UISG passes fee-increase resolution

■ The increase could up any tuition boost the Board of Regents may pass.

By Cassie Huisman
The Daily Iowan

The UI Student Government passed a resolution Monday night in support of additional computer fees recently suggested by UI President Mary Sue Coleman that would bring the proposed 2001-02 tuition increase of 9.3 percent to 9.9 percent if approved by the state of Iowa Board of Regents.

The entire resolution supporting the tuition and fees increase was passed by a strong majority with an amendment ensuring the university would take responsibility for its actions and inform students of its decisions. "I know there is a perception that we're rolling over and accepting it, but after researching it, it is a completely legitimate increase," UISG President Andy Stoll said.

The UI will propose this when the regents meet here Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

The increase would be from a proposed $110 fee to a $135 fee, which would be in addition to the already stated increase recommended Sept. 6 by the board office to the regents.

According to the current proposal, the board has recommended only a $6 increase in computer fees for the UI, while ISU will increase by $36 and UNI will increase by $12.

After including the additional computer fees, the 9.9

I.C. School Board elections held today

■ Monday's meeting, the last chance for formal discussion before the election, brought up transportation issues.

By Vanessa Miller
The Daily Iowan

Many passionate parents voiced concern for the safety of their children during Monday night's Iowa City Community School District Board of Directors meeting — the final meeting with the board's current membership.

Voters in today's School Board elections will determine who will take over two vacancies. Pete Wallace is up for re-election, but Janet Leff and Elizabeth Atwood are also looking to fill the two slots.

The issue of transportation between the Golfview neighborhood and Penn Elementary School (North Liberty) was a topic of debate at Monday's meeting, which was held at the Iowa City Community School District board office, 509 S. Dubuque St. Currently, the school district does not provide transportation for children who attend the school.

At the beginning of the school year, Penn administrators sent home a map that suggested what they deemed as the safest and most efficient route for children to walk to and from school.

Parents have recently taken up a carpooling system, claiming that the chosen path is unsafe and hazardous due to flooding, uncleared brush and snow drifts.

"The water was waist deep on my 4-foot, 8-inch son," she said. "The path is overgrown with bushes and tall grasses, and it is not a safe route for these kids to walk. Raise my taxes. Give these kids a bus," said Denise Robe, the mother of a student who has taken the suggested path to school.

Molly Oaks, a mother of another Penn student who lives in the Golfview area, stood up to plead her case to the board.

"I have an 8-year-old son who tells me, 'It's spooky back there.' That just breaks my heart to see you people leave these little, bitty children out in the cold," Oaks said. "Why must a tragedy occur for somebody to do something? I am flabbergasted. There is no safe way for children to get to school. It's pathetic. Something has to be done for our small children."

Lane Plugge, the superintendent of the Iowa City School District, said he has looked into the issue and received information that water will come over the trail, but never more than 1 to 3 inches, and after snowfall the walkway will be cleared in a prompt fashion.

In response to these comments, Lauren Reece, a current board member, responded by instructing those with concerns to submit an appeal to the school. "Go home and write up your concerns," she said. "Then submit a copy of them to us, and we will individually decide whether we want to pursue them or not." Reece also asked parents to realize that board members have a great deal of empathy for the children.

Other issues discussed at the meeting were the Comprehensive School Improvement Plan and the Three-Year Goals. The Com-prehensive School Improvement Plan, as written in the mission statement, is working to "ensure that all students become responsible, independent learners capable of making informed decisions in a democratic society as well as in the dynamic global community. This is accomplished by challenging each student with a rigorous and creative curriculum taught by a diverse, professional, caring staff strengthened by collaborative partnerships with families and the entire community."

■ Weber Elementary teachers and faculty are the cover story in this month's Teaching K-8.

By Andrew Bixby
The Daily Iowan

Teachers and faculty of Irving B. Weber Elementary School, 3850 Rohret Road, were excited to win the "Best Practices Award" from the Boyer Center in Pennsylvania last March, but they were overwhelmed with pride upon viewing their students on the cover of a major magazine for teachers this month.

Teaching K-8, which gives strategies and ideas to elementary-school teachers, featured Weber as the cover story in its September issue.

Weber Elementary School is one of three "Basic Schools" in the Iowa City Community School District. Wickham Elementary School, 601 Oakdale Blvd., and Hills Elementary School in Hills, Iowa, are also structured in a Basic School format.

The schools are not basic in the sense of reading, writing and arithmetic, but basic in the sense of looking at the fundamental years of a child's life, said Weber Elementary Principal Dr. Celia Burger.

"The three principles of a Basic School are math, language and arts," said Burger. "Arts play a very important role in Weber School."

The school received the recognition for its parental involvement, integrated curriculum and team teaching, in which students ages 5 to 12 fit into one of four teams.

Teams can most easily be compared to grade levels. They establish a class culture over a two-year period in each team, Burger said.

"We focus on the principle of teachers as leaders and par-

First cigarettes can hook smokers, study says

■ British researchers find that nicotine addiction begins days after one begins smoking.

By Emma Ross
Associated Press

LONDON — Scientists have confirmed a suspicion held by some smokers but never proven: It could take just a few cigarettes to become addicted.

Some 12- and 13-year-olds showed evidence of addiction within days of their first cigarette, according to research reported this week in the British Medical Association journal Tobacco Control.

"There's been a suspicion that many people become addicted very quickly, but this is really the first hard evidence that we've had that this occurs," said Dr. Richard Hurt, the director of the Nicotine Dependency Unit at Mayo Clinic.

Experts have tried for years to determine how long people have to smoke before becoming addicted, and "the best answer to date had been 1-2 years," said Hurt, who was not involved in the study.

He said the findings will help scientists better understand the biology of nicotine addiction and lend more plausibility to the idea that some people may be more genetically susceptible to it than others.

"The really important implication of this study is that we have to warn kids that you can't just fool around with cigarettes or experiment with cigarettes for a few weeks and then give it up," said Dr. Joseph DiFranza, who led the Deer management remains a council — and city — concern

■ Discussion of ways to control local deer will continue at tonight's formal meeting.

By Megan Eckhardt
The Daily Iowan

With the presentation of the 2000-01 Deer Management Plan to the Iowa City City Council, issues such as future deer-herd thinning and alternatives to deer kills were examined at Monday night's work session.

The plan outlines the sharpshooting of no more than 500 deer by White Buffalo Inc., the deer-control company based out of Hamden, Conn., that was hired last year to control the population. The long-term goal to have no more than approximately 30 deer in every square mile of the area was taken into consideration when setting this year's figure at 500 deer, said Pat Farrant, the chairwoman of the Deer Management Committee.

Councilor Steven Kanner was concerned with the humanity of the deer deaths and the accuracy of shooting last year, but Anthony DeNicola, the White Buffalo Inc. owner and president, was prepared with statistics from last year's shootings.

"Ninety-eight percent of the deer were hit and killed instantly with one bullet in the center of the head," he said. "The others were missed entirely."

The committee concluded that it would be in the best interest of thinning the herd to partake in sharpshooting a second time because of the accuracy of last year's kill.

Tim Thompson, an advisor to the Deer Management Committee from the Iowa Department of Natural Resources, said though deer will have to be controlled in the future, until this year's reduction takes place, he will not be able to predict specific numbers.

"Like DeNicola said last year, 'You can't mow your yard in May and expect that to be it for the year,'" Thompson said. "We're going to have to continue managing deer in some way."

The committee also affirmed that it wants the city to continue to inform the public on how to live with the number of deer in the area. This could be managed by offering educational materials at the Civic Center, Iowa City Public Library, on Government Channel 4 and the city's Web site, Farrant said.

The committee plans to continue research for deer contraception, and use reflectors and underpasses to control deer-related traffic accidents and warnings signs cautioning drivers about heavily-populated deer areas.

There hasn't been any concrete evidence that reflectors help keep deer off roadways in the Iowa City area, Farrant said. But underpasses for animals have cut down on deer collisions in New Jersey and could possibly work here, she said.

Farrant stated that the committee would also like to look into the possibility of using more flip signs and seasonal signs to warn drivers of highly populated deer areas. There's also an interest in controlling or changing the speed limit in certain areas at certain times, she said.

At the end of the discussion, Councilor Mike O'Donnell said he has heard many complaints from citizens dealing with deer problems.

"I'm ready to support the deer committee. They covered all aspects and did a tremendous job," he said.

The council will discuss the plan in further detail at tonight's formal meeting at 7 p.m. and will take questions from the public. The council intends to vote on it in one week, at the Sept. 19 formal meeting.

Green team in I.C.

■ Novelist Wendell Berry and David Cobb promote grass-roots activism.

By Jesse Elliott
The Daily Iowan

Two southerners came to Iowa City Monday night with the message that individuals leading grass-roots movements can and must make a difference in this world.

Wendell Berry, a Kentucky native and poet, essayist and environmental activist, read from his latest novel, Jayber Crow, as a part of the "Live from Prairie Lights" series broadcast live from Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St., on WSUI-AM.

Earlier in the evening, David Cobb, the secretary for the Texas Green Party, spoke at a Students for Ralph Nader meeting in the IMU.

Although Berry's reading was not formally connected with the Students for Nader meeting, Berry said he supports Ralph Nader in his bid for president.

Russell Lovetinsky, the Green Party candidate for state Representative in the 46th district, which includes Iowa City, was also present at the Students for Nader meeting. Lovetinsky said neither Democrats nor Republicans in Iowa care enough about the corporatization of farming in the state.

"We have a governor who wants to turn Iowa into the Silicon Valley of biotech agriculture, and I am completely opposed to that," said Lovetinsky. "There are no Democrats or Republicans who are."

Cobb said he believes that the Green Party is gaining national momentum on the local, state and national levels, citing the fact that the Green Party now holds 80 elected offices nationwide.

"We're seeing the Republicans, the corporate duopoly, running scared now," Cobb said. "And it's because meetings like this are happening — grass-roots meetings held by people seeking social and political justice."

Students for Bush co-chairman Josh Bowen, a UI junior, said he believes this is not an accurate portrayal of either of the two major parties.

"There are so many differences within the two parties," Bowen said. "I don't see how anyone could group them together."

Wendell Berry's newest novel is fictional, but Berry said during his presentation that he still writes nonfiction argumentative essays, the genre that brought him his most widespread recognition in 1977 with the publication of The Unsettling of America.

"I'm always trying to do something to help people working for a better world economy and social situation," Berry said.

Nader will have a chance to take his own political and economic stand when he appears on "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno" tonight at 10:30 p.m. on NBC.

Animal-rights group frees pigeons

GLENWOOD, Iowa (AP) — An animal-rights organization claims responsibility for the release of 215 pigeons from a southwestern Iowa farm over the weekend.

The Animal Liberation Front said in a release issued Monday that its members entered a shed through an unlocked door at Double T Farms and took all the birds Sept. 9.

The organization said 63 birds were placed in containers and loaded into a vehicle for transport to a wilderness area out of the state, and 152 were loaded into tubs and released in wooded areas a half-mile in every direction from the farm.

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — The expected release of Wen Ho Lee was delayed Monday by prosecutors and Lee's defense attorneys who argued that Lee's plea bargain required some amendment.

U.S. District Judge Parker gave no reason for turning off a scheduled court hearing until Wednesday.

UI, ISU unite to fight multiple sclerosis in Game Ball Run

■ ROTC cadets from both schools will make the run from Ames to Kinnick.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

In an effort to raise awareness of multiple sclerosis, the UI and Iowa State University will join for the 120-mile Game Ball Run Friday — one day before the schools' football teams take the field for one of the most anticipated games of the season.

Approximately 12 ROTC cadets from ISU will bike Saturday's game ball 60 miles from Ames to Tama, Iowa, where 25 ROTC cadets from the UI will join them for a picnic sponsored by the Tama County I-Club, a UI alumni organization. Cadets from both schools will then run the ball in pairs followed by a van the remaining 60 miles to Iowa City and arrive at Kinnick Stadium around 10 p.m.

The 14-year-old tradition began in 1986 to honor ROTC cadet and then-UI student Kristy Samms, who was diagnosed with MS one month before she was to graduate and receive a commission to the U.S. Army.

The run has since raised thousands of dollars for MS research and support.

The UI ROTC solicited over $2,000 in contributions from area businesses this year — the largest amount ever, said Second Lt. Jake Cannon, who organized this year's run.

All proceeds will go to the National Multiple Sclerosis Society, Iowa Chapter, he said.

"It's been great," Cannon said. "One of the major advantages of the Game Ball Run is you don't have trouble getting people involved because there's so much established in the past. One contributor sent a check without being solicited."

The game ball will be ceremoniously presented before Saturday's game by two UI and ISU cadets and two persons diagnosed with MS.

The cadets will also join the UI's Stepping Up Project for a non-alcoholic tailgate Saturday with free food and entertainment behind Slater Residence Hall at 9 a.m. They will sell T-shirts for MS.

For Major Carol St. John, a UI professor of military science and head of the ROTC program,

Zach Boyden-Holmes/The Daily Iowan
UI seniors Brandi Mesenbrink and Michelle Riniker stretch before running Monday afternoon. The two are preparing for the ROTC's annual Game Ball Run.

MS is more than something recognized one weekend a year. Fifteen years ago, St. John's older sister was diagnosed with the disease while in her mid-30s.

While most cadets will each participate in five miles of the run, St. John plans to bike all 60 miles between Tama and Iowa City.

"It's a large misconception that everyone who has MS is critically ill and in a wheelchair," St. John said.

Education is the key to dismissing the myth that persons with MS can't live a normal, long life, she said.

Approximately 250,000 Americans are currently diagnosed with the disease and 100,000 more may have it without knowing because it is so difficult to diagnose, said Jamie Thompson, the special events coordinator for the National MS Society, Iowa Chapter.

The exact cause of MS is unknown although treatment of the disease has improved, she said.

In persons with MS, the body attacks the myelin, which Thompson compares to the insulation of an extension cord, in the nerves. The result is an inability to send messages through the body's central nervous system to control muscle function.

For unknown reasons, the disease, which is rarely fatal and not inherited, is twice as common in women than men and occurs more often in colder climates, Thompson said.

Farmers to form trade-info group

■ "Truth About Trade" will inform presidential candidates of agricultural issues.

By Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Farm leaders are forming a group that will draw more attention to trade issues in this year's campaign.

A news conference scheduled for Tuesday will announce the formation of "Truth About Trade," which will be led by Dean Kleckner, the former president of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

The group will promote free trade policies and expanded biotechnology research, Kleckner said Monday.

Kleckner said the organization of 300 members in 35 states is heavily dominated by farmers.

The group will focus on a handful of states in the upper Midwest that have turned out to be the battleground in this year's presidential election.

"These are the states the candidates are focusing on,"

Kleckner said.

He listed Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin among the states crucial to the outcome of this year's election and where the farm vote can be important.

The candidates, Al Gore and George W. Bush, have generally favored free trade policies supported by the group, but the issues have not been central to the race.

Kleckner said one goal was to bring more attention to trade issues, leaving the new president under pressure to act.

At Tuesday's news conference, the group plans to release a voters guide that urges voters to ask candidates at all levels questions such as where they stand on trade with China and expanded trade authority for the president.

Kleckner said the nonprofit group is raising money to finance its operations, but for the moment it will travel throughout the battleground states spreading its message.

There were no immediate plans announced for television advertising.

Owner to close Iowa petting zoo after rabies scare

■ The Clermont farmer won't reopen the site and will sell his animals.

Associated Press

CLERMONT, Iowa — The owner of a petting zoo that was the site of a rabies scare is feeling the fallout and says he'll have to sell his animals.

Rick Swenson, owner of the Wild Midwest Petting Zoo in rural Fayette County, says he fears he'll be socked with some of the bills for hundreds of people exposed to a bear to get rabies shots.

He plans to sell a mountain lion, tiger, bear and smaller exotic animals that still live on the site. The 50 smaller animals include foxes and skunks.

I actually kind of laughed. It sounded ridiculous.

— Rick Swenson,
owner of the Wild Midwest Petting Zoo

Swenson said he does not expect the Wild Midwest Petting Zoo to ever reopen.

"I'm afraid the state is discouraging things like this," he said.

Swenson opened his petting zoo in June 1999 to earn extra income along with his farming operation.

A young black bear named Chief was among the animals. The friendly bear was a popular attraction; he "kissed" tourists, ate honey from their hands and posed for pictures with children.

In August 1999, the bear died, and Swenson had the body sent to Iowa State University for testing. Initial tests indicated rabies.

That launched a search for around 400 zoo patrons from several states and Australia to urge them to get rabies shots.

Later, subsequent tests at the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta and at the University of Iowa Hygienic Laboratory in Iowa City did not substantiate the rabies diagnosis.

Meanwhile, many people paid the $230 average out-of-pocket expense for the shots.

Swenson said the Iowa

Attorney General's office has contacted him about the possibility of his paying for some of the claims against the state related to the cost of the shots.

"I actually kind of laughed. It sounded ridiculous," Swenson said.

The state may eventually seek some of the money from Swenson, but there are no immediate plans to do that, said Craig Kelson, special assistant attorney general.

The insurance expense alone precludes opening up the petting zoo again, Swenson said. Even if he got insurance, the entrance fees of the first 700 people would go toward that expense — a hefty chunk for a zoo that draws around 50 people each day, he said.

Woman sues Mount St. Clare College

■ A student who was allegedly raped takes the Clinton, Iowa, school to federal court.

Associated Press

CLINTON, Iowa — A student who says she was raped at Mount St. Clare College is suing the school in federal court.

The woman alleges in her lawsuit, filed Sept. 5 in U.S. District Court in Des Moines, that the tiny Franciscan college of about 675 students acted with gross negligence, indifference and in reckless disregard of the safety and well-being of its students.

"We don't agree with the allegations in the petition, and we plan to defend ourselves," Mount St. Clare spokeswoman Effie Hall said. "We also believe the way it was portrayed is not accurate, and we don't believe we are responsible."

The woman alleges in her lawsuit that she was raped on Sept. 13, 1998, in Durham Hall by a transient male who was not enrolled as a student. The person was allowed to temporarily reside in the same dormitory, free of charge, with easy access to the woman's room, the lawsuit says.

Hall said the incident was investigated and there were no charges by the Clinton Police Department. The alleged suspect was not a transient but a visitor of one of the male students in the dorm, she said.

The lawsuit asks for a jury trial and compensation for the woman's pain and suffering.

Complaints by the woman's father about the lack of adequate reporting of crimes that may have occurred on campus resulted in a $25,000 fine by the U.S. Department of Education — believed to be the first imposed on a school for violating the Campus Security Act.

The 1990 legislation requires schools to report all crimes and make the information available to students and employees.

The agency said the school failed to adequately disclose campus crime statistics. The college said it has been complying with the Campus Security Act and that the dispute is a matter of how the regulations are interpreted.

Because of an extension, the matter has been pushed back. DOE spokeswoman Stephanie Babyak said the agency now has until Sept. 27 to file briefs explaining why the college should have to pay the fine, and Mount St. Clare's brief is due 45 days later.

Nuclear scientist's release hits snag

■ A judge says some aspects of Wen Ho Lee's plea bargain "require some amendment."

By Richard Benke
Associated Press

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — The expected release of Wen Ho Lee was delayed Monday as prosecutors and Lee's defense team haggled over a plea deal that would release the jailed Los Alamos nuclear scientist.

U.S. District Judge James Parker gave no reason for putting off a scheduled court hearing until Wednesday.

"I must regretfully say that we cannot proceed with the hearing this afternoon," the judge said. "There are some issues that may require some amendment to the plea agreement."

Lee's daughter, Alberta, left the packed courtroom in tears and her mother, Sylvia, appeared dazed.

Defense attorneys declined to comment on the delay, as did Justice Department officials in Washington.

Under the deal described Sunday by government sources, Lee was expected to drop allegations that he was targeted because he is Chinese. These claims were included in a lawsuit against the FBI and the U.S. Departments of Energy and Justice.

His attorney in the case, Brian Sun, said Monday that the lawsuit is "still viable."

According to sources, Lee had agreed to plead guilty to only one of 59 counts accusing him of violating national security. His sentence was to be the nine months he has already served in solitary confinement.

In exchange for his freedom, Lee was expected to explain what he knows about seven computer tapes he was accused of downloading. Lee — whose defense contended that he was targeted only because he is ethnic Chinese — has insisted that the tapes were destroyed at the lab. His willingness to explain in more detail what happened was described as the turning point in two months of plea discussions.

"The issue here is are we getting the tapes back and we find out what happened to those tapes. I think that is the key," Energy Secretary Bill Richardson said at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory in Oak Ridge, Tenn., before the postponement was announced. "The plea bargain enables us to get that information."

The three-year case began as an offshoot of a Chinese espionage case and led to accusations that the 60-year-old Lee had downloaded the "crown jewels" of U.S. nuclear weaponry and might be poised to hand them over to a foreign power.

The government has since backed down from nearly all of those charges. Government sources said Lee agreed over the weekend to plead guilty to one count of unlawful gathering of national defense information, aid federal investigators over the next six months, and drop the claims that prosecutors went after him because he is Chinese-American. Lee is a naturalized U.S. citizen who was born in Taiwan.

"He deserves a national apology," said John Vance, a safety engineer at Los Alamos National Laboratory. "The president of the United States should call him in and apologize on national television for the damage that's done."

The lab considers Lee, who worked for the lab for more than 21 years, as retired. A spokesman said Lee is getting a pension.

Clinton campaigns for wife's Senate bid

■ The self-proclaimed "cheerleader in chief" will cast his vote today.

By Anne Gearan
Associated Press

DANBURY, Conn. — Calling himself the "cheerleader in chief," President Clinton attended half a dozen events Monday, mostly in service of his wife's Senate campaign.

"This is an interesting time in my life. My family has a new candidate, and my party has a new leader. I've become the cheerleader in chief, and I love it," Clinton said while in Connecticut to raise money for Rep. James H. Maloney, D-Conn.

Today, Clinton will go beyond cheerleader to voter, casting his first vote as a New Yorker for his wife.

Hillary Rodham Clinton faces the little-known Dr. Mark McMahon in the New York Democratic primary, and the family plans to vote together at a school near its suburban Westchester County home. The Clintons bought the house last year when Hillary began her Senate campaign in earnest.

But until now President Clinton had remained an Arkansas voter.

Clinton had six events to attend Monday — four political or fund-raising speeches bracketed by two events concerning New York's Jewish community.

Hillary Clinton is lagging in her pursuit of New York's influential Jewish vote, a traditionally Democratic constituency.

Democrats outnumber Republicans 5-to-1 among New York State's Jews, yet polls show Clinton is still having trouble reaching the 60 percent level of support among Jewish voters that analysts say is the minimum she needs to win.

ENWOOD, Iowa (AP) — An anti-rights organization claims responsibility for the release of 215 pns from a southwestern Iowa over the weekend.

The Animal Liberation Front said in a case issued Monday that its members entered a shed through an unlocked door at Double T Farms and killed the birds Sept. 9.

The organization said 63 birds placed in containers and loaded a vehicle for transport to a mess area out of the state, and were loaded into tubs and placed in wooded areas a half-mile in any direction from the farm.

China's weapon sales may threaten trade bill

■ A final vote may come as early as this week.

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sen. Fred Thompson sought Monday to tie China's weapons proliferation policies to the granting of permanent trade relations. Others warned that linking the two issues could kill the trade bill this year.

The nonproliferation amendment offered by Thompson, R-Tenn., and Sen. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., is seen as the last major hurdle to smooth passage of the permanent normal trade bill, the most important trade legislation Congress is taking up this year.

It is inconceivable to me that while we discuss trade issues and a new relationship with China, that we will not address what China is doing to endanger our country.

— Fred Thompson,
Senator, R-Tenn.

"It is inconceivable to me that while we discuss trade issues and a new relationship with China, that we will not address what China is doing to endanger our country," Thompson said.

Supporters of the legislation hope to defeat the Thompson proposal and other efforts to change the bill, setting up a final vote as early as the end of this week.

Congress must approve permanent normal trade status to benefit from the lower tariffs China has agreed to as part of its impending entry in the World Trade Organization. American business groups, who stand to gain billions from a more open Chinese market, have lobbied hard for passage of the legislation.

The House passed the bill by a 40-vote margin last May, and supporters are concerned that Senate changes could doom the bill this year because the House might not return to the legislation before Congress adjourns next month.

"Any amendment added to this bill would likely kill this legislation and kill the benefits of China's WTO commitments for our farmers and our workers," said Sen. William Roth, R-Del., chairman of the Finance Committee.

Thompson said he supported the trade bill but contended it was wrong to give blanket acceptance to the House version when there is growing evidence that Chinese proliferation policy "poses a mortal threat to the welfare of this nation."

He noted a recent CIA report citing China, Russia and North Korea as the key suppliers of nuclear, chemical and biological weapons technology and reports the Chinese were helping Pakistan, Libya and Iran with their weapons programs.

The Thompson-Torricelli amendment would set up an annual review of the weapons sales of China, Russia and North Korea and require the president to impose non-trade-related sanctions on individuals and companies that violate nonproliferation agreements. The president could also impose additional sanctions on key supplier nations.

Firestone investigated problems in 1996

■ Arizona agencies complained 4 years ago of tire tread separation.

By Scott Thomsen
Associated Press

PHOENIX — While Bridgestone/Firestone says serious safety concerns arose only this year, the tiremaker as far back as 1996 took complaints of tread separations and blowouts in Arizona seriously enough to send a half-dozen engineers on a special inspection mission and to help pay for replacing a wrecked vehicle.

According to government officials interviewed by the Associated Press and state records examined by the AP, the complaints from state agencies that relied heavily on light trucks, such as the Game and Fish Department, were numerous and specific in pointing out tread separation problems and blowouts.

Setting a pattern for its response over the next four years, the tiremaker said it could find no specific defect responsible for the tire failures and suggested drivers were underinflating their tires, overloading their vehicles or otherwise misusing the tires. Some agencies rejected the explanation and started relying on other brands years before Bridgestone/Firestone would announce its recall of 6.5 million tires in August.

Among the models Game and Fish experienced problems with were certain Firestone Firehawk ATX tires, which had blown out so often employees had their own name for them.

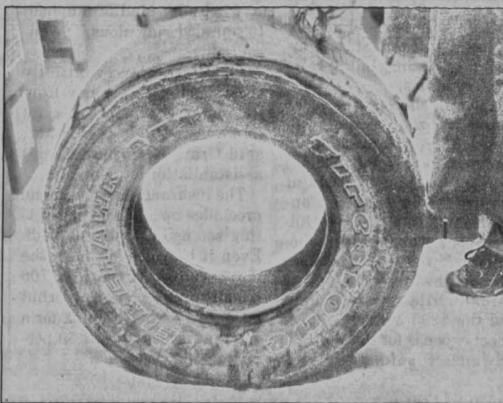

"We called them 'Death-hawks,'" said Dave Conrad, a field supervisor. "Almost every one of our guys had one of those tires go bad on them."

Firestone paid $20,000 toward replacing a Ford Bronco owned by the Yuma Counties

Sheriff's Office in Arizona after officials there pressed a 1996 claim against the company following a tread separation accident involving then-watch commander Lewis H. Wilbur.

Wilbur, now a deputy, was out of work with injuries for two months after the June 1996 crash.

"They're just now realizing they had a problem? That's bull," he said. "They knew four years ago."

"Why would they pay for another vehicle if they didn't know they had a problem?" he said.

On Monday, Firestone spokesman Dan Adomitis said that he was unfamiliar with the details of the company's 1996 activities in Arizona but that Firestone took appropriate action by investigating the complaints.

"Probably these tires were going off road into some fairly rugged terrain on a regular basis," Adomitis said. "That doesn't necessarily tell you something is going on in manufacturing."

Adomitis said it is not unusual for a manufacturer to resolve product problems to maintain customer satisfaction, especially when a law enforcement agency is involved. "But it doesn't mean the entire line had problems warranting a recall."

Man sentenced 2-15 years in Mich. school-shooting case

■ Jamelle James is charged with leaving the gun a 6-year-old allegedly used to shoot a classmate.

By Randi Goldberg
Associated Press

FLINT, Mich. — A man accused of letting a 6-year-old boy get his hands on the gun he allegedly used to kill a first-grade classmate was sentenced Monday to two to 15 years in prison.

Jamelle James, 20, was charged with leaving a .32-caliber semiautomatic pistol in a shoebox in his bedroom. Police say a boy living in the household took the gun to school and shot Kayla Rolland on Feb. 29. James pleaded no contest last month to involuntary manslaughter.

"It vindicates this little girl's death," prosecutor Arthur Busch said.

At his sentencing, James apologized to Kayla's father: "I'm sorry about the loss of his daughter. I know I've got to do my time."

The boy was living with James in what prosecutors described as a "flophouse" where guns and drugs were exchanged. The boy's mother had been evicted from her home and had left the boy at the house a week before the shooting.

The boy, now 7, was not charged in Kayla's death. Prosecutors said he was too young to be held responsible. He told investigators that he was only trying to scare the girl and that the shooting was an accident.

The boy's uncle, Sir Marcus Winfrey, has since pleaded guilty to possessing the stolen gun used in the shooting.

James also pleaded guilty to possessing a stolen shotgun found in the home after the slaying.

I'm sorry about the loss of his daughter. I know I've got to do my time.

7 gov't agencies fail computer check

■ Those that flunked include the departments of Justice, Labor and Health and Human Services.

By Jesse J. Holland
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A fourth of the government's major agencies, including the departments of Justice, Labor, Interior, Agriculture and Health and Human Services, flunked a computer security review.

The F's given to seven of the 24 major agencies, based on agency-reported data and General Accounting Office and the Inspector General audits, led to a government-wide grade of D-, said Rep. Stephen Horn, R-Calif., the chairman of the House Government Reform Committee's technology subcommittee.

The departments that flunked all keep important computer data, said Horn, who called the scores the first government-wide assessment of computer security.

"The Department of Labor, charged with maintaining vital employment statistics, an F. The Department of the Interior, which manages the nation's public lands, an F," said Horn, as his staffers passed out fake report cards to the media. "The Department of Health and Human Services that holds personal information on every citizen who receives Medicare, another F. Agriculture and Justice, the Small Business Administration and the Office of Personnel Management, the personnel office for the entire federal government, all F's."

All 24 agencies have significant problems in allowing unauthorized access to sensitive information, said Joel Willemsen, the director of the GAO's accounting and information management division. Auditors proved that point by trying to hack into government computers from remote locations.

"Our auditors have been successful, in almost every test, in readily gaining unauthorized access that would allow intruders to read, modify or delete data for whatever purpose they have in mind," the GAO report said.

The agencies aren't good at monitoring access inside their own work forces, either, the report said.

At one unnamed agency, all 1,100 computer users were granted access to sensitive system directories and settings while at another agency 20,000 users had been provided access to one system without written authorization, the GAO report said.

Study: More families own credit cards

WASHINGTON (AP) — The proportion of American families having at least one credit card jumped by more than 40 percent between 1970 and 1998, research by the Federal Reserve shows.

In 1998, 73 percent — or nearly three-fourths — of American families had one or more credit cards, up from 51 percent in 1970, according to the surveys of consumer finances, a series sponsored by the Fed, sometimes jointly with other agencies.

The information was contained in an article Monday published in September's edition of the Federal Reserve Bulletin.

Credit cards issued by banks, gasoline companies, retail stores, travel and entertainment companies and other issuers such as car rental and airline companies were all counted under the surveys.

Collectors voice choices for new coin designs

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Coin collectors around the country would like to have the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., Ronald Reagan and Harry Truman in their pockets.

The civil-rights leader and two former presidents were the top vote-getters in a national survey asking collectors whom they would like to see depicted on coins.

The collectors' suggestions ranged from Jesus Christ to the Three Stooges and included 33 presidents as well as astronauts, actresses, artists, baseball players, pioneers and a king — Elvis Presley.

The company posted the survey on its Web site and sent questionnaires to customers with coin orders. King was the top choice of the 1,940 collectors who responded. "He has changed the lives of many people and deserves the recognition," one collector wrote.

UISG accepts Coleman's newest fee-increase proposal

percent tuition increase proposal is compiled of 5.2 percent inflation for the Higher Education Price Index, as well as a 2-percent increase for quality improvements in education, scholarship and facilities, said Chih King, a UISG senator.

If passed, resident tuition and fees will increase $318, and non-residents will pay an additional $876, or $984 depending on whether a 1-percent surcharge is added for non-residents.

No matter what the actual tuition increase outcome is, Coleman said, 16 percent of all tuition will still go toward financial aid.

Coleman said it is a goal of the UI to ensure all students in need of financial aid receive it in some form.

King discussed several reasons why UISG should approve this plan.

One reason why students should not worry about the 5.2 percent tuition increase due to inflation is that it is estimated that income for Iowa residents will increase by 6.4 percent.

"You can't argue with inflation," said Stoll.

However, it was mentioned by several UISG members that not everyone's income will increase, leaving added debt for those whose income maintains or decreases.

Another justification was made by King who stated that in 1999 the UI's tuition averages 11.7 percent of the average income of an Iowa resident, which is almost 3 percent less than regional and peer states, and almost 2 percent lower than the national average.

According to the tuition resolution UISG would "cautiously back" the 9.9-percent undergraduate resident tuition and fee increase, as well as the 8-percent undergraduate non-resident tuition and fee increase.

However, it also stated that UISG needed to do more research, such as conducting polls, before making a decision on an additional 1-percent undergraduate non-resident surcharge.

Police dogs train at Oakdale Campus

DOGS

the Iowa Medical and Classification Center to test their skills at the United States Police Canine Association Police Dog certification trials.

The nationally recognized trials, hosted this year by Region 21 of the United States Canine Association, test the dogs' basic proficiency for obedience, agility, searching and criminal apprehension, said Randy Kessler, the vice president of Region 21.

Using dogs in police work is vital because the dogs' strong sense of smell help officers locate people and items faster and with better precision than without the dogs, said Officer John Slotter with the Boone City, Iowa, Police Department.

It was the keen sense of smell of his police dog Castor that saved a suicidal man's life, Slotter said. Neighbors had been looking for most of the day for a man who had taken an overdose of medication when Slotter went out with Castor to help.

"We had only been tracking for about a half mile when Castor found the man in a ditch," Slotter said. "Later, the doctors said if it had been a half hour later, the man would most likely have died."

During the trials, each dog is rated based on its ability to complete the four sections of the certification. Although the majority of the dogs pass the trials, if a dog does not pass, the officer and dog will have the chance to try for certification again the following year, Region 21 President Chris Mahlstadt said.

"The obedience test is the first exercise and if the dog doesn't pass it, he's done," Mahlstadt said. "It is imperative that the dog is obedient."

Another exercise, called the box test, checks a dog's ability to find a person in hiding, Kessler said. Officials place six boxes in front of dogs, one with a man hiding inside of it, and the dogs and officers must determine which box the man is hiding in, Kessler said.

Officers train with their dogs for a year prior to the trials for certification. Dogs go through testing for liability reasons, so, if warranted, officers could testify in court on their dogs' proficiency, Mahlstadt said.

Police dogs are trained initially for 12 to 14 weeks by a certified trainer before a dog is sold to a police station. The dog and the police officer in charge of the dog train together throughout the time the dog lives with the officer, Mahlstadt said.

"The training is like an ongoing game to the dog. If the dog does well in an exercise, the officers always praise the dog with a toy or treat," Mahlsted said. "It's funny because the officers act like school kids with a puppy. They both get excited about what they are doing."

Although dogs are specifically trained for police work, many dogs head home at the end of the day for a game of fetch or a walk in the park.

"A dog can go through an exercise where they track a suspect, which causes them to be a bit aggressive," Mahlsted said. "But after the dog is calmed down, it's playing with the kids of the officer. That's how much a part of the family the dogs are."

Michelle Thompson traveled from New London, Iowa, to watch her husband, Officer Ty Thompson, and their dog, Zeke, go through the certification trials.

"Zeke is definitely a big part of our family," she said. "He sleeps with my kids, and we even buy him Christmas presents."

Iowa City Police Department Officer Ron Gist and police dog Gallo did not attend the certification trials. Gist was on vacation and could not be reached for comment.

Research: Smokers addicted after first cigarettes

NICOTINE

research at the University of Massachusetts. "If you fool around with cigarettes for a few weeks, you may be addicted for life."

The study, conducted in 1998, followed 681 12- to 13-year-olds in central Massachusetts for a year and tracked their smoking habits.

The researchers did not label any of them addicted because the standard definition of nicotine dependence assumes addiction cannot happen without prolonged heavy smoking. The scientists simply recorded symptoms that indicate addiction.

These include cravings, needing more to get the same buzz, withdrawal symptoms when not smoking, feeling addicted to tobacco and loss of control over the number of cigarettes smoked or the duration of smoking.

Ninety-five of the youths said they had started smoking occasionally — at least one cigarette a month — during the study. The scientists found that 60, or 63 percent, had one or more symptoms of addiction.

A quarter of those with symptoms got them within two weeks of starting to smoke and several said their symptoms began within a few days.

Sixty-two percent said they had their first symptom before they began smoking every day, or that the symptoms made them start smoking daily.

The researchers found that the symptoms began soon after the teens started smoking.

Even though some people who have never smoked on a daily basis can find it hard to quit, the assumption that smokers only become addicted after smoking a lot of cigarettes over a long period of time came from observations that some people can smoke five cigarettes a day for many years and not become addicted, the study noted.

However, it has never been proven that daily smoking is necessary for addiction to begin, the study added.

The scientists suggested there may be three types of smokers: Those who become addicted very quickly, those who get hooked gradually after more regular smoking and those who can smoke lightly or pick up and drop the habit without becoming addicted.

It is also possible that adolescents could be more sensitive to nicotine and that addiction may take longer in people who start smoking at a later age, they added.

Emmy-winning shows predict TV future

■ Because of the success of "The West Wing" and "Will & Grace," viewers can expect similar plots.

By Anthony Breznican
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Success at the Emmys often leads to imitation, which means viewers can look forward to more heart-warming politics, gay characters and raunchy-but-kid-friendly families in the seasons ahead.

Edgier, grittier shows aren't likely to have many imitators on network television — programs like HBO's "The Sopranos" and "Sex and the City" fared poorly in the awards Sunday, despite changes this year in Emmy voting procedure meant to encourage a wider and younger pool of voters.

"An Emmy award gives the networks confidence to launch similar programs," said Thomas O'Neil, an awards show historian and author of the book "The Emmys." "If people in the entertainment industry say 'This show is valuable,' their peers listen and trust that."

An Emmy award can draw more viewers than any critical praise, he said, and make it easier for a network to defend risqué or disturbing material.

For example, viewership for NBC's hard-nosed "Law &

Order" soared after it won best dramatic series in 1997, which led to the spin-off "Law & Order: Special Victims Unit" and the upcoming "Deadline." CBS' "All in the Family" was an Emmy favorite despite its controversial racial and class humor, and it became a forerunner to similarly edgy programs such as "Maude" and "The Jeffersons."

The big winner Sunday was NBC's political drama "The West Wing" with a record nine Emmys, including best drama series and two supporting actor awards.

Creator Aaron Sorkin, who won for writing, said the show's feel-good idealism may end the tradition of depicting politicians as villains or buffoons. And Richard Schiff, who won an acting award for his portrayal of a grim presidential aide, said

Reed Saxon/Associated Press

Allison Janney and Richard Schiff, won best supporting actress and actor for the roles in "West Wing." Because the show was the big winner Sunday, imitations may be in the works.

"In the past, politically themed drama never seemed to be commercially viable. This will change that view," he said. Victories Sunday by "Will & Grace," NBC's gay-themed sitcom that won four awards including best comedy series, will make it easier to place gay characters on television, O'Neil said.

"Hollywood has always been open to gays and lesbians," he said. "But (at the Emmys) the industry gave them an outright hug."

And Fox's "Malcolm in the Middle," about a crass lower-class family, claimed two Emmys, for comedy writing and directing. Director Todd Holland said he expected Fox to reject the show's gross-out humor. Instead, he said, the Emmy recognition shows there can be quality in material once reserved for lowbrow shows like "Married ... with Children."

This year, instead of requiring its members to watch nominated shows in a hotel, the Academy of Television Arts & Sciences sent videotapes to voters to watch at home. As a result, it nearly quadrupled the number of people voting.

The changes followed years of criticism that the Emmys were out of step with critics' and viewers' tastes. Last year, the word-of-mouth hit "The Sopranos" lost best drama series to the legal drama "The Practice."

This year, however, "The Sopranos" fared little better. Despite 18 nominations, it took home just one: James Gandolfini's best actor award for his portrayal of mob boss Tony Soprano.

Backstage, Gandolfini reluctantly acknowledged that parts of the show may be too chilling for mainstream audiences.

"There are a lot of issues about 'The Sopranos,' such as the violence and the drug use," he said. "Maybe some people are uncomfortable with that, but it's a very small part of 'The Sopranos.' The show is a little bit darker. Maybe people would rather vote for a network show because it's comfortable."

Radio's 'Dr. Laura' makes TV debut

NEW YORK (AP) — No one stormed the studio.

The host didn't breathe fire. Defying months of protests by gay-rights groups, Dr. Laura Schlessinger, radio's ethics noddie, launched her daytime-TV talk show Monday. Peace prevailed on the air.

A target of gay activists since her public dismissal of homosexuality as "deviant" and dangerous to society, Schlessinger has also railed on the radio against abortion, divorce, feminism and interfaith marriage.

But for her TV premiere, the syndicated "Dr. Laura" chose a troubling but not so controversial topic: "Teens and Drugs."

"What is to blame?" Schlessinger posed at the top of the show. "Whatever it is, I'm sick of it, I'm very worried, and I want it stopped."

With that in mind, she led into a no-nonsense, consensus-seeking hour.

Although the format and arena setting of the Los Angeles-based series resemble those of a dozen talk-show counterparts, one difference stood out: Schlessinger's guests were polite and well-dressed, with those who had made mistakes apparently on the mend.

In other words, Schlessinger puts a premium on solutions and contrition.

Her first guest, a mother named Kristin, described the drastic stand she took by sending her teen away for a year of drug therapy. How did daughter Lauren feel about getting roused in the middle of the night by two attendants with handcuffs? Mad? Scared?

"I was happy," Lauren said.

Another guest represented a company that markets drug tests for parents to use on their children. Schlessinger tested Mike, a 17-year-old former abuser, as his mother looked on. Mike came up negative. The audience applauded.

But Sharli, a fresh-faced 17-year-old, confessed to enjoying marijuana.

What personal need might that reveal? Schlessinger asked the girl. "A feeling that I don't have control of myself," Sharli replied.

"That's a very important point," Schlessinger said.

Later in the hour, she explored a Texas high school's policy of mandatory drug testing. When her Web site poll revealed that 44 percent of respondents were against such a program, she wasn't pleased.

"I think you guys gotta think a little more about the moral obligation involved here," she said.

But, overall, she avoided talk-show pyrotechnics and the shrill tone of her call-in radio show. A kinder, gentler (if no less resolute) Dr. Laura made her TV debut smartly — without making waves.

Tests show AIDS not linked to vaccine

■ 1 million Africans were given vaccines in the '50s, but experiments find the shots did not cause AIDS.

By Emma Ross
Associated Press

LONDON — Independent laboratory tests have found no evidence to support the theory that an experimental polio vaccine used on about 1 million Africans in the 1950s inadvertently triggered the AIDS epidemic.

The findings, presented Monday at a conference at the Royal Society in London, found no evidence that the vaccine, administered between 1957 and 1961, contained any tissue from chimpanzees.

Scientists believe that HIV, the virus that is believed to cause AIDS, most probably originates from the type of SIV, or simian immunodeficiency virus, found in chimpanzees in western central Africa. But they don't know how or when the chimp virus got into humans.

The prevailing theory is that a hunter became infected after being scratched by a chimp when trying to capture it or after cutting himself while butchering the animal. However, some experts suspect that a polio vaccine made with contaminated chimpanzee cells may have been the culprit.

In the latest tests, samples of four different supplies of the vaccine, including some used in the African immunization program, were tested for traces of genetic material from animals.

Two laboratories found that the samples they tested were made using monkey tissue, but they found no chimp DNA, said Claudio Basilio, the chairman of the microbiology department at New York University School of Medicine. Basilio chaired a committee set up by the vaccine's maker, the Wistar Institute in Philadelphia, to investigate claims that chimp tissue might have been used.

"Does this definitively rule out the vaccine theory? No, but it makes it more unlikely," Basilio said. He said record-keeping was sketchy at the time and that there may have been samples other than those tested that were used in Africa.

The tests were also designed to find traces of SIV and found none. But that may not be important, Basilio said, because the virus could have died out after 40 years in a freezer.

The findings by the Max Planck Institute in Leipzig,

Germany, and the Pasteur Institute in Paris did not affect the views of Edward Hooper, the chief proponent of the polio vaccine theory.

Hooper contended in a 1999 book, The River, that the Wistar Institute scientists might have used chimp kidneys contaminated with the virus to make some batches of the vaccine.

"This means nothing at all for the polio vaccine theory because different batches were prepared," Hooper said, adding that other, untested or missing batches might have yielded different results.

Two scientists who conducted the African vaccine trials denied that any chimpanzee tissue was used to make the vaccine and branded Hooper's theory a "fantasy."

"We never used chimp kidneys," said Dr. Hilary Koprowski, who developed the vaccine. "I was there in 1957, and the author (Hooper) was not."

Filipino rebels free four hostages

■ One reports some of the female hostages were raped.

By Sarah El Deeb
Associated Press

TRIPOLI, Libya — A plane carrying four former hostages freed by Muslim rebels in the Philippines arrived Monday in Tripoli, and one of them said their captors raped some of the female hostages.

Risto Vahanen, a Finn who was among 21 captives held for as many as 140 days in the Philippine jungle, told Finnish MTV3 in an interview aired Monday that they were powerless to help the women.

"Some, a few, women there were treated in an inappropriate manner," Vahanen said, and he answered "yes" when asked if they had been raped.

He said the raped women did not want their names disclosed but wanted the incidents to be made public.

"They were of the opinion that it had to be made public, without names, so that the world would know what Robot had done," Vahanen said, referring to rebel leader Ghalib "Robot" Andang.

"It was quite surprising because otherwise we were treated in a proper way," he said in the interview conducted before leaving the Philippines.

The four former hostages' arrival in Tripoli, which followed their release Saturday, came amid fears that fat Libyan payoffs would only encourage more hostage-taking.

ing. Libya reportedly paid $1 million each to secure freedom for the German, Frenchman and two Finns, including Vahanen, who flew Monday out of the Philippines after being held for months by the Abu Sayyaf, the smaller of two rebel groups fighting for an independent Muslim state in the southern part of the country.

First to appear at the aircraft's door was Libyan negotiator Rajab Azzarouq, who triumphantly waved to the dozens of well-wishers and journalists waiting on the tarmac. The hostages followed, carrying bouquets of flowers.

The hostages were quick to praise Libya for securing their freedom. "I think they have done a really great job," Vahanen said. "It may be possible that they've saved our lives."

After showing the arrival of the aircraft, Libyan state television began broadcasting patriotic songs over footage of hostages and reporters inside the VIP lounge.

A day after the four hostages were released Saturday, three men, all Malaysians, were abducted from near where Abu Sayyaf rebels kidnapped 21 people, including the four Europeans, on April 23.

One Filipino resort worker remains in captivity from the group captured in April. Two French television journalists, seized when they visited the rebels' camp, are still being held by the Abu Sayyaf. The guerrillas are also holding 12 Filipino Christian evangelists.

Mob violence erupts in Guatemala

■ Last week, 8 suspected criminals were burned; this week, an arrest almost becomes a lynching.

By Will Weissert
Associated Press

SALACHUIN, Guatemala — Police giving chase in a rusty blue-and-white pickup with broken tail lights collared the three suspects just in time.

Minutes after officers caught up with the three men sought for a string of robberies in Guatemala's mountainous northern corner, a mob of Indian villagers showed up looking for the same men.

"Five hundred people appeared out of nowhere," said Faustino Sanchez, a spokesman for Guatemala's national police. "We almost had another lynching."

The near-killing in this village 70 miles north of Guatemala City, the capital, came just two days after 200 people in a similarly isolated Indian village on the other side of the country burned alive eight men suspected of being criminals.

The attacks happened more than 100 miles apart and involved poor groups of villagers who hail from different Mayan backgrounds and speak different Indian languages. But their methods were chillingly similar.

"The lynchings we see in this country almost always exhibit the same pattern: one or two leaders who are able to stir up an angry mob of villagers in a rural area very quickly," said Raul Sepeda, a professor of criminal behavior at the University of San Carlos in Guatemala City. "We see it especially among Indians here."

According to U.N. statistics, two-thirds of all vigilante attacks in Guatemala since 1996 occurred in the eight Guatemalan states with the greatest Indian populations. The country's other 14 states, including the capital region, accounted for the remaining 34 percent.

Of all the mob attacks, 61 percent were attributed to people of Indian background and an additional 14 percent to those whose with mixed heritage.

U.S. dollars replace Ecuadorian currency

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — The American greenback ruled supreme in this small Andean nation on Monday, the first day of business since it replaced the sucre as Ecuador's national currency.

Dollar bills and bills of larger denominations were abundant. But Ecuadorians griped about the lack of coins for change and complained that merchants were rounding off prices at the dollar level — a sore point in a poor country where more than two-thirds of workers earn less than $30 a month.

The Central Bank reminded Ecuadorians that leftover sucres may still be switched at special locations until March 9. The bank estimated some $20 billion in low-denomination sucre bills and coins had not yet been exchanged.

Ecuador, wracked by political and economic disorder for years, on Saturday completed a six-month transition to making the U.S. dollar its currency. During the transition both dollars and sucres circulated as legal tender, at an official exchange rate of 25,000 sucres to the dollar.

Haskins sued by Minnesota

■ The university says wants former men's basketball coach Clem Haskins to give back $1.5 million buyout.

By Joe Carlson
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — University of Minnesota Monday sued former basketball coach Haskins, saying it had the funds necessary to recoup $1.5 million buyout paid year following an academic fraud scandal.

Haskins' admission of a $3,000 payment to a tutor was described as a "smoking gun" in the case. Lorie Gildea, the university's assistant general counsel, is the lead attorney in the case. "The university got it off, and we want our money back," Gildea said at a conference.

The lawsuit cited grounds for the action, including fraud and deceit, breach of fiduciary duties, breach of employment agreement and unjust enrichment. Calls to Haskins' attorney, Ron Zamansky, not immediately returned Monday.

Haskins resigned in 1999 in the wake of the Gophers basketball academic fraud scandal, in which tutor Jan Gangelhoff said he wrote about 400 resumes and tests for about 100 players during Haskins' tenure as coach.

The university paid him $1.5 million remaining on a contract after Haskins said he was not involved in the deal. University President Mark Yudof defended the

Haskins sued by Minnesota

By Joe Carlson

MINNEAPOLIS — The University of Minnesota on Monday sued former men's basketball coach Clem Haskins, saying it had the evidence necessary to recover a $1.5 million buyout paid last year following an academic fraud scandal.

Haskins' admission of a $3,000 payment to a former tutor was described as the "smoking gun" in the case by Lorie Gildea, the university's assistant general counsel and the lead attorney in the case.

"The university got ripped off, and we want our money back," Gildea said at a news conference.

Not happy in Bloomington

■ Some Indiana players say they will transfer if Hoosier assistants are not promoted.

By Rex W. Huppke

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — The General's iron hand is still on the Indiana basketball team.

At the urging of Bob Knight, junior guard Dane Fife decided Monday to leave the Hoosiers. He said he does not think there is any reason to stay, now that his coach has been fired.

Assistant coach Mike Davis, Knight's top recruiter the past two seasons and the key link to the team for many players, also said his future in Bloomington rests with Knight.

"Whatever coach tells me to do, whatever the players say, I'm going to do," Davis said Monday, walking out of Assembly Hall.

Other players — many came to Indiana solely because of Knight — were also turning to their former coach for guidance. Junior forward Jarrad Odle said Knight made it clear to the team he's available anytime they want to talk.

"He's going to be a friend to us now instead of a coach," Odle said, standing outside the building where banners mark Knight's three national championships. "He's being a friend to us and trying to get us to the best place we can be."

What remains to be seen is whether the best place will be Indiana.

"They've just got to simmer down and see what happens," Davis said of the players. "It all depends on what coach says."

a "pattern of unacceptable behavior." The university now faces the task of replacing one of college basketball's great coaches while keeping together a team many considered the most talented Hoosiers squad in years.

That squad gave IU athletic director Clarence Doninger an ultimatum Monday afternoon, saying that if he doesn't elevate Davis or assistant coach John Treloar to interim head coach, the entire team will quit.

"You've got some quality people and they are stunned by all of this," Doninger said earlier in the day. "They are hurt by all of this. There's no question they came to Indiana University to play for coach Bob Knight."

Doninger made it clear that he wants Davis and Treloar to stay. When it comes to appointing an interim head coach, Doninger said the university was examining its options.

As for Knight, Davis and Odle said they're sure the coach won't have trouble finding work.

"He told us he's going to coach again," Odle said. "There's no doubt in my mind,

Hawks looking for consistency

■ Iowa hopes it can carry over its second-half prowess to the Iowa State game Saturday.

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

If Iowa could play one football game as tough as it plays the third quarter, the Hawkeyes could be sitting at 2-0 heading into the Iowa State game.

In the Sept. 9 loss to Western Michigan, Iowa managed to move the ball better in the first half than it did against Kansas State but settled for two Nate Kaeding field goals, leaving Iowa in a tough 24-6 hole going into halftime.

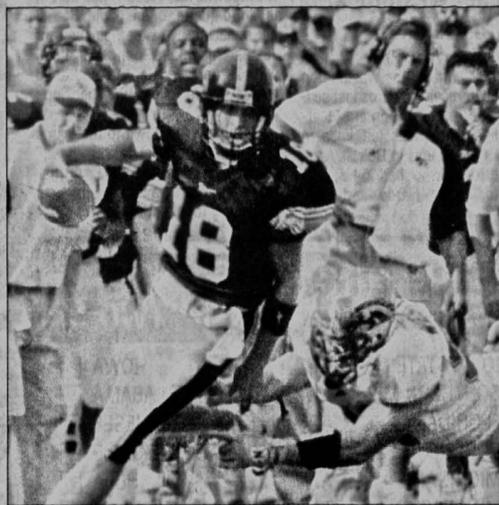

When the Hawkeyes emerged from the tunnel, the defense and Mullen's arm were on fire. The quarterback threw for 186 yards and two touchdowns in the third quarter, sparking Iowa's attempted comeback.

"If we could have gone out and executed in the first two quarters, we wouldn't have had to be in such a hurry to pass the ball so much," said wide receiver Kevin Kasper. "We just have to execute for four quarters."

Kaeding in Kinnick

Saturday marked Nate Kaeding's debut on the Kinnick Stadium grass.

Kaeding, an Iowa City native, was called upon and delivered in the first quarter, Iowa's Scott Mullen threw for 186 yards and two touchdowns in the third quarter of Iowa's loss to Western Michigan Sept. 9.

drilling a 41-yard field goal in his first collegiate attempt. He also kicked one through from 47 yards out in the second quarter.

However, with the score at 24-21 in favor of Western Michigan, Kaeding's kick, in an effort to tie the game and keep Iowa's momentum alive, sailed wide.

Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz continues to be pleased with Kaeding's development and play, but the freshman was upset with his debut.

"Personally, I'm disappointed in my own performance," he said. "I expect myself to make every kick. I wouldn't be playing at this level if that wasn't expected of me."

Where's the rush?

Fullback Jeremy Allen has emerged as a worthy complement to Ladell Betts in Iowa's backfield. Also a discus and hammer thrower, Allen is using his upper and lower body strength to provide great blocking and power running up the middle, averaging 4.35 yards per carry in two games.

Gopher boss saddened by Hawkeye merger

■ Minnesota women's A.D. Chris Voelz says the merger will not help women's athletics.

By Megan Manfull
 The Daily Iowan

Chris Voelz, the women's athletic director at the University of Minnesota, is part of a dying breed. But she's not worried about her future. Right now, she's worried about Iowa's.

Minnesota, Brigham Young, Arkansas, Tennessee and Texas are the only schools in the nation with separate Athletics Departments. Iowa was part of the elite group until last Friday, when UI President Mary Sue Coleman announced that the two departments would consolidate.

Voelz was surprised and disappointed at the news.

"It's wistful and sad," she said. "We all hoped they would not merge. It's a sad day. It's not what I'd call progress because things aren't yet equal. If they were equal, no one would lose."

Voelz was contacted by the nine-person task force Coleman appointed to research whether Iowa should restructure its Athletics Departments.

Voelz said she sent them all the information they requested. She also spoke with the task force's co-chairwoman Bonnie Slatton on a couple of occasions. "I thought, after all the research the task force did, that they would find enough benefits of what women were getting to make certain they kept the structure," Voelz said.

The issue of merging Minnesota's departments has been raised occasionally, mainly by the media, Voelz said. UM President Mark Yudof and the state of Minnesota Board of Regents have assured her that a merger will not happen.

Voelz said separate departments are more beneficial financially. The Minnesota state Legislature gives the UM women's Athletics Department money that it would not receive if the school had a consolidated department.

According to Voelz, Iowa's task force asked for information about Minnesota's financial stability.

"It's been proven that separate departments don't cost more," Voelz said. "Men's programs have a lot to lose because they have to support us financially if we merge."

"I've been in a merged department, and nine out of 10 of them are not improving equality," she said. "In most cases, women end up with less role models. You end up with very few in decision-making positions. In that regard, Iowa's move is very regrettable."

Jets stun Patriots
■ Vinny Testaverde threw two fourth quarter touchdown passes to beat New England, 20-19.
By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press
EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — So much for Keyshawn Johnson.
Wayne Chrebet, who stepped up from the Jets' No. 2 receiver to their top gun, caught a 28-yard touchdown pass from Vinny Testaverde with 1:55 left as New York scored twice in the final 6:25 to beat the New England Patriots 20-19 Monday night.
It was a dramatic ending to a game that had a lot of grinding around midfield until the final quarter.
New England built up a 12-7 lead on four Adam Vinatieri field goals and extended it to 19-7 on Drew Bledsoe's 4-yard TD pass to Eric Bjornson with just under 10 minutes left.
That seemed to energize the Jets, who drove 85 yards in 10 plays to score on Testaverde's 2-yard TD pass to Chrebet. Fullback Richie Anderson had five catches for 78 yards on that drive.
On the first play, Testaverde hit Dedic Ward for 44 yards, then threw to Chrebet, who

Michael Westbrook lost for season
ASHBURN, Va. (AP) — Michael Westbrook, who led the Washington Redskins in receiving yards last season, is out for the season after tearing a ligament in his left knee in Sunday's 15-10 loss in Detroit.
Westbrook, who had 69 receptions for 1,191 yards and nine touchdowns last season, was hurt in the third quarter of the game. He will be replaced by a combination of James Thrash and Irvin Fryar along with Zeron Flemister, an undrafted rookie from Iowa who has one catch.
"It still comes down to the teams that handle adversity the best," coach Norv Turner said. "Other teams have lost players. You have to find a way to overcome it."

POINTCOUNTERPOINT

Will Steve Alford leave for Indiana?

Steve Alford will be going to Indiana, and this is how it is going to play out.

Indiana will hire an interim coach for this season, likely a current IU assistant, since it is too close to the season to lure a top-notch coach away from his team.

Indiana will spend the entire 2000-01 basketball season trying to find the best coach it can. It will see the success that IU graduate Alford is having at Iowa, and it will offer him a lucrative deal mid-season, much the way Iowa did when Alford was at Southwest Missouri State. That deal will be for so much money and so much incentive that there is no way Alford will turn it down.

As much time as Iowa fans spend trying to convince themselves that Alford won't leave Iowa, they seem to have forgotten that this is Indiana basketball, where national titles can be won and have been, and where Alford is a god.

Alford will not turn that down because he doesn't want to follow in the footsteps of Bobby Knight — he's not that foolish. He knows that the IU job is the one he's wanted since he left, and he knows that this job will bring him more spectacle and recruits than Iowa.

Mike, if there is any reason Alford wouldn't take this job, it has nothing to do with too much pressure, trust me.

Imagine Alford, the great coach and recruiter at Iowa, and envision him coaching at Indiana, one of the most storied college basketball programs ever.

Iowa fans, stop kidding yourselves. Alford wants this Indiana job, and you all know it.

— by Jeremy Schnitker

Steve Alford will stay at Iowa because of a combination of outstanding recruits and Bobby Knight's shadow over the entire Indiana basketball program.

Indiana will probably hire an interim coach this season because no big-time coach will abandon his program five weeks before the start of the season. After the season, the new Hoosier athletic director may try to make Alford an offer he cannot refuse. Alford won't take it.

Since Alford arrived in Iowa City after the 1999 season, the program has done everything in its power to keep Alford happy. It refurbished the coach's office, painted the floor and moved the students down out of the rafters, all because Alford said he wanted it done.

Maybe he could do the same thing at Indiana, but it would take him two years to reload the Hoosier program the same way he did at Iowa.

Plus, there is too much history at Indiana for Alford to go back. He would be subjected to intense scrutiny from the time he stepped off the plane in Bloomington, and his teams would be expected to win right away. He does not have to deal with that type of pressure in Iowa City and can run his program how he wants.

I don't think Alford is the type of person who would be happy staying in someone's shadow, and he would always be in Knight's if he were to go back to Indiana.

SPORTS BRIEF

Safin and Williams push tennis forward

NEW YORK (AP) — Both are at the vanguard of tennis, pushing the sport forward by mixing pure power and all-over-the-court athleticism as few ever have.

And both have come a long way in a short time, turning around rough starts in 2000 by winning singles titles at the year's last major tournament, the U.S. Open.

Venus Williams and Marat Safin, both just 20, have futures as promising as their strokes are punishing.

It didn't seem that way in January.

Williams sat out nearly six months because of tendinitis in both wrists, and her father mused aloud about whether she'd retire. When Williams stepped back on the court, she lost two of her first four matches of the year.

Safin was fined at the Australian Open for not putting in enough effort during a defeat, one of five straight first-round exits to start the season. He even considered quitting. Now, no less an authority than Pete Sampras touts Safin as "the future of the game."

Williams is already on top, even if the rankings say otherwise.

Women's tennis has evolved since the 1970s, from the finesse of Chris Evert, to the athleticism of Martina Navratilova, to the forehand-based power of Steffi Graf, to the two-winged strength of Monica Seles.

Now there's Williams, legs and arms churning, her wrists taped like a boxer's, pounding the ball from all angles, racing to reach an opponent's hard-struck shots and returning them harder.

"I really have some wheels on myself," Williams said.

During Saturday night's final at Arthur Ashe Stadium, two girls held up side-by-side signs proclaiming: "Venus Rocks." Indeed she does.

"I've just gotten to the point where I go out and take it," Williams said, "not just hope that someone will give it to me by making mistakes."

Jacksonville Jaguars defensive tackle Gary Walker pressures Baltimore Ravens quarterback Tony Banks in the fourth quarter of the Ravens' 39-36 win Sunday.

Conventional wisdom thrown out the door in NFL during week two

With success from teams like Oakland and Baltimore, the NFL is all but predictable.

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

When the NFL season began, conventional wisdom suggested there were six top-rank teams in the NFL — St. Louis, Washington and Tampa Bay in the NFC, and Tennessee, Jacksonville and Indianapolis in the AFC.

After two weeks, four already have lost and only the Bucs look like the powerhouse they're supposed to be.

Not even teams conceded their division titles at the start of season look safe any more.

The Giants, with a revived and somewhat explosive offense, might offer some resistance to the sluggish Redskins in the NFC East. And Buffalo, with youngsters filling in for the Bruce Smiths and Thurman Thomases, might be a legitimate challenger to the Colts, who still lack a Super Bowl defense.

Add to those the Ravens, Raiders, Lions, Vikings, Panthers and Broncos, and maybe this will be a more competitive season than many thought.

NFC

No one was supposed to challenge the Bucs, Rams and Redskins.

The Bucs and Rams remain unbeaten and Tampa Bay has looked the part. Its 41-0 blowout of Chicago was such a yawner that the main postgame attraction in the locker room was Michael Jordan, Warren Sapp's new buddy.

St. Louis is another story. Its defense, underrated last season, is surrendering 35 points a game and Kurt Warner and the offense have had to average 39 to keep the defending champions 2-0. Their wins over Denver and Seattle have been schoolyard contests — last team with the ball wins.

Washington has been sluggish in wins over Carolina and a loss in Detroit. The way Brad Johnson played Sunday against the Lions (four interceptions), a Jeff George sighting is almost inevitable.

The challengers:

1. New York. The Giants have beaten Arizona and the team of last week, Philadelphia, with their usual solid defense. The Eagles' Duce Staley, who ran for 201 yards against Dallas, had 11 yards on seven carries Sunday. But now there's offense. Tiki Barber has slashed for 240 yards in 24 carries in two games and has 78- and 31-yard TD runs. This on a team whose leading rusher in 1999 had 348 yards all season.

That and the new offensive line composed of old-timers like Lomas Brown and Glenn Parker has kept Kerry Collins safe. He's been sacked once for no yards in two games.

2. Detroit. The Lions are 2-0 and have yet to score an offensive TD. They scored on a kick-off return and interception to win in New Orleans and got five Jason Hanson field goals to beat the Redskins. "We know that once we get to the 35, we've probably got three points," says Charlie Batch, who was solid but conservative at quarterback in his first start after missing all of preseason with a knee injury.

Tampa Bay comes to the Silverdome this week. So we should know more.

3. Minnesota. Daunte Culpepper ran to beat the Bears and passed to beat the Dolphins. But like the Lions, who began inside in New Orleans, they haven't gone outdoors yet and the scouting tape on Culpepper isn't complete.

4. Carolina. Could have beaten the Redskins and trampled the 49ers. Can the Panthers stay with the Rams in the West? They can if the Rams' defense continues to leak.

AFC

The Colts did what championship teams don't do — blow a 21-point lead at home. The defense was the weak link last year and it was again Sunday, allowing Rich Gannon to run for three touchdowns.

Jacksonville did what championship teams don't do, too — allowing Baltimore, a supposedly weak offensive team, make up a 23-7 deficit. Sure, Jimmy Smith caught 291 yards in passes against the Ravens' good defense. But Tony Banks is not supposed to throw for five touchdowns against the Jacksonville defense, which lost for the first time in two seasons to a team other than the Titans.

Tennessee, meanwhile, needed Neil O'Donnell off the bench for Steve McNair (bruised chest) to beat Kansas City 17-14 in overtime and avoid going 0-2.

The pretenders:

1. Baltimore: The Ravens were supposed to make the playoffs, but where was the defense against the Jaguars? Nonetheless, the 39-36 win was the first in 11 starts against Cleveland-Baltimore and put them right in the mix with Jacksonville and Tennessee in the Central.

2. Buffalo: For almost two decades, under Bill Polian and now John Butler, the Bills have had a front office that always seems to make the right move. It shed itself of big contracts in the offseason and has had a lot of great finds — from Phil Hansen a decade ago to Marcellus Wiley, Pat Williams, Shawn Bryson, Jay Riemersma of the current crop. They haven't hit the road yet, but the defense gives them a shot at challenging the Colts.

3. Oakland: What does it say that the Raiders' wins are 9-6 and 38-31? Maybe that the NFL is strange? Maybe that they can play whatever sort of game they need? Whatever,

With recent spectacle, Woods proves he's a legend in the making

After a win at the Canadian Open, Tiger's legend grows.

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

OAKVILLE, Ontario — Earl Woods first uttered the words six years ago, when his son was on the verge of losing in the finals of the U.S. Amateur. Between the morning and afternoon rounds, he whispered in his ear, "Let the legend grow."

These days, the legend of Tiger Woods is on steroids.

"The great thing about Tiger is that he's always, always going to hang in there and come up with a great shot when he needs it," said Grant Waite, who had a front-row seat to Woods' latest heroics Sunday in the Canadian Open.

This one was no less spectacular, a shot that only Woods dares to try.

Clinging to a one-stroke lead on the par-5 18th at Glen Abbey, he was in a fairway bunker 218 yards from the hole, the final 100 yards over water. The ball came off crisp and clean, rocketed into the gray sky and dropped 18 feet behind the flag.

"With the tournament on the line, to have the poise and the calm and the confidence to stand there and hit that shot explains basically what Tiger is all about," said Waite, who finished one stroke behind when his 20-foot eagle putt curled off at the end.

"He really doesn't have to say anything. That explains pretty much what kind of a person and a golfer he is," Waite said. "He is very special."

Woods has been that way all year.

It began in Hawaii, the first tournament of the year, with an eagle-birdie-birdie finish to defeat Ernie Els in a playoff. Every week that followed gave Woods another opportunity to outdo himself, and he almost always delivered.

There was that 97-yard wedge he holed from the fairway, the catalyst to his seven-stroke comeback at Pebble Beach for his sixth straight PGA Tour victory, the longest streak in 52 years. Four months later, he hit a 6-iron from out of thick rough, over a cliff and onto the par-5 sixth green during his 15-stroke romp at Pebble to win the U.S. Open.

He won the career Grand Slam at St. Andrews, and made it three straight majors at the PGA Championship. He has won in the rain at Memorial, in darkness at Firestone.

How does he do it?

"Guys pull off some of the best plays and best shots, best competitive performances, when the pressure is on because that's when they concentrate the hardest," Woods said after winning Sunday.

That's why the legend grows.

Earl Woods was watching the final round from his home in Cypress, Calif., and admitted to be a little shocked that his son could take the ball right at the flag.

"But it didn't surprise me that he pulled it off," the father said.

"He's that good, and he's always been that good. He has this ability to see things with his creative mind, and then he has the physical ability to execute the shot. Some have a creative mind but can't do it. Tiger sees it and he does it. And he does it well. That's the difference."

Such dramatics are not limited to this year.

Woods

When his father told him to "let the legend grow," Woods went out and birdied the last three holes of the '94 U.S. Amateur on the TPC at Sawgrass, including an all-or-nothing shot into the island-green 17th for a birdie and a 1-up advantage.

He won his record three straight U.S. Amateur titles by making a 40-foot birdie putt on the next-to-last hole to tie the match against Steve Scott, then beat him in extra holes.

Adding to the theater are the crowds Woods attracts — about 50,000 at Glen Abbey Golf Club, the largest in the 96-year history of the Canadian Open. The Buick Open galleries were double the size because Woods was playing.

"In every tournament, he'll hit shots that people will be talking about for 30 years," his father said.

U.S. teams makes strange exit

■ The U.S. basketball teams evades protesters outside their Australian hotel Monday.

By Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — The U.S. basketball teams made a bizarre, pre-dawn exit Tuesday (Monday night CDT) from their besieged hotel complex, but only after getting final clearance from a young protester with a mohawk.

With massive protests taking place outside their hotel, which also was the site of the World Economic Forum, the men's and women's teams were virtual prisoners inside. A decision was made late Monday night to get out of Melbourne and head to Sydney, and the teams got onto buses by 6:45 a.m.

About 100 protesters sat in the street and blocked the main exit near the front entrance of the Crown Casino and Hotel. The protesters decided by voice vote that they would not move aside to let the team leave.

The buses then turned around and headed toward a different exit, where another group of demonstrators had gathered.

Not believing that the buses held Olympic athletes, the protesters initially refused to move. After the police asked them to come inside the concrete barricades and have a look for themselves, a 21-year-old with a punk-rock haircut volunteered to do the job.

"I looked in the first bus and it didn't look like a basketball team, but then I looked inside the second bus," said the man with the, Yanni Cotis of Adelaide. "We had a quick discussion about whether to let them go through and decided to let them leave."

Players and team personnel were half-amused and half-shocked that their safe passage was in the hands of someone looking like a distant cousin of Billy Idol.

"Something I learned long ago was to expect the unexpected," U.S. coach Rudy Tomjanovich said, "and this was one of those cases. It was good we got out and got our freedom."

The players' family members had left a few hours earlier, before most of the protesters arrived at the hotel.

The teams had planned to stay in Melbourne until later this week, but the protests that virtually shut down the hotel forced a hasty change in plans.

The men's team had to cancel practice Monday because of the protests, while the women's team made it out of the hotel on foot before being forced to return by boat.

USA Basketball officials had been warned months ago that they could become circumstantial victims of the protests, but decided to stick with their accommodations.

Now they're moving on to Sydney with some strange stories to tell.

"I was stunned by the whole situation," Antonio McDyeess said. "How could they let a guy in a mohawk be their leader?"

Arrojo's shutout leads Boston

NEW YORK (AP) — Rolando Arrojo and the Boston Red Sox made the most of their brief trip to the Bronx.

Arrojo pitched shutout ball into the eighth inning, Jose Offerman and Manny Alexander homered, and the Red Sox salvaged the final game of an unusual four-game series, beating the New York Yankees 4-0 Monday night.

The Yankees swept a three-game set during the weekend in Boston. Not since July 8-9, 1959, had these longtime rivals played at Fenway Park and Yankee Stadium on consecutive days — a rainout on June 12 caused this makeup.

"Your starting pitching sets the tone," Red Sox manager Jimmy Williams said. "It was big for us because we knew who we were facing."

The Red Sox trail the Yankees by eight games in the AL East, but closed within three games of Cleveland in the wild card race.

Boston barely had time to unpack for this visit. Players hardly touched their luggage in the locker room, leaving bags intact as they prepared to go to Cleveland for a three-game series starting Tuesday night.

Arrojo (5-2) outpitched his best friend in baseball, Orlando Hernandez, as Boston stopped New York's four-game winning streak.

Reds 7, Cubs 6

CINCINNATI — Sammy Sosa hit his major league-leading 49th homer but Jason LaRue had a career-high five RBIs Monday night to lead the Cincinnati Reds.

LaRue, making a bid for the starting catcher's job next year, hit a three-run homer in the second and a two-run double in the fourth for a 6-3 lead. He is considered a good defensive catcher and handler of pitchers but began the night with a .171 average and five RBIs in 70 at-bats.

Ken Griffey Jr. left with a strained left hamstring after colliding with Joe Girardi at home plate in the seventh, trying to score from first on a double by Dmitri Young.

Brewers 8, Mets 2

NEW YORK — Paul Rigdon pitched 6 2-3 solid innings and Richie Sexson homered as the Milwaukee Brewers handed the New York Mets their eighth loss in 10 games.

Rigdon (3-3), a right-hander acquired along with Sexson from Cleveland in the Bob Wickman deal, allowed two runs and five hits as Milwaukee won for the fifth time in his last six starts.

The Mets dropped three games behind idle Atlanta in the NL East. New York entered the day 4½ games ahead of Arizona in the wild card race.

Cardinals 8, Pirates 4

PITTSBURGH — Mark McGwire homered for the first time in more than two months and Edgar Renteria hit a tiebreaking single in the eighth inning Monday night, leading the St. Louis Cardinals over the Pittsburgh Pirates.

McGwire hit a two-run homer in the first inning, his 31st of the season and first since July 1. He had been limited to one plate appearance in each of the four games since he came off the disabled list last week.

McGwire, sidelined from July 6-Sept. 8 with patella tendinitis in his right knee, has been listed as a second baseman and has left each time after batting in the top of the first.

Phillies 5, Expos 2

PHILADELPHIA — This time, Cliff Politte didn't have to worry about packing his bags after an impressive performance.

Last time he pitched for the Philadelphia Phillies, Politte outdueled Kevin Brown for a victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers. Soon after the game, he was optioned to Triple-A Scranton/Wilkes-Barre.

"I don't think that's going to happen this time," laughed Phillies manager Terry Francona after Politte pitched eight innings in a 5-2 win.

Springs, Mo., is a returning second-team All-Big Ten running back selection and a different type of runner than Allen. Betts likes to shake and take it to the outside or cut back through holes created in the middle, but those holes have been filled so far this season. Through two games, Betts has recorded only 101 yards rushing.

Ferentz wants him to touch the ball 20 times a game, and Betts did that Saturday but totaled only 51 yards, averaging 2.5 yards per carry, leaving the effectiveness of Iowa's running game up in the air.

"I know we were wearing Western Michigan down up front," said offensive lineman Sam Aiello. "We thought if we could just get that run game going, it would open things up."

The streak

Iowa has lost 17 of its last 18 and 11 in a row, going back to last season. Despite the talk of great effort and slow progression, the disappointment is evident on the Iowa sidelines.

"It's very frustrating, especially after working hard all summer, coming out and not being able to put a win together," Aiello said. "It's more than just a loss to us, We just want to put a win together because winning is an attitude. We win, we keep winning."

Iowa has four days to prepare for Saturday's game against Iowa State. The Cyclones are currently 2-0, and many have dubbed this the breakthrough season of the Dan McCarney era. People in Ames are talking bowl bid.

Iowa must put the Western Michigan game behind and look ahead.

"It's going to show the true character of this ballclub how we come out and play against Iowa State," Kaeding said. "Obviously, it's a big game for us."

out at the time and since, saying the university needed to move on and that the school was obligated to give him the money because it had no proof of wrongdoing by Haskins at the time.

In August, Haskins admitted to the NCAA that he had paid $3,000 to Gangelhoff. He has denied any knowledge that players cheated.

"Clem Haskins defrauded university officials and the people of Minnesota," said Mark Rotenberg, the school's general counsel. "This suit seeks justice for the university and recovery of funds that rightfully belong to the university and its men's intercollegiate athletics program."

The university had been considering the lawsuit for some time but waited until the NCAA investigation was completed. Last month, Rotenberg said Haskins' admission of the payment was proof that the coach broke school and NCAA rules and violated his contract.

The lawsuit, filed in Hennepin County District Court, seeks to have the buy-out contract voided and rescinded. It also seeks compensatory damages and costs.

he's one of the best coaches in the nation, and for him to not move on to another school would be a shame."

Knight's son, assistant coach Pat Knight, said Monday the experience has ruined Indiana University for him.

"The university handled this poorly," he said. "I'm ashamed to say I went here. I'll never do anything again for this university."

Would he stay on as an assistant?

"No," Knight said. "I'm going with my Dad. I stand by him."

As does a large portion of the student body. Across the campus Monday were remnants of the previous night's rallying, where thousands of students displayed pro-Knight banners and burned university President Myles Brand in effigy. Hanging by a rope outside one off-campus house was a stuffed human figure with the name Kent Harvey written on its shirt.

Harvey is the 19-year-old freshman who had a run-in with Knight that sparked the events leading to the coach's dismissal. A sign by the hanging figure said, "This is what we do to traitors."

Harvey said Knight grabbed him by the arm and cursed at him after the freshman greeted the coach at Assembly Hall by saying, "Hey, what's up, Knight?" Knight said he had simply held the student's arm and lectured him about manners. Regardless, Brand and other university officials saw the confrontation — and other misconduct that had not been publicized — as the final blow. After reprimanding Knight in May and putting him under a zero-tolerance policy, the university acted quickly, unwilling to let this latest episode linger.

But Knight's spirit will surely stick around. Once a new coach is hired and the team moves forward, Odle said he believes his old, red-sweatered coach will continue to have an impact.

"If he's at home and he watches us on TV and doesn't like the way we play," Odle said, smiling for the first time, "I'm sure we'll hear about it."

Strawberry arrested for reckless driving

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Darryl Strawberry, the suspended New York Yankees outfielder who has battled cancer and drug abuse, was jailed Monday after hitting a street sign and then running into a vehicle stopped at a red light.

Strawberry, who had cancer surgery last month, "blacked out" at the wheel from prescription medication while driving to a probation officer supervising him since a cocaine conviction in April 1999, said the outfielder's lawyer, Joseph Ficarrotta.

"He took some kind of medication and that apparently caused some reaction and made him pass out," said Ficarrotta. "Where in the sequence he blacked out, I don't know."

Strawberry, 38, was taken into custody at gunpoint by an off-duty officer who saw the collisions and was held in the Hillsborough County Jail without bail, pending a court hearing Tuesday.

"He seemed very tired and very drained," Ficarrotta said after visiting Strawberry. "He's recuperating from some very severe cancer surgery. He seemed very weak and very tired."

The eight-time All-Star faces two misdemeanor charges, driving while impaired and leaving the scene of an accident with damage, plus two counts of probation violation, which normally would not let him go free on bond.

"When I heard it this morning, I was saddened by it," Yankees general manager Brian Cashman said before Monday night's game against Boston.

McGwire hit a two-run homer in the first inning, his 31st of the season and first since July 1. He had been limited to one plate appearance in each of the four games since he was off the disabled list last week. McGwire, sidelined from July 6 to Aug. 8 with patella tendinitis in his knee, has been listed as a second baseman and has left each time batting in the top of the first.

PHILADELPHIA — This time, Cliff Lee didn't have to worry about losing his bags after an impressive performance. The first time he pitched for the Philadelphia Phillies, Polite outdueling Kevin Brown for a victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers. Soon after the game, he was optioned to Triple-A Antioch/Wilkes-Barre. "I don't think that's going to happen this time," laughed Phillies manager Terry Francona after Polite pitched eight innings in a 5-2 win.

Regardless, Brand and other university officials saw the confrontation — and other conduct that had not been criticized — as the final blow. In reprimanding Knight in the past and putting him under a no-tolerance policy, the university acted quickly, unwilling to let this latest episode slide. At Knight's spirit will surely be around. Once a new coach is hired and the team moves forward, Odle said he hopes his old, red-sweatered coach will continue to have an impact. "He's at home and he watches us on TV and doesn't see the way we play," Odle said, smiling for the first time, "sure we'll hear about it."

The Ledge

Ways to pass time in class

- Stare angrily at your desk and the light fixtures. Explain to your neighbor that you "just can't work under these conditions."
- Turn around and stare seductively at somebody in the row behind you.
- Each time your professor says "theory" or "according to," lean your head against your desk and sob uncontrollably.
- Throw both hands into the air on occasion and "raise the roof." Encourage others to do the same.
- Stand up and tell your professor that it's time for a dance interlude. Attempt to revive the Macarena if at all possible.
- Whenever something is displayed on the overhead, loudly mutter, "That ain't what my mama taught me."
- Throw your pens, notebooks and other backpack items toward the ceiling. When questioned, explain matter-of-factly that you were testing Newton's theory of gravity.
- Keep a running tab of T-shirt logos. Will Abercrombie win out, or will Old Navy pull the upset? -J.A.
