Group plans to get students acting locally

Students for Local Politics will try to improve student voting patterns.
 By Mary Sedor
 The Daily Iowan

The members of a new UI group, Students for Local Politics, fear that most UI students will not vote on upcoming local issues because they lack information. To fight this, the group plans to present students with the information they will need to make informed decisions. Because only 5 percent of UI students voted in local elections last year, the group wants to increase voter turnout by informing students about the many area upcoming issues. The recently formed group plans to present students with both the positive and negative aspects of such issues as the new jail, library expansion, First Avenue expansion and the bars turning 21. "First, we have to gather the information. Then, we have to relate how it is going to affect students," said Matt Blizek, the group's organizer and a UI sophomore. Students for Local Politics plans to gather the information by getting involved in the issues. It wants students to vote on the issues, because many decisions will end up affecting them. For example, group members say, they see the new jail as possibly affecting the students negatively — something not all students know about. "Students are going to have to pay for the new jail with the taxes we pay," Blizek said. The group plans to attend meetings organized by both sides of the issue and eventually present the pros and cons to students through distributing flyers. For both the library and First Avenue expansions, the group will attend City Council meetings. The library expansion is a measure that would add space to the Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St. The First Avenue Extension measure will allow voters to decide if grading and paving of the road should be deleted from the city's Capital Improvements Program.

"No one knows or cares about the First Avenue extension, so we need to teach the students about it," said Kevin Boyd, a UI junior. The group also hopes to work closely with the council to reach other options besides making the bars 21. One problem members of the group have with making the bars 21 is that they feel there are no other outlets for students. Blizek suggested that the UI create a fun environment for students that is not at a bar. The group plans to pitch

UI students excited about Sydney Olympics

Iowa students say the 2000 Summer Olympics will be beneficial for Australia in more ways than one.

By Andrew Bixby
 The Daily Iowan

Halfway around the world, the 2000 Summer Olympics are creating quite a stir among Sydney residents and tourists. Here in Iowa, students of all ages are just as excited. The opening ceremony for the 2000 Summer Olympics in Sydney, Australia, is today. "I'm so excited," said UI senior Annie Gable, whose father, Dan, is helping to coach the U.S. wrestling team. She will leave on Sept. 19 to spend six days in Sydney — "a place I've always wanted to go," she said. UI sophomore Shauna Gray, who has spent three months studying in Australia, said she thinks the Olympics being in Sydney will be a good opportunity for the world to learn about the country. "I think it will be a positive place for the Olympics," she said. "A lot of people have stereotypes about Australia being all outback and grass-land, but the cities are really big, and there are a lot of similarities between Australia and the United States." University of Northern Iowa senior Colin Baker, whose immediate family is from Australia, said he thinks the Olympics will be good for Australia's economy. "I love it," he said. "I know (Australia's) economy needs it to bring in tourism." Writers' Workshop student John Murray, 36, a native of Australia, said the Olympics will be good for more than just Australia's economy. "I think (the Olympics) will

Dan Gable, the wrestling legend and former Iowa coach, will be featured with four other famous Iowans and a famous rock on instant-win lottery tickets this fall. The new scratch series of lottery tickets were issued in a partnership between the Iowa Historical Society and the Iowa Lottery. The tickets depict famous Iowans such as Gable, Buffalo Bill Cody, Simon Estes, Donna Reed and Natasha Kaiser-Brown. One out of every six tickets features the Cardiff Giant, a slab of gypsum rock that was carved into a human shape in Fort Dodge and is now on display in a New York museum. Cody was one of the very first Pony Express riders. Estes is a world class bass-baritone and is teaching at Iowa State University this fall. Donna Reed was one of Hollywood's leading stars in the 1940s and 1950s. Natasha Kaiser-Brown, now the women's track coach at Drake

University, participated in the 1992 Olympics and won the silver medal in the 4x400 relay. The Iowa Lottery and the Iowa Historical Society together came up with the idea for the tickets. "We wanted to find a way to promote some of their causes and enhance some interest in history," said Mary Neubauer, the public relations director for the Iowa Lottery. The Iowa Lottery is trying to work with other agencies on valuable projects because of an emphasis by Gov. Tom Vilsack on corporations working closer

Group decries anti-sweatshop 'intimidation'

The UI may receive a letter telling it to be cautious about the Worker Rights Consortium.

By Megan Eckhardt
 The Daily Iowan

Next week, college presidents across the country will receive a letter urging careful consideration when debating to join anti-sweatshop groups, such as the Worker Rights Consortium. A group of economists and lawyers, the Academic Consortium on International Trade, wrote the letter to communicate the members' feelings that colleges often easily comply with student demands to join anti-sweatshop groups. "We decided to focus on these campus anti-sweatshop campaigns because many of us felt that the decision-making process ... had not been handled in an open and kind of careful way," said an economics professor at the University of Michigan, Robert M. Stern. "We thought there was too much intimidation going on," said Jagdish Bhagwati, an economics professor at Columbia University, who helped found the consortium. Although there is no verification that the letter will be sent to the UI, it is a possibility. UI Students Against Sweatshops members say they believe that the academic consortium does not have a supported argument. The UI is a member of the Worker Rights Consortium. UI junior and SAS member Sherene Judeh has never heard of the academic consortium, but she thinks the economists' arguments are based on profit. "I think that the primary motivation of economists are profit, which they get through the exploitation of workers," she said. "Therefore, all the pressure that's put on the university is eventually going to be put on businesses losing money." UI graduate student and SAS member Michael Marchman also said he thought the dispute was profit-based. "The anti-sweatshop movement challenges basic assumptions on how the economy should work," he said. "It makes a lot of economists and Gidel said he didn't go to the ISU game against last year. Instead, he spent the afternoon tailgating. This year,

Sorority comes back to life at UI

■ Delta Zeta is up and at it again after a year's hiatus.

By Natasha Lambropoulos
The Daily Iowan

Following a year's absence, the Delta Zeta sorority is re-emerging on the UI campus after successfully recruiting 31 members during its formal recruiting last week.

The new chapter received an outstanding response, said the national Delta Zeta chapter consultant, Tracy Ettinger.

More than 90 UI students were interviewed by national chapter consultants during the four-day recruiting. The process was very selective, based on strong academic skills and leadership qualities, Ettinger said.

"We selected the best of the best," she said. "They set the groundwork for the UI chapter."

The UI Delta Zeta chapter voluntarily closed in 1998 because of a lack of members. The national council gave members the option of continuing or reorganizing, and the group choose to start fresh, said Jessica Peavey, a Delta Zeta alum and UI senior.

"They are doing awesome and have a great class of new women," she said.

A majority of the women who pledged this year were freshmen and sophomores, with a few juniors. Some new members chose Delta Zeta because they missed the formal recruitment process with other sororities held in late August, but many joined because of the opportunities the new chapter had to offer, Peavey said.

"The reason I joined was because it was a good chance for leadership and something new to join," said UI sophomore Krystal Brown.

Delta Zeta members say the group will continue to have open recruitment and socials throughout the year to encourage and inform more women about their sorority.

The national Delta Zeta sorority is remodeling the chapter house and bringing in national chapter consultants to help with the start-up process. ISU Delta Zeta members have also provided support and guidance to the new members, Ettinger said.

"Everyone is so supportive. We wouldn't have been this successful without the support of the UI Panhellenic Association and Interfraternity Council," she said.

Members of the Delta Zeta sorority say they plan to attend upcoming events, including Greek Prom, Homecoming, Dance Marathon and Greek Week.

"Our ultimate goal is to be the most successful sorority and the best chapter on campus," Ettinger said.

Theta Chi and Alpha Tau Omega fraternities have also recently started chapters at the UI and are seeking more members. Both fraternities are active in Greek events and activities.

Theta Chi fraternity was started last spring by four friends. Their goal is to have enough members to hold a chapter, but not more than a group of friends can handle, said Theta Chi Vice President Jared Josephsen.

"We want to be just a bunch of best friends," he said.

Theta Chi takes a different perspective on fraternity life. "We are always recruiting members informally and are looking for focused and active men," Josephsen said.

"We are all about equality, and we decide what we want to do," he said.

Alpha Tau Omega fraternity is also recruiting and looking for 25 members by February in hopes of starting a chapter, said UI Alpha Tau President Kris Byam.

Alpha Tau Omega closed in 1996 because of low membership; however, the national organization recruited men last year with grade point averages above 3.0 to begin a new chapter.

"We were here during formal rush but often looked past because we didn't have a house. We want people to know it's more than a house, it's a brotherhood," Byam said.

Alternative ISU club features cuffs, whips

■ The group is applying for organizational status to receive funding from student fees.

By Tony Robinson
The Daily Iowan

Handcuffs, whips, leather and chains are the props Iowa State University's newest student organization will use to educate students about alternative sexual activity.

Officially known as Cuffs, the group is exploring four principles of sexuality: bondage, discipline, sadism and masochism, said ISU senior John Dorsey, the club's president.

"There is so much information to be gathered from my organization," he said. "I've been exploring the subject of BDSM (bondage, discipline, dominance, submission, sadism and masochism) for three years."

Dorsey has recruited 15 members thus far, with more than 30 students attending the club's first meeting. The meetings, held weekly, will include interactive classes and provide a safe meeting place for the BDSM community, Dorsey said.

Although the club is not currently funded by student fees from the ISU Government of the Student Body, Dorsey said, members are in the process of applying in order to print flyers.

The ISU director of University Relations, John McCarroll, said the nickname "Cuffs" is prompting media attention, but the administration can't be judgmental about the group.

"It has met the criteria to become an organization," he said.

Marnie Stewart, a co-president of the ISU Parents Association, said group members are trying to express something that is totally unnecessary.

"It's unacceptable," she said. "They are infringing on the rights of most of the students on campus with this program."

ISU campus minister Rev. Beverly Thompson-Travis said the United Christian Campus Ministry believes everyone has the right to form an organization.

"The thing that frightens me the most about academic institutions is when they restrict the students' freedom, which is very unhealthy," Thompson-Travis said.

Although there is currently no program paralleling Cuffs at the UI, David Grady, the director of University Life, said it could be a possibility because student organizations are considered on a case-by-case basis.

"To my recollection, there have been no attempts on campus to start a program such as this," he said.

An emporium with a smoke machine

■ Serendipity's grand opening welcomes back students and introduces the "lifestyle emporium."

By Peter Rugg
The Daily Iowan

Even though Serendipity has been open for six weeks, the lounge will hold its grand-opening celebration tonight at 702 S. Gilbert St., in the Kennedy Plaza near Gumby's.

Styling the business as a "lifestyle emporium," the Serendipity's owners intend to provide a place for people to satisfy a variety of personal needs. The business houses a laundry and tanning beds, shows movies, and provides several other services not usually available under one roof, said Ben Richards, a co-owner.

"It's increasingly relevant because people are studying and working more now," he said. "So you can come to our environment, do what you need to, and keep some leisure time to yourself."

In addition to the personal and entertainment services, Serendipity sells food, cigarettes and alcohol. The mix is one of the features that has students excited about attending the lounge.

"I don't know how beer and dancing will go with a laundry, but I'm very interested to see how it works," UI sophomore Dilek Dogruyusever said.

The grand opening, which starts at 9 p.m., will feature DJs along with live acts, dancers and special effects. Smoke machines and lighting strategically positioned around the room will add to the atmosphere, Richards said.

Student interest in the opening night has been growing steadily because of strong word of mouth, said UI senior Peter Alexander.

"I'll definitely go check it out," he said. "I've heard it has everything over there."

UI sophomore Jamie Kervarna said she has been going to Serendipity for the past week after finding out about it through friends.

"I think it has a great atmosphere to either study or party. I really enjoy it," she said.

Serendipity's plans include an invitation to bring together the UI's art community, a disco party with a mermaid in a pink pool and the multimedia event "Continuum: Discover the Matrix," which will be presented by Ebon Fisher, a UI assistant art professor.

While the lounge is not yet open 24 hours, it will slowly extend its closing time until it is open all day and all night by the end of the fall semester.

Smoking washer empties Rienow

The Iowa City Fire Department responded to a call of a possible fire at Rienow Residence Hall at 3:14 a.m. Thursday.

After further investigation, fire officials discovered that the "fire" was actually just smoke coming from a belt in a washing machine in the basement of the dormitory, said Fire Chief Andrew Rocca.

No damage was done to the residence hall, he said.

Students, however, were evacuated from the building for 10 minutes. After returning to their rooms, they had to go outside again when the alarm rang a second time.

"It was irritating," said UI sophomore Jenny Sneed, who lives on the sixth floor of Rienow. "I just wanted to go back to bed."

Black, Latino frats & sororities open recruiting

■ While the chapters are traditionally black and Latino, they are open to anyone.

By Natasha Lambropoulos
The Daily Iowan

The UT's black- and Latino-based Greek fraternities and sororities will hold fall recruitment today at the IMU.

Members will offer an informational gathering at 7 p.m. to inform UI students about their various organizations. A welcome speech will kick off the open house, followed by individual meetings with the sororities and fraternities.

"We want everyone to come to find out more about the black and Latino Greeks. This is their informational time," said Tyan-na McCann, the president of the Panhellenic Council.

Although the chapters are traditionally for black and Latino students, anyone is welcome to join, said Mary Peterson, the UI director of student life.

Each chapter will host its own recruitment process, depending on the number of students who show interest in each chapter, McCann said.

"People get their first impressions of us through this informational rush," said Edwin West, the former Phi Beta Sigma president. "They learn information, requirements and things about the national level organization."

The national council requires students to complete at least one semester in order to go through recruiting.

Panel nixes easing restrictions on gay male blood donorship

■ The FDA's scientific advisers narrowly reject the easing of a 1985 ban.

By Lauran Neergaard
Associated Press

GAITHERSBURG, Md. — Government scientists narrowly rejected a proposal to ease the ban on gay male blood donors Thursday, citing uncertainty over whether the move would increase the AIDS risk to the nation's blood supply.

All men who seek to donate blood are asked if they have had sex, even once, with another man since 1977. Those who say they have are permanently banned from donating blood.

Critics say that policy, in effect since 1985, is outdated because better testing can now detect virtually all HIV-infected ed donated blood — and there's an increasingly urgent need for more blood donors. Also, the gay community contends that the policy is discriminatory, forbidding donations by thousands of men whose HIV tests show they're healthy.

The Food and Drug Administration asked its scientific advisers Thursday whether it should change the blood-donation rule to ban only men who had sex with another man within the last five years.

But the advisers voted 7-6 that there was not enough evidence that it was safe to make the change. The FDA is not bound by its advisers' decisions, but it typically follows them.

Changing the policy would have resulted in approximately 62,300 men — both gays and those who had experimented with homosexual activity only once — seeking to donate blood, estimated FDA medical officer Dr. Andrew Dayton. That might result in 1.7 HIV-infected units of blood slipping into the blood supply, he said.

The issue has split the blood industry, with half of the nation's blood banks supporting easing the policy even more — to one year instead of five — while the American Red Cross opposes any change.

All donated blood undergoes strict testing for the AIDS virus and other blood-borne diseases — that would not have changed. But testing isn't perfect. Of the nation's 12 million units of donated blood, approximately 10 HIV-infected units slip through each year, causing about two to three HIV infections a year, said Dr. Michael Busch of the University of California, San Francisco.

So, as an extra precaution, the FDA also requires blood banks to question potential donors about their risks for HIV and other diseases and refuse the blood of high-risk people. The hope is people will not lie, although studies show many do.

The ban on gay male donors was adopted in 1985 because the deadly AIDS virus first appeared in the United States as an epidemic in the gay community. Later, other high-risk people were barred from donating, such as intravenous drug users and prostitutes.

But now — with the nation bracing for blood shortages and new genetic testing that promises to eliminate the rare cases of HIV still caused by donated blood — many blood banks are asking why they have to turn away thousands of potentially healthy men.

"I don't think there's enough information to make a decision at this point in time," said John Boyle, a Maryland blood-safety consultant for the FDA.

But even panelists who voted against the change did encourage the FDA to continue to study how to change what several called a discriminatory policy that mandates no gay men can give blood even though doctors are only worried about a subset of that population.

Approximately 8 percent of gay men have HIV, the government estimates.

"We cannot change our procedures in a way that would result in increased numbers of infectious donation in our blood supply," said Dr. Rebecca Haley, the Red Cross's chief medical officer.

The FDA considered easing the ban partly because the nation is facing an increasingly tight blood supply.

Dads on ice warm to pilot program

■ Almost 700,000 fathers are behind bars, and some prisons allow them to try to be parents.

By David Crary
Associated Press

DURHAM, N.C. — At Missouri's toughest prison, inmates run a 4-H Club program for their children. Imprisoned dads in Florida, some barely literate, send home recordings of themselves reading storybooks.

Though many wardens and legislators remain wary, fatherhood programs run by volunteers and nonprofit groups are teaching parenting skills and family values to more and more of the nearly 700,000 fathers held in state and federal prisons.

Some states avoid such programs; others have one or two modest pilot projects. But Pennsylvania has expanded a program called Long Distance Dads throughout its prison system, and several Southern states are preparing comparable initiatives.

The trend has contributed to an upbeat mood at one of the first major conferences on the topic, the North American Conference on Fathers Behind Bars and on the Streets. The three-day meeting, which will end today, has drawn researchers, social workers and corrections officials from across the country.

"Maybe we're coming to the point where the invisible families are starting to become visible to people in policy positions," said James Mustin, the executive director of the Family and Corrections Network, a co-sponsor of the conference.

Nearly 1.5 million American children have a parent in prison, according to the Bureau of Justice Statistics. Many states already have special programs for mothers behind bars. But 93 percent of the imprisoned parents are men, and their role as fathers has traditionally been neglected by corrections officials.

"Most wardens see their job as, 'Nobody gets out, nobody gets hurt,'" Mustin said. "If they can do that, they've had a good day."

Over the past four years, Pennsylvania has worked with fatherhood groups to develop Long Distance Dads, and the state now offers the 12-week program to imprisoned fathers throughout the state. With a curriculum created in part by inmates, and using inmates as group leaders, the program encourages fathers to assume responsibility for their children while in prison and after they get out.

Penn State University is scheduled to complete an evaluation of the program in June 2001, but the impact already has delighted prison staff. They report better behavior by participating inmates, and more father-child interaction in prison visiting rooms.

Among other programs highlighted at the conference:

- The 4-H Club started at Missouri's maximum-security Potosi Correctional Center. The inmates plan monthly meetings, organize family dinners, and guide their children in community-service activities.

Lynna Lawson, a 4-H Club specialist who assists the club, said the inmates show keen interest even though most are serving long sentences. "It's an attitude of, 'This is my life. I have to make the best of it,'" she said.

One pitfall: Lawson said inmates can be crushed if a child unexpectedly doesn't show up for a monthly meeting, which means the father can't participate.

"All the fathers in prison express frustration about having no control over their kids," she said.

- Florida's Reading Family Ties, which initially was offered to imprisoned mothers and recently was extended to two men's prisons. Participants attend an 80-hour parenting course and can insert personal greetings on the recordings they send home.

"Speaking into a tape recorder may make it possible for fathers, who often have difficulty expressing their feelings in person, to say, 'I love you' to their children," said Anne Haw Holt, a consultant to Florida's corrections department. "Ownership of the tape will enable the child to hear this caring over and over."

- In New York State, a program called Conscious Parenting, which was started in 1996 by suburbanite volunteers from neighboring Connecticut and has reached more than 250 inmates so far.

In addition to parenting classes, the program features a Children's Day held every few months, in which families are bused to a prison for daylong festivities, including games and a meal organized by the inmates.

Some of the children have never before met their fathers. Volunteer Lucia Scott described one teen-age girl who entered the room where several inmates were waiting and was unsure which one was her father.

Stars urge senators to OK stem-cell research

■ Iowa Sen. Tom Harkin is a sponsor of a bill allowing funds for the controversial research.

By Jesse J. Holland
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Michael J. Fox and Mary Tyler Moore urged lawmakers Thursday to release federal funding for research involving embryonic stem cells, which, the actors say, could lead to cures for diseases such as Parkinson's, juvenile diabetes and Alzheimer's.

"The consistent and inescapable conclusion is that this research offers the potential to eliminate diseases, literally saving millions of lives," said Fox, who just won an Emmy for the ABC sitcom "Spin City." Fox left the show in May to devote more time to fighting Parkinson's, a progressive neurological disorder that he has contracted.

Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., has promised a vote within the month on legislation allowing funding for research on stem cells from discarded human embryos, said Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Penn., the chairman of the Appropriations Committee's Health and Human Services panel.

"I believe we have the votes," said Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, who co-sponsored Specter's legislation. "I hope we have the votes."

Harkin noted that the embryos in question are no bigger than the period at the end of a sentence.

Drug cartel leader charged with killing 10

■ Officials say the alleged Mexican drug lord wanted to silence the victims.

By Chris Roberts
Associated Press

EL PASO, Texas — The alleged leader of a powerful Mexican drug cartel has been charged with killing 10 people, seven of whom were found dead last year at ranch sites near a Mexican border city, the Justice Department said Thursday.

Vicente Carrillo Fuentes, believed to be in control of virtually all drug trafficking in the border city of Ciudad Juarez and nearby El Paso, ordered the killings to silence the victims, Justice Department officials said.

Carrillo Fuentes, who was already wanted by the federal government for a 1997 drug trafficking indictment, is still at large.

"Stepping up the pressure definitely affects Vicente Carrillo Fuentes," U.S. Attorney Bill Blagg said. "Eventually, he'll be captured, or he'll be killed by his rivals."

Blagg said U.S. authorities believe Carrillo Fuentes, who may have had plastic surgery to alter his appearance, is in Mexico. Jose Trinidad Larrieta Carrasco, the director of the Specialized Unit of Organized Crime for the Mexican Attorney General's Office, said his office has no "concrete" leads on Carrillo Fuentes whereabouts.

In a 46-count federal indictment, Carrillo Fuentes is charged with 10 counts of murder to further a continuing criminal enterprise and nine counts of ordering the intentional killing of individuals to prevent communication of information by them to U.S. law-enforcement officers.

Last fall, dozens of FBI agents and Mexican military and federal judicial police began exhuming remains from clandestine graves situated on three ranches after a U.S. government informant told authorities as many as 100 bodies might be found at the sites.

Eventually, the remains of nine individuals were found. Carrillo Fuentes was charged in the murders of the seven who were identified.

Carrillo Fuentes also has been charged with ordering the death of Jose Refugio Rubalcava, the former head of the Juarez State Police, and his two sons. Their bodies were found on Nov. 27, 1994, in the trunk of an abandoned vehicle on the Bridge of the Americas.

S.E. Asia floods leave 600,000 homeless

■ The Mekong in Phnom Penh is at its highest level in 70 years.

By Tini Tran
Associated Press

HANOI, Vietnam — Unprecedented floods have killed nearly 100 people across Southeast Asia, including a teen-age boy who drowned Thursday in front of the royal palace in Cambodia as hundreds watched from the riverbank.

The floods have forced 600,000 people from their homes in Cambodia, Vietnam and Laos. Rescue workers were distributing drinking water Thursday, and naval boats evacuated people stranded by high water.

At least 89 people have died in Cambodia and eight in Vietnam since the floods began in July, officials said. Cambodian Prime Minister Hun Sen said the level of the Mekong River, one of three that meet in Cambodia's capital, Phnom Penh, is higher than any time in the past 70 years.

Nou Vibol, 14, was playing with an inner tube with two cousins in the Tonle Sap River in front of the royal palace in Phnom Penh when he was flipped out by the turbulent waters as hundreds of people watched from the bank, said a cousin, Nou Chan Pisit.

"He tried to grab me because he could not swim. I was trying to grab his hand but had no luck," the cousin said, weeping. "There were many adults around, but they did not help."

State television in Vietnam showed thousands of houses flooded in Dong Thap and Long An provinces bordering Cambodia after the Mekong overflowed there, turning vast areas of surrounding rice fields into huge lakes.

Soldiers, sailors and other rescuers used boats to pick up stranded villagers from houses built on stilts.

Hun Sen, touring a district about 25 miles from Phnom Penh, warned merchants against profiteering from the floods, saying many businesses have increased the prices of rice and gasoline.

"I have participated to stop the killing fields, the genocide of Pol Pot ... but it is impossible for me to stop the natural disaster," the Cambodian leader told reporters.

Approximately 600,000 people have lost their homes and farmland to the floods engulfing the region, the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies said in Geneva.

Iraqi hijacks airliner, forces it to Saudi Arabia

■ The hijacker's motive was unclear, authorities said; he surrendered once the aircraft landed.

Associated Press

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — A man with a knife Thursday hijacked a Qatar Airways plane that was heading to Jordan with 144 people aboard and forced it to fly to Saudi Arabia, where the hijacker surrendered.

The hijacker was an Iraqi, the head of Jordan's Civil Aviation Authority and a passenger aboard the Airbus 300 said.

But the unidentified man's motive in diverting the plane was still unclear.

Farouk al-Jizawi, a Jordanian passenger on Flight QR404, said passengers were told about the trouble shortly before the plane, which originated in the Qatari capital, Doha, was to land in the Jordanian capital, Amman.

"We heard the pilot, his voice shaking, announcing that there was a passenger who was insisting on going to Saudi Arabia," al-Jizawi said. Passengers also heard the hijacker threatening the pilot, he said, noting the hijacker's accent was Iraqi.

West Nile virus hits Israeli coast, killing 8

■ Critics have accused the government of not doing enough to slow the progress of the disease.

By Jack Katzenell
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Anxiety in Israel was growing Thursday after the West Nile virus killed an eighth victim this summer, with hospital emergency rooms being crowded with people who feared they had contracted the mosquito-borne disease.

In two dozen towns in Israel's hardest hit coastal plain, residents closed their windows this week as machines belched forth clouds of insecticide mixed with diesel oil to wipe out the mosquitoes. In southern Israel, 3,300 geese were destroyed at a farm after some of the birds died of the disease. There were minor outbreaks among geese at other farms but no wholesale slaughter.

Most flocks have been vaccinated against the virus, said Dr. Oded Nir, the chief veterinarian at the Ministry of Agriculture. "This is not like last year's outbreak of the virus in New York, where they had crows falling out of the sky," Nir said.

There was little chance the outbreaks in New York and Israel were connected, officials said. The virus was probably brought to Israel by wild birds migrating from Europe to Africa, said Dr. Alex Leventhal, the Health Ministry's director of public health. Concerned by the cases in Israel, neighboring Jordan asked hospitals and clinics throughout the kingdom to notify the Health Ministry if any cases were detected.

Eight people in Israel have died this summer, and 120 more have contracted the disease. The latest victim was Nurit Gurwitz, 54, from Rishon Lezion, south of Tel Aviv, who was hospitalized two weeks ago and died Wednesday.

Gurwitz' family was only informed a few hours before her death that she had contracted the illness, said her husband, Shlomo, suggesting that his wife did not receive the proper treatment from the start. The hospital denied the allegations.

In a sign of growing anxiety, hospital emergency rooms were crowded with people with mild influenza who thought they had the West Nile virus, which can be deadly for patients with a weak immune system.

"We calm them down and send them home, but more keep coming," said Dr. Motte Ravid, the director of internal medicine at a hospital in Kfar Sava.

Most cases were diagnosed in Israel's coastal plain, where many migratory birds rest after long flights. None were in Jerusalem, which is in the hills. "The birds don't stop in Jerusalem, and there are fewer mosquitoes there," Leventhal said.

He said the number of cases does not in itself constitute an epidemic, but that nobody could tell how many mild or undetected cases there were. "It could be the tip of the iceberg," he said.

its idea to the UI Student Government.

"If they give us something else to do that is open late, they will curb the drinking problem," Blizek said.

Students for Local Politics also plans to address the issue of voter apathy by creating a voter pamphlet explaining how to register, where to go and when, he said.

Group members said that by increasing voter turnout on local issues, city councilors will have to listen to the views of students.

"A lot of city councilors care what students think, but they do not cater to our needs," Blizek said.

UI sophomore Emily Audlehelm said she thinks

Students for Local Politics should speak with the Chamber of Commerce first so it has more leverage. She said bars going 21 could be negative for other businesses in the area as well as bars themselves.

"(Restaurants such as Pancheros) will have decreased traffic if bars go 21," she said.

The group's plans include making pamphlets, creating a

Web page, having online polls and writing letters to local officials.

Students for Local Politics also plans to become a resource for students in the UI residence halls by holding informal meetings.

"Regardless of whether you are from Iowa City, you still live here, and local politics affects you," Blizek said.

be good for the national spirit," he said. "It will unify and pull Australians together."

While some see the Olympics as nothing more than an athletic competition among nations, Murray said, the Olympics could help fight a more serious cause.

"There's a big Republican movement in Australia to become free of British rule," he said. "(The publicity) may help the movement and put Australia on the path to be free of the Queen."

Gable, who also attended the 1996 Summer Olympics in Atlanta, thinks Sydney will be a better home for this year's Olympics.

"I think it will be less-crowded because people have to come from further away," she said.

Murray agreed that Sydney's climate will be better for competitors and spectators.

"It's more or less spring in Sydney right now," he said. "Atlanta was too humid."

Murray said that although Australia is a great place for the 2000 Summer Olympics, he's happy right here in Iowa City.

"It would be too unbearable," he said. "Everything will be too crowded and more expensive."

together, Neubauer said.

"We are consistently looking for opportunities to promote good causes," she said.

The purpose of the lottery tickets is to inform Iowans about the number of famous and accomplished people who are from the state.

"They're to let people know that we really do have famous Iowans," said Roger Munns, the public relations director for the historical society. "Sometimes we don't do a good job of strutting our stuff."

Many people at the UI say they are pleased Gable was given this distinction and agree it was earned.

"Dan Gable deserves any honor you give him," said Steve Parrott, the UI director of University Communications. "There's never been a better coach." The lottery and the historical society chose these particular five people because, Munns said, they were well-known.

"They were chosen to represent a balance of people statewide who were all from Iowa," he said.

Each of the new scratch-game lottery tickets costs $1 and contains a top prize of $100. There are four chances to win on each ticket by matching "your numbers" to the "winning numbers." Non-winning tickets can be redeemed for $1 off the cost of the $10 admission to the Historical Society's Famous Iowan costume party and dance in Des Moines on Oct. 28.

If the tickets are a success, the historical society and the lottery plan to run a second set with six new people.

Anticipation builds for Iowa-ISU game

Gidel said, he will be in Kinnick Stadium, cheering for the home team.

UI sophomore Bjorn Norgaard not only tailgated at the Iowa-Iowa State game in Ames last year but also found time to attend some of the game, he said.

"I went to as much of the game as I possibly could," Norgaard said. "It was a monstrosity."

After ISU's 17-10 victory on Sept. 11, 1999, Cyclone fans threw couches out of their homes and burned them and attempted to tear down the goal posts, said Anne Hall, an ISU sophomore.

"Everyone just swarmed the field. Later there were parties everywhere — everywhere was out," she said.

Police were faced with a significant number of problems. The number of alcohol offenses, as well as the amount of vandalism and criminal mischief, far exceeded that of a normal weekend in Ames, said Ames police Sgt. Mike Johns.

The number of officers on duty in Iowa City will nearly double during this weekend, said Iowa City Police Chief R. J. Winkelhake.

While he hopes there are no serious problems, Winkelhake is more worried about this game than some of the other home games because more people will be in Iowa City, he said. "The potential for people getting hurt is a concern," Winkelhake said.

Postgame unruliness is hard to predict, said police Sgt. Bill Campbell. Fans sometimes get out of control, but skirmishes are not limited to games with ISU, he said.

The number of arrests almost always goes up when there is a home game, Campbell said, and when people start drinking, problems are more likely to arise.

"We have seen a consistent connection between alcohol and fights, assaults and criminal mischief," he said.

Dave Moore, the co-owner of the Fieldhouse Restaurant & Bar, 111 E. College St., and College Street Billiards, 114 E. College St., said the Iowa-Iowa State game usually is one of the biggest weekends for business. He thinks this weekend will benefit his establishments because fans who couldn't get tickets to the sold-out game will go downtown to watch the game on TV.

Moore does not foresee any problems with the additional crowd, judging from past experience.

"When Iowa State won here two years ago, people got a little cocky, but ISU is pretty well-behaved," he said.

Employees at Bo-James, 118 E. Washington St., will treat this weekend as they do any other football weekend, though the bar will be stocked up and additional staff will be working, bartender Nate Wetzel said.

Although ISU alumnus Scott Maras will not attend the game Saturday, some of his T-shirts might, he said.

Maras debuted his satirical Web site www.hawksuck.com, where Hawk fans and enemies alike can find the "Hawksuck" T-shirts and "coozie" beverage holders. In the past month, his Web site received 6,632 hits, many of which are from Hawkeye fans, Maras said. He developed the Web site to be a spoof on the over-saturated media attention given to Hawkeye sports, he said.

Despite the negative connotation associated with "Hawksuck," Maras said, he would not predict the winner of this weekend's game.

"I think it will actually be a close game," he said.

Hall, who attended the Iowa-Iowa State game last year, said she will make the trek to Iowa City this year and is looking forward to a friendly rivalry because people she grew up with attend both schools.

"I can see my friends (who go to Iowa) and give them crap about how they're going to lose, but, in the end, we're all still friends," Hall said.

She expects people to get a little rowdy, but that it is all in the name of school spirit. She only has one thing to say about the vandalism after last year's game.

"We won — what do you expect?"

For ISU junior Brandon

Franck, the rivalry between ISU and the UI is a "family thing." He said he hasn't missed an ISU home game in 10 years. He is looking forward to coming to Iowa City with his friends to tailgate and watch ISU beat UI, he said.

"I'm looking forward to tailgating and going to some good parties Saturday night," Franck said. "I've got my ISU gear all ready."

business owners uncomfortable and unhappy because it's a forced change."

Marchman believes that the decision-making process is handled in an open way, unlike Stern's belief.

"There are lots of things that need to be considered," he said. "No one would expect a group to restructure without a good amount of discussion and debate."

Marchman also said that it will be interesting to see if the UI gets a letter to see how officials respond, but he doesn't feel that there should be any significant changes in policy.

"If they get the letter, I think they should consider it just like anyone's opinion, but I don't see that there should be a change in the opposite direction that SAS is pushing now," he said.

Senate clears way for vote on China trade

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Thursday beat back the last proposed amendments to legislation putting normal trade with China on a permanent basis, setting up a vote on the historic bill for Sept. 19.

With all obstacles now removed, at least 70 senators are expected to endorse the measure, which would open China's markets and give American businesses and farmers the chance to significantly increase their sales.

Sen. William Roth, R-Del., a chief advocate for the bill, cited figures estimating that the new relationship would result in $13 billion in new U.S. exports to China.

Passage of the bill, strongly backed by the Clinton administration and the business community, is necessary if the United States is to enjoy the lower tariffs and reduced trade barriers China is committed to as part of its accession to the World Trade Organization.

A Knight in tarnished armor? Hardly. He's ...

The last of the old school

It is easy to understand why people would march in the streets for Bobby Knight. And if you think the reason is just those three national championships, you are wrong. For a lot of people, and you can call "us" those "old fashioned types," it was always refreshing to watch Knight pace up and down the court in that red sweater. I say "refreshing" because Knight was a rare type of individual — he was a disciplinarian, and they are hard to find in America nowadays, especially in athletics.

There are a lot of "old fashioned types" who have gotten sick of things such as "Baywatch" and Howard Stern. We have become tired of being shocked for the sake of being shocked. But more than that, we are tired of our culture, which seems to no longer hold anything sacred. And over the last several decades it has not just been the rock stars and Hollywood types who have offended us with their behavior, it has also been our college and professional athletes. There is hardly anything more disturbing than hearing about a star athlete who has a world of opportunity ahead of him but still feels the need to beat his girlfriend, or assault a stranger in a bar, and so forth. The behavior of athletes seems to worsen every year.

Coach Knight represented, for many people, an "old fashioned" style of doing things. And furthermore, he won games with this style. Knight demanded respect from his players. He demanded the best from his players academically as well as athletically. He played by NCAA rules in all matters, while many don't, and yet he still won games.

No one can dispute Knight's greatness as a coach. But none of these things change the fact,

Chuck Robinson/Associated Press
Embattled coach Bobby Knight's style didn't appeal to all, but it will be missed by many.

however, that he needed to be fired. Knight has had many opportunities to change those aspects of his behavior that were abusive. But instead, he has always chosen to blame others for his own mistakes. And worst of all, especially for us "old fashioned types," he seems unable to display towards others that which he demands the most: respect.

Pursue oil alternatives now

Around the world, fuel prices continue to fluctuate. Although OPEC has promised to increase production, relief from high prices may still be a long way off. As prices climb, politicians and world leaders talk of cutting fuel taxes, opening emergency reserves, and increasing the pressure on OPEC. However, they only think of the short term and have not yet given the answer that everyone needs but no one wants to hear, which is: It is time for Western countries such as the United States to forsake fossil fuels in favor of alternative energy sources before it is too late.

First, at our present rate of consumption, prices have no where to go but up. Simple economics dictate that as the oil supplies dwindle and consumption rises, the price will increase, possibly very dramatically when supplies are nearly depleted. When supplies are finally expended, the good times will be over, and our entire civilization will grind to a halt immediately. This may sound like a doomsday prediction, and it is. Our apocalypse is the exact minute that the wells run dry. The only way to prevent this catastrophe is to be prepared with alternate energy sources for when the oil stops flowing.

It is time for Western countries to forsake fossil fuels before it's too late.

Second, America's incredible demand for oil is a great weakness that came to light in the Gulf War. We did not go to liberate Kuwait; we went to liberate the oil necessary to keep our country running. Although our leaders made the correct decision, they missed the moral of the story. We need alternative energy sources now in order to safeguard our future. It is time to stop being a slave to OPEC's whims and desires and set our own course.

The energy is out there, just waiting to be used. It is present in rivers, sunlight and ocean currents. It can be released from atoms, by separating them or smashing them together. Now, when the lights are still powered by coal and oil, is the time to be researching and investing in these alternative energy sources. If we wait too long, then the wells will run dry, and the lights will go out. It is quite difficult to build a hydroelectric plant or fusion facility when the lights are off, especially when your entire civilization is crumbling to pieces around you.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Libertarianism's roots don't necessarily lie with the Founding Fathers

While there are many benefits to smaller government, James Edward Johnson (DI, Sept. 11) goes too far when he tries to assert that "(l)ibertarianism was at the center of the American Revolution." Johnson must draw his history from materials distributed by the Libertarian Party. A few examples of the attitude of society towards government regulation of morals, contemporaneous to the Revolution, should suffice to show that the Founding Fathers were not only not averse to using government to prohibit immorality but even wrote in many of the state Constitutions that one of the main functions of government was to inculcate morality in the people.

The states before and after the Revolution enforced laws against nudity, prostitution, vulgar and obscene publications and speech, adultery, divorce and encouraged religious devotion and morality. Jefferson, the most libertarian of the Founders, even proposed a bill in the Virginia Legislature to require church attendance on certain public holidays. Massachusetts, a few months prior to the Revolution, ordered that "all civil officers, within this Colony, are hereby Strictly enjoined and commanded that they bring to condign Punishment, every Person who shall be guilty of any Immoralities whatsoever." Certainly not the words of Johnson's libertarian utopia. Even the more tolerant state of Pennsylvania in its Constitution admonished that "laws for the encouragement of virtue, and prevention of vice and immorality, shall be made and constantly kept in force."

Clearly then, before appealing to history and the admitted wisdom of the founding generation for a type of society they would have found immoral, we must recognize that the founders understood the educational value of a government that promoted virtue and prevented vice, as opposed to Johnson's, which would do neither.

Due for due process

In March 1999 I went to a "progressive" law conference. One of the panels I attended was called "progressive prosecution." As an oxymoron, the title intrigued me.

I was quite skeptical, yet listened critically to federal, state and local prosecutors claim that they "helped" the accused by lowering amounts of cocaine attributed to the defendant so the convict only served five years instead of 10. At the time I could not appreciate why these law enforcers saw themselves as "helpers," but, now in my third year of law school, I have more insight. Prosecutors are just cops with law degrees. They are not necessarily smarter than police but just choose assistant director of the Miami-Dade Police Department, Frank Boni, said, "(i)t would appear that there was force discharged that may have not been consistent with what was necessary."

Oh well, it least it was not another Abner Louima situation, just some punches and kicks. But what do more refined bullies, i.e., prosecutors, do?

Be it at the local level or federal, prosecutors over-charge defendants, readily accept knowing lies of corrupt cops, and simply ignore the law.

Take the case of nuclear scientist, Wen Ho Lee. He spent 279 days in solitary confinement for mishandling nuclear "secrets." Of course the information he had was not classified as "top-secret," and the prosecutors believe that Lee never passed any information to a third party (e.g., China or North Korea). Nevertheless, federal prosecutors originally charged

Lee with 59 counts, nearly 40 of which were for "acting with intent to harm

JOHN CALVIN JONES

the United States." Those crimes carrying "life" sentences.

If Lee were such a criminal and threatened the security of the United States — hence deserved to sit in jail for the rest of his life — why would the prosecutors drop any charges? Remember, the plea bargain came right after an FBI agent admitted he provided false testimony in Lee's bail hearing. And ultimately the Justice Department had to concede that instead of being a Taiwanese man who helped (Red) China steal nuclear secrets, Wen Ho Lee was guilty only of something that a former CIA director did — he mishandled information.

I can only surmise that the bullies in the Justice Department honed their skills as local prosecutors in courtrooms such as those of Iowa City. Here, the county will pursue charges of underage alcohol possession even when the prosecutor knows the cop conducted a wrongful search. In going for the "victory for victory's sake," UI law student Tim Vavricek tried a case against a woman who was OVER 21 for having a license that was slightly worn where it said "under 21 until XXXX" (even though her DOB was clearly visible). Vavricek said the defendant "might have been guilty of something," therefore it was necessary to prosecute her, have her lose her license, and pay a reinstatement fee of more than $200. "Why?" I queried. Would she and all her other friends over 21 learn a lesson? Would society be safer, because another 21-year-old could not drive for 60 days? But bullies need no other rationale than "I do it because I can," and he did. Incidentally, a bully judge helped Vavricek, she ignored the "beyond a reasonable doubt" standard — after all, it is only the LAW.

Another law student told me that he prosecuted someone for having "dark" windshields. I asked the "bully in training" why he chose to convict someone for such an offense. "Well, it is the law," he replied. "But what is its purpose?" I asked student McFly. He had none, he did not care, but he won a conviction! For any of you potential bullies, a.k.a. persons concerned about "law and order," thinking about law school, save us the headache — stick to civil litigation.

'Voices from the Prairie' speak volumes

Four nationally renowned Iowa poets will read from their work today on the Pentacrest.

By Kristen Gast
The Daily Iowan

Much has been said lately about Iowa's uncertain future: Young people are leaving the state, and no major industry is coming in to reverse the trend. But Chris Rossi says he and his colleagues at Humanities Iowa didn't see the situation as being nearly so bleak.

"We didn't see that at all," he said. "We saw a great literary landscape. We decided to capitalize on a great homegrown industry."

So Humanities Iowa, the state affiliate of the National Endowment for the Humanities, decided to organize an event that would focus on Iowa writers and the work they produce. The result was "Voices from the Prairie," a public presentation of writers and their works designed to promote Iowa culture through literature.

Today from 3-5 p.m. on the Pentacrest, four Iowa-based poets will read from the work they contributed to "Voices from the Prairie" at the first Iowa Writers' Celebration. The lineup will include Iowa's new poet laureate, UI Writers' Workshop Professor Marvin Bell, UI Professor Emeritus Donald Justice, southwestern Iowa farmer/poet Michael Carey and Mary Swander from Iowa State University.

Writers will participate in a question-and-answer session moderated by long-time Iowa Review Editor David Hamilton.

Although they plan to include writers from other literary genres in the future, Rossi and his colleagues said, they chose to focus the inaugural event on poetry this year.

"We were very much involved in creating the poet-laureate position, and we wanted to spotlight that position," Rossi said. The Iowa poet laureate was created in March, and the title was awarded to long-time Iowa resident Bell.

"I feel honored that Chris wants to spotlight the poet laureate, but I feel it's really about honoring Iowa writers," Bell said. "I think I'm standing in for a great number of poets who are from Iowa or who have lived in Iowa."

All of the four featured poets are nationally known. They have published volumes of poetry and have appeared in national literary reviews. Additionally, all have had works published in the Iowa Review.

"These are people I admire as being among our best," Hamilton said. "Writers elsewhere in the country recognize that, too. Writing is a good thing to represent our city by."

Marvin Bell
Iowa poet laureate

Rossi said he had little trouble getting poets on board for the program.

"They understood implicitly what we were up to," he said. "They understand our philosophy, which is to promote the public identity of Iowa through its culture. They understand what place poetry has in the articulation of that culture."

Bell grew up on Long Island in New York and now spends much of his time in Iowa City, teaching and writing. He said he enjoys the atmosphere the area provides for writers.

"Iowa City is a special place," he said. "There is a sense of community, a sense of the value of writing. This has been a good place to live and write. It's been a good place for my family. It's been a good place to teach writing. And it still is."

One of the goals of the event is to share that sort of enthusiasm for writing in Iowa with the audience.

"At the very least, people will be reminded of the presence of writers among them," Hamilton said. "The thoughts from the writers will touch them. They will carry that away. There should be pleasure in hearing good things read."

Bell agreed. "An event like this is about affirming Iowa writers. I hope the audience enjoys it, and that it will strike a chord with them," he said. "I hope they'll follow up by finding a poet they want to read. If it makes them want to write, that's great."

Rossi said he hopes this reaffirmation of a community of Iowa writers will dispel some of the pessimism about the state's future.

"All this hullabaloo about the blue funk Iowa is in with regards to the exodus of talent needs to be kept in perspective," he said. "There are a lot of things going on in this state; a lot of people are drawn here. The arts and humanities are involved in that." "Voices from the Prairie" will be broadcast live on WSUI 910 AM.

Gone like a candle in the wind

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — Elton John walked out on a sold-out concert just 30 minutes before it was supposed to start, organizers said.

Elton John
walked out of concert

The singer appeared worried that the theater at the Estoril Casino near Lisbon was half-empty, casino spokesman Nuno Lima de Carvalho said.

"He said he was going out to get some air, but then he jumped into his car and went to the airport to catch his private jet. He never said goodbye or anything to anyone," the spokesman said.

The spokesman said the audience of 1,250 people, including government ministers and bank presidents, was slow to move from the dining room Wednesday night.

The casino is considering legal action, he said. Tickets for the show cost more than $200.

Paul Carey, a London spokesman for the singer, said he was unaware of the incident and had no comment.

Heartthrob to play for the prez

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Ricky Martin will be gyrating his hips for President Clinton.

Vice President Al Gore and former President Ford will also be on hand for the 14th Carousel of Hope gala Oct. 28 at the Beverly Hilton Hotel.

Singer Toni Braxton will also perform, and Jay Leno will be master of ceremonies.

The benefit raises money for the Barbara Davis Center for Childhood Diabetes in Denver and the American Diabetes Foundation.

"We are sure that President Clinton's presence will be inspiring to everyone and the medical profession, which is working every day to find a cure for diabetes," Davis, the wife of billionaire Marvin Davis, said Thursday.

They got Sonny, babe

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — The beat goes on in the desert: Tourists may one day sit on a park bench alongside the late Sonny Bono.

As a tribute to the mayor, actor, singer and congressman, the city is proposing a fountain and a life-size bronze statue of Bono sitting on a bench downtown. Bono died in a skiing accident in 1998.

Developer John Wessman is paying for the $125,000 memorial, which would be completed next year, pending city approval.

"He believed in Palm Springs and the rejuvenation of it, so downtown is a part of Sonny's legacy," said Bono's widow, Rep. Mary Bono. "He was such a carefree, passionate person, and the fountain will be something people can identify him with because it's approachable."

Flesh-N-Bone faces sentence

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The star of the rap group Bone Thugs-N-Harmony pleaded no contest to possession of a sawed-off shotgun in connection with a January confrontation at a relative's house.

Stanley Howse, known as Flesh-N-Bone, entered the plea Wednesday and is expected to be sentenced to two years on Oct. 24, prosecutor Eric Lavine said.

The 27-year-old Grammy winner also faces sentencing later this month in Van Nuys in an assault case involving threats using an AK-47 machine gun.

Howse was arrested on Jan. 3 after relatives called police over an argument that started when the rapper arrived for a visit. Officials said he had a shotgun.

Dwight has emergency surgery

The former Iowa sports star will be sidelined for a few weeks.

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

Tim Dwight, a former Hawkeye football and track standout, is in the hospital after undergoing an emergency appendectomy Thursday.

Dwight, who is entering his third season with the Atlanta Falcons as a wide receiver and kick-return specialist, will be sidelined for two to four weeks.

He arrived at practice complaining of abdominal pain, and the team's medical staff ran a series of tests and diagnosed him with appendicitis.

Former Hawkeye teammate Rob Thein said he found out about Dwight's condition after his dad called him.

"Obviously, this early in the season he hopes he heals up quickly," Thein said. "I'm sure he's kind of antsy (to get well)."

In Dwight's absence, Reeves said, rookie Darrick Vaughn will handle kickoff returns, and Eugene Baker will be activated to fill the wide-receiver hole.

Deion Trowers, Dwight's friend and former track teammate, said he expects him to be fine and return as soon as possible.

"He's probably going to be upset he has to sit out for a while," Trowers said. "He'll do everything and anything to get back out on the field."

Cyclones are coming to town

The teams are expected to play before a sell-out crowd at Kinnick Saturday.

By Jeremy Schnitker
 The Daily Iowan

All week, coaches on both sides have been trying to play down the rivalry between Iowa and Iowa State. The feeling in both camps is that this is just another game on the schedule.

"There are other big games," ISU assistant coach Bob Elliott said. "We have big weeks, they have big weeks." Iowa vs. Iowa State. Just another game?

That's just coaches trying not to put too much into one contest.

The fact is, while either side may not admit it, this game is huge for both parties.

It's huge for the Hawkeyes because they haven't won a game since September 1999, haven't beaten the Cyclones since 1997, and face the possibility of not winning a game this year.

It's huge for the Cyclones because a win Saturday would be their third straight over the Hawkeyes. That's something they've only done twice, and it would put them one step closer to the bowl appearance many are expecting them to make.

"I don't think we can be worried about a let-down," Hawk coach Kirk Ferentz said. "We're fighting for our lives right now, and we want a win. The fact that it's Iowa State — that will only add to it."

The Hawkeyes will be fighting for their lives Saturday. Coming off a loss to Western Michigan last week, Iowa's first loss to a team from the Mid-American Conference, Iowa needs a win to get back on track.

Kampman adjusts to life on the line

A Hawkeye linebacker switches positions to play defensive end.

By Roseanna Smith
 The Daily Iowan

Making changes sometimes means losing your biggest dream. For former linebacker Aaron Kampman, it meant laying down his pride and making necessary adjustments to give up his position as a middle linebacker and step up to the new challenge of playing as a defensive end.

"I wanted to be one of the best linebackers ever at Iowa and realized two years into my career that this was the best thing to do," he said.

Now a junior, Kampman started as a linebacker twice his freshman year. He was ranked seventh on the team with tackles, and he progressed his sophomore season, recording 103 tackles, which was good for second on the team. However, the decision for him to switch positions before spring practice was a confident one, he said. "I realized for two years, I was basically the same weight and wasn't really getting any faster," he said. "I knew that my body could handle the change, and we had some great depth at middle linebacker."

Looking for a great defensive game, Kampman was also searching for a new challenge, he said.

"I wanted to get back to having fun playing football and enjoying going out and giving my hardest effort and leaving the rest as it were," he said. "I wanted to get back to — when the game was over — feeling dead tired and knowing that I'd given everything I had. It wasn't that I didn't do that as a linebacker, but I knew that I could probably feel that way more as a defensive end."

Changing positions has also changed Kampman's perspective on the field. However, making eight tackles against Western Michigan last weekend is a testament to how well he is making the adjustment.

"Even as much as you practice and scrimmage, the SYDNEY, Australia — At the opera house, they packed the water's edge and cheered. They watched from buildings, from a docked oceanliner, even from atop the steel skeleton of the fabled Harbor Bridge. They oohed and ahhed as the Olympic flame went by.

Ready to greet the world, Sydneysiders paused Thursday at the edge of the Olympics to see their downtown awash in fireworks, an Olympic-rings light show and even a big round moon, delivered against a cloudless sky. The collective exhortation: Let the games begin.

"This shows people what we're about — whatever that may be," said a smiling Gloria Garton, pressed up against a barricade with her husband to see blind Italian opera singer Andrea Bocelli pass the Olympic torch to Australian pop star Olivia Newton-John.

Australian sprinter Melinda Gainsford-Taylor, women's captain of her nation's Olympic team, brought the torch into the Sydney Opera House grounds at dusk, passing it to Bocelli.

He held it aloft before thousands of cheering people crowded into Bennelong Point, then handed it to a grinning Newton-John. She carried it off into the night on the last leg of its journey toward Olympic Park and today's opening ceremony. Then Bocelli sang Verdi's "Di quella pira."

With the crowd roaring, the Olympic rings that hang from the landmark bridge illuminated as the last sunlight faded, and fireworks shot from the bridge's anchorage. Five helicopters and the Goodyear Blimp — rechristened the "G'Day Blimp" for the games — hovered overhead.

"It's all happening," enthused Lawrence Nethery of Sydney. "The rings look fantastic, but the moon looks even better. One of the best things I've ever been to."

"A lovely day on the harbor," said spectator Lorraine Askew. Half of the seats outside the opera house went to the gener-

ATLANTA — Javy Lopez broke out of a 2-for-26 slump with a pair of run-scoring singles, and the Atlanta Braves rallied to beat the Florida Marlins, 5-3, Thursday.

Andy Ashby (10-12) gave up a two-run single in the first to Mike Lowell, then held Florida scoreless until the eighth inning.

Atlanta, maintained a two-game lead in the NL East over second-place New York, which beat Montreal, 10-4.

Ashby, 6-5 since the Braves acquired him from Philadelphia on July 12, allowed three runs and eight hits in 7 2/3 innings.

John Rocker, Atlanta's third pitcher, walked his first batter on four pitches leading off the ninth, then struck out the side for his 21st save in 23 chances.

Lopez, who went 2-for-3 with a walk, singled off Reid Cornelius (3-9) for a 3-2 lead in the sixth after Wally Joyner walked and Brian Jordan singled.

Brewers 6, Reds 4

CINCINNATI — Geoff Jenkins and Lou Collier homered as Milwaukee beat Cincinnati.

Collier, whose only previous homer this season had been for Double-A Huntsville, hit a solo shot in the fourth inning off Ron Villone (9-10). After Mark Loretta singled, Jenkins followed with a two-run homer, his 27th of the season, to give Milwaukee a 6-2 lead.

Jimmy Haynes (12-12) gave up solo home runs to Pokey Reese in the second inning and Sean Casey in the fifth. Haynes allowed four runs on eight hits in 5 2-3 innings. He walked two and struck out one.

Curtis Leskanic pitched the ninth for his 10th save in 11 chances.

Cardinals 4, Cubs 0

ST. LOUIS — Pat Hentgen

pitched a three-hitter for his first shutout in more than three years, and St. Louis drew closer to the NL Central title with a victory over Chicago.

Hentgen (15-10) won for the fifth time in six decisions, striking out nine and walking none. He allowed singles by Shane Andrews in the second and seventh innings and a leadoff double by Ricky Gutierrez in the fourth.

It was Hentgen's 10th shutout, his first since June 20, 1997, against Baltimore, and 31st complete game, his first since Aug. 12 last year in a 3-0 loss to Minnesota.

Ruben Quevedo (2-9) gave up all four runs — three earned — and five hits in six innings.

McGwire making best of new situation

■ The St. Louis slugger has gone 2-for-5 as a pinch hitter.

ST. LOUIS — Mark McGwire is slowly getting used to the idea he'll get just one at-bat a game for the rest of this year.

St. Louis Cardinals manager Tony La Russa put McGwire in the starting lineup during the team's just-completed six-game trip, let him bat in the first, and then removed him.

McGwire had four "starts" at second base and one each in left field and shortstop, going 2-for-5 with a home run and a long single that would have been a double if he could run.

The NL Central leaders began a seven-game homestand Thursday night, so La Russa will have to use McGwire strictly as a pinch hitter, where he has zero experience this year.

McGwire, on the disabled list from July 7 to Sept. 8 with a severe case of patella tendinitis in his right knee, has been in obvious pain when running the bases.

La Russa floated the idea of having McGwire play first base at least at the start of games during the trip.

"What's better than one at-bat? Two at-bats," La Russa said.

"I nixed it," McGwire said before the Cardinals began a four-game series against the Chicago Cubs. "There's no way. My knee can't handle it."

McGwire said just running to first is enough of a chore.

"Getting out of the box and running down the line, it's on fire," he said. "I can only imagine what it'd be like at first base, bending down and trying to make a play."

At one point during the trip, La Russa suggested McGwire could just stand at first. McGwire nixed that, too.

"I'm not going to go out there and be an ornament," he said. "When you're out there playing, people don't care if you're injured or not. The ball gets by or something like that, it's not good for the team, it's not good for me."

La Russa said he'll use McGwire according to the game situation, avoiding situations where he could ground into an easy double play for

Every one of his at-bats, he's had a chance. That's how amazing he is.

Tiger close to $100 million deal

■ Some analysts believe Woods could become sports' first $1 billion man.

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

Fresh off his record-breaking summer of golf, Tiger Woods is on the verge of signing a $100 million endorsement contract with Nike believed to be the richest in sports, the Associated Press has learned.

Mark Steinberg, his agent at IMG, declined to discuss specifics of the deal on Thursday, only to say it was an "outstanding contract."

"We are within days of a signature," he said.

"It compensates Tiger not just for what he's done with Nike, but what he has done for golf and sports."

Woods' previous contract with Nike was said to be $40 million over five years. He was used heavily in its advertisements and established his own line of clothing and shoes.

A source close to the negotiations, speaking on condition of anonymity, described it as the "largest contract in sports marketing history," worth about $100 million over five years.

"There are so many different revenue streams," the source said. "It's impossible to calculate what the end result will be."

Nike Golf President Bob Wood described the contract as "pretty creative."

"It's not often you get a chance to work with somebody who's the best in the world at what they do," he said. "Working with and being associated with Tiger Woods has created an incredible amount of positive energy about Nike Golf and Nike."

While Wood also declined to discuss contract details, he did say the amount was partly tied to sales.

Woods has represented Nike since turning professional in 1996. In just four years, he has won all four major championships, becoming, at 24, the youngest player to do so. He set the scoring record in each of them, and he has attracted a record number of TV viewers just about every week.

With three tournaments still to play, his nine victories this year are the most in one PGA Tour season since 1950, and he is on pace to shatter the all-time season scoring average set by Byron Nelson in 1945.

In June, he gave Nike a huge lift when he switched to the Nike Tour Accuracy ball. He went on to win the U.S. Open at Pebble Beach by 15 strokes, the largest winning margin in the 140-year history of major championship golf.

Woods also became the first player to finish a U.S. Open in double digits below par, a 12-under 272. A month later, he won the British Open at St. Andrews with a 19-under 269 — another major championship record.

Last month, he became the first player in the stroke-play era of the PGA Championship to win back-to-back titles, outlasting Bob May in a three-hole playoff.

The Nike Golf president said its market share for balls has increased from about 1 percent in April to nearly 4 percent.

The switch to the Nike ball did not have a major effect on contract negotiations, Wood said. Nike also is considering a move toward golf clubs.

"If Nike Golf comes out with equipment, we definitely will be looking at one person," he said.

Woods devotes a substantial amount of time to Nike, and the Beaverton, Ore., company has used him effectively in their TV ads.

Perhaps the most famous was not even planned. During a break from a commercial of Woods hitting balls with dozens of hackers on a range, he began bouncing a ball on his wedge — behind his back, between his legs — before whacking it in midair.

Such images, along with the spectacular shots he produces just about every week, has enabled Woods to transcend his sport like few others. His father, Earl Woods, said last week that Woods would do more for Nike than Michael Jordan ever did.

"He represents Nike Corp., the whole brand name," the father said. "That will increase more and more as he gets a little older."

Wood, the Nike Golf president, said that was "definitely possible."

IOWA STATE CYCLONES

11:05 a.m. Saturday Kinnick Stadium • TV: KGAN • Radio: 96.5 FM and 800 AM

OFFENSE

Kirk Ferentz said it himself when he talked about how Iowa State has the offensive balance he hopes his squad will have someday. When a head coach admits this, the choice is not very difficult.

INTANGIBLES

The Hawkeyes are at home, not to mention the underdog always performs well in a rivalry game. Iowa gets the nod on this one.

Who has the edge?

By Mike Kelly

COACHES

Dan McCarney and Kirk Ferentz are in similar situations. They both took over bad programs and are trying to make them better without much luck. Draw.

SPECIAL TEAMS

Punter Jason Baker gets Iowa an early edge in this game, but Cyclone J.J. Moses is an electrifying kick returner when he gets the opportunity to run it back. Poor kicking in ISU's first game makes me choose Iowa again.

DEFENSE

Both teams have their weaknesses defensively. Iowa can't stop the pass, and Iowa State has trouble shutting down the run. That won't really matter, though. Iowa's running game is last in the Big Ten.

UCLA, Michigan armed with backup quarterbacks

The two signal callers have a combined record of 4-0 this season.

By John Nadel
Associated Press

PASADENA, Calif. — John Navarre and Ryan McCann were supposed to watch from the sidelines as backup quarterbacks. Now, they'll get a different view of the game.

Because of injuries, Navarre will start for No. 3 Michigan and McCann will start for No. 14 UCLA when the teams meet Saturday before a Rose Bowl crowd expected to exceed 80,000.

Navarre, a redshirt freshman, is getting the call because Drew Henson broke his right foot last month.

McCann, a third-year sophomore, is playing because Cory Paus separated his throwing shoulder on the first play of the Bruins' 35-24 season-opening victory over then-No. 3 Alabama. He is at least two weeks from returning.

"I certainly think your opportunity to have a season go downhill in a hurry is there if you don't have two quarterbacks," Michigan coach Lloyd Carr said.

Navarre has been terrific, completing 25 of 34 passes for 394 yards and seven touchdowns with no interceptions to lead the nation in passing efficiency.

However, he did so in one-sided wins over lightly regarded Bowling Green and Rice before partisan crowds of well over 100,000 at Michigan Stadium.

Now, the Wolverines get a much tougher and faster opponent in their first road game.

"He's going to face an eruption of noise when he gets sacked or when he makes a bad throw," Carr said.

Against Alabama and Fresno State, a much-improved UCLA defense has allowed an average of 270.0 yards to rank 26th in the country.

McCann, meanwhile, is 26-of-47 for 300 yards and two touchdowns with one interception. He was yanked at half-time of UCLA's 24-21 victory over Fresno State last week-end.

"If he can do it, he can continue to play quarterback," Bruins coach Bob Toledo said. "And if he doesn't do it, I may even yank him again."

Not exactly a ringing endorsement, and the Wolverines have allowed 271.0 yards per game to rank just below the Bruins. However, McCann said he's put last weekend behind him.

"I've talked to many of the players, I know they have confidence in me, and I have confidence in myself," he said. "I know I can play."

Carr said that once Henson is ready to play, he'll get his job back. Toledo said before the Fresno State game that it was possible McCann would continue to be the man if he performed well and the Bruins kept winning, but now things are far less certain.

Apart from backup QBs, the Wolverines and Bruins have other things in common.

- Both teams are 2-0, having won twice at home.

- Both have outstanding running backs; Michigan's Anthony Thomas has gained 239 yards on 37 carries and scored three touchdowns, and UCLA's DeShaun Foster has rushed for 327 yards on 71 carries and scored five TDs.

- Both have veteran offensive lines that have been dominant in front so far this year.

- And both have done the job defensively.

"This is another big game for us in our house," Toledo said. "If we're going to get back to where we were a couple of years ago, this is a team we have to beat."

The Bruins followed a pair of 10-2 seasons by falling to 4-7 last season.

"That win over Alabama, you've got to remember what kind of team Alabama has," said Carr, whose team beat the Crimson Tide, 35-34, in overtime in the Orange Bowl 8 1/2 months ago. "I've been tremendously impressed with what I've seen on film."

Neuheisel may return to rude greeting

By John Mossman
Associated Press

BOULDER, Colo. — Rick Neuheisel returns to Boulder on Saturday with his ninth-ranked Washington Huskies, hoping the focus will be on football and not his abrupt and bitter departure from Colorado 20 months ago at the height of recruiting season.

While Colorado players say Neuheisel has been forgotten, fans may not be so forgiving.

Neuheisel acknowledges he's likely to receive a rude reception. "I don't anticipate a lovefest or anything like that," he said. "If people are bitter that I left, then that's part of college football."

Neuheisel watched with interest the return of former Mississippi coach Tommy Tuberville — now at Auburn — to Oxford, Miss., last weekend. Some Rebel fans wore T-shirts featuring Tuberville's face and "Liar, Liar" printed under it.

"There's a lot of passion associated with college football," Neuheisel said. "If the passion manifests itself in a distaste for me, I've got big enough shoulders to handle that. As long as they're passionate about the Colorado Buffaloes, that's OK by me."

Neuheisel calls his four years in Boulder — when he led Colorado to 10-2, 10-2, 5-6 and 8-4 records — "a great time in my life and my family's life. It will be neat to be back there."

But will CU fans who felt jilted by Neuheisel have the same sentiment?

When he walked away from Boulder to sign a $1-million-a-year contract with Washington, Neuheisel, once a darling of the Colorado media and of fans, was instantly vilified.

Initially, he was applauded as a different kind of coach who wasn't afraid to be frank, to sing and play the guitar in public or to be close to his players. He became famous for taking his players on inner-tubing trips down Boulder Creek and instituting Popsicle breaks at practice.

But when his teams began showing signs of lacking discipline such as excessive penalties, his approach began to be questioned. A reputed quarterback guru, he was criticized for failing to develop a worthy successor to Kordell Stewart. And his emphasis on a finesse passing game at the expense of running caused his teams to suffer in the ground-oriented, physical Big 12.

The former wunderkind began to be seen as all style and no substance.

He departed on a recruiting weekend when CU officials discovered him negotiating with Washington while at the same time entertaining CU prospects.

He didn't improve his image in Boulder when, after his departure, he characterized CU athletically and financially as a "have-not" institution that will struggle to stay competitive in the Big 12 — even if that view bears some truth.

Neuheisel was Topic A when the Huskies entertained and defeated Colorado 31-24 last season. Judging by the reaction of CU players, he is hardly a factor at all in the rematch this week-end.

Bobby Pesavento, elevated to Colorado's starting quarterback job after two straight creditable performances in relief, said Neuheisel's return "is not that big of a deal."

Kampman followed his heart to Iowa

game tempo just isn't there," he said. "I think that as games keep progressing, I'll just keep trying to improve and work on different things."

Going into Saturday's match-up with Iowa State, Kampman said he looks forward to taking part in the traditional intrastate-rivalry game.

"I really got my first taste of it last year. They're really a good team. They came out and hit us and we hit them. It's just a battle," Kampman said. "There are a lot of feelings going into this game, and we need a win, and we want to get a win. We also want to get that title for the Hawkeyes to take back."

It has always been Kampman's dream to be a Hawkeye, he said.

"I went and saw different things and places, but deep in my heart, when I knew it was time to commit, I knew I would come to Iowa," he said.

Even with a rough start this year and the looming 1-10 record from last season, Kampman said his decision has proven to be good.

"The things that have happened in two years, I would never take back. I would do the same thing over again, knowing what we would have gone through, because it's made me more of a man, a better leader and given me more character," he said.

Recently married, Kampman has been making adjustments off the field as well. Even though he dated his wife, Lindy, for four years, it is a new direction for him, he said.

"It changes a lot, but we had some really good premarital counseling, and I think God has blessed our marriage for that," he said. "It's been a blessing, and it will continue to be a lot of fun."

He is also interested in becoming an elementary school teacher.

"I think kids are influenced pretty easily at that age, and I'd like to be the type of person that can help them," he said.

al public; the other half went to those attending the Thursday opera program. It created an odd juxtaposition: On one side, rowdy youths held Australian flags aloft and chanted "Aussie! Aussie!" while opera-goers in formal garb applauded sedately on the other.

In the crowd on the quay, chants and shouts erupted after a clarinet player in the crowd performed a slow, haunting rendition of "Waltzing Matilda," the unofficial national anthem.

Afterward, downtown erupted into an exuberant festival of happy anticipation. Exuberant fans popped champagne, guzzled beer and sipped wine in the streets in a manner both jubilant and — as befits the Aussie attitude, it seems — mellow.

Bocelli was a surprise guest in the torch ceremony. The tenor was driven in a golf cart to the podium, where Gainsford-Taylor, who will be competing in the Sydney Games, brought him the torch. Newton-John, known best in America for her role in "Grease" and her hit song "Physical," then ran in. The three stood triumphantly with the torch blazing.

The Olympic torch has been making its way across the world's only island continent since June, carried by a variety of Australians from Aborigines to athletes to a 109-year-old man. Along the way, it has survived a theft attempt and a teen-ager's novel if ill-conceived attempt to douse it with a fire extinguisher.

Australians who turned out to see the harbor spectacle Thursday night said such events can bring people together and help present their country's best face to the world.

"Anything important always happens right here at the opera house," Garton said. "Nighttime, it's like fairyland down here."

Added her husband, Allan: "It helps people to forget all the world's troubles."

Rosenfels: ISU-Iowa rivalry goes beyond football

yards per game against Ohio and UNLV.

The Hawkeyes on the other hand are 0-2 and have a defense that has allowed its opponents 390 yards per game.

The Cyclones are also 2½ point favorites.

The word rivalry has taken on more meaning in this game the last two years. After winning 15 straight games against ISU, Iowa has lost its last two meetings with the Cyclones.

Things should be pretty crazy in Kinnick Saturday. Only standing-room tickets have been available since Tuesday, so the stadium's 70,000 seats should all be full of rowdy fans.

Iowa defensive end Aaron Kampman said the Hawkeyes aren't too worried about the atmosphere Saturday or coming out flat, as they did early in the game last weekend.

"It will come down to just playing," he said. "I don't think we'll need any extra motivation or bulletin-board stuff for this game."

ISU quarterback Sage Rosenfels said the rivalry atmosphere for this game will be great, but it goes way past just football.

"We have a big rivalry in basketball, wrestling and other sports," he said. "It's one Saturday a year. A lot of people get to go to the game, and it's one thing that people talk about for the rest of the year."

Ferentz agreed that the atmosphere for this rivalry will be top-notch.

"It's state pride," he said. "It's a rivalry. People having coffee in little diners all over the state. That's what is great about it. There's some passion for it and a lot of emotion. It should be a great game-day atmosphere."

Team USA's Gary Payton of the Seattle SuperSonics blows a kiss to teammate Steve Smith, of the Portland Trail Blazers, during a Olympic basketball news conference in Sydney, Australia Friday.

Wake me when it's over: The U.S. men's b-ball team speaks

By Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

SYDNEY, Australia — Setting a new standard for dullness, the U.S. men's basketball team fidgeted, fussed and flung out endless cliches at its inaugural news conference at the Olympics.

If there was any doubt that this team is not the Dream Team, that point was driven home relentlessly Friday (Thursday night EDT) in a gathering with the international media that was like listening to paint dry.

Flirting with the all-time Olympic record for use of the phrase "it's a tremendous honor," the U.S. team did nothing to dispel the notion that they are boring and nobody cares about them.

"Our goal is to step on the floor every night and get the job done," said the team's biggest star, Vince Carter.

Ugh.

To their credit, none of the players was seen yawning.

They slumped forward, they slumped backward. They drank water, they tried on headphones and listened to different translations of their, um, insight.

The stretched their necks, they rubbed their eyes, they fiddled with pens, they giggled among themselves.

They arrived 15 minutes late and left 10 minutes early, and no one even considered complaining.

"These guys are a lot different from the '96 guys," said Gary Payton, the only holdover from the men's basketball team that won the gold medal at the Atlanta Olympics. "They are younger guys, more athletic guys."

They are not, however, more interesting guys.

They are not like the 1992 team, a star-studded crew that included Michael Jordan, Magic Johnson, Larry Bird and John Stockton. That team inspired awe.

They are not like the 1996 team, a veteran cast that included funnyman Charles Barkley, Reggie Miller and Shaquille O'Neal. That team at least knew how to lighten the atmosphere.

This team features the likes of Shareef Abdur-Rahim, Antonio McDyess, Ray Allen and Allan Houston. They all seem like good guys, they all have a good sense of humor, they all have a flair for showmanship.

They just don't know how to show it, a point that was illuminated Friday as brightly as the glare radiating off of assistant coach Gene Keady's hair.

The U.S. team begins Olympic play Sunday night against China. Other preliminary opponents are Italy, Lithuania, New Zealand and France.

Many of the best teams from the rest of the world, including Yugoslavia, Australia and Canada, are grouped in the other bracket.

The Americans might not have a compelling game until the Olympics are almost over.

"People that love basketball are in for a treat," assistant coach Larry Brown said. "These guys play the right way."

Problem is, the world wants something more.

And this U.S. team didn't provide it as they were introduced to the world.

possession, and the Bulldogs' Scott Westerfield kicked a 22-yard field after Madkin ran for 54 yards.

BYU's Charlie Peterson threw a 39-yard touchdown pass to Jonathon Pittman on the first play of the second quarter. But Madkin countered for the Bulldogs, scrambling out of the grasp of several defenders and down the field for a 59-yard touchdown run with 13:04 left in the half.

The Bulldogs scored again less than a minute later when Ellis Wynns recovered Peterson's fumble for a touchdown. Mario Haggan knocked the ball out of Peterson's hands just as he received the snap at the BYU 19.

On Mississippi State's next series, Madkin hit Miller on a simple swing pass that turned into a 78-yard touchdown play as the running back broke five tackles on his way to the end zone.

The Bulldogs led 31-7 at the first half, and rolled up 329 yards of total offense in the half after managing just 127 in their season-opening victory at Memphis.

Marcus Whalen ran for a touchdown for BYU (1-3) early in the third quarter, and the Cougars were at the Mississippi State 5 when Morgan made his big defensive play.

Knight scheduled to visit La Russa

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Bobby Knight will be back in the locker room Friday night — at Busch Stadium.

Knight, fired earlier this week as Indiana's basketball coach, is scheduled to visit Cardinals manager Tony La Russa on Friday, before St. Louis plays the Chicago Cubs.

The two first met during La Russa's years as manager of the Oakland Athletics. Cardinals trainer Barry Weinberg, who received his master's degree at Indiana, introduced the two.

It'll be Knight's second visit to Busch Stadium this season. La Russa said Thursday that he has not spoken to Knight since he was fired on Sunday after 29 seasons at Indiana.

U.S. women dominate in first game

■ The soccer team will play China Sunday in a rematch of last year's World Cup.

By Joseph White
Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — Soggy field. Small crowd. Tough opponent. Other side of the world.

How's that for a setting for one of the best games ever from the U.S. women's soccer team?

The much-accomplished team accomplished a little more in its 2-0 victory over Norway in its opening game of the Olympic tournament Thursday. The Americans found a way to dominate the only team in the world with a winning record against the United States, a Norwegian team whose aerial style has often thrown a wrench in the U.S. team's preference to keep the game on the ground.

"This is a breakthrough game for us in terms of learning how to play against them," coach April Heinrichs said. "I told the team that was the best performance against the best opponent in the first round of any major world championship, and it was the best result."

"I also reminded them it's not where you start, it's where you finish."

The U.S. team next plays China on Sunday in a rematch of last year's World Cup final before finishing group play against Nigeria next week. A victory in either game should be enough for the reigning Olympic and World Cup champions to advance to the semifinals.

The Americans came out aggressively, winning three corner kicks in the first five minutes. When high balls were kicked into the midfield, they would out-leap or out-hustle the Norwegians to head them in the right direction. Tiffeny Milbrett and Mia Hamm scored before the game was a half-hour old, and their opponents were reeling.

"After that, we looked very nervous," said Norwegian coach Per-Mathias Hogmo, whose team is 14-13-2 all-time vs. the United States. "We were never able to play our game. We were lucky we didn't lose by more. The United States had seven, eight chances. We gave away too many easy balls."

Milbrett alone was a terror for the Norwegians. She not only scored a goal, she hit the left post, the right post, the crossbar and had one other chance sail wide on a solo breakaway.

"She has amazing agility, athletic ability to change directions, to change speed, control her body," Heinrichs said. "I can only liken it to a point guard in basketball."

After playing before sellout crowds at home during the 1999 World Cup, the Americans looked like part of a tame sporting event when they marched on the field before just a few thousand fans in the cavernous, 90,000-seat Melbourne Cricket Ground.

"It's odd, but it's a nice odd," Milbrett said. "We don't have that added pressure. We just can forget about the crowd, forget about everything and come out on the field and play our game."

Rains had soaked the field for more than a week, and showers were falling again earlier in the day. But the sun broke through just before kickoff, and the only distraction from the sky was the multitude of seagulls who kept land-

Leaf loses starting job after two games

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Ryan Leaf, ineffective in San Diego's first two regular-season games after a strong preseason, will not start the Chargers' game Sunday in Kansas City.

Coach Mike Riley said Thursday that Moses Moreno will open at quarterback against the Chiefs.

"I think it's our best chance to win right now," Riley said. "This is obviously something that didn't happen in the last 24 hours. I've thought about it. It's a big move."

"One of our biggest goals was to be a productive team on offense. We haven't been. I think right now our team needs a spark."

In San Diego's opening losses to Oakland and New Orleans, Leaf threw five interceptions and had a 33.4 quarterback rating. He did throw a touchdown pass Sunday against the Saints.

"The Kansas City week has been bad for me, huh?" Leaf said, referring to a 1-for-15, five-turnover performance against the Chiefs during his rookie season.

"All three of us are capable of starting and winning for this ballclub. Jim (Harbaugh) and Moses have supported me through all this. I'm going to support Moses."

Moreno has seen limited action this season and has just one career start as a rookie with Chicago in 1998.

"It was a little shocking," Moreno said. "They have to make those decisions sometimes. He (Riley) looked me right in the eye and said, 'We feel confident, we feel comfortable with you in there.' That lets you know it's the real deal."

Riley stressed the move was based solely on performance, ending speculation that Leaf's rebuilt right shoulder was hurting or that he had been subordinate in any way.

"Absolutely not," Riley said. "I think for Ryan in the long run, and the team in the immediate, this is the right decision."

SPORTS BRIEFS

Women's cross country

This week: The women's cross country team will travel to Ames this weekend for the Iowa State Invitational. The meet begins Saturday at 10 a.m. Some of the top teams in the nation will compete, including the 1999 NCAA runner-up, Arkansas.

Last week: The Hawkeyes opened this year's season at the Purdue Invitational with a third-place team finish.

Standout waticist: Sophomore Sarah Arens placed third overall with a time of 22:22.80, and freshmen Georgia Millward placed 13th with a time of 23:50.80.

Iowa's key: Arens and junior Amy Murphy were Iowa's top finishers last year and will be key contributors this year.

Coach's comment: I would like to finish in the top four teams," said head coach Sara Swails. "I think that would be a realistic expectation heading into this meet. It will be a challenge for Sarah, but again I will encourage her to go out and run with the top runners. I think she is at a point where she can run with them. Everyone is still healthy and enthusiastic, so I look for another good team performance."

Next: The Hawkeyes will travel to Cedar Falls to compete in the UNI Invitational on Sept. 29.

Soccer

This weekend: The Hawkeyes (5-1) are in Minnesota today for their Big Ten season opener. The game is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. Then the team stays on the road, traveling to Wisconsin on Sunday for a 1 p.m. kickoff.

The keys: Going into the Big Ten season, it becomes crunch time. If the Hawkeyes want to position themselves well in the Big Ten tournament at the end of the season, they must start making a statement from the get-go.

Kate Walse and Sarah Lynch must continue to put pressure on the opposing defense with their scoring, and Iowa's newly arranged defense will need to continue to mesh after the loss of key players to injuries.

The opponents: The Minnesota Gophers are respected as a powerful squad in the Big Ten, but it has dropped three games early this season to No. 5 Nebraska, Montana, and Detroit. Don't count the Gophers out, though. Their two wins were over No. 19 Kentucky and Iowa State.

The Wisconsin Badgers (4-2) have had an impressive preseason, gaining confidence with wins over Wisconsin-Milwaukee, San Jose State, George Mason and Oakland. The Badgers' two losses came at the hands of Stanford and Marquette.

Buses unloading trouble for U.S. athletes at Olympics

■ The transportation system's problems are similar to those in Atlanta four years ago.

By Larry Siddons
Associated Press

SYDNEY, Australia — For some Olympic athletes, getting to where they're trying to go may seem almost as stressful as their competitions.

Continuing transportation problems just a day before the Sydney Games' opening ceremony are similar to those endured in Atlanta four years ago, U.S. Olympic Committee Vice President Sandy Baldwin said Thursday.

"We've had drivers get lost," she said. "We've had athletes standing on street corners. This morning, the women's water polo players missed a scrimmage because their driver took them to the wrong university."

On Thursday, a Ukrainian cyclist was knocked off her bike by a car as she rode back to the athletes village after training. The 24-year-old cyclist, who was not identified, was treated at a local hospital for a shoulder injury and released, a police spokeswoman said.

The transport problems were the focus of the first daily coordination meeting between SOCOG and the International Olympic Committee.

SOCOG Spokeswoman Liz Smylie said organizers had brought in 150 extra bus drivers, and will draft in another 100 over the next couple of days. Tour guides will accompany some of the drivers to show them the routes.

"It was always going to be a mammoth task," she said. "We knew it was going to be a challenge. Our contingency plans are being put into place."

As of Friday, the transport fleet consisted of 3,500 buses and 4,500 drivers, Smylie said.

"The report from SOCOG showed the problems all have been identified," IOC Director General Francois Carrard said. "Extremely serious hard work is being done to remedy the situation. The situation is improving. We really do hope for the best."

Carrard said the transport problems were not a surprise.

"This has happened everywhere," he said. "We always have these problems shortly before the games."

Smylie said SOCOG expects 500,000 people to travel to Olympic Park on peak days during the games.

Around 100 extra soldiers were scheduled to arrive Friday to assist the hundreds of military personnel who are already involved in the games, said a spokesman for organizing committee president Michael Knight.

At least some of the extra soldiers would be used as bus drivers on Olympic routes, the spokesman said, on customary condition of anonymity.

While the transport problems have been around for days, Baldwin's comments represented the first time officials acknowledged the athletes were paying the price for a transportation system that appeared to be a work in progress.

Lion's offense plays the waiting game

■ Detroit's struggling offense will face Tampa Bay's punishing defense.

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

Will the Detroit Lions' offense ever score? Does it matter?

The Lions are 2-0 but still haven't scored an offensive touchdown. The beat New Orleans with TDs on an interception and kickoff return and beat Washington on five field goals by Jason Hanson.

Now they play host to Tampa Bay, perhaps the NFL's best defense, meaning they might be without a TD after three games.

But who cares? The Bucs, who scored 41 points against the Bears last Sunday, are 3-point favorites, largely because of that offensive display. Still, they've lost three of their last four games with Detroit, including the last two in the Silverdome.

A couple of factors: Charlie Batch is back, but clearly under instructions to take as few hits as possible, something that's almost impossible to do against Tampa Bay. Still, he played extremely well against Washington, dumping the ball when he had to and throwing accurately.

Washington coach Norv Turner suggested Batch's performance was typical of a QB coming off a long layoff and noted that sometimes injured players regress the second week. Not good against Tampa Bay.

Still, no offensive TDs. But no matter.

LIONS, 12-10.
Denver (plus 3) at Oakland

Figure the Raiders. They win 9-6, then 38-31.
BRONCOS, 21-20.

Buffalo (plus 3) at New York Jets

Vinny Testaverde was off for a game and three-quarters before finding his touch in the fourth quarter Monday night. First road game for the Bills, who have lost the last two at the Meadowlands.
JETS, 17-13.

Dallas (plus 10 1/2) at Washington (Monday night)

The last time Dallas was this big an underdog against the Redskins was in 1989, when the Cowboys finished 1-15 in Jimmy Johnson's rookie year. But that one win was 13-3 at Washington.
REDSKINS, 13-3.

Baltimore (minus 2 1/2) at Miami

How do the Ravens allow 36 points at home to Jacksonville? Jay Fiedler is no Mark Brunell (he backed him up last year) and there's no Jimmy Smith in south Florida.
RAVENS, 19-6.

San Francisco (plus 16 1/2) at St. Louis

This often has been the spread in this game — the other way. The Rams average 39 points a game, their opponents 35.
RAMS, 58-39.

New York Giants (plus 2 1/2) at Chicago

This opened at 1, then went up. Yes, it's the home opener for the Bears, but this New York team looks consistent.

The one-year wonder from 1999 at the one-year wonder from 1996. Is Carolina back?
PANTHERS, 31-20.

San Diego (plus 5 1/2) at Kansas City

The Chiefs had two killer games to start, and Ryan Leaf returns to the scene of his worst nightmare, 1-for-15 for 4 yards with five turnovers in 1998.
CHIEFS, 24-10.

Cincinnati (plus 13) at Jacksonville

Help!
JAGUARS, 34-3.

Pittsburgh (plus 2 1/2) at Cleveland

Some people don't believe the Steelers are as bad as they are.
They are.
BROWNS, 13-6.

Broadcaster McGuire has leukemia

NEW YORK (AP) — Al McGuire, the former Marquette basketball coach who was hospitalized in July with an unspecified illness, has leukemia, Sports Illustrated magazine reported.

Columnist Rick Reilly said the illness has whittled McGuire to 115 pounds. Leukemia is a cancer of blood-forming tissues.

Last week, the Milwaukee Journal Sentinel reported that McGuire was living in a managed-care facility.

The newspaper said McGuire, 72, entered a Milwaukee-area hospital July 27 and some days later was transferred to the managed-care facility where he is being treated for an unspecified illness.

FROM THE EDITOR

Football fever is quickly fading with Hawkeye fans

■ Spirit is lacking as football season gets underway.

A rug hung on the wall in the basement of my father's house for years when I was a child. With a big Herky charging with a fist in the air, it read: "It's great to be a Hawkeye."

I loved that rug, and when I was last home last summer I went downstairs to find it and take it back to school with me, only to find that it wasn't there.

I asked my father, where the rug was, and he said he had no idea. He said it must have been taken down after I left for college and stored away somewhere.

I thought to myself, "Gee, if my dad took that rug down, maybe it's not so great to be a Hawkeye anymore."

And if my dad didn't think that it was that great to be a Hawkeye, maybe that's a sign that fans are really beginning to lose interest in Iowa football.

This was all way before Iowa lost to Western Michigan. After last week's debacle, I'm sure it's not great to be a Hawkeye anymore.

As if the Iowa State Cyclones coming to town this weekend as 2½ point favorites isn't bad enough — the Hawkeyes, who lost to a team from the Mid-American Conference last week, are picked to finish last in the Big Ten for the second year in a row. They also struggled to sell 55,000 tickets to their home opener.

The fans are starting to abandon Iowa football and so are some of the people that were pretty close to the program.

Bob Elliott, who was one of Hayden Fry's top assistants at Iowa before Fry retired in 1998, is coaching at ISU now. The chain of events that led to him to being at Iowa State is a little more complex than his just up and leaving Iowa for ISU.

But this is just one example that makes me wonder if many folks really care much about Iowa football anymore.

Chuck Long, the poster boy of Iowa football who led the Hawkeyes to the 1985 Rose Bowl, bowed out of his assistant coaching job at Iowa last spring for a job with Bob Stoops at Oklahoma.

It must not have been that great for him to be a Hawkeye anymore either.

When I go back home to the western part of the state, I see more people wearing Nebraska Cornhusker red than I do black and gold. They don't care about the Hawkeyes.

When I go to class, I hear professors crack jokes about how sorry the football game was this weekend. They must not feel too great about being a Hawkeye.

Since last year's 1-10 season and this year's loss to Western Michigan, I've noticed that much of this campus and most of this state is beginning to lose faith in this Hawkeye program.

It's not their fault, though. Frankly, I don't blame fans for not wanting to follow a team that hasn't won a game since last September. A team that loses its home opener to Western Michigan. My point is this: A tradition that once brought a great deal of pride to the people of a tiny state in middle America is dying, and I think it's a shame.

With a win over Iowa State this weekend, the Hawkeyes have a shot at redeeming themselves for their woes of the past two years.

If not, it is a sign that Iowa football has hit rock bottom.

Iowa — the Hawkeye state? Not for long, if something doesn't change.

Alford excited for future at Iowa

■ Alford said he received numerous calls, messages and letters urging him to stay at Iowa.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

Kirk Ferentz began his weekly press conference Tuesday afternoon by joking that though some may wish he were, he was not a candidate to become the next Indiana basketball coach. Neither is Steve Alford.

An apologetic Alford called a press conference Tuesday morning to put an end to rumors that he would leave the Hawkeyes to coach at his alma mater.

"I need to get that word out: It's not just a commitment now, it's a commitment nine months from now," Alford said, in essence refusing to replace Bob Knight at Indiana before an offer was even made.

When Indiana University President Myles Brand relieved Knight of his coaching duties Sunday evening, news organizations from the Chicago Tribune to ESPN immediately speculated Indiana would hire Alford away from the Hawkeyes. Persistent rumors surrounding a possible clause in Alford's contract allowing him to leave Iowa for the Hoosiers were also rekindled.

UI Athletics Director Bob Bowsby said Sunday both he and Alford had made a commitment at the time of his being hired to replace Tom Davis and he was confident both sides would stand by that agreement.

Tired of the questions surrounding his situation, Alford said he needed to put an end to rumors he would leave Iowa at the end of this season or anytime soon.

"Anything I could do at other schools, I can get done here at Iowa," he said.

The situation was becoming too much of a distraction for Alford, team members and possible future Hawkeyes, he said. September is a month in which college coaches are allowed into the homes of players they are recruiting.

Alford said coaches who have already visited some homes are using this as leverage for not committing to Iowa.

"I'm interested in seeing what they're going to use now," said Alford. "This is over and done with."

Alford said he places a great emphasis on character and integrity to his players. He said both would be compromised if he left Iowa after making a five-year commitment. Bowsby said in the coming months he and Alford may possibly talk about extending his contract, which expires in 2004.

Members of the basketball squad said they were confident Alford would not abandon the program he has worked so hard to mold into his own.

"I think the whole state should be proud to have a man like that representing the Iowa program," said guard Luke Recker, who played under Knight for two years before transferring.

Alford said he received numerous calls, messages and letters urging him to stay in Iowa City. Among those contacting him were UI President Mary Sue Coleman and Gov. Tom Vilsack. Alford also joked about receiving advice from his family.

"My wife told me to 'Pray as you will, but the kids and I

THE RIVALRY

Bring back the rivalry

■ The Hawkeyes face the Cyclones on Saturday, hoping to break ISU's two-game win streak.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

The rivalry was pretty much considered dead. Iowa had won 15-straight contests. Iowa State didn't look like it was ever going to get better — Iowa did not look like it would ever decline.

There was even talk of not playing this game anymore. That has all changed.

Iowa State has the streak going now — two wins against Iowa, to be exact.

The Cyclones dominate in-state recruiting, they're the ones that have a chance of going to a bowl this year, they're favored by 2½ points.

With the recent success of the Cyclones and lack of success by the Hawkeyes, the rivalry, which was once as one-sided as a rivalry could be, is alive and kicking.

"Personally, I don't want to say there was a lack of respect before. It was just sort of understood that Iowa won," Iowa City West High graduate Ryan Hansen said. "When I was growing up as an Iowa fan, it was a game where we were going to win because we were the Hawkeyes. They (the Cyclones) are a quality team; they've shown the last two years they can beat us."

What may have added a little fuel to the fire is something that happened after the game in 1998, when Iowa State broke the streak. Cyclone senior quarterback Todd Bandhauer had a few words to express.

"What's happened in the past has happened in the past ... Hayden Fry, we kicked your guys' ass," Bandhauer said after the Cyclones first win over Iowa in 15 years.

Iowa junior Kahlil Hill, who was a freshman that year, said he hasn't forgotten the gesture.

"We need no motivation for this game," he said. "We felt they disrespected us. We don't have any love for them. Never will. Never have. So it's going to be a war. That's all I can say. Records don't matter for this game."

This rivalry has always existed, and it was always pretty intense. The Cyclones and Hawkeyes have always had some type of dislike for each other. But when one team wins for 15 consecutive years, the bad blood tends not to boil.

With two-consecutive Cyclone wins, the blood is starting to simmer among the Hawkeyes.

"My mom told me to never say I hated anyone, but there's definitely a rivalry there," Iowa junior Aaron Kampman said. "I've grown up in this state for my whole 20 years, and I know about it. I don't think there's any love lost, by any means. I won't use the word hate, but like I said, there's no love lost."

Kampman remembers Bandhauer's statements after the '98 game, and so do the rest of the Hawkeyes.

"I think that might be in the back of a few players' minds," he said, smiling. "There've been quotes and articles printed. I don't think any of us share close feelings as players. We just know they're the Cyclones, we're the Hawkeyes."

Tim Dodge also steered away from the word hate, but he wasn't exactly warm toward the Cyclones.

"Whenever you have a rival you can call it hate, you can just call it pumped up, whatever you want to call it," he said. "But there's going to be more intensity there, there's a lot of hype. If you lose, you hear crap all year; if you win, you give crap all year. That's just how Iowa-Iowa State has been for many, many years."

"I'm not going to say I hate Iowa State, but I will say I'm going to do everything I can to beat them."

Receiver Kevin Kasper, who is not from Iowa, said at first he didn't quite understand the rivalry. Being from Illinois, it took him a little longer, but he still got the message, he said.

"The worst feeling maybe I ever had was seeing (Cyclone fans) run on the field after they beat us two years ago," Kasper said. "I don't want to see that again. We have to have our people running on the field this year."

Not only has the rivalry been rejuvenated among the players, it has been rejuvenated for the fans — especially Iowa State fans, who had to deal with 15-straight losses to their rival.

Last year, Jack Trice Stadium was packed with Iowa State fans, who stormed the field after ISU's second-straight victory.

The few tickets left for this week's game are for standing-room only, which is in sharp contrast to Iowa's game against Western Michigan last weekend, which had 15,000 empty seats.

Because of the rivalry's restoration, the fans have definitely become more interested in Saturday's game, Dodge said.

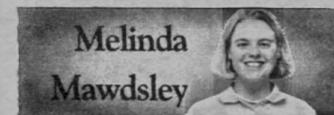

"I think from a fan standpoint it has," he said. "I think I've really seen Cyclone fans come out of the bushes."

Kinnick will be packed Saturday. Most will be Hawkeye fans, but many will be wearing red.

No matter what color fans will be wearing, they'll be seeing the rivalry as heated as it's been in years.

Look for Big Ten victories as conference season nears

Melinda Mawdsley
This week's schedule is divided into three sections. Section one consists of those games you will catch on network TV...

No. 3 Michigan at No. 14 UCLA

Michigan takes the road to Pasadena for a possible Rose Bowl preview. UCLA did roll over the Crimson Tide, but it will not best the Big Ten's best. Michigan 28, UCLA 17

No. 13 Purdue at No. 21 Notre Dame

After the emotional overtime loss to Nebraska, it's tough to gauge how much fight is left in those Irish. This will be the best game of the weekend, as Purdue's armed warrior Drew Brees continues his Heisman campaign. Purdue 24, Notre Dame 21

Northwestern at No. 20 TCU

On one purple-and-white sideline stands LaDainian. On the other purple-and-white sideline stands Damien. TCU's Tomlinson and Northwestern's Anderson are two of the premier running backs in college football.

TCU 28, Northwestern 21 ... but these games may be more exciting with more than just a win at stake. These represent those intrastate or interstate rivalries that give 'em something to talk about...

Miami (Ohio) at No. 17 Ohio State

Ohio is the Buckeye State for obvious reasons, but these two teams haven't met for bragging rights in nearly 90 years. Figure Ohio State's Steve Bellisari has a great day at QB. OSU 24, Miami (Ohio) 14

Penn State at Pittsburgh

After running up the score against Louisiana Tech, I wonder what Joe Paterno and the Nittany Lions will do to a team they all hate. PSU 35, Pittsburgh 14

Cincinnati at No. 4 Wisconsin

This may not be an intrastate war, but Wisconsin dropped a game to the Bearcats last season, so revenge will be on the minds of the Badgers. Wisconsin 28, Cincinnati 14

Indiana at Kentucky

Oh yeah, they still have a football team at Indiana, and one that can put up about as many points as this year's basketball team. Maybe now Hoosier fans will pay attention to their football team and Antwaan Randle El. Indiana 35, Kentucky 28 ... these won't stir controversy, but they will help with Big Ten preparations.

California at No. 19 Illinois

Illinois continues to roll through the nonconference season. Fighting Illini's Kurt Kittner is getting better as Big Ten season draws nearer. Illinois 35, California 14

No. 22 Michigan State at Missouri

OK, I blew the Michigan State vs. Marshall game last week. I will jump on the Michigan State bandwagon for one week and predict it pours more misery into those Tiger wounds. Michigan St. 31, Mizzou 17

Minnesota at Baylor

Another Big Ten vs. Big 12 matchup. This one is deep in the heart of Texas, where Minnesota's offense needs to try to find some pulse after dropping a game to Ohio University. Minnesota 24, Baylor 17

 Iowa and Iowa State's rivalry has been going strong for years. The players have changed, but the sentiments between the teams have remained much the same.

McCarney hopes to increase streak

■ It has been almost two decades since the Cyclones beat the Hawks three times in a row.

By Nick Firchau
 The Daily Iowan

Way back in 1982, E.T. The Extra Terrestrial hit movie theaters, thanks to director Steven Spielberg. A British new wave band called the Police was one of the most popular groups in the world, with a lead singer named Sting, who seemingly had no aspirations of a solo career.

And oh yeah, in 1982, Iowa State defeated Iowa, 17-9, at Kinnick Stadium, the third straight year the Cyclones won the intrastate affair. A three-year winning streak by ISU has not been accomplished since.

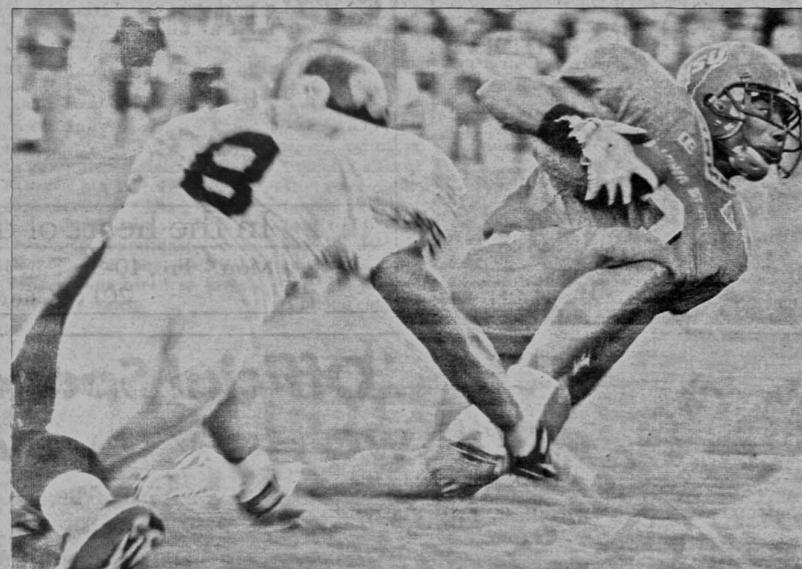

But hey, there's no pressure on this year's game, right?

"Well, I don't know about all that," said Iowa State coach Dan McCarney, who will lead the 2-0 Cyclones into the 48th match-up between the schools. "I know we're 2-15 against Iowa in the last 17 years, and we have a lot of making up to do."

For the Cyclones, this looks like a promising year to make up some ground on the Hawkeyes, who have traditionally dominated the series and the state's bragging rights. ISU blows into town after a solid start to its season, while the Hawkeyes have lost their last 12 games, dating back to last year.

But Iowa State coaches are playing down the importance of Saturday's game, where an ISU win could cause a shift of power in the rivalry and possibly affect future in-state recruiting.

"This game is important

Brett Roseman/The Daily Iowan
 Iowa's Mikkel Brown takes down Iowa State's Kenyatta Burris during the Cyclones' win over the Hawkeyes last season in Ames.

every year. I think both teams have great anticipation," said ISU's associate head coach Bob Elliott, a former Iowa coach during the Hayden Fry era. "But I don't think this game is anything different from any other game in the last 10 to 15 years."

"Every year, the game is important to both squads; no one year is more important." Regardless of the current streak at hand, McCarney and his players know how much this rivalry means to everyone involved, he said.

"Half of my kids are Iowa kids," McCarney said. "This is a very big game to all of us. I've been there since the rivalry was renewed in 1977, and I don't think people outside of this state realize how big this rivalry really is."

ISU fifth-year quarterback Sage Rosenfels said he definitely knows how big the game will be.

"I think this football game goes well beyond football," he said. "We have a big rivalry in basketball, wrestling and other sports. It's one Saturday a year. A lot of people get to go to the game, and it's one thing that people talk about for the rest of the year."

If ISU pulls off a victory on this "one Saturday," Rosenfels will probably have been a key factor. The Maquoketa native threw for 286 yards and two touchdowns last week in a 37-22 win over UNLV in Ames. In the team's first game, Rosenfels threw for 196 yards as the Cyclones outlasted Ohio, 25-15.

The Cyclones have averaged 418 yards of total offense in the first two victories.

"Each year, we talk about the offense being balanced," McCarney said. "And I think so far we have done some of that. I think we have some pretty solid playmakers on offense."

Those solid playmakers are what should have the Hawkeyes worried. ISU junior running back Ennis Hayward pinned 159 rushing yards against Ohio, including a 73-yard dash that was ISU's longest touchdown run since 1995. After Hayward put up 108 yards on 29 carries against UNLV, comparisons with standout ISU running backs brothers Troy and Darren Davis were inevitable.

"He's had some success establishing the running game," said McCarney. "But boy, he's got some big shoes to fill. I think in Ennis and Mike Wagner, we have some very good Big 12 running backs, and they're obviously very important to this offense."

ISU's opponents have found some holes in the Cyclones' defense, both in the air and on the ground. Iowa State's defense comes into the Iowa game giving up an average of 348 yards per game.

The defense is led by senior defensive end Reggie Hayward, a team captain and pre-season second-team All-Big 12 selection. Hayward recorded two sacks and a blocked extra point in the victory over UNLV.

ISU's defensive special teams have put up impressive numbers this season that weren't even considered last year. The Cyclones have blocked two field-goal attempts, two extra-point attempts and a punt in only two games. The team did not block a kick all of last season.

"We've got coach Bobby Elliott working with special teams, and we've definitely showed some improvements," McCarney said. "There's X's and O's to it, but I think the success is all effort. We've gotten some good effort from the kids."

Good effort from every player will be required for an ISU victory. For the Cyclones, that doesn't seem like a problem.

"This is going to be a dogfight from beginning to end," Rosenfels said. "We really want to win this game badly."

Iowa will end streak of Cyclone wins, by inches

Jeremy Schnitker

I may be a little bit off my rocker for this one. Maybe my being a Hawkeye fan since I came out of the womb has interfered with my decision making and my journalistic integrity — but I'll never go into an Iowa-Iowa State football game and say the Cyclones are going to win.

So this Saturday, when Iowa State travels down I-80 to face off with the Hawkeyes, I'm picking Iowa to win this game.

So what if Iowa football may have hit its lowest point in years after losing against Western Michigan last weekend?

So what if Iowa State is supposed to have a breakout season this year and maybe, ahem, make a bowl game? I've got a gut feeling the Hawkeyes are going to pull this one out.

First of all, Iowa State is not as good as everyone seems to think it is. It barely beat Ohio, which, albeit, has shown it is a solid team, but still, folks. UNLV didn't win a game last year in the WAC, and Iowa State could not put the Runnin' Rebels away.

Sage Rosenfels has shown that he's the great quarterback everyone thought he would be. Iowa State's defense gave up over 200 yards rushing against the Rebels last week.

Now Iowa, on paper, doesn't look any better than the Cyclones. In fact, they probably look worse.

But I think this Iowa team is going to come out fired up and ready to play this weekend. Iowa football hit rock bottom with the loss to Western Michigan last weekend, and hopefully it will only get better from here on out.

After talking with players on Tuesday, I think they know they have to.

Honestly, I don't think Iowa State necessarily over-matches Iowa in many areas.

Iowa can throw the ball, and it should be able to do that against Iowa State's defense, which gives up 350

Picks 2 Click

Jeremy Schnitker, DI co-Sports Editor: Jeremy Allen. He's been close to breaking a big run in Iowa's first two games. He should break one against ISU.

Melinda Mawdsley, DI Football Beat Writer: Scott Mullen. He said the offense is starting to click, and he's due for a big game. Well, there isn't one much bigger than this.

Cori Zarek, DI Editor: Kahlil Hill. I met his dad.

Brett Roseman, DI Photography Editor: Aaron Kampman. The defensive leader can lift the defense against the Cyclones.

yards of offense per game.

At running back, Iowa State may have a better offensive line, but Ladell Betts is a better running back than Ennis Hayward. Betts' stats don't show it, Hayward has 150 yards more rushing than Betts does so far this year — but a lot of that has to do with Ennis playing against Ohio and UNLV, not Kansas State and Western Michigan.

I think Betts will out gain Hayward this weekend.

If Kirk Ferentz does what I hope he does (pass early in the game to get the ball moving, then let Betts run in the second half) with ISU back on its heels — Iowa should be able to move the ball through the air and on the ground.

On defense, the Hawkeyes will hang in there. If Tim Dodge and the rest of Iowa's defensive backfield learned anything from last week, they should be able to hold their own against an Iowa State offense that has averaged 418 yards per game — but those yards came against two teams that won a combined four games last year.

Records, stats and Las Vegas can all be thrown out in rivalry games; that is especially true with this game.

The talent pool of these two teams is about even — when that is the case in this rivalry, the team that wants to win this game the most is the one that wins.

After that embarrassing game last weekend, Iowa will really want to win this game. I think it will.

Iowa 21, Iowa State 20.

ELLIOTT RETURNS

Elliott returns to Kinnick wearing red, gold

Iowa will face its former defensive coordinator Saturday.

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

Bob Elliott is a fighter and a winner in every facet of his life. As an Iowa secondary coach for eight years and a defensive coordinator for two, he has enjoyed tremendous success. The Hawkeye defense finished near the top of the Big Ten year after year. In 1997, Iowa finished the season ranked seventh nationally in total defense.

"Those were the best years of my life, no question," Elliott said. "I can't think of one bad thing that happened while I was at Iowa. I worked with so many great kids that I will always remember. Those guys will be my guys forever."

But in the 1998 season, Elliott found himself in a battle that even he couldn't prepare a game plan for. He was diagnosed with polycythemia vera, a life-threatening blood disorder. He said he didn't want anyone to know because to him, football was about the players on the field.

"We tried to keep his disorder quiet," said Elliott's wife, Joey. "By the time it came public, we were all prepared as a family to take this on. I had players calling me in tears, and I spent the longest time telling them everything is going to be OK."

Things worsened. Elliott's mentor, Hayden Fry, retired following the 1998 season, but Elliott was still battling to save his life and wasn't considered for the job that many thought he would have been a top candidate for. In December of that year, Kirk Ferentz was hired as Iowa's new head coach.

In April 1999, Elliott underwent a bone marrow transplant. The odds were on his side, though not by much.

"Bob breathes in. I breathe out," Joey said. "It's like holding your breath for two years, and then you get to breathe again."

Like so many times before, Elliott had found a way to win. "As I look back on it now, I can't complain," he said. "There's not one bad thing that has happened to me because of this illness. Only good things."

Through the lowest days and through the rehabilitation, Dan McCarney was always by Elliott's side, either in person or in spirit.

The two were former teammates, classmates and roommates. When the Iowa State head coach had a position open, he offered the now-healthy Elliott a spot with ISU's secondary and special teams. Elliott, then an assistant to UI Athletics Director Bob Bowlsby, had his shot to coach again. Joey, an elementary school teacher, received a phone call at work.

By the time (the disorder) became public, we were all prepared as a family to take this on. I had players calling me in tears, and I spent the longest time telling them everything is going to be OK.

— Joey Elliott,
Bob Elliott's wife

"All I asked was where. I could tell by the energy in his voice, he was up to something," she said.

Saturday, he will return to Kinnick Stadium. And Elliott, who said he holds no ill will toward Iowa, warned his Iowa State players they'd better be ready to play come Saturday.

Don't be fooled though, his wife said. Underneath the flattery is a very competitive man who wants to win.

"I can't let the emotion of this game affect me," Elliott said. "I'm responsible to those guys on the field to do my job."

Elliott will be in the box during the game, but said he hopes to get down to the field afterward.

Iowa's Aaron Kampman said he will look for his former coach. "Regardless of what happens, I will go up to him after the game and say 'Good game,'" Kampman said. "He's quite the guy. Our friendship goes beyond football."

Teammate Ryan Hansen agreed. He said he respects Elliott as a man and as a coach and knows how much Elliott had to endure to be where he is now. But, Hansen said, "Hopefully, we can make him unhappy for at least a day."

SATURDAY SPECTATOR TIPS

Tips 4 tailgaters

As the Hawkeyes prepare for their second home game of the season, an epic battle with intrastate rival Iowa State, it's time to give Iowa fans some suggestions on how to have fun at Iowa games. Daily Iowan Sports Editor Jeremy Schnitker has a tailgating lesson for Iowa fans. Here are the Dos and Don'ts of Iowa football fun.

Do: Serve brats, burgers and chips. Maybe spice it up with a little potato salad.

Don't: Bring gourmet crap. It's tailgating, folks; we're not on the French Riviera.

Do: Serve alcohol. For obvious reasons.

Don't: Drink too much alcohol. It's not fun to spend game day in the Johnson County Jail because of a public-intoxication arrest. Nor is it fun to stand up in the student section all day and get home to realize you don't remember anything about the game. This one goes for adult fans, too!

Do: Find a friend that lives on Melrose and tailgate there.

Don't: Park your car wherever you feel like it — odds are it will get towed.

Another don't: Park behind Slater dormitory and expect to party — alcohol is banned there.

Do: Actually go to the game.

Don't: Get up to just tailgate, then make fun of the Hawkeyes for losing from outside the stadium. Come on folks, show a little spirit — go for at least one half.

Do: Wear as much black and gold apparel as you can. Don't: Paint yourself. You give Iowa a bad image when cameras catch shots of topless Iowa men with an "I" painted on hairy beer bellies. It's unattractive. Put on a shirt, please.

Do: Walk to Kinnick.

Don't: Drive, for many reasons. One, traffic is insane. Two, you'll never find a spot, and if you do, it will cost you.

Three, odds are you won't be in shape to be driving after the game.

Do: Use Port-a-potties.

Don't: Pee outside. Public urination carries a $90 fine.

Do: Tailgate with mom and dad if applicable. They buy the beverages and the food and provide the fun.

Don't: Get too drunk in front of the padres, or let mom or dad get too drunk in front of you. It's no fun carrying dad out of Kinnick after the game. It's even worse seeing dad get arrested and spend a free night at the Johnson County Hotel.

Another don't: Let mom and dad sit in the student section or you will be carrying dad out over your shoulder, and mom will want to know what that good smell is coming from three rows down, and you won't have the heart to tell her it's marijuana.

Do: Tailgate with friends.

Don't: Be the guy who goes around from tailgate to tailgate alone, acting like you know somebody there and mooching food all morning.

Do: Go home and take a nap after the game.

Don't: Drink from 8 a.m.

until 2 a.m. the next morning. That's really bad for you. Seek help.

Do: Steal a hat off one of the Per-Mar security guards working at the game.

Don't: Give it back to him. Do: Cheer for the Hawkeyes as loud as you can.

Don't: Streak across Kinnick naked, steal an opposing team's helmet, throw a dead pig's head onto the field, pelt officials with marshmallows, or throw any other objects on the field.

Do: Poke fun at Iowa State fans.

Don't: Actually start a fight with one of them — unless it's ISU's former quarterback Todd Bandhauer. Then you can kick his ass and tell him, "That one was for Hayden."

MULLEN'S JOURNEY

Mullen still looking for first win as Iowa's starter

■ Iowa's quarterback adjusts to the spotlight and hopes for better days.

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

Scott Mullen is the most visible man on the football field — not because he stands 6-foot-6 and has platinum blond hair, but because he's the quarterback.

His decisions make or break games, and he's grown to embrace his role as the signal caller, but he realizes that after a loss people need to blame somebody. He saw Matt Sherman and Randy Reiners take the heat. Now it's his turn.

"If people want to point fingers at me, that's fine," he said. "I've come to take that upon myself. At first, as a freshman, I used to read negative things and would get upset, but now I really don't as much.

"There are a lot of things that happen on the field that people may not see every time, but the things they do see stand out."

And what everybody can see is the scoreboard, tallying Mullen's impressive passing yardage, along with the opponent's increasing score.

In last season's game against Indiana, Iowa scored 31 points behind Mullen's 426 passing yards. He tied a school record with 60 pass attempts, and his 36 completions put him second on Iowa's all-time list. Indiana scored 38 and won.

Indiana was one of the final five games Mullen started in 1999. He threw for a total of 1,415 yards but lost all five of those games.

Add five more defeats over the course of his four years, and it becomes easy to see why so many questions surround the senior from Lansing, Ill. When he gets protection, he's an accurate passer and a pretty good scrambler out of the pocket. On the whole, he makes good decisions, but the losses keep piling up.

No one is more frustrated than Mullen. He came to

I envisioned myself at a Rose Bowl definitely earlier in my career. I just thought that it was something that was going to happen, and to be where we are now has been a difficult road.

— Iowa quarterback Scott Mullen

Iowa a wide-eyed freshman on a team with the likes of Sedrick Shaw, Tavian Banks and Tim Dwight. He went to the 1996 Alamo Bowl and the 1997 Sun Bowl. He wanted to take this team further.

"I envisioned myself at a Rose Bowl definitely earlier in my career," Mullen said. "I just thought that was something that was going to happen, and to be where we are now has been a difficult road."

The journey Mullen has taken hasn't been easy. For two years, he competed with the now-graduated Reiners and junior Kyle McCann for a starting spot. No one was ever sure who would take the snaps.

Mullen was a sporadic starter, suffering a thumb and wrist injury his freshman season, two broken collarbones his sophomore year and a shoulder injury after last season, forcing him to miss most of this season's spring practice. That didn't matter, as Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz still named Mullen his starter.

"Before that time I really didn't know what Coach Ferentz's position was, so being injured, I was really concerned," Mullen said.

Despite the two early season losses, Ferentz will stick with Mullen.

"I thought he improved on Saturday," Ferentz said. "I thought he made some good throws and did some great things out there. In our opinion, right now, he gives us the best chance to win."

With every week that passes, the end of his college career draws closer. Depending on how this season goes, Mullen is going to see if he has a future professionally; if not, he's ready to start the rest of his life, beginning with his wedding at the end of June.

But he wants to focus on the present and relish the past — a past that may not have been what he dreamed, but he said he has no regrets playing in Kinnick.

"No. None. Not at all," he said. "I would never change a thing here. Walking out the field is special every time. You never get used to it. The roar of the crowd, the band, the basketball guys, the kids all giving high-fives, going out in the swarm with your teammates. It's a special thing. It's something I'm going to miss dearly."
