200-meter showdown heating up

Even Las Vegas is getting in on the tension stirred up between Michael Johnson and Maurice Greene.

By Bert Rosenthal Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Even Las Vegas is booking odds on the Michael Johnson-Maurice Greene showdown over 200 meters at the U.S. Olympic trials, just like a heavyweight fight between two great warriors. And an Internet service is conducting a poll on the race, similar to a presidential election. Not since Johnson's ill-fated 150-meter, $2 million match race against Canada's Donovan Bailey in 1997 has track been so rife with anticipation — or so much trash-talking. Johnson admits that the buildup for this encounter between the world's top two sprinters would grab his interest if he were not one of the competitors. "I would tune in Sunday because of what's been made of this — it's huge," he said. "It's great for the sport." If ever a sport needed a shot of adrenaline, it's track in the United States. Johnson vs. Greene might be just the kick.

There is no guarantee that the two main characters will get onto the track together. Both have to get through their first-round heats Saturday and semifinals Sunday before reaching the 200 final, the last event of the trials.

If they do — and barring any mishaps, they should — Johnson will be the 5-7 betting favorite, according to a Las Vegas book. The odds on Greene winning are 6-5.

The Internet poll also favors Johnson, with 84 percent of the respondents saying he will win, 14 percent choosing Greene, and 2 percent favoring one of the other six finalists. Picking anyone other than Johnson or Greene is like betting on the Cubs to win the World Series or the Clippers to win the NBA Finals.

The showdown has been building since the two supreme sprinters were supposed to meet at the 1999 USA Championships at Eugene, Ore., where Johnson withdrew at the last minute because of injury.

Greene wasted no time in contending that Johnson was ducking him. Johnson countered by saying he was legitimately hurt.

The trash-talking intensified right from the first day of the trials last week. After Greene won his opening round heat in the 100 meters, he yelled, "Get Michael Johnson — that's what I want to do."

The 32-year-old Johnson called Greene, who will be 26 Sunday, "immature" and "disrespectful," and their verbal exchanges have gotten nastier and nastier.

Cheney leads pack for Bush veep, observers say

Aides to the Texas governor say, "Nobody has a lock on the job."

By Ron Fournier Associated Press

WASHINGTON — George W. Bush's top vice presidential candidate, former Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, has told associates there is a good chance he will get the job, officials said Sunday as the Republican governor from Texas prepared to announce his pick. Cheney, former Sen. John Danforth of Missouri and perhaps others are on Bush's short list, according to highly placed GOP officials. In seclusion at his Texas ranch, Bush tentatively planned to introduce his running mate Tuesday. Even his closest advisers said they did not know if he had made up his mind Sunday. The silence from Bush on a day he had promised to decide prompted aides to caution that he could make a surprise pick.

Cheney

"Nobody has a lock on the job," according to a senior GOP official who said, despite the admonition, that Cheney was the front-runner.

Others mentioned as possible candidates include Govs. Frank Keating of Oklahoma, Tom Ridge of Pennsylvania and George Pataki of New York, Rep. John Kasich of Ohio and Sens. Chuck Hagel of Nebraska and Bill Frist and Fred Thompson of Tennessee.

Signs continued to point toward Cheney, who's also leading Bush's search for a running mate. The former Wyoming lawmaker was White House chief of staff under Former President Ford and Pentagon chief under Bush's father, former President Bush.

Cheney, the chief executive officer of Halliburton Co., an energy firm, told associates last week that there was a "good chance" he would be tapped by Bush, according to an official close to Cheney in Texas. The official said Cheney wanted to give the company a "heads up" because he had previously assured company officers that he would not take the job.

Seeking to reassure Bush — and perhaps potential voters — Cheney underwent a physical exam in recent days and received a clean bill of health, said a GOP official familiar with the deliberations. Cheney, 59, suffered three heart attacks by age 48 but has reported no health problems since.

Bush's top two strategists fanned out to the Sunday TV news shows, defending Cheney against questions about his health and ties to the oil

Promising pies & chain saws, fair opens

The Johnson County Fair will run this week, featuring a variety of activities.

By Jessi Todden The Daily Iowan

Offering livestock judging during the day and entertainment at night, Johnson County Fair officials are hoping this year's fair will attract record numbers of people.

The fair will begin today, holding competitions and several activities, with an end-of-fair dance Thursday night. On Friday, there will be a livestock sale.

Some of the main attractions are the fair queen pageant, a chain-saw artist, tractor pulls, live music, a pie-baking contest, bingo and square dances, said fair manager Rich Gay.

Many local businesses are renting booths at the fair as promotional efforts that also offer some diversity, Gay said.

"Providing the weather stays nice, there should be no problem in attracting several different (kinds of) people to the fair because there will be a variety of things for people to see this year," he said.

The Johnson County Fair is one of the four county fairs in Iowa that has no admission fee, Gay said. Although many of the events will also be free, fairgoers will have to pay to go on rides and play games that are part of the large carnival, said Gene Mohling, the fair board secretary and county extension director.

"Probably the largest attraction of this fair is that it's free," he said. "People can come out night after night to enjoy themselves and never spend a dime."

The fair board and the volunteers who put on the fair try to cater to everyone by providing musical and talent shows booked months in advance, Mohling said.

The fair also concentrates on attracting a younger audience by designating Tuesday as Kids' Day.

Web message board is new twist in Deer Wars

Citizens will be able to debate the pros and cons of the city's deer policy over the Internet.

By Andrea Mason The Daily Iowan

Several messages posted on Iowa City's new deer message board have community members debating the actual deer issue as well as the new medium used to discuss it.

The Iowa City Deer Management Committee recommended establishing a message board; it is a part of the city's "Living With Deer" Web site. The site, www.iowa-city.org/deer.htm, was put up on July 21 and has had only a handful of comments posted over the weekend.

Iowa City resident Florence Boos submitted a comment to the site Sunday, and though she's an opponent to the city's sharpshooting plan, she is pleased that the city has the comment board.

"I deeply hope everyone uses it," she said. "I think it is nice the city is gathering opinions in a open way, and it is a good forum for opponents."

Anne Zalenski lives in a neighborhood with a high deer concentration. Until Sunday, she was not even aware of the site. Although she appreciates a new forum for others to discuss the deer overpopulation, she said she would not use it.

"I am not convinced of the effectiveness of Web-based community response," she said.

Zalenski would rather attend the meetings than click on a Web site, she said. However, she would encourage her children, who have studied deer overpopulation, to visit the site and comment.

The Web site was made possible by the Iowa City City Council, said Lisa Mollenhauer, an administrative assistant to the city manager. The committee is very interested in finding ways to connect with the public and receive their input, she said.

"We had a telephone line last year where people could call in to relay a message to the committee," Mollenhauer said. "Unfortunately,

Gov't ban on fraud misses some big fish

More than 700 contractors who have defrauded government are free to get new U.S. contracts.

By John Solomon and Katherine Pfleger Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Hundreds of companies that have been prosecuted or sued for defrauding the government can still receive federal business — and many have gotten new contracts — because agencies chose not to ban them, a computer analysis shows.

The companies range from a Texas contractor convicted of selling faulty Coast Guard windshields to an environmental cleanup company convicted of bribery.

"There is a continuing pattern of fraud and abuse in some of our largest contractors. The American people have every right to be outraged at this," said Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, who has tried to highlight the problem for a decade.

Harkin assembled a list of 103 defense contracts where the government was defrauded. Only four cases led to bans.

Vice President Al Gore wants to expand the federal debarment program to exclude businesses with troublesome labor or worker-safety records — even though the program is not barring many of those already convicted or sued for fraud.

The computer analysis by the Associated Press found many companies with a history of fraud turned right around and got new federal contracts. Some had multiple court cases against them.

Saybolt Inc., a petroleum-products inspection company based in Houston, pleaded guilty in 1998 to submitting false lab analyses to the Environmental Protection Agency. The company also admitted to arranging a $50,000 bribe to Panama's government.

At the time of the plea, government officials spared few words for a company they said "betrayed the public's trust and cheated all of us." But the agency did not ban the company from future business, even though the judge who fined the company $4.9 million suggested it as a possible punishment.

"You run the risk of being investigated, prosecuted and, perhaps worse, debarred from engaging in that business," the judge said during sentencing.

EPA and company officials said Saybolt was given another chance because it was taken over by new management and implemented state of the art technology to ensure that its tests are not rigged.

"The government does set a high standard when it doesn't debar a company, and that is rightfully so," Saybolt general counsel John Denson said. "We were fortunate as new management of Saybolt to demonstrate our commitment to those high standards."

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Claudia Schiffer got a visit from a man carrying a large bouquet of flowers, but he wasn't at the supermodel's doorstep for a date.

Police said a 44-year-old man who was fleeing an arrest warrant for assault and battery approached a patrolman, identified himself as Schiffer's husband and asked for directions to her summer home in Spain, the state news agency Efe reported Sunday.

The officer gave him directions but called his base to report his suspicions. Police detained the man as he knocked on the door — with flowers in hand, the agency reported.

Schiffer was not in the residence at the time.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Director Robert Zemeckis, best known for his comedies, says making his first thriller had a lot in common with directing for laughs.

Zemeckis' supernatural mystery What Lies Beneath opened on July 21. The film stars Michelle Pfeiffer and Harrison Ford as a couple whose idyllic life is disrupted by the vengeful ghost of a young woman.

It's hardly a laughing matter, but the director of Forrest Gump, the Back to the Future movies and Who Framed Roger Rabbit? said setting up a scare was the same as setting up a joke.

"If it's a little too fast, it won't be scary. If it's a little too slow, it won't be scary," Zemeckis, 48, said in Sunday's Orange County Register.

The same goes for a good joke, the director says. Still, Zemeckis said he felt compelled to include comic relief to offset the jolts in his new thriller. "I can't seem to help myself," he said.

Downey & not out in LA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Robert Downey Jr.'s lawyers say the actor should have been released from prison a long time ago.

Attorney Robert Walters said the Malibu judge who sentenced Downey on drug charges made legal and mathematical errors, the Los Angeles

Times reported Sunday.

Walters said Superior Court Judge Lawrence Mira did not specify whether Downey's misdemeanor sentences would run at the same time or in a series and didn't take into account the time Downey had already served in a drug-rehab program.

Under Mira's sentence, Downey would be eligible for release on Nov. 2. His lawyers say he was eligible in February.

Downey, 34, was jailed last year after admitting during a probation hearing that he was missing scheduled drug tests. Mira sentenced him to three years in prison.

Downey earned an Oscar nomination for his work in the title role in Chaplin, the 1992 screen biography of the famed comedian. Other film credits include Less Than Zero, Natural Born Killers, Two Girls and a Guy and U.S. Marshals.

The actor has had a series of drug-related legal troubles dating back to the mid 1990s.

Schrimper retires as Natural History Museum director

It's the end of an era at the UI Museum of Natural History, as George Schrimper retires after 29 years as director. Julia Golden, a curator in the UI Department of Geoscience, will serve as interim director of the museum during a nationwide search for a permanent successor.

Schrimper, who had been a graduate student in museum studies at the UI, was appointed museum faculty instructor and assistant curator in 1966. His task was to redesign antiquated exhibits so they would be both useable in undergraduate natural science courses and interesting to the museum public.

When the curator retired after 22 years in 1971, Schrimper was appointed museum curator (a title later changed to director) and assistant professor of museum studies. Exhibit renovations continued throughout the 1970s and included the initial planning for a major new exhibit gallery, Iowa Hall.

The location would be on the outskirts of Iowa City, three miles from the current courthouse.

By Kirsten Veng-Pedersen
The Daily Iowan

The Johnson County Jail site-selection work group recommended a new jail be built west of Highway 218 and north of Melrose Avenue at a meeting with the Johnson County Board of Supervisors on July 21.

The 53-acre site is approximately three miles from the courthouse and the current jail. Panel members chose the location over three others because it already belongs to the county and is off the tax rolls, it has quick access to the highway, it allows for expansion, and it is buffered by space and a ravine.

"We don't have the problem of being restricted (with the chosen site)," said Jonathan Jordahl, a Johnson County supervisor and member of the work group.

The proposed jail will house 255 prisoners — the projected number for the year 2019, Jordahl said. The current jail regularly exceeds its capacity of 92, and jail officials have been warned by the state jail inspector that the overcrowding is unacceptable.

The new jail, if built, will have a "pod" design, allowing fewer prison officials to supervise more prisoners.

Panel wants Melrose site for jail

■ The location would be on the outskirts of Iowa City, three miles from the current courthouse.

By Kirsten Veng-Pedersen
The Daily Iowan

The Johnson County Jail site-selection work group recommended a new jail be built west of Highway 218 and north of Melrose Avenue at a meeting with the Johnson County Board of Supervisors on July 21.

The 53-acre site is approximately three miles from the courthouse and the current jail. Panel members chose the location over three others because it already belongs to the county and is off the tax rolls, it has quick access to the highway, it allows for expansion, and it is buffered by space and a ravine.

"We don't have the problem of being restricted (with the chosen site)," said Jonathan Jordahl, a Johnson County supervisor and member of the work group.

The proposed jail will house 255 prisoners — the projected number for the year 2019, Jordahl said. The current jail regularly exceeds its capacity of 92, and jail officials have been warned by the state jail inspector that the overcrowding is unacceptable.

The new jail, if built, will have a "pod" design, allowing fewer prison officials to supervise more prisoners.

The design will allow the county to easily expand the jail through the construction of additional pods. Because the jail could be moved out instead of up, expansions would be cheaper, Jordahl said.

Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White has told The Daily Iowan he would prefer a jail site closer to the Johnson County Courthouse, 417 S. Clinton St.

"The Melrose site would bring some indirect costs in transportation to the county," he said.

Iowa City police Lt. Matt Johnson said the new location would add travel time to the arrest process but said he was unsure how it would affect Iowa City police in the long run.

UI senior Matt Smith, who spent a night in the current jail in June, said the new site might be inconvenient, especially for students who don't have cars. He added, however, that he doesn't feel sorry for them.

"Jail was never meant to be a convenient situation," he said.

Other sites considered by the work group included a site at the current jail, a site north of the County Administration Building and a site near the chosen location but south rather than north of Melrose Avenue.

The site near the administration building was ruled out because of the necessity to buy up existing business properties in the area, which would escalate the project's costs.

Use of the current site was ruled

Elliotts climb aboard library cause

■ The former Iowa athletics director and his wife will lead the expansion.

By Andrea Mason
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City Public Library will get a bit of help from some old friends. Chalmers "Bump" Elliott and his wife, Barbara Elliott, have agreed to co-chair a campaign to encourage voters to approve a $18.4 million bond issue in the Nov. 7 election.

The Elliotts were asked to be honorary heads of the campaign by members of the Citizens for Library Expansion Committee. They will primarily speak with the public at meetings and other events.

"If we can in anyway help people make up their minds or get people to support the library referendum, we want to," Bump Elliott said.

The Elliotts plan to show their support for the library expansion in order to persuade others to vote for the referendum in November, said Karen Kubby, the official co-chairwoman for the committee.

"The Elliotts are long-time library supporters," she said. "They also live out their values about kids reading on a long-term basis and read to them once a week."

The public library has not expanded since it was built in 1981. It has been cramped since the early 1990s, said Mark Martin, the president of the Iowa City Library Board of Trustees. A plan for expansion has been developed over the past seven years, he said. "The numbers of people alone are going to be important to serve because the community has grown immensely," he said.

Every section of the library is overcrowded, said Martin, who is also an official co-chairman of Citizens for Library Expansion. If the library wants to maintain its No. 1 rank among libraries in Iowa and its No. 9 national ranking, expansion everywhere is a must, he said. "Unless we expand, the library is going to become more and more difficult to operate," Martin said.

Bump Elliott agrees. "If we are going to have all the services that go with the library, I think we're going to have to expand," he said. The Public Library has a book circulation of a city three times the size of Iowa City, Kubby said.

The building to the west of the library, the Leno & Cilek building, will be replaced if the referendum is passed; the new structure will include a second floor. The first floor will remain retail stores, and the second floor will give the library the added space it needs. The design also leaves open the possibility of a third floor, but, Martin said, that will probably not be necessary anytime soon.

Local man charged with attempted murder

■ An alleged fight with a girlfriend ends with serious charges, Iowa City police say.

By Bridget Stratton
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City man was charged with attempted murder Sunday after he allegedly tried to strangle his girlfriend.

Iowa City police officers responded to a call at 1900 Muscatine Ave. at 1:42 a.m., when the woman phoned 911.

Officers found the woman at the residence of her boyfriend, Mark W. Davis, 37, who had fled the scene before the police arrived, said Officer Ron Gist, one of two arresting officers.

Iowa City police apprehended Davis at an undisclosed location, Gist said.

Davis was charged with attempted murder after he allegedly scratched, strangled and punched his girlfriend, said police Lt. Matt Johnson.

The police investigation is ongoing, but there are no indications that the defendant used a weapon in the assault, Gist said.

The victim was allegedly having difficulty breathing when police arrived. She sought medical attention but did not have to be hospitalized, he said.

Gist said he decided to press charges after talking to the victim and because of events that allegedly transpired. He declined to comment on the events because the incident is still under investigation.

Davis remains in the Johnson County Jail, with bond set at $132,500.

Police did not release the victim's name; calls placed to Davis' home were not answered.

Choosing a VP involves more than simple politics

The Bush campaign has told us that we can expect the vice presidential nominee to be named as early as today.

This is always a delicate matter for a presidential candidate, if for no other reason than the contradictions that are involved in the process. For instance, it is believed that a vice presidential nominee should be able to add spice and excitement to the ticket but not so much as to upstage the presidential candidate. The vice presidential nominee should also be able to draw undecided voters to the ticket but cannot deviate from the party ideology enough to threaten the loyalty of its base.

The expansion of the role of vice president that has occurred in the last several decades complicates matters further. Now one has to consider not merely the election, but also the administration that may proceed it, because the two may be working together closely. In other words, the two candidates must be able to personally get along. A combination such as John F. Kennedy and Lyndon Johnson, two people different in style and character, who did not particularly like each other would be nearly unfeasible today.

The two candidates must be able to personally get along. A combination such as JFK and LBJ, two people different in style and character who did not particularly like each other, would be nearly unfeasible today.

Gov. George W. Bush has stated that the most important criterion in his decision will be whether the person can act as president if he is incapacitated. All of the candidates that are prominent in media speculation are capable of this. These include Sens. Chuck Hagel of Nebraska, Fred Thompson of Tennessee and John McCain of Arizona, Govs. Frank Keating of Oklahoma, Tom Ridge of Penn and George Pataki of New York, Rep. John Kasich of Ohio and former Defense Secretary Dick Cheney.

Because it is impossible to speculate how Bush feels about the intangible qualities of these candidates, such as his ability to get along affably with them, the mind moves on to other factors.

There is the question of whether the nominee should be identical to the governor on the matter of abortion. If Bush chooses a candidate that is part of the "choice" community, then he will have to deal, quite rightly, with questions about ideological consistency.

And there is also one last factor that must be considered when choosing the vice presidential candidate, and that is the "boredom" factor. To be quite honest, this presidential election has been incredibly dull. Bush should take this into account while making his selection but should resist the temptation of sacrificing ideological ground in order to satisfy it.

When all of these things are considered, it is easy to recognize why this decision is such a tough one. However, the president of the United States must make many tough decisions, and we will all examine Bush's choice with this in mind.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Sending out thanks to the Englert Road race runners, sponsors

The Englert Civic Theatre Group would like to extend its sincere gratitude to all participants, businesses and volunteers who helped make the first annual Englert Road Races a tremendous success. More than 250 people participated in the half-mile Fun Run, the 5K and the 10K races, and the event raised more than $10,000, far exceeding our initial expectations. The Englert Road Races was one of the group's most successful fund-raising events to date, and it couldn't have been done without their help.

We would like to extend special thanks to the sponsors of the race — Runner's World, the Sanctuary, Prairie Lights, Fin & Feather, Sal's Music Emporium, Baldy's, Studiolo, Iowa City Community Theatre and Dreamwell Theatre — and to those individuals and businesses whose efforts were indispensable to the overall success, including Edna Englert, Kathy Duethman, Bob Brown, Bill Blanchard, Bikers of Iowa City, Iowa City Police Department, Brueggers Bagels, Hy-Vee, Radoslaw Lorkovic, Dave Zollo, Kevin Gordon, New Pioneer Co-op, Blooming Prairie Warehouse, Power Bar, and all health-tent participants. The complete list of all who contributed their time and energy to the race is far too long to include here, but without their hard work and dedication, the race could never have taken place.

The Englert Road Races not only brought out hundreds of community members in support of the cause to buy and restore the historic Englert Theatre, but it also helped push the donations over the $160,000 mark — an exceptional amount for only seven weeks of fund-raising efforts. The extraordinary community and media support for this race truly showed that great things ARE happening for the Englert Theatre.

To fight binge drinking, Iowa City needs to refocus its efforts

I want the public to realize research shows binge drinking begins well before college. According to the Centers for Disease Control: "8 percent of fourth- and fifth-graders admit to having had a full beer. By ninth grade, 70 percent have had at least one drink, and 20 percent report having binged at least once." I personally have never seen a fourth-, fifth- or ninth-grader being served alcohol in a bar or restaurant. According to the Harvard School of Public Health College Alcohol Study, "if they were binge drinkers in high school, they were three times more likely to binge in college."

Another important fact is "binge drinking on college campus is at the lowest level since this behavior has been tracked (1980), and alcohol abstinence is at an all time high," according to the National Institute on Drug Abuse. The Stepping Up Project's own statistics state, "A survey by the UI students found that 40 percent of students NEVER DRINK."

Therefore, it seems the community should be focusing its efforts on its junior high and high school children and not solely focusing on keeping 19- and 20-year-old adults out of restaurants and bars. I'm not suggesting the community ignore adults who have binge drinking problems. I'm merely suggesting that if the real concern is preventing underage binge drinking, then the focus needs to begin with the community's children. Parents, doctors and teachers need to start delivering the message about alcohol abuse early and often.

Will eBooks be THE books?

Metallica told us that Napster would cause the end of the music industry. Like the corner preachers on a Friday night, everyone heard it, and nobody cared. Millions of Internet junkies laughed when the boys of speed metal announced that the Internet was cruel and mean to millionaire rock stars.

But then, Metallica scared Napster. Record companies were saved. Millions were disappointed, and the industry continues on exploiting artists and their fans alike with their Milli Vanilla-esque pledge of loyalty.

Just as those preachers on Friday night are waiting for the second coming, Internet fiends wait pensively for a new threat to the commercial world from the electronic marketplace. Then a rocker with a limited, if any, career, decides to publish his next book on the Internet, and the publishing houses grin and say "neat" as they all consider early retirement.

Starting today, you can go to www.stephenking.com and read the first 5,000 words of The Plant. A new book by master of horror, car-crash survivor and fledgling rock star, King's saga is about a vampire vine that controls a publishing house through human sacrifices.

Part 2 will appear on the Web site on Aug. 21, and the third installment will appear after 75 percent of people who download or print the first two parts send Mr. King $1. Of course, if no one sends the master of electronic horror any money, then the reading public will never know how the story ends.

Simon & Schuster have publicly announced that this is an interesting experiment by its writer, and it is endorsing his attempt at self-publication. Collectively with every other major publisher in the world, it is praying for failure, for it knows that writers could easily undercut all printing cost by publishing their own work on the Internet. King's last book Riding the Bullet, published on the Internet by Simon & Schuster, had more than 500,000 hits, and people paid $2.50 apiece to download it.

English-major math skills tell me then that if the same 500,000 people download King's new work, 75 percent of whom send in $1 — add the decimal, subtract pi — it looks like a ton of money for King and not a dime for Simon & Schuster. As Nelson would say, "Hah hah."

Doubting Michael Thomas of the New York Observer would tell you that this is unique to King and that most writers would not sell in such numbers over the Internet. I agree that the amount of money that King makes will probably out-gross someone such as James Galvin. But this could be the starting block that other writers use to dive into the electronic financial swimming pool that the Internet has become. I would even argue that people will pay to read their favorite writers more fervently in this scheme of publishing — I would have paid $100 to read Fencing the Sky if I had known every dollar were going directly to Mr. Galvin.

There is also a question of the place of the artist in such a clear money-making scheme. Sure Dickens wrote by the word, but a question of intent has to be raised when someone tells you to pay for the ending of a story — or else. Does this mean that movies will someday charge us to find out if the old lady at the beginning is Rose on the boat and if Leo lives? I doubt whether this will ever happen, but think how much people would have spent to find out the ending of Titanic. Can the same be done with the end of a book?

The Plant appears to be the testing ground for this scheme, and I am betting the answer will be a resounding death-to-the-large-publishing-house "YES!" (In case you don't know, Leo froze, she was the old woman, and she throws some jewel that Celine Dion wore at the Academy awards into the ocean.) Realistically, though, I hope this does signal the downfall of publishing houses worldwide. Like the record industry, publishing houses have a legitimate foe in the Internet because of these type of opportunities. But if Stephen King can publish on the Web, and make some money in the process, what's to stop other, less-known writers from by-passing mainstream publishing houses?

I welcome the end. You may not love reading off the computer just yet, but in time technology will make reading electronically more soothing to the eyes. And when this happens, everyone from Galvin to Grisham will benefit from the death of the large publishing houses because of the opportunities opened up for the independent writer.

Stephen Balsley is a DI columnist and co-founder of Smack!, an online literary journal (<http://www.uiowa.edu/~smack>).

Now that her daughter has left for college and Norman works at the lab all day and night, Claire seems to be suffering from "empty nest" syndrome. Their new house, the home of Dr. Spencer's recently deceased father, seems haunted, and Claire witnesses strange happenings: Doors open by themselves, bath-rooms belch invisible steam, and there are suspi-

The Beatles' U.S. debut even topped the 1968 comeback of the King.

An estimated 73 million people were watching that night in '64 — about three times the audience of an episode of this summer's TV blockbuster "Survivor." John Lennon was so nervous he taped song lyrics to the back of his guitar.

As Ringo Starr explained, the band didn't realize until it arrived in America how important Sullivan's Sunday night showcase was.

For a generation of rock 'n' rollers, it was the moment they knew they wanted to be stars. "I remember thinking, 'This can be done. I can do that,'" singer Billy Joel said.

FILM REVIEW

By Graham Ross

Film: What Lies Beneath
Director: Robert Zemeckis
Writer: Clark Gregg
Starring: Michelle Pfeiffer, Harrison Ford, Katharine Towne
Length: 130 min.
Rating: PG-13

What Lies Beneath features great actors and a great director. But half the plot's being given away in the previews and the film's relying heavily on clichéd scare tactics drain the movie of having any merit whatsoever.

Michelle Pfeiffer heads the cast as Claire Spencer, the wife of Dr. Norman Spencer (Harrison Ford), a well-accomplished scientist. Now that her daughter has left for college and Norman works at the lab all day and night, Claire seems to be suffering from "empty nest" syndrome. Their new house, the home of Dr. Spencer's recently deceased father, seems haunted, and Claire witnesses strange happenings: Doors open by themselves, bathtubs belch invisible steam, and there are suspicions that the neighbor may have murdered his wife. The overall plot is not terrible. There are some plot twists and turns that are unexpected, and the cinematography is excellent. In one particularly beautiful shot, the camera drops beneath the surface of the floor and pans up to the face of a character lying down (obviously done through digital composing). What really hurts this movie is that its attempts to frighten the audience are so predictable that they ultimately fail. Horror directors have a typical bag of tricks that they utilize to shock audiences, such as people or objects appearing suddenly from the off-screen space accented by a short, quick music cue. Or the very popular "bad guy's dead but he's not" technique. Robert Zemeckis (who also directed Forrest Gump and Back to the Future) also uses these methods.

What really hurts this movie is the fact that its attempts to frighten the audience are so predictable that they ultimately fail

However, he uses them over and over throughout the film or at places where the audience knows it's going to happen. Even worse, the film blatantly steals from Hitchcock so much that you'd swear the film was directed by Brian De Palma, a director who has made a career of stealing techniques from Hitchcock and others. For example, in one scene, Claire spies on her neighbor through his windows using binoculars, à la Rear Window. The musical score (Alan Silvestri) even sounds suspiciously like a Bernard Herman score, the famous composer who wrote the sound-

If there is any reason to see the film, it would be for the incredible performances by Ford and Pfeiffer. Pfeiffer is very convincing and does not overact, often the most common flaw of horror films. Ford's character is also very intriguing. It is not often that a type-cast actor such as Ford gets to play an anti-hero.

I only wish that I had not seen the trailer to this film because it ruined so much for me. This is not uncommon in Hollywood today — placing the best scenes in the trailer in order to draw the audience.

I recall that the late Gene Siskel had the habit of putting his fingers in his ears and humming loudly during previews so he could go into every film fresh and uninhibited. This could have been a great film if not for its preview and its lack of originality.

King's Web foray strikes note of terror

■ The scare-meister will test the honesty of online readers and bypass his publisher.

By Seth Sutel
 Associated Press

NEW YORK — Is Stephen King trying to kill his publishers? Or just scare the daylight out of them?

In an ambitious and quirky experiment beginning today, the king of horror is offering up the first two installments of a previously unpublished serial novel by posting them on his Web site and asking readers to pony up a buck for each copy they download. If the honor system works, the episodes will continue.

I don't think technology changes basic power relationships between an author and the marketplace.

— Jonathan Tasini, president of the National Writers' Union

Although he's eliminating his publisher from the process — and the story line of The Plant is about a creeping "vampire" plant that takes over a publishing company — King said the only people he's interested in scaring are his readers.

"I love my editors, and I like my publisher," King said in a message on his Web site. "I love the smell of glue."

Simon & Schuster, which worked closely with King on his previous electronic publishing effort, a novella for hand-held devices that sold more than half a million copies in March, said it doesn't mind being left out on the distribution of The Plant.

"We see it in the vein of an experiment rather than a permanent move," said Simon & Schuster President Carolyn Reidy. "We're confident that publishers add enough value to the process that authors are still going to want to use them."

Other publishing industry insiders also see King's experiment as just that — a testing of the waters by a hugely popular author rather than a blueprint for what's to come for all writers.

"This may work for Stephen King, but it won't work for 99 percent of the people out there," said Larry Kirshbaum, the president of Time Warner Trade Publishing.

But if King proves his point, and he gets payment for 75 percent of the downloads — the minimum he wants for the series to continue — it would go a long way toward challenging the conventional wisdom that people are unwilling to pay for anything they see or hear on the Internet.

The big question is whether the honesty system will work.

Unlike King's Riding the Bullet novella, which was released in an encrypted format, downloads of The Plant will be in the open PDF format, which can be copied and printed at will.

King is counting on people making a credit-card payment online or sending in a check or money order. Amazon.com will process the payments.

"This ain't Napster," he said. "Take what you want ... and pay for it."

While many publishing executives are wishing King well, most are skeptical about the public's willingness to pay.

Mort Janklow, a literary agent who represents hundreds of authors, sees a huge future in the electronic distribution of books once good business models are in place.

"These are highways with no cars on them. I own all the cars," Janklow said. "After they finish with all the distribution patterns they will need product."

"That's a fellow sitting up in Maine having fun, but it's not a way to run a business."

Writers, agents and publishers recognize that making a product available in a new way and getting a lot of people to buy it are two very different things. "I don't think technology changes basic power relationships between an author and the marketplace. You still need a lot of money and power to promote a book," said Jonathan Tasini, the president of the National Writers' Union. "The same people who already make a good living at the top of the bestseller list may have another way to sell, but I don't believe there will be a dramatic change for other authors."

But the fact that a popular author can do away with his publisher, however briefly, has given people who edit, make, and sell books for a living something to contemplate.

"It writes in the largest possible letters that publishers must prove their value in finding an author her or his audience and doing in better than the author can do it by her- or himself," said Simon & Schuster's Reidy.

Murder suspect holds 3 hostage

■ The suspect, wanted in a convenience-store slaying, released two children Sunday afternoon.

By Vickie Chachere
Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — A murder suspect holding five hostages in a suburban home released two of the four children Sunday as police tried to end the two-day standoff.

Both children, an 8-year-old boy and a girl under 1, were in good health, although the boy was hungry and thirsty, Orange County Sheriff Kevin Beary said.

Beary said the suspect, Jamie Dean Petron, 41, had asked police to see the children reunited with their parents on live television after releasing them. Local news stations aired the footage shortly after their release.

Petron told police he would release the other hostages after the tape of a statement he made was aired, Orange County Sheriff's Capt. Steve Jones said, but he continued to hold them Sunday night.

A woman in her 40s, a 16-year-old girl and a 9-month-old girl remained inside the home Sunday, police said. Earlier Sunday, police had fired a shot at Petron in an attempt to end the standoff but missed.

Shortly after 5 p.m., negotiators released the taped statement from Petron, at his request. Petron said he didn't mean to hurt anyone.

"This is not me, it's something that totally happened," he said. "All I can say is deep in my heart I am really apologetic. Don't think I'm the devil, I'm not the devil."

Petron also had a message for his son and baby granddaughter. "I love you guys. Maybe we'll see each other some day," he said.

Petron took the family hostage on July 22 after shooting an Orange County sheriff's deputy in the leg as the deputy tried to arrest him outside a nearby grocery store, police Petron is suspected in the July 21 shooting death of a Pompano Beach convenience store clerk, authorities said.

Petron apparently did not know the family before he burst into their home in the Meadow Woods subdivision, south of Orlando. Approximately 20 nearby homes were evacuated.

Chinese film Devils finds devils close to home

■ Chinese censors want the negatives to Jiang Wen's Cannes-winning film.

By William Foreman
Associated Press

BEIJING — Since he won the Grand Prize at the prestigious Cannes Film Festival in May, Chinese director Jiang Wen says, his life has been like an Alfred Hitchcock thriller.

Censors have refused to allow his movie about wartime China to be screened in his homeland, and, what's worse, they won't tell him why. They also want to confiscate the movie's negatives, and Jiang fears that he'll eventually be banned from directing and acting in China.

"This is a little absurd, and it's a little terrifying," Jiang said with an exasperated voice during a telephone interview from his hometown of Beijing.

The main obstacle, he said, appears to be political.

In an unpublished document circulating among Beijing's film community, censors have branded Jiang's film, Devils on the Doorstep, unpatriotic. The film portrays Chinese villagers who capture a wounded Japanese soldier near the end of World War II. They treat him well until deciding to trade him for food.

Devils on the Doorstep is not the only work of art having problems here: Worried about political challenges at a time of fast-paced change, Communist Party media czars are trying to clamp down on the arts. They have banned liberal intellectuals from publishing and proscribed several books considered too political or risqué.

The fallout over Devils has also claimed another film casualty. Censors scotched this month's planned release of critically acclaimed director Ang Lee's martial-arts epic Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon because its distributor, the Hong Kong-registered Asian Union Film and Entertainment Company, helped Jiang spirit Devils to Cannes without Beijing's approval, industry insiders said.

industry. Karl Rove and Karen Hughes said, however, that they had no idea who would be Bush's pick.

The Texas governor planned to make his decision Sunday night or Monday, well in advance of the July 31 opening of the GOP convention in Philadelphia, aides said. Bush assured advisers that he won't notify the winning candidate before Monday.

Danforth said he doesn't expect to be picked and predicted that Cheney will get the nod.

"I think it's Cheney. You know, with the registration change, that's what I believe," Danforth told the Associated Press as he headed into church in St. Louis.

Last week, as he notified business associates and underwent the physical exam, Cheney changed his voter registration from Texas to Wyoming to avoid a Constitution hurdle that crops up if the presidential and vice presidential candidate hail from the same state.

Danforth, dressed in the green robe of an ordained Episcopal minister to assist in conducting services, said in the brief interview outside church that it would be tough to turn down a call to be on the ticket for the good of the country. But he wants to stay in Missouri.

Cheney and Danforth would bring a range of national experience and stature lacking in the presumptive nominee. Both also would appeal to Bush's conservative base without alienating moderates, Republican operatives say. Danforth, unlike Cheney of Wyoming, comes from a battleground state, Missouri.

"These two names say Bush is looking to play it safe," said Scott Reed, who ran Bob Dole's failed 1996 campaign.

Cheney left his suburban Washington home Sunday and said he was heading to Dallas, where he also has a home, because "that's where my work is."

The former defense secretary did not say whether he was referring to Dallas-based Halliburton or his work on Bush's running mate search.

"You'll have to ask somebody above my pay grade," Cheney said when asked if he would be Bush's running mate as he and his wife Lynne packed a black Isuzu Trooper with about 10 suitcases and duffel bags.

FRAUD

The AP identified 1,020 companies that were sued or prosecuted for fraud over the past five years. The companies were identified using court records, news stories, government documents obtained under the Freedom of Information Act and reports from the inspector general.

AP checked the companies against a master list of contractors barred from federal business. The analysis found 737 companies out of the 1,020 remained eligible for future contracts.

The AP review found numerous examples.

Stewart & Stevenson Services of Houston was indicted in 1995 for conspiracy, fraud and making false statements involving a contract to provide generator equipment to the Air Force. The government temporarily suspended the company, which reached a plea deal and paid $7 million in criminal penalties and restitution.

The company got its suspension lifted by signing an "administrative agreement" and promising to change its business practices. It recently ran into trouble with the government again.

After receiving a $1.4 billion contract to build 5,000 Army trucks and 1,000 trailers, the company produced trucks with faulty drive shafts that caused one truck to flip and another to land on its side. The Army said the vehicles could not be driven above 30 mph until Stewart & Stevenson fixed the problem. The company wants the Army to cover the $40 million repair bill.

Perkins Aircraft Services of Fort Worth, Texas, remains eligible for federal business even after pleading guilty in late 1997 to falsely representing it repaired 14 nately, that is not a convenient way for others to see the comments."

The newest addition to the deer Web site will allow residents to comment publicly so that others may see what is being said about the overpopulation.

The primary motive behind the message board is to involve the community.

"It is one thing for the committee to decide something. It is another thing for the community as a whole to create a consensus," said committee member Douglas Jones.

Involvement should include not only interaction between the committee and the community itself, and the new site allows for that, said committee member Nancy Menning.

"It is possible to help oneself and others in the community come to deeper understandings of the problem with the deer herd," she said.

The site should also help promote communication between the various viewpoints, Jones said.

"One of the efforts we're making this time around is to try to broaden the dialogue. There are animal-rights people, hunters and gardeners. This way they can be audible to each other," he said.

The public will also have an opportunity to speak with the committee in person at an open meeting Wednesday at 6:30 p.m. at Parkview Evangelical Free Church, 15 Foster Road.

Calling off Tenn. telemarketers

■ Tennesseans are signing up in droves for the state's "Do Not Call" list for telemarketers.

By Skip Latt
Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Mel Keylon says the company he works for occasionally needs to make telemarketing calls to drum up new business, even though he knows some people hate those calls, himself included.

"I put in long hours at work myself, and I'll admit coming home and finding six or eight solicitations on my (answering) machine is a nuisance," he said.

Although there are already national programs, Tennessee has set up a "Do Not Call" list so people can get their numbers removed from telemarketing lists. It's scheduled to go into effect Aug. 1, delayed one month by high demand.

Almost 380,000 residences have signed up, nearly 18 percent of Tennessee's 1.9 million residential telephones, said Greg Mitchell, a spokesman for the Tennessee Regulatory Agency.

"Our program is the largest 'Do Not Call' program in the nation in terms of participation," he said.

States with similar programs include Arkansas, Georgia, Kentucky, Florida, Missouri, New York, Oregon and Texas.

Businesses support "Do Not Call" lists because they want to target consumers who want to talk to them, said Kevin Brosnahan, a spokesman for the Federal Teleservices Association in Washington D.C., a telemarketing trade group.

However, he said state lists just duplicate the Federal Communications Commission's 1995 Telemarketing Sales Rule. That outlaws abusive and deceptive telemarketing practices and requires telemarketers to remove from their lists the names of consumers who request it.

There's also a national "Do Not Call" list kept by the Direct Marketing Association, Brosnahan said.

"One of the worst things would be to have 50 different don't call lists. There are a lot of small businesses out there, and some would have to add a full-time person to keep up with the lists," Brosnahan said.

President Clinton chats with Prime Minister Tony Blair and Russian President Vladimir Putin at the G8 summit in Nago, Okinawa, Japan, Sunday.

G8 pledges aid for poor, but proposes no $

■ Once again, poor countries heard the words but saw little concrete action.

Associated Press

NAGO, Okinawa — Leaders of the world's most powerful economies promised Sunday to help poor countries reduce their debts and improve their education, health care and computer technology — but they proposed little real money for the initiatives.

Some analysts wonder whether the Group of Eight (the United States, Canada, England, France, Germany, Italy, Japan and Russia, the newest member) still matters.

In a 21-page summit-ending communiqué, the countries said they would work harder to relieve the debt-burden of developing nations. They set a goal of universal primary education for all the world's children by 2015 and gender equality in schools by 2005. They also pledged a one-quarter reduction by the year 2010 in the number of young people infected with the virus that causes AIDS.

Japanese Prime Minister Yoshiro Mori, the summit host, said wealthy nations had an obligation to break the "vicious cycle" of poverty and disease faced by poor nations. He declined, however, to say whether Japan would provide funds to help developing nations enter the information superhighway.

In fact, there was no statement on how the leaders would pay for the goals they set for themselves, other than President Clinton's pledge of $300 million in surplus farm crops to provide school lunches in the developing world.

"They're basically repeating what they have done in recent years — a very long laundry list of relatively marginal decisions," said C. Fred Bergsten, the director of the Institute for International Economics. "I simply think they have gone off track."

signaled any change in position on the prime point of dispute: Jerusalem. Both sides claim the ancient city as their capital.

"The ball is in the Israeli court," said Hassan Abdel Rahman, the Washington envoy of the Palestine Liberation Organization and a frequent spokesman during the talks. "Will they do what is needed to reach an agreement? Or will they stick to their unacceptable positions?"

Israeli spokesman Gadi Baltiansky suggested that the Palestinians would need to make concessions to move matters forward. With Clinton's return, he said, "we will try to see if there are grounds for continuing this effort."

Speaking later on Israel television, Baltiansky said: "It would be easier to prophesy what will happen in 24 years than what will happen here in the next 24 hours."

Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, who sat in for Clinton after he left early on July 20 for an economic summit in Japan, took both Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat and Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak on separate excursions over the weekend. It marked the first time the two leaders had left the secluded retreat since the talks began.

State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said Clinton's first task upon returning would be to meet with his own negotiating team. He said no schedule had been set for the evening, but he would not be surprised if Clinton met both leaders late Sunday.

RIVER FALLS, Wis. — On the first morning of training camp, Kansas City quarterback Elvis Grbac experienced "a strange, eerie feeling."

"We were loosening up, everybody was stretching out, and it was just complete silence," Grbac said. "There wasn't one guy even saying a word."

He recognized the problem right away, Derrick Thomas was not there.

"At times like that, Derrick would always have something lively to say, something to break the tension," Grbac said. "He would be joking with guys, giving guys a hard time. Just being Derrick."

Grbac's gaze that Friday morning fell upon cornerback James Hasty, one of Thomas' closest friends.

"He had a look of loss on his face," Grbac said. "We hadn't even had one practice yet, and already we missed him."

QB job is all Warner's for the Rams so far

■ Trent Green may be healthy, but Rams coach Mike Martz says Warner is the man.

By R.B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

MACOMB, Ill. — Trent Green's return to health means zero to the St. Louis Rams' quarterback situation.

The job of running the Super Bowl champions' high-powered offense belongs to league and Super Bowl MVP Kurt Warner, and everybody knows it. Coach Mike Martz never minces words about it. "That's not up for discussion," Martz said. "Somebody ought to put me away. He's the MVP and has a year like that, leads us to the Super Bowl, and you're going to tell me he's got to fight for his position. There's just no way."

Last August, Green was the starter, at the beginning of a four-year, $16 million free agent deal in his hometown. He had been a model of efficiency at the controls, completing 28 of 32 passes in the preseason, before suffering a season-ending knee injury in the third exhibition game.

Now, he's just an expensive insurance policy. "I wish it was a competition," Green said. "But Mike's made him the starting quarterback, and I'm just going to get myself ready and plan on playing at some point in time during the year."

Warner, who emerged from the obscurity of third-string status and threw 42 touchdown passes last year, certainly is not looking over his shoulder. "He is established, but I've been told I'm the guy," Warner said. "I don't know if they can expect me to play 19 games as consistently as I did last year, so I'm going to compete, and if I have ups and downs, they're going to fight through it with me."

This is the first time he's come to training camp with the starting job sewed up since his days in the Arena League from 1995-97. "It's a good feeling to know you don't have to compete for a spot on the roster, more than anything," Warner said. "Now you can just let loose and play football."

Now, any anxiety is self-imposed. "Last year, nobody expected me to do it," Warner said. "This year, I've got the pressure because nobody thinks I can do it again. I think that's how I'm going to keep my edge."

Chiefs camp not the same without Thomas

■ K.C. Practice was quiet without former star Derrick Thomas, who died last spring.

By Doug Tucker

RIVER FALLS, Wis. — On the first morning of training camp, Kansas City quarterback Elvis Grbac experienced "a strange, eerie feeling."

"We were loosening up, everybody was stretching out, and it was just complete silence," Grbac said. "There wasn't one guy even saying a word."

He recognized the problem right away. Derrick Thomas wasn't there. "At times like that, Derrick would always have something lively to say, something to break the tension," Grbac said. "He would be joking with guys, giving guys a hard time. Just being Derrick."

Grbac's gaze that Friday morning fell upon cornerback James Hasty, one of Thomas' closest friends. "He had a look of loss on his face," Grbac said. "We hadn't even had one practice yet, and already we missed him."

Missing their nine-time Pro Bowl linebacker will be something the Chiefs do constantly this season, the first since Thomas' fatal car crash last February. "It just doesn't feel the same around here," running back Tony Richardson said. "You can tell there's something missing."

After Thomas' car flipped on an icy highway and he died of complications last Feb. 8, the Chiefs held memorial services, attended his funeral, hugged one other, and pondered the fragility of life.

But now comes the task of preparing and playing a season without the player who personalized the turnaround of the Kansas City franchise. "This is going to be our first training camp we go through without Derrick," Grbac said. "Then we'll have that first home game, that first road game. That first Christmas and Thanksgiving."

"It's going to be tough."

To the Chiefs, Thomas was more than just a football player whose pass-rushing talent enabled him to dominate games and crack the career top 10 list with 126½ sacks.

He was a joker. He was a presence. He was a free spirit who called the team president "father" and would telephone the coach at midnight to tease him about working too hard.

"You could be having the worst day in the world, but Derrick could still make you laugh," coach Gunter Cunningham said.

Device May Increase Gas Mileage by 22%

BOSTON - National Fuelsaver Corp. of Boston has developed a low cost automotive accessory called the Platinum Gas Saver which is guaranteed to increase gas mileage by 22% while meeting all emission standards.

With a simple connection to a vacuum line, the Gas Saver adds microscopic quantities of platinum to the air-fuel mixture entering the engine.

Platinum has the unique ability to make non-burning fuel burn. With platinum in the flame zone, you increase the percentage of fuel burning in the engine from 68% of each gallon to 90%.

Since unburnt fuel is pollution, this 22% of each gallon would normally burn when it reaches the platinum of the catalytic converter.

Unfortunately, the converter's platinum burns this fuel outside of the engine, where the heat and energy produced from burning this fuel cannot be harnessed to drive your vehicle.

But when the Gas Saver adds platinum to engine combustion, 22% more of each gallon burns inside the engine so that 22% fewer gallons are required to drive the same distance.

After studying this process for five years, the government concluded: "Independent testing shows greater fuel savings with the Platinum Gas Saver than the 22% claimed by the developer."

Government Produced Test Data

In addition to this study, the Gas Saver has received patents for cleaning out carbon and raising octane, making premium fuel unnecessary for most vehicles.

Joel Robinson, the developer, commented: "We have sold over 400,000 Gas Savers. To our surprise, as many people buy the Gas Saver because it extends engine life (by cleaning out the abrasive carbon deposits) as buy it to increase gas mileage or raise octane."

The government studied fuel saving test data on vehicles made by several auto makers using the Gas Saver. This is the data they produced from a fleet of 15 identical 5-liter vehicles.

"Our program is the largest 'Do Not Call' program in the nation in terms of participation," he said.

States with similar programs include Arkansas, Georgia, Kentucky, Florida, Missouri, New York, Oregon and Texas.

Businesses support "Do Not Call" lists because they want to target consumers who want to talk to them, said Kevin Brosnahan, a spokesman for the Federal Telemarketing Association in Washington D.C., a telemarketing trade group.

However, he said state lists just duplicate the Federal Communications Commission's 1995 Telemarketing Sales Rule. That outlaws abusive and deceptive telemarketing practices and requires telemarketers to remove from their lists the names of consumers who request it.

There's also a national "Do Not Call" list kept by the Direct Marketing Association, Brosnahan said.

"One of the worst things would be to have 50 different don't call lists. There are a lot of small businesses out there, and some would have to add a full-time person to keep up with the lists," Brosnahan said.

Japanese Prime Minister Yoshiro Mori, the summit host, said wealthy nations had an obligation to break the "vicious cycle" of poverty and disease faced by poor nations. He declined, however, to say whether Japan would provide funds to help developing nations enter the information superhighway.

In fact, there was no statement on how the leaders would pay for the goals they set for themselves, other than President Clinton's pledge of $300 million in surplus farm crops to provide school lunches in the developing world.

"They're basically repeating what they have done in recent years — a very long laundry list of relatively marginal decisions," said C. Fred Bergsten, the director of the Institute for International Economics. "I simply think they have gone off track."

Grace and Young propel Cubs to victory

■ Ismael Valdes wins for the first time since May 19.

CHICAGO (AP) — Ismael Valdes won for the first time in eight starts, and Eric Young and Mark Grace each drove in two runs Sunday to spark the Chicago Cubs to a 5-4 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Young hit a two-run single and Grace hit a two-run double in a five-run second inning as the Cubs won for the 10th time in 13 games.

Valdes (2-4), who has been bothered by blisters all season, won for the first time since May 19 when he beat Cincinnati, 4-1.

Valdes gave up two runs on five hits and three walks over seven innings. It was only the fourth time in 12 starts that he has pitched beyond the sixth inning.

Rick Aguilera pitched the ninth for his 21st save in 28 chances.

Stephen J. Carrera/Associated Press

Chicago Cubs' Mark Grace follows through on a two-run single in the second inning Sunday, against the Milwaukee Brewers.

the Colorado Rockies 6-4 on Sunday.

Klesko tied the game with one out in the ninth after Neifi Perez gave Colorado a 3-2 lead with his eighth-inning solo homer.

Indians 8, Twins 3

MINNEAPOLIS — Travis Fryman and Omar Vizquel both homered as the Cleveland Indians spoiled Minnesota manager Tom Kelly's return by snapping a four-game losing streak with an 8-3 win over the Twins on Sunday.

Kelly had been in Florida since the All-Star break tending to his ailing father. Ron Gardenhire, the team's third base coach, served as interim manager and posted a 6-4 record.

Tigers 12, Royals 9

DETROIT — Bobby Higginson's two-run homer capped a six-run seventh inning as the Detroit Tigers rallied from six runs down to beat the Kansas City Royals, 12-9, on Sunday.

Luis Polonia added a bases-loaded triple in the seventh as the Tigers came back from deficits of 4-0 and 9-3 to gain a split in the four-game series.

Blue Jays 4, Orioles 1

TORONTO — Frank Castillo, who hadn't pitched since July 9 because of elbow tendinitis, allowed just one run in 5 1/2 innings as the Toronto Blue Jays defeated the Baltimore Orioles 4-1 Sunday.

• Tony Batista hit his 31st homer for the Blue Jays, who have homered in a club-record 22 straight home games.

The AL record is 23.

Yankees 5, Devil Rays 1

NEW YORK — Denny Neagle was dominant again in his second start with the Yankees, pitching a four-hitter for his 100th career victory, 5-1 over the Tampa Bay Devil Rays on Sunday.

Neagle (2-0) won his fifth straight start overall, including his final three with the Cincinnati Reds before being traded to the Yankees on July 12. He struck out eight and walked one in his first complete game since Aug. 16, 1998, against Los Angeles with Atlanta.

Athletics 5, Angels 0

OAKLAND, Calif. — Rookie Mark Mulder followed up his worst outing of the year by pitching 7 2/3 scoreless innings, and Randy Velarde hit a two-run homer as the Oakland Athletics defeated the Anaheim Angels 5-0 on Sunday.

Mulder (6-6) had lost each of his last four starts, including allowing 10 runs in four innings on Tuesday at Colorado. He hadn't won a game since June 25 against Kansas City.

Red Sox 1, White Sox 0

BOSTON — Pedro Martinez's health is fine and so is his pitching.

Boston's ace silenced the powerful Chicago White Sox, 1-0, Sunday, striking out 15 and allowing six hits.

He let only three runners reach second base and didn't walk a man.

The performance followed an unusual stretch in which he was winless in four consecutive starts and didn't pitch in the All-Star game because of a strained side muscle that put him on the disabled list.

Dodgers 5, Giants 0

LOS ANGELES — Darren Dreifort pitched seven shutout innings, and Shawn Green homered twice Sunday night as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the San Francisco Giants 5-0.

By winning for the sixth time in eight games, the Dodgers moved within four games of first-place Arizona in the NL West. The Diamondbacks lost at Cincinnati 5-3 earlier Sunday.

The Giants, 15-5 this month despite losing two of three to Los Angeles during the weekend, trail the Diamondbacks by 1 1/2 games.

Braves 1, Mets 0

ATLANTA — Andy Ashby is fitting right in with the Atlanta Braves.

Ashby, acquired in a trade during the All-Star break to bolster Atlanta's rotation, picked up his second complete-game victory for the Braves, allowing only four hits in a 1-0 victory over the New York Mets on Sunday night.

Sorry Mets, Larkin's staying with the Reds

■ As a possible trade falters, Barry Larkins signs a new deal with Cincinnati.

By Joe Kay
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — Barry Larkin is staying in Cincinnati — for the rest of this season and the next three as well.

Hours after he rejected a trade to the Mets, the All-Star shortstop agreed Sunday to a three-year, $27 million contract extension that will keep him with his hometown Reds through 2003.

Appearing in a suit and tie at the Reds' offices five hours after a 5-3 victory over Arizona, Larkin admitted he was stunned when owner Carl Lindner decided to give him almost exactly what he had sought.

Reds general manager Jim Bowden, who arranged a trade with the Mets, sought out Larkin after the game and told him that Lindner wanted to talk about his contract.

"This has all really come as a shock to me," Larkin said. "Today I fielded questions about possibly being a Met. Now Mr. Lindner and the organization have stepped up and signed me for three more years as a Red."

Mets general manager Steve Phillips had the same reaction to the Reds' stunning about-face.

"Astonishment," Phillips said, "only because Jim Bowden told me they were not going to sign him ... I guess we helped Barry Larkin get a contract."

Only five days earlier, the Reds told Larkin they wouldn't meet his request for a three-year, $27.9 million extension. Because Larkin could be a free agent, Bowden worked out a trade with the Mets for three players.

It required Larkin's approval. He wouldn't give it because the Mets weren't offering a contract extension.

His decision to stay drew a 30-second standing ovation from 34,822 fans on Sunday. It also became a prelude to the club's strangest day since Lindner took control of the team from Marge Schott last September.

The Reds wound up giving Larkin only $900,000 less than he requested. A little less than one-third of the $27 million will be deferred over 15 years, according to a source familiar with the contract.

Larkin, who makes $5.3 million this season, will get $6 million next year. When Bowden called him aside after the game, he thought he'd been traded to a different team.

"I thought OK, if not New York, then where?" Larkin said. "I thought I was going to be talking to Jim about going to another big market club that needed a shortstop. This all happened very fast. I'm very appreciative of it."

Fisk leads cast of 2000 Hall of Fame inductees

■ Reds' Sparky Anderson and Tony Perez are also honored.

By Jimmy Golen
Associated Press

COOPERSTOWN, N.Y. — And this one belongs to the Reds.

The Big Red Machine's presence in Cooperstown got a lot bigger on Sunday when Tony Perez and Sparky Anderson were inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame alongside World Series nemesis Carlton Fisk.

"There seem to be a lot of guys up here that I played against in '75," said Fisk, who hit a game-winning homer in the 12th inning of Game 6 only to see Perez homer in Game 7 to deliver the Series to the Reds.

"As happy as I was in the sixth game, I was happy for him (Perez) in the seventh game," Fisk said after the ceremony. "But I don't think I was too happy back in 1975."

Reds announcer Marty Brennaman was enshrined in the broadcaster's wing on Sunday, commemorating a 26-year career in which he celebrated Cincinnati victories by proclaiming, "And this one belongs to the Reds."

And during the Reds' consecutive World Series titles in 1975-76, he said it an awful lot.

"I got good players, stayed out of their way, let them win a lot and then just hung around for 26 years," said Anderson, the only manager to win it all in both leagues. "I was smart enough to know the people that were doing the work, and I could never thank them (enough) for what they did for me."

Perez and Anderson join Cincinnati teammates Joe Morgan and Johnny Bench in the Hall. All-time hit king Pete Rose is ineligible, having been banned from baseball for gambling; that explains why commissioner Bud

Selig was greeted with boos and chants of "We want Pete!"

Perez, Anderson and Brennaman all said they thought Rose deserved to be in the Hall. But Anderson also defended Selig.

"Commissioners make mistakes — they're human beings," the 66-year-old manager said. "But nobody loves the game of baseball more than this commissioner."

Also honored Sunday were "Gloveless Wonder" Bid McPhee, a 19th century second baseman for Cincinnati who was the last player to play without a glove, and Negro League star Norm "Turkey" Stearnes.

An 11-time All-Star, Fisk caught more games — 2,229 — than anyone in baseball history, and hit a record 351 of his 376 homers as a catcher. He was elected in his first year of eligibility with 79.56 percent of the votes.

"His gritty resolve and competitive fire earned him the respect of teammates and opposing players alike," his plaque reads. "His dramatic home run to win Game 6 of the 1975 World Series is one of baseball's unforgettable moments."

Anderson also won a championship in 1984 with the Detroit Tigers and 2,194 games in all — third most in history behind Connie Mack and John McGraw. His .691 postseason winning percentage (34-21) is the best ever.

"The crank that turned the Big Red Machine, his skillful leadership helped those Cincinnati teams dominate in the 1970s," his plaque says. "(He was) revered and treasured by his players for his humility, humanity, eternal optimism and knowledge of the game."

Perez drove in at least 90 runs in 11 consecutive seasons from 1967-77. He finished with 1,652 RBIs, which ranks 18th, hit 379 homers and batted .279 while also playing for Boston, Philadelphia and Montreal.

Weary U.S. Davis Cup team slammed by Spain

■ The U.S. team was defeated 5-0 by Spain.

By Steve Wilstein
Associated Press

SANTANDER, Spain — For once, John McEnroe had almost nothing to say.

He fled in the rain Sunday, along with his soaked and sunken U.S. Davis Cup team, taken down by the Spanish armada in the semifinals.

For the first time in 101 years of Davis Cup play, the United States suffered a 5-0 thrashing without the title on the line.

"I'm totally spent, I'm deflated," McEnroe said after fleeing the stadium following the last two meaningless matches.

He spoke hours later by phone from his car on the way to the airport in Bilbao. "It was tough for me, and it was tough for everybody," he said. "I feel like I'm going to throw up. I'm not sure if it's emotional or what."

With the victory already clinched, Sunday's matches served only to pad Spain's margin and underscore the weakness of the American team. Juan Balcells, Spain's weakest player, beat Jan-Michael Gambill 1-6, 7-6 (2), 6-4 amid thunder, lightning and driving rain after Juan Carlos Ferrero downed Vince Spadea 4-6, 6-1, 6-4.

Only twice before in the open era — in finals against Australia in 1973 and Sweden in 1997 — did the United States lose so badly. Five other 5-0 losses for the Americans also came in finals.

For all practical purposes, the Americans were dead on arrival, their demise virtually guaranteed the moment Pete Sampras and Andre Agassi begged off by claiming injuries.

"Personally, I think that he was angry about Sampras and Agassi," Spanish captain Javier Duarte said of McEnroe. "It's a difficult situation, but I think he is feeling awful for that. Perhaps more than the defeat."

The United States has won Davis Cup 31 times, more than any other country, since Dwight Davis and his Harvard chums claimed the first one in 1900. But the future looks mighty bleak for the Americans in the next few years, regardless of whether McEnroe stays as captain.

Sampras will be 30 next year and Agassi and Todd Martin will be 31. The likelihood of them carrying the Davis Cup team once more, or even wanting to, is slim. Nor are there any Americans on the horizon to take their place among the best in the world. Gambill is good, but at 23 he still has to prove he's even a top 10 player.

Andy Roddick, coming out of the juniors, may develop into a great player, but that could be a long way off.

McEnroe signed a three-year deal last year with every intention of restoring the lost glory of Davis Cup in the United States. In the 1920s, '30s and '40s, Davis Cup was among the biggest events on the American sports calendar, rivaling any of the majors. McEnroe brought back some of its popularity in the late 1970s and early '80s, when he helped win four championships in five years, and he thought his name and status and love of the cup would bring back the top players.

Larkin's in the Reds

could be a free agent, Bowden worked out a trade with the Mets for three players.

It required Larkin's approval. He wouldn't give it because the Mets weren't offering a contract extension.

His decision to stay drew a 30-second standing ovation from 34,822 fans on Sunday. It also became a prelude to the club's strangest day since Lindner took control of the team from Marge Schott last September.

The Reds wound up giving Larkin only $900,000 less than he requested. A little less than one-third of the $27 million will be deferred over 15 years, according to a source familiar with the contract.

Larkin, who makes $5.3 million this season, will get $6 million next year. When Bowden called him aside after the game, he thought he'd been traded to a different team.

"I thought OK, if not New York, then where?" Larkin said. "I thought I was going to be talking to Jim about going to another big market club that needed a shortstop. This all happened very fast. I'm very appreciative of it."

Dawkins re-signs with Seattle

CHENEY, Wash. (AP) — Sean Dawkins has reached a deal to rejoin the Seattle Seahawks, who were in need of an experienced receiver.

Coach and general manager Mike Holmgren said after the Seahawks' first training camp practice Sunday that Dawkins is returning to the team that released him last month because of salary-cap restraints.

"We have agreed to things," Holmgren said. "I expect him in the next day or two ... I'm glad Sean decided to come on back. He makes this a better football team."

Details of the signing were not disclosed. Dawkins, who caught 58 passes for 992 yards last season, and his agent could not be immediately reached for comment Sunday.

Quarterback Jon Kitna was pleased with the news, especially since the Seahawks have already lost receivers Joey Galloway and Mike Pritchard.

"I expect him to catch 70 to 75 balls," Kitna said of Dawkins.

Other receivers in camp include Derrick Mayes, Karsten Bailey, who didn't catch any passes his rookie season, and rookie Darrell Jackson.

The Seahawks now have only first-round draft choice Chris McIntosh, an offensive lineman from Wisconsin, still unsigned.

Reggie White agrees to deal with Panthers

SPARTANBURG, S.C. — Location was everything to Reggie White.

White, the NFL's career sacks leader, agreed in principle Friday to end his retirement and play for the Carolina Panthers partly because the location was perfect.

He owns property near Charlotte and is building a home there, which, he said, would be his permanent residence. White, who is an ordained minister, is also involved in the Charlotte-based Morningstar Ministries and said he has been looking at land in the area to build a biblical theme park.

"Having the opportunity to come here, with living here, gave me the opportunity to settle my family," he said. "It's very convenient. Charlotte seemed to be a special place, a spiritual place."

White, 38, passed a physical in Charlotte on Friday morning, then traveled the 80 miles to training camp for a private workout and a meeting with coach George Seifert.

"There was a sense of excitement out there today," White said. "But I told them if they went 10 minutes longer I think I might have fainted."

White retired after the 1998 season. He said he took all of 1999 to rest, but had been working out this year in anticipation of making a comeback.

Janvrin makes Olympic decathlon team

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — Kip Janvrin, who just missed making the U.S. Olympic decathlon team in 1996, has earned a spot.

The Panora, Iowa, native finished third Friday night in the decathlon at the U.S. Olympic trials at Sacramento State's Hornet Stadium. Winner Tom Pappas had 8,467, followed by Chris Huffins with 8,285 and Janvrin with 8,057.

Janvrin, 35, won the final event, the 1,500 meters, in 4 minutes 12.01 seconds to earn the spot. He finished fourth at the trials four years ago.

Joey Woody, an Iowan considered a favorite to make the Olympic team in the 400 hurdles, came up short. He finished fourth, in 48.83 seconds.

Saturday's top three finishers and Olympic team qualifiers in the 400 hurdles were Angelo Taylor, 47.62; Eric Thomas, 48.22; and James Carter, 48.46.

Missouri's Smith hospitalized with blood clot

COLUMBIA, Mo. — Missouri Tigers football coach Larry Smith was resting in an Arizona hospital Friday being treated for a blood clot in his lung, a university spokesman said.

Smith, 60, was hospitalized in Tucson on Wednesday when he felt symptoms of the blood clot. He was treated for blood clots at the end of the 1998 season and was kept off his feet before the Insight.com Bowl.

Missouri Athletics Director Mike Alden and Senior Associates Athletic Director Gene McArthur have spoken with Smith, according to sports information officer Jeremy McNeive.

"They both talked to him and said he is good spirits and doing fine," McNeive said. "It's something that he is being treated for and just waiting for the medication to do its job. But he expects to be back here next week ready to go."

Smith, who coached at the University of Arizona from 1980-86, is expected to return to Columbia next week to begin for the 2000 season. Missouri was 4-7 last season.

He is also expected to take part in the annual Big 12 Football Media Day in Kansas City next week. The Missouri freshmen report Aug. 5 and the returnees report on Aug. 8. The Tigers head to preseason camp in Mexico, Mo., on Aug. 13.

Greene should be ready in three weeks

ceps, but it was his left hamstring that forced him to quit about 80 meters into the race.

It was evident that when Johnson came out of the blocks, he wasn't healthy. He started much slower than usual, began slowing even more at 50 meters, then struggled another 20 to 30 meters before crumpling to the track.

He was removed from the track on a cart.

Greene began limping with about

He then walked toward the finish line, and had his left hamstring wrapped in ice.

The race, the final event at the trials, proved anticlimactic after much hype, which included as much trash-talking as has ever been seen in a track and field event.

The winner of the final was 1999 NCAA champion John Capel of Florida in 19.85 seconds, with Floyd Heard second in 19.88 and Coby Miller third in 19.96.

"I didn't know what had happened until I looked up at the screen and saw Michael lying on the ground," Capel said. "I hope he's all right for the Olympics."

"That's a terrible way to lose." Greene was surprised that he got injured.

"I was coming up on the curve. I was running pretty good and my leg just grabbed," he said. "I'm disappointed I couldn't put on a show here for the fans. You have to listen to your body and I couldn't finish."

"I should be ready to go in about two to three weeks."

Armstrong looks toward Olympic gold

TOUR

already looking ahead to September's Olympics in Sydney, and speculating openly about his prospects of clinching a first gold medal in the time trial competition. He won all three time trials in last year's Tour as well as a time trial Friday, his first stage victory in this year's Tour.

"It's special to ride for your country," he said in an interview aboard a special Orient Express train that carried all 128 riders into Paris on Sunday.

"Winning gold is a big objective," he said, noting that unlike last year, he was coming away from the Tour in strong mental shape. "I had no motivation to ride again that year, but today I feel like I'm ready to go for it."

His only scheduled appearance Sunday after the race was to attend a benefit for cancer research, a cause he's championed since being diagnosed in 1996 with advanced testicular cancer. Given less than a 40 percent chance of survival, he underwent brain surgery and chemotherapy and had a testicle removed.

"I take inspiration from these people," Armstrong said after meeting with cancer victims. "It's almost an unfair advantage that I get to talk to these people every day."

Armstrong resumed professional competition in 1998 but skipped that year's Tour, which nearly fell apart over revelations that many top cyclists were using banned performance-enhancing drugs.

Armstrong himself was accused of using illegal drugs in 1999, an allegation traced to his use of a steroid-based skin cream for saddle sores. No such allegations surfaced this year, a factor Armstrong credited with making the competition less stressful even though it was physically more demanding, with four grueling stages through the Alps and Pyrenees.

As 2000 winner, Armstrong takes away $315,000, plus $7,200 for his stage win, and a range of bonuses for racking up points in other aspects of the Tour.

Els getting used to taking second

TIGER

player who has played the game right now," said Mark Calavecchia, who stuck around St. Andrews to watch history in the making. "If Jack was in his prime today, I don't think he could keep up with Tiger."

Comparing eras is never easy, but Woods' performance in the majors stands alone.

Woods won the silver claret jug by eight strokes over Ernie Els and Thomas Bjorn, the largest margin of victory in the British Open since 1913, when J.H. Taylor won by eight strokes over Ted Ray.

Woods became only the second British Open champion to win with four rounds in the 60s, and he beat by one stroke the record Nick Faldo set at St. Andrews in 1990.

"The guy is simply in a different league," Faldo said.

Woods also became the first player since Watson in 1982 to win the U.S. and British Opens in the same year, and the first since Nicklaus in 1972 to own three major championships at the same time.

Woods now goes to the PGA Championship with a chance to join Ben Hogan as the only players to win three majors in one year.

Els also set a record — the first player to finish second in three straight majors. He now has been runner-up to Woods six times, more than any other player.

Els shot a 69, while Bjorn closed with a 71 to finish at 277.

But the real challenge came from Duval, No. 2 in the world ranking behind Woods. It was the first time they were paired together in the final group of a final round — in a major championship, no less.

Duval went out in 32 and was only three strokes back until Woods, perhaps sensing history slipping away, poured it on with birdies on three of the next four holes.

Goodfellaz and F.I.T. Zone square off

Dean Oliver and Duez Henderson will try to lead 11-1 Goodfellaz to a Prime Time League championship against F.I.T. Zone's Monte Jenkins.

By Ethen Lieser
 The Daily Iowan

And then there were two. After jackhammering their opponents through the PTL playoffs, Goodfellaz and F.I.T. Zone will square off tonight in what should be an epic battle between two hungry packs of ravenous hyenas.

Although Goodfellaz (11-1) rolled for a 17-point semifinal win against Iowa City Ready Mix on July 20, F.I.T. Zone (10-2) will not be so easy to tame. Ready Mix relies on its perimeter shooting quite often, and on some nights, shots will just not fall — Darryl Moore and Rob Griffin made only 2-of-14 3-point attempts in the losing effort against Goodfellaz.

F.I.T. Zone, though, possesses an array of multi-faceted players who can adjust to different defenses. Swingman David Kruse is one of five players with a double-digit scoring average, leading the team with 18.

Former Southern Illinois standout Monte Jenkins is arguably the most feared defender in the league. The 6-5 guard has to be a factor in F.I.T. Zone's defense against Goodfellaz's Big Three: Dean Oliver, Duez Henderson and Acie Earl.

For F.I.T. Zone to have any inside game, Hawkeye freshman center Sean Sonderleiter needs to have a solid all-around performance against Earl, a former first-round NBA draft selection.

"It's kind of hard playing Acie because he's a veteran of the game," Jenkins said.

On July 20, Sonderleiter held his own against Goodfellow Printing's 6-11 center Jared Reiner, who is considered one of the best incoming Iowa recruits, by registering eight points and seven rebounds.

"For a big man, Sonderleiter's got a really nice touch and can rebound very well," said veteran guard Troy Washpun, who collected eight rebounds and six assists in the semifinal win.

Unlike F.I.T. Zone, Goodfellaz relies heavily on the Big Three for its scoring, as they amassed 82 of the team's 121 points on July 20. Goodfellaz guard and ex-Southern Indiana player David Willock is another offensive weapon who has shown to be a deadly shooter at times. Willock scored 14 on 6-of-12 shooting in the semi-final game.

200 run turns out to be lame, literally

Michael Johnson beat Maurice Greene in their semi race, but both pulled up limp in the finals.

By Bert Rosenthal
 Associated Press

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — The big buildup turned into a big bust.

In the most anticipated showdown in track and field in three years, Michael Johnson and Maurice Greene both pulled up lame in the final of the 200 meters at the U.S. Olympic trials on Sunday.

"It was painful when it happened," Johnson said. "It was one of the most painful I've ever felt. It was a severe cramp."

They met twice Sunday because both were in the same semifinal heat. They came back less than two hours later in the final but neither finished the race.

The injuries to Johnson and Greene means neither will run the 200 at the Sydney Olympics.

Johnson, however, has qualified for the 400 and will run the 1,600 relay, if he recovers.

Greene will be in the 100 and 400 relay, also if he is healthy.

The shocking developments involving Johnson and Greene, the world's two best sprinters, overshadowed some dazzling and unprecedented performances.

Woods does it again at British Open

Tiger Woods became the youngest player to win all four major championships Sunday.

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland — Tiger Woods strolled over the Swilken Bridge and into history Sunday, completing the career Grand Slam with a performance never before seen at golf's hallowed home.

It was a fitting way for Woods to win the British Open on a course where the game has been played for more than 500 years.

With the old gray town of St. Andrews as his backdrop, the 24-year-old Woods became the youngest player to win all four major championships and just the fifth ever.

"It's the ultimate," Woods said. "This is the home of golf. This is where you always want to win. To have a chance to complete the slam at St. Andrews is pretty special. I was able to bring it home."

Daring fans tried to leap over the burn on the 18th fairway to watch Woods finish off his latest masterpiece. He didn't disappoint them, making a par on the final hole for a 69 that set another benchmark for years to come.

He finished at 19-under 269, the lowest score in relation to par ever at a major championship — and that includes his record 15-shot victory in the U.S. Open at Pebble Beach just last month.

Perhaps Tom Watson, the only man to win a British Open at five courses but never at St. Andrews, summed it up best.

"He is something supernatural," Watson said. "He has raised the bar to a level that only he can jump."

Woods beat back a brief scare from David Duval to become the first player to win the Grand Slam since Jack Nicklaus' victory in the 1966 British Open at age 26.

Woods seems to be racing toward the record that matters the most — the 18 majors Nicklaus won in a career that remains the standard. For now.

Lance dominates Tour de France for second time

Lance Armstrong says he's happy his second tour win is over so he can spend some time with his family.

PARIS — Lance Armstrong raised a glass of champagne even before he crossed the finish line, celebrating a second straight Tour de France win that was even sweeter this time around.

Then, on the victory podium, Armstrong hoisted his infant son above his head. Tears welled in the eyes of the 28-year-old Texan, who just three years ago was fighting for his life against cancer that had spread to his lungs and brain.

"It was a hard Tour de France and, like last year, I'm glad it's finished and I can see more of these guys," he said Sunday as he stood with his wife Kristin, and 9-month-old son, Luke, who was dressed in yellow — just like his dad.

Because of his insurmountable lead in the final stage of the Tour de France, riders joked and clowned with Armstrong as they coasted past the famous sites of Paris and throngs of spectators.

Shortly after the cyclists took off from the Eiffel Tower, Armstrong donned a long-haired wig. As he passed the Louvre Museum, he grabbed a pocket camera and took snapshots of the flag-waving Americans shooting pictures of him.

He even was passed a glass of local bubbly and made a toast as he pedaled, even though he'd earlier declared he wasn't "a champagne kind of guy."

"This one's even more special than last year, partly because of this little guy," Armstrong said afterward, cradling the son who was born three months after his first Tour victory.

Armstrong won praise from his closest challengers, particularly Germany's top rider, Jan Ullrich, who had questioned whether Armstrong really was the best rider in 1999, when Ullrich didn't compete.

"Armstrong is a worthy champion. He was the strongest man, and he met our every attack. He earned his victory," said Ullrich, who won the Tour in 1997 but has finished second every year since.

Entertainers Robin Williams and Sean Penn were just a few of the thousands of Americans who lined the Champs-Elysees where the 2,250-mile race concluded with a dozen sharp-turned circuits in front of the Arc de Triomphe.

The Americans on the Champs were easy to spot: Many wore U.S. flags like capes, beach towels or bandanas, and others had Armstrong's name painted up and down their arms. Even some non-Americans quietly cheered on Armstrong along with their own countrymen.

Stefano Zanini of Italy won the final mad sprint finish, and declared, "I'm too happy."

The festive mood was momentarily jarred when Jeroen Blijlevens of the Netherlands violently hit American rider Bobby Julich just after crossing the finish line. Blijlevens, who finished 124th in the overall standings, was kicked out of this year's Tour for a "particularly serious attack," according to a statement from the International Cycling Union. It wasn't immediately clear what provoked the altercation.

Before the race, Armstrong was

The area doesn't deserve its reputation, say many of the neighborhood residents.

Gunshots fired in the area Sunday do nothing to counter the Broadway neighborhood's image as a "rough" part of town — a label it doesn't deserve, say some residents who are currently working with the Iowa City City Council to improve the area.

Several small-caliber rounds were shot into the side of an apartment building at 901 Cross Park Ave. at 1:04 a.m. Sunday, according to Iowa City police.
