- Stare angrily at your desk and the light fixtures. Explain to your neighbor that you "just can't work under these conditions."
• Turn around and stare seductively at somebody in the row behind you.
• Each time your professor says "theory" or "according to," lean your head against your desk and sob uncontrollably.
• Throw both hands into the air on occasion and "raise the roof." Encourage others to do the same.
• Stand up and tell your professor that it's time for a dance interlude. Attempt to revive the Macarena if at all possible.

• Throw your pens, notebooks and other backpack items toward the ceiling. When questioned, explain matter-of-factly that you were testing Newton's theory of gravity.
• Keep a running log of T-shirt logos. Will Abercrombie be out, or will Old Navy pull the upset?

Steve Alford says he will remain a Hawkeye

The basketball coach dispels rumors that he will replace Bob Knight at Indiana.

By Megan Manfull, The Daily Iowan

Wearing a white Iowa sweater vest and flashing a smile, Steve Alford halted the epidemic of rumors sweeping Iowa City about his future at the UI. Iowa's second-year men's basketball coach held a news conference Tuesday and said he would not replace Bob Knight - now or in April, when Indiana starts to search for a permanent replacement. "It's Sept. 12; this is the last time I'm going to talk about it," Alford said. "I'm not going to talk about something that's not going to happen. "I need to get that word out

- it's not just a commitment now, it's a commitment nine months from now."

Not far from the emblazoned Tiger Hawk on Alford's sweater vest was the gleaming crimson of the 1987 NCAA Championship ring, which is always on the coach's right hand.

On Sunday, the presence of the ring and what it represents ignited a media frenzy that focused on Alford replacing Knight after Indiana University fired the volatile coach. Everyone wanted to know if the ring and the memories would drive Alford back to his alma mater. However, Bob Bowsby, the UI athletics director, said he never doubted Alford's commitment to the Hawkeyes.

Part of his confidence may come from Alford's five-year contract, which runs through 2004. Alford denied rumors about a supposed clause in his contract that would allow him to leave Iowa for Indiana.

"About 18 months ago, I assured Mr. Bowsby with a verbal commitment that I would not entertain any other opportunities within the Big Ten," Alford said. "Obviously, Indiana is within the Big Ten. I'm honoring my word to Mr. Bowsby, and I would hope the people of Indiana can understand that."

Bowsby said there are no current plans to extend the current contract but that he would talk to Alford about it in the upcoming months.

As stars take it off, many are not amused

Several sound off about Britney Spears' and Christina Aguilera's award-show outfits.

By Amanda Gorsche, The Daily Iowan

UI experts and students alike say the images of women portrayed at recent awards ceremonies were disturbing.

UI senior Amina Qureshi was in disbelief after watching the MTV Video Music Awards Sept. 7.

Like other music television fans, she observed pop singer Britney Spears strip from a sequined suit to a flesh-colored sequined outfit that covered little of the teen's body. Co-host Marlon Wayans described the ensemble as "Britney Spears going from the Mickey Mouse Club to the strip club."

"Her outfit was ludicrous," Qureshi said. "Her whole image is a complete media ploy."

The controversial striptease appropriated by Spears at the awards show has some questioning whether Hollywood has taken the extravagance and absurdity of women's images portrayed at these types of events too far.

UI senior Tracy Mason said she did not like the outfits Christina Aguilera and Spears wore to the Video Music Awards because she is concerned that her 16-year old sister might emulate the style perpetuated by the two singers. Some people might be set up for disappointment if they attempt to copy the body types portrayed by famous women, Mason said.

"It depends on a person's self-esteem," she said. "Self-esteem and the people that they choose to surround themselves with can determine if they're disappointed in not looking like that."

The Video Music Awards last week and the Emmys on Sunday night presented viewers with the usual fare of acceptance speeches and colorful performances. But they also showcased very thin and toned bodies - images some experts say are potentially harmful to young women and

Wallace, Leff sweep School Board vote

County officials report a low voter turnout in Iowa City.

By Vanessa Miller, The Daily Iowan

Pete Wallace will serve a second term and Janet Leff will serve her first as members of the Iowa City School Board, with each receiving near 80 percent of the vote in Tuesday's election.

Preliminary totals had Wallace receiving 1,885 votes, newcomer Leff receiving 1,951 votes, and Elizabeth Atwood receiving 607 votes. A total of 2,386 people voted in the election, with each voting for two candidates.

Leff celebrated Tuesday evening after receiving the news that she garnered the most votes and would fill the seat on the board left vacant by her husband, Al.

"I am looking forward to working with the board for the next three years," she said. "I hope that it can be a productive time for all."

Leff said she felt that she could be an asset to the board because of her past involvement with the district as a teacher.

In response to his victory, Wallace said he is grateful to receive a second term and is looking forward to working on projects he had begun during his first term.

"I am enjoying working on the completion of present ends-policies and creating possible new ends-policies," he said. "I also want to see the improvement regarding parental involvement."

In a candidates' forum on Sept. 5, Wallace said he wanted to return because the board can benefit from the experience of multi-termed members. In his closing statements, he said, "I have learned a lot and would like the oppor-

Center for the Book protects America's history

A little piece of the UI will sit in a case along with the Constitution in Washington, D.C.

Patriotic and humbled is how UI junior Ben Rogers felt when he saw the Constitution for the first time.

When Rogers found out that the UI Center for the Book helped create new cases for the document by making a special paper lining, he felt even more proud.

"I think that it proves how far our state has come in such a little time frame since the Constitution was made," Rogers said.

People will be able to experience the same feelings as Rogers this weekend at the National Archives Rotunda in Washington, D.C., as the second page of the Constitution is displayed in its new case for the first time.

The special paper made at the Center for the Book will line the bottom of the case and protect the document, which is made from parchment. By 2003, the National Archives will have completed restoration of the other pages of the Constitution, the Declaration of Independence and the Bill of Rights. UI-made paper will line these cases, also.

The Center for the Book got the job because of its highly regarded reputation in the area of book conservation. The paper was made from cotton, which was specially manufactured to cushion the document on a surface that won't hurt it and to stabilize the humidity in the case, said Lynn Amlie, the Center for the Book's paper shop manager.

The new paper bottom will be used along with aluminum, titanium and laminated tempered glass to preserve the documents, according to the National Archives' Web site.

Amlie and Tim Barrett, the director of the Center for the Book, were both involved with the research and development of the 100 sheets of paper, each 36 square inches. Barrett developed the pneumatic press that made the paper, Amlie said.

also helped with every step of the process. One, Paul Denhoed, said it was an honor to be involved because the Constitution is so important to American history and culture.

"We're all very proud of the work that we did," he said. "A little part of me is resting inside of the case with the documents."

Student governments at odds over tuition hikes

The UI, ISU and UNI leaders may present mixed messages to the regents today.

By Ryan Foley, The Daily Iowan

Student government leaders from the state's three public universities will present their views on the proposed tuition/fee increases to the state of Iowa Board of Regents in a meeting at the IMU today.

Although the student-body presidents are scheduled to make a combined presentation to the regents at 1:30 p.m. in the Richey Ballroom, the leaders may convey different messages.

UI Student Government President Andy Stoll said he plans to stress that it is important to hold the UI administration financially accountable for how the money generated from a tuition hike would be spent, while the two other presidents said Tuesday they plan to tell

Candidate Browne wants to take the gov't out of gov't

Conrad Schmidt/The Daily Iowan
Harry Browne, Libertarian presidential candidate, speaks to a large crowd at the Sheraton Hotel Tuesday night.

■ The Libertarian Party presidential candidate stresses individual liberty and personal responsibility.

By Jesse Elliott
The Daily Iowan

Libertarian presidential candidate Harry Browne, who spoke in Iowa City Tuesday night, said the truly revolutionary character of the Founding Fathers and their idea of limited government have been lost in modern-day America.

Browne compares the current situation to a breached business contract.

"If you and I go into business, we make a contract — both of us have certain privileges and responsibilities," Browne told The Daily Iowan. "If I come back tomorrow and say 'I've decided I'm going to have more privileges and you're going to have fewer responsibilities and you're going to have more,' you would say, 'But that's not in our contract.'"

"Taking the stance of a modern politician, I would tell you our contract has to move, to breathe, to grow. This is what has happened to the contract that is our Constitution."

Speaking to a crowd of 150 Iowa City residents, UI students and other supporters, Browne said the Libertarian Party would like to replace the current government with a minimal system that would encourage "individual liberty, personal responsibility, and very, very, very small government," thus reflecting what the framers of the Constitution envisioned.

"We want government so small they start putting its picture on the back of milk cartons," said Michael Cloud, a Libertarian fund-raiser and the emcee for the evening.

Browne said such a change would be possible if government leadership would eliminate all programs not specified by the Constitution. This would make it possible to get rid of all Social Security and income taxes, a revenue of $1.6 trillion annual, and run the government on tariff and excise taxes alone. Browne said he pays his income tax but does so reluctantly.

Libertarian candidates for local offices attended the rally, including Hughie Tweedie, state Representative candidate in the 98th district, Tim Borchard, a candidate for the Johnson County Board of Supervisors, and Russ Madden, a candidate for U.S. Representative in the 1st District.

"My two major platforms are defense of the Second Amendment — the right to bear arms — and termination of the drug war," Madden told The Daily Iowan.

Not all in attendance were committed Libertarian Party supporters. UI sophomore Jonathon Narducci said he knows little about Browne but that he "believes in lending an ear to third parties because they don't receive the attention they deserve in the two-party dominated system."

UI freshman Jim Heller considers himself a Republican.

"I won't vote for Browne," he said. "But I like the Libertarian platform because it is like Republicans minus the Christian Coalition and religious right."

Browne said he does not identify himself with any sort of Republican or Democratic ideologies or any of the leaders of either party.

"What I want for America is not a leader, but 250 million leaders, all leading their own lives," he told the crowd.

City Council poised for second deer kill

■ Councilors and Iowa City residents applaud the deer committee's work.

By Megan Eckhardt
The Daily Iowan

Although many disagreed with aspects of the 2000-01 Deer Management Plan at Tuesday's Iowa City City Council meeting, councilors are expected to pass a deer-kill plan to deal with herd overpopulation next week.

Councilors and residents alike said they appreciated the Deer Management Committee's hard work and knew that making the recommendation for the deer kill was not easy.

Some councilors stressed looking into more options in the future, but they acknowledged the committee through a "thank you" that Mayor Ernie Lehman gave on the council's behalf.

Iowa City resident Mary Wall said she also felt the committee "listened and did a good job." Despite her positive regard for the committee, she disagreed with the proposed plan of killing 500 deer.

"It bothers me that we have a problem, and we consider killing as a solution," she said. "This makes our kids take guns to school and solve a problem by killing."

Wall said she believes that the $98,450 allotted for the deer kill should be considered for purchasing an area of land used as a deer preserve. Feeding and viewing the deer may be another option that could be considered, she said.

Wall also said she believes that using contraception to control the deer population would be a better option. While birth control for deer is available and may someday be an option, the committee did not recommend it because it is expensive and the FDA has not yet approved the drug.

Iowa City resident Charlie Major said that he had confidence in the sharpshooting plan and with using the company White Buffalo Inc. He anticipates that the deer problem will not be handled in just one year and will be an ongoing issue.

"I wish we didn't have to kill, but the only other option is for us to leave," Major said during the public discussion.

Councilor Steven Kanner said that he thought the committee did a pretty good job, although he felt that its view on the problem was constricted.

"I think that their scope of mandate was narrowed to the long-term plan," he said. "It's the job of the council to widen the scope and look into other options."

Kanner said he would like consider issues such as how urban development affects deer herds and using contraception for deer.

"I don't really see it as a problem," he said. "It's more of a nuisance, which shouldn't call for killing 500 deer."

Councilor Irvin Pfab said he believes that the committee was "in a straight jacket."

"The deer committee had a job to do, and that was to get rid of the deer," he said.

Pfab said he would like to consider bow-hunting as an option, which the committee did not recommend but didn't reject either. He also said that he would like to look into a deer habitat, as Wall introduced during the public discussion.

Memmer trial may be delayed until Feb.

■ A judge will decide today if the trial will begin as planned.

By Nicole Schuppert
The Daily Iowan

Attorneys on both sides of the Jonathon Memmer double-homicide case moved Tuesday to delay the trial until February 2001.

While the trial is scheduled to begin on Oct. 16, a judge will decide today whether to approve the delay, said Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White.

Memmer was charged on Feb. 25 in connection with the deaths of Laura Watson-Dalton, 29, and Maria Therese Lehner, 27, who were found beaten to death after a fire at 427 S. Van Buren St. Apt. 4. Memmer will participate in today's hearing via telephone, White said.

Both the prosecuting and defense attorneys agreed at a status conference on Sept. 8 that they needed more time to finish taking the testimonies of 29 of the 84 witnesses listed in the trial information, according to court documents.

The remaining depositions may take more time than those already completed because the majority are from law-enforcement, laboratory and medical personnel, according to court documents.

"It is our joint judgment at this time that a trial date of Feb. 19 or 26 is realistic — based on our current knowledge and evaluation," attorneys said in court documents.

White and Memmer's attorneys, Dennis Cohen and Edward Leff, said the difficulty of finding times when all the lawyers would be available to interview witnesses is another reason to request the delay, according to court documents.

Upon completion of the depositions, the defense will

Ped Mall Cost Cutters moves to Coralville

■ The hair salon hopes the move brings a more stable clientele.

By Kellie Doyle
The Daily Iowan

In hopes of serving more than the "seasonal" college crowds it has served for the past 10 years, Cost Cutters hair salon will relocate to the Coralville Super Wal-Mart, which is under construction, said Cost Cutters President Mark Evans. The store, currently located at 105 E. College St., will close on Sept. 23, and it will open at its new location on Oct. 11.

"It's been slow traffic," said Sandy Dahms, the operational manager for Cost Cutters, about the Pedestrian Mall location. "It's seasonal — oriented to college students. It's hard to regulate a business off of college students. When you're in that kind of business, you need to maintain a consistent income level and staff." Evans agreed, adding it is difficult to find and keep staff in the college environment — especially in the hair industry. "We haven't lost money. It just hasn't been overly profitable the last year," Dahms said.

Trying to decide whether moving the business would be in the store's best interest has been a topic of discussion for almost a year, Evans said.

Evans Enterprises, the company that oversees the Cost Cutters and City Looks stores in the area, noticed its Cost Cutters locations in the two Cedar Rapids Wal-Marts had been successful, Evans said.

After discussing the benefits of the new location and the setbacks of the current one, the corporation decided in mid-August to move the store. Both Evans and Dahms agreed that the Wal-Mart location will hold a definite opportunity for the business and staff to make more money because it will be busier.

"The biggest difference is it's steady 365 days a year," Evans said. "Hundreds of people walk by every day."

Evans and Dahms said they realize this relocation could cause them to lose some current customers, but hope that a majority of them, particularly the UI students, will follow the business.

At least one of the store's regular customers will not make the trek out to Coralville.

"I probably won't go out there," said UI sophomore

Frank Domitrovich. "I'll find some place else to go."

UI freshman Travis Shekleton, who has been to Cost Cutters once, said he probably will continue to frequent the store after it moves.

"I live close to the mall, so it probably won't make that much difference to me," he said.

UI junior Molly Carlson has been a Cost Cutters customer for three years and has always been pleased with its low prices.

"When it moves, I'll have to find an equivalent to its price and walk-in convenience," she said.

State sets goal for population growth

■ Iowa aims for a 10 percent growth rate over the next 10 years.

Associated Press

DES MOINES — State leaders have set a goal of expanding Iowa's population by more than 10 percent over the next decade — but that would take growth seen more in the Sunbelt than the Corn Belt.

Nineteen states grew by more than 10 percent from 1990 through 1999, according to the U.S. Census Bureau. Those states were in the South and West. States in the Midwest and Northeast experienced moderate growth, if any.

The last time Iowa achieved a population increase greater than 10 percent over a decade was more than a century ago, when it grew by 16.7 percent in the 1890s.

"We need to put a focus on population," said David Oman, the leader of the governor's 2010 planning council, which set the goal after more than a year of meeting to draft a vision for the state. "Today's problems will seem like child's play in 10 years unless we see some serious growth."

Iowa has been one of the slowest-growing states over the past three decades, according to the latest census data.

The state's population was at 2.91 million in 1980, then fell to 2.77 million 10 years later. Last year, Iowa had an estimated 2.87 million residents.

The 1990s gain came entirely from an influx of immigrants. Iowa's U.S.-born population declined over the past decade.

Gov. Tom Vilsack believes Iowa has the potential to achieve the 10 percent goal.

Vilsack came to the governor's office less than two years ago emphasizing the importance of increasing Iowa's population. If the population doesn't grow, Iowa businesses won't have the people they need to grow and may choose to expand in other states, he said.

His planning group, Iowa 2010, set the goal of increasing the state population by 310,000 people — well over 10 percent. That's more than triple the 1990's growth rate.

"A couple of us would have liked to change that goal to 200,000, a more realistic number," Oman said.

Oman, a former Republican candidate for governor, said he has no doubt that Iowa's economic and social future depends significantly on increasing the number of young people in the state. The group has raised the possibility of increasing the immigrant population in Iowa as one way to reach the goal.

State to offer funds for school construction

■ The Iowa Department of Education is expected to distribute $50 million through 2002.

Associated Press

DES MOINES — The Iowa Department of Education is expected to start taking applications from districts that want a share of a $50 million program for school construction.

"This is a real opportunity," said Larry Sigel of the Iowa Association of School Boards. "This is the first state foray into this area. The state has never taken any responsibility before."

Under the Vision Iowa school program, approved by lawmakers earlier this year, districts could qualify for up to $1 million each but will have to provide a local match of between 20 and 50 percent.

Districts that do not have a local-option sales tax are among those who will be given greater priority for the state money.

Applications are due March 1, and grants are expected to be awarded in May.

The schools initiative grew out of negotiations for a grant program also approved by the Legislature to develop community attractions. It helped alleviate rural lawmakers' concerns about the attractions money, as well as about the fairness of urban areas using the sales tax for schools.

Communities that receive attractions grants will not be eligible for the school money.

Among the first in line for the new school grants will be the Norwalk Community School District, which has a growing student enrollment but little ability to raise money for schools. Norwalk is just south of Des Moines in Warren County.

Superintendent Tom Fish said the district would apply for $1 million to complete improvements at Oviatt Elementary School.

The $50 million "is a pretty small sum over three years," Fish said, when compared with the $711 million that Polk County's local-option sales tax is expected to generate over 10 years.

Not all of the state grants will be distributed at once. In May, $10 million will be awarded. That will be followed by $20 million in December 2001, and another $20 million in December 2002. The money will be divided so that small, medium and large school districts get a chance at it.

The rules, which must be approved before applications are taken, will be reviewed by the Legislature's Administrative Rules Review Committee today in Des Moines.

The Glands will make you sing

■ The Athens, Ga., natives bring their catchy style to Gabe's tonight.

By Aaron McAdams
The Daily Iowan

It's amazing how much mileage a band can get out of scratchy guitar riffs, clattering drums and off-key harmonies.

Just ask the Glands. The Athens, Ga.-based outfit is currently touring the country fueled by these three ingredients.

Wait! Come back! Believe it or not, the mix is quite tasty.

The Glands is a quick-winking, slyly-smirking helping of rock 'n' roll nonchalance. Hear the tension in that harmony, the feedback on that guitar? Then you're perfectly in tune with what the Glands put down.

Having aurally perused the catalogues of every record company from Motown to Sub Pop, the Glands takes pleasure in giving its musical influences a glowing garage-band sheen. As lead vocalist Ross Shapiro playfully puts it, "We steal from everybody indiscriminately."

While the Glands is garage-band in its mode of production, it's pop radio in the end. Everyone knows that bouncy piano licks and campy back-up vocals make for irresistible pop music, and the Glands' self-titled CD has both.

Basically, these guys write damn catchy songs.

Tonight, plan on leaving Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., singing "Doo Doo Doo Doo Doo" all the way home after The Glands does its instrument-switching, body-twitching thing. The DI recently caught up with Shapiro to talk about all things "Glandular."

DI: So how did the band get together?

RS: Me and Joe (Rowe, the drummer) worked in a restaurant together. We would go into our friend's studio and mess around and lay down tracks. Eventually we had songs, and other people came down and recorded. We put out our own album ourselves, somebody picked it up, and then we started playing live.

DI: How would you say the band has progressed from your first album, Double Thriller, to your self-titled album?

RS: Probably, less f---ing off in the studio, but we still f--- off so, you know ... I guess the songs on this album were a little more thought out before we committed them to tape, whereas before we weren't really a band. It was just me and Joe, so we could do anything we wanted, and we kind of made it up as we went along.

DI: What have you been listening to lately?

RS: I don't know, we just have a s---load of CDs that we go through. I like live stuff when I'm driving just because at nighttime, it makes me feel like there's a crowd of people around. Some guy gave one of the guys in the band a live Neil Diamond CD from '74, which is very funny and I listen to that, also some early, live Police.

DI: Can you think of any particular albums or bands that have had a distinct influence on you and your music?

RS: Well, growing up I lived in these apartments with my two older cousins and my older brother, so I would always go through their record collections because I didn't really have one. They would always have a steady supply of the Who, and some people may find this repulsive, but I wore out my cousin's Crosby, Stills, Nash and Young Deja Vu record. And then lots of Motown stuff, Jackson 5, stuff like that.

DI: Is there any particular venue that you like always like to play?

RS: This is basically our first major outing, but there's been good spots and not-so-good spots. We played a place in San Francisco called Cafe Du Nord, an old speakeasy built in 1907. In Athens, we play all the places, but we like the Caladonia Lounge the best because it's just a small room, a great old rock room. If you have 30 people in there, it can be a rockin' show.

DI: What about those not-so-good shows you mentioned? Any on-stage disasters?

RS: Well, there's problems every night. The worst that's happened on this tour was being shocked in a couple of places that weren't grounded. We've played some weird shows before. We played at the University of Georgia in their little cement courtyard that they have. It was probably 100-plus degrees when we started playing, so there were people there, but they were way off in the distance in the shade. It felt like we were in a Spanish prison courtyard waiting to be executed.

No second fiddle for 'Law and Order'

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Not much sex, maybe, but plenty of violins: "Law and Order," the long-running NBC drama set in New York City, went to a New Jersey concert hall for a musical backdrop.

Members of the New Jersey Symphony Orchestra filmed with cast members last week at the New Jersey Performing Arts Center. The stars of the series, Jerry Orbach and Jesse L. Martin, investigate the murder of a violinist in the episode.

"This was supposed to be Lincoln Center, but we couldn't afford Lincoln Center," producer Lou Gold said. "We saw three or four other halls — nothing as grand as this one."

"It's a beautiful building," Orbach agreed. "I've been hearing a lot about it — its acoustics. It's wonderful."

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Three-month-old twins who were joined at the buttocks were in stable condition Tuesday after being separated surgically.

The Liberian girl, who was born in the eight-hour operation at Children's Hospital, was in separate condition.

Mary Cole, 37, and her sister Deontee, 35, were doctors said.

"The nurses were them back in the hospital," said Dr. Gail Bessinger, a pediatric surgeon. "Now, they are in cribs. That's good because Mary is a girl."

The girls, born in a separate vital operation,

WASHINGTON — Racial and geographic disparities exist in the federal government's requests for the death penalty, according to a Justice Department study released Tuesday. The study called the findings "troubling."

The report, released by Attorney General John Ashcroft, was certain to renew calls from civil rights and legal groups for a moratorium on federal executions.

Reno imposed a 1995 requirement that prosecutors get her approval before death sentences are handed down in each case by a federal judge. The report also says that the review team found that the race of the defendant and the race of the attorney sometimes tell them in favor of arguing against the death penalty.

Reno's goal was more uniform sentencing. The report found the system of experience with the death penalty was not uniform.

Buchanan to Reform Party

WASHINGTON — A Reform Party's dispute over federal campaign finance rules belongs to Pat Buchanan, Election Commission said.

Buchanan, the former vice-presidential pick who is counting on to revive his presidential campaign, is entitled to the money because he is the nominee, the FEC said in a ruling.

The commissioners gave their final approval, authorizing the party to give Buchanan a check for $1 million. John Hagelin, who is not Buchanan, is the mate nominee, and the federal court, and the release of the money.

Conjoined twins separated

■ After an eight-hour operation, the twin girls are in "critical but stable" condition.

By Charley Gillespie

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Three-month-old Siamese twins who were joined at the buttocks were in critical but stable condition Tuesday after being separated surgically.

The Liberian girls had been flown to the United States for the eight-hour operation Monday at Children's Hospital.

After the operation, the girls were in separate cribs for the first time.

Mary Cole, weighing 10 pounds, and her sister, 7-pound Decontee, were doing well, doctors said.

"The nurses want to put them back in the same crib," said Dr. Gail Besner, the lead pediatric surgeon. "But for now, they are in side-by-side cribs. That's good for Decontee, because Mary always poked her."

The girls, born on June 4 in a hut in an African village, had separate vital organs, but the bases of their spines were fused. The bone had to be separated, and surgeons had to fashion new anal openings for both.

Through an interpreter, the girls' mother, Anna Cole, 25, praised hospital staffers "for all the generosity and love they have given my children ... I ask you for your continued support because I cannot afford to support them on my own."

She has a son and two other daughters, all under age 8, who remained at home with her husband.

The twins are expected to take two to three months to recover.

Cole's trip from Africa was arranged by Liberian President Charles Taylor and a Liberian doctor who had heard about Children's Hospital's experience with Siamese, or conjoined, twins.

The hospital successfully separated sets of Siamese twins in 1978 and 1980. Two other attempts in 1986 and 1993 ended in the deaths of both babies, spokeswoman Katie Pakel said.

Siamese twins happen anywhere from one in 30,000 to one in 100,000 births, with

Dems smell a rat in Bush TV ad

■ The GOP is pulling an anti-Gore ad that subliminally flashes the word "rats."

By Laura Meckler
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A GOP commercial that subtly flashes the word "RATS" across the screen is coming off the air amid allegations the Republicans were trying to send a subliminal message about Al Gore.

George W. Bush called the notion "bizarre and weird," and his campaign made light of it all. The GOP admaker said he was just trying to make the spot visually interesting.

But Gore's campaign and experts in political advertising said the word choice — as an announcer was denouncing Gore's Medicare plan — could hardly have been an accident.

"I've never seen anything like it," the vice president said Tuesday in Middletown, Ohio. Running mate Joseph Lieberman called the ad "very disappointing and strange."

"I'm sure the public will be puzzled by it, as we are, and want an explanation," Lieberman said.

Bush noted that the word appears only fleetingly — for a fraction of a second. Played at full speed, it's barely noticeable, particularly if the viewer isn't looking for the word.

"One frame out of 900 hardly in my judgment makes a conspiracy," Bush said Tuesday in Orlando, Fla. "I am convinced this is not intentional. You don't need to play, you know, cute politics."

Gore aides reveled in the story, which they leaked to the press after being alerted by a careful viewer in Seattle.

"Ad graphics don't pop up out of thin air. Someone sits down at a computer and creates them," said Gore spokesman Doug Hattaway.

The ad, which has been running in several states for more than two weeks, touts Bush's plan for adding prescription drugs to Medicare, arguing that senior citizens will have more control over their health care under Bush's proposal. Gore's plan, the ad says, will be run by bureaucrats.

Words flash on the screen to echo the announcer's message: "The Gore prescription plan: Bureaucrats decide."

But just as the announcer says "bureaucrats decide," the word "RATS," in large, white capital letters, fills the black screen.

Alex Castellanos, who made the ad for the Republican National Committee, said he flashed the letters — the tail end of "bureaucrats" — so the ad would look more visually interesting and it was just a coincidence it came out "rats."

"It's a visual drumbeat," he said. "People get bored watching TV. You're trying to get them interested and involved."

Federal death penalty comes under fire

■ A Justice Department study finds "troubling" demographics of those executed.

By Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Wide racial and geographic disparities exist in the federal government's requests for death penalties, according to a Justice Department study released Tuesday. The White House called the findings troubling.

The report, requested by Attorney General Janet Reno, was certain to provoke renewed calls from Congress, civil rights and legal groups for a moratorium on federal death sentences.

Reno imposed a new system in 1995 requiring U.S. Attorneys to get her approval for all death sentences after a review of each case by a team of senior Justice officials. Neither she nor the review team members are told the race of defendants, but defense attorneys sometimes tell them in the course of arguing against the death penalty.

Reno's goal was to achieve a more uniform system, but the report found the first five years of experience with the system were not uniform.

The numbers did show, however, that Justice Department recommendations for death sentences in federal cases roughly reflected the racial percentages of the pool of defendants charged with capital crimes.

Between 1995 and July of this year, U.S. attorneys forwarded for review the cases of 682 defendants who faced capital charges, of which 20 percent were white and 80 percent were minorities. U.S. attorneys recommended the death penalty for 183 of them, 26 percent of them whites and 74 percent minorities.

Reno approved seeking death penalties for 159 of them, of which 28 percent were for whites and 72 percent for minorities.

During this period, 20 defendants have been sentenced to death, of which 20 percent were white and 80 percent minorities.

NATION BRIEF

Buchanan to get Reform Party funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reform Party's disputed $12.6 million in federal campaign money belongs to Pat Buchanan, the Federal Election Commission said Tuesday.

Buchanan, the former Republican who is counting on the money to revive his presidential campaign, is entitled to the money as the party's nominee, the FEC said in a 5-1 preliminary ruling.

The commissioners are expected to give their final approval within days, authorizing the U.S. Treasury to give Buchanan a check. However, John Hagelin, who contends that he, not Buchanan, is the party's legitimate nominee, intends to appeal to a federal court, and that could delay release of the money.

The Reform Party is due the money because of the 1996 election showing of party founder Ross Perot, who won 8 percent of the national vote. But the commission went against the wishes of Perot, who submitted an affidavit favoring Hagelin.

The only negative vote Tuesday came from Commissioner Karl Sandstrom, who expressed concern about the party's fighting. He said he preferred that a federal court resolve the fight.

However, Commissioner Bradley Smith said it is not the panel's obligation to determine who the Reform Party candidate should be.

Britney Spears bares her soul — and then some ...

She's not that innocent

Yeah, she did it again, all right, and so did Christina. But there's no "oops" about it. The two most prominent teen idols in the country, Britney Spears and Christina Aguilera, showcased more than just their voices at the Sept. 7 MTV Video Music Awards. Meanwhile, much of the viewing public sat gaping in their living rooms at the peculiar lack of clothing.

Pop sensation Spears appeared in a barely-there, flesh-toned stretch outfit with a minuscule top during her performance at the show. Likewise, fellow songster Aguilera arrived "wearing" what appeared to be Brooke Shields' leftover wardrobe from Blue Lagoon: small amounts of torn material hanging by threads. It looks as if the phrase "less is more" is sweeping the country, prompting musicians to consult their stylists and swagger her exhibitionist image without causing the magnitude of last year's public discomfort. Still, the relentless flaunting of the young singer's sexuality accounts for much of her fan adulation — among girls and boys alike.

Spears and Aguilera, role models to millions of young girls, show no anxiety about their evocative outfits and suggestive gestures and lyrics. After all, the legacy dates back to their forerunner, music's original sassy pop vamp, Madonna. But, lest the public forget, Madonna began her rise to fame in her mid-20s. Not until years later did she begin to shed considerable amounts of clothing. Spears, however, has already chosen to showcase her body as the main attraction. The mere mention of her name evokes thoughts of tight, leather tube tops and hot pants.

Spears, along with Aguilera, 'NSYNC, Eminem and other relatively young artists receive a sizeable chunk of their publicity in magazines like J-14, which are predominantly marketed toward pre-teen girls.

Soon, 9-year-old girls everywhere will be on the lookout for the latest flesh-toned pants and sequin-spangled bikini tops.

Success in the music industry does not require pseudonudity on stage. Peers of Spears and Aguilera, including Jessica Simpson and Mandy Moore, fight the trend and regularly appear in conservative dress. Their success invalidates the assumption that wholesome images flounder. More importantly, it proves that talent can suffice to propel performers to stardom.

Try it, Britney, one more time.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The more things change at the UI, the more things stay the same

With regard to Adam White's lament ("Who will protect us from our protectors?", Sept. 5, DI), I can only offer the following observations.

Back when those of us who questioned authority were questioning everything in sight, the compulsive freaks among us were busy maneuvering themselves on the fast track to administrative positions where they could compulsively control anyone who couldn't outrun them.

Doubtless the dean in question, in making up for a wasted youth, is spending his waning years making sure that none of the students are having any fun, either. Any day — who knows, he may haul out of the grave of things best forgotten — curfews, dress codes and such arcane rules as "if two people of the opposite sex are sitting on the same couch, three of their four feet must be on the floor." I kid you not.

Of course, all that repression didn't make any of us behave any better than any of the students, no matter how hard the matriarchal-patriarchal administrators of the Nanny State tried to enforce it. And given how destructive we could be en masse, I suspect the attempts to civilize us just made us, if anything, more imaginatively naughty. The strange thing about Americans is that after years of getting all of this Emersonian nonsense about freedom and responsibility and choice and self-reliance pounded into us, some of us are actually fool enough to believe it. That we are, after all, human and can choose to act or not to act as we see fit is a strange idea and certainly not one that sits easy with those who would save us from the self-determined consequences of our own freedom of will.

In the meantime, Adam, welcome to the funhouse. It's looking more like the '60s all the time.

Remember POW/MIA Appreciation Day and those it celebrates

As we commemorate National POW/MIA Recognition Day Sept. 15, it is fitting that we pay homage to those Americans who were taken prisoner-of-war or listed as missing-in-action and presumed dead.

One such person is Col. Ruby Bradley, 91, West Virginia's most decorated female veteran, a veteran of World War II and the Korean War who lives in a personal care home in Spencer, W.Va.

Bradley, a U.S. Army nurse and a

POW for two years in the Philippines, was known as the "Angel of Fatigues" at the Santo Tomas internment camp in Manila.

Her medals reportedly include two Legion of Merit medals, the Bronze Star, two Presidential Emblems, the Meritorious Unit Emblem, the American Defense Service Medal, the World War II Victory Medal Army and the United Nations Service Medal.

National POW/MIA Recognition

Day allows Americans to comprehend and appreciate the dedication to life and freedom that these brave men and women endured in service to their country. It is for that reason that we reflect upon the sacrifices made by Americans who were captured and returned home as well as to those still listed as missing-in-action.

Welcome to reality — Let me be your host

Iowa autumns revolve around tradition. Leaves turn orange. The Hawks run on 3rd and 8. The regents raise tuition.

After 4,000 years, mankind has made sense of one of the three processes.

The annual tuition debate traditionally includes four major, distinct participants: UI administrators, UI students, the regents and Iowa government (the governor and Legislature). Each of these groups expresses interests that not only differ and contradict but, more importantly, self-contradict.

Today, the regents will hold a meeting at which they will discuss proposed tuition increases. Before any legitimate decision can be reached, each of these groups must resolve for themselves the following issues:

UI administrators: Actions speak louder than words. Each year, the UI requests a supra-inflation increase for "improvements." Moreover, each year those improvements are either non-existent or unadvertised.

I don't doubt that President Coleman & Co. honestly believes the improvements are out there; moreover, I honestly believe that it's correct, at least at small levels. But if you honestly want the students to pay 10 percent more tuition next year, you'll have a lot more success if you actually let us know what we got for it last time.

It's so simple, it's ridiculous. If a man offered to paint my house at a bargain-basement price, I'd take him up on it. However, if he took the money and ran, then showed up a year later with the same offer, I'd kick him in the ass and send him on his way.

UI students: Welcome to reality. I'll be your host. I'm ashamed to say this, because I've been as bad as anyone.

Before we can get what we pay for, we have to pay for what we get. But with the UI student body — myself included — getting us to even listen to a tuition increase is like squeezing blood out of a stone.

Our tuition is far below market par. The UI can be Michigan or Northwestern if we want it to be, but not for free. If you want a cheap education, then you can watch "Sesame Street."

Also, let's stop biting the Coke machine that feeds us. Corporate sponsorships have kept our tuition down, from the Pappajohn Building to the IMU vendors. Those who complain that we're "selling out" should get ready to pay more themselves — either through higher tuition or higher present and future tax rates.

There are no free lunches — at Burge or otherwise.

Regents: Members only — Trespassers Keep Out. Today, the regents will meet with various groups to discuss tuition. In a month, they'll hand down their decree from their ivory tower. What happens in the meantime? No one knows. The Simpson jury was a more welcoming body than the regents are.

For the next 30 days or so, the local papers will scrounge hungrily for even the most meager morsel of insight into where matters stand. Positions will be hinted, hushed, hashed out and handed down. When it's said and done, the rest of us will still be virtually ignorant of what happened.

If you want credibility, regents, then let us know throughout the process where things stand, what information you need to know and where your priorities lie. Unless you demonstrate that your process is valid, we won't assume it is.

State government: The goose that laid the golden egg — medium well, please. Gov. Tom Vilsack is on a crusade to persuade Iowa's students to stay here and turn the brain drain around. In the meantime, he's done nothing to stop cuts in university funding. So far, his best strategy has been to turn up his palms and essentially say, "Hey, compared to the Republicans, I'm not a bad guy." He's correct — the GOP has gone into great detail to show that it isn't the biggest fan of state education, and it will probably do it again as soon as tuition is raised, by cutting funding one more time.

In the meantime, it's more than glad to hand out state funds to programs for corporations and the older generation. That's fine with me, as long as it remembers that its actions today directly affect its revenue base in the future.

Let's sit down and check our premises. We want to have our cake and eat it, too — or, save our tuition and have our ITCs, or screw our students and keep our economy. I should know. I used to be a pro at it. But we all need to stop fooling ourselves. It's not funny anymore.

Alford slaps full-court press on rumors

ALFORD

The basketball coach said his focus right now rests on his future Hawkeyes. The main reason he called an uncharacteristic press conference to tell the media he was remaining at his job was recruiting.

September is a month in which coaches are able to go to players' homes, and, Alford said, the Indiana situation was beginning to affect the Iowa program.

"Coaches who have proceeded me in these homes are using this against me," Alford said. "I'm interested to see what they are going to use now. Because this is over and done with, and now it's a level playing field. Now, we'll see who can win the battle."

Alford, who has had a tense relationship with Knight the past few years, said he respects everything his former coach did for basketball across the nation. Knight's coaching style influenced the NCAA's decision to implement the shot clock and the three-point line, Alford said.

During Knight's 29 years with the Hoosiers, Indiana won three national championships. Alford hopes to make the same thing happen at Iowa.

"Anything I could do at other schools, I can get done here at Iowa," he said.

Alford's father, Sam, and his wife, Tanya, both attended Tuesday's news conference. Alford said his family offered input on the situation over the past two days.

His brother, who just put a down payment on a house in the area, called Alford on his cell phone while he was golfing.

"(My brother) said, 'Don't even think about it,'" said Alford. "I remember my mother saying, 'You just need to pray about it,' which is always good advice from your mother. And my wife told me to 'Pray as you will, but the kids and I aren't going anywhere.'"

tunity to use that education."

Only 4.3 percent of the registered 54,869 citizens in the district voted, nearly 50 percent lower than last year's turnout of nearly 8 percent. Because it is a presidential election year, officials expected a higher turnout, said Johnson County Auditor Tom Slockett.

In contrast to the low number of voters in Iowa City, Solon saw a 48 percent turnout, which Slockett attributed to other issues — a new school and additional funding — being on the ballot. Both measures passed.

"When tax and bond issues are involved, there is always a greater turnout," he said. "It just shows you that people know how to get to the voting polls when they have an interest. Unfortunately, this time they didn't."

North Liberty resident Denise Robe, an active participant in the effort to have the school district provide transportation to and from Penn Elementary School in North Liberty and the Golfview neighborhood, said that it was her responsibility to vote in the Iowa City district elections.

"I've been involved with the board a lot lately. It would be hypocritical if I didn't vote. I would have no right to criticize or ask for favors," she said.

Audrey Bahrlick, a senior staff psychologist at University Counseling Service, said that out of the 2,000 UI students who enter counseling each year, 5 percent of the women suffer from bulimia and 2 percent suffer from anorexia. Countless others who seek counseling have body issues and unhealthy relationships with food, she said.

While these numbers are staggering, Bahrlick said, they are only the "tip of the iceberg" and do not include everyone on campus who struggles with body-image issues. However, Bahrlick does not feel that media images can be solely blamed for the abundance of body-perception issues women have.

"There is a strong influence," Bahrlick said. "We would have a much richer and healthier society if more diverse images were shown."

Most of the famous women attending the Emmy Awards on Sunday fit into uniform, skin-tight, revealing dresses. Qureshi said that she has watched Jennifer Aniston and Spears go through image changes since becoming famous. Aniston appeared to be much thinner at this year's Emmy Awards than when she first appeared on

"Friends" several years ago, while Spears started with an innocent image and now looks like a Playboy model, Qureshi said.

UI doctoral candidate Larissa Faulkner agreed that most famous females go through image makeovers after they become popular, which usually includes weight loss. Faulkner compares Spears' new persona and the shocking performance she gave at the Video Music Awards with Madonna's successful attempts to jolt the public with her controversial behavior.

"Britney is an apparatus," Faulkner said. "It's profit-driven, and that's the image that sells."

Some students, however, say they enjoy the flashy outfits and performances that take place on awards shows. UI freshman Jeff Happe said he does not think recording and film stars' images have an effect on college-age adults.

"My friends and I loved it when Britney took her suit off," said Happe.

Happe said these types of images might unintentionally send bad messages to children but that record sales, not malice, motivate Aguilera's and Spears' images. Both singers are in a one-up competition to out-shock the public for attention, he said.

Student leaders may present mixed message on tuition

REGENTS

regents their concerns about parts of the proposal that they say are too costly.

Before the regents released their suggested tuition increases last week, all three leaders, who predicted that the projected increases would be high, had planned to ask for a tuition hike closer to last year's 6.9 percent. But Stoll and UISG decided at a meeting Monday to cautiously support the hike, changing the preliminary plans for the presentation.

Ben Golding, the student-body president at Iowa State University, was unaware Tuesday afternoon that UISG had voted to endorse the increase. He said the ISU student government is supporting a 7.2 percent increase, a number that UISG leaders helped him come up with and actually supported last week.

Stoll said late Tuesday he hoped to "iron out" differences he and the two other presidents may hold so that they can give a joint presentation to the regents.

The University of Northern Iowa Student Government has not taken a formal stance on the issue, but the UNI student-body president, Dan Sterenchuk, said he thinks that the 9.9 percent proposal is too high.

Both Sterenchuk and Golding said they plan to try to get the 5.2 percent increase for inflation lowered. The Higher Education Price Index projects a 3-6 percent increase in inflation and, in the past two years, regents approved a number that was on the lower end.

But Stoll said the likely reason the regents' board office recommended using the higher projection was because, in past years, the actual index rates were higher than the projections, and the universities were forced to fill the gap with other funds.

"I think it's going to be hard to argue with economics," he said.

On Monday, UISG voted to cautiously support a proposed 9.9 percent tuition/fee increase at the UI — a hike that is actually $19 higher than what the regents' office projected last week.

The office's recommendation said the UI proposed a 5.5 percent increase in computer fees — from the $110 students are paying this year to $116 for next school year. But UI President Mary Sue Coleman is asking the regents to consider an extra $19 fee per student — bringing the computer fee total to $135 — to be used for technology improvements on campus.

The bottom line for in-state students would be a $318 tuition/fee increase — from $3,204 to a proposed $3,522. Non-residents face a $984 increase, from $10,966 to $11,950.

The regents will discuss the proposals today and Thursday. In October, they are scheduled to cast a final vote on next year's tuition.

Still no contract for Ferentz

■ Miscommunication and legalese continue to stall negotiations.

By Megan Manfull
 The Daily Iowan

Miscommunication has been a problem with Kirk Ferentz's contract all along, and it is not improving.

The second-year Iowa football coach is still without a signed contract.

Following Steve Alford's press conference Tuesday, Iowa Athletics Director Bob Bowsby said he is unhappy with the impasse with Ferentz's contract and that "it's always being worked on."

However, UI General Counsel Mark Schantz, who is in charge of negotiations between the UI and Ferentz's agent, said talks have stopped until Ferentz's second season ends.

"We're not going to talk about this again until the end of the season," Schantz said. "It's better for everyone because it's not fair to involve Ferentz in this while he is coaching."

Schantz said the impasse is over "general legal language about what happens at the end of a contract — termination provisions. It's only important if there is a problem."

The disagreement is between Neil Cornrich, Ferentz's agent, and the UI general counsel.

As time passes, Bowsby said, frustrations are only increasing. The UI's only options right now are signing a contract that it doesn't agree with or to leave the contract unsigned, he said.

"I don't understand why we don't have a contract, either,"

Bob Knight set to move, hopes to coach again

■ The former Indiana coach makes his first televised statement since Sunday's firing.

By Steve Herman
 Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Bob Knight wants to coach again "in the worst way." He's just not sure where.

Knight, fired by Indiana for a pattern of "unacceptable" behavior, said Tuesday night he was surprised by the school's decision but that perhaps it was time to move on.

"I thought I'd stay here till I was done coaching," Knight told ESPN in a sometimes contentious interview broadcast live.

"I haven't retired. I'm an unemployed teacher right now, and I'm looking for a place to teach. There are too many things that I have yet to explore about the game of basketball."

Knight said he had thought about leaving Indiana at times, but his love of the basketball team was too strong. He had wanted the Hoosiers, who haven't advanced past the second round of the NCAA tournament since 1994, to become a powerhouse again.

"I kind of hung on to that thought for several years now, four or five years, and probably should've gone somewhere else," he said. "And there would be somebody that was a better fit for this administration and these people than I am. And there's a place for me where there's a better fit for me as a basketball coach."

In interviews on ESPN and in The Sporting News, the 59-year-old Hall of Fame coach spoke about his future, and his dismissal Sunday from a school where he won three national titles in three tumultuous decades. He also said he might accept an offer to help Isiah Thomas, a former Hoosiers star now coaching the Indiana Pacers.

Knight repeated that he did nothing wrong when he grabbed freshman Kent Harvey by the arm last week to give him a lecture about manners after the student said, "Hey, what's up, Knight?" The coach also disputed some of the other reasons university President Myles Brand cited in firing him.

Brand said Knight violated a zero-tolerance policy that had been in place since May. But Knight said he was never told exactly what "zero-tolerance" meant and denied Brand had any substantive reason to fire him.

Knight said another episode cited by Brand, verbal abuse of a university lawyer, occurred during a meeting about the $30,000 fine levied against him by Brand in May. But Knight said he never used profanity and didn't raise his voice.

In The Sporting News interview, the coach said he was most, sorry to be leaving

Not going anywhere

■ Indiana natives Luke Recker and Brody Boyd are happy Alford is not going back to IU.

By Todd Brommelkamp
 The Daily Iowan

Luke Recker admits the thought of Steve Alford leaving the Iowa basketball team to return to Indiana crossed his mind.

Before meeting with UI Athletics Director Bob Bowsby, Alford sat down with the Auburn, Ind., native to tell him what he had known all along: He is not leaving Recker and his teammates to replace Bob Knight.

"It says a lot about Coach Alford's character and what he's trying to instill here at the university," Recker said following Alford's announcement Tuesday that he had no plans to leave Iowa. "I think the whole state should be very proud to have a man like that representing the Iowa program."

For Recker, who has dealt with his share of controversy during the past two years, the end of the speculation was more than welcome.

"If anything, this should help motivate us to go out there and play as hard as we can," said Recker.

Like Alford, Recker is a former Indiana Mr. Basketball who went on to play for Knight in Bloomington. However, Recker's journey has not gone as smoothly as his current coach's.

Recker spent two seasons as a Hoosier and played in all 34 games his sophomore season. Feeling he was not getting better under Knight's tutelage, Recker announced he would transfer to the University of Arizona. After a tragic auto accident and one semester at Arizona, he announced he would transfer to the UI in order to return to the Midwest and play for Alford.

He maintains close ties to several former teammates, including Dane Fife. However, he said, he did not believe any current Hoosiers would join the Hawkeyes. He also said he expects Knight will resurface again with some other program.

Another Indiana high-school star who has watched the Knight saga unfold closely is freshman guard Brody Boyd. Boyd, a native of Dugger, Ind., said he had dreamed of playing for Knight since elementary school and was heavily recruited following his senior season. His decision to commit to Iowa was heavily influenced by the volatile situation surrounding Knight as well as the chance to play for Alford, he said.

As with Recker, Boyd was confident Alford would choose to honor his commitment to the UI. Some of Boyd's friends were more skeptical.

"The phone has been ringing off the wall, and I've gotten a lot of e-mail asking if I was leaving with Coach Steve," said Boyd. "I told them he's not going anywhere. He told us from day one he was going to be here for the rest of his career."

Boyd also said he believed Alford's presence at the UI would open up a pipeline of talent from the Hoosier state.

"It's every Indiana high-school player's dream to play for Coach Knight," Boyd said. "Now that Coach Alford is here, and with the things he did at Indiana, I think all that has changed."

Kirk Ferentz plays down rivalry with Iowa State

■ The Hawkeyes say it does not matter what team they play, they just need a victory.

By Jeremy Schnitker
 The Daily Iowan

So what if cross-state rival Iowa State is coming to town with a two-game winning streak over the Iowa football team?

So what if the Hawkeyes haven't won a game in the last 12 attempts?

So what if the fate of Iowa in-state recruiting could be decided this Saturday afternoon?

To Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz, this game is just another must-win for the Hawkeyes.

"I don't think it matters whom we're playing, we want to win," the coach said in his

Tuesday press conference. "We need to win. That's what you play for."

There's a lot at stake for this game. Not only do the Hawkeyes have to worry about winning against their rival — they've got to worry about winning in general.

After 12 straight losses, Iowa is getting eager to win.

"I promised you before the season, we want to win against Iowa State, just like we want to win against our next and last opponent," Ferentz said. "This game is always going to be special for both teams involved. Heck yeah, we want to win this ball game. We'd want to win it just as much if we were 2-0."

The Hawkeyes aren't 2-0, but the Cyclones are, with victories over Ohio University and UNLV. Behind a balanced offense that features running back Ennis Haywood and quarterback Sage Rosenfels, the Cyclones head for Iowa City favored by 2½ points.

Iowa State has put extra excitement in the rivalry, which was beginning to lose its luster after Iowa had won 15 straight.

Ferentz said ISU's offense is a perfect example of where he wants his offense to be someday.

"They're very balanced," he said. "They're where you want to be in my mind. They have both a threat passing and running."

Not only do the Cyclones bring a balanced offense to town Saturday, but they bring a few old Iowa assistants with whom Ferentz coached at Iowa during the '80s.

Dan McCarney, ISU's head coach, was a defensive line coach at Iowa while Ferentz coached the offensive line. Ferentz said he and McCarney grew pretty close in their days as Hawkeyes.

"In staff meetings from like here to here," Ferentz pointed right next to him laughing. "We both sat next to each other in staff meetings for nine years. Sometimes we got complimented — not very often, though. Usually, we got chewed out together quite a bit."

Along with McCarney, former Iowa assistant Bob Elliot, who left a job in the Iowa Athletics Department after battling a blood disease, is in his first year with Iowa State.

Ferentz said he can't get too emotional over facing his old assistants — there's too many of them he faces as it is.

"I'm getting used to it,"

Hawks fight through early season hurts

■ Coach Wendy Logan must alter her lineup after recent injuries to her defenders.

By Laura Podolak
The Daily Iowan

In addition to the start of the Big Ten season this weekend, the Iowa soccer team faces another challenge in the early going of the 2000 season: injuries.

Since the beginning of the season Aug. 25, the Hawkeyes have seen three of their starting defenders go down with injuries.

First it was freshman Katie Poole, who suffered a season-ending stress fracture in her foot, and will probably red-shirt this season.

Next, it was sophomore Teesa Price, who suffered a second-degree MCL tear in her knee during a routine slide tackle in the Utah State game.

"It was a freak soccer accident. She caught it just right. Something just had to give, and it happened to be Teesa's knee," Coach Wendy Logan said.

And finally, the last blow was to Lindsey May, who went down with a foot injury in the game against Iowa State Sept. 8.

In addition to losing these three key players, Joni Anderson, one of the Hawkeyes' defensive leaders last season, suffered a foot injury last spring. Anderson has yet to see the field this season because of the nagging injury. "Her injury in the spring slowed down her conditioning when she came back," Logan said. "Her injury is definitely a loss to the team."

The loss of players to injury has caused a couple of the players to engage in a kind of game of musical chairs to help fill in the vacant spots. The two most noteworthy changes have been the shuffling around of senior Linzy Wolman and sophomore Jamie Jorgensen.

Wolman began the season as a forward and sometimes a midfielder, but when the defense started to thin out before the St. Louis game on Sept. 10, Logan looked to Wolman to fill in at a defensive position.

"Linzy has been the biggest change. It is a give-and-take situation. We lose a lot with her in the back because we lose an attacking dimension, but she gives us what we need in the back," Logan said.

Wolman said that the most important thing is "to keep the rhythm going" as players go down with injuries.

"All I care about is that we are doing good. Whatever helps the team," Wolman said about her position switch.

The other solution has been Jorgensen, who was slotted in a midfield position at the beginning of the season. She didn't see much action there because when Poole went down in the first game of the season, the team looked to Jorgensen to fill the gap in the back.

Jorgensen said that the two positions are not extremely different, so the change was not difficult for her.

"The biggest difference is the fact that you don't get to see the goal and get into the offense. Defending our goal is more what I am worried about," Jorgensen said.

Logan said that although the bout of injuries suffered by the team is unfortunate, there are some positives in the situation that many people may overlook.

"People just keep stepping up, and that says a lot about our team. Players like Suzanne Rivers become a solution," Logan said. "They trust what is best for the team. I am pleased with the attitude of the team."

The injuries have not only caused a shifting in positions but also a change in the Hawkeyes' style of play.

"Our current system is designed partly to attack out of the back. Price and May did that quite effectively. We had to find players who were comfortable in both offense and defense aspects (to replace them)," Logan said.

With Wolman playing in the back, the Hawkeyes lose a major scoring weapon, which could cause a decrease in Iowa's shots on goal and scoring.

In Sunday's win, Wolman spent most of the time in the back. Coincidentally, the Hawkeyes were out-shot for the first time this season. Logan said that the instant one of the injured defenders returns, Wolman will be back in her normal attacking position.

Injuries and all, the Hawkeyes begin regular season this weekend when they face Minnesota Friday night and Wisconsin on Sunday.

Stensrud adjusting to life on the line

Three years ago, the folks at Iowa State thought Andy Stensrud was going to be their next offensive threat, after a promising freshman year at tight end. Stensrud still has the possibility to be an offense threat for the Cyclones in 2000, but he won't be catching the ball. Instead, he will be blocking for Iowa State after being moved to the offensive line during fall practices. DI Sports Editor Jeremy Schnitker talked with the senior about the Iowa-Iowa State rivalry, his move to the offensive line and a possible career in the NFL.

DI: What big is the Iowa-Iowa State rivalry to you?

AS: I think it means a lot — it's a special game.

DI: How has your move to the offensive line been so far?

AS: It's gone pretty well, so far. Right now, I'm just trying to get the little things done, but overall, things have gone real well.

DI: Has this move given you thoughts of playing in the NFL?

AS: Yeah, I've always thought of playing football in the NFL, since I started playing football. But right now, I have no idea whether or not I will play.

DI: Were you an Iowa fan at all growing up?

AS: I wasn't living in Iowa all my life, but I was a fan of both teams. My family has always been ISU fans, but I've cheered for both teams.

FACE FACE

with Andy Stensrud

DI: Were you offered a scholarship to Iowa?

AS: Yeah, Iowa offered me a scholarship, but I committed to ISU after my sophomore year to play basketball here. But it took too much time, plus I got hurt after my freshman year, so I just started to concentrate on football.

DI: How has former Iowa coach Bob Elliott fit in at Iowa State?

AS: Coach Elliott is a great coach and is very motivated. He's just a great guy.

DI: Many thought ISU was supposed to blowout both Ohio University and UNLV this year. You guys didn't really blow them out of the water. How do you guys feel about your first two games?

AS: We feel great about them. A win is a win no matter how you get it.

DI: What was the feeling like coming in to Kinnick two years ago and breaking the 15-game winning streak Iowa had against ISU?

AS: I remember it being a hard-fought win. It felt good, just like any other win. You know, it's been so long, I can't totally remember everything — each win is different — but a win against Iowa is always more special.

DI: How do you guys feel about your chances coming into Iowa City this year?

AS: I don't know, this is my last year. Any team can beat any team. We've just got to keep everyone together as a group.

DI: As a senior, what kind of mark do you want to leave on this Iowa State program?

AS: I just want to leave a mark as a hard-working team and be a hard worker.

Darryl Strawberry sentenced to house arrest

■ The former Yankee is convicted of violating probation after a DUI.

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Suspended Yankees star Darryl Strawberry was sentenced to two years' house arrest Tuesday after admitting he violated probation by driving under the influence of medication and by leaving the scene of an accident.

Strawberry, who is fighting the spread of colon cancer, apologized during a brief hearing before Judge Florence Foster for causing a Monday morning traffic accident. He said he blacked out from his medication while heading to a meeting with his probation officer.

"I used the wrong judgment ... taking medication because I didn't feel well," he told the court. "I just blacked out. I didn't know if I hurt anybody. I feel really bad about that."

Strawberry was released from jail Tuesday, slipping out a side door to avoid crowds.

Foster was the judge who placed the suspended eight-time All-Star on probation last year in a drug and solicitation case. Prosecutors requested house arrest, although Strawberry could have been sent to prison.

Assistant State Attorney Robin Fuson said that Strawberry will still have to face the misdemeanor charges from Monday's accident — driving under the influence and leaving the scene of the accident — as separate crimes that could bring additional punishment.

House arrest means the 38-year-old outfielder leave home only to go to a doctor's office or for work. Should he attempt to rejoin a major league baseball team, he would need court permission, Fuson said.

Outside court, Strawberry's wife, Charisse, said her husband is sorry about what happened, and was relieved to know the woman whose car he hit wasn't injured.

"I just hope we'll recover from this," she said, as tears rolled from behind her sunglasses.

She said her husband, who had surgery last month, is in a lot of pain because of the cancer and having a kidney removed. He also has some mental difficulties, she said, but did not elaborate.

"We still have to live every day. He still has to wake up every morning and look in the mirror and say, 'I'm going through this,'" she said.

Strawberry, who has battled drug and alcohol abuse for years, is not permitted to leave home even for an activity as mundane as going to the movies or to his children's school.

He will undergo regular drug testing and the Florida Department of Corrections will make surprise checks on a daily basis to make sure Strawberry is at home.

Iowa Novice rowers start from scratch

■ Rowing is the only Division I sports where members sometimes have no previous experience.

By Julie Matolo
The Daily Iowan

Eight people learning to control and balance one boat is like learning to ride a bike. The process is scary, exciting and a test of coordination all at the same time. This is the analogy Sean Tobin, the coach of the Iowa novice rowing team, gives of the transition his new rowers must make when they first enter the water.

Three weeks ago, many of these Iowa students never had been exposed to the sport of rowing. After making the final cut of the annual novice team tryouts, approximately 50 women made the team. After about a week and a half of learning rowing terminology and the correct form for taking strokes, as well as practicing on rowing machines, the women meet the ultimate test; getting in the water.

"Rowing is a lot harder on the water," said freshman Kathleen Lehman. "The water moves the boat much more. You have to deal with wind, the boat moving and making sure the oars hit the water. It is much different than the rowing machines but fun to have speed."

For a movement that one may guess to be very simple, appearing as if anyone could instantly do it, the process of rowing and controlling the boat is gradual. Perfecting the form on the rowing machines and carrying the boat to and from the water are the first steps. Creating the strokes on the water is different from any other skill these new rowers had ever done.

"The most difficult part is there is minimal concept on what to embark on technically," said Tobin. "People don't have exposure to the sport. They do not know what they are trying to reproduce or recreate."

For a sport that repeats stroke after stroke, the goal is to create long, easy strokes. A finished product that looks extremely graceful and natural is a sign of a good rower.

"Ultimately, everyone not having enough exposure or experience combined with learning to row is very clumsy," said Tobin. "I was telling everyone yesterday at practice it is like an animal just born, wobbly kneed and trying to get their legs underneath them."

Iowa's novice team will have until Oct. 8 to be in control of its boat. This will be its first race of the season, the Head of the Rock, held in Rockford, Ill. The two most prepared boaters will race that weekend; each boat will contain eight rowers. Currently, rowers are comfortable rowing two at a time in the eight-person boats. Gradually, more people will row at the same time and at a faster speed. Tobin expects that all eight people in each boat will be comfortably rowing together by the middle of October.

So far practices on the water consist of maneuvering the boat and the oars. Everyone is aware of how sensitive the boat is. The biggest challenge to conquer will be balancing the boat.

"There are so many things to mess one up on the water, the set of the boat and a lot more going on," said freshman Rachel Koch. "The rowers are coming together with the coxswains, who are learning also."

Tobin has found a group of rowers who are ahead of his schedule. Though everyone learns at a different rate, this group has been speedy in picking up the techniques of rowing.

Tobin has coached rowing for 12 years. He is no stranger to coaching four to six boats at the same time, containing about 40 athletes, in different places on the Iowa River from his one motor boat.

"The hardest thing on the water is that you have to find words to communicate what it is that you want them to reproduce," said Tobin. "Just because you have a group of words for one person doesn't mean it works for another person. So to try to communicate what you want them to create, the movements with their body, I can't demonstrate for them, so I must find the right words to help them discover the feeling. Once they feel it, it makes sense to them."

Davis hired to replace Knight

■ Indiana hires Mike Davis who says he is not a Bob Knight clone.

By Steve Herman
Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Mike Davis, a Bob Knight disciple but an opposite in temperament and style, inherited one of college basketball's most visible jobs Tuesday as interim coach at Indiana.

The university, stung by one controversy after another involving Knight over the past year, picked the low-key Davis to head the program for at least one season and selected John Treloar, another former Knight assistant, as interim associate coach.

"I'm a quiet guy, but I love to compete," said the 39-year-old Davis, who played at Alabama, was a second-round pick by Milwaukee in the 1983 NBA draft and then played in Europe and in the CBA.

He returned to Alabama as an assistant coach in 1995 and came to Indiana two years later.

Davis was responsible for recruiting many of the current players.

After Knight was fired Sunday for violating a "zero tolerance" behavior policy imposed in May, the players threatened to transfer en masse unless Davis or Treloar was given the interim job.

"There was no way I could turn this job down, because of the players," said Davis, surrounded by the team during a news conference on the basketball court at Assembly Hall. "The way they came out for me really touched me."

"I'm extremely happy for this opportunity, but I'm sad because of the way it happened. I envisioned being a head coach, but under different circumstances. ... Everyone knows Coach Knight is the reason I'm here and why the players are here."

But, he added, "Indiana basketball is bigger than anyone."

Unlike Knight, Davis said he would open practices to the media. Another difference, center Kirk Haston said, laughing, was "the language." "Coach (Knight) talked a lot more, but we'll find out how that compares," Haston said.

"I was really thrilled when I came in this morning and talked with Coach Davis and he said everybody was aboard. That's the happiest I've been in a few days."

Until word spread that Davis would be the coach — as the players had hoped — up to a half-dozen or more players indicated they were considering transferring. They all changed their minds.

"It's going to be different," said junior Dane Fife, who just one day earlier said he already had decided to leave. "As we sat in the locker room before the press conference, coach Davis and coach Treloar walked in, but no coach Knight. That was different right there."

"We definitely have something to prove, that we've been through a lot and we have to come out and beat people. We owe it to him," he said of Knight. "This is his team. We're ready to go."

Davis acknowledged his debt to Knight and said the Indiana tradition expects — demands — success.

"I look forward to the season. We're one or two players away from being national contenders," Davis said. "But there's no pressure on me from that standpoint. All I can do is recruit the way I've recruited before and coach the best way I can and let the chips fall where they may."

Davis will be the head coach through at least this season, but the school has said it also will look at other candidates for the following season.

"If we don't have a great season, I shouldn't be considered," a confident Davis said.

Mets pick up a game on Atlanta

NEW YORK (AP) — Benny Agbayani homered and drove in three runs as the New York Mets' bats awoke from their silent September to beat the Milwaukee Brewers, 10-2 Tuesday night.

The Mets, who had scored only 30 runs in losing eight of 10 this month, began the day three games behind first-place Atlanta in the NL East and 4 1/2 ahead of Arizona in the wild card race.

The Mets scored four runs in the second — more than they had in 12 of the past 15 games — aided by catcher Tyler Houston's two throwing errors and a two-run single by Agbayani.

Bobby J. Jones (9-5) made that hold up, allowing two runs and seven hits in eight efficient innings. Jones struck out five and walked two, improving to 5-0 in his last nine starts.

Todd Pratt, subbing for the struggling Mike Piazza, walked twice and had an RBI single. Edgardo Alfonzo added a solo homer in the eighth. New York's 10 runs and 13 hits were its since getting 16 hits in a 13-3 win over Randy Johnson and Arizona on Aug. 25.

Red Sox 8, Indians 6

CLEVELAND — Dante Bichette hit a two-run homer in the third when Chuck Finley had one of his typical one-inning meltdowns, and the Boston Red Sox gained in the AL wild card race Tuesday night with an 8-6 win over the Cleveland Indians.

It was the first of eight games in 10 days between the Red Sox and Indians, who have met three times in the postseason since 1995 and don't like each other. In the past two years they've traded wins, punches and brushback pitches.

Bichette's homer capped Boston's six-run third off Finley (12-11) and the Red Sox hung on to pull within two games of Cleveland for the final playoff spot.

Nomar Garciaparra, who entered the series batting just .133 this season against Cleveland, drove in two runs for Boston. Jose Offerman and Carl Everett also had two RBIs apiece as the Red Sox 2-5 hitters drove in all their runs.

Yankees 10, Blue Jays 2

NEW YORK — Jose Canseco went 3-for-3, hitting his 446th career home run to lead Denny Neagle and the New York Yankees over the Toronto Blue Jays, 10-2, Tuesday night.

Canseco drove in three runs and scored three as the Yankees won for the 10th time in 13 games. The Blue Jays, who had won three in a row, were blunted in their bid to move up in the AL wild card race.

Neagle (7-4) won his fourth straight start, pitching 7 2-3 effective innings. He gave up eight hits, struck out seven and, with his father in the box seats, walked off to a standing ovation.

Neagle was at his best in the fifth inning, right after Alex Gonzalez hit an RBI single that made it 6-2 and left the bases loaded with no outs.

Cubs 2, Reds 1

CINCINNATI — Kerry Wood pitched a four-hitter for his first complete game since elbow surgery almost 1 1/2 years ago, leading the Chicago Cubs over the Cincinnati Reds 2-1 Tuesday night.

Wood (7-7) struck out eight and walked two in the second complete game of his career, the first since he struck out a record-tying 20 against Houston on May 6, 1998.

Knight chastises interviewer

Bloomington because of all the golf, hunting and fishing in the area.

"We're going to move," Knight told the weekly newspaper, referring to his wife, Karen. "And that'll be difficult. I've been here since 1971, and I really like the area. I can play golf, I can catch 50 bluegill in an hour, I can go turkey hunting. The place has fit my lifestyle."

"Now that's all wiped out, and I feel worse about that than not having the coaching job."

On ESPN, he often chastised interviewer Jeremy Schaap for what he considered interruptions as he answered questions. At one point he told Schaap, son of veteran sportswriter and broadcaster Dick Schaap: "You got a long way to go to be as good as your dad, you better keep that in mind."

Knight, replaced Tuesday by Indiana assistant Mike Davis, said getting another coaching job is a priority, but he's not sure what would be the best situation.

"People have called me. That's all I want to do. I want to coach in the worst way," Knight told ESPN at a resort south of Bloomington. "I'm not right for every administration and every administration's not right for me."

In July, he was contacted by Delaware about recommendations for its head coaching job. Later, Knight said, he thought that he perhaps should have asked about the job for himself. (The school hired David Henderson, who had been a Duke assistant.)

"Delaware really appealed to me," he told The Sporting News.

Knight, nicknamed The General, was famous for his temper and old-school discipline. No matter where he ends up, he said he won't change his ways.

"I've always felt I've got to be me. I can't be something that someone's trying to construct," he said.

As for the Pacers' job, Knight would be reunited with Thomas, who led the 1981 Hoosiers to a national title. Thomas has invited Knight to join him as an assistant coach, and Knight said he might on a limited basis.

"I told him, 'All you have to do is ask. I don't know what kind of commitment I want to make, but if you want me to come to practice, evaluate players, do some scouting, just ask,'" Knight told The Sporting News.

Knight, who addressed a campus protest after he was fired, plans to meet with students Wednesday in a forum sponsored by the school newspaper, the Indiana Daily Student. A site has not been determined, editor Jeff Shireman said Tuesday.

"There was a time when I would never have dreamed that I'd coach anywhere but Indiana University, but things have changed," Knight told The Sporting News. "The leadership of this university has changed. My inability to get along with the athletic director — all that. I began to think, 'I've been here a long time.'"

Ferentz not worried about signing

Bowlsby said. "We've worked on it longer than any of us would like to. All the financial matters that are embodied in it have been resolved many months ago."

"Kirk's agent feels the separation language should be one way, and Iowa's general counsel feels it should be another way. We have proposed at least four different sets of language, and none of them have been acceptable."

Ferentz said the contract is not really concerning him. He is more distressed with the upcoming season than the terminology that is halting the signing of his contract.

"If that was a real issue with me, I'd sign it," Ferentz said at his Tuesday press conference. "It's not a sticky point with me, it's just a technicality. To me, it's going to get worked out when it gets worked out. It's not a factor."

Bowlsby said he is not discouraged by Iowa's 0-2 start this season and that it has no bearing on the contract situation. The Hawkeyes have only won one game since Ferentz took over the program, after the 1998 season.

"I'll do everything I can to support the coaching staff,"

Bowlsby said. "I have every expectation that we'll make the progress in the years ahead that we want to make."

Ferentz said laughing, of playing against former Iowa coaches. "We played (Bill) Snyder last week, Alvarez at Wisconsin and now Mac (McCarney) at Iowa State. All we have to do is schedule Oklahoma, and it would be a heck of a deal."

All joking aside, Ferentz said his main worry is that with all the emotion in this game, his guys don't get too caught up in it all.

"You can't make any one game too big," he said. "You run the risk of maybe getting tight. Like in golf, a putt is a putt — you can't think about how much it is worth or the chances are you're not going to make it."
