Construction season slows down

- Deaths and accidents in work zones can be prevented by careful driving, officials say.

By Dave Driskell and John Bommarito
The Daily Iowan

Before they spend just those orange and black construction warning signs, Iowa's might want to think twice.

According to the Iowa Department of Transportation, there were 72 construction zone deaths in 1998, compared to 51 in 1997. That's an increase of nearly 40 percent over the previous year. If this trend continues, it's likely that the 2000 construction season could be the deadliest in Iowa's history.

"The construction season is always a time of increased traffic fatalities and serious injuries," said Rec veterin and construction accident engineer Mark Baker, who by the way is also the Iowa Sweet columnist.

Baker said that one major reason for the increase in construction zone deaths is that the number of construction workers is growing. Last year, there were an estimated 300,000 construction workers in Iowa, up from 275,000 in 1997. That's a 9 percent increase.

Another reason for the increase in construction zone deaths is that the number of construction-related injuries is also on the rise. In 1998, there were 13,930 construction-related injuries, up from 12,400 in 1997.

Baker said that the increase in construction zone deaths is also due to the fact that construction workers are not always wearing protective equipment. In 1998, there were 52 construction workers who died on the job, and only 14 of them were wearing personal protective equipment.

"The most important thing that we can do to prevent construction zone accidents is to be aware of our surroundings and to always be alert," said Baker. "We need to watch for other workers and for construction equipment, and we need to be careful when we cross the street or walk on the sidewalk.

WASHINGTON - The Justice Department Tuesday said it would block the merger of the nation's second-largest long-distance telephone company, WorldCom, with No. 3 Sprint Corp., saying it would notipples the nation's antitrust laws.

The decision means that the two companies will have to sell WorldCom's_CheckNet private network, a system that allows businesses to connect with other companies over the Internet. The Justice Department said that CheckNet would allow WorldCom to gain an unfair market share.

"The merger would give WorldCom an unfair advantage over its competitors," said Attorney General Janet Reno.

The merger was announced last month, and it would have created a company that would have had 35 percent of the domestic long-distance market.

But the Justice Department said that the merger would create a monopoly in the telecommunications market, and it would give WorldCom too much control over the industry.

"We can't let this happen," said Reno. "This is not in the public interest, and we won't allow it to happen.

This isn't the first time that the Justice Department has blocked a merger. In 1983, it blocked the proposed merger of AT&T and MCI, saying it would create a monopoly in the long-distance market.

Bass, organ to be featured in symphony's summer concert

The Iowa Symphony Orchestra will have an unusual summer concert.

By Catherine M. Swanson

The region's two oldest of a double bass ensemble and the performance of a Shostakovich Symphony No. 8 in F major makes up the Iowa Symphony Orchestra's summer series. A bass concerto is "to be featured," said band director Jeff Swanson, who is a member of the Iowa Symphony Orchestra and a professor of music and music education at The University of Iowa College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. "The Iowa Symphony Orchestra's summer series will feature an unusual performance of a Shostakovich Symphony No. 8 in F major, op. 65.

A change of venue will help the event, from Blanche Audubon's Performing Arts Center, the choice of piece, and William Probst's trumpet solo. The orchestra will feature a Shostakovich symphony that is rarely played and a double bass. While the orchestra is well designed with an organ in mind, it will also capture the sonority of the bass, Swanson said.

"The bass is not a power instrument," he said. "It's essentially a soloist."

"It's not the most exciting instrument," said William Probst, who is a member of the orchestra. "It's essentially a soloist."

Minnesota upsets No. 1 White Sox, 7-3

In a surprising upset, the Minnesota Twins defeated the top-ranked Chicago White Sox in a close-fought game held at the Metrodome.

The game was a testament to the Twins' resiliency, as they managed to overcome a 3-0 deficit to take the lead in the fifth inning. The Twins' starting pitcher, Ron In, was impressive, allowing just one earned run over six innings.

The Twins' win extended their winning streak to four games and moved them to the top of the AL Central division.

Neti nets former Laker

New Jersey named Byron Scott as their head coach Tuesday.

By Tony Causarano

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. - Byron Scott, who helped the Los Angeles Lakers to three NBA titles with his defensive prowess, was hired as the new head coach of the New Jersey Nets Tuesday.

"We looked for a head coach, a leader who understands the game and can evaluate talent and who could best fit in with the Nets," the team's new owner, Lewis Katz, said at a news conference.

Scott, 44, was fired as coach of the Lakers' NBA Development League team last September. He has 18 years of coaching experience, 13 of those with the Lakers, after he was named head coach of the Reno Bighorns, a Lakers affiliate in the American Basketball Association in 1990.

During nine seasons with the Lakers, Scott compiled a 379-218 record. He led the Lakers to three NBA championships in 2001-02, 2002-03 and 2003-04.

"Leadership is a part of who I am as a person," Scott said. "I think I was always a leader in my playing days. I think my ability to communicate and make some people feel good and make others feel bad is due to some of my leadership skills."

The Nets have been a model of mediocrity during much of their 37-year history. They have won two NBA titles and never captured the Eastern Conference title.

The Nets have never advanced past the Eastern Conference finals, which they reached in 2001-02.

Scott said he's excited about the opportunity to lead the Nets, who haven't made the playoffs since 2000-01.

"I'm just coming back to New Jersey and I'm coming home," Scott said. "I have a lot of respect for the town and I'm happy to be back."

The Nets are in the process of building a new arena in Newark for the 2013-14 season.

Agassi escapes early exit

Andre Agassi returns a shot from Taylor Dent during their year's prime first round match on Centre Court at Wimbledon Tuesday.

By Steve Witheford

WIMBLEDON, England - Andre Agassi's win over the 125th-ranked Daniel Gimeno-Traver Tuesday put the legend of immortality and antagony on the tennis court to rest. A legend that started with a childhood friendship, a story that started in 1986 and had almost survived the 1990's, had shown a flicker of hope last year.

Agassi had expressed the fourth round as his goal when he first returned to tennis last year - the French Open title, the Wimbledon title at Wimbledon, the U.S. Open and Australian Championships. So Agassi's fairy tale is over.

A story that started when he was 10 years old, came to an end Tuesday when he lost to Taylor Dent, 7-6 (4), 7-5, 6-3, in the quarterfinals.

But the LA Express remained riding high on the momentum of his best year yet. Agassi, 35, remains the favorite at Wimbledon, where he has won two titles and the men's singles championship.

"I've been the best player for a long time," Agassi said. "I've been the best tennis player for a long time. I've never been better."

Denton was the story of the day, said Agassi, who won't get another look when the world's top tennis players face each other. Agassi was the story of the day, said Agassi, who won't get another look when the world's top tennis players face each other.
