Regents suggest 9 percent tuition raise

That figure is about double the average annual increase for both the UI and the U.S.

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

The staff of the state of Iowa Board of Regents recommended Wednesday a 9.3 percent tuition/fees increase at the UI for Iowa residents next year — the largest suggested hike in recent history.

That number represents a $299 jump in tuition/fees — from this year's $3,204 to $3,503. Students who aren't from Iowa are facing a $965 increase — an 8.8 percent hike from $10,966 to $11,931.

Such a rise in tuition would more than double the average annual increase — 4.1 percent — of Iowa's state universities over the past five years. The average increase nationwide has been 4.8 percent.

Although the figures are only recommendations, the regents usually approve increases similar to these, said Frank Stork, the regents' executive director.

The regents will discuss the cost of tuition at their meetings on Sept. 13-14 at the UI. In October, they are scheduled to cast a final vote on next year's tuition.

The regents' staff, which works out of a Des Moines office, arrived at the recommendations after considering a variety of factors. They considered information that university officials provided them and economic indicators such as the Higher Education Price Index, Stork said.

Unusually large tuition hikes at the state's universities had been talked about since last spring, when the state Legislature gave less funding to the universities than officials requested. That, along with last year's $1.8 million reduction in appropriation of

Future grad students face surcharge

On top of a tuition increase, students in seven UI grad schools may have to pay extra fees.

By Tony Robinson
The Daily Iowan

A possible 8 to 10 percent tuition increase will likely hit some UI undergraduate students hard next fall, but students entering graduate programs next year may be hit even harder under a proposal released Wednesday. The UI asked the state of Iowa Board of Regents for permission to place surcharges on several graduate programs, which would be an additional charge on top of any tuition hike.

Graduate schools affected would be the colleges of Business Administration, Dentistry, Law, Information Systems and Accountancy, Medicine, Pharmacy and Physical Therapy. The surcharges in the proposal range from $1,000 to $3,500.

The regents will consider the surcharges at their meetings. See GRAD SCHOOL, Page 6A

UI political groups seek member increases

Bushites sign members while Nader and Gore supporters plan ahead for the elections.

By Erica Driskell
The Daily Iowan

As election day approaches, local political groups report a significant increase in support as they gear toward recruiting members and becoming visible on the UI campus.

Campaign efforts have resulted in more than 1,300 members signing on with the UI's Students for George W. Bush, the largest candidate support group on campus, said Christian Kurasek, the group's chairman.

Last week, Bush supporters recruited 300 new members in three days, which is more than the entire membership of Students for Gore 2000, Kurasek said. Members of Students for Bush hope to reach their goal of recruiting 2,000 members by Nov. 7, Kurasek said.

"This has gone beyond all of our wildest expectations," he said. "We're rocking and rolling now."

During the summer, members of the group went to the GOP leadership conventions in Cedar Rapids, participated in outreach programs where students talked to non-traditional student groups, and helped with the National Voter Registration day, Kurasek said. In the future, the group plans to continue recruiting members and encouraging students to vote, and it will participate in the UI Homecoming parade in October, he said. "One of our goals is to turn youth votes to the local level at least," Kurasek said. "Students can have so much power."

Kellen Wells-Mangold, a UI freshman and Students for Bush Representative, recruits UI senior Katie Brigger Wednesday.

Students for Bush is also promoting candidates at the local level, such as Iowa state Representative Paul Heyn and U.S. Representative Jim Leach, Kurasek said.

While Students for Bush members have started campaigning early this month, members of Students for Gore 2000 are primarily using September for planning and energizing current members. In October, the group plans to take a more active role in the Gore campaign, said Students for Gore 2000 member Liz Holst.

Students were not as active in the Iowa City area this past summer because the majority of members were upperclassmen who obtained internships in other areas of the United States, said Emily Hajek, the public relations director for Students for Gore.

As of last semester, the group had around 80 to 100 members, but Hajek said she expects that number to continue to rise.

"We have everyone from University Democrats, students who were for Bradley and Students for Gore all pulling for Gore now," Hajek said.

Although recruiting members is important for Students for Gore, Hajek said that because of the short amount of time, members are planning to become active on campus, Hajek said.

Students for Gore members say they plan to set up a table in the IMU several nights this month to promote voter registration as well as Gore for president, Holst said.

Open forum planned for new jail

The discussion will still be held after debates within the Johnson County Democratic Party.

By Kellie Doyle
The Daily Iowan

After much debate at the central committee meeting of the Johnson County Democratic Party Wednesday evening, members agreed to sponsor a forum to discuss the issue of a possible new jail on Melrose Avenue.

The forum will be held at 7 p.m. on Oct. 24 at the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St. Although the format of this meeting is still in the planning stages, it is tentatively scheduled to be an open forum in which voters will have the opportunity to gather information concerning the issue.

A co-sponsorship is a possibility that may be decided at a later date.

Carol deProse, a community activist, attended the meeting to promote the forum because she had heard rumors that people were seriously opposed to the idea, which her husband Chuck had first proposed at a prior meeting.

A motion that the party completely withdraw as sponsor of the forum on the county jail was proposed, but it was rejected after thorough discussion.

"About three days ago, I began hearing rumors that certain Democratic candidates were working behind the scenes to see that the forum did not take place," she said.

DeProse said the candidates felt the issue was too delicate to discuss because it could become a disadvantage to the Party come election time.

MP3.com hit with $250 million copyright-infringement fine

A federal judge says Internet companies are not beyond the domain of copyright laws.

By Larry Neumeister
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A federal judge Wednesday ordered MP3.com to pay as much as $250 million to Universal Music Group for violating the record company's copyrights by making thousands of CDs available for listening over the Internet.

U.S. District Judge Jed S. Rakoff punished the online music-sharing service at $25,000 per CD, saying it was necessary to send a message to Internet companies. The exact number of CDs involved and total damages will be determined at a November hearing.

Universal Music Group, the world's largest record company, had urged a stiff penalty in a case closely watched by Napster and other businesses that share music or other copyrighted material over the Internet.

The judge said some Internet companies "may have a misconception that, because their technology is somewhat novel, they are somehow immune from the ordinary applications of laws of the United States, including copyright law."

He added: "They need to understand that the law's domain knows no such limits."

MP3.com said it will appeal. The company had argued that a penalty of any more than $500 per CD would be a virtual "death sentence."

Shares of MP3.com were halted at $7.88 on the NASDAQ Stock Market before the decision. When trading resumed 2½ hours later, shares plummeted 27 percent to $5.77.

"The ruling was much harsher than I anticipated, as it puts the company literally on the brink," said Nitsan Hargil, an analyst at Kaufman Brothers in New York.

Leonard Rubin, a Chicago attorney who specializes in copyright, trademark and entertainment law, said it was clear that the courts are not going to tolerate "wholesale copying of protected works."

Universal was the only plaintiff. The nation's four other major record companies settled with MP3.com after Rakoff found earlier this year that MP3.com had violated copyrights. The amount of the settlements was not disclosed, but MP3.com set aside $150 million recently to cover its legal costs.

Universal lawyer Hadrian Katz had asked the judge to award the record company up to $450 million.

"Music is a medium, and the next infringement may be very different," Katz said. "It may be video, or it may be film, or it may be books, or it may be something very different."

According to Universal, MP3.com copied 5,000 to 10,000 of its CDs, which means damages could reach $250 million. MP3.com has put the number of CDs at 4,700, which would put the damage award

Burrito contestants compete to eat

■ A UI sophomore wins Panchero's fifth annual contest by downing five.

By Anne Webbeking
The Daily Iowan

UI sophomore Tom Ferris may have lost a hard-boiled-egg-eating contest during breakfast with his friends Wednesday morning, but he made up for it last night by winning Panchero's Mexican Grill's burrito-eating contest.

Ten contestants, including Ferris, participated in the annual event at the downtown Panchero's, 32 S. Clinton St., by eating burritos non-stop for 45 minutes Wednesday evening.

Ferris ate almost five half-pound burritos and was declared the official winner right after he finished vomiting in the bathroom.

Regurgitation was the center of controversy after a Panchero's employee apparently told runner-up Sean Hansen, a UI senior, that vomiting was permitted during competition when in fact it was against contest rules. Hansen went into the bathroom and vomited during the competition after three of his total four and a half burritos. He eventually argued his way back into the competition.

While it appeared Hansen would win, the crowd started to support Ferris by yelling "Taco Tom! Taco Tom!" Soon the whole place was chanting as Ferris took the lead in the final minutes. Competition between the two had already erupted earlier when they both took their shirts off to show their eating power.

The official winners were announced after the remaining burritos were weighed. Because Ferris vomited after the competition, instead of during, he was declared the official winner and was given 12 free burrito tickets. Hansen and Iowa City resident Daryl Stephenson, a former contest champion, were declared runners-up and were rewarded with 10 tickets.

The other seven competitors slowly gave up during the competition. After eating almost two burritos, UI junior Nathan Huffman was the first to quit.

"I can't do it," he said. "I don't even know if I'd want to eat a semester's worth of free burritos."

Huffman wasn't the only contestant who gave up early. UI freshman Melissa Brown, the only female competitor who said she was signed up by her friend, quit after eating a little more than two burritos.

"This isn't fun anymore," Brown said after finishing her second burrito.

This was the fifth year for the contest, said Panchero's owner Rodney Anderson. Four contestants entered by signing up in advance, and the other six volunteered right before the contest began, he said.

Ferris, who volunteered the day of the contest, said he plans to do it again next year.

"This is the best day," he said, and added that the free burritos may go to charity since he probably won't be able to eat any more for the rest of the year.

Public Safety scrutinized

■ Some feel background searches of victims are unnecessary.

By Bridget Stratton
The Daily Iowan

When UI Department of Public Safety officers follow up on reported criminal activity, suspects aren't the only ones who may be subject to a criminal background search.

When a complaint is made to Public Safety, the person's driver's license information is verified through a computer system that also checks to see if the person has a criminal record.

UI Professor of law Marc Linder experienced this policy firsthand and said he now questions the necessity of such a procedure and that it is not widely known.

After Linder received a phone call he felt was threatening before he was to make a public appearance, he said he called Public Safety to report the incident. When an officer arrived at Linder's office to take his statement, Linder's driver's license information was called into the station, run through the computer and checked for any outstanding warrants for his arrest, Linder said.

When Linder questioned why the officer was checking the information, Linder said the officer told him it was to check the spelling of his name. The policy, Linder said, is "totally absurd."

"People on campus should know if a victim makes a complaint, the first thing they do is to do a check on you," Linder said.

The check is standard procedure when a report is taken, said Duane Papke, the acting associate director for Public Safety.

Public Safety's procedure for taking a report calls for an officer to meet with the victim and take down as much information about the incident as possible.

This process includes putting the victim's driver's license, student ID card or other photo ID information into a computer system that checks the accuracy of the information given and ensures the correct spelling of the victim's name, Papke said.

"We do this mainly for record-keeping purposes," Papke said. "This way, we know we have all the correct information."

In addition to saving the information on the computer, the victim's driver's license information also goes through the National Crime Information Center computer system, which checks the victim's record for any outstanding warrants. It is imperative for officers to know this information to ensure the safety of the officers and to check the validity of the complaint, Papke said.

Although she understands Public Safety's need to verify that the complaints are valid, UI graduate student Suzanne Horstman said she feels the department's procedure is unfair.

"I would be hesitant to file a complaint knowing the policy because a person is calling for one thing, and officers are checking your background," Horstman said.

Public Safety's procedure for taking the information of a person filing a complaint is standard for many law enforcement agencies, Papke said.

The information in the computer system that verifies the victim's date of birth is also useful because law enforcement agencies are required by the FBI to report crime statistics, Papke said.

The Iowa City Police Department does not have a set procedure for getting information on a victim, Sgt. Jim Steffen said. After viewing the victim's driver's license to ensure the correct spelling of his or her name and information, it is up to the individual officer to choose whether to run a warrant check, he said.

UI Professor of criminal law Jim Tomkovicz said he does not know of a law that would prevent such a check.

"I don't know of anything that would restrict an officer from obtaining information that is of public access," Tomkovicz said.

After his encounter with Public Safety, Linder inquired about the necessity of a procedure with UI General Counsel Mark Schantz, who found the policy troubling but, upon further investigation, did not think it was a problem, Linder said.

Schantz was not available for comment. DI reporter Bridget Stratton can be reached at: bstratto@iue.wieg.uiowa.edu

Council to vote again on tax break

■ Councilors differ on whether the plan will benefit mall development.

By Mary Sedor
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City City Councilors will cast their second of three votes Tuesday on a proposed agreement between the city and the MGD L.C. This agreement would give the company a tax break for its redevelopment of the Sycamore Mall and First Avenue area.

On Aug. 15, the council adopted the Urban Renewal Act, which is designed to provide economic development and revitalize the area. The proposed agreement between Iowa City and the developers will provide a tax break for the cost of renovating the area over a period of seven years, provided that all parts of the agreement are followed.

In order to fulfill requirements of the agreement, MGD L.C. must perform "minimum improvements." These improvements, such as the renovation of Sycamore Mall, would have to "increase the actual assessed value of the property by at least 15 percent over the assessed value."

Gerry Ambrose, the co-owner of Sycamore Mall, said he plans to bring retail stores back to the area and renovation of both the inside and outside of the mall will help bring these businesses.

The tax break is necessary to complete the project, Ambrose said.

Councilor Irvin Pfab said the public may not understand what they are getting into by letting the city enter the agreement with the developer.

Pfab said he does not see the need to issue MGD L.C. a tax break, citing the development of the Gateway One Plaza, 1101 S. Riverside Drive, which was completed in the late 1990s without the help of the city, he said.

"Entering into this agreement is like giving an ATM card to the developer with access to the treasurer's office," Pfab said. It is possible that once the developer makes a profit from the tax break, he will leave the area, he said.

Pfab said citizens will lose about $2 million because of the tax break.

Councilor Michael O'Donnell said he is "very much in favor" of the plan.

Because the city runs on taxes, renovations to the Sycamore Mall area will increase the property value, O'Donnell said, which will in turn bring beneficial taxes for the city. By no means will the taxpayers be affected by the tax break, he said.

A public hearing with the developer is scheduled for Sept. 12, after the tax break is voted on three times by the City Council. Provided that the council does not defer the vote, councilors will give their final reading and vote on the proposed agreement Sept. 19, he said.

Decision expected today in UI drinking-death lawsuit

The Iowa Supreme Court will announce today whether the National Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity, the now defunct UI chapter and a former UI fraternity member are at fault for the 1995 death of Matthew Garofalo, who was a UI sophomore at the time of his death.

CITY BRIEF

The plaintiffs, Edward and Monica Garofalo, originally sued the fraternity chapter and four fraternity members in 1996 for the wrongful death of their son following a Lambda Chi Alpha Big Brother/Little Brother initiation ceremony. The amount of money sought was not disclosed.

The Garofalos claim their son's fraternity had a duty to care for him after he drank an excessive amount of alcohol, which members allegedly supplied after a fraternity function. The Garofalos declined to comment for this article.

In 1997, two fraternity members were dismissed from the case, and, in 1998, a judge ruled that the fraternity and another former member were not responsible for Garofalo's death, leaving Chad Diehl, who pled guilty in 1995 to providing alcohol to minors, as the only defendant in the civil case. Following the 1998 ruling, the plaintiffs decided to appeal to the Iowa Supreme Court.

Walk follows Mormon trail

■ Walk for Children 2000 begins in Iowa City and will conclude in Council Bluffs.

By Sharyn Hosemann
The Daily Iowan

Four men set off on a 285-mile walk in Iowa City Wednesday towing a 300-pound cart, following the trail taken by Mormon pioneers who traveled from Iowa City to Omaha on their way to Utah from 1856 to 1860.

Utah resident John Lodefink, 58, and his friends from Britain — Peter Block, 62, Gordon Beharrell, 63, and his son John Beharrell, 18 — will make the trek to Council Bluffs pulling the cart. The four are representing the Des Moines-based Children and Families of Iowa in a walk to raise awareness of children at risk for abuse, neglect, chemical dependency, violence or family turmoil.

The Walk for Children 2000 will take the men through 22 communities.

"We feel blessed to represent an organization like Children and Families of Iowa," Lodefink said.

Lodefink and his brother built the cart, patterned after a pioneer-style covered wagon, in 1998 using parts made by Amish craftsmen.

"I wanted to find an organization that could benefit from the handcart," Lodefink said at a press conference held at City Park.

Noelle Harper, a marketing and communication coordinator for the children's group, said she has been working with Lodefink for the past year to organize the walk.

"Children and Families of Iowa is really excited and hopes the weather cooperates," Harper said.

Christie Vilsack, representing the governor's office, spoke in support of the walkers at a press conference Wednesday.

"Iowa's children are all of our children," Christie Vilsack said. "Children are our most precious gifts."

Christie Vilsack said her husband, Gov. Tom Vilsack, will continue to concentrate on three major topics: an increase in health insurance for children and families at risk, a special task force with recommendations in favor of children and families, and an increase in funding from the legislature for children and family services.

She read a proclamation from the governor officially declaring September "The Month of the At-Risk Child" in Iowa.

The four men, who met through the 1997 Mormon Trail Wagon Train, said they anticipate few problems during their journey.

"It's sort of a hit-and-miss situation," Block said.

Walkers will stay in churches, city halls and tents along the way.

"Many people have offered accommodations for us," Block said.

John Beharrell, one of the walkers who recently graduated from high school in Britain, said he plans to do mission work for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints after the journey is done. His father said he is hoping to do a

"I want to incorporate what we learn from this experience and bring it back to England," Gordon Beharrell said.

Lodefink said it would be great if others would participate in the walk or make donations. The walkers have a van as a support vehicle but will rely solely on their own feet while they pull the cart, he said.

"It is a great opportunity to

Porn mistakenly appears on I.C. cable

■ The inadvertent broadcast appeared on channel 98 around 8 p.m.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

Some Iowa City residents were jolted from their sofas Wednesday night when what has been called "extremely graphic" pornography was broadcast on cable channel 98.

Iowa City residents Rob and Mimi Hill were channel surfing Wednesday night when they wandered onto the channel around 8 p.m.

"I wasn't offended, but a lot of parents might get bothered by it," said Rob Hill. "It's about the hardest core porn you could see in America."

Hill said he changed the channel, returned to check it about a half hour later and discovered the show had been turned off.

"I was appalled when my kid was watching it right in front of the TV," said Mimi Hill. "I think if people want that in their homes, it should be a choice. You shouldn't surf on it."

Mimi immediately took their 15-month-old son to the next room when the channel appeared on TV and was soon followed by her husband.

The Hills, who subscribe to extended basic cable through AT&T, said channel 98 usually has different theme channels weekly, such as the Sci-Fi channel or TV Land.

They have never seen pornography on the channel before, the Hills said.

Representatives at AT&T, 546 Southgate Ave., could not be reached for comment.

A message placed on the AT&T customer service line, 351-3984, at 8:10 p.m. stated the company was experiencing service interruption in the Iowa City area and that trained technicians were correcting the problem.

"I maybe felt slightly violated just because it wasn't the most pleasant sight, but I didn't feel it was a humorous mistake by AT&T," said Natalya Dawaf, a UI alumna.

Dawaf was flipping channels when she said she came across channel 98 around 8:30 p.m. The show was inappropriate for broadcast and AT&T should be more cautious in the future, she said.

UI senior Michael Brown didn't see the show but found the situation comedic.

"I would love to see some big company ... throw porn on TV and make a big mistake. But I wouldn't sit there and watch it," said Brown. "Whoever did it, way to go. Slap that person some five because we could use some exciting entertainment."

Couple charged with endangerment

■ The battered child's mother and boyfriend turn themselves in to police.

Associated Press

OSKALOOSA, Iowa — The mother of a toddler who was critically beaten last weekend and her boyfriend surrendered to police Wednesday, authorities said.

Miranda Leanne Charbonneau, 21, and Clarence Adrian Yeo Jr., 23, both of Oskaloosa, were charged with child endangerment causing serious injury. They were each being held in the Mahaska County Jail on $25,000 bond.

Frank Charbonneau Jr., who is 23 months old, was in critical condition at Blank Children's Hospital in Des Moines on Wednesday. He was transported there after first being taken to a hospital in Oskaloosa on Sunday evening.

Police said they suspected the mother and her boyfriend of abusing the child because their explanations didn't match the injuries the boy suffered.

"The injuries that the child has do not coincide with the stories that both Charbonneau and Yeo gave to authorities," Oskaloosa police chief Jake McGee told Des Moines television station KCCI on Wednesday.

He had said Tuesday that the injuries were "very consistent with Shaken Baby Syndrome."

McGee said the descriptions of the couple and their car matched those given by a witness who called police Sunday to report a child being pulled between two people. Police investigated the report but could not find the car.

That was less than one hour before the toddler was admitted to Mahaska County Hospital.

Charbonneau and Yeo were expected to make their initial court appearance Thursday.

Iowa receives money for tornado shelters

DES MOINES (AP) — State officials are doling out $87,000 in federal money to build "safe rooms" in buildings previously damaged by tornadoes or high winds, hoping to encourage the public to build tornado shelters.

A safe room is typically built of concrete and reinforced with steel bars or other heavy-duty materials. It usually is located in a basement, but can be built on a home's first floor or even outdoors, serving as a closet or storage shed.

"The idea is to have someplace that is secure and solid, and to have a structure above you that doesn't fall on you if something falls on it," said David Miller of the Iowa Emergency Management Division.

Iowans who chuckle at the thought of tornado bunkers are reminded by state officials of recent twister outbreaks elsewhere in the Midwest.

Tornadoes that struck Oklahoma and Kansas last year killed 46 people, injured 800 and damaged 8,000 buildings. In 1998, more than 500 homes were destroyed and 1,700 houses were damaged when a twister struck St. Peter, Minn.

Bush stock deal again under public scrutiny

■ Records show he knew an oil company was in crisis when he sold his stock in 1990.

By Pete Yost
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Before selling his stock in a Texas oil company, a transaction that prompted an insider trading inquiry, George W. Bush was informed as a company director that the firm was suffering a cash "crisis," newly released records show.

The internal corporate documents, released by the Securities and Exchange Commission, provide the most detailed view yet of Bush's knowledge of Harken Energy Corp.'s financial problems when he sold his shares for $848,560 in June 1990.

Bush's lawyer said Wednesday that the information, while new to the presidential campaign, was provided to the SEC as part of its investigation a decade ago and contributed to the agency's finding that Bush's trading was appropriate.

"The SEC did its job by the book, and this is old news," attorney Robert Jordan said. The Bush lawyer added that "the company's financial situation was well-disclosed to the public" through filings at the time with the SEC.

"By the time Bush sold his stock, the cash crisis had been largely resolved," said Jordan. "By May 21, 1990, the major shareholders had agreed to a credit agreement which put $26 million into the company immediately."

Insider trading allegations have been an issue in both Bush's run for governor in Texas and his presidential bid. The SEC in the last month released several hundred pages of corporate documents from its investigation under the Freedom of Information Act.

Bush has said he had no knowledge the Texas-based company was going to report a $23 million loss two months after he sold his stock. "I absolutely had no idea, and would not have sold it had I known," he said during his 1994 campaign for governor.

SEC investigators concurred there was no evidence Bush knew that the loss would be of that magnitude. At most, the investigators found, Bush was aware of a projected $4 million loss, which was "consistent with Harken's publicly reported trend" of losses, states an SEC investigative document obtained by the AP. The same document projected the $4 million loss, Jordan noted, projected a profit for the fourth quarter.

The Harken documents released under FOIA detail Bush's knowledge of the company's problems.

As a Harken director, he received memos in spring 1990 that referred in stark terms to the company's cash-strapped condition as banks demanded it pay down its debts. One document said the company was in the midst of a "liquidity crisis" and another told Bush the company was "in a state of noncompliance" with its lenders.

Firestone apologizes for tires

■ Data show Firestone knew of safety problems years before its tire recall.

By Nedra Pickler
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Bridgestone/Firestone Inc.'s CEO apologized Wednesday before angry members of Congress for dozens of fatal accidents that may be linked to his company's tires.

Internal Firestone documents obtained by the Associated Press showed the company may have had data indicating safety problems years before the Aug. 9 recall of 6.5 million tires. Rep. Billy Tauzin, R-La., said he believed the data were available as early as 1992.

At House and Senate hearings, lawmakers admonished the tire maker and Ford, which uses Firestone tires on its Explorer and other models, for not notifying the public of the problem even though complaints about the tires had been coming in for years.

Ford began a recall of the tires in 16 foreign countries more than a year before the U.S. recall, but was not required by law to notify federal officials, and did not do so.

Last week, the safety agency issued a warning about the safety of 1.4 million tires beyond the 6.5 million recalled models. Firestone continues to insist that there is no reason to expand the recall to include those tires. Also last week, Venezuela's consumer protection agency said Ford and Firestone should be held criminally responsible for 46 deaths in that country.

"I come before you to apologize to you, the American people and especially to the families who have lost loved ones in these terrible rollover accidents," Firestone CEO Masatoshi Ono told the Senate Appropriations Committee's transportation panel.

"I also come to accept full and personal responsibility on behalf of Bridgestone/Firestone for the events that led to this hearing," Ono said.

Ford CEO Jac Nasser, appearing before the House Commerce Committee's oversight and investigations panel, said his company's vehicles are safe.

But safety agency Administrator Sue Bailey said many of the accidents were caused by a combination of flawed Firestone tires and characteristics of the Ford Explorer. The internal confidential Firestone documents showed more than half of the property damage and injury claims the company received from 1997 to 1999 were for the kind of ATX II tires now under recall.

Ford and Firestone have long said no statistics were compiled showing problems with the tires.

Gore asks voters to 'read my plan'

■ The V.P. has released a budget book containing his economic goals as would-be president.

By Sandra Sobieraj
Associated Press

CLEVELAND — In a cadence mimicking former President Bush's "read my lips," Al Gore reached Wednesday for the mantle of fiscal conservatism, asking voters to "read my plan" in a hefty budget book coupling balanced budgets and ambitious economic goals.

The Democratic presidential candidate denounced what he called the "cross-your-fingers economics" of GOP rival George W. Bush and the broad income tax cuts at the center of Bush's agenda.

Meanwhile, the Gore campaign eagerly awaited a vote Thursday by leaders of the Teamsters they expected would give Gore the union's endorsement — and the manpower that comes with it. The Teamsters, because of their fierce opposition to Gore's free-trade advocacy, have been a holdout while other major unions long ago endorsed the candidate.

In his 191-page budget plan, heralded by President Clinton's former Treasury secretary Robert Rubin as unprecedented in a political campaign, Gore blended government activism and fiscal caution. The only new proposal was to leave $300 billion of the expected federal surplus unspent as a hedge against overly sunny economic forecasts.

"I'm doing this because I don't want you to have to read the tea leaves," Gore told an audience of union activists and other Democratic Party loyalists in a Cleveland State University auditorium.

"Instead, you can just — read my plan." His emphasis on the last three words recalled the elder Bush's 1988 "no-new-taxes" campaign promise, in which he, too, emphasized fiscal conservatism.

Regents propose 9.3 percent tuition hike

state funds and an unexpected insurance hike that will cost the UI $2 million, has forced the UI to tighten its belt by putting some renovations on hold.

"I'm pleased with their effort," UI President Mary Sue Coleman said of the staff's recommendation. "They took the UI's needs very seriously. This will help us out."

Coleman said if the tuition hike passes, the UI could improve the quality of its education, which would benefit all UI students.

And because the UI offers over $200 million in different forms of financial aid, the UI would still be accessible, Coleman said. The UI has the lowest tuition in the Big Ten and would still be more affordable than most comparable universities, she said.

But UI Student Government President Andy Stoll said the suggested tuition raise is too high. UISG members are working with student government leaders from Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa to come up with a number that is more acceptable, which will likely be around last year's 6.9 percent increase, he said.

UI sophomore Tara Aitchison said she hopes that tuition rates next year are not as high as projected.

"It could possibly play a factor in my attending the UI next year," she said. "There are a lot of wasteful programs on campus."

Students at ISU and UNI are facing 9.9 percent tuition and fees hikes. Here's how the 9.3 percent recommend increase for Iowa residents breaks down:

- 5.2 percent to maintain the UI's quality and effectiveness. This increase, which was measured by the Higher Education Price Index, would cover inflation. Last year, a HEPI factor of 2.3 percent was approved.

That area is what seems particularly high to UISG, Stoll said.

- 2 percent to improve quality and work toward achieving the regents' strategic plan. Regents have approved a 2 percent increase earmarked for quality in the previous two years.

- 2.1 percent for non-academic activity fees, such as funding for student health and the UI Lecture Committee. This was approved last year as part of Coleman's proposal to separate tuition from fees for non-academic activities, which were previously covered by tuition. This year students are paying $76 for those fees, and next year they will pay $78. UI officials are using this money, which will be about $4 million in two years, for library improvements, a program to improve students' writing, classroom equipment and financial aid.

Here's how it breaks down for non-Iowa residents:

- 5.2 percent for inflation.
- 2 percent for quality.
- 0.6 percent for non-academic fees.

- 1 percent to create scholarships to attract out-of-state residents.

UI officials say this proposal, which they have considered for a few years, will generate $530,000.

Grad surcharges proposed

on Sept. 13-14 at the UI before making a final decision in October.

The surcharges would be in effect for first-year students next fall; students currently enrolled would not be affected. UI officials say these additional fees would provide funding for enhancements to each program, ranging from faculty benefits to student financial aid.

Robert Kelch, the dean of the College of Medicine, said he supports the idea because the college is in need of recurring funding to implement newly developed methods of instruction. The surcharges will partially fund the college's new curriculum, he said.

Kelch added that the UI would remain one of the Big Ten schools with the lowest tuition and the highest-quality programs.

"We have underpriced our medical school for quite some time," Kelch said.

Michael Sullivan, the assistant dean of the College of Pharmacy, said other universities are using similar means to attract students and provide more resources. The money generated for the College of Pharmacy will go toward faculty salaries, financial aid and new lab equipment.

Some students set to enter graduate programs have mixed feelings on the surcharges. Some are wondering how they will find the money to pay for possible surcharges, while others believe they will improve the quality of the graduate programs.

"It's just another fee we'll have to pay back," said Amber Roberts, a UI freshman who plans to attend medical school at the UI. "Everyone knows (medical school) is going to be expensive, but in time, it will benefit the school."

DI reporters Ryan Foley and Andrea Mason contributed to this report.

Campus political groups want student support

POLITICAL GROUPS

"The purpose of the table is really to get students to vote and then vote for Gore," she said.

Students for Gore intends to march in the Homecoming parade, plan events in conjunction with the University Democrats and start going door-to-door and make phone calls in order to become visible and get UI students thinking about the campaign, Holst said.

The University Democrats are focusing on campaigning at the local level, which includes promoting candidate Vicki Lensing for state representative and candidate Bob Simpson for U.S. representative.

Between 50 and 70 students are registered with Students for Nader, a group that formed this past summer. Holly Hart, Iowa City Green Party secretary and Iowa state coordinator for the Nader campaign, said the main focus of the group is to spread Nader's name to the public.

As the month of November nears, membership numbers for Students for Nader should rise substantially, Hart said, adding she hopes the party will receive enough support to obtain ballot status in Iowa.

Other planned events — such as speakers at the UI, phone calling for Nader support and sponsoring booths — are planned in the future for the Nader group, Hart said. She added that she has booked an environmental lawyer to speak at the UI in the near future.

Nader supporters in the Iowa City area are in the process of linking campaign groups in Des Moines, Dubuque, Cedar Rapids and other areas of the state, Hart said.

"The whole purpose is getting people involved," Hart said. "Things should be heating up in the next couple of months."

Johnson County Democrats to hold jail forum

"I think the Democratic Party is exhibiting cowardice on the issue, but at least the forum will take place so something has been gained," she said.

The possibility of her husband's proposal had been unanimously accepted by a central committee and again approved by both the executive committee and a concerns committee, deProse said. The possibility of its cancellation or transfer under co-sponsors forced deProse to speak up in debate. Dave Leshtz, a representative of Precinct 18, said he was pleased to see the issue carefully disputed.

"I would rather err on the side of too much debate rather than too little," he said.

The current Johnson County Jail, which was built in 1981, was designed to accommodate 46 inmates but has since increased to an average of 96. This overcrowding brought up the proposal of a new jail that will cost $20.3 million, $19 million that the county is requesting taxpayers contribute.

assistant dean of the College of Pharmacy, said other universities are using similar means to attract students and provide more resources. The money generated for the College of Pharmacy will go toward faculty salaries, financial aid and new lab equipment.

Some students set to enter graduate programs have mixed feelings on the surcharges. Some are wondering how they will find the money to pay for possible surcharges, while others believe they will improve the quality of the graduate programs.

"It's just another fee we'll have to pay back," said Amber Roberts, a UI freshman who plans to attend medical school at the UI. "Everyone knows (medical school) is going to be expensive, but in time, it will benefit the school."

Clinton aims to lower China trade barriers

China's human-rights record makes some in Congress wary of extending trade relations.

By George Gedda
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — To dramatize the plight of Falun Gong members in China, the Clinton administration is citing the case of a 60-year-old woman who died following torture inflicted by authorities because of her activities in the spiritual sect.

Robert Seiple, the ambassador-at-large for international religious freedom, told reporters Tuesday that after the woman's death, her daughter was asked to pick up the body.

"Her body was totally covered with bruises," Seiple said. "She had dried blood in the ears, the eyes, the nose. She had all of her teeth broken. We have one credible report that she was made to run outside in the snow with her shoes off until she dropped."

The recounting of that anecdote, replete with gory detail, may make it difficult for the critics to accuse the administration of sugarcoating China's human-rights record as it seeks votes from Congress on extending permanent normal trade relations to China.

That is one of the administration's highest priorities during the final few weeks of the legislative session. Approval would facilitate China's entry into the World Trade Organization, which sets rules for global commerce.

Some in Congress do not believe China is entitled to normal trade ties without conditions, and they cite continued repression as a key reason.

The House already has approved the legislation. Administration officials are confident they have the votes in the Senate as well, and Senate action could come within two weeks.

Approval would do away with the annual process whereby China is given normal tariff rates only after annual congressional reviews of China's human-rights performance.

President Clinton believes the legislation will bring enormous benefit to the U.S. economy by lowering existing barriers in China to U.S. trade and investment.

The occasion for Seiple's remarks was the release Tuesday of the annual State Department report on the status of international freedom worldwide.

The congressionally mandated report, covering 194 countries and territories, said government respect for religious freedom in China deteriorated over the past year as persecution of several religious minorities increased.

While finding that government supervision of religious activity was minimal in some regions, the study said Chinese officials in other regions "imposed tight regulations, closed houses of worship and actively persecuted members of some unregistered religious groups."

The report said persecuted groups in China were subject to "harassment, extortion, prolonged detention, physical abuse and incarceration in prison or in 're-education through labor' camps."

"There were credible reports of religious detainees being beaten and tortured," the report said.

Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Sun Yixi said the report interfered in China's affairs and "unreasonably attacked China's religious policies and freedom by fabricating and distorting facts."

"China strongly resents and firmly opposes that and urges the United States to immediately stop and correct its extremely erroneous acts," the official Xinhua News Agency quoted Sun as saying.

Many analysts believe China has come a long way from the days when various Communist Party campaigns, including the 1966-76 Cultural Revolution, claimed the lives of millions.

FBI releases study of violence in schools

Personality traits and social interaction are two of the risk factors identified.

By Anjetta McQueen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The FBI said school officials should be alert to students who show "preoccupation with themes of violence" but cautioned that its two-year study of school shootings cannot be used to pinpoint teens likely to attack classmates or teachers.

The FBI, which says the report "will help those children who show a propensity for violence," evaluated 18 school shooting cases, which are not identified in the report.

The report identifies risk factors usually found among the shooters in the cases studied. Such factors were grouped into four categories: personality traits, family situations, and school and social interaction.

Other traits listed in the 36-page report include poor coping skills, access to weapons, signs of depression, drug and alcohol abuse, alienation, narcissism, inappropriate humor, and no limits or monitoring of television and Internet use.

Bruce Hunter, a lobbyist who represents the American Association of School Administrators, said school leaders do keep an eye on children who exhibit some of the behaviors listed in the FBI report.

Researchers find evidence of cannibalistic tribe

Lab tests prove the Anasazi, an ancient American Indian tribe, practiced cannibalism.

By Joseph B. Verrengia
Associated Press

Piles of human bones, burned and boiled, smashed and scraped. Cooking pots smeared with blood. A few years ago, anthropologists in the American Southwest uncovered the grisly remains of what appeared to be an ancient cannibal feast, but they lacked the biological proof — until now.

Laboratory tests on some of the artifacts, including a piece of human excrement, have revealed traces of a human protein that scientists say is the first direct evidence of cannibalism among the Anasazi, whose empire stretched into present-day Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico and Utah.

"This proves they put the meat in their mouths," said Richard Marlar, a molecular biologist at the University of Colorado Health Sciences Center in Denver who developed the biochemical tests to detect the protein. "If you didn't eat human beings, this protein would not show up."

The excavation site, consisting of three collapsed pit dwellings nicknamed Cowboy Wash near Dolores, Colo., was occupied around A.D. 1150. It was abandoned after seven people were butchered there.

The findings were published in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature.

Other anthropologists said the protein evidence is convincing. However, it doesn't explain exactly who committed the cannibalism or why.

Nor does it demonstrate that the Anasazi commonly ate their own, either for nourishment or in a religious ritual.

"I doubt it was a routine thing at all in the culture of the early pueblo people, any more than it was routine in any other culture," said anthropologist William Lipe of Washington State University.

Among modern-day Indians of the Southwest, leaders of the Hopi, Zuni and other tribes have been especially critical of cannibalism research.

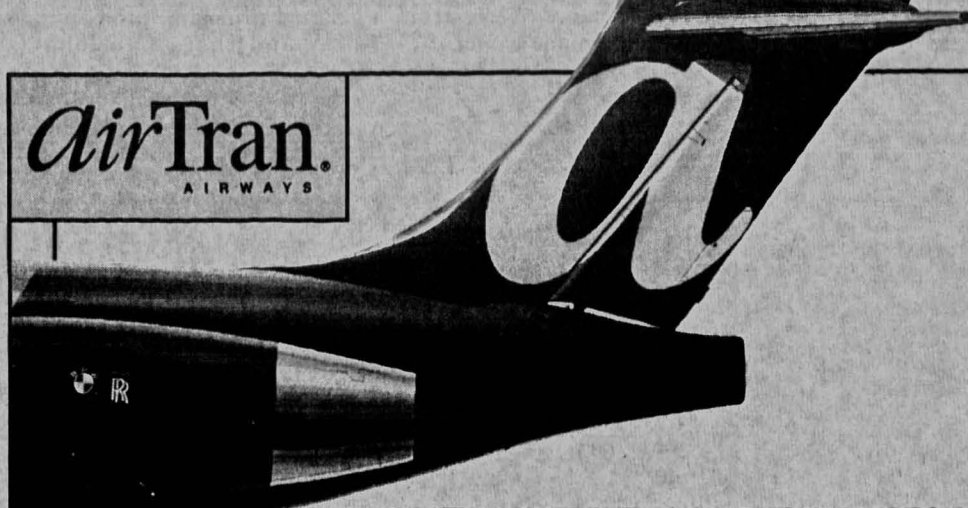

But Terry Knight, a Ute Mountain tribal leader, said of the findings, "Like any other civilization, there were good, productive people, and there were bad people."

Knight said he hopes the evidence of cannibalism will force anthropologists to revise their thinking about the Anasazi culture. He said ancient Indian culture is too often treated in simplistic terms when it was in reality complex, with many different tribes.

Even without the specter of cannibalism, the Anasazi are a mysterious lost culture. They built an elaborate network of roads and ceremonial centers throughout the Southwest after A.D. 700 that were keenly oriented to the heavens. Severe drought helped to disperse the society by A.D. 1300.

On religion in the political world:

Lieberman vs. his faith

For the second time in this election season, a candidate is under attack for being too open about his religious beliefs. Texas Gov. George W. Bush was the first to receive this sort of criticism when he stated several months ago during a debate that he considers Jesus to be the philosopher who has had the most effect on his political beliefs. And now Sen. Joe Lieberman, D-Conn., is being attacked because of his belief that religion should play a larger role in public and political life.

It should be noted that, in both of these cases, the criticism is not coming from everyday people. Or as the Gore campaign would say, people from "working families." Instead, these attacks are coming from political and media elites. And interestingly enough, in the case of Lieberman, from the Anti-Defamation League as well.

Lieberman began backing away from some of his comments only hours after the Anti-

After having eight years of Bill Clinton's morals, it was going to be nice to have a person like Lieberman around as sort of an anti-Clinton.

Defamation League issued a statement criticizing the emphasis he was placing on his religious beliefs. His aides also responded by pointing out his belief in abortion rights and his opposition to school prayer. (Does anyone else find it interesting that being pro-choice can be used as a detoxifier against the accusation that one may be too religious?)

Many of the people who are now criticizing Lieberman initially were thrilled with his selection as the vice-presidential nominee. This brings to mind some interesting questions. It is clear that one of the reasons Lieberman's selection was praised is precisely because of his faith. His selection was viewed as making the ticket more inclusive. Was Lieberman supposed to be silent about his religious beliefs while simultaneously breaking a religious glass ceiling? His nomination was also praised for the refreshing moral statement it made. The thinking was that after having eight years of Bill Clinton's morals, it was going to be nice to have a person like Lieberman around as sort of an anti-Clinton.

Were these people thinking that Lieberman should demonstrate his morals without any discussion of where they are rooted or why they are a valuable thing to have? And finally, one must wonder why an organization dedicated to protecting the welfare and image of Jewish citizens would criticize someone for being outwardly Jewish in public.

WEARING HIS RELIGION ON HIS SLEEVE

What's new and supposedly cool

Most of my summer was spent in a state of general lameness as I struggled to find my way out. Surely, I figured, some hot new trends would emerge that I could latch on to and blindly follow in order to re-join the "in" crowd.

So it was with great relief that I spotted Rolling Stone's "Hot Issue" last week. The magazine's Ministers of Coolness published their annual list of the trends that shape our worlds, and I found myself privy to this dazzling compilation.

I was chagrined, however, to find that everything I wear, listen to and otherwise appreciate is no longer in style. For a guy like myself, it appeared, jeans and Adidas had given way to leopard-skin pants and rocket shoes. I could not pronounce the name of the "Hot Band" and had never heard of the "Hot TV Show." Suddenly, I felt 52 years older.

It figured, then, that this list was in need of a few amendments. That is, at least, for those of us who choose not to wear circulation-depriving pants or have our BMWs bulletproofed. So what follows is a more practical "Hot List" for those of us who do not reside in $3,000-a-month New York City lofts:

- HOT mode of transportation — the car. Bicycles, scooters and mules all have their benefits, but nothing quite matches the automobile. The things can reach speeds in excess of 20 mph and are the way to go in the 21st century. Besides, how many horses come equipped with CD players?
- HOT place to live — Parker, Ariz. With an all-time high temperature of 127 degrees, Parker reigns as the hot place to be in 2000 and beyond. And as many insects and desert reptiles already know, those wild Parker nights can be tough to beat.

Runner-up: the fiery gates of hell.

- HOT multi-purpose beverage — water.

Water, some experts have revealed, is essential to human survival. Beer, a popular favorite, lagged behind milk and orange juice on the list, meanwhile. This was mainly because beer lacks vitamin C or calcium, does not go well on cereal, and exhibits a discouraging tendency to make individuals expunge the contents of their stomachs after consuming large amounts of the sudsy liquid.

- HOT clothing item — pants.

Avoid social awkwardness and impress your friends by throwing a pair of these on before a night on the town. Pants of the long and short variety were all the rage on Europe's fashion circuit last spring and are definitely must-haves in 2000.

- HOT place to study at the UI — the Main Library, second floor.

The original pick was "none," but it was difficult to forget the library and its assemblage of fluorescent lighting, vintage 1967 furniture and somber white walls. Night in and night out, ambitious students get dressed up, gather their friends and head to the second floor, ostensibly to get some work done. But we all know better ...

- HOT socio-political movement on the UI cam- pus — Puritanism.

It is almost as if the Mayflower just sailed in on the Iowa River. Hordes of high minded do-gooders have focused all of their energies on ridding the town of its sinful elements and wicked vices. The idea here is that as soon as 19-year-olds are banned from local taverns, Iowa City's ills will thenceforth disappear. Join the cause before it's too late! Well, there you have it. Unfortunately, there are no exotic shoes, $68,000 cars or wild computer gadgets to be found here. But with keeping tabs on the hot trends as difficult as it is, one is often better off skipping the $800 leather apparel and finding a decent pair of socks instead.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Construction disruptive but not unsafe

This letter is in reference to the news article appearing in the Sept. 6 DI regarding the safety of the Engineering Building while it's being used during the completion of its construction.

First of all, I am by nature and training very safety-conscious, and I have been very observant of the safety precautions taken throughout its construction and use.

On the basis of my experience, it is my opinion that the safety precautions taken by Sue Heeren, on behalf of the UI, and Dave Mellecker and others of the Knutson Construction Co. have been very good. It has been called to my attention at times that I have not been observing the safety signs and barriers for the sake of my convenience.

One of the problems at the particular time mentioned was that because of unforeseen delays, the new addition to the Engineering Building was not quite ready for the start of classes for the first semester. The scheduling of other rooms was out of the question. So, it was decided to have the workmen work overtime, including weekends and holidays.

I saw Heeren, working on Sunday on safety matters. I saw her, for example, picking up and hauling out items of cardboard, etc., used in shipping containers. I have also observed workmen of the construction company, and I am ready to vouch that they are all conscientious and safe workers, as far as I could observe.

I, for one, was really amazed at how well things went at the start of classes. In my opinion, everything went remarkably well. Sure, construction could have been delayed, but at an added cost.

When I come to the office at 6:45 every morning, one of the first things I do is walk around looking for safety hazards. One of the big problems on this campus, in my opinion, is that there isn't any place to move people and activities when a building is slated for renovation. It is very disruptive and aggravating for everyone concerned to play "musical chairs," so to speak, such as engineering was forced to do in moving people and activities out of the Communications Center.

I would, therefore, like to suggest that a relatively large building be constructed on this campus whose space would not be permanently assigned.

Public Safety needs to be present for student safety

I am writing in response to an answer in the (Aug. 31) "On The Spot." A UI senior said she still felt safe on campus after a student was mugged in broad daylight near a dorm. Her reason was she thought UI Public Safety was around. I found it very ironic that on the same day she said she felt safe, I saw at least two Public Safety units at about 4 in the afternoon on I-80, helping with a traffic sting. The next time a student is victimized on campus, he or she can feel better knowing that traffic is moving slower on the interstate!

Don't destroy women's athletics

Many years ago, black citizens of the United States weren't allowed to share a water fountain with white people.

They were not permitted to enter the same restaurants, bathrooms or a multitude of other public places that were designated specifically for white people.

Preposterous, you say. Well, I think I may have discovered a rare instance in which a "separate but equal" mindset may have a bearing.

This month, a decision will be made on the consolidation of the men's and women's Athletics Departments.

Under such a consolidation, both the male and female athletics programs would share the same administration. And, more than likely, the new athletics director would be Bob Bowsby, the current men's athletics director.

Upon hearing the news of this possible merger, I was reminded of days of old: my short-lived career as an "all-star" volleyball player back in Tiny Town, U.S.A. Practices were long and hard, and the coaches were convinced that sports were the end-all, be-all of human existence. For some reason, our head coach was a firm believer that a 3 mile "fun run" a day was highly beneficial to becoming a better volleyball player. It sucked, but I did it. After all, I was an athlete.

Then, about a week before our first game my freshman year, the coaches handed out our uniforms. Long-sleeved, polyester shirts with yellow collars that had literally been owned by our school since the 1970s. And we had to purchase our own maroon shorts. I was fine with it. A small price to pay to participate in Great American High School Sports.

That was until I found out that the football team got new uniforms EVERY SINGLE YEAR. Now, that's a bunch of horse pucky. Here I am slamming game-winning, ace serves over the net, dressed in my '70s paraphernalia, which would have been fine had I been trying out for a part in a remake of Grease. But, serious athletes need to look serious, and I can't say that bathing in my own, polyester-induced sweat made me look all that intimidating to our opponents. But, god forbid the football players don't get new uniforms. Why buy new helmets? To protect the precious brain of the next Einstein from getting bashed in during a routine head-butt? I don't think so.

Here's the kicker: The football coach was also our school's athletics director. Ouch. A tad bit of favoritism by the controller of funding for athletics? NO! Never would a high school such as mine even dream of such an atrocity. But there's the proof. I'm digging, rolling, serving and spiking with polyester permanently affixed to my skin. I'd have to say the athletics director probably couldn't care less, as long as his football players gleamed under the stadium lights.

Now, I'm not saying that retro uniforms would be an issue for the UI's volleyball team, but my fear is still the same. If a director from the men's department takes over the entire sports program, favoritism is definitely possible.

Supporters of the merger say combining the strengths of both departments will give the UI an advantage in the competitive world.

Usually, I don't feel that men and women should be separated. In this case, I support it. Female athletes: No matter what happens, keep striving for equality. And don't EVER let them make you wear polyester.

pus — Puritanism.
It is almost as if the Mayflower just sailed in on the Iowa River. Hordes of high minded do-gooders have focused all of their energies on ridding the town of its sinful elements and wicked vices. The idea here is that as soon as 19-year-olds are banned from local taverns, Iowa City's ills will thenceforth disappear. Join the cause before it's too late!
Well, there you have it. Unfortunately, there are no exotic shoes, $68,000 cars or wild computer gadgets to be found here. But with keeping tabs on the hot trends as difficult as it is, one is often better off skipping the $800 leather apparel and finding a decent pair of socks instead.

Montana blazes subside; firefighters return home

■ At least 300 firefighters have left the state this week, some moving on to battle other fires.

By Shannon Dininny
Associated Press

HELENA, Mont. — Firefighters are leaving Montana by the planeload as officials begin demobilizing from the worst fire season in decades.

At least 300 firefighters have returned to their homes in the southeastern and southwestern United States, and more were expected to head to other fires across the country by the end of the week.

"The pendulum has now swung the other way," said Bill Cowin, incident commander for a fire camp that has been set up in Missoula to handle demobilization.

As of Wednesday, 86 large fires were burning on 1.6 million acres in Arkansas, California, Idaho, Mississippi, Nevada, South Dakota, Montana, New Mexico, Wyoming and Texas, according to the National Interagency Fire Center in Boise, Idaho. Nationwide, fires have burned more than 6.6 million acres this year.

Nearly 10,000 firefighters are in Montana battling the state's 24 largest fires on 645,289 acres. Cooler temperatures and rain have lessened the threat for more fires.

Public land remained closed in parts of Montana's Bitterroot National Forest, where hundreds of homes were evacuated during the summer and 64 were destroyed.

"It's just important people realize that there are areas

Grassley pushes courtroom-access bill

■ The proposal to allow TV, radio and photo coverage of certain cases is given a Senate hearing.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A bill aimed at cracking open federal courtroom doors to television, radio and photo coverage got a Senate subcommittee hearing Wednesday, but a chief sponsor of the proposed legislation acknowledged it faces major hurdles — among them the chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa and the chairman of a subcommittee on courts oversight, said the bill he and Sen. Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y., introduced seeks "to let the sun shine in on our federal courts."

But Edward Becker, a federal appellate judge from Philadelphia, testified that the U.S. Judicial Conference, the federal judiciary's policy-making body, vigorously opposes the bill.

"Our mission is to administer the highest possible quality of justice to each and every litigant," Becker said. "We cannot tolerate even a little bit of unfairness based on media coverage, notwithstanding that society as a whole might in some way benefit, for that would be inconsistent with our mission."

Becker questioned the educational value of having broadcast coverage of federal trials and appellate hearings, contending that the public most often would see only snippets of such proceedings. "The courtroom is just a backdrop," he contended. "What you get out of this is a lot of nothing."

Scientists may have found Alzheimer's trigger

■ A protein that develops muscle and brain cells may also cause the deteriorating disease.

By William McCall
Associated Press

A newly identified protein that may be essential to early development and maintenance of the brain and other cells may also contribute to Alzheimer's disease late in life.

"It's rather poetic, really — what makes you in the first place sort of does you in," said Peter St. George-Hyslop of the University of Toronto, who reported the finding in Thursday's issue of the journal Nature.

The protein, which St. George-Hyslop and fellow Canadian researchers named nicastrin, binds itself to another protein, called presenilin, which is suspected of triggering the formation of deadly plaques, or buildups, in brain cells, causing Alzheimer's.

Nicastrin may also play a role in early fetal development by helping to determine how cells specialize into many forms, such as muscle, skin and brain cells.

Proteins typically have very specific functions, such as acting as enzymes or hormones. Many simply cut other proteins or assemble them into larger structures, and nicastrin may play that role with presenilin, researchers say.

"It is tragic indeed that this process might contribute to Alzheimer's disease in our old age," said Dale Schenk of Elan Pharmaceuticals in San Francisco.

In an accompanying commentary on the Canadian research, Schenk said the study could help lead to a new drug to slow or halt the progression of Alzheimer's.

The DNA in every living cell is coded to create amino acids that are linked together in chains called proteins. Generally, the more complex the protein, the larger the chain.

St. George-Hyslop and his group purified the presenilin protein and found two types of other proteins that bound themselves to presenilin and made it larger. One of the two smaller types of proteins was already known, but the second had not been previously identified.

It was named nicastrin for the Italian village of Nicastro, where a pioneering study on Alzheimer's was done in the 1960s with an extended family suffering from the disease.

After identifying nicastrin, St. George-Hyslop and his team altered the genes of fruit flies, worms and mice to control for the amount of nicastrin produced.

Wildc snare Prince coach

■ Bill Carmody, a Northwestern coach, is being fired off a 5-25

By Rick Associate

EVANSTON, Ill. — Northwestern coach Bill Carmody pulled the plug on himself early Monday morning, firing himself from the job. Carmody, 53, had coached Northwestern for 18 years. "I came out Saturday about five hours back to New Jersey about 1 in the morning and I looked at the clock and it was 5:30 in the morning," Carmody said. "I was in Northwestern's north building. I saw what I saw. I thought were physically," he said. "But they were what their coach have them do. I knew we had that's important Carmody made academics and said that is on always been in."

Wildcats snare Princeton coach

Bill Carmody takes over a Northwestern team coming off a 5-25 season.

By Rick Gano
 Associated Press

EVANSTON, Ill. — Bill Carmody pulled an all-nighter, fired up the VCR and let his early morning viewing help him make one of the biggest decisions of his life.

After 18 years at Princeton, the last four as head coach, it was time to leave and take on one of college basketball's biggest challenges at Northwestern.

"I came out Saturday night for about five hours, took a flight back to New Jersey and got back about 1 in the morning. I took about four game tapes with me and I looked at the team from 2 till 5:30 in the morning," Carmody said Wednesday when he was introduced as Northwestern's new coach.

"What I saw was a bunch of hard-working guys who I thought were overmatched physically," he said.

"But they were trying to do what their coach was trying to have them do. Right there I sort of knew they were the type of guys who will listen and get better. That sort of made my decision right there. I knew we had good kids and that's important."

Carmody must again mix academics and athletics and said that is one reason he's always been intrigued by the

Seeing red on the other side

Former Iowa coach Stephanie Gabbert faces her old team for the first time Friday in Ames.

By Laura Podolak
 The Daily Iowan

A year ago, coach Stephanie Gabbert led the (then) struggling Iowa soccer program into the top three in the Big Ten Conference and into the Top 25 in the country. She was also crowned Big Ten Coach of the Year.

Then, in a surprising turn of events last February, she left the team she had built from scratch to coach the in-state rival team, Iowa State.

Gabbert said she left the team because she thought Iowa didn't have the commitment needed to develop the program further. But she saw that quality at Iowa State, she said.

"I needed to move forward; I felt that the changes Iowa needed to enhance the program weren't coming. It was time to move on," Gabbert said. She also mentioned that Iowa State had a brand new facility and that coaching in the Big 12 would raise the level of competition.

"The Big 12's best teams consistently perform higher than the Big Ten's," she said. The Big 12's top half is better than the Big Ten's, she said.

Because Gabbert was at Iowa for only three years it may seem as though she used the Hawkeyes as a stepping stone. But she says this is not the case.

"I liked the Big Ten, both when I was at Wisconsin and Iowa. I wanted to start and stay there, but this (Iowa State) was a better fit. Iowa State made me feel like they were willing to make the commitment (to advance the program)," Gabbert said.

Gabbert faces not only the high-scoring offense of the undefeated Hawkeyes this Friday, when Iowa takes on Iowa State in Ames, but also the players she left behind. She said she still talks to some of Iowa's team members, but not on a regular basis.

"It is important for them to maintain their identity at Iowa," Gabbert said of her former players. "Some keep in touch — you know, an e-mail here and there — but we haven't had contact since season started. I think they are as eager for this game as anyone else would be," she said.

Any game between Iowa and Iowa State proves to be intense because of the bragging rights given to the prevailing team. This year the added twist of ex-coach versus ex-players brings a new ingredient into the mix: revenge.

"I definitely think that it increases the rivalry. Any time a team plays against a former coach there is the incentive to perform," Gabbert said. "For the next couple of years, there will probably be a little bit more of an edge."

Gabbert admits she might have a bit of an advantage in the match-up because she knows Iowa's strengths and weaknesses. The skills the Iowa players have were partly molded by Gabbert's leadership. But Gabbert said she thinks this will not be the deciding factor in the game.

A soccer game between Iowa and Iowa State is always aggressive and physical, said Gabbert, and is no different from Iowa-Iowa State games in any sport. "There will be a lot of battling back and forth for the entire 90 minutes or more. It will definitely be a great match-up; the teams are very even," Gabbert said. "I think that it should be a fun game to watch. We'll just have to wait and see the end result."

Serena Williams gone from U.S. Open

Lindsay Davenport routed Williams to advance to the semifinals.

By Steve Wilstein
 Associated Press

NEW YORK — Serena Williams fractured her racket on the court as her game fell apart, and Lindsay Davenport emerged from the shadows as a forgotten former champion to a berth in the U.S. Open semifinals.

Williams, the defending champion who was so eager to meet her sister, Venus, in the final, succumbed to her own impatience and Davenport's deep, sizzling groundstrokes in a 6-4, 6-2 rout Wednesday night that took everyone by surprise.

Everyone except Davenport. The 1998 champion never fell for all the hype over a Williams sisters final, never worried about her record against Serena — five straight losses over the past three years.

"That's the best she ever played against me," Williams said. "She should take that attitude toward everyone."

Three of their matches were close three-setters, including their semifinal meeting at the U.S. Open last year, and Davenport knew that she could beat Williams if she could hold serve, keep the pressure on her, and pin her to the baseline.

That's exactly what Davenport did, and Williams finally cracked at 4-4 in the first set, slapping forehands long on the final two shots of her service game and screaming in frustration as she was broken.

Williams rapped her racket on the court, but not nearly as hard as she did in the next game when she netted a backhand for a second set point. The racket frame broke this time, leading to an automatic code violation for racket abuse, and, for all practical purposes her game was undone, too.

Another backhand error by Williams gave Davenport the set, and Davenport went on to win six straight games and take a 4-0 lead in the second set as Williams lost control of her shots. It wasn't a case of Williams simply missing close shots. She was too excited, too caught up in trying to blow Davenport away with power, and she never found a backup plan.

Williams never quit, and saved five match points to hold serve to 5-2, but that was her last stand. Never broken in the match, Davenport served it out in the next game.

Williams said she and Venus will be in a Grand Slam final together some day. "It's gonna happen," she said. "Unfortunately, I didn't hold up my end this year. No one wants to see an all-Williams final. Everyone doesn't really like us. Not everyone can like us. It's just a part of life. Not everyone likes Michael Jordan."

"Texans" the name for Houston NFL team

As expected, the expansion NFL team went back to its roots when finding a nickname.

By Michael A. Lutz
 Associated Press

HOUSTON — A not-too-well-kept secret was revealed Wednesday when Houston owner Bob McNair announced the nickname of the NFL's 32nd franchise will be the Texans.

The name won out over the Stallions and the Apollos.

"Are you ready for some football?" McNair shouted to a downtown crowd estimated at 16,000, which turned out to learn the team's name, logo and colors.

The colors for the team that will begin play in 2002 will be battle red, steel blue and liberty white with a bull's head logo that includes a Texas Lone Star on one side.

"We're so excited about the return of the NFL to Houston," McNair said. "We don't want to be stereotyped as cowboys. We are proud of our past, but we don't want to be bound by it."

Looking out over a stretch of downtown Texas Avenue that was turned into a football field, complete with goal posts, NFL commissioner Paul Tagliabue revealed the team name and logo on a large screen.

"With teamwork you can achieve the impossible," Tagliabue said. "Not many years ago, you thought it's not going to happen, but it did happen and you can be proud of yourselves. You made it happen."

McNair paid $700 million for the franchise in a lengthy battle with Los Angeles, a favored with the year 2002 and a question mark attached.

"I rooted for the Oilers and now I'll be rooting for the Texans," Lockeridge said. "It doesn't matter what they're called. I'll root for them."

The team labeled the day "The Big Return," with the Texans replacing the Houston Oilers, who left for Tennessee after the 1996 season.

"We've developed a name and logo that fans throughout the area and around the country and world will embrace for years to come," McNair said. "It is a logo worthy of the name and the brand of football I expect our team to play."

"The name and logo embody the pride, strength, independence, courage and achievement that make the people of Houston and our area special."

Earlier, former NFL kicker Raul Allegre staged a kickoff in the Astrodome to former players from Texas Southern, the University of Houston and Rice University to symbolically get the day of celebration started.

McNair said the footballs would be delivered to the mayors in Austin, San Antonio and Beaumont as part of the nickname announcement in those cities.

CROSS COUNTRY SEASON PREVIEW

Injuries nag Iowa runners

Larry Wiecezorek says a lot of young runners will get opportunities to race this season.

By Julie Matolo
 The Daily Iowan

Stetson Steele set the standard for the Iowa men's cross country team. The Hawkeyes lost their top distance runner, who qualified for the U.S. Olympic trials earlier this summer.

"Stetson helped immeasurably last year during track. Not only did he have a great year himself, but I think he showed Iowa runners and me that he was arguably the best distance runner in the Big Ten," said head coach Larry Wiecezorek. "I think he showed the Iowa runners in our program that there was no magic at some of these other schools. The secret is, there is no secret and that it is just hard work."

This team is working hard to become national leaders. They are hoping to repeat the accomplishments of the 1998 season when they qualified for the NCAA National Championships, placing 21st.

The opportunity begins Saturday, in the first meet of the season, held at Purdue. The men's and women's cross country teams will travel and compete in the Purdue Invitational.

"At Purdue it is a tough, hilly course," said Wiecezorek. "It will be run against Arizona and Butler — they are top-25 teams. I know what we can do. If we focus on the first meet and really emphasize running in a pack and having predetermined goals we want for ourselves, then we will see where that gets us running against top-25 teams."

Along with qualifying for the NCAA Nationals, season goals include a top five finish in the Big Ten and for the Hawkeyes to have a national presence. Last season, the Hawkeyes finished ninth at the Big Ten Championships and ended the season by placing sixth at the NCAA Midwest Regionals. Seniors Paul Sarris and Nick Nordheim placed 18th and 21st, respectively.

Two of Iowa's top runners are struggling with injuries: Sarris and Nordheim. Nordheim, an All-Regional runner, will redshirt due to a stress fracture in his heel, and Sarris will join late in the season, also due to injuries.

"Sarris is a key guy for us," said Wiecezorek. "He has been to the NCAA championships. He is an All-Regional runner." Also returning this year are many runners who recorded their best times or season bests last year, including Bobby Atkins and Adam Thomas.

Newcomers include Chris Jensen, Ben Schutman and Dan Trainor. Jensen and Schutman are both top distance runners from the state of Iowa.

This season's team shows promise and a desire to step up to the national elite. Performing well this season has added incentive because NCAA Nationals will be held in the state of Iowa.

Nationals will be held on Nov. 20 in Cedar Falls. "I am excited about this season," Wiecezorek said. "So from a coaching standpoint, it is kind of like a blank page, and this is fun when starting out and seeing how they are going to fill those pages."

nicestrin may play that with presenilin, researchers say.

It is tragic indeed that this excess might contribute to Alzheimer's disease in our old," said Dale Schenk of Elan Pharmaceuticals in San Fran-an accompanying commentary on the Canadian research, Schenk said the study could help lead to a new drug to slow or halt the progression of Alzheimer's.

The DNA in every living cell is coded to create amino acids that are linked together in chains called proteins. Generally, the more complex a protein, the larger the protein.

George-Hyslop and his team purified the presenilin protein and found two types of presenilins that bound themselves to presenilin and made it larger. One of the two larger types of proteins was already known, but the second one had not been previously identified.

It was named nicastrin for the Italian village of Nicasstrino where a pioneering study of Alzheimer's was done in the 1960s with an extended family suffering from the disease.

After identifying nicastrin, George-Hyslop and his team altered the genes of fruit flies, worms and mice to control for the amount of nicastrin produced.

Aikman out of Sunday's game against Arizona

■ Randall Cunningham will start Sunday in place of the injured Troy Aikman.

By Stephen Hawkins
 Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — Had the decision been left solely to him, Dallas quarterback Troy Aikman would play in Sunday's game at Arizona. Cowboys owner Jerry Jones decided otherwise.

Jones said Wednesday that the decision to hold Aikman out after his ninth concussion was made Wednesday after three days of medical evaluations from the team's own training staff and outside physicians.

"It's not easy, but look at it logically, it's probably the right decision, the smart decision," Aikman said. "It's just difficult not to go out to play when you feel like you can play."

Aikman admitted he was still having headaches from the concussion he suffered in the season-opening 41-14 loss to Philadelphia. He still felt he could have practiced with the team and been ready to play against the Cardinals.

Jones and Aikman both said there was no timetable set for the quarterback's return.

"I'm hoping it's just a one-week thing and I'll be back after that," Aikman said.

Randall Cunningham, who the Cowboys acquired as a free agent during the offseason, will start his first game since last October. After an All-Pro season in 1998 for Minnesota, Cunningham started the first six games before losing his job to Jeff George and not playing again during the regular season.

Rookie Clint Stoerner was signed from the Cowboys' practice squad to serve as Cunningham's backup.

Aikman missed two games last season after suffering two concussions in an eight-day period. After a concussion against Indianapolis, he returned the following week against Minnesota, only to suffer another one.

"That is why there is some real caution right now," Aikman said. "If I were to have another one, it's the medical opinion I'd be out 4-6 weeks minimum."

Jones said while the decision was ultimately his to make, he made it only after getting the medical evaluations and having a thorough conversation with Aikman.

"This is an awkward thing for Troy to feel like he is able to play. He wants to play even with the headaches and feels he can perform," Jones said. "But no doubt this is the best thing for him individually, and the best thing for the team."

African relay team pays own way to Sydney

■ The Sierra Leone relay team attempts to qualify for the 2000 Olympics.

By Bert Rosenthal
Associated Press

BRISBANE, Australia — With little money and little time, the 400-meter relay team from strife-torn Sierra Leone took a financial gamble for a chance to run at the Olympics.

The foursome — Francis Keita, Alia Kamara, Joslyn Thomas and Sanusi Turay — paid their way from their training base in London to Australia, looking to meet the qualifying time of 40.00 seconds for the games.

They came close last week, running 40.2 seconds in Adelaide, then ran 40.37 in a meet at Nudgee College Sunday. The team from the West African nation will try again Friday in the Brisbane 2000 International at QEII Stadium.

If unsuccessful again, they'll give it another shot Sunday at a meet at Runaway Bay Super Sports Center, and finally at a last-chance meet in Sydney next week.

"We paid our way because we think we can make the Olympic final," Keita, who injured a side muscle during Sunday's race, said Wednesday. "Last Olympics, we made the semifinals, just missing the final by one place."

The runners are trying to bolster an Olympic team that right now features only two athletes and seven officials.

"The Olympics are about athletes, not officials," Turay said.

The relay team's tale is far from uncommon in struggling African nations such as Sierra Leone, which has been wracked by a nine-year civil war.

World heptathlon champion Eunice Barber is a native of Sierra Leone but now competes for France.

"She experienced the same problems we are going through now with our officials," Turay said. "That was her reason for not wanting to compete for Sierra Leone anymore."

The relay team's quest and plight have intrigued Australians, some of whom have come forth to help.

One is Dennis Ried, who works for a dump truck company. He heard their story on TV and called the station to find a way to get in touch with the runners.

He gave them $500 and paid for a rented car. He also found a trainer and arranged for a shoe company to provide them with running gear.

"Their government is not helping them out as much as they should," Ried said. "Here, some people are helping them over the hurdles so they can do their job."

Further assistance has come from a hotel owner who is giving the runners free accommodations and meals.

More than 20 others offered free room and board, including Nudgee College, Keita said.

"We have received more than 100 calls for help with everything," he said.

Diamondbacks continue losing skid

ATLANTA (AP) — Chipper Jones had two run-scoring singles, and Kevin Millwood gave up four hits in eight innings to lead the Atlanta Braves past the slumping Arizona Diamondbacks, 7-1.

Atlanta, which has won three of four, increased its NL East lead to two games over the second-place New York Mets, who lost 11-8 at Cincinnati.

Arizona, which entered Wednesday six games behind NL West-leading San Francisco, has lost four of five. Armando Reynoso (10-10) lost his third straight start and dropped to 0-9 against the Braves, giving up three runs and four hits in seven innings.

The crowd of 25,529 was the smallest at Turner Field, which opened in 1997.

Fred Jewell/Associated Press
Texas' Rafael Palmeiro tosses his bat after striking out Wednesday against Chicago.

Athletics 6, Red Sox 4

BOSTON — Mike Mulder, struggling through a tough rookie season, pitched six strong innings, and slumping Matt Stairs homered as the Oakland Athletics beat the Boston Red Sox, 6-4, Wednesday night.

Oakland won for the fourth time in five games and moved 1½ games behind AL West leader Seattle, which lost to Toronto 7-3.

The A's and Red Sox trail AL wild card leader Cleveland by three games.

Blue Jays 7, Mariners 3

TORONTO — Carlos Delgado hit a three-run double, and Joey Hamilton pitched seven effective innings as the Toronto Blue Jays beat the Seattle Mariners, 7-3, Wednesday night to stop a four-game losing streak.

Angels 1, Tigers 0

DETROIT — Scott Schoeneweis shut out Detroit on two singles for eight innings and the Anaheim Angels stopped a season-high six-game losing streak, defeating the Tigers, 1-0, Wednesday night.

Cubs 8, Rockies 5

DENVER — Sammy Sosa had seen enough of the Chicago Cubs' hitting slump.

Sosa hit his major league-leading 46th home run and the Cubs got a tiebreaking triple in the 11th inning from Mark Grace to beat the Colorado Rockies, 8-5, Wednesday and stop a six-game losing streak.

"We came through in some situations today. We haven't been picking up a lot lately," Sosa said. "The Rockies have been playing well for two days, but we hadn't been scoring many runs the last week."

Reds 11, Mets 8

CINCINNATI — Benito Santiago was thinking sacrifice fly and hit a grand slam. John Franco was second-guessing himself for giving Santiago the chance.

"I was just trying to hit a fly ball to the outfield," Santiago said. "I was trying for one and I got four."

Santiago hit a go-ahead slam off Armando Benitez as the Cincinnati Reds rallied with a six-run eighth inning Wednesday to beat the New York Mets, 11-8.

Cardinal disappears after contract talks

■ Simeon Rice vanishes after seemingly agreeing to a contract.

Associated Press

TEMPE, Ariz. — Holdout defensive end Simeon Rice showed up unannounced at the Arizona Cardinals' practice facility Wednesday, agreed to a $4.25 million, one-year tender offer, took a physical and then disappeared without consummating the deal.

The vanishing act drew a heated reaction from general manager Bob Ferguson.

"This happens too much in this business, and I'm tired of it," Ferguson said. "We can't deal with these guys with kid gloves all the time, and there comes a time when you've got to draw the line."

"This guy is a great football player who has a contract on the table that is one of the top five in the league, because that's the way it has to be with a franchise designation. That's there. I don't know what else has to be done."

Ferguson acknowledged telling Rice in no uncertain terms about his obligation to the team, but denied causing Rice to change his mind.

Rice, a possible antidote to Arizona's dismal pass rush, spoke with Ferguson for about five minutes in the morning. His visit was unexpected, so the team had to scramble to line up a doctor for the physical.

Rice rode to and from the physical with an assistant trainer, but instead of returning to Ferguson's office after they arrived back at the team headquarters, he got into his car and drove away.

Before the physical, Rice declined to speak with reporters.

Asked if he had signed, he glowered and shot back, "No."

Players apprehensive about Princeton system

Northwestern job. And now he'll be able to give athletic scholarships.

But winning, as he did often at Princeton where he was 92-25 in four years after replacing Pete Carril, won't be easy.

Instead of Dartmouth and Cornell, he'll be going against Michigan State and Indiana.

Northwestern was 5-25 last season, didn't win a game in the Big Ten and now must adjust to a new coach following the abrupt resignation of Kevin O'Neill, who left last week to become an assistant with the New York Knicks.

"I come in with my eyes open. I know it's going to be a rough situation," Carmody, 48, said.

Under Carmody, the Tigers went to the postseason each year. Princeton made the NCAA tournament after going undefeated in Ivy League play his first two seasons, and advanced to the second round in 1998.

The Tigers went to the NIT the past two years.

Carmody's best season was 1997-98, when the Tigers went 27-2 and were ranked as high as No. 8 during the regular season.

"You look at 92-25 and it doesn't matter if that's CYO or YMCA or major college basketball, that stands out and gets your attention," Northwestern Athletic Director Rick Taylor said.

"There have been some who have said, 'Well it's the Ivy league.' But it's not all Ivy League. Look at his record against Division I scholarship teams (33-17)."

There is an impression that Princeton still wins by holding the ball with a deliberate style that is low scoring and frustrating for defenses.

But Carmody says his teams play a style that is suited to their talent, not a system. He quickly moved to convince some of Northwestern's players.

"I talked to Tavaras Hardy and I knew he was apprehensive. I think most of the team members are apprehensive about Princeton basketball. What does that mean? It scares a lot of guys," Carmody said.

"I tried to tell them I'm not trying to bring a Princeton system here and I'm not trying to make Northwestern the Princeton of the Big Ten.

"The offense is very free and open and flowing. I showed some of the players a tape from Princeton. We're not holding the ball, that's a perception. It's not a dictatorship. The players will tell you how to play. It's basketball. Guard your man, make shots and let's go."

Hardy was convinced he could learn whatever system the new coach decides to use.

"I don't know much about the Princeton system other than what I heard and I read," Hardy said. "They won games and that's what we are trying to do. We have smart players. We're not Ivy Leaguers but Northwestern is not an easy school to get into. Our players are very capable of learning."

Martin euphoric after win

18-year-old Elena Dementieva, who upset No. 10 Anke Huber 6-1, 3-6, 6-3, in the semifinals.

"She plays it very simple, but she doesn't make a lot of stupid errors," Huber said.

"She already has the experience she needs to play the big matches. She's already beaten good players. Like I said, she plays smart and smile, maybe not like the other 18-year-olds who are just hitting the balls."

Todd Martin awoke at the crack of noon, the roars of the loudest little crowd still ringing in his head.

Martin put on the greatest show of this year's U.S. Open with a comeback from two sets down against Carlos Moya, and hardly anyone saw it — unless they watched televised replays of his delightfully uninhibited victory lap.

"It was a real drunk sensation," Martin said when he returned Wednesday for practice after going to sleep at about 4:30 a.m. "It's a matter of losing your inhibitions about letting people see what's inside of you."

"You know, it doesn't matter who sees it. It matters what you get out of the experience. What the Nielsen ratings were on the coverage last night is not going to affect how good I felt about it."

For the second straight year, Martin came up with five-set magic, and this time he celebrated as if he had just won the title instead of merely reaching the quarterfinals.

With mother and sister ill, Agassi says he will miss Olympics

■ The defending gold medalist withdrew his name from Olympic competition Wednesday.

By Steve Wilstein
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Defending gold medalist Andre Agassi pulled out of the Sydney Olympics on Wednesday because of concern for his mother and sister, who are fighting breast cancer. Agassi, who has said all year the Olympics are among his top priorities, cited "personal reasons" for quitting the team a little more than a week before the opening ceremony.

"As a consequence of a family medical situation, I will not be able to participate in the upcoming Sydney Olympics," Agassi said in a statement released by the U.S. Tennis Association. "My time and attention should be with my family during this period."

USTA President Judy Levering said, "Our thoughts and prayers are with Andre during this very difficult time. We wish him and his family all the best, and look forward to having him return to tennis when he is ready."

No replacement was immediately announced. Agassi's spot would be offered first to the players who previously turned down an invitation, Wimbledon champion Pete Sampras and Jan-Michael Gambill. If they decline, the next highest ranking player who would be asked to join the team is Chris Woodruff.

The 30-year-old Agassi has had a difficult summer. As defending U.S. Open champion, he lost in the second round

He also lost in the second round at the French Open, where he was defending champion. At Wimbledon, he lost to Patrick Rafter in the semifinals, then injured his back in a traffic accident after returning to the United States.

Gustavo Kuerten, who was seeded No. 2 behind Agassi at the U.S. Open and lost in the first round, also announced he was quitting Brazil's Olympic team following a dispute over whose uniform he would wear at the Sydney Games.

Brazil's Olympic committee insisted Kuerten wear a uniform provided by the team's sponsor — Brazilian sportswear manufacturer Olympikus. But the player's sponsor, Italian sportswear manufacturer Diadora, insisted Kuerten use its uniform at the games.

Negotiations reportedly broke down after Diadora agreed to let Kuerten play in another uniform but refused to let him sport the Olympikus trademark.

"I'm very sad to have to make this decision. It was my dream to play in the Olympics and defend Brazil, but I cannot dishonor my sponsor, who supported me since the beginning of my career and believed in me when no one knew who I was," Kuerten was quoted by O Globo newspaper.

Although Brazil's soccer team and track and field athletes are allowed to wear uniforms provided by separate sponsors, the Brazilian Olympic Committee refused to make an exception for Kuerten, known here as Guga.

"I am revolted and indignant that Guga will not go to the Olympics because of pressure from a uniform supplier," Brazilian Olympic Committee President Carlos Arthur said.

Ticket sales struggling for Saturday's game

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Iowa officials are scrambling to fill the seats at Kinnick Stadium for the Hawkeyes' home-opener Saturday against Western Michigan.

The athletic department is offering a family package that includes four tickets for a total of $40. Those who buy the package will sit in either the north or south bleachers and can get four free cokes and four free hot dogs.

Iowa ticket manager David Sandstrum said Tuesday that his goal is to have at least 50,000 seats filled.

The last time Iowa had fewer than 50,000 people at a home game was in 1978, when 49,120 fans saw Michigan beat the Hawkeyes 34-0.

Kinnick Stadium's seating capacity is 70,397. It was 60,000 in 1978.

Iowa's ticket sales dropped last season when the team slumped to a 1-10 record. The average home attendance last year was 63,464 compared to 88,330 in 1998.

Meanwhile, there are about 400 single-game and standing room-only tickets left for the Sept. 16 game against Iowa State at Kinnick Stadium.

Princeton hires John Thompson III as coach

PRINCETON, N.J. — John Thompson III was hired as coach of Princeton on Wednesday, following the career path of his father, who built Georgetown into a basketball power.

The appointment came on the same day Bill Carmody left the Ivy League school to become coach of Northwestern of the Big Ten.

This will be the first head coaching job for the 34-year-old Thompson. He has been an assistant coach the past five years at Princeton under Pete Carril and Carmody.

"He's got a challenge," Thompson said Wednesday during the "The John Thompson Show," his WTEM sports radio talk program in Washington. "I'm proud as a father."

Princeton scheduled a news conference for Thursday to introduce the younger Thompson.

Thompson has three starters returning from a team that had a 19-11 record last season, losing in the first round of the NIT to Penn State.

Thompson, a former Princeton player, graduated in 1988. A forward, Thompson was co-captain in his senior year and shared the team's most valuable player award as the Tigers went 17-9.

Nebraska-Notre Dame tickets are in demand

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — When Notre Dame coach Bob Davie sat down with reporters to talk about playing the top-ranked Cornhuskers, the first words from his lips were the same as those being asked by fans.

"Do you guys have any extra tickets?" he joked.

Ticket prices were nothing to laugh at, though. Tickets for Saturday's game were selling on eBay Wednesday for more than $200 each. Face value of the tickets are $36.

Alumni said they've heard of tickets selling for more than $1,000 each.

"It's ludicrous," said Chuck Lennon, the executive director of Notre Dame's alumni association.

People were advertising in the newspaper everything from a trade for tickets to next year's Notre Dame-Nebraska game in Lincoln to a weekend of duck hunting on the Platte River for tickets.

Pistons, Cleaves agree to three-year deal

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Mateen Cleaves rolled up his sleeves, flashed his trademark smile and put pen to paper. He fulfilled a lifelong dream Wednesday — he became a Detroit Piston.

The first-round draft pick, who led Michigan State to the NCAA title last spring, signed a three-year, $4.1 million contract at an afternoon news conference.

"This makes it official. I'm a Piston. It's a dream come true," Cleaves said.

Detroit selected the Flint native with the 14th pick of this year's draft.

horoscopes

Thursday, September 7, 2000 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get busy. If you don't reach your deadline, you will face your boss' fury. You can earn a great deal of praise if you finish on time and put in a little extra detail.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You will work well with other people's money. Offer to help them with investments, or look into a career involving banking, investments or insurance.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Get busy making improvements to your living quarters. Confront your lover with the problems that plague your relationship. Try to make special plans for two to rekindle your love.
CANCER (June 21-July 22): Secret information will be shocking. Try not to show alarm — stay calm and be as objective as possible. You may want to get confirmation before you take action.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Get out and party. You need to let your free spirit lead you down new avenues. You'll be competitive, challenging and captivating.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You'll have to watch out. Someone you love will be ready to argue that black is white. You can't allow yourself to be dragged into debates that are senseless, non-productive and hurtful. It is best to take your frustration out at the gym.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You need to spend more time with old friends. You can discuss your troubles and gain comfort in knowing that you have people you can rely on.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can push yourself at work, but remember that the more you do, the more you will be given. Added responsibility is fine; however, you need to be rewarded for your efforts.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You will be ready to take on the world. Be careful you don't overdo it. Weight gain will be due to overindulgence. Your tendency to exaggerate will cause problems with your mate.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Difficulties with authority figures or while traveling could lead to delays. Let others know how you feel about them. Be precise and don't leave any room for misinterpretation.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): In-laws or relatives will cause friction today. Do not discuss your personal problems. Minor accidents and arguments will develop if you aren't cautious.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You appear to be confused emotionally. New interests are occupying your time. It's difficult to start a relationship if the one you've been in isn't entirely finished. Make up your mind before you proceed.

The Ledge

Things you should know before the first home football game

- They really don't let you bring alcohol into Kinnick — or so they say
- The quarterback is the one who tries to throw the ball
- Concession stand food tastes better after tailgating
- If you wanna actually see the game, watch it on TV
- A touchdown is worth six points
- No one ever sits at the game
- The Hawkeyes are the team in black and gold
- Make sure you have your student ID ready at the gate
- No one in the stands wants to hear your football war stories
- It's not whether we win or lose, but how you party before and after the game

Get Real

Character 1: Here once grew a beautiful and bountiful garden.
 Character 2: ...but one day a man planted a bush in this garden. He thought the bush would benefit all the flowers... he was wrong.
 Character 3: The bush stole all of the garden's nutrients and drained it of all its rainwater. The once beautiful garden fell upon hard times.
 Character 4: Well, that's the end of the story, children. Now, you're all bright kids. I'll let you figure out the moral.

Riverside celebrates 20th year

Paula Grady, left, and Marcia Hughes rehearse Sweet and Hot at the Riverside Theatre Tuesday. Sweet and Hot will open Friday at 8 p.m.

After some lean years in the beginning, Riverside is now an acclaimed regional theater.

By Aaron McAdams
The Daily Iowan

Now in its 20th year, an Iowa City tradition heads into another season with a nostalgic eye on the past.

Riverside Theatre, founded in 1981 by Ron Clark, Jody Hovland and Bruce Wheaton, made an inauspicious debut in January 1982 with the two-person drama The Exercise. A budget of $100 yielded a two-week run and marked the fruition of a labor of love for the theater's three founders.

Clark, now a co-artistic director for the theater, said Riverside arose from both love for the theater and for the Iowa City area. "Jody and I were both alums of the UI theater department, and we found ourselves back in Iowa City with no place to work, nothing to do and with a deep attachment to the community. We both wanted to stay here, so we put down roots and said, 'Let's try this. Let's start a company.'"

So Clark and Hovland, the theater's other co-artistic director, added Wheaton to the mix and did just that.

Twenty years later, Riverside Theatre is a cultural staple in Iowa City. The company has called 213 N. Gilbert St. home since 1991, when it turned a beer-distribution warehouse into a 118-seat theater with a proscenium stage.

"The cozy confines are essential for achieving Riverside's desired theatrical effect, Clark said.

"Our space provides what we call 'undeniable theater,'" he said. "We like to think of it as theater that is very intimate. Theater that is, in a very positive way, in your face. You have a strong community sense when you're in that audience."

Since its debut with The Exercise in 1982, Riverside Theatre has staged a number of notable performances.

In 1991, following the Nov. 1 shootings on the UI campus that killed five members of the university community and paralyzed a UI student, Riverside commissioned Gunplay by Kansas City-based playwright Paul Higgins.

And June featured the Riverside Theatre Shakespeare Festival and a production of Twelfth Night on the recently constructed outdoor Festival Stage in Lower City Park.

Clark insists that Riverside's path to success was less well-marked than it might appear.

"It's been more naiveté than deep business wisdom, just not knowing what we couldn't do and assuming we could do almost anything. Also, the extraordinary community itself that has given us permission to try different theatrical forms, do exciting, unusual work and has given us incredible support over the 20 years," he said.

And that same community is in for another diverse slate of theater in 2000. Riverside's 20th anniversary season will begin Friday with the musical revue Sweet and Hot: The Songs of Harold Arlen. Next on stage will be Moliere's classic comedy Tartuffe, followed by the 1998 Tony-winner Art.

Other productions for the season will include Margaret Edson's Pulitzer Prize-winning Wit, Peter Shaffer's Equus and Shakespeare's As You Like It.

"That this little theater company, in this little town in the middle of the cornfields is doing Art and Wit is so incredible," said regular theater-goer Judith Hurlig. "It's bringing innovative and challenging theater to this community practically straight from New York."

Kathy Weingeist, another regular Riverside Theatre patron, is equally optimistic about the 2000 season.

"It's just amazing to me the level of acting they have at the theater. I can't think of a single instance that I've gone that I've been disappointed. I saw Equus in New York, and it was spell-binding. I think that would translate really well to a small, intimate stage."

Twenty years later, Clark can still remember the jitters he felt before the first-ever Riverside Theatre production.

"I remember waiting backstage to make my entrance in that first show and thinking, 'What's this going to turn out to be?'"

He now knows the answer. Riverside Theatre is an unquestionable success story.

Water-inspired jewelry leaks into Iowa City

A brooch by Diana Vincent will be on display as part of Water at M C Ginsberg Objects of Art.

This necklace by Jane Bohan is made of precious stones and represents the artist's interpretation of the word "water."

Local exhibit shows jewelry as original works of art.

By Jennifer Aistrop
The Daily Iowan

A high-quality piece of art can take years to complete. If the artist is lucky, her or his piece will be presented in museums and at showings, eventually landing in the hands of a wealthy buyer.

Mark Ginsberg has a different approach to art: He prefers it to be worn on one's body.

A new collection of ornamental art, Water, will fill MC Ginsberg Objects of Art, 110 E. Washington St., Friday. The exhibit of jewelry is the collaborated work of 35 national artists from the American Jewelry Design Council.

The exhibit is the fifth design project the council has put on since its founding in 1990. Each exhibit has a theme for which artists create works using their own interpretations.

This year the exhibit's theme is special, Ginsberg said. It focuses on the versatility of water and its many forms, he said. Though no piece is actually made of water, the artists of the council used the scientific idea of water to challenge themselves to create original pieces of jewelry, Ginsberg said.

The idea of turning science into art may not seem like a bona fide trade to some, but Ginsberg explained that the intent of such a trade is "to find a different use for products or materials that are not so unusual."

As functional art, jewelry can be worn, while paintings and sculptures can only be admired.

Ginsberg said this belief has been his driving force in the jewelry industry for 15 years. In 1985, he opened his first business, MC Ginsberg Jewelry. "Jewelry" was dropped from the title in two years later when Ginsberg decided that the word strongly limited what he was trying to display in his establishment, he said.

Ginsberg said he feels that, too often, customers walk into a jewelry store expecting to see mass-produced engagement rings and wedding bands. However, he said, the artists who have contributed to the exhibit have labored intensively to create a single item. Though the pieces in the show are not for sale, the exhibit gives Iowa City residents a chance to enjoy jewelry as more than ornamentation.

The opening will take place in conjunction with a student workshop led by professional jewelry designer Paul Klecka Saturday from 10:30 a.m.-noon with the UI Department of Metal Arts.

The Idiots is the second film released under the Dogme 95 manifesto initiated by Thomas Vinterberg and Lars von Trier. The general idea of the movement is to abandon all conventions that fill popular cinema (genre, artificial lighting, and superficial action like violence) in favor of a more "natural" form of moviemaking. For example, the camera must always be handheld — never on a tripod — and shooting must be done on location.

The Idiots follows a group of people living in a small villa in a Danish town. They have adopted a manifesto of their own — a desire to become more in touch with their "inner idiots." These "spazzers" (which is what they call themselves) go to public places, like swimming pools and restaurants, while pretending to be mentally retarded in order to mock society and amuse themselves.

Von Trier's main goal might have been social criticism, but it is difficult to discern his position on the matter or he has one at all. This strictly observational style left me stranded, and unable to find any kind of moral compass.

Shot completely on digital video and fashioned to imitate many of the "reality TV" shows populating the airwaves of Europe and America, the style has its downfall too — the shaky camerawork induces motion sickness.

Von Trier seems particularly obsessed with nudity, especially of males. At one point, the "spazzers" have an orgy in the middle of the house, a scene that verges on being pornographic. Fortunately, the naughty bits have been censored for the safety of American audiences with black, moving rectangles.

It seems that in The Idiots, von Trier's ultimate goal is to swing between the humorous and the disturbing, making the audience uncomfortable with their own emotions. There are brief moments when the film accomplishes this, but there are some scenes that are so offensive that they are practically unwatchable. However, the film does question the validity of one's opinions and ethics toward handicapped persons.

The Idiots is offensive, and it is disturbing. It seeks to make you laugh. It struggles to shock you. It is a film that is hard to make sense of. For this reason, despite its unpleasant aspects, you should see this film at least once and form your own opinions about it.

After brewing for three years, the Twilight Singers have come out with a set of soothing, ethereal compositions in its first release, Twilight as Played by the Twilight Singers. The group's unique style of soulful electronic soft rock is a result of the combined efforts of American rocker Greg Dulli and British ambient duo Fila Brazillia. The album was originally inspired by solo work done by Dulli, branching away from his regular band, the Afghan Wigs.

Twilight's sound incorporates dynamic, harmonic vocals and penetrating acoustics with a euphonious electronic backdrop. The lyrical themes are enticing, especially in "Verti-Marte," which features mysterious clips of a female voice woven into the melody. The overall effect of the album is a serene, strong reverberating record of thoughts and sounds.

■ The possibility of post-game vandalism has police on watch and glass companies prepared.

By Tony Robinson
 The Daily Iowan

With the first home ball game Saturday at local glass companies say the increase in business to vandalism.

Game-day vandalism has been known to show up in homes, businesses and vehicles.

"A couple of years ago, we had a window broken Saturday night game," said Dan the assistant manager Paglia's Pizza, Bloomington St. "He isn't positive the game excitement the shattered window he did say it is the time it has taken."

Iowa City Police R. J. Winkleheiser is higher police for vandalism after ball game and the police are preparing possible outbreaks and vandalism game days this season said the department scheduling additional officers to patrol the town area.

"If Iowa wins, people happy and go down celebrate; if they lose people still go down and drown their sorrow said.

"At the end of the night, we find that end up doing things wouldn't normally urinating on fountains involved in arguing and fighting, which leads to broken windows he said.
