to more people."

She also said that despite protests over her Paramount-syndicated show, she has not been asked to tone down her approach. The show is scheduled to debut Sept. 11.

"They hired me because I'm outgoing and direct," she said.

McCourt's ashes a tourist trap

LIMERICK, Ireland (AP) — A replica of the slum house where writer Frank McCourt endured the miserable childhood recounted in the Pulitzer Prize-winner Angela's Ashes has been opened as a tourist attraction.

The squalid house is complete with flaking plaster, overflowing open drain and puddle on the kitchen floor. The exhibition also has the sound of running water and children playing to help recreate the atmosphere.

McCourt, who has long lived in the United States, infuriated many in his Irish hometown by depicting it as being full of cold, cramped houses in rat-filled streets. Many older residents said the extent of the poverty was exaggerated.

"The place is split down the middle between those that are fans of Angela's Ashes and those who hate it," said John King of Shannon Heritage.

"We took the attitude that no matter what image it presents, Limerick can still be a winner. Given the global success of the book and film it seems the most sensible way to get people to come here."

The perception that retirees spend most of their time sitting in rocking chairs or at bingo tables is getting a little old, according to some Iowa City residents.

Iowa City ranked sixth on a recent list published in the Chronicle of Higher Education of the top 10 college towns in the nation best-suited for the "new style" of retiring, in which retirees don't just relax — they take active roles in the community.

"The myth of retirement is sitting on a rocking chair in your old age, but people in Iowa City don't do that," said Kathleen Buckwalter, the director of the UI Center on Aging.

One of the biggest misconceptions about retirement is that a person's interests and activities change, said Richard MacNeil, a UI professor of sports, health, leisure and physical studies. Retirees in Iowa City probably

Director of university communications named

After serving as interim director for more than a year and a half, Steve Parrott has been officially named director of university communications and outreach, effective immediately.

Parrott was chosen from a field of applicants because of his media experience and knowledge, said UI President Mary Sue Coleman.

"I'm happy that people have the confidence in me to appoint me permanently to this position," Parrott said.

Parrott was named interim director in 1998 by Ann Rhodes, the UI vice president for university relations.

Parrott's appointment comes in the same week as Rhodes' resignation. Parrott said the timing is a coincidence and that he does not consider himself a candidate for Rhodes' former position.

As director, Parrott's responsibilities for the most part will remain the same as his duties as interim director. He will be in charge of University News Services, University Publications, Art Center Relations and other outreach programs.

Among the improvements Parrott hopes to make includes finding better ways to communicate with students.

"I'm hoping we can move ahead more boldly into the Internet and Web," he said.

I.C. not just for the young & the restless

Iowa City is the sixth-best location for active older people to live, according to a study.

The perception that retirees spend most of their time sitting in rocking chairs or at bingo tables is getting a little old, according to some Iowa City residents.

Iowa City ranked sixth on a recent list published in the Chronicle of Higher Education of the top 10 college towns in the nation best-suited for the "new style" of retiring, in which retirees don't just relax — they take active roles in the community.

"The myth of retirement is sitting on a rocking chair in your old age, but people in Iowa City don't do that," said Kathleen Buckwalter, the director of the UI Center on Aging.

One of the biggest misconceptions about retirement is that a person's interests and activities change, said Richard MacNeil, a UI professor of sports, health, leisure and physical studies. Retirees in Iowa City probably participate in many of the same activities as students, he said.

"If you don't like bingo when you're young, you won't like it when you retire, either," MacNeil said.

Each retiree's interests may differ, and, local resident Glorine Berry said, Iowa City offers more things to do than she has time to include.

Berry said one of her favorite activities is performing with the Iowa City/Johnson County Senior Center New Horizons Band, for which she was an original member when the group formed five years ago.

The only requirement for being in the band is that a person needs to be at least 55-years-old, said Margaret Richardson, an Iowa City resident who plays saxophone.

"Producing music makes me feel healthier," she said.

The New Horizons Band is directed by Don Coffman, a UI associate professor for curriculum and instruction in the School of Music. The band was patterned after a similar group at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N.Y., he said.

Old age is required for the New Horizons Band, but Iowa City retirees also take part in activities traditionally structured for younger persons.

"Many older people don't want to live in an age-segregated community," MacNeil said. "They like to have young people around."

A university atmosphere and the UI Hospitals and Clinics make Iowa City particularly attractive to retirees, Buckwalter said.

"Accessible and excellent quality health care are very important for older people," she said. "They also like the vibrancy of the university and the cultural opportunities it has to offer."

This attraction that the town has for older people comes as something of a surprise for some college students, among them UI senior Corey Hopkins.

"I always think of Florida and Arizona as more attractive (places) for old people because they're warmer," he said. "It doesn't make sense that someone would want to retire in Iowa, much less be around a bunch of college people."

Bill and Carly Ambrisco, a North Liberty couple who spent 45 years in Iowa City, said they spend much of their time traveling and exercising.

Among other places, they have traveled to Africa and China. And the pair keeps in shape by running, hiking and lifting weights.

"If your health is good, there's no reason you can't do a lot of the things the kids do," Carly Ambrisco said.

Trek fans beam despite lack of sunbeams

"Star Trek" fans feel the wrath of weather, not Khan, at the Riverside Trek Festival.

By Bridget Stratton
The Daily Iowan

Neither wind nor rain nor mud could keep most of the Star Trek aficionados and Riverside residents from their appointed festivities during the 16th annual Trek Fest on June 24.

But the adverse weather did cause the cancellation of some of the main events of Trek Fest, including the much-anticipated parade.

"We had a really beautiful float prepared for the parade," said Doris Ruth, a square dancer with the Ocean Waves of Iowa City. "It's just too bad we couldn't use it in the parade."

The Trek Fest has been held annually in Riverside since 1985, when its City Council voted unanimously to declare that the town is the future birthplace of USS Enterprise Capt. James T. Kirk, said Diane Poch, a member of the Riverside Area Community Club.

"It is disappointing that the rain stopped a lot of events," said Mike Harper, of Ainsworth, Iowa. "But it's still a good time. It's fun to see some of the costumes."

The event was organized by the community club, which reported selling as many T-shirts as it has during past, sunnier Trek Fests.

The downpour may have stopped some Trek fans from venturing to the future birthplace of their leader, but it did not stop many Riverside residents from celebrating their town's legacy.

"I came mostly for my kids," said Julie Cole, who lives near Riverside. "They have a lot of stuff for them to do here."

Cole's children as well as other young Trekkers had their faces painted like Klingons, and they competed in the kids' tractor pull.

The winners of the festival's talent show also received a chance to compete in the talent show at the State Fair, Poch said.

Iowa economy to see sunny skies

An economics council predicts that Iowa incomes will rise.

By Andrea Mason
The Daily Iowan

Contrary to earlier predictions of economic growth slowing down, the Iowa Economic Forecasting Council now sees Iowans' incomes growing by 4.9 percent for the rest of 2000. In 2001, the council predicts a 3 percent growth.

This year's predicted growth is above average, whereas the 3 percent growth predicted for 2001 is normal. Both figures have been corrected for inflation.

The UI Institute for Economic Research publishes the economic studies quarterly; in March, the outlook was not as good as it is now, said Beth Ingram, the council chairwoman and institute director.

She said the national and state income levels rose much faster in the first three months than had been expected.

The national economy has a large impact on Iowa's own economy, Ingram said. She also cited the recovery of many foreign economies from recessions for the predicted growth.

Some UI students have seen the benefits already. UI senior Marcelluse Agbo has seen many raises during his four years at a Cedar Rapids insurance company. In approximately two months, he is expecting another raise of roughly $1 to $1.50 an hour.

"(Money) is going to help, but the wage is not the only incentive — there are other benefits too," he said.

Others, such as UI junior Joy Misra, are not as impressed.

"The job market is increasing, but our culture is a consumer culture," she said. "It's designed to create more part-time, expendable jobs."

Iowa's farm economy did not get the same good news as did Iowa's general economy, Iowa State University economics Professor Dan Otto said Iowa farmers are still heavily dependent on government subsidies to help them get by.

Despite livestock prices being reasonable, Otto said, harvest-time income is still fairly low.

"Even though the overall agriculture numbers are looking pretty strong ... there is a heavy reliance on government programs," he said.

Otto said the farm economy is not a deciding factor in the Iowa Economic Forecasting Council's report because the general economy is moving on its own momentum.

According to the Report of the Governor's Task Force on the Agriculture Situation on March 6, real net farm income trends are expected to stay below the 10-year average for at least the next five years, unless influenced by weather-related disasters.

The same report said 30 to 50 percent of commercial farmers are continuing to lose money.

Navy resumes Puerto Rican shelling

The controversial exercises began anew Sunday on Vieques, which protesters vow to invade.

By Manuel Ernesto Rivera
Associated Press

VIEQUES, Puerto Rico — The thud of military shelling returned to Vieques Island Sunday as the U.S. Navy began training again — even as protesters vowed to invade the range to stop the largest exercise since a fatal accident prompted a yearlong occupation of its range.

At 2 p.m., ships began shooting inert shells at the range, Navy spokesman Lt. Jeff Gordon said. The exercises are scheduled to continue today and Tuesday, although they could continue through July 2 if necessary, he said.

Gordon said notices were posted the night of June 24 and broadcast to mariners by the U.S. Coast Guard Sunday morning. The advisories were seven pages long, and previous reports that bombing was to begin today could have been due to a misinterpretation of the lengthy notice, he said.

"The Navy did notify the public in Vieques in an appropriate manner," Gordon said.

Sandra Reyes, a 32-year-old painter who lives in sight of the range, said her children came running into the house screaming after the start of the exercises.

"My house is shaking, the doors shake, things on the table shake, my ear drums hurt," she said. "We all feel very frustrated, impotent, violated and harassed."

She said three or four shells were hitting the range about every 15 minutes.

The Navy detained 38 people Sunday who had entered the range the night before after three ships from the USS George Washington battle group appeared on the horizon. Eight people remained in custody Sunday because they refused to identify themselves, Navy spokesman Robert Nelson said.

Protesters said 41 people had slipped into the range on foot, indicating that three were still there. Activist Jose Rivera Santana said even more protesters had entered by horse, but he wouldn't say exactly how many.

"The Navy doesn't respect us, and we have to put ourselves at the frontline," said environmental activist Alberto de Jesus. De Jesus said he was considering entering the range by boat.

The vice president of Puerto Rico's Independence Party, Fernando Martin, said he and other party leaders would enter the range in the next two days. Party president and prominent Vieques activist Ruben Berrios will not join the group, though, because he will be attending a Washington summit Wednesday on Puerto Rico's status.

Vieques activist Carlos Ventura said he would meet with religious, union and political leaders to arrange a peaceful demonstration on the small island at an undetermined time and place.

"We're preparing ourselves for a massive demonstration, and we want you to give your support," Ventura told a crowd of protesters.

The April 1999 killing of a civilian guard on the range united Puerto Ricans as never before to demand the Navy end its six decade-long bombing of Vieques, a 21-mile-long island off the eastern coast of Puerto Rico. President Clinton has ordered the Navy to use only inert ordnance on the island.

CITY BRIEF

Director of university communications named

After serving as interim director for more than a year and a half, Steve Parrott has been officially named director of university communications and outreach, effective immediately.

Parrott was chosen from a field of applicants because of his media experience and knowledge, said UI President Mary Sue Coleman.

"I'm happy that people have the confidence in me to appoint me permanently to this position," Parrott said.

Parrott was named interim director in 1998 by Ann Rhodes, the UI vice president for university relations.

Parrott's appointment comes in the same week as Rhodes' resignation. Parrott said the timing is a coincidence and that he does not consider himself a candidate for Rhodes' former position.

As director, Parrott's responsibilities for the most part will remain the same as his duties as interim director. He will be in charge of University News Services, University Publications, Art Center Relations and other outreach programs.

Among the improvements Parrott hopes to make includes finding better ways to communicate with students.

"I'm hoping we can move ahead more boldly into the Internet and Web," he said.

HAWK ABROAD

A series of commentaries penned by UI students spending their summers abroad.

Unearthing history

So what classes did you have last semester? Kelley asked me.

I said, "Well, I had a Holstein class. Did you ever have him?"

She took a sip of her beer blanche and said, "Of course. Who hasn't?"

Now that sounds like a very cliché, getting-to-know-you conversation that you would expect to overhear at the Union or Brothers. But we had that conversation in the Café New Mann the first night we arrived in Nijmegen, a small city about 50 kilometers outside of Amsterdam in the Netherlands. It was quite strange indeed to find ourselves discussing a Holstein course when we were both from the UI but had just met that morning half a world away from the cornfields of Iowa.

I was in Nijmegen this past month participating in an archeological dig, searching for Roman artifacts. Ulpia Noviomagus, the city's name roughly 2,000 years ago, was the farthest northern settlement of the Roman Empire for many years. Glenn Storey, a UI assistant professor of classics, has been organizing student participation in the archeological dig at Nijmegen for the past several years.

I knew nothing about archeology when I arrived, couldn't speak a word of Dutch, and I didn't know a single soul on that side of the Atlantic. But not to fret. Three other UI students arrived on the same day I did, everyone in Holland speaks English, and the Dutch love to teach new initiates the tricks of the archeological trade.

Stepping off my plane at its final destination of Amsterdam, I had been instructed to purchase a train ticket to the city of Nijmegen. One if by plane, two if by train ... Doesn't sound too complicated, right?

But Storey's instructions for me after my train arrived in Nijmegen were potentially an element in the next Mission Impossible flick. I was supposed to phone a man named Harry, and tell him I was an American who had just arrived at the train station.

"Harry will take care of you from there," Storey had said cryptically before I had left the cornfields of Iowa, whose scent of manure seemed at that lonely moment in the train station strangely sweet to me.

Dropping a few Guilder coins into the pay phone, I dialed Harry's number. A piercing European beeping instead of the more familiar American "ringing" sounded in my ears.

A voice picked up and started prattling in Dutch. When it was quite through, I said, "Um ... hello, yes, is Harry there?"

"No, Harry's at home, not the office."

"Well, I'm an American, and I just arrived in Nijmegen."

"Yes, we have been expecting you. Stay where you are. We'll arrange to have you picked up."

"How will I know you?" I asked.

"It's a green car. But we'll know you."

Ende Gespreek, the telephone's display prompted, Dutch for, "End of call."

Two men named Rob and Kees came to pick me up in the green car, I slapped my bags into the trunk, and they told me to climb in the back seat.

We drove to the archeology lab, and I was told that three other Americans were expected to arrive later that day.

When Kelley, Meg and Shady arrived in a few hours (all UI undergraduates), we drove to the house we would be living in. The "villa" as the Dutch called it, with only one flushable toilet out of three, only trace residues of hot water and a sheen of dried mud completely covering the hard-wood floors, was more appropriately called a farmhouse or maybe that without the "house" prefix. Storey hadn't warned us about this, and the four of us were becoming a bit concerned.

That evening, Kelley, Meg, Shady and I headed into town where we found the quaint Café New Mann. We realized we were all in the exact same boat during the course of our conversation about J. Holstein. Our disorientation of trying to adapt to the first day of this new Nijmegen lifestyle — not to mention our initial panic over the dilapidation of our farmhouse — began slowly to dissipate as we got to know each other over a few Heinekens.

Within the first week of life in Nijmegen, all of my preconceptions about this summer's adventure would be annihilated. Meeting a whole slew of Dutch archeologists and learning about their unique culture and ideals would quickly be overshadowed by becoming fast friends with the fellow UI students I was living with. And digging in heavy clay and looking for Roman artifacts would take a back seat to the weekend excursions around Europe we would soon be taking together.

Laying bare the unsavory truth behind Naked Pictures of My Ex's

Earlier this year, The New Yorker ran a preview of a book by photographer Mark Helfrich called Naked Pictures of My Ex-Girlfriends: Romance in the '70s. I am not in the custom of reading about art books, buying art books, or even perusing art books at Prairie Lights; still, this blurb in a 100-page magazine caught my attention.

The title alone astounded me. Similar to the writer in The New Yorker, I remarked out loud to myself, "How many women did this guy sleep with?" "How did he get all of them to let him take their photographs?" "How did he ever get the consent to print these pictures two decades later?" "What if Wilt Chamberlain had taken pictures as well — would he publish an encyclopedia set?"

Besides the social implications of such a book, I was thinking about the artistic integrity of Helfrich. Never in my life could I think of publishing a book that contained pictures so intimate to me. One would imagine that these photos would have been taken in a moment of great passion and lust, inevitably as part of a foreplay scenario. I thought of what it would be like to see myself in the full monty two decades from now in some ex's book of photography. And then I tried to figure out why my ex would keep these photos for some 20 years, let alone try to make them into a work of art to capture a moment in social history.

The New Yorker was amazed that these lovers of the past had all consented to gracing the pages of this man's artistic tribute to a decade. I understand the writer's amazement, though I can't imagine that people would want to exploit themselves and those he shared a bed sheet with for the sake of art. I know the argument concerning the prostitution of the artist, becoming one's own pimp to sell a piece of pottery. But I am still astounded that anyone would consider publishing such a work on such a grand scale.

Publish he did, though, and just as book sales started to dwindle, a new fact is coming out about this series of photos. They are fake.

That's right, these are not real pictures of his girlfriends. In fact, they are mostly pictures of models that Helfrich has shot in studio sessions in the past couple of years. The New Yorker responded to this by asking how someone could publish a book with such a theme if the subject matter contained within was more or less fictional. One of the models told The

New Yorker that Helfrich actually seemed pretty creepy, like the kind of guy who would have struggled to date anyone in the '70s.

I think this showed the true purpose of Helfrich. There is no question in my mind, now, that someone who would be willing to try to market supposed photos of his ex-lovers is not an artist. Instead, I think the more appropriate name for Helfrich is salesman. He wanted to make a buck off something most people would find too intimate to reveal, and in the end is making his own artistic reputation as tacky as the remnants of a disco diva's closet.

STEPHEN BALSLEY

I can't imagine that people would want to exploit themselves and those he shared a bed sheet with for the sake of art. I know the argument concerning the prostitution of the artist, becoming one's own pimp to sell a piece of pottery. LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Sen. Grassley's bankruptcy vote was a clear promotion of lending-industry interests

The June 13 Des Moines Register ran a couple of editorials regarding the bankruptcy-reform act promoted by Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, and opposed by Sen. Paul Wellstone, D-Minn. But Grassley failed to mention a couple of facts, which appeared in the May 15 issue of Time: (1) Grassley is the recipient of more than $100,000 from the lending industry in 1997. (2) Grassley's claim that "the invisible tax on American consumers costs a family of four about $400 a year" cannot be true. As documented by Time, "there are no statistics on the types of debt written off or the amount." Grassley's statement therefore must be viewed as that of a shill speaking words supplied by the lending industry.

Wellstone's statement, on the other hand, failed to mention that he (Wellstone) proposed that lenders charging more than a 100 percent annual interest be barred from collecting claims in bankruptcy court. This proposal was soundly defeated by the paid shills of the lending industry. In fact, 100 percent is bargain basement. There are annual rates being imposed by the lending industry that are as high as 1,000 percent.

Also not mentioned by either, but detailed in the Time article, was that the lending industry spent $55 million lobbying for the new law, and that this law will effectively place in a "Debtor's Prison" a group of people caught in a financial bind not their fault, with loss of homes, cars and future income derived from retirement funds, and finally, of dignity in their lives.

Down-home Iowans have a name for money given to a legislator to get legislation passed. The name is "bribe." Sophisticated Washingtonians, however, call it "campaign contribution" and make it a legal bribe. The bottom line is that without campaign-finance reform, corporate money will dictate and, e.g. in the case of the catastrophic Freedom to Farm Act (written by attorneys from Cargill), write laws of our land that are not in the public interest and in short destructive of a democratic form of government. Why not make support of effective campaign-finance reform a condition for electability of our state and national officials?

A Woolf in sheep's clothing

THEATER REVIEW

There is no joy in New Carthage. At least not on this night, as the lives of George, Martha, Nick and Honey, the dramatic terrain that is Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?, decay right before our eyes. A torrential downpour of booze and biting language erodes the characters' false pretenses, forced tranquility and invented reality, leaving the landscape wide open and vulnerable.

The premiere production of Iowa Summer Repertory 2000's "Making Waves: An Edward Albee Festival," Woolf explores a night in the tormented lives of George and Martha, a couple whose marriage is essentially one well-rehearsed, unending dispute. Drawn into their dysfunction are Nick and Honey, the new couple at the university where George is an associate professor of history and Martha's father is president.

What begins as a late-night gathering for drinks and conversation veers sharply into uncomfortable territory as George and Martha stage a revival of their epic marital struggle with Nick and Honey as their audience. And when George and Martha call for audience participation, the addition of Nick and Honey into the fray is enough to strip each character's phony exterior, leaving the audience, by night's end, with a quartet who must come to terms with their unfulfilled dreams. It is the difficult task of the Summer Rep cast to guide us through these transformations. All four actors initially forge compelling, impressive characters, but contrary to the demands of the play, their performances peak within the first half of the production and, for the most part, never evolve.

Playing Martha, Angela Jane Ford struts, sneers and cackles her way around the stage, engaging in two favorite pastimes: drinking gin and brow-beating her apathetic husband. Her acerbic, unpolished personality is summed up perfectly when she spits her drunken musings on some "Bette Davis epic" through a mouthful of finger food and ice.

But jump to Act Three and, though Albee's writing tries to persuade us otherwise, we are still seeing the same woman. Martha's reminiscences of her son are meant to be beautiful and touching, but Ford's wide-eyed, spacey expression is still too much the detached, troubled wife and not enough the honest, loving mother.

Lee Simon and Jennifer E. Rives similarly struggle to move their performances from caricature to character. Rives' Honey is undeniably hilarious, with her prudish innocence and nasally laugh accompanying every sentence she utters. However, she leans too much on this one gimmick, and it distracts us from the core of Honey's character, a woman both fascinated and frightened by motherhood.

Robert Fiedler/The Daily Iowan

Simon appropriately shows the menacing cracks in Nick's false modesty, but never fully abandons the golden-boy routine to lay bare Nick's career-conscious selfishness.

Richard McWilliams' George is the most fully realized character of the bunch. The marvel of his performance is that he achieves a complete transformation from lackey to authority figure through the tiniest of devices: the intensity of his eyes. As the play progresses, their lazy, tired glaze sharpens, brightens and focuses and suddenly, we are convinced.

In Summer Rep's Woolf, small gestures are the difference between immersion and distraction. A loving gaze, a little less laughter or a touch of the sinister could complete the transformations that Albee lays out so painstakingly on the page. However, as it stands now, Woolf, like the characters it presents, is frustratingly distant from what it wishes to be.

Carrey's Irene not singing goodnight

Jim Carrey times two boosts Me, Myself & Irene to box-office win.

By David Germain
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Two Jim Carreys for the price of one proved irresistible for moviegoers. Me, Myself & Irene, starring Carrey as a cop whose dual personalities fall for the same woman, debuted as the top weekend film with $24.2 million, according to studio estimates Sunday.

Chicken Run, featuring the voice of Mel Gibson in an animated adventure of hens on the lam from their poultry farm, opened in second place with $17.5 million.

With no other new movies in wide release, the overall box office slumped for the third straight weekend compared with last year. The top 12 movies grossed $101.4 million, down 20 percent from the same weekend a year ago.

Studios expect things to heat up next weekend and into the Fourth of July as three big movies open. Gibson's Revolutionary War flick The Patriot will open Wednesday, followed by George Clooney in The Perfect Storm and Robert De Niro in The Adventures of Rocky and Bullwinkle Friday.

"The box office hasn't had a stellar blockbuster release in the past few weeks, but the stage is set for a really big weekend this coming week," said Robert Bucksbaum of Reel Source, which tracks movie ticket sales.

Me, Myself & Irene marked Carrey's return to gross-out comedy as he reunited with Dumb & Dumber creators Peter and Bobby Farrelly. Carrey plays a mild-mannered Rhode Island policeman whose obnoxious alter-ego gets loose while escorting a suspect (Renee Zellweger) to New York.

Reuniting Carrey and the Farrelly brothers "is the closest thing to a sure thing you can get," said Tom Sherak, head of distribution for 20th Century Fox, which released Me, Myself & Irene.

"Somebody said comedy is king, and they're right."

Estimated ticket sales for June 23 through Sunday at North American theaters, according to Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc.

1. Me, Myself & Irene, $24.2 million.
2. Chicken Run, $17.5 million.
3. Shaft, $13.3 million.
4. Gone in 60 Seconds, $9.5 million.
5. Big Momma's House, $8.7 million.
6. Mission: Impossible 2, $8 million.
7. Gladiator, $4 million.
8. Titan A.E., $3.7 million.
9. Dinosaur, $3.5 million.
10. Boys and Girls, $3.1 million.

Dixie Chick gets hitched

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Dixie Chicks lead singer Natalie Maines tied the knot over the weekend after her group performed in Las Vegas.

Maines, 25, stole away to a Little White Wedding Chapel on June 24 to marry actor Adrian Pasdar, said group spokeswoman Kathy Allmand.

The Dixie Chicks — Maines, Emily Erwin and Martie Seidel — have sold more than 15 million CDs, and the three women are currently on their first headlining tour. Their hits include "Ready to Run" and "Goodbye Earl."

Kickin' it in Iowa City

Fiction writer Steven Rinohart, an alumnus of the UI Writers' Workshop, will read from Kick in the Head, his debut short-story collection, at 8 p.m. today at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St. The free reading is part of the "Live From Prairie Lights" broadcast series originating on UI radio station WSUI, 910 AM.

"Rinohart's debut collection of stories is a raw look at men on the fringes who, despite a general inability to connect with their fellow humans on any real emotional level, are in their own way, intensely feeling and honest people," Larry Weissman wrote. "Bizarre, and just a little bit creepy, the stories in Kick in the Head mark the debut of a wonderfully gifted writer."

Rinohart, who has won a Michener Fellowship at the UI and a National Endowment for the Arts Fellowship, has had stories published in a variety of magazines, including Harper's, GO,

Promoter, not thrilled, sues Michael Jackson

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — Michael Jackson's long-time promoter is suing the singer for $21 million, saying he backed out of a plan to perform New Year's Eve concerts on both sides of the international date line.

German-based promoter Marcel Avram filed suit on June 23, claiming that Jackson agreed to four performances, including two Dec. 31 in Honolulu and Sydney, Australia.

Jackson performed at the first two concerts, but in October pulled out of the New Year's Eve shows. When Jackson dropped out, Avram said, he "was left to explain Michael Jackson's erratic behavior — and to pay all of his bills."

A Jackson representative could not immediately be reached for comment.

Cool Opry-ator

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country singer Pam Tillis said the invitation she got on June 24 fulfilled a lifelong dream.

While performing on the Grand Ole

Opry radio show, singer Little Jimmy Dickens asked the singer of such hits as "Maybe it Was Memphis" if she would join the cast of the 75-year-old show.

"Let me think about it. Yes!" Tillis said. "This is a special night. This is a lifelong dream to join. I want to send thanks to Dad and God."

Tillis is the daughter of country star Mel Tillis. She will be inducted into the cast on Aug. 26.

The Grand Ole Opry is the longest continuously running radio show in the country. It has not missed a weekly broadcast since 1925. It airs on WSM-AM in Nashville.

Hamming it up = disaster practice

Amateur radio club members made contacts as far away as Alaska and the Virgin Islands over the weekend.

By Beth Conklin
The Daily Iowan

For 24 hours this weekend, members of the Iowa City Amateur Radio Club worked to set up contacts throughout the country as part of a national competition.

The contest started at 1 p.m. on June 24 and ended at 1 p.m. Sunday. The purpose of the competition was for each amateur radio group to make as many contacts as possible under conditions meant to simulate those of severe weather, said Jonathan Poulton, a member of the radio club and a UI biology professor.

While official scores won't be available until November, club member Richard Bingham said, the members performed better this year than in the past 10 years and are expected to rank well.

The club made 1,200 contacts to a variety of locations, including the Virgin Islands, Alaska, Maine and California, he said.

"I think we did exceptionally well. We nearly doubled the score from last year," Bingham said.

Although it wouldn't be necessary to contact many of the 1,200 contacts made after a real disaster, the competition is a good chance for club members to practice and have fun with their amateur radio skills.

The local radio club has approximately 75 members — some of whom spent the entire 24 hours at the field site, located at the East Overlook Day Use Area at the Coralville Reservoir, Poulton said.

Because severe storms can knock out phones and electricity, club members set up antennas and generators and used solar and battery power. In a real crisis, their services would help people contact emergency services.

The field day allowed the community to see the fun and serious sides of amateur radio, Poulton said.

"When there are disasters, the amateur radio groups help in communication. Today, we tested emergency preparedness," he said.

Club member Mark Atherton said the annual competition benefits both the community and the club.

"It prepares us for deployment of emergency communication and gives us the readiness and experience to set up communication in the event of emergency," he said.

The emergency services the club provides are also a way for amateurs to repay the community for letting them use the array of frequencies, Bingham said.

Soaring gas prices may fuel voter ire

WASHINGTON (AP) — High oil prices, reflected in heating bills last winter and now at gasoline pumps, suddenly are a major factor in the presidential campaign. But it is unclear which candidate might get burned — former oilman and industry benefactor Texas Gov. George W. Bush or Vice President Al Gore, whose administration is in control of energy policy.

If the price of a barrel of oil continues to top $30 into the fall, both may be vulnerable, especially in such battleground states as Illinois and Michigan, which could decide the election and where $2-a-gallon gasoline already is causing an uproar, political strategists said.

"It's political dynamite," says Patrick Quinn, a Democrat and former Illinois state treasurer.

And high prices could persist beyond the summer driving season, energy experts said.

Last days of town bring resignation, some sadness

CHURCHES FERRY, N.D. (AP) — As Paul Christenson tackles engine problems in his automotive repair shop, he ponders a bigger challenge — how to keep a rapidly shrinking community alive.

Within weeks, Christenson will be the mayor and fire chief of a town of seven, as the rest of his 100 neighbors have taken advantage of a voluntary federal buyout plan and moved to higher ground.

A wet cycle on the Northern Plains has caused nearby Devils Lake to rise nearly 25 feet since 1992. With no outlet in this flat country, the water has spread across tens of thousands of acres, the lake more than doubled in area.

Year by year, it swallows more land. Many residents have already left, leaving behind empty houses that soon will be flattened by wrecking balls or hauled to safer land.

"It's a nice town. Tough to see it go," Christenson said, standing on the gravel main street and surveying the nearly deserted community.

Despite dangers, southeastern Chinese look abroad for work

FUZHOU, China (AP) — For generations, the path for anyone with more ambition than money in China's southeast has been clear: Work abroad.

Earnings bought land, built houses, and started businesses at home. Even for those who stayed overseas, money sent back help to vault families up the social ladder.

The tradition is so ingrained that even today, when foreign investment has made the coastal provinces some of China's richest and expanded opportunities, tens of thousands of people still go abroad each year, convinced they can do better.

Palestinian state near, Arafat says

Putting pressure on Israel, the Palestinian leader says statehood is possible within weeks.

By Laura King Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Turning up the heat on Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak, Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat told thousands of cheering supporters in the West Bank Sunday that Palestinian statehood could be proclaimed within weeks.

that the timing of a statehood declaration was still being decided. In a show of defiance that was cheered wildly by the crowd, Arafat scoffed at an assertion earlier this month by Lt. Gen. Shaul Mofaz, Israel's army chief of staff, that Israel would use tanks and helicopter gunships if necessary to quell any outbreak of rioting in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

"We don't get threatened by tanks and planes — no one can threaten us," said the 70-year-old Palestinian leader, his voice strong although his hand holding the microphone trembled violently. "Whoever has forgotten, I want to remind him of ... seven years of Intifadeh (uprising), and I say we are willing to start again."

Arafat also reasserted Palestinian claims to a capital in Jerusalem, over which Israel insists it will retain sovereignty. "The state will be established with its capital, Jerusalem, and whoever does not like it can go and drink from the Dead Sea," he said, stabbing a finger for emphasis. "Palestine is ours, ours, ours!"

Arafat's comments drew quick criticism from Israeli Foreign Minister David Levy.

"A peace process can't exist with threats," he told reporters in Jerusalem. "If he chooses to go (declare statehood) ... in a unilateral way, then he directly allows Israel to choose the same method."

Israel has indicated in the past that if Arafat declares statehood unilaterally, it in turn will annex chunks of the West Bank.

Reno likely to reject Gore special counsel, ex-official says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Janet Reno is likely to reject a fourth recommendation for an outside investigation of Vice President Al Gore, the Justice Department official who first sought an independent counsel said Sunday.

"Different set of facts, different prosecutor, but I think it's going to be the same result," said the former campaign-finance task force chief, Charles LaBella, on NBC's "Meet the Press."

LaBella's successor, Robert Conrad, recommended that Reno appoint a special counsel to investigate whether Gore lied to Justice prosecutors in an April 18 interview about an event at a Buddhist temple in California during his 1996 campaign.

Gore made the interview transcript public on June 23 so that American can judge for themselves. "I've told the truth," he said.

Besides LaBella's request, Reno already has rejected appeals for independent investigators from FBI Director Louis Freeh and former Reno aide Robert Litt.

Former Gore aides appearing on Sunday talk shows argued that another Reno rejection would be the right decision. They pointed out that LaBella, Litt and other investigators have said they have seen nothing that would lead to a successful prosecution.

tion. Even Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., who on June 22 was the first to disclose Conrad's request, made the same observation.

"In fairness to the vice president, it should be emphasized that there's a big difference between the level of information to warrant a special counsel and what would be necessary to have a prosecution," Specter said on ABC's "This Week."

"But there are a great many unanswered questions. And I think the American people have a right to know."

At WTO, poor nations struggle to compete

Rich countries have large staffs, who use limos; Haiti has a one-man delegation, who takes the bus.

By Naomi Koppel Associated Press

GENEVA — Renald Clerisme is the first to admit he doesn't always understand what's going on at the World Trade Organization. How can he, when he can't be everywhere at once? Clerisme is the head of the Haiti delegation to the world's top rule-making body for trade. He's also the entire delegation.

Haiti, with 7 million people, is just one of many poor countries that lack sufficient representation in an organization whose decisions influence commerce, consumer prices and jobs around the world.

In contrast to rich and powerful nations whose WTO delegates take limousines to work and have staffs of two dozen or more, representatives from places such as Haiti are poorly equipped to fight for trade rights.

Clerisme works from an office above an appliance shop in a shabby quarter of Geneva, about a mile from WTO's lakeside headquarters.

The Haitian delegation doesn't have a car. So while European Union Ambassador Roderick Abbott and other diplomats ride in chauffeur-driven limousines to work, Clerisme takes the bus.

Clerisme scrambles to attend meetings because the WTO has more than 30 different committees, subcommittees and working groups on its schedule, covering subjects from textiles to patents to the environment. Several meetings may take place at once.

"I feel that I don't understand very fully what is going on. Sometimes they will deal with things I don't know anything about," Clerisme said.

and increasing commercialization are the keys to the future of genetics, he said.

"If very personal information gets into the wrong hands, that information could be used (by insurance companies and others) to discriminate against individuals and their family members," Weir said.

Legislators have attempted to address these concerns in Washington.

In February, President Clinton signed an executive order that prohibits federal departments and agencies from using genetic information in hiring or promotion.

To address health care concerns, the Genetic Information Health Insurance Nondiscrimination Act of 1999 was proposed. The act would prevent insurers and health plans from discriminating against people based on their genetic information. It is now being considered by a House of Representatives subcommittee.

The Iowa City Green Party bases its politics on what it considers to be key values, including ecological wisdom and global responsibility, grassroots democracy, community-based economics, social justice and resolving conflicts peacefully.

The local Green Party is working on raising funds for campaigns and trying to recruit Nader for an August visit.

"It is imperative to realize that Nader is a winner and not a spoiler," said Russell Lovetinsky, a candidate for House District 46 and the only Green Party candidate running in this November's state elections.

Lovetinsky said the Green Party has never had status as a formal party. Iowa City party members want the state to recognize its interests by placing Nader on November's ballot.

"We are petitioning to get him automatic ballot recognition," said Holly

Hart, the secretary of the Iowa City Green Party and the state contact for the Iowa Green Party. "Our organization forms a community agency, a real electoral vehicle to represent Green Party politics."

Hart said the party stands for clear values that are open and inclusive to all people's interests. Organic agriculture, sustainable energy sources and peace issues are central to the local Green Party presence, she said.

"Green Party values are 'majoritarian values,'" Nader said in his speech. "They respect all people, all strivings. They give greater rights to free speech for all people. And above all, is the ultimate value of universality."

Nader also expressed the need to "protect the voice of people to protect their own interests."

"The convention has been very inspirational to me," Lovetinsky said. "The Green Party brings in new voter interest. Democrats, independents, even Republicans are taking notice."

ties, including three in Keokuk, Iowa, who were trying to save children trapped in a house fire.

"We are here to cherish the memories of those we've lost," said Rep. Geri Huser, D-Altota. "We will remember their sacrifices."

The Keokuk firefighters' names will be added to a 30-foot granite wall listing the names of 944 firefighters who have either served for 10 years, been president of the Iowa Firemen's Association or died in service.

The official state memorial park also includes a bronze statue of a firefighter descending a ladder with a child in his arm.

"All Iowans ought to be proud of these men who have given their lives," said Letha Hein, an Iowa City resident whose husband, Robert Hein, served as a lieutenant for the Iowa City Fire Department for 21 years.

Robert Hein was severely injured in an explosion in 1969 at Mercy Hospital, 500 E. Market St. He never regained consciousness and died in 1971.

"We all read in the papers about firefighters who die, but it doesn't directly affect everybody," said Steve Falck, a volunteer firefighter from Stanley, Iowa. "It's very moving to come here and see the faces of all of their families."

mass destruction. We should never dream of unification by force or absorbing the other side."

He also ordered his armed forces, which are backed by 37,000 U.S. troops deployed in the South, to remain wary despite moves toward reconciliation with the North.

North Korea has maintained a perpetual war footing for years, even though it is so poor that it relies on outside food aid.

The main anniversary ceremony was held at the War Memorial Museum, where schoolgirls presented garlands to veterans, and military honor guards carried flags of the 21 countries that contributed to the U.S.-led U.N. force that fought North Korean and Chinese troops as well as Soviet air force planes.

"I am proud of what I did for the country, but I also feel sorry when I think about colleagues who died," said Lee Kyong-hyun, 73, a South Korean retired army sergeant. "My thanks also go to the United States and other Allied countries that came to our aid in great danger."

Bill Mosley, 68, of Britain, described Korea's deep poverty a half-century ago, sobbing as he recalled comrades who died during his tour of duty from May 1951 to March 1952.

"I still think of them, and it's a bit hard," said Mosley, who was among 1,000 foreign veterans at the event. Another 4,000 South Korean veterans also attended.

Last days of town bring resignation, some sadness

CHURCHS FERRY, N.D. (AP) — As Paul Christenson tackles engine problems in his automotive repair shop, he ponders a bigger challenge — how to keep a rapidly shrinking community alive.

Within weeks, Christenson will be the mayor and fire chief of a town of seven, as the rest of his 100 neighbors have taken advantage of a voluntary federal buyout plan and moved to higher ground.

A wet cycle on the Northern Plains has caused nearby Devils Lake to rise nearly 25 feet since 1992. With no outlet in this flat country, the water has spread across tens of thousands of acres, the lake more than doubled in area.

Year by year, it swallows more land. Many residents have already left, leaving behind empty houses that soon will be flattened by wrecking balls or hauled to safer land.

"It's a nice town. Tough to see it go," Christenson said, standing on the gravel main street and surveying the nearly deserted community.

Chicago wins its sixth of seven straight against the Yankees

White Sox 8, Yankees 7

CHICAGO — Magglio Ordonez homered and drove in four runs Sunday and the Chicago White Sox survived New York's six-run, ninth-inning rally to beat the Yankees 8-7.

Capturing the season series with the Yankees 8-4, the White Sox won six of the final seven meetings against the World Series champions, who have a tentative trade pending for Juan Gonzalez.

The White Sox took an 8-1 lead into the bottom of the ninth after starter Mike Sirota (7-6) had allowed just five hits through eight strong innings and retired the final 11 batters he faced.

Mariners 4, Orioles 2

SEATTLE — Tom Lampkin hit his first career grand slam as the Seattle Mariners rallied in the eighth inning to hand the Baltimore Orioles their ninth straight loss, 4-2 on Sunday.

The Mariners, who have six straight, swept the Orioles in a four-game series for the first time in their history. It was also Seattle's first four-game sweep at Safeco Field.

Baltimore's Sidney Ponson took a three-hitter and 2-0 lead into the eighth inning before faltering. He walked Stan Javier and Alex Rodriguez to open the inning and was replaced by Alan Mills.

Mike Timlin (2-3) came in with two outs and runners on first and second and blew his third save of the season. He hit Mike Cameron with his first pitch before Lampkin drilled a 2-1 pitch to right field to give Seattle the lead.

Blue Jays 6, Red Sox 5

TORONTO — Carlos Delgado hit a two-run homer off Pedro Martinez — the first homer off Martinez with a man on base in two seasons — and Tony Batista's RBI single in the 13th gave the Toronto Blue Jays a 6-5 win over Boston on Sunday.

The Red Sox are winless in Martinez's last three starts — his longest winless streak since losing three straight in September 1998.

The Blue Jays have won five straight games to move two games ahead of New York and are in front of Boston in the AL East.

Indians 2, Tigers 1

CLEVELAND — Enrique Wilson homered on the first pitch of the eighth inning Sunday, giving the Cleveland Indians a 2-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers, who still have Juan Gonzalez.

Gonzalez, who could soon be traded to the New York Yankees, didn't play after fouling a ball off his left ankle during the second game of Saturday's day-night doubleheader.

He received treatment for the injury before the game but was still hobbling around the Tigers' clubhouse.

After the Tigers had tied it at 1 in the top of the inning against Steve Karsay (1-4), Wilson drove a fastball from Matt Anderson (3-1) over the wall in right for his second homer.

Rangers 9, Devil Rays 5

ARLINGTON, Texas — Rafael Palmeiro's two-run double capped a six-run, sixth-inning that was kept alive by two Tampa Bay errors, helping the Texas Rangers beat the Devil Rays 9-5 on Sunday night.

Jose Guillen's grand slam in the top of the sixth put Tampa Bay ahead 5-1, but breakdowns by Albie Lopez (4-5) and some shoddy defense by the left side of the infield gave it all back — and then some.

Lopez allowed consecutive singles, then consecutive doubles to put Texas within 5-4. With a man at second and two out, Frank Catalanotto hit a high chopper that shortstop Felix Martinez bobbled behind the mound.

Giants 4, Astros 2

HOUSTON — Russ Ortiz struck out a career-high 12 and won for the first time since May 21, leading the San Francisco Giants over the Houston Astros 4-2 Sunday for a three-game sweep.

Marvin Benard went 4-for-5 and Felipe Crespo had three hits, including a two-run single in a four-run third inning. The Giants had 14 hits, one day after getting 22 in a 13-4 rout.

Houston, swept at home for the second time this season, turned six double plays, one short of the major league record.

Braves 5, Brewers 4

ATLANTA — John Rocker won for the first time since last Aug. 22 when the Atlanta Braves beat the Milwaukee Brewers 5-4 Sunday as Curtis Leskanic walked four batters in the ninth inning.

Rocker (1-0), who has struggled with his control all season, relieved with two outs in the eighth and pitched 1 1/2 innings, walking two and striking out two. He threw just 11 of 21 pitches for strikes.

The controversial reliever, sent to the minor leagues from June 5-14 because of his lack of control, has 33 walks in 22 1/3 innings this season, including eight in four innings since his recall from Triple-A Richmond.

Rocker, who pitched a scoreless ninth Friday for his 12th save, took over for Kevin Millwood, who tied a career-high with 13 strikeouts.

Marlins 8, Cubs 7

MIAMI — Cliff Floyd homered one out in the 10th inning as the Florida Marlins completed a three-game sweep with an 8-7 win over the Chicago Cubs on Sunday.

Floyd hit the first pitch from Felix Heredia (3-3) deep to right field for his 14th homer of the year. It was Florida's first three-game sweep of the Cubs since April 1-3, 1997.

Antonio Alfonseca (3-4) pitched a perfect 10th inning for the win as the Marlins (38-38) improved to .500.

Trailing 7-5, the Cubs tied the game in the eighth with help from a pair of errors by shortstop Alex Gonzalez, who entered the game that inning as a defensive replacement

Padres 5, Reds 4

CINCINNATI — Brian Tollberg held Cincinnati scoreless into the eighth and the San Diego Padres survived another Cincinnati rally against closer Trevor Hoffman before closing out a 5-4 victory Sunday over the slumping Reds.

Cincinnati lost for the 14th time in 18 games, leaving the Reds a distant second to St. Louis in the NL Central. The Reds play the Cardinals seven times in the next 11 days.

The Reds got seven hits off Tollberg (2-0), who struck out seven in 7 1/3 innings and left with a 5-0 lead and two on.

Expos 3, Phillies 1

MONTREAL — Vladimir Guerrero and Jose Vidro homered to back Mike Johnson's seven scoreless innings as the Montreal Expos avoided a three-game sweep Sunday with a 3-1 win over the Philadelphia Phillies.

Vidro's first-inning single off Paul Byrd (1-6) made him the first NL player with 100 hits this season. His 12th homer with one in third gave the Expos a 1-0 lead and tied his career-high for homers.

Guerrero, who went 2-for-3 with a walk to raise his average to .365, homered off reliever Jeff Brantley in the eighth for his 99th hit this season.

Mets 9, Pirates 0

NEW YORK — Mike Hampton scattered five hits for his first shutout with New York, winning for the first time in a month as the Mets beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 9-0 Sunday for a three-game sweep.

Melvin Mora had a career-high four hits in five at-bats with a homer, double and two singles.

Hampton (7-5), struck out a season-high nine and walked two.

New York outscored the Pirates 31-10 in the series.

After three Grand Slam titles and an Olympic gold, Lindsay Davenport gains loyal fans.

WIMBLEDON, England — It's a busy night at a neighborhood Indian restaurant, and waiter Sadek Salam says such celebrities as Andre Agassi, Martina Hingis and Lindsay Davenport are frequent customers during Wimbledon.

With a smile, Salam adds: "I hope Lindsay wins."

Long overlooked on the women's tour, Davenport has finally developed a fan following. All it took was three Grand Slam titles and an Olympic gold medal.

She still can't rival Anna Kournikova or the Williams sisters in publicity or popularity, but Davenport will attract plenty of attention as the defending champion when Wimbledon begins Monday.

And she knows it. "There are many different emotions compared with previous years," Davenport said.

Trevino wins Cadillac NFL Classic

CLIFTON, N.J. (AP) — Lee Trevino ended a 27-month victory drought by shooting a 3-under-par 69 to capture the Cadillac NFL Classic by two strokes in a tournament record-tying performance Sunday.

Trevino, who turned 60 in December, won impressively, easing in a downhill 5-foot putt for birdie to finish at 14-under-par 202, tying the tournament record set by Bob Murphy in 1996.

"I'm going to buy me a house down the street," Trevino quipped after posting his second win in this event, where he has never finished worse than ninth since 1993. He had 17 birdies and three bogeys all week.

It marked the 10th time on the Senior PGA Tour that a 60-year-old has won, with Trevino being the ninth player to accomplish the feat, and the second this year following George Archer. Jimmy Powell did it twice in the mid 1990s.

BY THE NUMBERS

210 — the number of thousands of dollars per second Mike Tyson earned in his 38-second knockout against Lou Savarese.

Davenport develops a Wimbledon following

After three Grand Slam titles and an Olympic gold, Lindsay Davenport gains loyal fans.

By Steven Wine
Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — It's a busy night at a neighborhood Indian restaurant, and waiter Sadek Salam says such celebrities as Andre Agassi, Martina Hingis and Lindsay Davenport are frequent customers during Wimbledon.

With a smile, Salam adds: "I hope Lindsay wins."

Long overlooked on the women's tour, Davenport has finally developed a fan following. All it took was three Grand Slam titles and an Olympic gold medal.

She still can't rival Anna Kournikova or the Williams sisters in publicity or popularity, but Davenport will attract plenty of attention as the defending champion when Wimbledon begins Monday.

And she knows it. "There are many different emotions compared with previous years," Davenport said.

"Wimbledon holds pretty special memories for me now, but at the same time, there's a lot of added pressure."

Four players have won the women's championship in the past four years. Davenport's foremost threats in her bid for consecutive titles include the top-seeded Hingis, French Open champion Mary Pierce and the Williams sisters, Venus and Serena.

Don't discount Kournikova, the favorite with the London tabloids. She's unseeded and has yet to win a tournament, but she reached the semifinals in 1997 at 16, and her game is well suited for grass.

The seeding system used at Wimbledon prompted Spaniards Alex Corretja and Albert Costa to pull out on Sunday. They are angry they weren't among the 16 seeded players, even though both are ranked in the top 16.

Wimbledon is the only Grand Slam event that doesn't follow the ATP rankings in determining seedings.

Juan Carlos Ferrero, another Spaniard in the top 16 who didn't get a seed, withdrew earlier with a reported back injury.

All England Club Chairman Tim Phillips, sympathetic with the Spaniards, said the club would waive any fines. "There are no further penalties apart from the fact this is a zero-pointer (tournament) for them," Phillips said.

No one argued that Pete Sampras didn't deserve to be seeded No. 1. He'll bid for his seventh Wimbledon title and a record 13th Grand Slam championship beginning today against Jiri Vanek.

Sampras cut short a practice session on June 23, when he felt a twinge in his troublesome back, raising doubts about whether it can hold up for two weeks in Wimbledon weather.

But he was back on the practice court Sunday, hit for an hour and said his back was ready for the tournament.

"It gets stiff," he said. "We've had a lot of cold, damp weather the past few days. . . . It's just a matter of doing my stretching and warming up to be 100 percent."

At 100 percent, Sampras would be tough to beat. He's 46-1 at the All England Club in the past seven years, a record Davenport can appreciate as well as anyone.

"What Pete Sampras has done is incredible," she said.

Trevino wins Cadillac NFL Classic

CLIFTON, N.J. (AP) — Lee Trevino ended a 27-month victory drought by shooting a 3-under-par 69 to capture the Cadillac NFL Classic by two strokes in a tournament record-tying performance Sunday.

Trevino, who turned 60 in December, won impressively, easing in a downhill 5-foot putt for birdie to finish at 14-under-par 202, tying the tournament record set by Bob Murphy in 1996.

"I'm going to buy me a house down the street," Trevino quipped after posting his second win in this event, where he has never finished worse than ninth since 1993. He had 17 birdies and three bogeys all week.

It marked the 10th time on the Senior PGA Tour that a 60-year-old has won, with Trevino being the ninth player to accomplish the feat, and the second this year following George Archer. Jimmy Powell did it twice in the mid 1990s.

Bowman returning to Red Wings

CALGARY, Alberta — Scotty Bowman, the winnest coach in NHL history, is returning for another season with the Detroit Red Wings.

Bowman, 66, had been mulling his future since the Red Wings' second-round playoff elimination by the Colorado Avalanche.

As the league's entry draft was ending Sunday, Detroit general manager Ken Holland said Bowman would be back under a one-year contract. Holland had told Bowman after the Colorado series he wanted him back.

"I wanted to feel in my heart that I could come back and, healthwise, I wanted to make sure I was up to the challenge again," Bowman said of the month it took him to decide to return for a 29th season as an NHL coach.

"I feel good I've lasted so long. You like to go as far as you can."

Coaching in five decades had been his goal, and next year he will accomplish it. Assistant Barry Smith also will return.

Dave Lewis, the other assistant, is waiting to leave from the expansion Columbus Blue Jackets on his application for the head coaching position. If he doesn't get it, he'll stay with Detroit.

Bowman, who coached the Red Wings to the Stanley Cup in 1997 and 1998, said the team needs changes now.

"When we won our championships, we were a lot stungier," he said.

Dutch, French gain Euro 2000 semis

BRUGES, Belgium — Patrick Kluivert scored a record four goals to lead the Netherlands into the semifinals of the European Championship.

Raul Gonzalez couldn't even manage a penalty kick, eliminating Spain in an agonizing loss to World Cup champion France. He covered his face with his shirt while leaving the field.

fast-break, transition basketball. But if Active Endeavors can cheat one or two players back near the half-court line on offense, Oliver will have to settle for a conventional game.

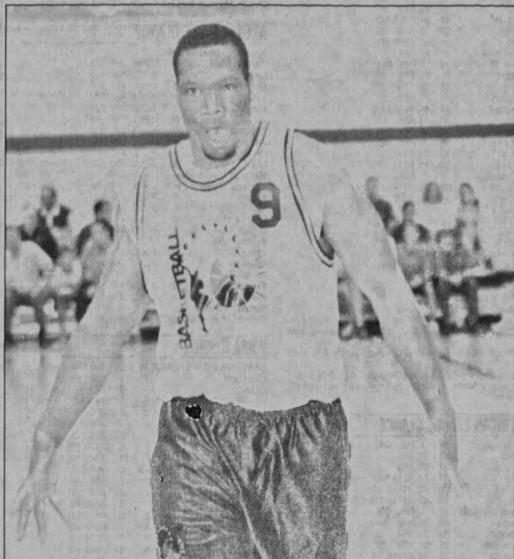

If a half-court game should occur, Oliver will have no problem finding options in the paint. Power forward Duez Henderson has been registering near double-double numbers every game, and ex-Hawkeye bigman Acie Earl has dominated younger and inexperienced centers with his intimidating 7-foot frame.

In other games, Fitzpatrick's (0-3) is hoping that Reggie Evans' young legs will be able to contain Nike-Merrill Lynch (1-2) center Brad Lohaus and lead his team to its first win. Evans shot 68 percent from the field last Thursday against Iowa City Ready Mix and finished with 27 points and 12 rebounds. Freshman Cortney Scott added 17.

Winless Highland Park Development (0-3) will count on strong guard play from Jason Price and Tobey Newson in tonight's clash against Iowa City Ready Mix (1-2). Ready Mix's Darryl Moore should again showcase a vast array of Jordan-esque moves. Moore led his team to its first victory last week while lighting up Fitzpatrick's depleted defense for 30 points, including six 3-pointers.

After coming off its first loss of the season against Active Endeavors on Thursday, Goodfellow Printing (2-1) will seek revenge in tonight's high-profile, individual matchup between Glen Worley and F.I.T. Zone's (3-0) Monte Jenkins. Goodfellow Printings' Worley and point guard Dusty Wadlington each had 27 points last week, while defensive general Jenkins continued to tyrannize his man during Thursday's impressive win over Nike-Merrill Lynch.

Tyson still may not be able to fight in Vegas to his hotel, and left Glasgow Sunday morning to fly to Phoenix.

While Tyson predicted he would do terrible things to Lewis, who fights Francois Botha July 15 at London, he said before leaving the ring, "I am not ready for Lennox Lewis. Of course, he wants to fight me right now. I am not ready yet. I need more training. I am rusty."

The site of Tyson's next fight is uncertain.

Frank Warren, who promoted Saturday night's fight and Tyson's second-round stoppage of Julius Francis on Jan. 29 at Manchester England, indicated he does not want to be involved with Tyson again.

Las Vegas is not a promising option, either, at least not right away. Marc Ratner, executive director of the Nevada State Athletic Commission, said it would be 30 days before commissioners could convene to consider a request to re-license Tyson.

The fighter's license to box in Las Vegas expired on last Dec. 31, and the commissioners warned Tyson he would have a difficult time being licensed again. They suggested that he fight elsewhere for a while to show that he can learn to obey the rules.

Ratner said Sunday from Las Vegas that he hadn't seen Tyson's fight against Savarese.

"We had fights here last night. All I know about it is what I read in the newspaper. We haven't even been contacted about a fight," he said. "But if we were, then everything that's happened since his last licensing could be brought up."

There were reports that Tyson allegedly attacked Warren in a dispute over who should pay for some jewelry Tyson purchased in London in January. Tyson denied the reports, while Warren would not comment. Warren, absent from Glasgow for most of the week, attended the fight, and there appeared to be a redness around his right eye.

Warren said 40,000 tickets were distributed for the fight, but that 20,000 were returned. There had been doubts the fight would happen right up to the day of the match.

There were questions about Tyson's mental and physical condition, and Tyson said he had trained only three weeks. His training had been interrupted for several days so he could attend the funeral of Darryl Baum, a friend who was murdered in Brooklyn, N.Y., two weeks ago.

Perhaps Tyson, who will turn 34 next Friday, was worried about his conditioning. So he jumped all over the 6-foot-5 Savarese and knocked down with a thunderous left hook to the side of the head.

Savarese, 241 1/2 pounds, struggled up at the count of five, obviously hurt. Tyson was on him in a flash and landed four or five shots to the head. Referee John Coyle then stepped in and halted the fight.

Tyson then moved around the referee and landed two more punches. Coyle fell as he was elbowed aside. He quickly got up and pushed Tyson away as cornermen rushed into the ring. The crowd boomed, not because of Tyson's actions but because the fight was over.

"He was terrifying," Larkin said. "It was terrifying display of power, a display of relentlessness."

The display was televised by Showtime on a delayed basis Saturday night in the United States.

Savarese had lost three of his six previous fights, but he still was expected to give Tyson a better fight than Francis had. He never had a chance to get started, and went to a hospital after the bout for treatment of a left ankle injury, probably sustained when he fell.

Garner has 'no idea' about further trade info

third base prospect Drew Henson and minor league pitcher Randy Keisler to Detroit for Gonzalez. However, they need Gonzalez's permission.

It was unclear if the original Sunday deadline to finalize the deal would be extended by the commissioner's office.

"What time is it?" Tigers manager Phil Garner asked before Sunday's game.

A moment later, Garner's office phone rang.

"Here it is," he said.

Garner had a brief discussion with Tigers general manager Randy Smith, but said there was no news.

"It might be kind of funny when people see he's not in the lineup," Garner said.

Garner didn't have any further information postgame.

"I have no idea," he said. "You guys I'm sure know more than me."

The Tigers and Indians are scheduled to complete their five-game series Monday night before Detroit returns home for a three-game series against the Yankees.

Gonzalez, who has the right to block a trade to the Yankees, had difficulty walking after Saturday's game when the Tigers rallied from a 7-0 deficit behind three homers from Bobby Higginson.

Garner said he has been pleased with how Gonzalez, a two-time AL MVP, has handled the pressures of the past few days since news of the possible blockbuster deal broke.

"I think he just wants to play ball," Garner said. "Juan sometimes wears his heart on his cuff, but I think he's doing pretty well with this."

Brands and McIlravy win trials, advance to Sydney

Former Hawkeye wrestlers Terry Brands and Lincoln McIlravy are heading to the Olympics for the first time.

By Jeremy Schnitker
 The Daily Iowan

The wait is over for Lincoln McIlravy and Terry Brands — they're finally Olympians.

After the 1996 trials sent them both home with disappointing losses, the two came back in 2000 with a vengeance.

One came out of retirement, one is peaking at the right time.

Brands, 32, who had been retired for a year, announced earlier this month he would come back for the trials.

In the finals at Dallas, he defeated Kerry Boumans of Colorado Springs, Col., 3-2 and 5-2, both in overtime.

McIlravy, 25, shut out former Iowa State national champion and current assistant coach Chris Bono, 4-0 and 2-0. They were the 16th and 17th consecutive wins for McIlravy against Bono.

The wins were great for Iowa wrestling, said Iowa coach Jim Zalesky, who was in Dallas.

"Any time you get to the top like that, it's emotional," he said. "The fight they put up for it was intense."

"The excitement for the Olympic trials reminds me of the excitement of the NCAA Championships."

Brands, who was a two-time NCAA champ at Iowa and is currently an assistant coach, hadn't wrestled in competition for nearly a year, but, Zalesky said, he looked like typical Terry Brands, if not better than ever.

"He wrestled as well as he was capable," Zalesky said. "I think after the '96 trials, he was a little worn down from all the training that he did. But he did it better this time. His body was a little more rested after taking that time off."

The news wasn't all good for the Iowa wrestlers down in Dallas.

Joe Williams, former three-time national champ at Iowa, was defeated June 23 and came back to place fifth.

Recker and Oliver face off

Two star guards, Dean Oliver and Luke Recker, will be playing against each other tonight.

By Ethen Lieser
 The Daily Iowan

The possible Iowa basketball starting backcourt tandem of Luke Recker and Dean Oliver will clash tonight as opponents, representing two of the hottest teams in Prime Time League.

On June 22, Active Endeavors (2-1) guard Luke Recker and power forward Donnie Dobbs dismantled the previously undefeated Goodfellow Printing (2-1) with their deadly shooting. Recker rained in 14 of 21 shots from the field for a team high 38 points. Dobbs came out like a hungry pit bull and chewed off 33 tough points.

The wild card in tonight's game will be the play of Active Endeavors' 3-point threat Kyle Galloway. Ever since his dynamic return last week, Galloway has shown the potential to carry the team at times. Galloway poured in 33 combined points last week, leading Active Endeavors to two straight wins and putting it just one game behind F.I.T. Zone and its opponent tonight, Goodfellow.

Undefeated and unfazed in their first three games, Goodfellow will counter Active Endeavors' trapping defense with point guard Dean Oliver. Oliver was magnificent from the free-throw line on Thursday, rattling in 10 of 13 shots for a total of 18 points.

In Goodfellow's first three wins, Oliver has successfully initiated

Gonzalez still a Tiger for now

Amidst trade rumors, Juan Gonzalez sat out Sunday due to an ankle injury.

By Tom Withers
 Associated Press

CLEVELAND — The Detroit Tigers are staying in town for another day, and Juan Gonzalez could be, too.

Gonzalez, who may soon be dealt to the New York Yankees, wasn't in the lineup and didn't play Sunday. But it had nothing to do with a trade.

Gonzalez fouled a ball off his left ankle during Saturday night's game and was still hobbling around the Tigers' clubhouse following Sunday's 2-1 loss to the Cleveland Indians.

"See you guys tomorrow," Gonzalez told reporters after dressing.

The Yankees, Tigers and Gonzalez's agent, Jim Bronner, were negotiating Sunday, trying to determine if they could finalize the deal, according to a baseball official familiar with talks who spoke on the condition he not be identified.

The Yankees also were still talking with the Chicago Cubs about a possible trade for Sammy Sosa, the official said. The Cubs, according to a Yankees official speaking on the condition of anonymity, gave the Yankees several combinations of players they would accept for Sosa, and there have been back-and-forth talks.

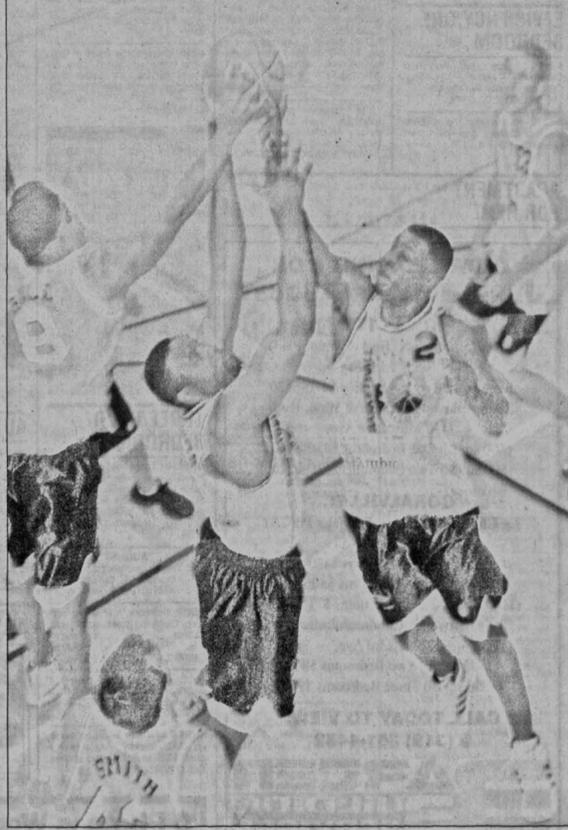

The Cubs appear to have become impressed with Alex Graman, a left-hander from Indiana State taken by the Yankees on the third round in 1999.

Gonzalez said he expected to hear from his agent later but had no idea if the talks had progressed.

"I don't know, I've been here," he said. "I don't know what's happening outside the ballpark."

New York and Detroit agreed Thursday to the tentative trade that would send outfielder Ricky Ledee, Red-hot Cards get rare sweep of L.A.

A single by Larry Sutton gave St. Louis a 2-1 win over the Dodgers.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Larry Sutton, recalled from the minor leagues earlier in the day, singled home the winning run in the ninth inning as the St. Louis Cardinals beat Los Angeles 2-1 Sunday for a three-game sweep of the Dodgers.

Sutton's hit glanced off the glove of second baseman Mark Grudzielanek and made him 4-for-9 as a pinch hitter with three RBIs.

Edgar Renteria walked with one out off Antonio Osuna (0-4) and advanced when Mike Matheny sacrificed. Renteria scored from second on Sutton's hit, giving the NL Central leaders their 11th victory in 13 games.

Sutton was optioned to Triple A-Memphis on June 24 but never got a chance to leave town. When Eduardo Perez injured his hamstring on his first day after being called up, general manager Walt Jocketty tracked down Sutton before he could drive back.

Tyson: bring on Lewis

After knocking out Lou Savarese in 38 seconds, Mike Tyson says he wants a piece of champion Lennox Lewis.

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
 Associated Press

GLASGOW, Scotland — Mike Tyson did not bite, nor did he punch after the bell.

Instead, he hit Lou Savarese twice after the referee had stopped what was the third-shortest fight of the former heavy-weight champion's career and seventh victory achieved in less than one minute.

Then he turned his sights — and rage — on Lennox Lewis.

After dispatching Savarese in 38 seconds on a cold, rainy night at Hampden Park, Tyson said that, should he fight the current heavy-weight champion, "I'll rip his heart out and feed it to him."

That's also against the Marquis of Queensberry rules.

"I am the most ruthless, brutal champion ever," Tyson said. "I am Sonny Liston and Jack Dempsey. There is no one who can match me."

A match with Lewis is Tyson's goal, and his harshest words were saved for the British champion.

"I want your heart," he said in comments aimed at Lewis. "I want to eat your children."

In fact, Tyson's next foe is uncertain, but there appears to be a short list of possibilities — one that does not include Lewis.

"I really haven't thought about it," Jay Larkin, who runs boxing for Showtime, said when asked who might be Tyson's next opponent, but he did mention Andrew Golota.

Golota twice was disqualified against Riddick Bowe for repeated low blows, and he bit Samson Pou'ha on the shoulder. Tyson, of course, was disqualified for biting Evander Holyfield's ears, and his fight against Orlin Norris was declared a no-contest when Norris couldn't continue after being knocked down after the bell ended the first round.

Two referees might be required for a Tyson-Golota match.

Another opponent being considered for Tyson is David Izon, who knocked out Savarese in the fifth round in 1997.

Tyson appeared at a post-fight news conference only because he went through the wrong door. He quickly turned around and returned

Iowa mulls dumping

If Iowa were to suspend the gas tax, it might lower prices by 19 cents per gallon.

By Erica Driskell
 The Daily Iowan

Iowans buying gas may see a drop in fuel prices soon, as Gov. Tom Vilsack considers suspending the state fuel taxes in order to lower prices at the pump.

Republican legislative members and Vilsack met Monday to discuss ways to lower gas prices but did not decide on anything specific. Vilsack and the legislators will meet again on July 5 to further discuss details of the temporary suspension of the state's gasoline tax.

Some have called for a two-month suspension of the gas tax, a move that would drain $65 million to $100 million from the state's road-use fund. The suspension of the gas tax would reduce gas prices by 19 to 22 cents per gallon, depending on the kind of fuel.

The state's road-use fund pays for highway maintenance and construction, said House Speaker
