UI employees play free Internet waiting game

■ Hundreds of off-campus students have utilized the free connection offered by ITS.

By Nicole Schuppert
 The Daily Iowan

While nearly 300 UI students had taken advantage of free, off-campus Internet service by its second day in use, UI employees are still waiting. Faculty and staff are not eligible for remote access because UI Information Technology Services wanted to focus on students first, said Steve Fleagle, the UI director of telecommunications and networking. However, after nine months of preparation for student use, providing the service to employees is the next step, he said. During the past week, about a dozen faculty and staff members contacted ITS asking when the service would be available, what the service included and if higher-speed Internet access will become an option, he said. "I knew it would generate more questions from the staff, but I didn't think I'd have 12 questions in one week," Fleagle said. Students began using the 56K connection Monday, and more than 900 different log-ins were reported by Tuesday. Remote access is one of several new ser-VICES offered by ITS this semester. "We recognize the needs of faculty and support staff," said David Dobbins, the ITS assistant vice president and chief information officer at the UI. "But we're not ready to bring this service to them just yet." Though a schedule for providing the service to staff has not been developed, Fleagle said so far inquiries have been curious rather than irate. Before providing the service to faculty, ITS staff members are working with a group called Academic Technologies to get feedback from staff about their Internet needs. They will also use information from students to evaluate what can be done better and more efficiently, Fleagle said. Though some university employees say they don't know anything about the service, others are waiting to hear more about it. Gregory Landini, an associate professor of philosophy, said he has been unhappy with his current Internet provider, America Online, and would like to check into other options. Landini said he supports the student-first attitude of ITS but plans to take advantage of the service when it becomes available. Other faculty and staff share his opinion, he said. "I don't think anyone is complaining about the students having it and not us," Landini said. "I think ITS is doing a great job." Fleagle said he feels ITS is on the right track. "The questions they're asking me are questions we're already trying to answer," Fleagle said. "This gives me confidence that at least we're starting out in the right direction." DI reporter Nicole Schuppert can be reached at nicole-schuppert@uiowa.edu

'Rich' rich after surviving 'Survivor'

■ CBS' popular TV show reveals the identity of its winner, surprising many UI students.

By Erica Cox
 The Daily Iowan

Screams were heard throughout the halls of Currier Residence Hall Thursday night, as the final votes were counted and Rich was named the winner of CBS' "Survivor." "This has taken all hope from my life," said UI sophomore Jim McGlone, throwing his hands up in the air. "They voted the evilest person on the show!" UI sophomore Phil Laures was also upset that Rich, a 39-year-old corporate trainer, walked away from the island of Palau Tiga with $1 million. "Rudy" was actually the only real survivor, he said. "He's an ex-Navy SEAL, and he's 72 years old. He should get something for making it that far." Susan, a 38-year-old truck driver, was the first of the final four to be voted off of the island. She was followed by Rudy. After they were voted off the island, the 16 contestants of the reality-based island game show returned to decide who would walk away with $1 million and who would just walk away — Kelly, a 23-year-old river guide, or Rich. UI freshmen Katie Kaalberg and

Iowa City residents Jenny Knipp, Chad Murray, Brad Witke and Katie Schmit react to the vote of the final council meeting on "Survivor" Wednesday night.

Jet crashes off Bahrain, killing 143

■ The Gulf Air plane circled the airport twice before going nose-down in the sea.

By Adnan Malik
 Associated Press

MANAMA, Bahrain — A Gulf Air Airbus A320 crashed into shallow Persian Gulf waters Wednesday night after circling and trying to land in Bahrain, killing all 143 passengers and crew aboard, officials said. Rescuers recovered the bodies, and there were no survivors, Abdul-Rahman Bin Rashed Al Khalifa, the Bahraini Civil Defense Commander Brigadier, said on state-run television. Thirty-six passengers on the flight, which was en route to Manama from Cairo, were children, officials said. There was no immediate word on what caused the crash. Searchers also recovered both flight data recorders, but their contents were unknown. U.S. Navy helicopters, destroyers and an oceangoing tug with a 10-ton crane joined the nighttime search in approximately 40 feet of water three or four miles off the northern coast of Bahrain, which is headquarters of the U.S. 5th Fleet. An air-traffic controller at the Bahrain airport, reached by telephone, described watching the plane attempt to land. "The plane was near the runway, but didn't land," he said, asking that his name not be used. "It circled two times, and the third time it crashed into the sea." The controller saw no flames or sign of trouble before the crash and could not immediately explain why the plane circled before landing. He said the plane's crew did not report anything out of the ordinary. He gave the time of the crash as 7:20 p.m. (11:20 a.m. CDT). "I could not believe my eyes," said Sobeih, 27, a resident of the nearby neighborhood of Al-Fodha who saw the plane go down. "When I saw it heading toward the sea nose down, I screamed, 'Oh my God, this thing is going down.'" Sobeih and Riyadh, 24, another Al-Fodha resident, said the plane flew unusually low over their heads heading to the runway but took a sharp turn toward the sea. Both men, who would not give their full names, said the plane returned minutes later flying even lower but headed

Tire recall creates Iowa City backlog

■ Some people will wait until as long as next spring to get their replacement tires.

By Andrea Mason
 The Daily Iowan

After recalling its 15-inch Wilderness All-Terrain and Radial AT tires, Bridgestone Firestone Inc. has created quite a backlog for area Ford dealerships and other service centers handling the replacements. Tires made in the company's Decatur, Ill., plant were found to be the primary source of the problem. The faulty tires' outer treads can become separated from the inner tires and cause a blow-out. Drivers often over-correct their steering in this situation, which has led to 62 deaths and more than 100 injuries. Even though the defective tires, primarily used for the 1991 through 2000 models of Ford Explorers, Rangers, F-150 trucks and Mercury Mountaineers, are not protected under Ford's warranty, the company is assisting in replacing them. Carousel Ford, 217 Stevens Drive, has been aiding customers in an attempt to get the flawed tires off the road. Service manager Bob Reihman said many customers have come in to have their tires checked since Firestone announced the recall. Customers will have a six- to 12-week wait for their tires. Firestone public relations representative Meghan McCormick said some customers will even have to wait until next spring before receiving new tires. The tires on UI senior Kurt Larson's

1996 Ford Explorer are included in the recall but won't be replaced until next year, he said. Larson added that he is not too concerned. "I know there's a shortage, but you'd think it would be sooner than that," he said. "It's a bit of a hassle, but I'm not worried because most of the problems were in the South." The recall has placed a strain on the supply of tires, Reihman said. Most available tires have already been shipped to Southern states, where 80 percent of the problems have occurred, he said. "The frustrating part is that we just can't help the customers right away," he said. Ford advises drivers to remember three points while waiting for their tires: Monitor tires and make sure the pressure is at 30 pounds; do not overload the vehicle with extra or unnecessary weight; and do not drive excessive speeds for extended periods of time. Jason Vines, the Ford vice president of communications, said the company's three primary concerns are the safety and trust of its customers, working around the clock to make everything go as quickly as possible and being open and transparent with the public. The 30 varieties of tires Ford approved to replace the defective tires were tested for safety as well as adaptability to the vehicles affected, he said. UI program gives students jump start

■ Under a program only offered at the UI, students can start college without a diploma.

By Cory P. Byrne
 The Daily Iowan

Katherine Chisholm is a freshman this year at the UI, but she hasn't graduated from high school yet. As a participant in the UI National Academy of Arts, Sciences and Engineering program, Chisholm was given the option of skipping her senior year of high school in Grand Rapids, Mich., to begin her college career a year early.

Chisholm, 17, is one of 14 freshmen attending the UI this year as part of the program, which is in its second year. Six are from Iowa, and eight are from other states across the nation. The program is the first of its kind at a major university. Similar programs exist at other schools with students taking classes while still in high school, but the UI program is unique in that students enroll as actual freshmen without completing their senior year in high school, said Professor Nicholas Colangelo, the director of the program. "It's a program for students who want

Woman alleges rape, sues Rodman

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — Dennis Rodman is being sued for $10 million by a woman who claims he raped her after they met in a bar last summer.
 "The accusation is false," Paul Meyer, the former basketball player's lawyer, said Tuesday. "This matter will be vigorously defended."
 Tina New, 30, said she was raped by Rodman on Aug. 20, 1999. She reported the alleged attack to police 10 days later, but the Orange County district attorney's office declined to file charges, citing insufficient evidence.

 Alexander Blastos, 35, received the maximum penalty for wire fraud, the U.S. attorney's office said Tuesday.

 A federal judge ruled that several factors justified the penalty, including Blastos' use of a counterfeit $2.1 million guarantee bond and his effort to fraudulently obtain a $2.5 million loan from private sources.
 The court also found that Blastos obstructed justice by ordering an associate to destroy evidence.
 Blastos' bail was revoked last September after authorities said he committed credit card fraud to hire a private jet from Florida to attend his arraignment here.

■ Employment opportunities will abound at the UI Job Fair

By Bridget Stratton
 The Daily Iowan

UI students looking for a campus job will have a "one-stop shopping opportunity" at an annual Student Job Fair in IMU Main Lounge today from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.
 Last year, 1,500 students attended the fair, which is sponsored by the UI Office of Student Financial Aid. It will include employers, said Cynthia Seyfer, financial aid assistant director.
 Opportunities range from working at the IMU to jobs that provide experience in various fields, such as being a laboratory technician at the UI Hospitals and Clinics.
 Many UI students have had success using the Job Fair. Senior Anne Kelleher said that after having difficulty finding a job during her freshman year, she went to the Job Fair the next year and landed a job at the UI.

■ Student government leaders say students need to get involved if they want change

By Mary Sedor
 The Daily Iowan

During a recent interview with The Daily Iowan, UI Student Government President Andy Stoll and Vice President Chris Linn, both UI juniors, addressed the goals and functions of UISG and how students can help to spark change.

DI: Many students on campus are not familiar with UISG. Would you explain for our readers what you do?
Linn: The two roles of UISG are to serve as representatives and advocates of students to the administration and recognize student groups. When (the administration) wants input from students, it usually turns to the UISG.
DI: What kind of activities UISG involved with regarding the proposed tuition increase?
Linn: The tuition issue is important this year because of the shortfalls caused by the state Legislature's appropriations last year. There are two larger issues with tuition. First, students and families should contact their representatives and tell them funding for higher education should be a priority for them. Second, because of what the state did last year, it is unreasonable for the regents not to increase tuition, we are advocating for a reasonable increase that will not put the burden of the state's shortfalls on the students.

Stoll

Stoll: Students need to be productive in speaking with their representatives, to be in contact with the Iowa state Board of Regents and to remain up to date with the debate. For example, last year we sponsored an ISIS online poll for students to voice their opinion about the tuition increase and where they want their money spent. President Coleman used this survey directly when deciding financial priorities for the UI.
DI: Another issue you are addressing is the textbook tax for the University Book Store. What does this tax mean in relation to students?
Stoll: The university would like to stop the sales tax because it is competing with online bookstores that do not charge sales tax. Once this tax is dropped, the UISG and students would lobby the legislators for tax-exempt textbooks at all the bookstores, not just the IMU bookstore.
DI: How is the extension of late-night parking hours going to alleviate parking difficulties on campus?
Linn: The city has signs posted

Students to 'fair' well in job hunt

■ Employment opportunities will abound at the UI Job Fair.

By Bridget Stratton
The Daily Iowan

UI students looking for an on-campus job will have a "one-stop shopping opportunity" at the annual Student Job Fair in the IMU Main Lounge today from 9:30 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Last year, 1,500 students attended the fair, which is sponsored by the UI Office of Student Financial Aid. It will include 55 employers, said Cynthia Seyfer, a financial aid assistant director.

Opportunities range from working at the IMU to jobs that provide experience in various fields, such as being a laboratory technician at the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

Many UI students have had success using the Job Fair. UI senior Anne Kelleher said that after having difficulty finding a job during her freshman year, she went to the Job Fair the next fall and landed a job at the UIHC pharmacy. "It was really easy, and the people were nice," Kelleher said. "I left having done a semi-interview with a time set up for another one. It was a great way to find out all the opportunities for jobs."

The UI Main Library, one of the largest employers in the fair, uses it to recruit a large part of its staff, said Tracy Mixon, a library office manager.

The library system has 100 positions available at the Main Library and its satellites, she said.

In order to attract employees this year, the library has raised its salary from minimum wage to $7.15 an hour.

Most employers are looking to fill part-time as well as work-study positions, and a third of the students who attend the fair walk away with a job or at least an interview, Seyfer said.

"One of the great things about the fair is the range of jobs that are available," she said. "This is a chance for students to see what's out there in a single day."

Students don't need to bring a résumé for the fair, but UI officials recommend that they know their class schedule and bring a copy of the award letter if they are eligible for work study.

The Job Fair has been a successful recruiting tool in the past for the IMU, which has 250 openings, said Lori Berger, the human resources manager for University Life Centers and the IMU.

Berger and her staff will attend the fair, conducting interviews and setting them up for a later date, she said.

"A lot of our staff in the beginning of the year comes from the Job Fair," Berger said. "It is a great opportunity for employers to have contact with many students."

Students who are not able to attend the Job Fair can check the Jobnet Web site at www.uiowa.edu/financial-aid/employment for UI job opportunities.

Vilsack signs Guard-assistance bill

■ The Iowa National Guard Educational Assistance Program will provide 60 percent of members' in-state college fees.

By Jessi Todden
The Daily Iowan

Gov. Tom Vilsack recently approved the Iowa National Guard Educational Assistance Program, a bill that will provide 60-percent education assistance for guard members to attend an in-state college during the 2000-01 school year.

The state Legislature appropriated $1.25 million for the program, a substantial increase from last year's $890,000, which did not support all qualified members participating in the program.

Last year, the program provided students 50-percent assistance, while the new bill provides a 60-percent assistance increase for undergraduate students, said Sgt. Dennis Bratton, recruiter for the Iowa National Guard. Graduate students will receive 75-percent tuition assistance, he said. The guard's goal is 100-percent tuition assistance, which it hopes to reach because the amount it receives each year is steadily increasing, he said.

When the bill was originally passed on April 15, it was for 100-percent assistance, but it was knocked down by appropriations and has now come into effect at 60 percent, said Sgt. Rob Weber, a recruiter for the Iowa National Guard.

"There wasn't enough money available to provide 100-percent

Nick Tremmel/The Daily Iowan
Cadet Nick Brecht smiles as he discusses the increase in education assistance for college students in the Iowa National Guard.

assistance, but we continue to strive for that goal," he said.

Assistance is available to qualified guardsmen and is applicable for any education expenses such as tuition, room and board, supplies, books, fees and associated costs, he said.

UI cadets in the Iowa National Guard said they are pleased with the assistance increase because it provides them with more financial freedom.

"It allows us not to be so dependent on a job for income, enabling me to concentrate on school more," said UI junior Nick Brecht. "College is expensive, but I have extra money to play with, and not a lot of college students have that luxury."

UI senior Ryan Sextro said the most appealing thing about the National Guard is being debt-free after college.

"I'm getting a four-year degree for free," he said. "It's also a good learning opportunity."

With this increase, the Iowa National Guard is becoming more competitive with surrounding states who have 100-percent assistance, said Col. Robert C. King, the Iowa National Guard's public affairs officer.

"Other bordering states had this program long before we did, so high-school graduates would leave Iowa," King said. "We want students to remain in Iowa and continue to live and work here."

The Iowa National Guard is a part of America's Army and Air Force, King said. Guard members can be mobilized for active federal duty in a national emergency. In addition to being called for federal duty, the Guard is different from other national reserve units because it serves as the state militia, he said.

During peacetime, Guard units respond to the governor of Iowa in accordance with the Iowa state code and may be called to duty if an emergency occurs within the state, he said.

Second, because of what the state did last year, it is unreasonable for the regents not to increase tuition, so we are advocating for a reasonable increase that will not put the burden of the state's shortfalls on the students.

Stoll: Students need to be productive in speaking with their representatives, to be in contact with the Iowa state Board of Regents, and to remain up to date with the debate. For example, last year we sponsored an ISIS online poll for students to voice their opinions about the tuition increase and where they want their money spent. President Coleman used this survey directly when deciding financial priorities for the UI.

DI: Another issue you are addressing is the textbook tax for the University Book Store. What does this tax mean in relation to students?

Stoll: The university would like to stop the sales tax because it is competing with online bookstores that do not charge sales tax. Once this tax is dropped, the UISG and students would lobby the legislators for tax-exempt textbooks at all the bookstores, not just the IMU bookstore.

DI: How is the extension of late-night parking hours going to alleviate parking difficulties on campus?

Linn: The city has signs posted for no parking between 2 and 6 a.m. These signs are there for city workers to clean the streets. Last semester, the crews did not clean the streets regularly, and downtown employees were used to parking their cars without worrying their cars would be towed. When the crews started cleaning the streets and towing cars, it created a need for this extension of hours. This extension would benefit downtown employees so they can park while they work and not have their cars towed.

Also, we are trying to get the three transit authorities to become more efficient by advocating for better coverage of a wider area over greater time to create better and more convenient service.

Chemo drug helps fight alcoholism

■ Researchers say Ondansetron can aid people suffering early onset alcoholism.

By Kellie Doyle
The Daily Iowan

A drug normally associated with calming the nausea and vomiting caused by chemotherapy was recently found to help alcoholics cut back on their drinking habits.

Ondansetron, which is also known as Zofran, has been prescribed for patients whose drinking problems began before they were 25, the age when alcoholism tends to be the most severe.

This study demonstrates and provides hope for individuals with early onset alcoholism," the study's lead author, Dr. Bakole A. Johnson, said in a Reuters' Health interview.

Ondansetron is unique compared to other alcoholism medications, such as Anabuse and Naltrexone, because it has the ability to control reactions between serotonin and dopamine. An imbalance between the two chemicals causes the craving found in early onset alcoholics, according to the study.

Anabuse is designed to make alcoholics terribly, sometimes fatally, sick after they drink by causing such side effects as blood-pressure drops, headaches and vomiting, said Dave Barloon, a nurse practitioner in the Chemical Dependency Center at UI Hospitals and Clinics.

Naltrexone is used by some alcohol patients to reduce cravings.

"Naltrexone blocks receptors where alcohol would bind to, so there are no 'high' effects when a person drinks," said Jesse Kleinhesselink, a

Taking the medications tends to motivate alcoholics to not drink, but, Barloon said, he believes that people should not depend on the drugs too heavily.

"I don't think it's the core on how to treat alcoholism," he said. "There are no magic pills. Alcoholism is not only a craving, it's a whole attitude."

Although alcoholism pills are not cure-all, some doctors and counselors who specialize in chemical abuse seem to think the medication, along with counseling, can help

Effects of alcoholism

Early alcoholic drinking may produce:

- Loss of control of eye muscles
 - Hypoglycemia
 - Gastritis
 - Increased susceptibility to infections
 - Cardiac arrhythmia
 - Anemia
 - Constant flushing of facial edema
 - Pancreatitis
 - Increase in blood alcohol level
 - Withdrawal signs
 - Fatty liver
 - Increase in blood pressure
- Chronic alcohol drinking produces even more severe conditions:
- Liver damage

individuals deal with their illnesses.

Brian Cook, a UI associate professor of psychiatry, said he believes that the medications are helpful if an individual is struggling with alcoholism and is willing to deal with any side effects.

"They're just add-ons to traditional counseling programs such as (Alcoholics Anonymous)," he said.

Fonda Frazier, the clinical director at MECCA Substance Abuse Services, agreed that sometimes individuals need more than counseling.

"If clients are involved in counseling in conjunction with medical therapy, they are more likely to follow through," she said.

Panera to open café in Sycamore Mall

■ Developers and tenants hope the new restaurant will be the start of a trend.

By Andrew Bixby
The Daily Iowan

Panera Bread store officials announced Wednesday that they will open a new café in the Sycamore Mall.

The new store will be the second in the area for Panera, which also has a Coral Ridge Mall store. Panera officials want to open another café in the area because of large demand at the Coralville store.

"Population and income levels warrant two locations in (the Iowa City) market," said Panera President David Ulgenalt. "We think there is a need for (Panera) in that part of Iowa City."

The new café will be located in the space formerly leased by Walgreens; it will feature soups, sandwiches, salads and coffee drinks. Panera's opening is part of a plan to generate additional business in Sycamore Mall.

"We are excited that (Panera) is coming," said Gerry Ambrose, a developer with MGD L.C., which owns Sycamore Mall. "We think it will be a great asset."

Many mall employees said they are pleased that Panera Bread will locate in the mall.

"When you work in retail, you like a light, refreshing lunch," said Debbie J. Keever, a temporary manager at Fashion Bug Plus.

Currently, the only other food outlets in Sycamore Mall or within walking distance are Diamond Dave's Taco Co. Restaurant and a McDonald's.

"I usually go to McDonald's," said Radio Shack employee Robert J.

McBride. "(Panera) will definitely help."

Some Iowa City residents might wonder why Panera would want to expand to the often-empty Sycamore Mall, Ulgenalt said. However, he predicts that the mall's business will begin to pick up and additional stores will follow Panera's lead.

Ulgenalt said the mall "has a very strong daytime population. It has seen better days, but we have a commitment from (Gerry Ambrose) to reface and revitalize the mall and bring in new tenants."

Current tenants of the mall include Von Maur, Radio Shack, Waldenbooks, Fashion Bug Plus and Claire's Boutique.

"(Panera) is the first major tenant to sign," Ambrose said. "We hope it will be the first of many."

There is still much work to be done, and Panera is expected to open after the beginning of the year, Ulgenalt said.

Towed car leads to tussle

An Iowa City woman was charged with assault on a police officer and interference with official acts after allegedly grabbing an officer's arm and neck and attempting to pull him to the ground.

Esther L. Coblentz, 54, allegedly became angry when she saw that her car was being towed from the Gloria Dei Church, 123 E. Market St., at 10 a.m. Tuesday, according to court records.

Coblentz said she had a church member's permission to park there while she ate and had a disabled sticker in her car window. She said the officer pushed her after she grabbed him.

"He yipped at me for being parked there, and it just hit me the wrong way," Coblentz said. "But I don't think they should shove an elderly person down."

Coblentz was appointed a public defender; a preliminary hearing is set for Sept. 7.

"It's no big thing, it's just something that happened," she said.

Georgia police kill Iowa man in scuffle

AUSTELL, Ga. (AP) — Police shot and killed an Iowa man during a scuffle early Wednesday after the man, who was initially pulled over for a traffic violation, grabbed an officer's gun.

Jeffrey J. Roman, 37, of Cedar Rapids fled about 12:30 a.m. after being pulled over by an Austell officer, said Georgia Bureau of Investigation spokesman John Bankhead.

After leading three police cruisers on a brief chase, Roman got out of his vehicle on Veterans Memorial Highway and grappled with police.

During the struggle, he grabbed a .40-caliber Glock handgun from one of the officers, said Capt. Bob Black of the Austell Police Department.

Several shots were exchanged, and Roman was hit twice in the chest, authorities said. None of the three officers involved was injured.

The Georgia bureau is still investigating.

for a Russian leader. Russians have assailed Putin and his government for their slow, contradictory reaction to the disaster and the botched rescue operation, and many observers expected Putin to respond by firing top brass.

His interview came as Russia held a day of mourning for the victims, and after he sat through a harrowing three-hour meeting with the sailors' families late Tuesday night at the submarine's home base of Vidyayev. The anger runs deep.

Iraq rejects new weapons inspections

■ Baghdad says it won't allow a new U.N. inspection team into the country.

By Leon Barkho
Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraq said Wednesday it will not permit a new U.N. weapons inspection team to visit, promising that the country would stand firm even if threatened with the use of force.

Deputy Prime Minister Tariq Aziz said Iraq had not changed its position on a U.N. resolution that calls for the resumption of stalled weapons inspections and promises Iraq a suspension of sanctions if it cooperates.

Asked about Aziz's comments, U.N. spokesman Fred Eckhard said: "That's been their standing policy for some time. Our position is that we will continue to prepare for a new round of inspections."

At U.N. headquarters in New York, Eckhard said the world body hopes that Iraq will change its position, accept the inspection teams, "and eventually get to a position where we could declare Iraq to be in full compliance and see the lifting of the sanctions against that country."

The head of the new inspection program, Hans Blix, is ready to restart international efforts to ensure that Iraq has surrendered its weapons of mass destruction and the ability to make and deploy them in compliance with U.N. Security Council resolutions.

Secretary of State Madeleine Albright met with Blix Tuesday and expressed full support for his activities.

Aziz said Iraq will not allow Blix or any of his inspectors to enter the country.

"I have said Iraq will not cooperate with Resolution 1284. This means it will not receive Blix or any person related to this resolution," Aziz told reporters.

Blix is a former Swedish foreign minister who also served for many years as director general of the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Typhoon dies out over Chinese coast

By Christopher Bodeen
Associated Press

BEIJING — Typhoon Bilis churned into coastal China Wednesday, bringing heavy rain and gale-force winds but little of the destruction it left across Taiwan, where it wrecked homes and killed 11 people.

There were no reports of injuries or serious damage in China's Fujian province, where Bilis made landfall Wednesday afternoon before dying out further inland, said a government spokesman in the port city of Xiamen, who gave only his surname, Xie.

Municipal workers were keeping watch through the night for flooding and other damage from the torrential rains expected to follow the typhoon, the spokesman said.

Xiamen had prepared for a major storm, giving city workers the day off as Bilis moved in. The Xiamen ferry service and a local airline shut down operations, television stations and the state-run Chinese news agency Xinhua reported.

Boats were ordered into port along the Fujian coast, and airports in Xiamen and the provincial capital, Fuzhou, closed for part of the day, television reports said. TV footage showed signboards blown down and city residents negotiating streets in the wind and rain.

'Survivor' identity shocks students

SURVIVOR

Erica Ledger grew tense as the final moments neared. Though neither watch the show faithfully, they said, they both tuned in to find out what they hype was about.

"Now that I've seen this episode, I can definitely see myself tuning in to the sequel," she said. "What I read and saw in the media was right — it's so addicting."

The final episode created a great deal of tension among the viewers. A clock was shown at the bottom of the screen during other CBS shows, counting down the minutes before "Survivor" began.

When the time was up, faithful viewers all over the country grew silent and turned in. Ten of these viewers gathered at UI senior Brad Witke's apartment at 7 p.m. As the remaining survivors appeared on the screen, partygoers began to discuss them as though they knew them.

"Rich has really lost some weight," said UI senior Jenny Knipp, who said she has watched the show from the beginning.

Many viewers tried to guess the identity of the winner. Although many believed Rudy would walk away victorious, he was out of the running by the time the show was half over.

"I thought it was going to be Rudy," said UI graduate student Shannon Schintler. "I heard he had a Mercedes parked in his garage."

"I knew it was going to be Rich," Kaalberg said. "One of the ousted survivors was on a talk show and kind of alluded that he would win."

to do something positive rather than escape something," he said.

Students who have completed high-school course work equivalent to the junior year are invited to apply for the program, Colangelo said. If accepted, students are enrolled in the UI Honors Program and they live in Daum Residence Hall. Recommended qualifications for application to the program include a composite score of 30 on the ACT or 1300 on the SAT and a high-school GPA of 3.5 or higher. Program participants receive a high school diploma at the end of their freshman year because the classes they take at the UI generally fulfill high school requirements, Colangelo said.

The program is supported by the Belin-Blank International Center for Gifted Education and Talent Development. Students in the program receive a $1,000 merit scholarship from the Belin-Blank Center.

Tom Kovacs, 17, a program freshman from Colorado, said he would like to attend his prom and graduation but said he is unsure if he can fit it into his schedule.

"I couldn't pass up this opportunity," he said of attending the UI.

The program is ideal for students who feel that their senior year doesn't hold much for them and for students who are ready to move on socially and emotionally, Colangelo said.

UI sophomore Eileen Lee was one of 10 students who participated in the program last year because she felt that she had hit a dead end in high school.

"I don't think it's any different from what any parent goes through when a child leaves home," she said.

One passenger was believed to be an American. A State Department official in Washington said Bahraini officials had informed them that a boarding pass indicated that a U.S. diplomatic courier was aboard. The courier's name was not immediately released.

The crew included two Bahrainis and one each from Oman, the Philippines, Poland, India, Morocco and Egypt.

WASHINGTON — For the third time, Attorney General Janet Reno refused Wednesday to have an outside counsel investigate Vice President Al Gore for his 1996 campaign fund-raising. After reviewing the transcript of an April interview with Gore by the Justice Department's campaign-finance task force, Reno concluded that "further investigation is not likely to result in a prosecutable case."

■ The attorney general says there was no perjury in the vice president's statements on fund raising.

WASHINGTON — For the third time, Attorney General Janet Reno refused Wednesday to have an outside counsel investigate Vice President Al Gore for his 1996 campaign fund-raising. After reviewing the transcript of an April interview with Gore by the Justice Department's campaign-finance task force, Reno concluded that "further investigation is not likely to result in a prosecutable case."

"The transcript reflects neither false statements nor perjury," the attorney general told her weekly news conference. "I've concluded that there is no reasonable possibility that further investigation would produce evidence to warrant charges."

But Reno made it clear that the task-force investigation will continue to look into 1996 campaign fund-raising activities and the events Gore was asked about — an April 1996 event at a Buddhist temple in California and a series of White House coffees where potential contributors met Gore or President Clinton.

Reno's decision was good news for Gore's presidential campaign. "We are pleased with today's Justice Department announcement," Gore spokesman Chris Lehane said. "But our focus is going to remain where it has always been — which is on using our prosperity to help America's families."

Republican presidential nominee George W. Bush said, "While it's clear that Al Gore engaged in a number of questionable fund-raising activities and gave the FBI statements that continue to raise the issue of his credibility, the American people are sick and tired of all these scandals and investigations. The best way to put all these scandals and investigations behind us is to elect someone new."

Republicans in Congress were expected to renew criticism of Reno, whom they attacked for two earlier decisions. In 1997 and 1998, she declined to have an independent counsel look into fund-raising telephone calls Gore made from his office and into whether he lied to investigators when he said he thought the money he raised was for general party-building rather than for the Clinton-Gore re-election effort.

Since then, the law authorizing her to have a special court select an independent counsel has expired. Now, she must appoint any special counsels.

This time, the campaign task force chief, Robert J. Conrad Jr., urged her to appoint a counsel to determine whether Gore lied to him in April about whether he knew the Buddhist temple event was a fund-raiser and about how many White House coffees he had attended.

The temple event has led to convictions of others for concealing who actually gave the $60,000 contributed afterward.

Two government officials, requesting anonymity, said Conrad was the only federal prosecutor recommending outside investigation of Gore for the April remarks. But Reno went out of her way to deny that Conrad was the lone Justice Department voice advocating outside counsel.

She said two others did so but would not identify them. Officials said the recommendations supporting Conrad came from FBI Director Louis Freeh and one of his aides. Freeh has backed an outside investigation for three years.

Gov't: Fuel blast caused TWA crash

WASHINGTON (AP) — Investigators seeking the cause of the fuel-tank explosion that downed TWA Flight 800 focused Wednesday on aging aircraft and the problems that can accumulate in those complex machines.

"The longer an airplane is around, the more changes and modifications it needs," said Jim Hall, the chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board. He said it is not clear the industry is paying enough attention to the problems.

His comments came as the board was concluding a two-day hearing into the July 17, 1996, crash off the coast of Long Island that killed all 230 aboard.

Board investigators said Tuesday they had reached the "inescapable conclusion" that the wing center fuel tank of the plane exploded, probably because of an electrical short circuit.

On Wednesday, the five-member board unanimously agreed with that conclusion, voting to list it as the probable cause of the tragedy.

But they added criticism of the design philosophy that assumes aircraft fuel tanks will always contain at least some potentially explosive material and seeks to prevent ignition.

"It is not possible to eliminate all possible ignition sources," said Bernard Loeb, the agency's aviation safety director. Instead, the board urged that steps be taken to prevent explosive fuel mixtures from forming, such as pumping inert gas into the empty portion of tanks.

Both sides 'close' in Verizon strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Negotiators for striking telephone workers in six mid-Atlantic states and Verizon Communications came closer Wednesday to reaching a new contract as picket lines reappeared in New York despite an earlier tentative accord with phone workers there.

Both sides said they have largely addressed the substantive issues needed to replace contracts that expired on Aug. 6 for more than 35,000 Communications Workers of America employees in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia.

"We are down to the final couple of points," said CWA spokeswoman Candice Johnson. "We're very close to working things out."

The company says the major sticking points have been resolved. A local matter involving what work can be performed by cable-splicing technicians in Pennsylvania has led to some delay in reaching an agreement.

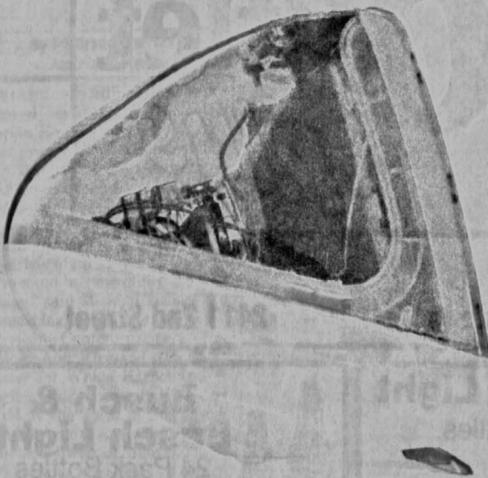

"We must say we are a little perplexed as to why the strike is still going on," said Verizon spokesman Eric Rabe.

Picket lines reappeared in New York state three days after unions representing telephone workers there reached a tentative contract agreement with Verizon. Striking CWA workers from the Mid-Atlantic states demonstrated at approximately 15 company facilities in New York state Wednesday, company officials said.

Diabetes up sharply in 1990s, study shows

Instances of the disease among those in their 30s are up 70 percent.

By Erin McClam
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Diabetes increased at an alarming rate in the United States during the past decade — rising 70 percent among people in their 30s — and health experts are blaming the wired-up, couch-potato culture of the 1990s.

Diabetes is closely tied to obesity, and doctors say the higher incidence of the disease is due in large part to America's weight problem.

Obesity is "not just a cosmetic issue anymore," said Dr. Frank Vinicor, the director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention's diabetes division.

The share of the population diagnosed with diabetes jumped 33 percent nationally, to 6.5 percent, between 1990 and 1998, the government said Wednesday. The rise crossed races and age groups but was sharpest among people ages 30 to 39.

The study, published in the September issue of the journal Diabetes Care, was based on annual telephone surveys in which people were asked whether they have diabetes.

A one-third jump in the incidence of any disease in just eight years is almost unheard of, Vinicor said.

"If that would happen in a disease like tuberculosis, syphilis or AIDS, I think there would be a public outcry, and understandably," Vinicor said. "These trends are very disturbing."

The nation's weight problem is well-documented. The number of Americans considered obese soared from about one in eight in 1991 to nearly one in five in 1998.

Experts blame several factors — hundreds of TV channels, stressful jobs that lead us to gulp down fatty fast food, the rise of computers at home and at work, even a construction boom that has gobbled up space for outdoor exercise.

Wednesday's numbers show there are grave consequences to obesity, the government said.

About 3.7 percent of people 30 to 39 had diabetes in 1998, compared with 2.1 percent in 1990, the study showed.

Among 40- to 49-year-olds, the incidence of diabetes rose almost 40 percent, with roughly 5.1 percent of that age group reporting they have the disease. The increase among 50- to 59-year-olds was 31 percent, to almost 10 percent of the population.

About 13 percent of the population 60 and over has the disease. Diabetics' bodies cannot regulate blood sugar, or glucose.

Some 16 million Americans have the disease, and the number is expected to rise to 22 million by 2025. Diabetes is a leading cause of blindness, kidney failure and limb amputations and dramatically raises the risk of heart attacks. It kills 180,000 Americans each year.

Experts cautioned that the diabetes figures reported Wednesday could severely underestimate the problem because about one-third of American diabetics do not realize they have the disease.

But the sharp rise during the 1990s also could be credited partly to better reporting methods, said Dr. Judith Fradkin, an endocrinologist with the National Institutes of Health.

Type 2 diabetes, which gradually robs the body of its ability to use insulin, is increasingly common among children.

"Kids are spending incredible amounts of time in front of the computer," Fradkin said. "And when you think about the workplace, it's increasingly people sitting at desks. Even at home, we have so many labor-saving devices."

Another 'noble gas' joins the atomic party

In a chemical "shotgun marriage," Finnish scientists manage to make argon form a compound.

By Rick Callahan
Associated Press

Remember the "noble gases" from high school chemistry class — those standoffish elements that resist pairing up with other atoms? They just got a bit more social.

Scientists have coaxed one of them, argon, into joining with other atoms to form a compound. It is the first time in 37 years that a noble gas has lost its hermit status.

The latest feat — a sort of chemical shotgun marriage — leaves helium and neon as the only stable elements that have so far refused to join in a compound.

But the same trick could work on those two gaseous loners, the Finnish researchers said.

There is no practical application for the argon compound. But it's another step in taming the "noble gases," which are so unreactive scientists once thought it was impossible to make compounds from them.

"Now the textbooks must be slightly rewritten to add us in," said Markku Rasanen, a professor of physical chemistry at the University of Helsinki.

The research appears in today's issue of Nature.

Up until about 40 years ago, most scientists believed it was impossible to create a stable compound from any of the noble gases — helium, neon, argon, krypton, xenon and radon.

Because the outer shell of electrons surrounding their nuclei is arranged in a highly stable form, it was thought they could not be chemically bonded with other atoms.

But in 1962, scientists created a stable xenon compound. Radon was conquered next, followed in 1963 by krypton. All three of the compounds can be handled at room temperature.

Although the argon compound can exist only at extremely low temperatures, it is still considered a stable compound, Rasanen said.

Working with argon at minus 446 degrees, he and four colleagues took advantage of the fact that its electrons had been chilled to a virtual standstill.

The scientists sprayed argon mixed with a small amount of hydrogen fluoride onto a supercooled surface. Then they bombarded the frozen mixture with ultraviolet light that broke the bond between the hydrogen and fluorine atoms, causing them to attach to individual argon atoms. Sandwiched between the two atoms, argon became part of the compound argon fluorohydride, or HARF.

When the temperature rose or the HARF compounds encountered each other, the fragile party of three collapsed, the researchers said.

Heart dise

The decrease is attributed to healthier living rather than better medicine.

By Linda A. Johnson
Associated Press

Healthier habits rather than better medicine may account for most of the dramatic drop in heart disease among U.S. women in the past two decades, a long-running study of nurses suggests.

The findings emerged from Nurses Health Study, which found that the incidence of heart disease among the more than 80,000 participants dropped nearly a third from 1980 to 1998.

Researchers at Harvard's medical and public health schools examined some of the factors contributed to the drop and concluded that two-thirds of the decline was explained by nurses eating healthier diets, not smoking — the two big factors — plus some benefit from the big increase in the use of estrogen after menopause.

A big jump in the proportion of nurses who were overweight was a major risk factor for heart disease, offset some of the gains.

"This is the first study to quantify the contribution of diet and lifestyle and their impact on heart disease risk," Dr. Frank B. Hu, a nutrition professor who led the study.

The reasons for the remaining one-third of the decline include the use of blood pressure and cholesterol-lowering medications to prevent onset of heart disease, better overall medical care and other factors less understood, Hu said.

Heart disease is the nation's No. 1 killer, causing about 960,000 deaths annually.

The study was published Thursday's issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Based on questionnaires filled out every two years, the study found that consumption of red meat, high-fat dairy products and saturated fat were associated with a higher risk of heart disease. The study also found that eating fruits, vegetables, whole grains and fish were associated with a lower risk.

The study also found that women who were overweight had a higher risk of heart disease. However, the study also found that women who were overweight but ate a healthy diet had a lower risk of heart disease.

Keys brace for Debby

With the tropical storm still hundreds of miles away, Floridians prepare, just in case.

By Mildred Cherhills
Associated Press

MIAMI — All visitors were ordered evacuated from Florida Keys Wednesday, as officials prepared for the possibility that Tropical Storm Debby could hit Florida as a hurricane.

Monroe County, which governs the island chain, declared a state of emergency with Debby hundreds of miles away.

"It could be powerfully close Friday," said Michael Tichacek, meteorologist at the National Hurricane Center.

Mary Ann Kirkland, the director for Whale Harbor Inn Marina, said it was business as usual at the Keys fishing resort on Islamorada, approximately 100 miles southwest of Miami.

"The skies are clear — a couple of little puffy clouds up there but it's a beautiful day," she said.

Still, a Philadelphia fisherman rebooked his weekend trip rather than risk confronting Debby, some charter-boat captains canceled trips set for Saturday.

State and county parks and private campgrounds were instructed to close by noon, and all large recreational vehicles, travel trailers and tent campers were ordered out.

Monroe County schools will close today and Friday at Everglades National Park and Biscayne National Park south of Miami.

To the north, in Cape Canaveral, Kennedy Space Center workers took plywood and sandbags out of storage to be put up in case the storm veered in that direction.

Space shuttle Atlantis could be moved off a launch pad into a hangar if it were threatened.

In the Keys, an automated emergency system was activated to contact more than 300 hotels and guest houses along the 180-mile island chain with a recorded message about the evacuation. Homeowners were asked to post notices to contact guests.

Healthier habits rather than better medicine may account for most of the dramatic drop in heart disease among U.S. women over the past two decades, a long-running study of nurses suggests.

The findings emerged from the Nurses Health Study, which found that the incidence of heart disease among the more than 80,000 participants dropped by nearly a third from 1980 to 1994.

Researchers at Harvard's medical and public health schools also examined some of the factors that contributed to the drop and concluded that two-thirds of that decline was explained by the nurses eating healthier diets and not smoking — the two biggest factors — plus some benefit from the big increase in the use of estrogen after menopause.

A big jump in the proportion of nurses who were overweight, a major risk factor for heart disease, offset some of the gains.

"This is the first study to quantify the contribution of changing diet and lifestyle and their relation to heart disease risk," said Dr. Frank B. Hu, a nutrition professor who led the study.

The reasons for the remaining one-third of the decline could include the use of blood pressure- and cholesterol-lowering medications to prevent onset of heart disease, better overall medical care and other factors less understood, Hu said.

Heart disease is the nation's No. 1 killer, causing about 960,000 deaths annually.

The study was published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

Based on questionnaires filled out every two years, the nurses' consumption of red meat, high-fat dairy products and saturated fats declined by about a third or more over 14 years, while intake of foods containing healthy fish oils, fiber and folic acid increased significantly.

Smoking declined 41 percent and use of estrogen supplements after menopause jumped 175 percent. However, 38 percent more of the nurses became overweight.

Women tend to gain weight going through menopause, noted Dr. Nieca Goldberg, an American Heart Association spokeswoman. Even nurses, who know the benefits of a healthy lifestyle, can find it difficult to maintain one, she said.

Dr. Norman L. Lasser, director of preventive cardiology at University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey in Newark, said the study gives strong evidence of what changes in lifestyle can do.

But he noted that the study did not look at other factors, such as exercise, blood pressure and cholesterol levels. And he said the nurses may not be representative of all American women.

Last month, a report in the journal involving the same nurses concluded that the risk of heart disease was 83 percent lower among those without any risk factors: smoking, poor diet, lack of exercise and being overweight. But only 3 percent of the nurses had such a healthy lifestyle.

Clinton pushes Congress for school $

SOUTH BRUNSWICK, N.J. — President Clinton seized on record school enrollments Wednesday to criticize Republicans for not approving bonds, loans and grants for urgent classroom modernization across America. "The need is enormous," he said.

"These children's education is a national priority," Clinton said. "All over America, the schools are working better. Reading scores are up. Math scores are up ... but sooner or later we're going to pay price after price after price if we say our children are the most important thing to us but we don't really care if they don't have a decent place to go to school."

Many Democrats are annoyed that the Republican-controlled Congress has yet to renew major federal education programs.

"Sooner or later, we have to deal with this," Clinton said. "This is not consistent. If we care about it, we need to put it beyond politics, put our children first and get this done."

United institutes delay 'emergency'

DENVER — United Airlines, under attack for flight delays, has declared an operational emergency at five airports in a maneuver to force mechanics to work overtime.

The order applies to mechanics working at Denver, Washington, Chicago, Los Angeles and Indianapolis. Workers at Denver International Airport were advised in a notice issued by United, Denver manager, Frank Krasovec.

A clause in the contract between United's parent UAL Corp. and the International Aerospace Machinist union allows management to declare an emergency when overtime hours are needed to keep operations running smoothly.

"I've worked for the company for 15 years now, and it's never done this before," said Scott Brown, the chairman of the union's District 141 grievance committee. He said United needs to boost its contract negotiation efforts with mechanics rather than mandate overtime.

brace for Debby

■ With the tropical storm still hundreds of miles away, Floridians prepare, just in case.

By Mildred Cherfils
Associated Press

MIAMI — All visitors were ordered evacuated from the Florida Keys Wednesday, as officials prepared for the possibility that Tropical Storm Debby could hit Florida as a hurricane.

Monroe County, which governs the island chain, declared a state of emergency with Debby still hundreds of miles away.

"It could be powerfully close by Friday," said Michael Tichacek, a meteorologist at the National Hurricane Center.

Mary Ann Kirkland, the dockmaster for Whale Harbor Inn & Marina, said it was business as usual at the Keys fishing resort on Islamorada, approximately 65 miles southwest of Miami.

"The skies are clear — a couple of little puffy clouds up there — but it's a beautiful day," she said. Still, a Philadelphia fisherman rebooked his weekend trip rather than risk confronting Debby, and some charter-boat captains canceled trips set for Saturday.

State and county parks and private campgrounds were instructed to close by noon, and all large recreational vehicles, travel trailers and tent campers were ordered out.

Monroe County schools will be closed today and Friday. Everglades National Park and Biscayne National Park south of Miami shut down.

To the north, in Cape Canaveral, Kennedy Space Center workers took plywood and sandbags out of storage to be put up in case the storm veered in that direction. Space shuttle Atlantis could be moved off a launch pad into its hangar if it were threatened.

In the Keys, an automated calling system was activated to contact more than 300 hotels and guest houses along the 180-mile island chain with a recorded message about the evacuation. Hotels were asked to post notices and contact guests.

Ulster cease-fire holds, official says

Despite the recent violence, a British minister says the militias want to maintain the '94 truce.

By Shawn Pogatchnik Associated Press

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — The cease-fires observed by rival Protestant groups in Northern Ireland remain intact, despite violence this week that left two militants dead, Britain's minister for the province said Wednesday.

Northern Ireland Secretary Peter Mandelson said he had no doubt whether most commanders of the Ulster Defense Association and Ulster Volunteer Force — outlawed groups battling for control of Belfast's most staunch Protestant neighborhoods — wanted to maintain their joint 1994 cease-fire.

"It is possible for an organization to be on cease-fire but for individuals associated with it to be involved in unlawful activity," he said.

Mandelson also defended his decision Tuesday to order the immediate arrest and re-imprisonment of the most notorious militant, Johnny "Mad Dog" Adair, who was seized at police gunpoint and delivered by helicopter back to prison.

The brawny UDA commander was paroled early from prison last year under terms of Northern Ireland's 1998 peace accord, but he had been accused of stoking up an increasingly violent turf war with UVF members in his Shankill Road power base.

Adair led a raucous UDA parade up the Shankill Road last weekend, inspiring gun attacks on a UVF-linked pub and several leading UVF members' homes. The UVF retaliated Monday by fatally shooting two men, one of them an Adair subordinate. British deployed police and troops into the Shankill district to deter an expected UDA counterstrike.

Police confirmed Wednesday that they were questioning a suspected UVF member on suspicion of involvement in Monday's lethal gun attack. Under British anti-terrorist law, the man could be interrogated for up to a week before being charged or released.

Detectives were questioning six other Protestant militants after seizing eight guns and ammunition during raids on two houses Monday.

Had Mandelson ruled that the joint UDA-UVF truce had broken down, he could have ordered more than 150 convicted members of both groups to be returned to prison to continue serving their suspended sentences.

Instead, he focused criticism on

A young Protestant child plays while a British soldier crouches on the streets of Belfast, Northern Ireland, Wednesday.

Adair, calling him the leading member of a small group of "gangsters and thugs who operate on the black side of Northern Ireland society."

He said Adair had been "given a chance to go straight" but had instead "whipped up the feud."

The viability of the Good Friday peace accord depends in part on maintaining cease-fires by the Irish Republican Army, which draws support from the most militant Catholic areas, and Protestant-based gangs such as the UDA and UVF.

Vilsack unveils teacher compensation plan

DES MOINES(AP) — Gov. Tom Vilsack and leaders of a state task force presented a proposal Wednesday to change the way teachers are paid in Iowa, trying to reform a pay system more than 50 years old.

The proposal, from a task force led by Wellmark chief executive John Forsyth, would try to tie student achievement to improved teacher pay without relying on a merit-pay system frequently criticized by teachers' unions.

Iowa teachers on average earn $34,927, ranking the state 35th in the nation.

Vilsack said the proposal would try to raise the minimum salary — now $23,000 — to nearly $29,700 a year.

Vilsack said the plan offers Iowans "a unique opportunity to change the way we compensate teachers, linking it to student achievement and driving real reform within our education system."

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. — Three young concession employees on a evening outing jumped into a degree hot spring, thinking it was cold water, officials said. One died, and two were in critical condition Wednesday.

The three were burned Monday in the Cavern Spring 10-foot-deep pool in the Le Geyser Basin, seven miles north of Old Faithful in the middle of Yellowstone National Park.

They were returning from a picnic in the Firehole River when friends heard their cries, park spokeswoman Cheryl Matthews said.

Clinton to visit Nigeria

Critics say the president's weekend trip may just add to years of mixed messages to Africa.

By Sonya Ross Associated Press

WASHINGTON — By paying more attention to Africa than any other occupant of the White House, President Clinton has earned himself a place in history — and a lion's share of grief.

Clinton will make a second journey to Africa this weekend to pay a visit to Nigeria, the oil-rich nation that the White House has sought to groom into a great African stabilizer, and Tanzania, where Nelson Mandela has been negotiating peace in Burundi, the scene of seven years of civil war that has left 200,000 dead.

Clinton's aides proudly note that the way Nigeria eased out of a dictator's grip into an elected government in just two years proves his African policies are yielding fruit and serve as a harbinger for what those policies will generate in other countries.

"We have been able to go from a very minimalist, very difficult and fraught bilateral relationship (with Nigeria) to a very strong one," said Susan Rice, assistant secretary of state for African affairs. "We view Nigeria as an indispensable partner to pursue our shared goals of democracy and stability and conflict resolution, not only in West Africa and on the African continent, but globally."

Critics, however, say this relationship with Nigeria underscores a flaw in Clinton's overall approach to Africa: eight years' worth of mixed signals.

"In 1998, President Clinton both visited and bombed Africa," said Salih Booker, director of The Africa Policy Information Center. "American policy was muddled. The increasing militarization of U.S.-Nigerian relations, Washington's official silence on the brutal repression of environmental protesters in the Niger Delta, and its refusal to provide debt relief ... belies a genuine U.S. commitment."

AIDS infections in Africa reached pandemic proportions, and the United States found itself monitoring a feud over AIDS drug prices between South Africa and pharmaceutical companies.

Nigeria, Africa's most populous nation and a major supplier of U.S. oil, began shouldering a peacekeeping responsibility so huge that the cost posed a crippling burden for a poor country.

Jackson said even if Clinton's trip does not result in major changes within Africa, it does not detract from the new status Africa has gained within the United States.

"He has set a new pattern, a new pace for American presidents," Jackson said. "I think that no future president will be able to isolate Africa or African Americans anymore as they have in the past."

Labor Ready finds jobs for the homeless, then takes 3 percent of their wages.

By Peggy Andersen Associated Press

TACOMA, Wash. — Labor Ready's business is linking unskilled workers — often homeless men in desperate straits — with small companies looking for no-frills, part-time help.

But the fact that Labor Ready made more than $850 million a year from doing such good deeds made homeless people and their advocates angry.

"Labor Ready is making that cash off the homeless," said Larry Geo.

The Tacoma-based company which operates 839 offices in the United States, Canada and Britain finds work by the day for unskilled people. According to Ron Junck, general counsel, virtually all employees make more than the $5.15 minimum wage.

3 teens leap into hot spring; 1 killed

■ Three Yellowstone Park employees thought the pool was cold water, officials say.

By Becky Bohrer
Associated Press

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. — Three young park concession employees on a late-evening outing jumped into a 178-degree hot spring, thinking it was an ordinary cold-water pond, a doctor said. One died, and two were in critical condition Wednesday.

The three were burned late Monday in the Cavern Spring, a 10-foot-deep pool in the Lower Geyser Basin, seven miles north of Old Faithful in the middle of Yellowstone National Park.

They were returning from a swim in the Firehole River when friends heard their cries, park spokeswoman Cheryl Matthews said.

"These three teen-agers jumped into the pool thinking it was cold water and got quite a shock," Dr. Jeff Saffle, treating the survivors at a Salt Lake City hospital, said Wednesday.

Yellowstone's thermal pools are often surrounded by thin, fragile crusts. Numerous warning signs are posted. Visitors to the Lower Geyser Basin are urged to stay on a half-mile boardwalk over the treacherous terrain.

"I would not venture off this boardwalk. You couldn't pay me enough to set foot off this," said Carla Wilson, a visitor from Denver.

Sara Hulphers, 20, of Oroville, Wash., was burned over her entire body and died a few hours later at the University of Utah's Intermountain Burn and Trauma Center in Salt Lake City.

Tyler Montague, 18, of Salt Lake City and Lance Buchi, 18, of Sandy, Utah, were in critical condition.

Saffle said Montague and Buchi were in shock and barely coherent after being rescued but told doctors that they dove into the pool on purpose. He estimated their chances of survival at 30 percent to 40 percent.

"It is way too early for us to be optimistic," Saffle said.

Rangers don't think alcohol was a factor, park officials said. Matthews said such accidents are infrequent. In 1998, a man fell into a thermal pool and suffered second-degree burns.

In Oroville, in north-central Washington, high school teacher George Thornton remembered Hulphers as "very outgoing, friendly, very accepting of others."

"She's one of the good kids, really neat, just a treasure of a kid," he said, his voice choking. "This is just tragic. She was a great person."

Father indicted for spelling-bee abuse

■ A father is accused of using violence on his daughters when they didn't win spelling bees.

Associated Press

AKRON, Ohio — The father of five home-schooled children with a knack for doing well in spelling bees was accused of abusing them when they lost and threatening to kill one daughter who came in second in the 1995 national bee.

Thomas Lavery was indicted Tuesday on eight felony counts and one misdemeanor count of endangering children. Lavery, 56, is free on $2,500 bond pending his arraignment Friday.

Prosecutors allege that Lavery threatened to kill Marjory Lavery, now 14, when she lost in the final round of the 1995 contest in Washington. She told police that her mother and other family members had to physically restrain Lavery after she misspelled "cappelletti" — a kind of pasta — and came in second. She was 13 at the time.

Lavery also allegedly refused to let his daughter Kathleen, now 14, eat, sleep or use the bathroom when she finished second in a local spelling bee earlier this year, according to court documents.

Kathleen is receiving post-traumatic stress counseling and has been placed in a foster home, authorities said.

In another incident, Lavery is accused of forcing one of his daughters to disrobe so ice could be applied to her body to ward off any bruises from a beating. Another time, when a daughter failed to meet Lavery's expectations, a soda can was smashed against her head, prosecutors said.

In 1995, Lavery fought with the Akron Public Schools over the system's demands that he register his children. State law requires registration of children, even those taught at home. After a judge ordered Lavery to register his children — and he refused to obey — he was sentenced to 30 days in jail.

"I don't want to tell people how to raise their kids. There's all kinds of philosophies, and I don't want to interfere. But there comes a time when a parent crosses the line, and Mr. Lavery crossed that line," county Prosecutor Michael Callahan said Tuesday.

Lavery's attorney, Peter Cahoon, declined to comment, saying he wanted to meet with Lavery and review the allegations.

The Lavery children began garnering local attention in the early 1990s with their successes at competitions. Marjory and one of her brothers made it to the nationals, and others did well in local or regional spelling bees. One son was set to compete next month in a world Lego building contest.

Company turns day labor into big business

■ Labor Ready finds jobs for the homeless, then takes 30 percent of their wages.

By Peggy Andersen
Associated Press

TACOMA, Wash. — Labor Ready's business is linking unskilled workers — often homeless men in desperate straits — with small companies looking for no-hassle, part-time help.

But the fact that Labor Ready made more than $850 million last year from doing such good deeds has made homeless people and their advocates angry.

"Labor Ready is making all that cash off the homeless," said Larry Geo.

The Tacoma-based company, which operates 839 offices in the United States, Canada and Britain, finds work by the day for unskilled people. According to Ron Junck, its general counsel, virtually all earn more than the $5.15 minimum wage.

"I think last year we employed 700,000 workers," Junck said.

Unions and homeless advocates contend Labor Ready is exploiting those with no skills, no prospects and nowhere else to turn. The company takes at least 30 percent of incoming wages to cover workers-comp insurance costs, payroll taxes and other deductions, and overhead.

"They take too big a cut," said James Fradenburg, 43. He, like Geo, is a potential member of Labor Ready's work force.

Defenders say Labor Ready brings order and accountability to the marketplace.

"Welcome to the real world," said Christopher Jenks of Harvard University, author of The Homeless. "This is called capitalism."

A focus of Labor Ready workers' anger has been the fees it charges them to use cash machines located in company offices. The machines dispense the workers' pay, but a fee of $1 or more is deducted from each transaction.

Labor Ready workers in the Atlanta area sued the company last month, charging that it unfairly targeted workers who must accept their salary in cash because they do not have bank accounts.

Neo-Nazi victim's widow tells of harassment

The Mozambican woman says she feared retaliation for testifying against her husband's accused murderers.

By Tony Czuczka
Associated Press

HALLE, Germany — The widow of a Mozambican man slain by neo-Nazis said she was kept awake by harassing phone calls clearly meant to intimidate her from taking the stand Wednesday, but she did not yield.

Angelika Adriano smoked nervously outside the courtroom after testifying about life with her husband, Alberto, and she bitterly rejected one defendant's expression of regret and his offer of money for her three fatherless children.

Three German skinheads are on trial for kicking Alberto Adriano so brutally on June 11 in the eastern city of Dessau that he died three days later. But his widow's torment reflected the unbroken threat of resurgent neo-Nazi attacks that has left at least three dead in formerly communist eastern Germany this year. Visibly distressed, Angelika Adriano said she feared retaliation for testifying at the murder trial. She said she had received repeated phone calls overnight and believed the callers, who were from the "extreme-right scene."

"I am so afraid," she said in an interview. "If I had been there that night with my husband, you can be sure I wouldn't be alive anymore either."

Angelika Adriano was ultimately persuaded to testify by her lawyer. Sitting across from the defendants for about half an hour, she talked about life with her husband and the last time she saw him, her lawyer, Ronald Reimann, said. The trial is closed to the public because two defendants are juveniles.

Angelika Adriano said she was shocked by the coldness of the defendants, Christian Richer and Frank Miethbauer, both 16, and Enrico Hilprecht, 24, and would skip the rest of the trial until the verdict, expected next week.

"I tried to look into their eyes, and there was nothing there," she said. "There was no flicker of emotion, no sympathy, nothing at all. It was horrible."

Hilprecht finally spoke up in court after Angelika Adriano finished testifying. "He made a two-sentence statement saying he was sorry and hoped to work in prison so he could send money to Mrs. Adriano," Reimann said.

Angelika Adriano reacted with disgust. "I won't accept any money from my husband's murderers," she declared after leaving the courtroom.

Police officers later testified that neo-Nazi propaganda, video-cassettes and music from neo-Nazi rock bands were found at the defendants' homes, the court said in a statement.

One defendant laughed when a document referring to "hatred of Jews" was read in court Wednesday, prompting a rebuke from the presiding judge, the lawyer said.

"That is frightening," said Reimann, who declined to identify which defendant laughed. "All three defendants don't seem to understand what they've done."

High unemployment and lack of exposure to democratic values during 50 years of communist rule are often cited as reasons for the high rate of attacks on foreigners and other minorities in eastern Germany since unification a decade ago. However, there have also been attacks in the west, including one on an African man beaten by far-rightists on Aug. 19 in northern Schleswig-Holstein state.

Authorities say the three drunken attackers stopped Alberto Adriano as he was walking home through a city park, shouted racist abuse, then beat and kicked him in the head repeatedly.

Federal prosecutors who took over the high-profile case say the attackers were motivated by hatred of foreigners and "were aware that Adriano could die" but didn't care, justifying murder charges.

If convicted, the two teen-agers face up to 10 years in prison. Hilprecht would risk a life sentence, with parole possible after 15 years.

With hands and feet tied, defendant Frank Miethbauer, center, is escorted by judicial officers on his way to the court building in the eastern German town of Halle on Wednesday.

UN suspends Timor aid after attack

GENEVA (AP) — The U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees said Wednesday it was suspending operations in West Timor after three of its workers were severely injured in an attack by pro-Indonesian militias.

The anti-independence militia gangs have also set up roadblocks in West Timor to stop refugees from returning home to East Timor, said agency spokesman Jake Morland, adding that Indonesia's military was doing nothing to stop the rising tensions in the region.

"It is regrettable that the militias are allowed to operate with impunity and make a mockery of statements by responsible officials in Jakarta guaranteeing security for aid workers and refugees," said Soren Jessen-Petersen, assistant high commissioner for refugees.

He said the Tuesday attack with sticks and machetes came as the workers were distributing plastic sheeting to East Timorese refugees at a camp 80 miles from the provincial capital, Kupang. Two of the three aid workers escaped, but the third was captured and taken to a nearby rice paddy, where the militiamen held his head under water. He escaped later with the help of some refugees.

The aid workers received hospital treatment for severe head and body injuries, the U.N. agency said.

"Indonesian army officials in the area were called for help but failed to respond immediately to the incident — the worst of more than 100 recorded cases of harassment and intimidation against aid workers and refugees," an agency statement said.

At best, the operation could be shut down for a few days or a week, threatening water, sanitation and health care and possibly even food distribution for thousands of refugees, said U.N. spokesman Ron Redmond.

Strong quake hits western Turkey; 9 injured

ISTANBUL, Turkey (AP) — A strong quake shook western Turkey on Wednesday, hitting an area devastated by a massive quake last year. Nine people were injured, apparently when they jumped out of buildings in panic, private TV television reported.

The quake, with a preliminary magnitude of 5.8, was centered near the town of Hendek, 105 miles east of Istanbul, said Ahmet Mete Isikara, head of Istanbul's Kandilli Observatory.

Hendek is 13 miles east of Adapazari, a town that was virtually leveled in last year's earthquake, which killed 17,000 people and destroyed hundreds of thousands of buildings.

At least three people were brought to a hospital in Adapazari suffering from shock, local officials said.

Isikara said the governor of the Adapazari region told him there were apparently no deaths or serious damage.

At a state-owned train factory in Adapazari, which was heavily damaged in last year's quake, workers left the building in panic.

"Everyone rushed out," said Emin Yilmaz, a switchboard operator at the TUVASAS train factory. But he said there was no damage at the factory.

D.M. police accused

Two women who were involved with the two officers say they menace women.

DES MOINES — The Des Moines Police Department has failed to deal firmly with two officers who have a history of menacing women, two women who say they were involved with the officers said. Officer David Foreman, who has been suspended at least three times, was convicted earlier this month of assaulting his 17-year-old son and was arrested in June on an assault charge for allegedly punching his wife.

Officer Anthony Gomez is serving a 30-day suspension for his second sexual-harassment episode since 1998. The first incident resulted in a 10-day suspension. Police Chief William Moulder, who has yet to discipline Foreman, disputes the notion that he has not dealt strongly enough with the officer.

The chief told the Des Moines Register last week that he wanted to know the outcome of criminal proceedings before deciding how to handle the current charges.

While the allegations are serious, he said, "I'm in no hurry to get all that done. The facts of the case are not going to change."

Foreman, who is on vacation from the police force, declined comment. His arraignment is set for Sept. 19.

A federal law that prohibits anyone convicted of domestic abuse from carrying a firearm may require Foreman's firing, Moulder said.

Foreman's ex-wife, Linda Morgan, said she obtained a restraining order against Foreman in 1991. She said she called Des Moines police at least three times regarding Foreman's abuse.

Moulder first said last week that he was not aware of any troubles between the two until Morgan brought them to his attention recently.

"It's tragic that Linda suffered through that," he said. "But the victim still has some responsibility to make the abuse known."

DES MOINES — The Des Moines Police Department has failed to deal firmly with two officers who have a history of menacing women, two women who used to be involved with the officers say. Officer David Foreman, who has been suspended at least three times, was convicted earlier this month of assaulting his 17-year-old son and was arrested in July on an assault charge for allegedly punching his wife.

Officer Anthony Gomez is serving a 30-day suspension for his second sexual-harassment episode since 1998. The first incident resulted in a 10-day suspension.

Police Chief William Moulder, who has yet to discipline Foreman, disputes the notion that he has not dealt strongly enough with the officer.

The chief told the Des Moines Register last week that he wanted to know the outcome of criminal proceedings before deciding how to handle the current charges.

While the allegations are serious, he said, "I'm in no hurry to get all that done. The facts of the case are not going to change."

with copies of a letter she sent to Moulder in 1992 and his reply promising an investigation of her allegations that Foreman had confronted her while he was on duty.

Moulder, shown copies of the letters, said he had forgotten about the report. He said that an investigation exonerated Foreman in that incident and added that Morgan is a "bitter ex-spouse."

Myrle Atwood, a former police officer, said she had a volatile break-up with Gomez years ago that triggered police intervention. Moulder and others at the department have said they have no record of her reports.

Gomez declined to comment.

Atwood said she was troubled that Gomez was promoted to a supervisory role after his first suspension in 1998. It was in that job that Gomez made inappropriate comments to a new female officer, resulting in the current suspension, she said.

Moulder said Gomez is considered an excellent teacher.

Atwood and Morgan question whether police leaders' esteem for the two veteran officers has overshadowed the seriousness of their transgressions.

"There are some great officers who are true champions of victims' rights, and the people should be glad they're there," Atwood said. "However, they also should be wary of the few who break the law and get away with it."

Moulder said some offenses, such as theft, merit immediate firing.

"Theft goes to the integrity of the individual," he said.

Leigh Ebbesmeyer, a training education coordinator for the Iowa Coalition Against Sexual Assault, finds the recent allegations troubling.

"There's a clear pattern here that the officers are not respecting women in general," she said. "Just because these men have medals on their chests doesn't mean they are immune to perpetrating" harassment or abuse.

Foreman, an officer for approximately 25 years, was previously suspended for unnecessary use of force and lying to superiors in the beating of a Des Moines man, conduct unbecoming a police officer for an altercation with a civilian and gambling at an illegal after-hours club.

Foreman also is known for being "extraordinarily talented" in drug-trafficking cases, receiving a commendation this year from the U.S. attorney's office, Moulder said.

STATE BRIEF

Gay bashing leads to accident

DES MOINES (AP) — Minutes after occupants of a Jeep joined a downtown crowd yelling taunts and threats at two men dressed as women, the Jeep crashed into a van, sending five people to the hospital.

"It started out as gay bashing or transsexual bashing, whatever you want to call it," said Casey Forrester, 23, of Des Moines. "Once people realized we were drag queens, there was instant hate. One guy was spitting at us from his car."

Forrester and Joshua Farrell, 19, of Des Moines said they were confronted by a crowd yelling threats early Tuesday. Forrester said they called police after someone hit him on the hip with a full can of soda pop. Someone spit on Farrell, they said, and a man in the Jeep hit their car windshield with a baseball bat.

Police arrived, and Farrell and Forrester pointed to the Jeep. The officer started chasing the Jeep, but it disappeared in busy downtown traffic.

About 10 minutes later, the Jeep crashed into a van.

The Jeep's driver, Jeremy Hughes, 21, of Des Moines was in serious condition Wednesday at Iowa Methodist Medical Center. His passenger, Luke Floyd, 19, of Grimes, was in fair condition at Mercy Medical Center.

Traffic charges related to the crash were pending, as well as a reckless driving charge from the earlier incident, when a police officer saw a baseball bat from the Jeep hitting the car windshield, police Sgt. Bruce Elrod said.

Seagrave: ISU balances teaching, research

The newly announced interim president outlined some of his goals for the university.

Associated Press

AMES — Iowa State University has found a balance between research and teaching, the school's interim president said as he tackled one of the most contentious issues on campus in his first speech.

Richard Seagrave, a prominent engineering professor, is serving in the university's top leadership role until a replacement is found for Martin Jischke, who has started his new job as president of Purdue University.

While at ISU, Jischke was criticized by some professors who said he focused on research at the expense of quality teaching.

Some professors say that in order to earn tenure or promotion, they have to spend more time in research labs and less time with students in the classroom.

"Although not everyone was convinced that undergraduate education was Martin's first priority, I'm here to tell you that it was and still is," Seagrave told more than 200 professors, administrators and students at ISU's semester convocation Tuesday. Iowa State classes began Monday.

Seagrave said the development of new knowledge in research labs makes learning more relevant — and more fun — for students. It also leads to better jobs for graduates, who work alongside their professors on research projects, he said.

Seagrave said he may sound like "Martin Jischke all over again. Well, I've got news for all of you. This is Iowa State University's strategic plan and aspiration, not Martin Jischke's."

"He's gone, and we're still here," Seagrave said.

Seagrave, who seemed at ease and at times lighthearted in his inaugural speech to faculty, said he hoped to have the job no longer than one academic year. He expects a new president to be named before the school year ends.

In the meantime, he said, he wants other top administrators to stay.

The university lost its athletics director, Gene Smith, and John Parks, who directed the school's research park, in the week's following Jischke's departure. Both left for similar jobs.

Thinning the squirrel herd as a means of understanding Milton

So, you all came back. The locals around here were hoping you would, especially the undergraduates among you, because now the police have somebody else to arrest. Don't look now, but in these parts, the locals refer to you as camouflage.

Some of you, of course, did not come back. You came here for the first time. That's OK; everybody has had a first time, though most can't (or more likely, don't want to) remember it.

You rookies are probably a little nervous; don't be. Nothing could be simpler than life in Iowa City, which is why it's sometimes called the Little Easy. There are just a few rules that you have to pick up on to fit right in.

First, always cross the street whenever you damn please, preferably at a spot where you can clog up 30 or more cars. It gives you a jaunty, joie de vivre air, much like Don Knotts, and it gives the motorists something else to curse at besides the never-ending road construction.

Second, always drop whatever random scrap of paper you have right on the sidewalk. Litter gives the city that jaunty, lived-in look, much like Don Knotts, that is so trés chic in these post-structuralist times.

Third, always but always call your male bartenders "hey, dude" and your female bartenders "hey, babe." They'll love you for it and remember you forever. They'll probably even put you on their Christmas-card list, which in local jargon is for some reason known as the 86 list.

The motto of the town is "More parking ramps than deer," which stems from the city's quite-successful deer-thinning initiative. It was also known as the Bambi resettlement program, because Bambi was resettled in venison sausage.

At one time, hard as it is to believe, there were more deer in Iowa City than undergraduates, and they kept filling up all the good classes so that you had to spend six or eight years just to get a lousy B.A. in English. So the city leaders, putting their B.A.'s in English to good use, instituted a rigorous diet — deer-thinning — and now there are hardly any deer in Iowa City, except for the 200 or 300 that live in my neighbor's garden.

The city has yet to figure out how to thin the parking-ramp population. There are some things in life that even a B.A. in English can't cure. The city also hasn't figured out how to deal with the squirrel herd.

Squirrels, you've probably noticed, are everywhere in this town. I spent my break studying the problem, and from the encyclopedia I learned: "Members of the squirrel family live in a wide variety of places, including forests, swamps, deserts, tundra, the Disney studio vaults and vast swaths of the greater metropolitan Iowa City area."

Of course, those who have ever lived in a city know that "greater metropolitan Iowa City area" is an oxymoron bordering on "CIA address book." Not that you would ever want to live on that border; they'd probably "smart" bomb you, mistaking you for the Chinese Embassy.

More from the encyclopedia: "They (the squirrels, not the CIA) are primarily herbivorous, eating young shoots, buds, berries, tree bark, and anything in a campus trash can. Squirrels are extremely cautious animals, except in the Iowa City environs, where they will quite calmly sit down with just about anyone with a 12-pack. Most squirrels reach maturity in one to three years, unlike undergraduate males who, just judging from the number of public urination citations in The Daily Iowan legal matters section, still need some individualized instruction in toilet training."

Of course, anyone who so much as glimpses the Dada gatherings that were the coronations of George W. Shrub and George W. Gore knows that the squirrel-herd problem is not limited to Iowa City and environs. There; now that you've been properly introduced to Iowa City, you're ready for your first crack at Milton. Me, I've already had my crack at Milton. As I remember it — and it's a hazy memory, given that it occurred around the time the glacier melted — I gave it my best, but Paradise lost.

The city leaders, putting their B.A.'s in English to good use, instituted a rigorous diet — deer-thinning — and now there are hardly any deer in Iowa City, except for the 200 or 300 that live in my neighbor's garden.

Haste makes waste in education

With the start of a new school year, incoming freshman are beginning the process of learning what it takes to be a college student. While it's hard enough for 18-year-olds to begin the transition from college to high school, a new program at the UI, started in 1999, allows high-school juniors to skip their senior year and jump directly into being a first-year student at the UI. The program, called the National Academy of Arts, Sciences and Engineering, is an early entrance program that allows select students who have completed course work equivalent to the junior year in high school a chance to accelerate their academic careers and move into university research and course work.

This "academic springboard," while having recommended qualifications for entrance into the program — such as an ACT score of 30 or SAT score of 1300 and a high-school GPA of 3.5 or higher — has serious setbacks for today's high-school students.

By entering college early, a student loses a full year of both social and academic maturing.

By entering college early, a student loses a full year of both social and academic maturing ... The transition from high school to college is complicated with many issues ...

Many traditional incoming freshmen are not even mature enough to live away from home for nine months of the year. The transition from high school to college is complicated with many issues, including living with a stranger, a much tougher work load than high school, living away from home and social issues, such as deciding whether to drink. These issues can be overwhelming for any new college student, and even more so for a student who has missed a year of high school, a year during which many of these issues could have been addressed.

Leaving high school a year early also deprives students of many opportunities. For example, they can lose a last year of eligibility for a sport or miss their senior prom. These events can be important parts of high-school students' young lives, and they should not be asked to give up these opportunities.

On the academic issue, the program requires applicants to submit a complete application by December of their junior year. This means the applicants have to decide shortly after their sophomore year whether they want to apply for the program or not, giving them time to take the ACT or SAT tests required for the application process. Asking high-school students to decide after only two years of high school if they want to skip their fourth year does not provide adequate time for students to decide what college they wish to attend or what area of study they want to major in.

While the program offers high-school students a way to further their education in a positive way, the students have missed many valuable life lessons by skipping their last year of high school and jumping directly into college.

The race is far from over, Mr. Gore

Everyone expected Al Gore to receive a bounce in the polls coming out of the Democratic Convention. That he has received one is no surprise.

However, what is surprising is what his bounce reveals about the way people are viewing this election. A USA TODAY/CNN/Gallup poll now charts the race as a statistical dead heat with Gore at 47 percent and Republican candidate George W. Bush at 46 percent.

Almost all of Gore's bounce in the polls has come from women. It is becoming apparent that men and women, at the moment, are viewing this election through different lenses. Before the convention, Gore was trailing Bush among women by a 9-percentage-point deficit. Gore now leads Bush among women by 22 points. The convention had almost no effect on Gore's support among men.

This aberration is partly explained by an examination of what men and women consider as important qualities in our next president. Men are looking for character, leadership and honesty. After being attached at the hip to Bill Clinton for almost eight years, most men consider Gore to be lacking in these qualities. Women, on the other hand, are looking at several key issues, such as education, Social Security and health care. Gore's willingness to spend every dime in Washington on these three issues seems to have great appeal to them.

This disparity among men and women is perfectly displayed in the reaction to the now-famous kiss between Al and Tipper. Most men viewed the kiss as a staged political event, no different from the speech itself. However, a good deal of women saw it as a spontaneous act of affection, which is to be expected from a sensitive person such as Gore. And after all, it will take a truly sensitive person to save education, Social Security and health care.

There is good news in all of this for Bush supporters. The governor has displayed a good ability to gain support for his education initiatives and Social Security program. He is doing better on these issues than any Republican presidential candidate in recent memory. And so it is very possible that much of the support that has left Bush can be persuaded to come back. However, it is becoming hard to believe that Gore, after eight years with Clinton and five personality changes, will ever be able to persuade anyone that he is a strong independent leader.

Gore may have the higher political ground for the moment. However, his political house just might be built upon sand.

Eric Shaw's rock is a symbol for the community

Blossom and I have spent four years doing much heart-breaking work trying to rebuild lives that were completely shattered when our son was killed by police officers as he sat in his sculpture shop talking on the phone. Only in these past few months have we been able to work to create a proper memorial for Eric.

The memorial could be in only one place. Eric loved Iowa City — he spent his boyhood, his youth and all of his adult life here, from 1972 to that terrible day in 1996. Iowa City is Eric's hometown.

The City of Iowa City, acting through Parks and Recreation Director Terry Trueblood, approved our choice of memorial and its site on the hill overlooking the city in North Hickory Park. Randy Miller of Miller Bros. Monuments helped us find and secure the memorial and supervised its installation. We are very grateful to these two men for their sensitive and essential help.

Our son's life's work and his respect for the natural world guided us in our choice of a large glacial rock as a memorial. In his artist's statement Eric wrote, "Inspiration for my sculptures is almost entirely derived from nature." A rock is an ancient creation of the forces of nature and has many sculptural qualities of shape, color and texture. A rock is also lasting, a challenge to move, and fun — all these qualities are ones expressed by Eric about his own sculptures. Eric's rock is the only memorial we want or sanction — it is right for him, for his family and for his town.

Eric's rock is his mom's vision: She provided the love and the driving force that made it happen. She chose the rock and the site, and she made all the artistic decisions and wrote the words that are carved into it:

REMEMBERING IS AN ACT OF LOVE

These words will be meaningful to any person who comes before Eric's rock, for they speak of the special need to remember and be true to those who are gone, especially those whose lives have been lost tragically. These words remind everyone that remembering a person who is gone is not something that just happens, but it is a deliberate act that requires time, effort and love.

Because our son's innocent life was stolen from him by employees of his city who were sworn to protect him, it is essential that people remember not only his life but the manner of his death. In giving this memorial to Iowa City, Blossom and I can only hope that Eric's rock will carry the truth into the future and act as a conscience that will not let people forget about the absolute wrong done to our son.

Eric's rock stands lifeless in place of a man who was full of life and creativity. Imagine a rock standing on a lonely hill in place of your child or your loved one, and you will be on the threshold of the world Blossom and I live in. In our world, the absolute wrong done to our son is inescapable. For us to remember our son, we must experience pain in the knowledge of the way he was killed that each time feels as though it will tear our hearts and minds apart, yet we do remember our son as an act of love for him.

We have faith that the timeless beauty of Eric's rock, the words carved into it and the trees and hills surrounding it will become a focus of sadness and contemplation that can help our family now and in future years.

We have hope that this memorial will serve as a vehicle through time by which Eric Shaw's life and death will be remembered in his hometown.

Please take care of Eric's rock. Jay and Blossom Shaw are the parents of Eric Shaw.

These words will be meaningful to any person who comes before Eric's rock, for they speak of the special need to remember and be true to those who are gone, especially those whose lives have been lost tragically.

Clarifications needed on drinking, students, and the Stepping Up program

I want to thank the DI for its interest in the issue of binge drinking and for publishing the recent letter from Kate Newberg on July 24, 2000 ("To fight binge drinking, Iowa City needs to refocus its efforts"). The Stepping Up Coalition would wholeheartedly agree that alcohol use among junior-high and high-school students is a serious concern. Our coalition includes parents, counselors and even the superintendent of the Iowa City School District. We must work together to comprehensively address the problem.

I do want to clarify some of the statistics used by Ms. Newberg in her letter to the DI and in her presentation to the City Council. Most of the statistics cited are national in scope. The CDC and NIDA collect national data and report decreases in consumption among some populations. Likewise, the Robert Wood Johnson Web site shows national data.

However, for UI students specifically, the opposite is true. Students at the UI drink more frequently and more heavily than the national average. This fact alone makes it more concerning and more urgent for the city and the university to work together to reduce the level of high-risk alcohol consumption among college students.

I am concerned about the statement "40 percent of students never drink." None of our statistics even remotely support this assertion. UI statistics indicate a decrease in the number of students who abstained from alcohol in the past year from 9.4 percent in 1997 to 6.9 percent in 1999.

Davenport dream alive

Iowa advances to the U.S. Championship of the Little League World Series with a win over Washington.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa. (AP) — A team from Davenport became the first from the Central Region to reach the U.S. Pool championship of the Little League World Series Wednesday night, eliminating Vancouver, Wash., which used a year-old boy as their inspiration.

Justin Evans had two hits and scored twice, including the go-run in the fifth inning that clinched the dramatic 6-4 victory.

Davenport, which earlier this year ended the Central Region's year losing drought at the Series, will meet Bellaire, Texas, Thursday's final.

While three teams finished with 1 records, Vancouver wound up the odd squad out under the new breaking format.

Bellaire, which lost 5-1 to Vancouver on Monday, clinched the berth because it wound up with the fewest runs allowed per inning. Davenport became the second team from the region to advance by virtue of beating Vancouver.

Since 1992, when the pool play was introduced, the Central was the only region not to reach the U.S. Championship.

As euphoric as it was, Davenport, it was a sudden and unlikely end for the Little League World Series from Hazel Dell-Vancouver.

Their remarkable summer run had been dedicated to and inspired by a year-old Tyler "TJ" Jacobs, who underwent surgery to remove a benign brain tumor last June.

A day after overcoming a 4-0 deficit to beat Goff's N.H., 6-4, Vancouver — only the third team from Washington to reach the Series — had run out of dramatics.

Kansas State's potent offense poses threat to Iowa

The Wildcats are loaded with experience coming into Saturday's game against the Hawkeyes.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

Kansas State heads into the Eddie Robinson Classic Saturday against Iowa with a lot of good things: a No. 8 ranking in the Associated Press poll, 15 returning starters and a solid starting quarterback in Jonathan Beasley.

"Jonathan will start the game for us," Wildcats coach Bill Snyder said. "There really haven't been any changes in workouts. I believe he has prepared well to play."

In an open, pass-happy system such as Kansas State's, in which a quarterback is expected to put up huge numbers both running and passing, Beasley has struggled at times. But his stats still weren't too shabby: 1,805 yards passing with 14 TDs, including a solid 24-20 Holiday Bowl victory over Washington.

Last year appears to be behind the quarterback, though. Snyder says the senior has been performing as well as can be asked.

"Being a captain, he has provided much leadership to this team," Snyder said. "The younger players look up to him, and Jonathan has performed well. That speaks for itself."

Helping Beasley will be one of the fastest offenses in the land.

Receivers Quincy Morgan and Aaron Lockett make up one of the best receiving corps in the nation, coming off seasons of 1,007 and 531 receiving yards, respectively.

In the backfield is ever-dangerous kick returner David Allen, who will be assuming full duty at the tailback spot for the Wildcats. Murphy was the nation's leading punt returner last year, while rushing for 364 yards last year.

"They have the threat of big plays on offense, defense and special teams," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said of Kansas State. "Basically, any time they're out there, they have a chance to make a big play."

To block for the speedsters are five returning lettermen on the Wildcats' offensive line.

"They're real solid on the offensive line, like any good Big Ten and Top 10 school," Ferentz said.

On defense, the Wildcats may have lost studs Mark Simoneau and Darren Howard to the NFL, but they're still pretty loaded.

The defensive backfield is stacked with starters Jarrod Cooper (SS), and cornerbacks Jerametruis Butler and Dyshod Cooper. Cooper was second on the team in tackles and named to the Big 12 coaches second team defense.

On the defensive line, Mario Fatafeh returns after also being named to the All-Big 12 second team.

"I'm very, very impressed with the way they play team defense," Ferentz said. "They're sound. They're aggressive, and they've got a couple of guys up front that come hard at you."

New Iowa soccer coach Wendy Logan hopes her team will pick up where it left off last year.

By Laura Podolak
The Daily Iowan

Iowa soccer head coach Wendy Logan's soft spoken demeanor and friendly smile might remind people of their older sister rather than a Big Ten-caliber coach.

Don't let her voice fool you. Starting her first year at the reins of a blossoming program, Logan and the Hawkeyes are ready to add on to last season's surprising success.

"We're obviously pretty excited about the season. We have a very solid foundation on which to build," Logan said. "Our No. 1 goal is to position ourselves for an NCAA invitation."

Logan took over for Stephanie Gabbert, the first Iowa soccer coach in history, who led her team to a third-place Big Ten finish before leaving to coach rival Iowa State.

Sophomore forward Sarah Lynch agreed with Logan in her goals to build on last season's success, but Lynch also stressed the importance of building a rapport with her new coach.

"One of our main goals is adjusting well to Wendy and her adjusting well to us, just forming a team right away, so we don't have trouble with it during the season," she said.

So far, it seems the transition has gone smoothly for Logan and the team. Logan said the players have been very open-minded about accepting her and adjusting to her style of play.

"I think what has helped the transition is the fact that the team experienced a whole lot of success last year. They got a taste of what it would be like to be in the (NCAA) tournament, and they gained a lot of respect in the conference," Logan said.

The Hawkeyes said they have had no difficulty adjusting to different coaching philosophies and different systems Logan has put in.

"Wendy is obviously new, so we have a new system of play, but I think everyone is pretty open to her ideas and willing to learn. It is kind of a fresh start for everyone. I think everyone has really adapted well," said junior goalkeeper Missy Wickart.

Lynch said, "Wendy has taken time out to get to know us. We have personal meetings, and she rates us. She has a lot of interest in us as players."

Although the Hawkeyes saw a lot of success last season, Logan has implemented some changes in style and lineup.

Last season Iowa played a 4-4-2 line up. This season Logan is trying a 4-3-3 formation, which allows three forwards instead of two. This keeps the pressure on the other team for the entire 90-minute game.

Lynch, Iowa's leading scorer last season, could benefit greatly from the new formation. With another player up front, it will be harder for teams to focus on shutting down one player.

"We are going to defend in an organized fashion and attack with a purpose. We're hoping that the three-forward system will increase our ability to put pressure on our opponents' defenses and create some more goal-scoring opportunities,"

Unlikely pitcher fulfills lifelong dream

By Aaron J. Lopez
Associated Press

Brent Mayne became the first position player since 1968 to notch a Major League win.

DENVER — The bullpen beyond the right-field wall was deserted, and Colorado manager Buddy Bell was bordering on desperation when he spotted injured catcher Brent Mayne in the Rockies' clubhouse.

The conversation that followed will remain forever etched in Mayne's mind.

"Can you pitch?" Bell asked. "Yeah, I can pitch," Mayne replied, fibbing slightly as he realized he was on the verge of fulfilling a lifelong dream.

Having run out of relief pitchers in a 6-6 game, Bell sent Mayne to the mound for what turned into a historic performance. Mayne became the first position player in 32 years to win a major league game.

"From a personal note, I wanted to get out there and pitch, try it out," Mayne said Wednesday. "That's a once-in-a-lifetime thing. I never even thought about getting the win. Later, I thought, 'Wow! I can get the win right here. This is even better.'"

Mayne, who had missed four games with a sprained left wrist, pitched the 12th inning of Colorado's 7-6 victory over the Atlanta Braves. He gave up a two-out hit to Rafael Furcal and a walk to Andrew Jones before retiring reigning NL MVP Chipper Jones on a check-swing grounder to third.

"It's a lose-lose situation," Chipper Jones said. "If you get a hit, you're supposed to, and if you don't, you're a geek."

When the Rockies scored the winning run minutes later, Mayne ended up as the first position player to win since outfielder Rocky Colavito threw 2 2-3 shutout innings for the New York Yankees against Detroit in the first game of a doubleheader on Aug. 25, 1968 — four months after Mayne was born.

History repeated itself for Atlanta manager Bobby Cox, who played third base for the Yankees when Colavito earned his victory.

Wife charged in Fred Lane's death

Deidra Lane is charged with first-degree murder in the July 6 shooting.

By Jenna Fryer
Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — The wife of Fred Lane was ordered held without bond Wednesday as prosecutors said she could be charged with first-degree murder in the shooting death of the NFL running back.

Deidra Lane, 25, appeared close to tears as she appeared before Mecklenburg County District Court Judge Philip Howerton.

Wearing an orange jail jumpsuit and shackles on her legs, she answered "yes" when Howerton asked if she knew she had been charged with murder.

Under North Carolina law, she was charged with one count that covers both first- and second-degree murder. Prosecutors did not indicate which level they would pursue.

First-degree murder is punishable by execution, while second-degree murder carries a maximum penalty of life in prison.

At the request of prosecutors, Howerton declined to set bond.

She had surrendered to police earlier Wednesday morning, accompanied by her lawyer.

Deidra Lane's parents and pastor sat in the courtroom with her. Her mother held the baby girl born to the Lanes just a week before the football player was shot at close range in their home.

Deidra Lane also has a young son from an earlier relationship.

"This is a major, major, traumatic event for this family," defense attorney Henderson Hill said. "She's a mother of two very young children. She is frightened to death. She misses her children. She's scared — what any young mother would be going through."

Fred Lane, 24, was shot in the chest and head July 6 as he walked in the front door of the couple's home after flying home from Nashville, Tenn. He had been staying with relatives in Tennessee after training with the Indianapolis Colts, which acquired him from the Carolina Panthers in April.

Investigators have offered no details on the circumstances of the shooting or a motive for it. Hill refused Wednesday to discuss Deidra Lane's motive or version of the shooting.

The charges came nearly seven weeks after Fred Lane's death.

"It's about time," said Carolina Panthers running back Tshimanga Biakabutuka, as the team prepared for this week's final NFL preseason game. "I just wonder what took so long for them to press the charges."

Police spokesman Keith Bridges acknowledged a long time had passed between Lane's death and the arrest.

Drag queens attending Olympic closing ceremony

Some Olympic officials are irked by the decision to have the cross-dressers present.

By John Pye
Associated Press

SYDNEY, Australia — The closing ceremony of the Sydney Olympics is going to be a drag.

Cross-dressing drag queens will be part of the games' finale despite swelling controversy the move has sparked, ceremonies director Ric Birch said Wednesday. He called critics of the plan "right-wing reactionaries."

Including the men who wear outlandish dresses, wigs and makeup in the closing ceremony is justified and a "part of one tiny section" of the event, a tribute to universally acclaimed Australian films that include the 1994 hit The Adventures of Priscilla, Queen of the Desert, Birch said.

The movie featured two drag queens and a transsexual driving a pink bus through Australia's Outback. Some of the participants in the closing ceremony will be dressed in original costumes from the film, including a bright, frill-necked lizard outfit.

A report in Wednesday's Sydney Morning Herald sparked heated debate about the closing ceremony.

The Rev. Fred Nile, a Christian Democrat politician, was opposed to including drag queens in the ceremonies and said allowing homosexual men to prance around dressed as women would be a national embarrassment.

"Drag queens do not truly represent our great Aussie culture at all," said Nile, who urged like-minded Australians to express their concerns to Sydney organizers.

One caller to a talk radio station said he would trade his closing ceremony ticket after hearing the news, while conservative politicians condemned the idea.

But Birch held firm that they will proceed as planned.

"For the right-wing reactionaries or whatever part of a community is outraged about it — well, they're always going to be outraged," he said.

Birch said the inclusion of drag queens also reflected one of Sydney's most colorful events, the Gay and Lesbian Mardi Gras, a gay pride march and street carnival that attracts hundreds of thousands of spectators each year.

Top ten teams should dominate 'Classics'

Florida State and Kansas State are picked to win big, and Virginia Tech is favored over Georgia Tech.

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

College football kicks off with a professional feel to it. Three of the five season-opening "classics" will be played in NFL stadiums.

On Saturday, Florida State opens defense of its national title against BYU in the Pigskin Classic at Alltel Stadium, home of the Jacksonville Jaguars.

"We're anxious to get going and try to win it again," says Seminoles quarterback Chris Weinke, among this year's top Heisman Trophy contenders.

Earlier in the day, it's Iowa-Kansas State in the Eddie Robinson Classic at Arrowhead Stadium, where the Kansas City Chiefs play.

On Sunday, the Kickoff Classic matches Penn State and Southern California at Giants Stadium, home of the New York Giants and New York Jets. Sunday night, the game is back on campus with Georgia Tech at Virginia Tech in the Black Coaches' Association Classic at Blacksburg, Va.

The newest "classic" in the line-up matches New Mexico at Texas Tech on Saturday in the Hispanic College Fund Football Classic.

But make no mistake — these are far from neutral sites for the Seminoles, Wildcats and Nittany Lions.

Florida State fans will caravan the 160 miles along Interstate 10 to Jacksonville, while K-State fans will do likewise for 120 miles on I-70 from Manhattan, Kan., to Kansas City.

The picks: BYU (plus 25) vs.

No. 2 Florida State (at Jacksonville, Saturday)

Weinke opens his Heisman run in fine fashion ... FLORIDA STATE, 45-14.

Iowa (plus 28 1/2) vs. No. 8 Kansas State (at Kansas City, Mo., Saturday)

K-State starts off with the usual patsy ... KANSAS STATE, 49-7.

Georgia Tech (plus 16) at No. 11 Virginia Tech (Sunday)

Vick-to-Andre Davis means lots of Hokie points ... VIRGINIA TECH, 31-21.

No. 15 USC (plus 3) vs. No. 22 Penn State (at East Rutherford, N.J., Sunday)

This just might be the year of the Trojans ... USC, 31-24.

New and old faces lace Hawkeye football team

DI football writers Jeremy Schnitzer and Melinda Mawdsley take a position-by-position look at this year's Iowa Hawkeye football team.

Defense

Left End: Anthony Herron started all 11 games for Iowa last season, ranking fifth on the team with 65 total tackles. He will get the nod again this year. A junior, he will be one of the anchors on defense. Behind him is redshirt freshman Howard Hodges.

Defensive Tackles: Jerry Montgomery was also a mainstay on the line last season after starting all but Iowa's final game, recording 49 tackles and one sack. Last season, Colin Cole's first, he notched three sacks, third-best on the team. This year, the sophomore gets the starting job. Behind him is junior Derrick Pickens. Behind Montgomery is redshirt freshman Jared Claus.

Right End: Big things were expected the instant Kelsey, Iowa, native Aaron Kampman arrived at Iowa. He has not disappointed anyone, recording 152 tackles in his first two seasons as a line-backer. Now he's 260 pounds, up 15 from last season, and a defensive lineman. Junior Cody O'Hare is the back-up.

Linebackers: Anchoring the line-backer corps is senior LeVar Woods. A 6-3, 245-pound native of Inwood, Iowa, Woods started all 11 games last season, recording 54 tackles, one sack and one fumble recovery. Senior Derrick Davison earns the starting job ahead of Fred Barr, Iowa's third-leading tackler and member of The Sporting News' Freshmen All-American Third Team last year. Davison started Iowa's first five games in 1999, while junior Mike Dolezal will earn his first start Saturday.

Cornerback: Tim Dodge is ready to play some football. The junior took off his spring track season to focus on football, and it's paid off. Used mostly on special teams, he will make his first start on defense at left corner. Senior Cam Smith and true freshman Benny Sapp are listed as back-ups. Junior Mikkel Brown will take the right corner. Matt Stockdale, who started three games at free safety last season, and sophomore Marquae McLaurin are listed behind Brown.

Safeties: Add Ryan Hansen's name to the list of first-time starters. The senior from Iowa City gets the nod at free safety. He, along with D.J. Johnson, will be trying to fill the hole left by the graduation of Matt Bowen, last season's leading tackler, defensive captain, and co-MVP. Johnson will start at strong safety after seeing action at corner last year for the Hawks. Behind Hansen and Johnson are junior Shane Hall and senior Robberto Rickards.

Placekicker: Coach Kirk Ferentz isn't saying much, but whoever it is will know before Saturday's game. Senior Greg McLaughlin was listed first following spring practice. He has limited experience after handling a few kickoffs and making one of two field goals last season. True freshman and Iowa City native Nate Kaeding is the lone in-state recruit and was first team All-State as a senior.

Punter: No questions here. Jason Baker will return for his final season after putting up impressive numbers last year. Baker ranked third in the Big Ten and 30th in the nation with 42.3-yard average.

Offense

Quarterback: This position looks to be more solid than in past years, with senior Scott Mullen returning as the No. 1 guy after throwing for 1,415 yards last year. He showed signs of excellence last year, tossing for 426 yards against Indiana, and he could emerge as one of the better quarterbacks in the league if he continues to improve. Behind Mullen is junior Kyle McCann, who has started sparingly the last two years.

Tailback: This position is perhaps the deepest on the team. Ladell Betts is one of the best running backs in the Big Ten, and fellow junior Robbie Crockett has shown he's a solid backup. Freshman Fredd Russell could make an early impact on special teams.

Fullback: Track star Jeremy Allen, who was an All-American in the spot put this year, had a solid spring game and looks to be the starter at this spot. He's a great athlete and could end up one of the best two-sport athletes Iowa has seen since Tim Dwight. His backup will be senior Henry Pollio.

Receiver: With the addition of Kahlil Hill, this position could constitute a major threat for the Hawkeyes. Hill has the speed, and after 60 catches a year ago, it looks like senior Kevin Kasper has the hands. Backups Chris Oliver and Ryan Barton each gained more than 200 yards last year.

Tight End: Redshirt freshman Robert Gallery is a monster target at 6-7, 270 pounds. He caught three catches for 32 yards in Iowa's spring game and has been the No. 1 guy ever since. Senior Kyle Tripeer looks to pick up the slack at that spot.

Tackle: Bruce Nelson started every game for the Hawkeyes last year and looks to be a leader on the line at left tackle. Ben Sobieski is listed as the No. 2 after starting all 11 games for the Hawkeyes as a sophomore in 1998 — he has not regained the starting spot after injuring his shoulder last year. At right tackle, junior David Porter will be making his first start in his Iowa career.

Guard: With the most experience on the team, junior Alonzo Cunningham is listed as Iowa's top right guard. Cunningham, a junior, leads all Iowa linemen in career starts with 17. At left guard is Andy Lightfoot, who started two games last year. Lightfoot is ahead of Kory Borchers in the two-deep depth charts.

Center: As the only senior lineman on the team, A.J. Blazek heads into Saturday's game as the starting center. He started five games last year after transferring from Butler County Community College. Behind Blazek is former tight end Eric Steinbach, who has suffered minor injuries during fall practice but still looks to get lots of playing time.

Returns: Hill was spectacular his freshman year in 1998 at returning punts; the question is whether he lost a step after sitting out last year. If he hasn't, he could develop into one of the nation's best. The speedy Dodge nearly returned a kick off against Michigan State last year — he could also make an impact on returns.

Braves edge Rockies; Cubs win big

With Greg Maddux on the mound, the Braves bounce back Wednesday.

DENVER (AP)— Amateur hour ended the minute four-time Cy Young winner Greg Maddux stepped on the mound Wednesday.

Maddux, pitching about 14 hours after Colorado catcher Brent Mayne earned a victory in relief, was impressive over seven innings, and Brian Jordan hit a three-run homer as the Atlanta Braves beat the Rockies, 5-2.

"We had to bounce back. We let a catcher beat us, and we thought about that one hard," Jordan said. "We came back with Maddux pitching a great game, and we got him some big hits at the right time."

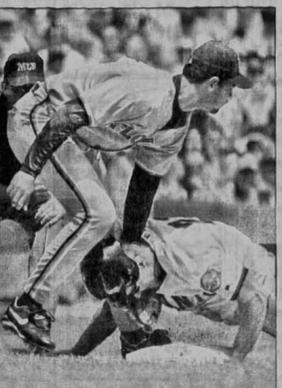

Todd Helton went 0-for-4, ending his career-best hitting streak at 14 games; his major league-leading average dropped four points to .393.

Giants 5, Marlins 0
SAN FRANCISCO — Livan Hernandez liked his first shutout so much, he did it again.

Hernandez, who had never thrown a shutout in 104 major league starts before last week, pitched his second straight four-hitter, leading the San Francisco Giants over the Florida Marlins 5-0 Wednesday.

"This is the best time in my career," said Hernandez, the 1997 World Series MVP. "I'd never thrown a shutout before, but after the first one, it made me more comfortable today. Sometimes, I can throw good."

Tigers 6, Mariners 5
DETROIT — On a night insects invaded Comerica Park, Juan Encarnacion hit a two-run triple in a five-run seventh inning that rallied the Detroit Tigers past Seattle 6-5 Wednesday, the Mariners' ninth loss in 10 games.

Ben Margot/Associated Press
San Francisco's Jeff Kent steals third base beneath the tag of Florida's Mike Lowell Wednesday.

Swarms of flying insects caused fans to flee their seats early in the game. Fans began running up the aisles as Seattle's Edgar Martinez batted in the first inning, swatting at the insects as they moved. Those who remained in their seats were constantly swatting at the bugs on themselves or others.

Cubs 15, Astros 5
HOUSTON — Ruben Quevedo took a no-hit bid into the seventh inning before Julio Lugo's three-run homer, and the Chicago Cubs routed the Houston Astros, 15-5, Wednesday night.

Quevedo (2-5), making his eighth major league start, wound up allowing five runs — three earned — and four hits in eight innings. The 21-year-old right-hander struck out five and walked four.

Twins 8, Devil Rays 2
MINNEAPOLIS — Cristian Guzman had three hits, including a two-run triple, his major league-leading 19th this season, and Danny Ardoin hit a bases-loaded double as the Minnesota Twins beat the Tampa Bay Devil Rays 8-2 Wednesday night.

Twins starter Mark Redman (12-6), who leads AL rookies in wins, strikeouts, ERA and winning percentage, gave up five hits and two runs in seven innings.

Indians 7, Athletics 5
CLEVELAND — David Segui's go-ahead RBI double in the sixth inning Wednesday night sent the Cleveland Indians to their fifth straight win, a 7-5 victory over the Oakland Athletics that included more bad blood between the teams.

Jim Thome homered as Cleveland won for the 14th time in 19 games to open a one-game lead over Boston in the AL wild-card race.

Blue Jays 9, Royals 8
TORONTO — Carlos Delgado had his fifth two-homer game of the season, hitting a go-ahead drive in the eighth inning as the Toronto Blue Jays won their third straight, 9-8 over the Kansas City Royals on Wednesday night.

Delgado, who tied Chicago's Frank Thomas for the AL lead with 38 homers, hit a leadoff homer in a five-run seventh that tied the score at 8, then hit a go-ahead shot in the eighth off Andy Larkin (0-2).

Cardinals 5, Pirates 2
ST. LOUIS — Rick Ankiel won for the second time in 11 starts and Jim Edmonds homered for the second time in three games, leading the St. Louis Cardinals over the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-2 Wednesday night.

Ankiel (8-7) had gone 1-4 since June 20, mostly because of control problems that forced him out of games early. However, the Cardinals have won in his last four starts.

Old foes meet for title

■ The New York Liberty and Houston Comets will battle it out for the WNBA championship.

NEW YORK (AP) — The foes are familiar. Yet, this year's WNBA finals is more than a basic East-West showdown.

The best-of-three series between the New York Liberty and the three-time champion Houston Comets opens at Madison Square Garden before moving to Houston for Games 2 and 3.

The series is full of subplots. The Comets — the only champions the WNBA has known in its history — returned to the finals for a fourth straight season, this time unexpectedly.

"We're amazed we are here," Houston coach Van Chancellor said. "How many thought it was going to be both coasts, L.A. and New York, in the finals? This team has the most pride of any team I've been involved with."

The Comets (31-5) knocked off regular-season champion Los Angeles in the West finals, and face a Liberty team that posted a 24-13 regular-season record and has won 13 straight games at the Garden.

Chancellor is well aware of the Liberty's domination at home.

"New York is a vastly improved team from even a month ago," he said. "I know they are a better team. New York is playing as good as Los Angeles. I think the Liberty will be very good in handling the pressure. That's why I didn't want to play them in the finals."

The Liberty can find their inspiration for the series in a disappointing Game 3 loss in last year's championship, the second runner-up finish at the hands of the Comets.

New York had forced a deciding Game 3 in last year's finals with a last-second, half-court shot by Teresa Weatherspoon. The league used the shot in its TV ads to promote this season.

Weatherspoon said this year's Liberty team is the most athletic that the Comets have faced.

"Nobody believed in ourselves and our fans," she said. "We're a basketball team, too, and they have to stop us."

Griffey takes exception to criticism

CINCINNATI (AP) — Ken Griffey Jr. stopped Hall of Fame broadcaster Marty Brennaman before the Cincinnati Reds' game Wednesday night and took issue with his criticism.

Brennaman sharply criticized Griffey on the air Sunday after he jogged to first base on a hit that might have been stretched into a double. Griffey rarely runs hard to first but suggested to Brennaman that his hamstring was hurt.

Brennaman said he would continue to criticize Griffey whenever he gave less than his best effort.

Logan said about the new formation.

With a new coach, a more experienced group of players and a different style of play, the Hawkeyes look to send out a message: In Lynch's words, "We're not settling for last season. We want to do as well as or better than last year."

FINDING
IOWA CITY'S
HOT SPOTS

You don't have to look far to come across local arts and culture alternatives.

By Aaron McAdams
The Daily Iowan

When you first arrive in Iowa City, it doesn't take long to figure out that culture is a plentiful commodity around town.

Ask where you can catch a movie, and you'll likely be pointed in the direction of Coral Ridge Mall, Old Capitol Town Center or Sycamore Mall.

If an art exhibit is what you crave, you invariably will learn that the UI Art Building stands on the west bank of the Iowa River.

Inquire about theater, and the UI Theatre Building and Hancher Auditorium will be the first responses you get.

Live music? Head downtown for jazz, rock, blues and folk performances at any number of bars and restaurants.

But soon you'll master the obvious destinations and become hungry for variety in your artistic diet. Now you must seek out continued cultural fulfillment on your own.

Or let the DI do it for you.

The first thing to do is venture away from campus. At 213 N. Gilbert St., you'll find Iowa City's resident professional acting company at Riverside Theatre. Now in its 20th year, Riverside Theatre will open its 2000-01 season on Sept. 8th with the musical revue Sweet and Hot: The Songs of Harold Arlen.

"The season is pretty rangy," said Ron Clark, the artistic director for the theater. "Lots of different tastes and lots of different looks at different kinds of plays."

The season will continue with six other productions, including the Pulitzer Prize-winning play Wit by Margaret Edson, Moliere's Tartuffe and As You Like It, the featured play for Riverside's annual Shakespeare Festival.

Riverside will offer a sneak preview of the entire season this Sunday at 4 p.m.

A southbound walk from Riverside Theatre will take you to 415 S. Gilbert St., the home of Studiolo. An art gallery that currently plays host to the works of roughly 100 artists, Studiolo promises an art experience far removed from the academia of the UI's often-toured Art Building.

"Basically, we define art as something that makes you think," said Louise Rausch, the director of media relations for Studiolo. "We feature a variety of local artists and try to offer a broad mixture of artistic mediums and styles as well."

For the coming year, Studiolo plans to expand its fare to include a resident catering service as well as a new in-house café.

"The café is basically an anti-sports bar," said Rausch. "No televisions, just art."

Venture further from campus, and you'll find Sal's Music Emporium, located at 624 S. Dubuque St. Although primarily a CD store, Sal's also does its part to keep the live music scene thriving by offering in-store CD release parties and shows by up-and-coming local bands.

"This gives me a chance to help out some bands that are just getting started," said Sal Leanhart, the store's namesake and manager. "We also take in a lot of touring acts. A lot of bands like to play here because it's a nice alternative to a smoky bar where people are talking the whole time you are playing. Also, there's never a cover."

As far as Sal's CD selection goes, you'll be out of luck if you're hunting for Top 40 radio fare.

"I don't even stock Britney Spears or the boy band of the moment. I don't even deal with that stuff. I cover all the little niches that get missed — the punk, the reggae, the ska, the insurgent country and a lot of indie rock."

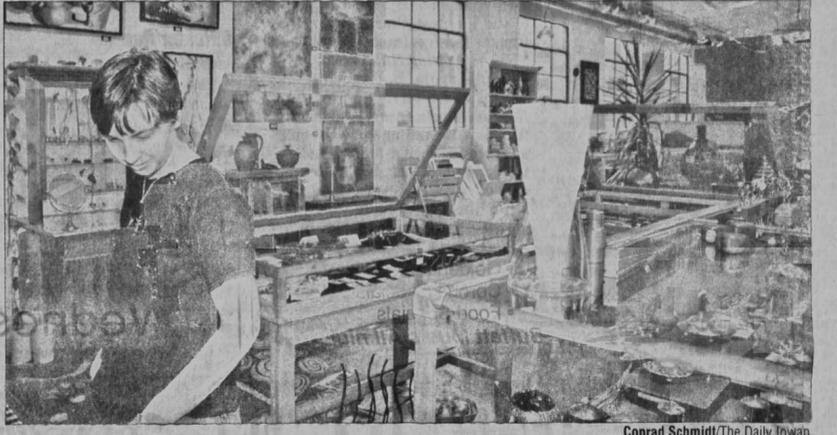

Working your way back to campus, you find yourself at the IMU, a hub of campus activity and the home of the UI's Bijou.

The Bijou, a student-run theater, features foreign films, documentaries and independent productions that you won't find at any of the local multiplexes.

"The Bijou is great because it gives you an escape from Hollywood and lets you enjoy films that were made for reasons other than money," said UI junior Paul Sabatino.

The first Bijou screening of the semester, the WWF wrestling documentary Beyond the Mat, will take place tonight at 7 p.m. in the IMU's Illinois Room.

Now that you've opened up a variety of artistic avenues, you must do what every true cultural connoisseur would do: discuss with your peers. To do so, meet the gang at 10 S. Clinton St. and grab lunch or a cup of coffee at the Peaceful Fool.

Above: Jeff Thorne of Iowa City catches up on some reading at the coffee shop on the second floor of the Peaceful Fool. "It has a nice atmosphere, and usually is not as crowded as other coffee shops," Thorne said.

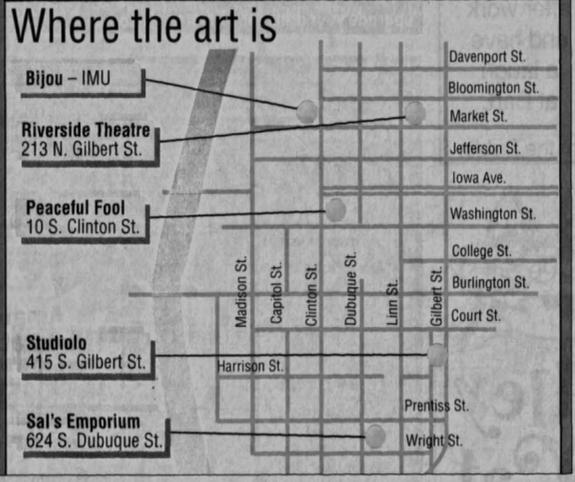

Below: UI senior Elizabeth Merer looks over work by local artists at Studiolo.

Besides apparel and gifts, the second floor of this hip boutique features a coffee shop and a café. Grab a seat at the picture window overlooking the Pentacrest or take your food and drink downstairs to one of the tables set up just outside the store's Clinton Street entrance. From one of these positions, you can fill in your friends on what you now know. Art and culture alternatives are out there. You just have to know where to look.

FILM REVIEW

Film: The Replacements

Writer: Vince McKewin
Starring: Keanu Reeves, Gene Hackman, Orlando Jones, Jon Favreau, Rhys Ifans
Length: 118 min.

Every video store has a wide collection of humorous sports movies. Films such as Slap Shot, Major League and The Mighty Ducks line the walls — usually multiple copies — and beg to be rented by some poor unfortunate soul.

The Replacements is next in line in the realm of sports comedies, and in two weeks, it will be lost among the 20 zillion copies of Caddy Shack 2.

As The Replacements opens, the professional players on a fictional football team named the Senators have gone on strike. To save his team and his money, crusty owner Edward O'Neil (Jack Warden) instates former coach Jimmy McGinty (Gene Hackman) to put together a replacement team to finish out the season.

McGinty, obviously prepared for the situation, produces a list of former college and professional players that he wants for his team. First on the list is Shane Falco (Keanu Reeves), a former quarterback for Iowa State who now scrapes gunk off the bottoms of boats.

Perhaps a description of the first scene would help to describe how terrible some of the humor is in this film. While underwater cleaning a boat, Falco looks down to find a football trophy with his name engraved on it. He then proceeds to pretend to play football with it, hiking it to himself and throwing a winning pass — under water. To say that this scene gave the film a shaky start would be an understatement.

Visually, the film is extremely weak. Howard Deutch, who directed Pretty in Pink in the '80s, seems to have put little effort in constructing any of the shots in the film. With Any Given Sunday released just last year, you would think that this film might take on some elements of that film and sarcastically exploit them. Not only does the film not do this, but many of the action scenes are just plain boring and predictable.

The dialogue is corny, consisting of typical fare for a sports film, such as inspirational speeches, characters who overcome their own personal barriers and a team that overcomes all odds.

In the middle of the film, Hackman claims: "What this team lacks is leadership." More appropriately, he should have been talking about this film.

Reeves' performance is probably one of the most terrible to date. Through the entire film, Falco, who should be full of personality, is played by Reeves as cold and emotionless.

Why is it that Reeves can be such a bad actor in some films, and in films such as Bill and Ted and The Matrix he can be so good? It seems to have something to do with his enthusiasm about doing a particular picture. He hated doing The Replacements, and it shows.

Overall, much of the supporting cast is actually pretty good. Orlando Jones, known for his hilarious 7-Up commercials, is probably one of the funniest characters in the film, as is Rhys Ifans, who played Spike in Nothing Hill.

Aside from bad acting by Reeves and a terrible script, The Replacements is not a terrible film, but I could imagine it being so much better if it just had a better actor in the lead role. Reeves carries so much negative baggage with him that people now just assume that whatever film he is going to be in, it's going to be bad.

Wait to rent The Replacements, and be sure to have a bunch of friends around to make fun of it.

The wonderful Wizard of Ozzy holds forth

■ The bat-biter is still crazy after all these years.

By Gerard O'Leary
 Associated Press

NEW YORK — Heavy metal vocalist Ozzy Osbourne is dressed in a blue pinstriped suit with his eyes ghoulishly covered in black mascara. It's a look that crosses business with shock rock.

"If I want to wear a pinstriped suit, I wear one. Nobody tells me how to dress," the 51-year-old singer says. "When someone tells me I can't do something, that just gives me the drive to want to do it."

Osbourne was one of the original members of Black Sabbath. During the early '70s, the band's exploits became synonymous with the hard-rock lifestyle of all-night parties, groupies and exhausting tour schedules. He left in 1978 to form his own band.

One of his most notorious stunts was biting off a bat's head during a 1982 concert in Des Moines. It wasn't planned. Osbourne thought it was a rubber toy a fan had tossed on-stage.

"No matter what achievements I make in my career, I will always be known as the guy who bit the bat's head off," he says. "Even the Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame considers my career a joke because of it."

In 1996, Osbourne launched Ozzfest, heavy metal's answer to Lollapalooza. The bands on this year's tour include Pantera, Godsmack, Static-X, Incubus, Methods of Mayhem and P.O.D.

What they play is not necessarily music to Osbourne's ears. "There's nothing wrong with the stuff they play, but I could never sing like that," said

Osbourne, referring to the singers' growling tones. "I like some melody in my music."

Ozzfest's final date is Sept. 2 in San Bernadino, Calif. The following questions are from an interview with Osbourne:

How have you maintained your success?

Osbourne: I can't explain it. I'm not the greatest singer in the world ... The fans have always supported me all these years. If it wasn't for them, I wouldn't have a career.

Ped Mall set to WOW new students

■ The Weeks of Welcome will show off its second downtown street festival.

By Karen Schmiedeskamp
The Daily Iowan

New students will get their first chance to experience Iowa City's downtown culture Friday night as local bands, tarot-card readers and jugglers fill the Pedestrian Mall from 6 p.m. until midnight for the second annual Weeks of Welcome Downtown Street Festival.

The event was created by the Downtown Association of Iowa City and the UI, said Megan Levad, the chairwoman of the Downtown Street Festival.

"The festival introduces new students to the culture and fun stuff we have to do around town," Levad said.

The Downtown Street Festival, along with other WOW activities, not only helps students begin to feel more at home in Iowa City but also gives them a chance to learn about the kind of atmosphere the UI strives to support, she said.

"It's only the second year we've had the festival, and this year's event is much bigger than last year's," Levad said.

This year's WOW festival will feature many more activities and local artists than last year's. Included among the activities are a scavenger hunt sponsored by UI Dance Marathon and an ergothon activity station hosted by the UI crew team that will simulate rowing.

In addition, the Eastwinds School of Holistic Healing and the Iowa City Chiropractic Health and Sports Injury Clinic will give free massages.

The Orquesta de Jazz y Salsa Alto Maiz will perform on the Sheraton stage from 6-9 p.m., and salsa lessons will be available for those interested in learning how to spice things up on the dance floor.

The movie American Graffiti will be projected on the wall of the Sheraton at 10 p.m. for those who want to catch a flick Ped Mall-style.

Opposite the Sheraton stage, at the intersection of Dubuque and Washington streets, local artists will perform on the Black Hawk Mini-Plaza stage. Katherine Musilek (singer) and the Near Eastern Dancers (belly dancers) are just a couple of the acts that will appear on the stage.

Graffiti Theater, an all-female political performance group that expresses activism through art, will also entertain Iowa City residents. The multi-faceted musical/drama group will perform at 9 p.m. as the Mini-Plaza Stage's main feature during the festival.

For those students (or folks who are just plain broke) who need to get in touch with family and friends, there will be a free long-distance phone call booth sponsored by Radio Shack. People will be able to call anyone in the continental United States free of charge. "I am happy that we're showing some of the things we love about Iowa City to new students," Levad said.

THE ECLECTIC. 2
SIDES II A BOOK
Wyclef Jean

Sony/Columbia
Contrary to popular belief, Wyclef ditched The Fugees first. Lauren Hill was just better at it.

However, that is not to say that The Eclectic is not a fine album because, actually, it is bad ass. The Eclectic mixes master hip-hop, some rap, and Wyclef even goes vocal in a duet with Mary J. Blige.

The album definitely universalizes its sound, with guest singers like Kenny Rogers, who apparently needs a lot more than Wyclef to keep him from sounding really jank. Other artists featured include WWF wrestler The Rock, Melky Sedeck, Whitney Houston, Earth Wind and Fire, The Product G&B, MB'2 and some other kid with a yippy voice.

But the best aspect of this album is its conceptual content. The humor and light beginning are good, but the dark undertone and more serious tracks carry the album. Wyclef has a lot of style — original, intelligent and soulful.

Steal this career, D'Onofrio says

■ Vincent D'Onofrio has made a living by not faking it.

By Mark Kennedy
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The guy on the other end of Vincent D'Onofrio's cell phone had no idea how much trouble he was in.

"If you think I'm joking, you haven't dealt with me before," the actor bellowed into his receiver like a bear whose winter nap has been interrupted.

"I'll be there soon, you know. And if I look you in the eye, and I know you're lying, there's gonna be hell to pay," D'Onofrio said, straightening his 6-foot-3 frame.

The offending party, a publicist from Los Angeles, had apparently not stunned D'Onofrio with his skill promoting one of the actor's latest offerings, Steal This Movie.

D'Onofrio, who stars in and is executive producer of the biopic on '60s radical Abbie Hoffman, wanted more actors corralled, more posters, more hoopla.

A choice selection of expletives later, D'Onofrio handed the phone to a worried-looking publicist. Then he levels his gaze at a new-comer.

"You can't write about this," he said. "I'll kill you."

Gulp. D'Onofrio — a character actor who's chiseled a career playing off-the-wall losers, alien-possessed farmers and random misfits — then burst into a deep laugh.

"Honest to God, it's not like I'm banking on Steal This Movie to make my career," he said. "I've got a career, thank you very much. But if you're going to get involved in a project with me, then do your job right. Right? That's it. That's all I'm asking."

Forgive D'Onofrio his snit fit. This is, after all, a guy who puts his own body on the line for his films ever since he debuted in Full Metal Jacket by gaining 70 pounds.

"He's an artist, in the best sense of the word," said Steal This Movie director Robert Greenwald. "He commits to the creative process, wherever it takes him, whatever the toll it will take. He just won't let go of the muse."

D'Onofrio's muse is an odd lady. He's gone from playing a lovesick fisherman in Mystic Pizza to a bumbling Mob accountant in Feeling Minnesota to a young Orson Welles in Ed Wood.

So far, his most notorious role is the intergalactic cockroach who slips on — very awkwardly — the skin of an unlucky farmer to battle Will Smith in Men in Black.

"I don't have to worry about box-office receipts," D'Onofrio said happily. "It's not like the studio guys sit around and say, 'We've got to put out a D'Onofrio movie this year! I'm allowed to jump around and be eclectic.'"

These days, he's taking oddness to a new high. In addition to portraying a counterculture peacenik, D'Onofrio goes medieval in The Cell as a serial killer who drowns and bleaches his victims.

"At least it shows my diversity as an actor," he laughed. "At least it does that. I'm not sure it's a great plan of the studios, but that's not my business." His business, he said, is looking "for stories that I can dive in, places that I haven't been before. The only thing you can be sure of is that I will continue to act. That's the thread that connects my work."

Born in New York and reared in Hawaii, Colorado and Miami, the 41-year-old D'Onofrio cut his teeth at New York's American Stanislavski Theatre, dabbling in stage work and student films.

During down times, he was a bouncer at clubs and a bodyguard for such notables as Yul Brynner and Robert Plant.

By the time Stanley Kubrick picked him to play a chubby, whacked-out recruit in 1987's Full Metal Jacket, D'Onofrio realized that the key to success was to transform his towering presence.

"I can change my size so much. I can look like a whole different guy," he said, still chunky from having gained 40 pounds for an upcoming movie with Val Kilmer.

"I think it really comes down to not being a really good actor and needing to be confident that my persona suits the part. When I walk down the street in real life, the vibe that I give off has got to suit the characters that I'm playing."

And what characters they've been. Look for him in The Player, Mr. Wonderful, The Whole Wide World, Dying Young, The Newton Boys, Strange Days, The Thirteenth Floor and even Stuart Saves His Family.

Ask him how he views these smaller, supporting roles, and D'Onofrio chuckles. "The first thing you have to know is that you have to look at a story like it's a canvas, like a painting. It's like Character Acting 101."

Lesson One: "You have to realize where your character is within the structure of the story. Maybe it's like a splash of yellow paint in one corner of the composition of the painting," he said.

"You don't want to shine too bright, and you don't want to shine too little. You want to be the perfect splash of yellow paint to let the whole composition work correctly."

Lesson Two: "You can never become something that you're not. You can never become a person that you're playing," he said. "All you can do is put yourself, your soul, who you are, into that circumstance."

"The minute you start to try to become something that you're not, it goes in the direction of faking, of pretending. That's good for sketches, but not good for drama."

His impromptu lesson over, D'Onofrio picked up his cell phone, said goodbye and prepared to get back to work: It's time to knock heads with Los Angeles again.

"Once you're an actor and you have just a tiny bit of success, you enter this area where anybody in any other form of the business will always treat you like an actor," he said ruefully.

"You realize that one day and then you say, 'Oh, OK. Is that the game we're playing? All right, fine. I'm gonna play it, too. I'm going to be the biggest pain-in-the-butt actor that you've ever had to deal with.'"

NEW YORK — It was the night of Bruce Springsteen's umphant world tour — 16 sold-out months on the road with the reed E Street Band. The Boss and sidekicks, teary-eyed, held hands the Madison Square Garden screamed wildly.

"We'll be seeing you!" Springsteen proclaimed after playing his song — quite appropriately, "Bl Brothers."

But when? Where? How?

On a live album? A new studio album? A DVD of the Garden shows?

Off the road again, the Boss is an enigma

Observers don't quite know what the cryptic Bruce Springsteen will do next.

By Larry McShane
Associated Press

NEW YORK — It was the last night of Bruce Springsteen's triumphant world tour — 16 sold-out months on the road with the reunited E Street Band. The Boss and his sidekicks, teary-eyed, held hands as the Madison Square Garden crowd screamed wildly.

"We'll be seeing you!" Springsteen proclaimed after playing their last song — quite appropriately, "Blood Brothers."

But when? Where? How? On a live album? A new studio album? A DVD of the Garden shows?

Who knows? When it comes to Springsteen, who ever knows? "Springsteen is certainly known for taking his time, changing his mind frequently while he's at it, and often doing the last thing you'd expect," said editor Chris Phillips of Backstreets Magazine, which chronicles all things Springsteen.

"Judging by all the song debuts toward the end of the tour, he's certainly got some great material." That material includes "American Skin (41 Shots)," the Amador Diallo-inspired song that prompted the silliest Springsteen controversy since Ronald Reagan interpreted "Born in the USA" as a paean to patriotism. There were other new songs, too: the nightly show-closer "Land of Hope and Dreams" and three rockers — "Further On Up the Road," "Code of Silence" and "Another Thin Line."

Five songs, for most artists, is the start of a new album. For Springsteen, it could become the start of Tracks II — a follow-up to the boxed sets of rarities and unreleased gems that he put out (to critical acclaim) in 1998.

Springsteen, through his publicist, has said nothing about what's next. The lone hint about the future emanating from the notoriously tight-lipped Springsteen came courtesy of Little Steven Van Zandt, who took questions from fans on his Web site.

Question No. 1: Would you like to see the E Street Band become a recording act again?

"Yes," Van Zandt replied. "Question No. 2: What are the chances of that happening?"

"I'd take the odds," Van Zandt said. There were no more queries fielded about the subject, no more clues offered. But given Springsteen's track record in the '90s, anything seems possible.

After breaking up the E Street Band in 1988, Springsteen disappeared until releasing two albums simultaneously in 1992 — Human Touch and Lucky Town.

He then launched a tour with a new band, leaving fans to lament the absence of the E Streeters. He dabbled in hip-hop music (the result was "Streets of Philadelphia"), and began writing music strictly on his bass.

Springsteen returned in 1995 — but as a solo act, touring small theaters in support of his mostly acoustic Ghost of Tom Joad album.

The acclaimed tour featured Springsteen channeling the spirits of John Steinbeck and Woody Guthrie: He occasionally read an excerpt from The Grapes of Wrath and performed Guthrie's "Plane Wreck at Los Gatos (Deportee)."

Mixed in was a brief reunion with the E Streeters to record four songs included on a greatest hits package, followed by the Tracks collection. Fans were left wondering if Springsteen and the band would ever get together for a larger-scale project.

Bruce & Co. emphatically answered the question with the tour of Europe and North America, selling out virtually every stop.

The North American leg of the tour began with an unprecedented 15 shows at the Meadowlands in New Jersey and closed with 10 sold-out nights in Madison Square Garden. On July 1, after playing the tour-closing set, Springsteen delivered his cryptic comment about the future.

During the Garden shows, director Jonathan Demme — a Springsteen pal — reportedly filmed some shows for possible release. Springsteen, obviously aware of the filming, uncharacteristically asked the audience to keep the noise down during the slow songs.

Ed Betz/Associated Press

But getting the band back together again is not as simple as it was in the days when everybody was a Jersey guy.

Drummer Max Weinberg has a regular job as band leader for Conan O'Brien, while bassist Garry Tallent is a respected Nashville record producer. Guitarist Van Zandt has become an actor on the hit HBO series "The Sopranos."

Guitarist Nils Lofgren and sax man Clarence Clemons have solo careers. And there are wives and kids and commitments that once were not a problem.

"Who knows?" said Backstreets' Phillips. "It's a wait-and-see game at this point, and we're taking everything we hear with a grain of salt."

Actor Shannon debuts baby girl

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It's a girl for Vicellous Shannon.

The actor, who starred opposite Denzel Washington in The Hurricane and Danny Glover in TNT's Freedom Song, and his wife, Misty, welcomed their first child Saturday.

The 7-pound, 9-ounce Sierra Monet was born at an undisclosed Los Angeles hospital.

"Both mother and daughter are doing well," publicist Arnold Robinson said Monday. "Mr. and Mrs. Shannon are ecstatic about the new addition to their family."

Shannon will have a role in the new TV drama series "Semper Fi," beginning this fall on NBC.

Barker's Beauty loses discrimination lawsuit

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A judge says there's insufficient evidence to prove discrimination claims by a former "The Price is Right" model who sued Bob Barker and the show's producers.

Barker sued Holly Hallstrom after she left the show in 1995, denying claims she made to the media that she was fired because she had gained too much weight. His lawsuit is scheduled for trial Sept. 22.

Holly Hallstrom filed a countersuit, claiming she was fired unjustly after 19 years on TV's longest-running game show.

Gutman dismissed Hallstrom's age and sex discrimination claims, saying the show employed a model 10 years older than her and noting all the show's models are women.

Hallstrom's lawyer, Nick Alden, said they were disappointed by the ruling.

■ An independent film about Cuban dissident Reinaldo Arenas heads for the Venice Film Festival.

By Francisco Perez Rivera
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The tragic life of Cuban dissident writer Reinaldo Arenas is the subject of an independent film selected for the Venice Film Festival.

Before Night Falls, based on Arenas' autobiography of the same title, has such Hollywood names as Johnny Depp and Sean Penn in a cast led by Spanish star Javier Bardem and Italian actor Andrea di Stefano.

"The film tells the story of Reinaldo's life, his initial optimism and his disillusion with the revolution," said the director, painter Julian Schnabel, whose first film, Basquiat, was released in 1996.

In addition to the Venice festival, which will begin on Aug. 31, Schnabel said the film would show next month at the Toronto Film Festival.

The movie starts with the writer as an infant and follows him through moments of triumph — such as when he received an official literary award in Havana for his first novel, Singing In the Well — through long periods of hiding and incarceration after he fell into disgrace for his second novel, The Ill-Fated Peregrinations of Fray Servando, in the late 1960s.

It follows him through his Mariel boatlift escape to the United States in 1980 and his subsequent life in New York, where he discovered he had contracted AIDS. The movie ends with his suicide in Manhattan in 1990, at age 47.

"I think that Reinaldo was able to turn his suffering into beauty," Schnabel said.

In essence, "the movie is about freedom and speaks for people who have not had a voice. Because of this movie, more people will be able to hear Reinaldo's voice."

— Julian Schnabel, director of Before Night Falls

The book Before Night Falls was published in Spain by Tusquets in 1992; an English translation, by Dolores M. Koch was published the next year by Viking Penguin and was selected by the New York Times as one of the 13 best new books of 1993.

"I never thought that I'd get the rights," Schnabel said. "But I contacted Reinaldo's agent, Tom Colchie, in 1997, and he organized a screening of Basquiat for the directors of the Arenas estate." He also called Lazaro Gomez Carriles, the writer's friend and one of his heirs, who gave the project his blessing.

Schnabel wrote the screenplay with Gomez Carriles and Cunningham O'Keefe and began filming last August in several Mexican locations that doubled for Cuba. Filming ended in New York in November.

The screenplay uses the book as a framework and complements it with "a compilation of different things in Reinaldo's other writings and information from people who knew him," Schnabel said.

"It's an impressionistic view of Reinaldo's life."

The movie includes footage of contemporary Havana, but Schnabel won't say how it was obtained.

Asked how he feels as a filmmaker, he hesitates. "I am not a filmmaker. I have only done one film before," he said. "Or maybe now I am."
