Yanks make trade —

Not for Sosa

New York trades Ricky Ledee for David Justice.

Associated Press

The New York Yankees acquired a struggling outfielder — no, it wasn't Sammy Sosa.

In an effort to boost their struggling team, the Yankees traded outfielder Ricky Ledee and two players to be named to the Cleveland Indians on Thursday for David Justice.

The Yankees had a tentative deal for Detroit's Juan Gonzalez fall through because they couldn't agree on a contract with the outfielder, and their bid for Sosa ended when the club couldn't agree on players with the Chicago Cubs.

"We had a player who was desirable if they couldn't pull off a Sammy Sosa or Juan Gonzalez deal," Indians general manager John Hart said. "We were waiting in line."

The weeks of speculation have weighed heavily on the World Series champions, who are 15-26 since reaching a season-high 13 games over .500 on May 9.

After winning three titles in the last four years, the Yankees would not be one of the four AL playoff teams if the season ended today.

The Yankees entered Thursday night's game in Detroit 3½ games behind Toronto in the AL East and third in the wild-card race. They were 10th in the league in scoring and fourth in ERA.

The Indians, who have won five straight AL Central division titles, WIMBLEDON, England — Alexandra Stevenson and Jelena Dokic, teens who blithely made brilliant Wimbledon debuts a year ago, are embroiled in uglier issues this year.

Stevenson lashed out Thursday, alleging hazing and racism on the women's tour, and Dokic saw her belligerent father-coach taken into police custody again.

On the courts, matters were more routine, with the daily dose of upset and near upsets.

Defending women's champion Lindsay Davenport rallied from 0-3, 15-40 in the final set and won the last six games to beat Elena Likhovtseva 3-6, 6-3, 6-3. French Open champion Mary Pierce, seeded third, lost to Magui Serna 7-6 (5), 7-6 (4).

Pierce's elimination, along with No. 12 Amanda Coetzer's 7-6 (0), 6-2, loss to American Lilia Osterloh, left only seven seeded players in the women's draw, the fewest to survive two rounds since 1976.

On the men's side, No. 5 Yevgeny Kafelnikov and No. 15 Marat Safin lost in straight sets, leaving only six seeded men still in the tournament.

The final match on Centre Court between No. 2 Andre Agassi and Todd Martin was suspended in the fourth set because of rain. Agassi led 6-4, 2-6, 7-6 (3), 0-1.

Agassi and Martin will resume with the first match on Centre Court today. Top-seeded Pete Sampras will close the day against fellow American Justin Gimelstob. Sampras, going for his seventh Wimbledon title, was examined after his last match and found to have tendinitis near his shin, but is expected to play.

In historic vote, Mexican opposition leads

All the exit polls give the edge to Vicente Fox, who could end the ruling party's 71 years of power.

By Niko Price
 Associated Press

MEXICO CITY — Five national exit polls gave a clear edge to opposition candidate Vicente Fox in historic presidential elections Sunday that could bring an end to the ruling party's 71-year lock on the presidency.

A Fox victory would be almost unthinkable for many in Mexico, where the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI, is almost synonymous with the government — and even the nation itself — to millions of supporters and detractors alike.

Fox, of the conservative National Action Party, held a lead of between 6 and 9 percentage points over the PRI's Francisco Labastida, according to the exit polls by Mexican television stations and U.S. polling companies.

The official count was still fragmentary, with only 2 percent of polling places reporting — most of them in urban areas where Fox is strongest. He led 49.8 percent to 31.9 percent.

Moments after the exit polls were released, Fox said he would wait for more official results before declaring victory and assuring Mexicans there would be a calm transition if he won.

"From today forward, we need to unite ... We have to work together to make Mexico the great country we have all dreamed of," he said. He called Sunday a "historic day for our country."

People began gathering beneath the gilded angel of Mexico City's Independence Monument as the polls poured in, all favoring Fox.

"He is going to do away with the bad governments, the narco-politicians, dishonest people," said Miguel Morlet, a 60-year-old hotel administrator.

Nearby, celebrating youths waved the blue and white National Action flag while plastic trumpets blared amid chants of "Yes you could" for the rapidly gathering television cameras.

Seeking more than rockets' red glare

For many Iowa City residents, Independence Day has lost some of its luster and meaning.

By Luc Hunt
 The Daily Iowan

While Americans celebrate the Fourth of July today and Tuesday, some Iowa City residents are wondering if the holiday still has meaning.

Independence Day can be a time to relive the traditions of American liberty, but, Iowa City resident Derek Roller said, the future of that liberty may in fact be bleak. He said the true meaning behind the holiday has been lost.

"For me, there is no cause for celebration," Roller said. "What was Independence Day? The whole roots of democracy are now taken as a holiday. But it doesn't seem like that many people are independent in this country."

While partaking in popular Fourth of July activities, such as camping and boating, many people tend to forget what their country actually means to them, said Iowa City resident Chester O'Brien.

"I love America not for what it is, but for what it could, should, and God willing, shall be," he said. "It's

Search intensifies for missing C.R. man

Robert Fletcher has not been seen since the evening of June 23.

By Andrea Mason
 The Daily Iowan

Friends and family of a missing Cedar Rapids man, in cooperation with Johnson County law-enforcement officials, will begin a detailed search of the area he disappeared in beginning today.

Robert Fletcher, 68, has been missing since June 23. Fletcher disappeared after the evening of June 23 after while at his cabin at Lake Macbride.

His wife, Margie, attempted to call him at the cabin when he did not return home. She proceeded to call a neighbor, who subsequently found the cabin locked and Robert Fletcher's car gone.

Today's search will concentrate on the ditches, brush and woods along all possible routes Robert Fletcher could have taken, said his daughter, Anne Conwell of Dallas, Iowa.

"We are keeping in positive spirits and are hopeful that everything will turn out positive, and our father will be home with us soon," she said.

Authorities think that the areas searched today might contain Fletcher's 1990 blue Chevrolet Lumina, with Iowa license plate 823 BQW, Conwell said.

Searches by helicopter and car patrols are continuing daily by Cedar Rapids police, said police Lt. Brent Long. Family and friends of Fletcher have already searched the back roads between Lake Macbride and Cedar Rapids.

The Johnson County Sheriff's Office, the Linn County Sheriff's Office and the Civil Air Patrol are also involved in the search.

Sgt. Bill Mau of the Linn County Sheriff's Office said officers are checking roads between the lake and Cedar Rapids on a daily basis. He said there was one possible sighting of Robert Fletcher walking along Highway 13 near Central

Panel OKs controversial parking plan

■ The UI administration will decide the fate of the plan, which has been roundly criticized by the Staff Council.

By Kelly Oulman
The Daily Iowan

The UI administration, including President Mary Sue Coleman, now has the final say about adopting a new parking policy, after the parking committee approved the policy in an 8-2 vote on June 29.

Under the policy, new parking spots will be assigned alternately between faculty and staff members. Faculty and staff will have separate waiting lists, and the spots will be assigned based on seniority, said David Ricketts, the UI parking director.

UI faculty consists of professors, associate professors and assistant professors. UI staff members are all other employees.

Members of the UI Staff Council brought their concerns to the parking committee but were disappointed that it did not consider the request to change the assignment ratio to 3-to-1 or 2-to-1 staff to faculty because 82 percent of UI employees are classified as staff, said Pat Kenner, the quality consultant in UI finance.

The intent of the new policy is to help deans recruit and retain faculty by increasing the chance that new faculty members will receive parking close to campus, Ricketts said.

Currently, the UI assigns parking spaces based on the order applications are received, with all applications on a single waiting list. The new policy will allow faculty to gain 50 percent of the parking spaces within the lots, although UI staff members outnumber faculty 4-to-1.

Inadequate faculty parking is mostly confined to the UI Hospitals and Clinics and the Health Science campus, Kenner said. Staff Council members feel the policy is a broad fix to a small problem.

"I think it is not fair to staff the way it's being handled because it's not equitable," said Michael Wichman, a Staff Council member.

Staff members will not be forced to give up their current parking spots as a result of the new policy.

"It's a big change for faculty and a small change for staff," Ricketts said.

The policy is good, he said, but there are still some issues to work through.

"We've taken a lot of criticism, but, eventually, we'll find a way to increase staff access to campus," he said.

Kenner also said the UI parking is working to help the staff. She said seniority waiting lists, along with reduced bus fares and encouraging car pools, are signs the department is concerned.

Coleman could not be reached for comment.

Memmer's motion denied

■ The accused murderer will go to trial, after judge vetoes motion to dismiss murder charges.

By Disa Lubker
The Daily Iowan

Judge David Remley overruled motions on June 30 to dismiss charges against Jonathan Memmer, charged with two counts of first-degree murder.

Citing the prosecution's insufficient evidence, co-counsel for Memmer, Edward Leff and Dennis Cohen, filed motions on June 19 to dismiss the charges of murder, assault, assault with intent to commit sexual abuse, arson and burglary.

Memmer, 24, is accused of killing Laura Watson Dalton, 29, and Maria Therese Lehner, 27. The women's bodies were found in an apartment at 427 S. Van Buren St. on March 19, 1999.

Memmer was formally charged with the two counts of first-degree murder, which is a class A felony, on Feb. 25.

Some of the main pieces of alleged evidence are blood from one of the victims on Memmer's shoe and DNA from a cigarette butt found at the scene of the crime.

A status conference was held on June 30, at which Memmer's attorneys and Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White were present. Memmer participated via speaker phone. At the conference, depositions were scheduled for several days in July, August and September.

Memmer moved orally to extend the deadline for the filing of pre-trial motions to Sept. 15, and the motion was granted.

Memmer is also charged with allegedly breaking into the Van Buren Street apartment and pawing objects from the apartment under his own name. At the time of the homicides, the apartment was rented to three UI students who were gone for Spring Break.

Residents no longer to train at Mercy

UI family medicine residents stopped participating in family medicine training at Mercy Hospital July 1 due to difficulties with supervising residents at two locations.

Members of the UI family medicine faculty said they could do a better job supervising residents at a single location, said Richard Nelson, the executive dean of the UI College of Medicine.

"I think this is an evolutionary, not a revolutionary, change," Nelson said. "These kind of changes in family medicine are occurring frequently."

Family medicine residents will still rotate to various areas of the UI Hospitals and Clinics every four to six weeks.

Because only three to four residents were at Mercy during a rotation, the UIHC should not experience a dramatic increase in the number of residents, Nelson said.

The family medicine training program at Mercy began in the early 1970s and was one of the first family medicine training programs in Iowa, Nelson said.

Residents can still participate in rotations at Mercy for electives, said Tom Moore, the media coordinator for UI Health Care.

Hearing set for former Econofoods cashier

A preliminary hearing has been set for a former Econofoods cashier charged with second-degree theft.

William Wray Ross, whose address is unknown, was charged with theft after an alleged Aug. 27, 1998, incident. Ross was an employee at Econofoods, 1987 Broadway, when he allegedly took money from the store. The store closed in 1999.

Ross allegedly clocked out for a meal break, taking a cash register drawer to the break room, said Iowa City police Sgt. Mike Brotherton. Ross then allegedly took $1,186.48 from the drawer, Brotherton said.

Managers at the store had a master key to the drawer, which the defendant also took, according to court records.

After allegedly taking the money, Ross never returned to work, Brotherton said.

Second-degree theft carries a minimum $500 fine, a maximum of a $7,500 fine and up to five years in prison.

Ross remains in custody at the Johnson County Jail, Brotherton said; bail is set at $2,500.

His hearing has been set for July 7.

Wars for freedom continue in U.S.

Looking forward to the Fourth of July, my mind drifted over some thoughts while at work. Behind the fireworks, cookouts and general gala that is the celebration of our nation's birthday looms the shadow of a nation that was built on rebellion to allow us such complacency.

The presence of this shadow has been growing in the past couple of years, with a fresh sort of radical and revolutionary being born out of my generation.

Think of the work of the Students Against Sweatshops that should be celebrated this holiday. With the members' siege of Jessup Hall, their protesting and their attempts to bring to light the prevailing neglect of this university in regards to merchandise production, they paved a road that seemed close to crumbling as the media continued to stereotype this generation as a gaggle of "slacker" youth.

As the SAS members stood up to say that they would no longer accept a university that had clothing made in sweatshops, they made a statement about the ability of young people to promote and demand change.

Along with these spirited rattle-brainers, the nation should set apart some time to thank the protesters in Seattle this spring in their efforts to stop the World Trade Organization. From the peaceful protest to the anarchists that overran the police, America should be proud that people still care enough to fight against injustice.

Of course, aligning oneself with the side of anarchy in the WTO battle is not a popular move. These black-hooded bandits that have ravaged Oregon for the past couple of years traveled to Seattle to fight against the "Starbucks on every street corner" and the belief that companies such as Nike are taking over our country through a greater division of the classes. Their argument is simple — advertising makes people think they need the newest shoe, the coolest coffee table, and the best silverware, so people work harder to buy things they really don't need, which fattens the pockets of the rich. These anarchists flip this advertising around, changing Nike's slogan into "Class War — Just Do It."

A sentiment that was echoed last year in the movie Fight Club, a film dealing with the same themes of need to take back America. The movie suggests that, as more and more people sell their lives to Visa and Mastercard, hoping to purchase the new DVD player and the leather-interior car, the cost is increasing debt and loss of liberty. "Free to all" is a lost phrase in an America run by profit. Look at the Internet; it costs money to subscribe to AOL, then the entire time you look up any information, you are deluged by banner advertisements. But the anarchists of the Northwest are fighting this with their own extreme methods.

That is the basis for the America that we celebrate this Fourth of July. The fireworks bursting over the Iowa River set to music are meant to entertain, but remember that this country was won by a young generation that did not want to serve a colonial tyrant. And now this same government, founded on the idea that all people have the chance for a fair life and freedom, seems to be selling what's left of its soul to big business.

The New Hampshire state motto is "Live Free or Die." I encourage people to do this, by taking charge of their own life and their own place in the economy. Shop locally, think independently, become concerned with where your money is going in the long run as you buy a product or service, and remember that this nation's core is not stable, and should never be stable.

Stephen Balsley is a DI columnist.

Supreme Court's "partial birth" abortion decision will be regretted

Last week, the Supreme Court, in a 5-4 decision, struck down a Nebraska law that prohibited "partial birth" abortions, making the surgical procedure a constitutionally protected right.

This ruling will eventually be looked upon by history, as Justice Antonin Scalia wrote in dissent, as being an act of judicial infamy equivalent to cases such as Dred Scott and Korematsu.

The Nebraska law, which passed the Legislature a single vote shy of unanimity, defines a "partial birth" abortion as the act of "delivering into the vagina a living unborn child" in order to kill it. The majority of the court cited the language of the law as being "vague," and Justice Sandra Day O'Connor suggested that the bill may have passed if not for this "principal defect." These justices are supposedly worried that the law would be used to ban other forms of abortion; however, the law was blocked by a federal judge before it was ever enacted, giving us no opportunity to see how it would be applied. Also, Nebraska's attorney general has explicitly vowed not to apply this law to any other form of abortion.

This ruling will be looked upon by history, as Justice Antonin Scalia wrote in dissent, as being an act of judicial infamy equivalent to cases such as Dred Scott and Korematsu.

Justices O'Connor and Stephen Breyer also complained that the law made no exception for the health of the mother; however, the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, which favors the right to abortion on demand, admits that there is no medical need for this procedure, saying that there are "no circumstances" under which "partial birth" abortion "would be the only option to save the life or preserve the health of the woman." Also, the American Medical Association says that "there does not appear to be any identified situation" where "partial birth" abortion "is the only appropriate procedure to induce abortion."

The truth is obvious. The court did not overrule the Nebraska law because of any concern over its vagueness or for any reasons dealing with a mother's health. The court overruled the law because to accept it would force the court to consider the idea that an unborn child in its third trimester of development has greater moral significance than a tumor or a mole.

Keeping Iowa's lakes and rivers dry

July brings several interesting changes in Iowa law. Insurance coverage of birth-control pills will be required, repeated pet torture will become a felony, and laws against drunken boating will be strengthened.

The new boating legislation, spurred by an alcohol-related accident at Saylorville Lake nearly a year ago, will apply to boaters operating motorboats or sailboats. The blood-alcohol limit will be .10 — the same limit that motorists face. The new penalties for first-time offenders will include a 48-hour jail sentence and up to a $1,000 fine.

Kudos to the Iowa Legislature in order. Motorists and boaters have similar responsibilities when operating their respective machinery and should therefore have similar consequences when Boating has the potential to be even more dangerous than drinking and driving because there is no set traffic pattern for boats. It is good for the state that Iowa laws are beginning to reflect this fact.

abusing their privileges. According to state conservation officials, drinking and boating has the potential to be even more dangerous than drinking and driving because there is no set traffic pattern for boats. It is good for the state that Iowa laws are beginning to reflect serious responsibility associated with boat operation.

While this legislation is a major step forward, more needs to be done. The new law will not change the fact that open containers of beer and wine will still be allowed on boats. Given the significant potential danger and small benefit of allowing such consumption, it is ridiculous to continue to allow this. Instituting a by-permit-only basis for open containers on boats is the appropriate action. Doing so will not stand in the way of safe and legitimate use of alcohol on boats and will curb the danger involved.

The state is making progress toward separating alcohol and the operation of heavy machinery, but safety demands more action. Have a fantastic Fourth of July and leave the liquor landlocked.

The packed ferry, which went down in a storm, was carrying 481 people fleeing sectarian violence.

MANADO, Indonesia — Ten people, the only known survivors from a packed ferry that disappeared at sea, were rescued Sunday from the waters off Indonesia after spending almost four days clinging to or another and hanging onto debris that stay afloat.

Just hours before the search for the missing ferry was to be called off, a fishing boat plucked the 10 dehydrated survivors and one dead body from the water close to Karakelong island, 12 miles northeast of Manado on Sulawesi island in central Indonesia, said Setio Rahardjo, the head of the government search and rescue agency.

They were wearing life jackets and holding onto debris, he said. At least another 481 passengers and crew remained missing. The Cahaya Bahari, overloaded with Christian refugees fleeing sectarian violence on the neighboring Maluku islands, disappeared on June 29 in a violent storm.

Teachers' union: Extra year of school could help struggling students

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — While students may cringe at the idea of a fifth year of high school, a teacher's union president says that's the ideal prescription for those least prepared to continue their education or enter the work force.

"It's a choice between letting kids fall through the cracks ... or doing whatever it takes to bring them up to par," said Sandra Feldman, the president of the American Federation of Teachers, who's proposing a special "transitional year" for students in danger of failing high school exit exams or of dropping out before even taking the test.

It's one of the ideas to be discussed at simultaneous meetings of the two major teachers' unions this week, shaping their lobbying agendas and plans for the new school year.

Under Feldman's proposal — to be put before her union today — specially trained teachers would help students by using methods employed to catch up military recruits, high school drop outs and other teens and young adults with minimal reading skills. The current system, Feldman said in an interview last week, is unfair to students who have been promoted regardless of grades or test scores, then asked to pass tough tests for their diplomas. Approximately 30 states have such exit exams.

However, states set their own school schedules. Kindergarten is not even mandatory in every state, so most students only get grades one through 12.

License scandals keep on truckin'

CHICAGO (AP) — A trucking bribery scandal in Illinois and Florida has forced safety officers nationwide to track down drivers who may be barreling down highways without ever having proved they can maneuver a huge truck.

Federal and state investigators have identified nearly 3,000 people with suspicious commercial drivers licenses from the two states. Many of those drivers have exchanged their licenses for new ones in other states.

An Associated Press survey of state licensing officials found that at least 175 truckers outside of Illinois and Florida had their licenses revoked or suspended as a result of the probe. National concern over truck driver licenses was sparked by a 2-year-old federal investigation of a bribery scheme in Illinois. Federal prosecutors say hundreds of unqualified drivers traded bribes for passing grades on license tests.

"The safety of all drivers is at stake," said Cydney DeModica, a spokeswoman for the Motor Vehicle Division of the Arizona Department of Transportation. "I don't think there's anyone who wants people who are inadequately prepared or not proficient to be out there at the wheel of these big rigs."

In Illinois, an additional 587 commercial licenses have been either canceled or downgraded to normal licenses. Florida canceled the truck licenses of 500 people who did not show up for a retest.

Just hours before the search for the missing ferry was to be called off, a fishing boat plucked the 10 dehydrated survivors and one dead body from the water close to Karakelong island, 120 miles northeast of Manado on Sulawesi island in central Indonesia, said Setio Rahardjo, the head of the government's search and rescue agency.

Dita Alangkara/Associated Press
Relatives of the passengers on the Cahaya Bahari wait for an official announcement from search-and-rescue teams at the port of Manado Sunday.

As hopes of finding many more survivors faded, officials said the sinking could be Indonesia's worst maritime disaster in almost two decades.

"We can't give up. As human beings they still have a chance to survive," said Cmdr. Djoko Sudaryono, who is heading the sea and air search.

One of the survivors found Sunday, 18-year-old Orpa Matayani, gave a terrifying account of the ferry being swamped by huge waves.

Speaking to rescue officials over the radio from the fishing vessel, she said the sea poured into the hold of the Cahaya Bahari just before it sank. Matayani said she had no idea what happened to the rest of the passengers and that her group survived by holding fast to one another.

"Survivors confirmed that their ship sank after taking on water in rough seas and strong winds," Rahardjo said. "Now at least we know what happened to the ship."

The region's air force commander, Lt. Col. Agus Barnas, said the four women and six men, ages 12 to 29, were dehydrated, sunburned and weakened by hunger. They were picked up Sunday morning more than 60 miles from the spot where contact with the Cahaya Bahari was lost.

Rahardjo said the fishing boat, the Minahasa IX, would take the survivors to Linrung town on the small island of Selababu for medical treatment.

Scores of tearful relatives waiting at Manado waterfront were in shock after hearing the news of Sunday's rescue.

"Until now, we had been praying that the ship was still afloat," said John Girobus, whose mother was on board. "Now we know it has sunk, and only a few people have been rescued. Everyone is very worried about their families."

Officials said the jammed ferry was equipped only with 300 life vests at most — far from enough for the 492 passengers and crew. Maritime patrol aircraft sent to the location were unable to spot any more survivors or lifeboats, they said.

Racist group grows after deadly rampage

■ One year ago, a World Church member went on a two-state shooting spree, targeting minorities.

By Jay Hughes
Associated Press

PEORIA, Ill. — Prior to Benjamin Smith's deadly spree last Fourth of July, there was little known about — and little interest in — the racist church to which he belonged.

But over the past year, the World Church of the Creator has found a national platform and has seen its membership increase. Its leader, Matthew Hale, claims to have adherents in most states and says membership to the East Peoria-based group has doubled.

Hale, 28, refuses to say how many members — whom he calls "creators" — pay dues. But according to one hate-monitoring group, Hale's organization has added 35 chapters in the past year, and its recruitment programs have gained strength, particularly on college campuses, in prisons, among women and over the Internet.

The World Church of the Creator has become a "magnet for young, volatile white supremacists," the suburban Chicago hate-monitoring group Center for New Community said in new report.

The report was released to mark the anniversary of the two-state rampage by Smith, who shot 11 people, killing two: former Northwestern basketball coach Ricky Byrdsong, 43, and Won-Joon Yoon, a 26-year-old college student from Korea.

Smith, 21, committed suicide as police closed in on him. Eight months before his rampage, he was profiled on the World Church of the Creator's Web site as "Creator of the Month" for his efforts to distribute racist literature.

Hale said the growth of his group over the past year has had more to do with its philosophy than Smith's rampage, which targeted blacks, Jews and Asians across Illinois and Indiana.

"I would say it's not because of the specific actions Ben Smith engaged in, but it's because more people heard of us, and more people respect us because we have refused to compromise our beliefs in the past year," said Hale, who describes his members as "white racial loyalists."

"We've definitely spread the word, and that's always been my main mission."

Hale has done a masterful job of keeping himself and his group in the public eye, primarily through well-publicized appeals over Illinois's refusal to grant him a law license and lawsuits filed because of the attacks, said Richard Hirschhaut, the director of the Midwest branch of the Anti-Defamation League.

He estimated that Hale's group in the public eye, primarily through well-publicized appeals over Illinois's refusal to grant him a law license and lawsuits filed because of the attacks, said Richard Hirschhaut, the director of the Midwest branch of the Anti-Defamation League.

"All indications point to a stronger or a better-supported organization," Hirschhaut said.

Many of the organization members show an almost cult-like dedication to Hale, Hirschhaut said. However, the Center for New Community found that scrutiny of the group after the shooting and Hale's outspokenness have caused some discord.

According to the report, several longtime members have left the organization, and others question Hale's leadership. It quotes one disaffected member as privately referring to Hale, who calls himself the "pontifex maximus," meaning supreme leader, as the "Pontifex Bananamus."

The report also noted that Hale's rhetoric also appears to be taking a more violent tone.

After the U.S. Supreme Court on June 26 refused to hear an appeal of Hale's law license case, Hale said that in light of the court's failure to hear his arguments, he could no longer encourage his followers to obey the laws of this country.

"Whatever blood is spilled will be on the hands of those who so severely wronged us today," he said.

In a more recent interview, however, Hale said he does not advocate violence but cannot stop individuals from taking whatever action they deem necessary.

"The pope can't control every Catholic, and I can't control every creator," he said.

No stopping statehood, Arafat says

■ The Palestinian leadership meets to discuss the tricky question of when to declare statehood.

By Laura King
Associated Press

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip — With Yasser Arafat declaring there is no way to halt the march to statehood, the Palestinian leadership convened a two-day meeting Sunday to debate the delicate question of when to proclaim independence.

As the Palestinians' policymaking Central Council began its closed-door deliberations, some flag-waving Palestinian protesters outside made it plain they were already tired of waiting.

"Proclaim a state from today!" several hundred demonstrators shouted, surging against police barricades outside Arafat's official residence in the Gaza Strip, where the meeting was being held.

No decision was expected before the end of the gathering, which was scheduled to last until through today. Even then, the 129-member council might opt to simply reaffirm that Palestinians have the right to declare statehood once a Sept. 13 deadline for reaching a peace accord expires.

people and trying to make independence part of a negotiated settlement with the Israelis. Israel has strongly hinted that if Arafat makes a unilateral declaration of statehood, it will retaliate by annexing chunks of the West Bank, which could set off bloody fighting between the two sides.

Only a week before his carefully chosen remarks to the leadership council, the Palestinian leader delivered a fiery speech in the West Bank, telling cheering followers that statehood could come within weeks whether Israel liked it or not. For the past few days, Palestinians have been floating the idea of setting a Nov. 15 date for statehood, which would provide a two-month cushion if the two sides cannot meet the deadline for a peace deal. That suggestion was among those discussed Sunday, said Salim Zaanoun, the council's chairman.

Journalists were not allowed inside during deliberations, but Nabil Amr, a senior aide, said Arafat told the gathering "there is no way to go back, and the leadership will move forward in order to put into effect the declaration of a Palestinian state."

Study: Many have felt close to having a nervous breakdown

■ Experts say Americans are more willing to acknowledge mental-health problems.

By David Ho
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Approximately a third of Americans say they have at least once felt on the verge of a nervous breakdown or had a mental health problem, according to a study released Sunday that examines perceptions of psychological health over four decades.

"There's been a real change in both Americans' attitudes toward acknowledging mental-health problems and in their willingness to talk to people about it," said Ralph Swindle Jr., the lead author of the study, which appears in the July issue of American Psychologist.

In 1996, more than 26 percent of adults surveyed said they had felt an impending nervous breakdown, up from 19 percent in 1957, he said. In addition, another 7 percent said they had experienced a mental-health problem, a question not asked in the earlier survey. Most of those questioned related mental illness to more serious psychotic disorders like schizophrenia.

The increase between the surveys could be caused by a combination of more people experiencing psychological problems and a lessening of the stigma associated with admitting to a nervous breakdown, said Swindle, a professor at Indiana University.

Participants in the 1996 study saw a nervous breakdown as related to stress, depression and anxiety. "The way the general population uses the term 'nervous breakdown' is a mental collapse," said co-author Bernice Pescosolido, also at Indiana University. "They were talking about getting to a point in their lives where they couldn't carry on." Those most likely to say they had anticipated a nervous breakdown were young, white, single mothers with low incomes and no involvement with organized religion, the researchers said.

As the percentage of Americans reporting a feeling of impending breakdown has increased over the last four decades, the cause of those feelings and the way they're dealt with has also changed.

In the 1957 survey, most people said health problems had caused them to feel close to a breakdown. But in 1996, the most frequently cited causes were relationship problems, including divorce, separation and other marital strains.

Oil money flows to Bush campaign as a cornerstone of his goal to reduce America's reliance on foreign oil. "We need to increase domestic exploration," said Bush campaign spokesman Dan Bartlett.

While drilling in the Arctic refuge would be the biggest plum the oil companies could expect from a Bush administration, the industry would likely prevail on other controversial issues.

• The Kyoto Accord: Environmentalists say U.S. acceptance of the agreement, which requires reductions of heat-trapping "greenhouse gases to address global warming, would be dead if Bush becomes president. Bush has called it "ineffective" and unfair and would not seek its ratification.

Oil companies have led the fight against the agreement, which Gore was instrumental in crafting at a meeting in Japan more than two years ago. Should the pact be ratified, it would require reductions in carbon dioxide emissions from burning fossil fuels, principally oil and coal.

• Sulfur in gasoline: For months, oil company lobbyists have argued unsuccessfully with the Environmental Protection Agency over the reduction of sulfur in gasoline and diesel fuel.

The EPA wants sulfur cut to 30 parts per million in gasoline and 15 parts per million in diesel, more than a 95 percent reduction. The oil companies say such reductions may not be feasible and are too costly. They have offered a cut to 50 parts per million — a level EPA Administrator Carol Browner has insisted would not do the job.

On such regulations Bush "wants to strike the appropriate balance" and be assured "they are based on the most sound and available science," said Bartlett. Bush has said he wants to reduce the sulfur in motor fuels, though Bartlett said he didn't know by how much.

Exit polls point to Fox victory in Mexico

An exit poll by the Televisa television network showed Fox with 44 percent and Labastida with 38 percent. Another poll by the rival TV Azteca network gave Fox 38.8 percent to Labastida's 30.5 percent, and one by the Reforma newspaper group showed Fox with a 44 percent to 36 percent edge.

An exit poll by the Chamber of the Radio and Television Industry had Fox ahead 43-34 and a poll by two U.S. polling firms showed him ahead 42-36. Leftist Cuauhtémoc Cárdenas was a distant third in all the polls.

The polls by Televisa and the U.S. firms had a margin of error of 1 percentage point; Azteca's was 1.5, and the others didn't give margins of error.

The vote was the first in more than a century in which the outcome wasn't clear beforehand. Despite hundreds of allegations of pressure and vote-buying — most perpetrated by the ruling party — the elections were widely seen as Mexico's fairest ever.

"It could be that we make history today," said Rebeca Meza Oliva, a 45-year-old housewife waiting in line to vote — for Fox.

Beginning early in the morning, long lines formed at voting booths, evidence of a heavy turnout. Frustrated voters clashed with election workers in Mexico City when some booths for people casting ballots outside their home districts ran out of absentee ballots shortly after noon — with hundreds still in line.

The PRI also appeared to have lost three key local races, according to exit polls by the television networks.

The exit polls showed the leftist Democratic Revolution Party holding onto Mexico City's mayorship with Andres Manuel Lopez Obrador well ahead of his rivals.

In Morelos state, just south of the capital, the polls had National Action capturing the governorship from the PRI, and they had National Action holding Fox's home state of Guanajuato.

Fox is a former Coca-Cola executive and rancher who was elected governor of central Guanajuato in 1995.

He pledged to halt corruption, jump-start the economy with foreign investment and jobs programs and nearly double spending for public education. He espoused an agreement with the United States that would let workers cross the border freely.

The ruling party standard-bearer, Labastida ran a largely traditional campaign after a landslide victory in the party's first presidential primary in November.

He promised more aid for the countryside, more resources for public education and more attention to the poor. Labastida, a former governor of Sinaloa state, was a top Cabinet secretary before the campaign and said he would continue many of President Ernesto Zedillo's policies.

future becomes a reality."

A common way of viewing the day is as a vacation is from work, but Iowa City resident Holly Hart said the birth of freedom in America holds more meaning than that.

"What it's about is citizens actively taking responsibility for their own form of government," she said. "It's also about putting the needs of the community first."

For those who will celebrate the Fourth of July in a patriotic fashion, it is a familiar affair, exciting and placating.

"I'm just hanging out," said Richard Terrell, an Iowa City resident. "Going to see a show in the park, watch some fireworks, and stay away from alcohol."

And for those who do not have to work today, there will be plenty to do, see and hear in Iowa City.

At the Fireworks Festival, held in lower City Park, events will include music, food and, of course, fireworks. The festival will begin today at 2:30 p.m. and last until 9:30 p.m. The fireworks will begin at dusk.

Local bands will perform on two stages, and the Riverside Festival Stage will feature theater groups and more music.

Games, rides and discounted swimming will also be offered. City officials advise people to walk to City Park if possible.

In a Perfect Storm

FILM REVIEW

Movie: The Perfect Storm
Director: Wolfgang Peterson
Writer: Sebastian Junger (book) and William D. Wittliff
Starring: George Clooney, Mark Wahlberg, Diane Lane and Karen Allen
Length: 129 minutes
Rating: PG-13

It is difficult to describe a kind of film I thought The Perfect Storm was going to be — boy! Twister on a boat! — but much summed it up. But we had promised to be little more than another digital effect-fest disaster movie turned out to be thrilling and engaging film with (gasp!) three-dimensional characters.

The film is based on the true story of a fishing boat from Gloucester, Mass., the Andrea Gail. The boat had sailed out beyond the Grand Banks fishing ground to the dangerous Flemish Cap to make up for a bad fishing season. On the way home, the boat ran into horrendous weather caused by the collision of three huge storm systems.

■ Revealed: The only man who's never been on TV.

NEW YORK — He wouldn't give his name, and no photos were allowed.

"I don't want those tabloid TV shows stalking me," he said. "Tabloid shows!" I chortled. "Ken Burns could find you, he'd star you in a 12-hour portrait for PBS pledge month!"

"That would never do," the man said with a shudder. I understood. This was someone who, in the era of "Survivor," "Big Brother" and Darva Conger, was uniquely vulnerable to a camera's probing eye. Before me sat the last living American who has never been on television.

Or so he claimed. "Let me get this straight," began. "You have never been a multimillionaire who chose a bride, then married her on national TV?" "I have not."

"You have never been on 'Sally Jessy Raphael' wearing women's clothes?"

"Nope." "What about falling into a birthday cake in a home video shown on 'World's Funniest?' Or living in a house with a bunch of college kids on 'Real World?'"

"No. And I've never hugged Bob Barker on 'The New Price Is Right' or munched bugs on 'Survivor.'" "I believe you," I said. I didn't believe him.

I tried to catch him off-guard. "Ever drop by Rockefeller Plaza in the morning?"

"Forget it," he scoffed. "You'd never catch me outside the 'Today' show vamping for the camera while I wave a sign that says 'Hi, Katie!'"

He was persuasive. But that wasn't the whole story.

"Even if you stay away from big-time broadcasters," I said, "that doesn't mean you're not appearing on TV. Television cameras are everywhere. What about those little security cameras on elevators? You get in an elevator — I tried to sound foreboding — "and somebody somewhere is watching you." The man shrugged. "I always take the stairs."

"What about the camera installed at the money machine to tape you getting mugged? Whenever you withdraw cash, you're being recorded."

"I only barter." "Well, how do you avoid those satellite cameras, always peering down on you from outer space?"

"I wear a sombrero and don't look up," he said. "They never get a glimpse."

"You've got to eat," I pressed. "What happens when you drop by the 7-Eleven to barter for a six-pack and a can of Beanie-Weenies? Cameras are watching your every move."

Box office has unpatriotic weekend

■ The Perfect Storm swamps The Patriot and breezes to No. 1.

By David Germain
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — George Clooney's The Perfect Storm blew Mel Gibson out of the water at the box office over the weekend.

The movie, based on the true story of a fishing crew battling a behemoth tempest, took in $41.7 million to debut at No. 1 at the weekend box office.

The movie's gross almost doubled that of Mel Gibson's Revolutionary War spectacle The Patriot, which took in $21.7 million from June 30 to Sunday to finish at No. 2.

The overall box office was good news for Hollywood. After three slumping weekends that put the industry behind last summer's record revenues, the top 12 films this weekend grossed $121.8 million, up 5.3 percent over the same period in 1999.

There also was a prospect that for the five-day weekend through Tuesday, the industry could approach the $198.3 million Fourth of July record set in 1996, when Independence Day opened.

Co-starring Mark Wahlberg and Diane Lane, The Perfect Storm was the third-highest grossing movie ever to open over Fourth of July weekend, behind Men in Black and Independence Day, which debuted with about $50 million each.

"Perfect Storm is the more traditional Fourth of July, big special-effects roller-coaster ride," said Dean Devlin, a producer of The Patriot. "I'm just happy we weathered the storm. I was really worried they would wipe us out."

The Patriot broke a stigma in Hollywood that movie-goers aren't interested in the American Revolution, Devlin said. The last such film, Al Pacino's Revolution, was a flop in 1985.

"I don't think people are sitting around saying they can't wait for the next movie about the American Revolution," Devlin said. "But I definitely think we have broken that curse."

Estimated ticket sales for June 30 through Sunday at North American theaters:

1. The Perfect Storm, $41.7 million.
2. The Patriot, $21.7 million.
3. Chicken Run, $12.8 million.
4. Me, Myself & Irene, $12 million.
5. The Adventures of Rocky and Bullwinkle, $6.6 million.
6. Shaft, $6.5 million.
7. Big Momma's House, $5.5 million.
8. Gone in 60 Seconds, $5 million.
9. Mission: Impossible 2, $4.8 million.
10. Gladiator, $2.4 million.

In a Perfect Storm, sea-ing is believing

FILM REVIEW

By Graham Ross

Movie: The Perfect Storm
Director: Wolfgang Peterson
Writer: Sebastian Junger (book) and William D. Wittliff
Starring: George Clooney, Mark Wahlberg, Diane Lane and Karen Allen
Length: 129 minutes
Rating: PG-13

It is difficult to describe what kind of film I thought The Perfect Storm was going to be — "Oh boy! Twister on a boat!" pretty much summed it up. But what had promised to be little more than another digital effect-filled disaster movie turned out to be a thrilling and engaging film with (gasp!) three-dimensional characters.

The film is based on the true story of a fishing boat from Gloucester, Mass., the Andrea Gail. The boat had sailed out beyond the Grand Banks fishing ground to the dangerous Flemish Cap to make up for a bad fishing season. On the way home, the boat ran into horrendous weather caused by the collision of three huge storm systems.

There is also a side plot involving the rescue of a luxury sailboat by the Coast Guard, which further increases the terror and suspense.

The story is based on the best-selling book The Perfect Storm, by Sebastian Junger, so most people (myself included) are probably well-aware of the plot. Even so, I found myself quite captivated by the picture even though I knew the end.

The main characters were extremely well-written and well-acted. Clooney's portrayal of the captain Billy Tyne reminded me of Gregory Peck's portrayal of the mad captain Ahab in John Houston's 1956 version of Moby

Dick. His crew is composed of Bobby Shatford (Mark Wahlberg), Murph (John C. Reilly), Bugsy (John Hawkes), Alfred Pierre (Allen Payne) and Sully (William Fichtner). Of all of these men, I found Murph to be the most interesting character. He was the type of person who has been beaten down by life but still manages to muster a smile.

But The Perfect Storm is not a story about characters. Rather, it

is a story about a storm. Some of the best scenes are the ones with no dialogue. This is when the struggle between the men and the storm is most apparent. Director Wolfgang Petersen has made another film about seamen, Das Boot, in which he fully explored the complexities of each character through dialogue and action. In this film, Petersen again explores the psyche of each character, but this time he relies more on action than on dialogue to convey the story. The technique works, but I found myself feeling denied some type of closure to the characters. Their actions were often left a mystery.

The special effects are spectacular and the digital effects were astounding. The Perfect Storm features what is perhaps the best combination of great direction and digital effects to date.

Yes, its plot is shallow. But that does not hinder one from enjoying the film. It is about the timeless struggle between man and nature and the struggle to survive when all hope is lost.

America's last invisible man

■ Revealed: The only man who's never been on TV.

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press

NEW YORK — He wouldn't give his name, and no photos were allowed.

"I don't want those tabloid TV shows stalking me," he said. "Tabloid shows!" I chortled. "If Ken Burns could find you, he'd star you in a 12-hour portrait for PBS pledge month!"

"That would never do," the man said with a shudder. I understood. This was someone who, in the era of "Survivor," "Big Brother" and Darva Conger, was uniquely vulnerable to a camera's probing eye. Before me sat the last living American who has never been on television.

Or so he claimed. "Let me get this straight," I began. "You have never been a multimillionaire who chose a bride, then married her on national TV?"

"I have not." "You have never been on 'Sally Jessy Raphael' wearing women's clothes?"

"Nope." "What about falling into a birthday cake in a home video shown on 'World's Funniest?' Or living in a house with a bunch of college kids on 'Real World?'"

"No. And I've never hugged Bob Barker on 'The New Price Is Right' or munched bugs on 'Survivor.'" "I believe you," I said. I didn't believe him.

I tried to catch him off-guard. "Ever drop by Rockefeller Plaza in the morning?"

"Forget it," he scoffed. "You'd never catch me outside the 'Today' show vamping for the camera while I wave a sign that says 'Hi Katie!'"

He was persuasive. But that wasn't the whole story. "Even if you stay away from big-time broadcasters," I said, "that doesn't mean you're not appearing on TV. Television cameras are everywhere. What about those little security cameras on elevators? You get in an elevator — and somebody somewhere is watching you."

The man shrugged. "I always take the stairs."

"What about the camera installed at the money machine to tape you getting mugged? Whenever you withdraw cash, you're being recorded."

"I only barter." "Well, how do you avoid those satellite cameras, always peering down on you from outer space?"

"I wear a sombrero and don't look up," he said. "They never get a glimpse."

"You've got to eat," I pressed. "What happens when you drop by the 7-Eleven to barter for a six-pack and a can of Beanie-Weenies? Cameras are watching your every move."

"But not my face! I always wear a ski mask." "Doesn't the attendant think you're there to hold him up?" "Ohhhhh," said the man as something clicked. "THAT'S why they always look so nervous."

"I just don't get it," I sighed. "Every day, all over the country, people are clamoring to get on TV. It doesn't seem to matter where they'll be seen or why. They just crave the expansive effect any TV camera promises. TV lets them be in more than one place at the same time. Bigger than themselves. Bigger than life! At least, for a moment."

"That's a fine theory," said the man. "But it doesn't explain this kind of TV's appeal to viewers."

"Why do millions watch Darva Conger getting chosen as an instant bride and even make her a cover girl on Playboy? Why do they tune to those quarreling castaways on 'Survivor'? Why would anybody care about a pack of showoffs shacking up on 'Big Brother?'"

That was easy. "Viewers watch," I said, "because they see themselves in those people on the screen. Those are people they might like to be, and maybe once were: young, beautiful, rich. Or people they wouldn't ever want to be and love to vilify, because the blemishes they see reflect their own. "Either way," I summed up, "it's a mirror, and then some. They can't turn away from that looking glass."

As the man listened, he stroked his chin. "I like to watch TV," he insisted. "I just don't like it watching me. I like being the viewer. Not the viewed-upon."

I must have seemed confused. He tried to help. "You go to the hospital and the roles are clear: The doctor is the cutter, you're the cuttee. No one ever asks if you'd like a turn with the scalpel. Same thing when you fly: You don't expect the pilot to let you navigate."

"This whole interactive, role-blurring craze with television is a load of bunk. I think people should make a personal decision about TV: Be on it or be in front of it. Either or. Then live with your decision. That's what I do."

"But you're the only one," I marveled. "The only TV viewer who doesn't want to get in the act. And I should have known it the minute you walked in."

"How's that?" "You're the only person in America I never saw before."

Daddy dearest

NEW YORK (AP) — Joely Fisher says her mother, singer-actress Connie Stevens, knew how to balance her career and personal life. Her playboy crooner father, Eddie Fisher, did not.

Fisher, who played the narcissistic Paige on the ABC sitcom "Ellen," said show business and her father, who also was married to Liz Taylor and Debbie Reynolds, were a toxic mix.

"It was a very destructive relationship. It's the opposite of how I was brought up, this feeling that the only way you could receive love was through being popular," said Fisher, 32, in Sunday's Newsday.

Fisher, who is starring in Cabaret on Broadway, said she inherited her wit and her warmth from her mother.

"My mom's an amazing human being. I was a road baby. I fell asleep in the bandstand many times over and watched this magical performer in her beautiful flame dress, making people laugh and cry," she said. "But she's also the most rounded human being. She made us know the balance."

Redeering unto Caesar

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Sid Caesar's sharp tongue has gotten him in trouble.

Caesar has been sued by entertainment lawyer Dan Maccabee for telling the syndicated television show "Extra" in March 1999 that he "never got a dime" from videos of old routines. He blamed

ARTS BRIEFS

Maccabee, whom he called a "slick Hollywood lawyer." He also accused the attorney of "fleecing" him.

Maccabee, who was in a legal dispute with Caesar at the time the comedian made the comments, has filed a libel and slander suit against his former client and the producers and distributors of "Extra."

Maccabee, acting as his own lawyer, denied Caesar's allegations and said they damaged his reputation.

Caesar did not immediately return a phone call seeking comment placed by the Associated Press on Sunday.

"You write about your environment," she said. "It's no surprise my audience is East Coast and urban. My records aren't exactly selling in Bloomington."

"I grew up in a Jewish family that was agnostic Jewish. There was no talk of God. In fact, there was disdain for (religion)."

But she isn't lacking faith, she said. "There is a running theme of disappointment in my work," Sobule said. "But in the end, I'm like Charlie Brown. I'll go for that football."

Surviving a fish story

VIRGINIA BEACH, Va. (AP) — If only "Survivor" castaway Rudy Boesch could have reeled in a tuna while he was on the island of Pulau Tiga.

Boesch, 72, competing in a fishing tournament in his hometown of Virginia Beach, had the largest catch on July 1 when he reeled in a 115-pound bluefin tuna after fighting the fish for more than an hour. The event offered up to $2 million for anyone catching a blue marlin larger than 1,000 pounds.

Boesch has gained celebrity as one of the 16 people in the CBS hit left to fend for themselves on the island off the coast of Borneo to compete for a $1 million prize.

Rocker and the Braves leave New York safe and still in first place

■ The Mets and Braves split in their intense four game series.

NEW YORK (AP) — Tom Glavine restored order to a wild weekend at Shea Stadium, keeping John Rocker in the bullpen and the Braves in first place.

Glavine shut New York down for seven innings to win his first game in six weeks, and Javy Lopez homered twice as Atlanta gained a split of the four-game series with a 10-2 win over the New York Mets on Sunday.

"We're in the same position today as when we came in," Glavine said. "If we had lost, we would have been tied. Now, we're two games up. From that standpoint, these are big games. It's still too early to get too excited. A lot of things could change before we play again."

A lot happened this weekend.

The series featured a tense opening game that the Braves won thanks to Rocker's perfect inning of relief, a dramatic 10-run eighth inning by the Mets in the second game, and Greg Maddux's shortest start in four seasons on Saturday.

Glavine and Lopez made sure there was no such excitement in the finale, as Atlanta jumped out to a 7-0 lead after five innings to move two games in front of the Mets in the NL East.

Brewers 4, Cubs 2

MILWAUKEE — Charlie Hayes' two-run double capped a three-run eighth inning as the Milwaukee Brewers rallied to beat the Chicago Cubs 4-2 Sunday.

Hayes' double off reliever Tim Worrell scored Jeremy Burnitz and Geoff Jenkins.

Chicago's much-maligned bullpen failed again and blew a strong effort from Kerry Wood (3-6). Wood allowed six hits in 7 1/2 innings, but got into trouble in the eighth.

Tigers 2, Royals 0

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Hideo Nomo outdueled countryman Mac Suzuki, pitching shutout ball into the eighth inning Sunday as the Detroit Tigers stopped the Kansas City Royals 2-0 for a three-game sweep.

Nomo and Suzuki, who grew up in the same area of Western Japan and are close friends, matched each other almost pitch-for-pitch on the hot, humid afternoon until tiring in the eighth.

Suzuki (3-3) gave up just four hits and equaled his career-high with eight strikeouts. He walked Rich Becker leading off the eighth and was relieved by Jerry Spradlin.

Indians 7, Twins 1

CLEVELAND — It was not one single thing that broke the Cleveland Indians' four-game losing streak Sunday.

It was 11 singles, along with Chuck Finley's seven strong innings of pitching in a 7-1 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

"That's what we've been looking for," Omar Vizquel said after getting two of Cleveland's 11 hits — all singles. "We used the hit-and-run, set things up. We used to do that all the time, and we need to start doing it again."

The Indians hit eight singles in the first three innings to take a 5-0 lead off Joe Mays (4-10).

Cleveland won for just the seventh time in the last 22 games. It had scored a total of seven runs during its four-game slide.

White Sox 8, Red Sox 2

CHICAGO — Magglio Ordonez homered twice and drove in five runs and Frank Thomas added a solo shot Sunday, helping James Baldwin and the Chicago White Sox beat the Boston Red Sox 8-2.

Ordonez matched his career high for RBIs with a three-run homer in the first inning and a solo drive following Thomas' 23rd home run in the third. Ordonez also hit a sacrifice fly in the seventh.

Ordonez now has 19 homers and batted .488 (20-for-41) with five home runs and 17 RBIs on the just-completed 13-game home stand.

Orioles 3, Blue Jays 2

BALTIMORE — Will Clark hit his third homer in three games, a tiebreaking 434-foot, solo shot in the eighth inning that carried the Baltimore Orioles past the Toronto Blue Jays 3-2 Sunday.

Clark, who had two homers all season before June 30, hit a 2-1 pitch from Paul Quantrill (0-3) over the wall in center. The last time he homered in three straight starts was in August 1995.

Mike Trombley (4-2) got out of a jam in the Toronto eighth and Alan Mills got three outs for his first save since joining the Orioles on June 13.

Raul Mondesi homered for the Blue Jays, who dropped the opening two games of the series by a combined 20-8 score. Toronto had won 13 straight against Baltimore before coming to town Friday.

Phillies 9, Pirates 1

PHILADELPHIA — Rob Ducey homered twice and drove in a career-high five runs and rookie Pat Burrell went 4-for-4, leading Curt Schilling and the Philadelphia Phillies over the Pittsburgh

Houston Astros' Jeff Bagwell, right, connects for a three-run homer off St. Louis Cardinals' starting pitcher Darryl Kile Sunday.

Pirates 9-1 Sunday. The Phillies took two of three from Pittsburgh and recorded their fifth straight winning series.

Schilling (4-4) struck out 10 and walked none in seven innings. He gave up one run and eight hits — among them a ground-rule double and single on his first three pitches.

Schilling posted the 48th double-digit strikeout game of his career. He also helped himself with two of the Phillies' 15 hits.

Yankees 5, Devil Rays 2

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Roger Clemens returned from the disabled list to pitch seven impressive innings, and David Justice drove in two runs for his first RBIs in a New York uniform, giving the Yankees a 5-2 win Sunday over the Tampa Bay Devil Rays.

Clemens (5-6), sidelined nearly three weeks with a strained right groin, gave up one run and three hits. He struck out five and walked two.

The victory was the 252nd of his career, moving Clemens ahead of Bob Gibson into 38th on the all-time list.

BETHLEHEM, Pa. — Hale Irwin has plenty of experience and a ton of confidence. Now, he has another major championship.

Irwin overcame a two-stroke deficit with a 6-under-par 65 to win his second U.S. Senior Open in three years. He finished with 17-under 267 Sunday, the lowest total in tournament history, surpassing Gary Player's 270 in 1987.

"I never underestimate myself," Irwin said.

Begay wins GHO for second straight victory

CROMWELL, Conn. (AP) — If Tiger Woods isn't careful, he might start referring to him as Notah Begay's college teammate. Picking up right where Woods left off in the U.S. Open, Begay won the Greater Hartford Open on Sunday for his second consecutive victory on the PGA Tour.

Begay holed a 25-foot birdie putt on the final hole for a one-stroke victory over Matt Calavecchia in the Greater Hartford Open, making the American Indian the first player to win consecutive tournaments since Woods won the final two events last year.

"It's beyond words for me. I'm real happy with my game. And after all the personal problems I've had, it's a pleasure to be playing golf again," said Begay, who won the Jude Classic last week in Memphis, Tenn.

Arrested in January for drunken driving and jailed for a week, Begay missed five of 10 tournaments after that. Overcoming personal problems and the death of a close friend this week added to his resolve to win Sunday.

He closed with a 7-under-par 64 to break

Sosa says he and Baylor have put altercations behind them

Sosa said he is not willing to accept a trade without a contract extension from the new team. There are only a handful of teams with the financial wherewithal to pay Sosa the money he likely seeks, and most of those teams aren't interested.

I don't want to come into next year thinking about it," Sosa said. "Wherever I am next year, I want to come and not go through all the (garbage) — that I got to do more because I'm going into free agency. Take care of me now, let me play my game.

Arizona's interest in Sosa reportedly has waned because of a variety of factors, including manager Buck Showalter's premium on an orderly, distraction-free clubhouse. Other franchises mentioned for Sosa have been Cleveland, Toronto and the New York Mets.

Sosa said he and manager Don Baylor have put their differences behind them. The two hugged and exchanged small talk on Friday before the Cubs' series in Milwaukee started, and Baylor spoke highly of Sosa's focus through the distractions.

"He'd like to win and have a person like me that will go out and play every day and take care of business," Sosa said. "I don't think the whole situation is Don and I, because we never have problems. It was a misunderstanding, but now it's over."

Baylor hopes so.
"I don't know how things are going to go, but right now he's on this ballclub and he wants to win," Baylor said earlier this week-end. "I think now it's time to finally put this aside. He's struggling, we're all struggling."

"I would imagine it would probably resurface," he said of the trade rumors. "I don't think we've heard the last of it."

His problem, Sosa said, is with Baylor's bosses. Chicago traditionally has been a stingy organization, with Greg Maddux leading the list of players in recent years who have left for greener pastures and greener wallets.

"The bottom line is, if it's not going to work for me or for them, if they feel like they are not willing to build the team around me, then they come to the situation they got to get rid of somebody," he said. "I would love for them to tell me if they are going to do it."

Capriati is more hopeful now than in the past.

"I just have to believe in myself, expect that I can do well against her and I can win," said Capriati, who carries a respectable No. 16 ranking. "You first have to have that attitude."

"With a lot of the top players, I just didn't really believe myself that I could win. This time I'm really not going to think about who's on the other side of the net, just play my game."

At 24, Capriati still packs a fearsome forehead and a two-fisted punch with her backhand, weapons that make her a threat on grass, where a single shot can end a rally more easily than on other surfaces. But Davenport, also 24, seems to have recovered from a strained back, and hits equally hard with more consistency.

"I think I've got a fairly good read on her serve," said Davenport, sounding not the least bit worried. "I think I know where she likes to go. She was at a pretty high level in Australia, then after splitting from Harold, she kind of went down again.

"The last few weeks, she's been winning some matches again and trying to get back up there. I don't really know her well enough to say what she has left in her or how badly she wants it."

The second week at Wimbledon begins with six-time men's champion Pete Sampras playing Sweden's Jonas Bjorkman for a berth in the quarterfinals. Sampras stayed away from the practice courts Sunday, as he did before his last match, so he could rest and treat the tendinitis above his left ankle.

In other featured men's matches, No. 2 Andre Agassi plays German qualifier, No. David Prinosil Tim Henman of Britain takes on No. 10 Mark Philippoussis two days after the Australian won the second-longest match in Wimbledon history, and No. 9 Thomas Enqvist of Sweden meets American Jan-Michael Gambill.

Among the other women's round-of-16 matches, No. 1 Martina Hingis plays No. 11 Anke Huber. No. 5 Venus Williams meets Sabine Appelmans, No. 6 Monica Seles goes against No. 9 Arantxa Sanchez-Vicario, and No. 8 Serena Williams plays Tamarine Tanasugarn.

But it's when a player gets a call like the one Richardson did in New York on Thursday night that her instincts are truly tested.

Twice in the past week, Richardson's medical career has interrupted her softball career, and twice she has not hesitated before responding.

Last week, during a team meeting at its stop in Plant City, Fla., Richardson and team trainer Laura Mincy went to help a man who had been in a car accident; he was OK. But even after breathing into the mouth of a dying man, Richardson never questioned her priorities.

"If I never got back on that field — if I had to stay with him 24 hours — I would do that. Because, really, this is a game," she said. "But it's through this game that we are able to touch so many lives. And that's what makes this game incredible."

Richardson, who had stayed with Lamendola until the ambulance came, found herself standing by the road as the ambulance pulled away. "All of the sudden, it hit me. I've got a game to play," she said.

The game had resumed with a substitute at second base — a move that several of the players criticized.

"The game should have been stopped and all attention focused on the man," said catcher Michelle Venturella, who added that the team had gathered some things to send to Lamendola's family. "The whole team was very upset. We just felt that was not being very respectful."

But Richardson said she understood why the game went on.

"There were so many people who had come to see us play," she said. "We could not help him any more. He was in God's hands, and he was in the paramedics' hands."

Richardson ran back to the field, and went back into the game when her spot came up in the batting order (Unlike baseball, softball players can return after leaving for a substitution). She swung at the first pitch and grounded out to the second baseman.

"You'd think she already has enough going on with this game, and she goes into the stands to help someone," said Steven Lajoie, a paramedic who was working Sunday's game in Worcester. "Performing CPR has a huge emotional effect on you, and when you stop, all of the sudden you have to come back down from a scene."

There's a scene in the mystical movie Field of Dreams where a ballplayer is forced to choose between baseball and medicine. With a little girl choking in the stands, he stands at the first-base line, knowing that if he crosses it he can never go back.

"I cry every time I see that part," Richardson said. "So often, I have been on that line, deciding, 'Do I go 100 percent with medicine?'"

"I have been so lucky that I have not had to forgo my medical career," she said. "To be able to represent my country at the highest level of competition — I have had the best of both worlds."

Two local stores allow customers to purchase pieces of other cultures.

By Luc Hunt
The Daily Iowan

Because of the warm reception from customers that it has received in its first nine weeks, Special Collections, Coral Ridge Mall, plans to expand to Iowa City.

Special Collections, which has two rented kiosks in the mall, and Mythos, 5 S. Linn St., are two area stores that provide pieces for people who find fascination in the endless creativity and representations of various cultural phenomena.

The owners of both stores say the reasons for their stores' success are the American love of original and rare objects and the growing popularity of using other cultures' artifacts in home decoration.

Eric Ogoli, a co-owner of Special Collections, said that because of good business at the current Special Collections, he and his wife and co-owner, Michelle Ogoli, are looking to open locations in Iowa City and Cedar Rapids.

Mythos, a store owned and operated by Steve Johnson, opened in November 1999 as a venue for the many stat-

Two Iowa football players arrested

Maurice Brown and Fred Barr were involved in a fight early Saturday morning and charged with assault causing injury.

By Jeremy Schnitker and Laura Podolak
The Daily Iowan

Fred Barr and Maurice Brown, both members of the Iowa football team, were arrested and jailed this weekend on assault causing injury charges.

According to police reports, both Barr and Brown were heading east-bound on College Street, near Van Buren, around 2:25 a.m. Saturday and approached two people from behind and began throwing punches.

Both of the victims, whose names were not released, were struck in the head. According to police reports, one subject had a knot on his head and complained of a hurt jaw.

Barr arrested for assault causing injury

I ain't got nothing to say.

— Fred Barr,

Iowa football player on being arrested this weekend following an alleged fight.

fight is not yet known.

The charge of assault with injury is considered a serious misdemeanor. There were four witnesses to the altercation; two of them were not involved with the fight, the other two were the victims, according to police reports.

According to reports, all four witnesses to the fight said that there was no oral altercation prior to the assault.

Barr and Brown, who are roommates at 806 E. College Apt. 16, refused to comment on the charges when contacted Sunday evening.

"I ain't got nothing to say," Barr told The Daily Iowan.

Teammate Matt Stockdale, a junior defensive back for the Hawkeyes, also refused to comment, saying that he didn't know enough details on the incident to say anything about it.

Both players were expected to earn playing time this fall, especially Barr.

The promising young sophomore from Plantation, Fla., looks to be key to Iowa's defense next year. He was one of two true freshmen to start on last year's squad.

At the weak-side linebacker position, he was third in the team in tackles recording 74 stops. He was also named to the All-Big Ten freshman team.

Brown, a receiver from Ft. Lauderdale Fla., redshirted for the Hawkeyes last year and was not listed on Iowa's two-deep depth chart for spring practices in April.

WIMBLEDON

Capriati looks for Wimbledon win

Jennifer Capriati and Lindsay Davenport square off in Centre Court today.

By Steve Wilstein
Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — As Jennifer Capriati labored on a practice court Sunday, her father watched closely, coaxing her more than coaching her, kissing her from a distance, trying to make her smile.

Maybe that's what Capriati needs at this stage of her career, someone she trusts to look after her, keep her spirits up, make tennis fun again. Or maybe she needs more if she's ever going to win a title again.

Capriati plays defending Wimbledon champion Lindsay Davenport in the round of 16 Monday on Centre Court, and there is little to suggest from their recent form that an upset is in the making.

Capriati's weight is up and her game is down. She has been struggling on court this year, bouncing between the occasional highs and the more frequent lows, from a close semifinal loss to Davenport at the Australian Open to first-match losses at four other tournaments.

She split recently with Harold Solomon, the former pro who had coached her back to contention the last couple of years but grew weary of Capriati's increasingly lackadaisical attitude toward training.

Stefano Capriati first put a racket in his daughter's hands and coached her at times during her early, happy years as a teen prodigy. Throughout her much-chronicled troubles later on, he stood by her and offered her love.

But love counts for nothing on a tennis court, and there are no substitutes for fitness and mental toughness when it comes to playing for a Grand Slam title. Capriati is strong but not particularly quick these days, and her will to win is still shaky. Against Davenport, who prevailed in three sets in their last match at Scottsdale in March,

Softball star aids heart attack victim

Dr. Dot Richardson was forced to help a man who suffered a heart-attack during a game Thursday.

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

WORCESTER, Mass. — Dot Richardson had taken her position at second base between innings of a pre-Olympic exhibition softball game when a member of the team's coaching staff yelled her name with an urgency that didn't quite fit the situation.

"I knew by the sound of his voice that it was medical," Richardson, who also happens to be a doctor, said Sunday during the team's Central Park to Sydney tour stop in Worcester. "It's a situation I've seen before."

Leaving the field to run toward the commotion behind the first-base dugout, the second baseman listed in the media guide as Dr. Dot Richardson found a man laid out on the ground. He had no pulse, he was not breathing, and he was turning blue.

With another doctor compressing the man's chest, Richardson began breathing into his mouth, through a mask. The man opened his eyes — but just for a second, and then the two resumed cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

The man, 70-year-old Sal Lamendola, was pronounced dead Thursday night at Sisters of Charity Medical Center on Staten Island.

"Life is precious, and we need to live it to the fullest," Richardson said. "That gentleman was there because he was a softball umpire. He was where he wanted to be. God will take us when it's our time."

In softball, as in baseball, a second baseman needs to keep track of everything that might happen on the field: what the pitcher will throw, where the batter tends to hit the ball, and what to do no matter where the ball is hit.

New school vs. old school: Reiner and Lohaus face off in PTL

Jared Reiner will meet up with former Hawkeye and NBA star Brad Lohaus.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

Prime Time League action continues tonight at the North Liberty Community Center, as Highland Park Development and Fitzpatrick's tip off at 4:30 p.m.

Fans will be able to watch former Iowa forward Sam Okey of Highland Park and current Hawkeye Reggie Evans of Fitzpatrick's tear down the boards while Fitzpatrick's Ryan Hogan, a transfer from Kentucky, continues his solid outside shooting.

In the 6 p.m. matchup, they can see whether Dean Oliver and Duez Henderson of Goodfellow can rebound from their first loss of the year as they face off with the F.I.T. Zone. The F.I.T. Zone is led by the high-flying play of ex-Southern Illinois player Monte Jenkins and the solid play of David Kruse, who scored 24 for the Zone in its loss on June 29.

At 7:30 p.m., Luke Recker and Kyle Galloway of Active Endeavors will test their three-point shooting against fellow Iowa guard Rob Griffin of Iowa City Ready Mix. Recker poured in 44 points on June 29 in Active Endeavors' losing effort against Fitzpatrick's.

In the 9 p.m. matchup, Goodfellow Printing and Nike-Merrill Lynch will hit the court for the night's finale. Goodfellow Printing is led by Hawkeye newcomers Glen Worley and Jared Reiner. So far in the PTL season, Worley has been averaging more than 20 points per game, and Reiner has shown great progress.

Reiner will have a good opportunity to test his progress, as he will most likely be guarding former Hawkeye and NBA player Brad Lohaus of Nike-Merrill Lynch. Brody Boyd of Merrill Lynch looked sharp in his first PTL game on June 29 as he put up 28 points.

According to league Director Randy Larson, most of the players participating in the PTL will be present at the games despite Tuesday being the Fourth of July.
