Local supporters excited by Cheney visit

■ The GOP candidate for vice president will stop in Cedar Rapids today.
By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

Cheney, the secretary of Defense under President George Bush, will speak to a group of retired persons at the Witwer Senior Center in Cedar Rapids. The event, which is slated to begin at 9:45 a.m., will not be open to the general public.
At least a dozen UI students are expected to attend, said Jennifer Jaehrling, a UI senior and the executive director of Students for Bush. She said she is unsure how much time the group will spend with Cheney or if members will be able to listen to his speech, which will cover Medicare and Social Security.

Although neither George W. Bush nor Cheney has campaigned directly on the UI campus, members of the UI Bush group say they are not disappointed. In fact, Jaehrling said, she is excited Cheney is coming so close to Iowa City, although she acknowledges that more students would be able to attend if the event were on the UI campus and open to the public.

The only local visit Bush has made was to the Clarion Hotel in Coralville in December 1999. Democratic presidential candidate Vice President Al Gore spoke on the UI campus twice during the last school year, once at the IMU and once at the UI Field House.

Many UI students support Bush and Cheney, said UI law student Tony Stabenow, a member of Students for Bush, and the candidates will likely gain even more support by

1.4 million can't vote on Nov. 7

■ Felony convictions keep 13 percent of adult black men from casting their ballots.
By Greg Toppo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — On Election Day, nearly 1.4 million voting-age black men — more than one in eight — will be ineligible to cast ballots because of state laws that strip felons of the right to vote.
"Here we are, 50 years after the beginning of the civil-rights movement, and we actually have an increasing number of African-Americans who are disenfranchised each year," said Marc Mauer of The Sentencing Project, which analyzed 1996 Justice Department statistics along with Human Rights Watch.

Disenfranchised black males account for 35 percent of all Americans now barred from voting because of felony convictions. Two percent of all Americans, or 3.9 million, have lost the right to vote, compared with 13 percent of adult black men.

State laws governing voter eligibility vary. Nine states impose a lifetime voting ban on convicted felons. In 32 states, felons can vote after serving their sentence and completing parole. Three states — Massachusetts, Maine and Vermont — have no prohibition and allow prisoners to vote, although Massachusetts voters will act on a ballot measure in November that would strip prisoners of voting rights.

Six other states impose restrictions based on a felon's prior record or parole status.
Allen Beck of the federal Bureau of Justice Statistics declined to assess the accuracy of the 13 percent estimate, but Curtis Gans, the director of the nonpartisan Committee for the Study of the American Electorate, said he believes the figure is accurate.

Beck said that, based on current rates of incarceration, 28.5 percent of black males will likely serve time in a state or federal prison for a felony conviction, a rate seven times that for white males.

A state-by-state breakdown of data from The Sentencing Project, a private group that favors sentencing reform, shows that in 17 states the

Daughter won't settle for volleyball silver

Marrita Royster-Crockett glows with confidence. It's in her walk, in her talk and in her smile.
She wants to win an Olympic medal, and at the age of 12, she is well on her way.
She's an athlete, pure and simple. Standing 5-foot-9, she holds her ground on the volleyball court, just as her mother did. She's at home there — she's been there her whole life.

In 1986, her mother, Iowa volleyball coach Rita Buck-Crockett, played in the Major League Volleyball tournament in Los Angeles. She was five months pregnant with Marrita.

"She's got to get as tough as me," her mother says.

There's no doubt whether her mother is tough. She earned the silver medal with the 1984 U.S. National Volleyball Team in a match against China.

Marrita has grown up with that medal as an ever-present reminder of what she wants in life.
"She's got a silver," Marrita says with a

They're part of her uniform as the youngest player in the 14-and-under National Junior Olympics. Her team won first in its bracket and was ranked 38th in the nation in all age groups.

She doesn't play on the girls team at her school, South East Junior High, 2501 Bradford Drive. Instead, she devotes her playing time to the 13-and-under Iowa Rockets club team, which competes nationally.

"She's quick," says Rockets coach Jennifer Chesnut. "On defense, she's able to read the hitter. A couple of times, she'd cover the whole court and pick up some slack. She definitely has her mother's love for the game."

She's got an edge, her mother says. Throughout her life, Marrita has watched and Heartfelt speeches and an enthusiastic crowd advocating a violence-free world kicked off the third annual 24-hour truce with rape at the UI Thursday afternoon.

Day and night will be the same length of time today, marking the first day of fall. The change of seasons and the arrival of the autumnal equinox has been a source of enjoyment for many Iowa City residents.

In pagan tradition, the equinox is a celebration of balance represented by the equal of division of the day and night.

Brew Fest Saturday

■ The event's organizers expect more than 1,500 people to sample the finest of beers for charity.

By Cassie Huisman
The Daily Iowan

Beer tasting will combine with charity this weekend at the fifth annual Brew Fest at Fitzpatrick's.

Gary Fitzpatrick, the owner of the brewpub, 525 S. Gilbert St., said there will be more than 100 beers and microbrews from around the world, with at least 40 breweries from the Midwest.

The event is sponsored by Fitzpatrick's and John's Grocery, 401 E. Market St.

The proceeds will benefit Iowa's Variety Club, which will have nearly 90 volunteers helping out at the fest, said Stacey Jones, the Eastern Iowa director of operations for the club.

The Brew Fest Committee gave the Variety Club $4,000 last year, and Jones said she is hoping for a similar amount this year. The club is a non-profit organization that benefits children with financial, educational and various other needs, she said.

The purpose of Brew Fest is to promote different kinds of beer, Fitzpatrick said.

"It's not all about Bud Light or Miller Lite," he said. "It's all about different styles of beer."

Last year, more 1,500 people gathered for the event, and Fitzpatrick said he expects even more this year.

UI senior Kara Moody said she plans to attend the event this weekend for the first time after hearing about it last year.

"It is something different to do in Iowa City," she said.

One reason Moody is going this year is because Fitzpatrick's will have Boulevard, her favorite microbrew, she said.

The event will be from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday. Tickets are $10 in advance and $12 at the door. Designated drivers will pay $5.

Commission aims to stop discrimination in Iowa

■ The new Iowa Civil Rights Commission director outlines her goals.

By Kellie Doyle
The Daily Iowan

Making Iowa free of discrimination is the primary goal for Corlis Moody, the new director of the Iowa Civil Rights Commission.

In a public human-rights discussion at the Iowa City Public Library Thursday evening, Moody said the commission will strive to involve more Iowans, younger Iowans and better-paid Iowans.

"We understand we're not there and have a long way to go, but this is where we want to be," she said. "We think we're a pretty good commission, but we could always be better."

She related the discussion's theme, "Our rights and nothing less, our rights and nothing more," to the commission's goal to work for improved civil rights in Iowa.

One of the commission's biggest concerns is that the percentage of unemployment for blacks, the disabled and young people has reached double digits, she said.

Eighty-one percent of all discriminatory complaints originate in the workplace, further concerning Moody, she said.

"We have to make decisions based on this data," she said. "And we have to keep going until we make it right. There's a lot of work to do."

The commission plans to, "take itty-bitty steps to reach its goal" by enforcing civil rights through compliance, advocacy and education, Moody said.

Several of the people at the discussion said that adding sexual orientation to the classes currently protected against discrimination in the Iowa Code was one of their priorities.

Creed, race, color, sex, national origin, religion, ancestry and disability are among the classes found in most sections of the code, as well as age, marital status and financial status in some sections, said David Leshtz, one of seven commissioners on the Iowa Civil Rights Commission.

"I'm alarmed that the governor has demonstrated no concern over our state statute, which is a very weak statute," said Clara Oleson, the president of the American Federation of Teachers, Local 716.

as though there is more concern over beholding the business community."

Improving customer service and making the agency more "hands-on" are other aspects the commission is discussing, Moody said.

"I would like to see the commission take a more active role in expanding civil liberties in Iowa," Leshtz said.

Live from the empire of useless information

Michael Feldman will bring his comedic anarchy and public-radio show to Iowa City.

By Jesse Elliott
The Daily Iowan

Michael Feldman went from high-school teacher to cab driver to public-radio station volunteer before he found his niche with his combination comedy, quiz and interview show, "Whad'Ya Know?"

This Saturday at 10 a.m., he will bring his humor to Hancher Auditorium for a live national broadcast. Tickets are $25 and $35. Call 335-1160 for information.

Feldman opens each two-hour show with "All the News That Isn't," a brief monologue filled with his entertaining brand of social and political humor. The segment launches into offbeat interviews featuring both celebrities and local personalities, a jazz number or two from the show's band and, eventually, an invitation for phone callers and audience members to compete for "useless prizes" in the quiz portion of the show.

Feldman's free-flowing, off-the-cuff comedic stylings inspired the Wall Street Journal to dub him "The King of Small-Talk Radio."

During a phone conversation with The Daily Iowan, Feldman shared his views on grown-up work, English in the '60s and how life begins at age 70.

DI: So who is it that comes up with these painstakingly researched questions, anyway?

MF: Do you like 'em?

DI: Sure.

MF: Then I do. I do all the ones you like, at least. All the rest of them, the researchers do.

Feldman
In Iowa City

DI: How many hours a week do you work researching questions and developing jokes for the show?

MF: It's hard to say. There is a lot of grown-up work associated with the show, but I try to avoid that. I hire grown-ups to do that work.

DI: What made you quit your job as a high-school teacher?

MF: High-school students seem to have that effect on everyone. Everyone who teaches wants out.

DI: Did you get any good material from the cab-driving stint?

MF: I did, but I've pretty much used it all up by now. I used up my English teacher material, too. Also, my wife material has been used up over the years.

DI: So you're running on empty?

MF: Not quite. I have kids. They won't have anything to do with me by now, but I have 'em, so I get material there. There are other things in the world, too.

DI: What did you study in college?

MF: English. But it was the '60s, so most of the classes were shut down. As a result, I didn't learn much. I can speak it. That's about all.

DI: You seem to be naturally amused by people. This could be taken two ways. Do you despise the human race or adore it?

MF: Well, there's gotta be a third option. When I'm driving, I despise the human race. When I'm doing my show, I adore it. The rest of life is somewhere in between.

DI: How did you meet your sidekick, Jim Packard?

MF: Jim's been around longer than me. He's the old-time journeyman of public radio.

DI: What about Jeff, John and Clyde (the show's jazz trio)?

MF: Clyde used to be James Brown's drummer, actually. Jeff and John and I, we were all local fixtures in Madison (Wis.) for a long time. They played in bars around town, and I saw 'em.

DI: Do you prefer doing the show in Madison or on the road?

MF: In Madison, it's a no-brainer because we've been doing it for so long, so that makes the atmosphere more relaxed. But we get an amazingly enthusiastic response from the out-of-towners when we're on the road, so that's equally fun.

DI: What are the secret interests and hobbies of Michael Feldman?

MF: None of my interests are really secret. I have my two daughters, Nora and Ellie, I have the occasional beer, and I'm thinking about taking up tennis and golf. But I'm waiting for golf until I'm 70. I hear that's when life really begins.

DI: Any closing thoughts?

MF: When you quote me on all this, I can claim none of it's verbatim, right?

STATE BRIEF

Mentoring, money, keys to teacher quality, group says

DES MOINES (AP) — A group asked to come up with recommendations to improve teacher quality is proposing mentoring programs, money to extend teacher contracts and more trained and certified teacher aides.

The Iowa Council on Educator Quality sent a report with 13 recommendations to Gov. Tom Vilsack Thursday.

"We will review these recommendations and their proposals as we develop a comprehensive package of legislative proposals for the 2001 legislative session," Vilsack said.

The council's proposals will be combined with earlier recommendations from another group — the Educator Compensation Design Team — to form the administration's education legislative package.

"These proposals ... address many of the areas of concern that Iowans face in our efforts to help ensure our state recruits and develops the highest quality teachers in the country," Lt. Gov. Sally Pederson said.

The Educator Compensation Design Team focused primarily on linking teacher compensation and student achievement.

Public television to show the power of the poplars

A public-television program will feature a UI graduate and his ideas for the environment.

By Andrew Bixby
The Daily Iowan

As a UI graduate student in 1990, Louis Licht had a vision for the environment. Ten years later, he and his company, Ecolotree Inc., will be featured on the Iowa Public Television show "Living in Iowa."

The seven-minute segment, "The Power of Trees," will air today at 8:30 p.m. on Channel 12 in Iowa City and again on Sept. 24 at 7:30 p.m.

Ecolotree, 505 E. Washington St., uses poplar trees and other plants to perform various ecological and environmental tasks. Poplars are used to cover landfill, to buffer streams and to clean up contaminated groundwater, said Bill Schnabel, a UI graduate and Ecolotree employee.

Ten years ago, Licht discovered that poplar trees take in water faster than most trees and have a tendency to take out impurities, said Jan Liggett, an Ecolotree employee.

"They are the quickest-growing perennial," she said. "They withstand adverse conditions better than most varieties of trees."

Liggett said she's glad that people will see how wonderful cleaning up the environment is and that she appreciates all the attention the company is receiving.

"Living in Iowa" is a prime-time news magazine series featuring Iowans who are doing fascinating things or have a different outlook on life, said Marlin Schram, the producer/director of the trees segment.

"From idea to company, Ecolotree Inc. has been a 10-year process," Schram said. "The segment focuses on the struggle (Licht) had to get his idea accepted."

The segment will show Licht as a "get-your-hands-dirty" type of guy who not only handles the business side of Ecolotree but also gets down in the dirt and plants the trees, Schram said.

Licht is in Oregon working on a new idea of using trees to clean up waste water and could not be reached for comment.

The show will do good things for the company, Schnabel said.

"Part of a small company with a good idea is getting the word out," he said. "This show will definitely do that."

Schram thinks that Ecolotree Inc. will change the way people think about the environment.

"This is more than just a job to (Licht)," he said. "It's really a lifetime goal to prove this works to the world."

Gore explores oil cost-cutting measures

■ The vice president proposes 'aggressive action' for winter's expected high heating costs.

By H. Josef Hebert
Associated Press

HOLLYWOOD, Md. — Facing growing concern over the threat of high heating costs, Al Gore proposed tapping the government's emergency petroleum reserve to force down oil prices before winter arrives.

The Democratic presidential candidate also urged Congress to provide $400 million in additional energy assistance for low-income families and tax credits to oil distributors to help build up dwindling heating oil stocks.

"We need aggressive action right now," Vice President Gore said Thursday, speaking at an oil distributorship in Maryland.

He also said foreign producers must live up to promises to increase supplies, declaring, "It's time for OPEC to get serious about the supply and price of oil."

Republican rival George W. Bush objected to Gore's proposal, saying, "The strategic reserve should not be used as an attempt to drive down oil prices right before the election ... for short-term political gain at the cost of long-term security."

He also said the United States should use its "strong hand in the diplomatic circles" to persuade oil-producing countries to increase production.

Both campaigns are scrambling to deal politically with the higher energy prices that have annoyed motorists all summer and soon will be showing up in home heating bills in the Northeast.

Gore used the backdrop of an oil distributorship in southern Maryland's St. Mary's County — where most people use oil to heat their homes — to unveil his energy plan. Several hundred supporters showed up at the Burch Oil Co. to listen to the vice president take another swipe at Big Oil, which he said has "profiteered" at the expense of consumers.

With four large heating-oil storage tanks in the background, Gore urged the president to approve a series of "swaps" in which oil — approximately 5 million barrels initially — would be made available to the market. If these releases produced lower prices and eased tight supplies, the Energy Department should make additional releases "to further stabilize prices," Gore said.

Under Gore's plan, oil from the Strategic Petroleum Reserve — a government stockpile of nearly 600 million barrels of crude intended to counter supply shortfalls — would be made available to the market through bids. A company would agree to return the oil to the government at a future date.

Reacting to Gore's proposal, Bush spokeswoman Karen Hughes said dipping into the reserve would allow Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein "to literally put America over a barrel."

Teen trader charged with civil fraud

■ The 15-year-old agrees to return $285,000 of his stock profits.

By Jeffrey Gold
Associated Press

NEWARK, N.J. — In less than half a year, Jonathan G. Lebed earned more than a quarter-million dollars trading stocks on the Internet — though he was only a sophomore in high school.

But the boy's gains were wiped out Wednesday when the Securities and Exchange Commission brought civil fraud charges, claiming he made his money through 11 illegal manipulations involving nine stocks.

Lebed, now a 15-year-old junior, agreed to repay $285,000, which the securities commission said represented illegal profits and interest. He neither admitted nor denied the allegations, but he agreed to refrain from similar behavior. It is the first time the agency has brought charges against a minor.

The teen-ager, a resident of Cedar Grove in northern New Jersey, said his interest in the stock market began at age 11, watching the financial network CNBC.

"It intrigued me watching all the numbers go by on television," he told the Wall Street Journal. "I've always been interested in business — any kind of politics, finance, anything of that nature."

A year later — at 12 — he was putting money from his savings account into stocks.

Lebed allegedly reaped profits with a "pump and dump" — buying large blocks of thinly traded stocks, hyping them on financial message boards on the Internet and then — within 24 hours — dumping his shares after the price rose.

The 11 trades cited by the securities commission represented a fraction of the thousands of transactions Lebed made since he was 12, said Joy Thompson, the associate director of the agency's Philadelphia office, which handled the case.

The trades, from custodial accounts in his father's name at two brokers, took place from Aug. 23, 1999, to Feb. 4, 2000. Officials said there was no indication his parents knew anything about the alleged illegal activities.

"He's a good student," his father, Gregory Lebed, told reporters. He said he could not comment on his son's case, but did tell the New York Times, "They pick on a kid."

Lebed's lawyer, Kevin H. Marino, described him as an intelligent, well-rounded youngster.

"He and his family feel it's a very fair and appropriate settlement and are happy to have the entire matter behind him," Marino said.

The commission found that after the boy bought a stock, he sent hundreds of identical, false e-mail messages, each under a fictitious name, touting the stock he had just purchased.

One claimed that a company trading at $2 per share would be trading at more than $20 per share "very soon." Other postings claimed that a stock would be the "next stock to gain 1,000 percent" and was "the most undervalued stock ever."

Bill recommends cameras in Supreme Court

■ Oral arguments will be televised if the legislation passes.

By Richard Carelli
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A bill to require the Supreme Court to televise its public sessions was introduced in the Senate on Thursday.

The proposed legislation says the nation's highest court "shall permit" televised coverage of the 70 to 80 oral arguments it hears each year unless a majority of the nine justices concludes that doing so in a particular case would violate someone's rights.

The bill was introduced by Sens. Arlen Specter, R-Pa.,

and Joseph Biden, D-Del.

"Since the Supreme Court ... has assumed the power to decide cutting-edge issues of public policy virtually as a super-legislature, the public has a right to know what the court is doing," a release from Specter's office said.

"Without interfering with the independent judiciary or challenging the Supreme Court's power for the final word in interpreting the Constitution, the Congress has the authority to legislate on the Supreme Court's operations," the release said.

There was no Supreme Court response to the bill. But in a 1996 letter to Specter, Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist said the justices "periodically considered the question of allowing live television and radio coverage ... and a majority are of the view that it would be unwise to depart from our current practice."

The court is notoriously camera-shy. Testifying before a Senate subcommittee four years ago, Justice David H. Souter said, "The day you see a camera come into our courtroom, it's going to roll over my dead body."

Most of the court's work is done behind closed doors. Of the more than 8,000 cases that reach the court each October-through-June term, about 70 or 80 are granted full review. In those, lawyers for both sides appear before the court, usually in hour-long public sessions, before the justices begin the task of reaching their decision.

The court does audiotape its arguments, and those tapes are made publicly available after each term.

The ban on cameras in all federal courts dates back to 1937. The prohibition was partially interrupted for several years by a now-ended experiment that let individual courts decide whether to allow electronic coverage of courtroom proceedings.

Also pending before the Senate is a bill that would let presiding federal judges decide whether to allow electronic media coverage on a case-by-case basis.

Crash survivors can seek residency

■ The INS says the nine Cubans can apply next September to become U.S. residents.

By Adrian Sainz
Associated Press

KEY WEST, Fla. — Immigration officials cleared the way Thursday for all nine Cubans who survived a plane crash at sea to stay in the United States and seek residency.

Six of the survivors were released from the Krome Detention Center and taken to a clinic for a medical checkup. They will be released to family members in Miami, attorney Roberto Villasante said.

All were paroled to the United States, allowing them to apply for residency, said Patricia Mancha, spokeswoman for the Immigration and Naturalization Service. That process can begin next September.

Parole also was expected for the remaining survivors, 6-year-old Andy Fuentes and his parents. Andy's American relatives took the boy to Kmart on Thursday, helping him get some much-needed shoes as well as inline skates, basketball, football, baseball bat and helmet and blue socks.

"I had a pair of skates in Cuba," the boy told his Cuban-American grandfather and uncle in Spanish. "They were made of plastic, and they were garbage."

His parents — Rodolfo Fuentes and Liliana Ponzoa, both 36 — remained in a Key West hospital but were expected to be released Friday.

The family and seven others left Cuba on Tuesday, taking off from a rural airfield in a Soviet-built crop-duster. Low on fuel, the plane was ditched into the Gulf of Mexico between Cuba and Mexico, killing one of the men aboard. The others were rescued by a nearby cargo ship.

"The escape ... was planned way before," said Fuentes' brother, Rafael, who said he talked to Rodolfo in the hospital. "The bad part is that the pilot got lost ... The pilot realized he was running out of fuel, so he stopped looking for land and started looking for a boat."

The survivors were taken to Key West and Miami, where they were interviewed by U.S. immigration officials to determine if they are eligible to stay in the United States.

The Cuban Adjustment Act allows Cubans who reach American soil to apply for U.S. residency, while most Cubans picked up at sea are repatriated.

Complicating the fate of the crash survivors were the circumstances of the flight. In the past, federal authorities have returned hijackers to Cuba for prosecution or has put them on trial, but the FBI said Thursday that this week's flight was not a hijacking.

Iowa man to keep $20,000 mistake

■ The ruling reverses previous decision on a Social Security error.

By David Scott
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — An Iowa man who once washed dishes for a living will not have to repay almost $20,000 to the Social Security Administration, which sent him the money by mistake.

The 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruled Thursday that Jim Coulston of Council Bluffs, Iowa, was not at fault when he cashed the check for $20,658. The court said that making Coulston repay the money would defeat the purpose of Social Security.

The court said Coulston was a "man who receives benefits because of an intellectual impairment."

"Coulston, who has trouble reading, thought the check was a back payment for medical expenses because he canceled his Medicare, so he cashed the check..." the court said.

The ruling reverses the decision of an administrative-law judge and the U.S. District Court for Southern Iowa. Both had refused Coulston's request for a waiver from the Social Security Administration, which had threatened to withhold his monthly benefit check of about $650 until it recovered the money.

"Coulston also has no savings account, so he obviously lives from check to check," the appeals court said in its ruling.

"In light of these circumstances, we credit Coulston's statement at the hearing that he 'has a hard time making ends meet,' and, because of this, we think taking even a small amount of benefits away from Coulston would defeat the purpose of Social Security."

Joseph Basque, Coulston's attorney, said his client received the check in the mail in November 1998. He and his ex-wife called the local Social Security office, which assured him the money was his, Basque said.

Having never had a bank account, Coulston ran into trouble cashing the check. He found a local savings and loan willing to cash it — but they only allowed him to withdraw a set amount each day.

"So he started spending the money," Basque said. "He paid a bunch of bills, bought a car. It was around Thanksgiving, so he bought some Christmas presents."

Even with the restrictions placed on his account by the bank, Coulston managed to spend $18,249 in about a month's time. That's how long it took Social Security to discover its mistake and call Coulston, who immediately returned the balance, Basque said.

When the agency asked Coul-ston him to repay what he had spent, he sought the waiver.

The administrative-law judge ruled that Coulston, and certainly his ex-wife and friends, should have known better than to think the check was legitimate.

"This may well be true, but it is irrelevant," the court ruled in its majority opinion. Only what Coulston thought about the check was important, it said. Furthermore, the 8th Circuit said the administrative-law judge failed to take Coulston's intellectual impairment into account.

The third judge who reviewed the case concurred, but wrote a separate opinion, ruling Social Security officials presented no evidence that Coulston was at fault.

John Garlinger, a spokesman for Social Security, said Thursday the agency was still reviewing the case and that no decision had been made about a possible appeal.

NATION BRIEF

Gates still tops Forbes list

NEW YORK (AP) — Poor Bill Gates. Well, poorer, anyway.

The Microsoft Corp. chairman is still the richest American, but not by nearly as much after the drubbing the company's stock has taken in the past year, Forbes magazine says in its annual ranking of the nation's 400 wealthiest people.

Gates' fortune — valued at $85 billion last year — is down to $63 billion, Forbes said. Oracle Corp. CEO Lawrence Ellison — whose worth more than quadrupled to an estimated $58 billion in the past year — is No. 2 and close to overtaking Gates.

Gates, who lives in Washington state, retained the top spot for the seventh year in a row, with most of his wealth based on his holdings of Microsoft stock.

U.N. workers protest deaths of colleagues

■ Worldwide rallies remember murdered workers and insist on more protection.

By Naomi Koppel
Associated Press

GENEVA — About 1,500 U.N. aid workers wearing white arm bands and carrying photographs of slain and abducted colleagues marched Thursday to demand more protection while working in some of the world's most dangerous places.

"Refugees' lives depend on us, but they can depend on us only if we stay alive," Sadako Ogata, the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, told the Geneva rally to protest the killing of four UNHCR workers killed this month — three in West Timor and one in Guinea — and the abduction of a fifth.

"Why should innocent humanitarian workers be again the target of merciless aggressors?" Ogata asked the rally of 1,500 aid workers.

Around the globe, UNHCR and other U.N. workers took part in memorial services, rallies and marches to remember their colleagues and insist that such attacks should never be allowed to happen again.

Workers from the UNHCR head office in Geneva wore white armbands in solidarity at a memorial service for the latest victim, Mensah Kpognon, who was killed in Guinea on Sunday.

The workers then filed out to join staff from the Red Cross, the International Organization for Migration and the aid agency Doctors Without Borders, on the march.

At a ceremony attended by 500 people in Nairobi, Kenya, Klaus Toepfer, the head of the U.N. office, called on governments everywhere "to improve security measures that will ensure the safety of all."

In Dili, capital of East Timor, around 150 demonstrators carried banners that read: "No aid without security" and "Enough is enough." Operations have been suspended in West Timor since the killings at the UNHCR office in Atambua, West Timor.

"We need to be stronger facing atrocities," Bernard Kouchner, the top U.N. official in Kosovo, told several hundred people in Pristina, the capital of the province.

In New York, the U.N. flag was lowered to half mast and U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan led some 1,200 marchers in a minute of silence in memory of the victims, whom he called "heroes who worked to save lives."

Some 200 workers have been killed in the field over the last 10 years, 35 over the last year alone, said U.N. Staff Union President Mary Madarshahi, who blamed the deaths on a lack of respect for U.N. workers. "We have been silent for a decade and now U.N. staff have become moving targets without any support and without protection."

Mary Robinson, the U.N. High Commissioner for Human Rights, told the Associated Press in Geneva:

"Think of the parents of idealistic men and women of so many different nationalities who are so proud that their son or daughter is out there ... working for the most vulnerable sectors, refugees who are desperate."

Elmer Greiner of Keota has happily returned to farming following an innovative bladder reconstruction surgery developed at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics.

Isn't that amazing?

When Elmer Greiner learned he had bladder cancer in 1994, his greatest fear was that he'd have to give up farming.

Elmer's cancer was so severe, his bladder had to be removed. That meant he would be dependent upon a urine bag for the rest of his life. No more long days out in the fields.

Fortunately 1994 was also the year a physician at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics began to perform a new kind of surgery to reconstruct the human bladder using part of the small intestine. Elmer had the surgery and twelve weeks later he was picking corn and feeding hogs.

Elmer is not the first patient to benefit from a medical breakthrough here. Nor will he be the last. Today we are using electrical impulses to reduce incontinence and microwaves to operate on enlarged prostates. One day, we hope to know how to keep tumors like Elmer's from forming.

Which explains why, every day, we keep caring, trying and searching for the discoveries that change medicine. And change lives.

Car hits school bus, slightly injuring 20

Seventeen children were treated and released from a West Union hospital.

Associated Press

WEST UNION, Iowa — A car that had stopped for a school bus Thursday morning was rear-ended by another car, pushing it into the bus and sending 20 people to the hospital with minor injuries.

There were 17 elementary school children and a driver on the bus. The children were treated and released from Palmer Lutheran hospital in West Union. The bus driver, Kevin Mork, 35, of West Union, was not injured.

The drivers of the cars — Earl West, 54, and Brent Myers, 21, both of Elgin — also were treated and released from the West Union hospital.

West, a meat inspector with the Iowa Department of Agriculture, was driving a state-owned vehicle, which was totaled when it was sandwiched between the bus and Myers' car, the Iowa State Patrol said.

Myers was charged with failure to control his vehicle and with failure to provide proof of insurance, Iowa State Patrol Sgt. Mike Gritton said.

The crash happened on U.S. Highway 18 two miles northeast of West Union around 7:30 a.m.

The bus, West and Myers were westbound. The bus had its lights on and its stop sign extended as it stopped to pick up a kindergarten student. West came to a stop behind the bus, and an eastbound car also had stopped for the bus, Gritton said.

campaigning in Cedar Rapids. He noted that students generally vote at a much lower rate than older people do.

"They're trying to get the most bang for their buck right now," Stabenow said. "If they (do that by) going to Cedar Rapids instead of coming to Iowa City, that's where they'll go."

Jaehrling echoed Stabenow's view.

"We realize that they may have to focus their efforts elsewhere," she said. "We don't feel we're being slighted by any means."

Christian Kurasek, the chairman of UI Students for Bush, was in Cedar Rapids helping set the event up Thursday evening. He said he is happy that he finally will get the chance to meet the vice presidential candidate.

"I've always been a big fan of Cheney," said Kurasek, who said he will drive in Cheney's motorcade this morning. "He's really a dynamic person."

An only child, Marrita shares a special bond with her mother that exists in every aspect of life.

"I can talk to her," Buck-Crockett says. "She's fun to be around, and I like to take her everywhere with me. She's my friend."

Marrita is an individual, her mother says. Although mothers and daughters will always have their differences, Buck-Crockett makes it a point to never stifle her daughter's ambitions.

When Marrita was 3 years old, her mother sat her down and told her that she would have to spend the afternoon with a baby-sitter. Marrita looked her mother in the eyes, leaned forward and slapped her across the face.

"It left a hand print," Buck-Crockett says. "I mean it was really hard. But I didn't hit her back. I could have broken her right then — broken her whole self-esteem."

Instead, the two talked, hugged and cried. Marrita never hit her mother again.

While Olympic gold is Marrita's No. 1 goal, college and professional play are also in the front of her mind. But while Marrita says she doesn't have a particular college in mind, her mother is confident that she's going to be a Hawkeye.

"She's going to be the top recruit in the nation," her mother says with a proud smile.

"I dare another coach to come over to my house and try to recruit her."

Local pagans to welcome equinox

celebration will be held in College Green Park at College and Johnson streets from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

The event is part of the International Pagan Pride Project, which defines pagans based on four categories: those who honor deities found in pre-Christian, aboriginal or tribal mythology; those who practice a religion based on shamanism or magical practices; those who have created a new religion based on past pagan religions with futuristic views of society; and those who focus spiritual attention primarily on the Divine Feminine.

"Pagan Pride Day is near the equinox to emphasize themes of celebration, abundance and thankfulness," said Trish Turner, the local coordinator for the event. "It's goal is to educate the public, celebrate our diversity, and to honor what we're being given by giving back to the community. In many ways, this celebration is similar to a Thanksgiving celebration."

The celebration, which is intended as a gathering for wiccans, Druids, heathens, goddess-worshippers and other pagan groups, is open to the public. The event will have vendors, food and workshops and will feature a celebratory ritual at 4 p.m. to express thanks for community and the abundance of life.

Admission to the celebration is one canned or nonperishable food item, which will be donated to the Iowa City Crisis Center's Food Pantry. Internationally, Pagan Pride Events were held in more than 60 cities last year, and they gathered more than 2 tons of food for local charities.

However, not all local people are pleased about the event. Members of Iowa City's Christian community have expressed distaste at the religious nature of the celebration.

"I think they have the freedom to worship however they want," said Chris Arch, the senior pastor at Good News Bible Church, 3323 Shamrock Drive. "I do think that they are grossly misled in what they worship, though. I think it's a perfect illustration of Romans 1 in that they're worshipping creation rather than the creator."

Iowa City resident Virginia Melroy, 56, who says she has been studying witchcraft for the past 20 years, sees things differently.

"I think the festival is a great idea because there's so much room for education," she said. "In the end it's the Christians who are misled. They burned witches at the stake in the Middle Ages just for practicing. We never did anything to them."

13 percent of black adult males barred from vote

estimated percentage of disenfranchised black men is even higher than 13 percent.

In Florida and Alabama, for instance, the figure is 31 percent, while in Mississippi it is 29 percent. In Virginia, 25 percent of otherwise eligible black men cannot vote.

Those four states impose a lifetime ban on voting by felons. The other five states with lifetime bans are Iowa, Kentucky, Nevada, New Mexico, and Wyoming.

After declining in the early 1970s, the prison population in the United States has grown dramatically. More than 2 million people were behind bars last year, according to the Justice Department.

Crime rates have been dropping since 1993, but longer sentences, especially for drug crimes and violent crimes, help account for higher prison populations, with drug-related sentences falling disproportionately on blacks.

In Delaware, where lawmakers in June approved a bill that amends the state Constitution to restore voting rights for some felons, proponents argued that barring felons from voting after they leave prison dates back to a time when only white, male landowners were allowed to cast ballots.

The new Delaware law grants voting rights to all those except murderers, sex offenders and those convicted of felony bribery. Felons there and in Pennsylvania must now wait five years after completing their sentence before seeking restored voting rights.

David Bositis, a senior political analyst at the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies, a think tank that researches policy issues concerning blacks and other minorities, said most Americans favor restoring voting rights to felons after they've served their time, citing a survey in which 73 percent of respondents called voting "a fundamental right of citizenship."

The Rev. Jesse Jackson called disenfranchisement "taxation without representation," saying the issue goes to the heart of the civil-rights movement which fought for equal access to citizenship for all Americans.

"Whether you're black, white or brown, once you serve your sentence to society, you should have your vote restored," he said. "If you don't have your vote restored, it's a life sentence."

But victims' advocates say felons — especially those convicted of violent crimes — should lose their right to vote.

Sam Rieger, president of Survivors of Homicide, based in Wethersfield, Conn., said voting rights are likely irrelevant to most felons.

"Offering that carrot is not going to accomplish anything," he said.

With rally and march, local women call for 24-hour truce

board of directors at the RVAP, said the warm, beautiful day provided a perfect starting point to achieve the group's objectives.

"Our ultimate goal is to end sexual violence by increasing awareness and activism," Lyness said.

The theme of the activities came from an essay by well-known feminist author Andrea Dworkin called "I Want a 24-Hour Truce During Which There Is No Rape," which was read by staff members from RVAP to initiate the rally and march.

When staff members finished reading the essay, Doderer, a 36-year member of the state Legislature, spoke of her experiences changing laws in Iowa. She said that when she first joined the Iowa General Assembly, she was unaware of the atrocities women in Iowa experience. She said because she was one of four women in the 59-member Legislature, she received an outpouring of letters from women who were victims of violence.

"It was a long journey to get some laws fixed," Doderer said. "You can make a difference, but you can't unless you get involved."

UI junior Elle Pospisil attended the rally and is no stranger to social activism against violence. Sporting a "Take Back the Night" T-shirt, Pospisil said the Pentacrest location of the rally provided the opportunity to stimulate a discussion of violence with students walking through campus on their way to classes.

"This is something great to do during your lunch hour," she said. "We're being loud and showing people we're not taking it anymore."

After the rally, supporters took to the streets, marching with picket signs reading "End Violence Now" and "Support Survivors." A group of about 20 women and men yelled, "Two, four, six, eight, stop the violence, stop the hate," as many students and Iowa City residents looked on.

UI sophomore Casey Allen, who had just finished class for the day, watched the protesters deliver their message. Allen said the march is a great way to get people involved, but he is not sure it will affect perpetrators of violence.

"I support the idea, and it raises awareness," he said. "But I don't know if it is directly battling the problem."

Live music was also a part of the proposed 24-hour truce, which coincides with Sexual Assault Awareness Week. "Singing Out Loud!" took place Thursday night on the Pedestrian Mall. RVAP Director of Education Liz Fitzgerald said music and poetry helped to showcase the activists' visions of peace.

A "Sit-Out Against Rape" will take place today from 10 p.m. to midnight on the Ped Mall.

Coordinator Heather Light said the UI Feminist Union orchestrated the nighttime event near the bars in an effort to reach people who are out drinking. Light said that because rape and alcohol are statistically linked, the group hopes to do its part in ending sexual violence through education.

Allow women to protect themselves ...

Put arms in harm's way

Violence against women is a problem? Women should arm themselves.

The U.S. Bureau of Justice Statistics recently released a report showing that while crime rates have dropped by 10 percent overall, the rape rate has shot up by 20 percent from 1998 to 1999. Apparently, the problem in Iowa City and Coralville is even worse. According to the FBI Uniform Crime Reports, both cities have below-average crime rates, but the rape rate for Iowa City in 1997 was well above the national average. Coralville has rape rates nearly twice the national average.

This demonstrates a failure of government to protect women from violence. When one considers that rape rates are a proxy for a broad set of violent acts toward women, there is clear need to address this problem.

So the question is, what is a woman to do? The answer is she should buy a gun. Then, she should learn how to responsibly keep and use the gun. According to a study by Yale Professor John Lott, women are far more likely to escape death or serious bodily injury when they are armed with a gun. An armed woman will escape harm almost four times as often as an unarmed woman who resists, and more than twice as often as a woman who submits to her rapist, mugger or murderer.

The saddening fact of the data is that if a woman is unarmed, she is far better off if she submits to a treacherous violation of her rights. While the unarmed woman prays for a miracle, an armed woman is directly empowered to defend her rights. The bottom line is this: An armed woman is more likely to be alive and well following an attempted rape. She has likely scared off the attacker or, in rare circumstances, shot the attacker in self-defense. A police officer will likely find the unarmed woman on the floor, raped and murdered. Imagine that the woman is you, your wife, your mother, your daughter or your girlfriend. Which situation would you prefer?

The only unfortunate side is that the Sheriff of Johnson County will try to stop you from defending yourself. He has no obligation to protect you, and if you want to get a permit to protect yourself outside your home, you can probably forget about it. If you want a permit to merely buy a handgun, he will conduct a background check, fingerprint you and require a pile of documents. He will call Public Safety to check up on you. Generally, this man will treat you like the criminal against whom you are trying to protect yourself. Obey the law, but do not let him discourage you from protecting yourself.

Remembering one who brought me here

O Danny Boy, the pipes, the pipes are calling ...

The music floating out from my speakers sounded as sentimental as I'd always thought it would be. I listened idly to the NPR story on barbershop quartets. A man on the program sang the Irish classic "O Danny Boy" to close out the story.

The summer's gone, and all the flowers are dying; 'tis you, 'tis you must go, and I must bide.

My lips quivered. I gasped. Tears spattered down my face and onto the steering wheel, as for the first time I truly felt the idea of a world without her. A world where I couldn't grab a card, scrawl a note in French and drop it in the mail. Where I couldn't call an endless list of nursing homes or hospitals and wait for her quavering voice to answer my Bonjour, Grandmère! with a Ma chère Suzi!

Bonjour! Comment ça va? A world without my grandmother.

On Labor Day, at 10 p.m., I was in the middle of writing a DI column when the phone rang. I knew what my mom was going to say; my brother had called earlier to tell me my grandmother was going to die that night. And he was right. I finished my column and started to make arrangements for funeral leave from work.

But until Saturday, when "Danny Boy" unexpectedly entered my car, I hadn't really grieved my grandmother. My Grandmère, as she — a French teacher for many years — was called, left me with a range of legacies.

Aileen Conlan Steffen bore five children to her cardiologist husband, my Grandpère. She raised the children in Catholic schools, with the combined Irish-German Catholic ideas that ran through their history.

I'll never be like her. There's nowhere in the United States where I can legally be married. I don't believe in the religious doctrine that weighted her days with guilt. I'll not subject my diabetic body to bearing children.

But I'll always be like her. Through her tales of the English invasion and the oppression of Ireland, I learned the fire of protest. Ironically, my passion to work for choice, for women's rights and for queer rights, came from her stories about atrocities committed upon Irish Catholics. It's from her I learned the need to fight back.

Through her love of French — she earned an M.A. in French and studied at the Sorbonne — she passed the language to me. I took French from my first days of Montessori school and nearly minored in it in college. I once responded in French on the paper of a rhetoric student who was writing about her own enthusiasm for the language.

Finally, through her writing, I learned the complexity of my grief. And so I say to my Grandmère, quoting the contemporary musician Beth Orton: You're flesh and you're blood and you're my memory. Live on in my memory.

Au revoir, Grandmère. Adieu.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Guest columnist's definition of "stealing" is inappropriate

In response to Mr. Steindl's guest opinion ("Absentees squander tuition," DI, Sept. 18), I would have to say I don't really agree with him. I am surprised Steindl would say that students are "stealing" when he is an economics professor. Surely he knows the principle by which a bus or airline sells very cheap tickets right before departure just to fill up the seats? This is because the bus/plane will expend basically the same amount of fuel and expense whether or not there is an extra person or two aboard filling up otherwise empty seats. The same principle can apply to class. Students would be "stealing" if each one had individual instruction and materials, but instead we have to buy our own books, make our own copies and attend classes with other students in communal buildings. The taxpayers are paying for the professor and the building; they will pay the same amount for these things whether there are 25 or 35 students in the room. And because smaller class sizes are proven to aid education, you might even say that other students are benefiting when the sort of students who don't care about the class don't come to it. Students who don't come to class are really only hurting themselves.

Actually, why not go further and say that students who get bad grades are "stealing" because the taxpayers are paying for their education, not the amount of time students spend in a classroom. What does it matter if you skip a few classes if you get an A? You were educated. Conversely, the guy who never missed a class and got a D — it's likely that he didn't learn the main points of the class, and therefore the tax money spent on him was wasted. I'm not saying this is how I think, but if you're just going to break college education down into taxpayer dollars, then in my opinion trying to figure out whether someone actually learned something is a much better way to go about doing it instead of focusing on attendance, which is not the point of going to school.

When it comes to abortion, we must mix religion and politics

It threw me for a loop when I saw a Catholic nun floating down the river with Al Gore, one who advocates a woman's choice in murdering her baby. The Partial-Birth Abortion Ban Act (HR 3660) is a bill in Congress to ban the performance of such an abortion. The bill defines partial-birth abortion as "an abortion in which the person performing the abortion deliberately and intentionally vaginally delivers some portion of an intact living fetus until the fetus is partially outside the body of the mother, for the purpose of performing an overt act that the person knows will kill the fetus ..." According to ABC News,

"Expressing hope that 'we can come up with a law that meets Constitutional muster,' Bush vowed that 'unlike Al Gore, I pledge to fight for a ban on partial-birth.'"

How a nun or anyone else can allow this to happen is a disgrace: The abortionist punctures the base of the skull with a surgical instrument, such as a long surgical scissors or a pointed hollow metal tube called a trochar. He then inserts a catheter (tube) into the wound and removes the baby's brain with a powerful suction machine. This causes the skull to collapse, after which the abortionist completes the delivery of a now-dead baby. That, my friends, is murder. In a discussion with a Catholic priest, he stated, "We shouldn't mix politics and religion." According to one of his fellow priests, if you don't do your part in getting rid of abortion, you will be judged accordingly by your creator. According to Matthew 12:33, "But I tell you that men will have to give account on the day of judgment for every careless word they have spoken. For by your words you will be acquitted, and by your words you will be condemned."

Eleven excellent reasons to vote Republican this November

If you oppose stem cell research that could find cures for Alzheimer's, blindness, diabetes, spinal injuries, muscular dystrophy and many other diseases — vote Republican.

If you oppose campaign-finance reform — vote Republican.

If you support a poverty-level minimum wage — vote Republican.

If you oppose effective mandatory background checks to prevent convicted felons from buying guns at gun shows — vote Republican.

If you want three more right-wing

Supreme Court Justices — vote Republican.

If you oppose a woman's right to choose an abortion to save her life or to prevent serious permanent damage to her health — vote Republican.

If you support your tax dollars subsidizing religions you don't believe in — vote Republican.

If you oppose separation of church and state — vote Republican.

If you don't want the heirs of multibillionaires to pay any taxes on the trillion-plus dollars they will inherit — vote Republican.

If you support schemes to privatize Social Security and Medicare that will cause them to "wither and die on the vine," as Newt Gingrich gleefully predicted they would — vote Republican.

If you hate Bill Clinton so much that you can ignore all of the above — vote Republican and suffer the consequences.

Hawkeye men's golf at home

The Hawks hope to end their dry spell during their tournament in Iowa City.

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

Despite numerous top-five finishes, it has been four years since the Iowa men's golf team has won a tournament. However, the drought could become history this weekend.

Iowa will host the Hawkeye Intercollegiate Saturday and Sunday at Finkbine Golf Course, a place quite familiar to the Hawkeyes. That familiarity, along with a solid fourth-place finish two weeks ago, translates into expectations of nothing less than a championship.

The confidence is due in part to the fact that the team practices on the course nearly every day and knows every single dogleg, bunker and hole location.

"It's a big advantage to play at home," UI senior Matt Stutzman said. "Other teams will have trouble because they aren't as familiar with the course."

Coach Terry Anderson said he has set the course up to give his team the largest advantage possible. Hole locations were set exactly where his players like them, and the tees were placed where the players excelled in practice, he said.

"There will be nothing tricky for our players," Anderson said. "Being at home means we won't have to cope with many distractions. Players can sleep in their own beds, and we don't have to worry about where we are going to eat."

Iowa says it will put up a fight despite being 42-point underdogs.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

Just when it looked like it couldn't get any worse for the Iowa football team, it travels to Lincoln, Neb., tomorrow to face (gulp) the No. 1-ranked Nebraska Cornhuskers.

Yep, the slate just keeps getting worse.

It would be nice to insert a Buffalo or Ball State in this slot of the winless Hawkeyes' schedule, so maybe they could get a win before Big Ten play starts up. But no, instead they have to go to Big Red country to face a team that just about everybody thinks is going to win the national title.

The Hawkeyes, on the other hand, are a team that just about everybody thinks isn't going to win a game this year.

So how does Iowa, which has the nation's third-longest losing streak, prepare for this one?

According to defensive coordinator Norm Parker, the Hawkeyes just have to stick with what they know and play like they know how.

"You can't go out there and lay down — that's not the American way," Parker said. "I think if you get too wild on defense, you end up your guys

If a kid's got any American blood in him, if somebody tells you you're going to line up against the No. 1 team in the nation on ABC television, if that doesn't get you fired up to play, then nothing's going to.

— Norm Parker,
Iowa defensive coordinator

don't know what they're doing. The best chance you have is doing what you know. You've just got to go out there and play. You're not going to invent stuff they haven't seen before."

They might have to invent something new to stop the Cornhuskers because nobody has since Texas on Oct. 13 of last year — the last time Nebraska lost. Iowa will be facing a Nebraska rushing offense that is better than last year and ranks first in the nation with 389 yards per game behind Heisman hopeful and starting quarterback Eric Crouch.

Iowa's rushing defense, on the other hand, ranks 72nd in the nation, allowing 160 yards per game. Two of those games were against "powerhouses" Western Michigan and Iowa State.

On paper, this one is a total mismatch. But according to Parker, that doesn't mean Iowa is going to just lie down and give Nebraska an automatic victory — especially if the game is on national television.

"If a kid's got any American blood in him, if somebody tells you you're going to line up against the No. 1 team in the nation on ABC television, if that doesn't get you fired up

Soccer plays double bill this weekend

Women's soccer plays Michigan State here, then travels to North Carolina.

By Laura Podolak
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's soccer team (6-2-0; 1-1-0) has played well in the early going of the 2000 season, combining a quick front line with solid defensive play by goalkeeper Liz Hendel and her teammates.

In almost every game so far this year, Iowa has outshot and outscored its opponents. This weekend, the Hawks look to continue their solid play against Michigan State today at home and Wake Forest in Winston-Salem, N.C., on Sept. 24.

Iowa coach Wendy Logan said the Big Ten has shown a lot of parity so far, and, as a result, every game in the Big Ten will be critical.

Last season, Michigan State failed to qualify for the Big Ten tournament, but Logan feels the Spartans have made vast improvements and will be playing with a lot more confidence than in the past.

"We expect the game against Michigan State to be extremely competitive. They have some new, exciting players and have made improvements since last season. We expect a different team from last year," she said.

After Friday's game, the Hawkeyes will face No. 14 Wake Forest in a nonconference match-up.

The reason Wake Forest has received so much national attention is because of the competitive conference in which the Demon Deacons compete, Logan said.

Wake Forest is part of the Atlantic Coast Conference, which includes such powerhouses as Virginia, Clemson and North Carolina.

Logan expects to see a very different style of play by Wake Forest, one that her team has yet to encounter.

"They are a sophisticated team. They change formations on cue to try to unbalance you," she said. "It will be a challenge to try to adjust to them quickly. It should be fun to see."

Sunday will mark the first time that Iowa will play Wake Forest, and Logan said it will be the first time she has ever seen the Demon Deacons in action.

Iowa has been dealing with a bout of injured players, but no more were injured last weekend, which is a relief for the dwindling number of

Alford says Hawks Nest going to get bigger

A committee plans to make the student section at basketball games better.

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

Even though several weeks of disorganization and uncertainty have surrounded planning of the Hawks Nest student cheering section, committee members and Iowa basketball coach Steve Alford say they are confident the section will be larger than last year.

Head Hawk Chad Barnard said he hoped the Hawks Nest could debut in full force on Oct. 13 for the second annual Game Night. Tickets will be ready, but students will have to wait for their T-shirts until late October, he said. David Sandstrum, in his first year as ticket manager, said he's been extremely busy handling sales for both basketball and football and hasn't started processing the students' tickets. Kathy Sayre, the assistant director of marketing at the UI Alumni Association, said she met with Sandstrum on Thursday and both agreed to have Hawks Nest tickets ready for Game Night.

Alford said part of his contract with Nike includes providing shirts for the Hawks Nest. The company is giving Iowa the first 1,000 shirts free, and the rest will be purchased with Hawks Nest sign-up fees, Sayre said.

Although Alford wants the students out in droves at Game Night, the delays aren't a concern of his, he said.

"My concern is to make sure

The Iowa volleyball team is ready for a Big Ten breakthrough — this weekend the Hawkeyes will find out if the conference is ready for them.

Iowa opens its conference schedule with home matches against Illinois tonight and Purdue on Saturday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Both matches begin at 7 p.m. Admission is $3 for students and adults; children younger than 5 are admitted free.

Keyshawn Johnson promises to cool Jets

■ It's been a week of trash talking for the former New York star.

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

Will Keyshawn Johnson ever shut up about his former employers in New York? Maybe.

But not until his unbeaten Bucs play host to the unbeaten Jets on Sunday in a game in which the stats of Johnson and his favorite whipping boy, Wayne Chrebet, may be more important than the final score.

"I'll do my normal deal," Johnson says. "But one thing in this normal deal is this is considered a big-time game. And big-time players show up in big-time games. According to my past history, I've done well in big-time games."

The important stuff: Both teams are 3-0 and Tampa Bay is favored by 7, indicative of their current status as the NFL's best team. Not only has the defense been as stifling as usual but the Bucs have scored 93 points in three games, a figure it took them seven games to reach last season.

Remember, the Jets slid to 8-8 last year after Vinny Testaverde was hurt. But they went to the AFC title game the year before, albeit with Keyshawn.

And they dominated a good Buffalo team Sunday, although the Bills helped by self-destructing, especially on special teams. Testaverde, who played for Tampa Bay in its dark ages, seems back to his 1998 form and New York misses Johnson only minimally. Shaun Ellis and John Abraham, two draft picks the Jets got in the deals involving Johnson and Bill Parcells, have helped appreciably with the pass rush.

Nonetheless, the Bucs are home, Keyshawn claims to be a big-game player and Warren Sapp, Derrick Brooks, John Lynch, etc. are the best defense this side of the 1985 Bears.

Stubblefield arrested for assaulting wife

■ The Washington defensive lineman says the dispute was just a normal argument.

ASHBURN, Va. (AP) — Dana Stubblefield of the Washington Redskins was arrested on charges of assaulting his wife in a dispute about luggage.

The 315-pound defensive lineman insists he did not hit her, calling what happened "just one of those normal arguments you get with your wife." Stubblefield was arrested at the couples' home in Great Falls after an argument escalated and Kim Stubblefield called police, Fairfax County police said.

There were no signs of physical injury and she declined medical treatment, a police spokeswoman said.

"Nobody got hurt, nobody was drinking, nobody was doing anything out of the ordinary," Stubblefield said from practice Thursday.

Stubblefield was taken to Fairfax County jail. He was released on $2,500 bail and told not to have any contact with his wife for 48 hours.

"I didn't realize that if the cops were called that I'd have to be taken down," Stubblefield said.

Coach Norv Turner, his high-profile team off to a 1-2 start, said Stubblefield will not be disciplined, although that could change if he's convicted.

"It's something Dana has to work out," Turner said. "It's a family matter at home. It's not a team issue."

An NFL spokesman declined comment but cited the league's personal conduct policy. A player arrested or charged with a crime involving violence or the threat of violence must be evaluated by professional experts.

If a court determines a player violated the law, he faces a fine or suspension without pay.

Stubblefield would not say why he and wife were arguing about luggage. But he said only words were exchanged.

"It was obvious that the argument wasn't that bad because our two kids were sleeping right down the hall, and they never woke up," he said.

Stubblefield said he is focusing on Sunday's game against the unbeaten New York Giants.

"I went to Norv and told him that it's not a distraction," he said. "You don't have to worry, my mind is on New York 100 percent."

The 29-year-old lineman joined the Redskins in 1998 as a free agent but has yet to return to top form. With San Francisco, he was the NFL defensive rookie of the year in 1993 and NFL defensive player of the year in 1997.

His arrest comes at a time of discord for the Redskins. With a $100 million payroll, they were regarded by many as a favorite to reach the Super Bowl. But they are struggling on the field and have lost their best receiver, Michael Westbrook, for the season with a torn knee ligament.

Knicks prepare for season without Ewing

■ Glen Rice is expected to be the next big star in the media-crazy Big Apple.

By Josh Dubow
Associated Press

NEW YORK— Patrick Ewing's fate in New York was decided weeks before the Knicks dealt the longtime franchise player in a complicated four-team trade.

Ewing, tired of being blamed for the Knicks' failures and hurt by a perceived lack of loyalty from the team he helped build, marched into general manager Scott Layden's office last month and asked for a new start to the end of his Hall of Fame career.

"This is not a divorce. It is the end of an era," Knicks president Dave Checketts said Thursday. "He wanted a change. Sometimes change is inevitable. We accommodated him out of respect for what he has done here."

The Knicks sent Ewing — the franchise leader in points, rebounds, games, blocks and steals — to Seattle on Wednesday in a 12-player, five-draft pick, four-team deal that brought sharpshooter Glen Rice to New York.

The Knicks, who parted with backup center Chris Dudley and a first-round draft pick, also acquired Travis Knight, Luc Longley, Vernon Maxwell, Vladimir Stepania, Lazaro Borrell and four draft picks.

Lynsey Addario/Associated Press
Glen Rice laughs during a news conference introducing him as a member of the New York Knicks Thursday.

"This was a very long summer," said Layden, who exchanged 48 trade proposals with the Lakers and SuperSonics before finally coming to terms with this deal that also included the Phoenix Suns. "Up until yesterday, we fully expected to have Patrick back. We worked very well together to achieve our goals and work out a situation that Patrick would be comfortable with."

Ewing, the franchise player-turned albatross, was no longer comfortable with the team that made him the No. 1 pick in the 1985 draft.

Media and fans blamed his plodding inside play for holding back the talents of Latrell Sprewell and Allan Houston. He had little — if any — interaction with his teammates, and his relationship with coach Jeff Van Gundy had deteriorated as the focus of the offense shifted to younger, more athletic players.

"Change is inevitable sometimes," said agent David Falk, who helped broker this deal for two of his biggest clients — Ewing and Rice. "Patrick felt the time had come for change. He appreciated what New York did for him and he has no hurt feelings about moving on."

While Ewing moves on to team with Gary Payton and Vin Baker in Seattle, the Knicks prepare for the physical Eastern Conference schedule with three talented swing players and no force in the middle for the first time in 15 years.

The Knicks, one of the worst rebounding teams in the league last season, are now missing their top rebounder. Van Gundy acknowledges rebounding will be a problem this season, but said it is too early to determine if the team is better after the trade.

"I don't understand the infatuation with determining how good teams are already," he said. "It's just a lot of speculation. A lot has gone on in the East and soon we'll see what it means."

Van Gundy wouldn't commit to a starting lineup, other than saying Larry Johnson would start at power forward. But numbers dictate that either Rice would come off the bench, or Houston and Sprewell would team in a big backcourt without a true point guard.

"I'm not concerned with positions," Van Gundy said. "My job is to make it work and to get the best players out there playing well together. The formula for winning is the same, defense rebounding and unselfish offense. Those three things haven't changed. We've just changed personnel."

Rice, one of the league's deadliest shooters, has averaged 20.2 points in his career, but struggled as the third option in Los Angeles behind Shaquille O'Neal and Kobe Bryant.

Rice complained about his role with the Lakers, but said that won't happen in New York.

"I've matured," he said. "It was new to be in that role and it took time to get used to it."

The Knicks might not be done dealing yet, although Layden said there is nothing pending.

OFFENSE

The disparity in rushing yards tells the whole story here. Nebraska has an overwhelming edge in this stat. It's offense is the reason it is No. 1.

INTANGIBLES

Iowa has not won a football game in over one calendar year, and Nebraska is the No. 1 team in the country playing at home. The only intangible that could help Iowa is divine intervention.

Who has the edge?

By Mike Kelly

COACHES

Frank Solich's institution has not been out of the Top 25 in almost 20 years. The continuity of the coaching staff is something that Nebraska has and, well, Iowa does not. Advantage: Solich.

SPECIAL TEAMS

Solich is afraid of Iowa's special teams and his team allowed two punt returns against Notre Dame. If only all plays involved kicking the ball.

DEFENSE

Iowa cannot run the ball, and Nebraska can't stop the run. Iowa can pass, and Nebraska is one of the best teams in the nation in pass defense. Give the edge to the Huskers.

Men's Tennis

This weekend: The fall season will begin for the Hawkeyes at the Ball State Invitational in Muncie, Ind., today. The 13-team tournament will continue through Sept. 24. Iowa will compete against players from Kentucky, Louisville, Ball State and Western Michigan, among others.

The lineup: With the absence of senior No. 1 singles player Tyler Cleveland, the rest of the team will be counted on to step up and win some big matches. UI senior Jake Wilson will lead the team and will be joined by sophomores Stuart Waters, Pete Rose, Hunter Skogman and Eric Kozlowski. Although the doubles teams are still in the experimental stage, big things are expected from the singles players, nearly all of whom have collegiate experience.

Iowa keys: Wilson, coming off a 10-12 record last spring, is expected to improve. Waters, who posted a 12-25 record last season, should capitalize on his experience last year and give the team a boost while Cleveland skips the fall season. The team will miss the play of junior Petar Mandic, a steady singles player last season, who will miss the tournament because of an injury.

Coach Steve Houghton: "This tournament is our usual beginning to the fall season. It is a good tournament because it has tough competition, and a lot of tennis is played in a short amount of time. I think this will give our players, especially our newcomers, some good experience to start the year."

Player's comment: Wilson said, "Everyone knows Tyler is in California doing his thing, and he's going to come back and be really good. I think we're all stepping it up so that we can play at the same level as Tyler and

This weekend: The Hawks will travel to Greenville, S.C., to kick off their fall season in the Furman Fall Classic, which begins today. The tournament will last through Sept. 24 and feature eight teams, including four highly nationally ranked squads: Clemson, South Carolina, Tennessee and Vanderbilt.

The lineup: Three freshmen and a sophomore transfer student have joined the Hawks, which finished 42nd nationally last season. UI junior Toni Neykova will lead the team in singles competition, while Texas A&M transfer Cassie Haas, senior Erica Johnson and freshman Pascale Veraverbeke of Belgium will fill out spots two through four.

Iowa's keys: Neykova is coming off a solid season in which she was named to the Big Ten All-Conference team. She will be counted on to lead the Hawks' charge in proving they're worthy of the tough competition at the tournament. Solid play from freshmen Jennifer Hodgman and Jody Scheldt is also expected following a successful summer in U.S. Tennis Association tournaments.

Coach Paul Wardlaw: "This is a strong tournament, and we will see some good competition. Vanderbilt, South Carolina and Tennessee are all top-20 teams. This is our first match, so this will be a good indicator where we are and what we need to work on."

Player's comment: Haas said, "We've got nothing to worry about. I think we'll play great, and we'll surprise some people."

St. Cloud State coach reprimanded for prank on player

Randy Hedberg ordered an injured player to pick up a recruit who did not exist.

ST. CLOUD, Minn. (AP) — St. Cloud State head football coach Randy Hedberg was reprimanded and ordered to seek counseling to improve interpersonal skills after he played a prank on an injured player.

School officials acknowledged last week that Hedberg apologized to running back Scott Schmitz for telling him to pick up an Australian football player while he was driving a former St. Cloud State football player to the Minneapolis-St. Paul International Airport. The Australian player did not exist.

Schmitz said in a prepared statement that after he returned from Minneapolis, Hedberg asked him why he "could not find an aborigine at an airport."

St. Cloud State athletic director Morris Kurtz issued a written reprimand dated Sept. 5. The university considers the matter closed.

Schmitz's family was scheduled Friday to meet with university President Roy Saigo.

Kurtz has publicly called the incident a misunderstanding. "An unfortunate misunderstanding did occur between Coach Hedberg and Scott," Kurtz said in a statement issued Thursday. "Scott was assigned by Coach Hedberg to take a football student athlete back to the airport. The misunderstanding occurred as to whether Scott was to pick up another student athlete at the airport."

He said the school wants to help Schmitz rehabilitate his injury and finish his athletic and academic career at St. Cloud State.

In his letter to Hedberg, he called it an "inappropriate joke."

The letter scolded Hedberg for the incident and minor NCAA violations involving Schmitz, a former all-state running back from St. Cloud Technical High School, who has not played this season because of knee surgery. He saw limited action in 1999 before being injured.

The school reported to the NCAA that Schmitz used a university car but has not heard back from the organization.

Kurtz ordered Hedberg and his assistant coaches to attend a special session on NCAA rules Sunday with the university's compliance officer.

More lifters kicked out of Olympic games

Two Bulgarian weightlifters test positive for drugs, allowing the U.S. to win a gold medal.

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — The United States gets its first weightlifting gold medal since 1960 after two more Bulgarian lifters tested positive for banned drugs at the Olympics.

The International Olympic Committee said Friday (Thursday night CDT) that gold medalist Izabela Dragneva — the first women's weightlifting champion in Olympic history — and men's bronze medalist Sevdalin Minchev tested positive for banned diuretics at the Sydney Games.

They were the second and third Bulgarian lifters found with the banned drug in their systems.

The action means Tara Nott of Stilwell, Kan., gets the gold medal in the women's class. She finished second behind Dragneva at 105 pounds.

"They are disqualified," said Jacques Rogge, an IOC executive board member and vice chairman of the medical commission. "It's just like the first case."

Rogge said both tested positive for furosemide, the same diuretic for which another Bulgarian lifter was kicked out. He said the status of the Bulgarian team would be decided by the international federation.

The entire Bulgarian weightlifting team might also be kicked out under federation rules. Bulgarian officials also said they might withdraw the rest of their weightlifters from the games, and that could further change the medal standings, since Bulgarians have three more medals since Dragneva and Minchev competed.

Dragneva won the gold in the women's 105-pound class, ahead of Nott. The American team was told that Nott will get the gold medal, the first for an American lifter since Chuck Vinci won the 123-pound title at the Rome Games 40 years ago.

Women's weightlifting is being held for the first time in Sydney.

The International Olympic Committee's executive board was meeting to formalize the ouster of Dragneva and Minchev.

"There is no uncertainty about the positive case," said Johann Olaf Koss, an athlete member of the IOC and a member of the medical commission, which reviews doping cases. "The medical commission is making its recommendation now. The doping case is very simple."

Besides the latest positive tests, Koss, a speedskating superstar for Norway at the 1994 Winter Games, said the IOC also must consider the overall Bulgarian weightlifting problem.

Many track stars missing

■ Former Hawkeye Anthon Maybank is questioned along with France's Marie Perec.

By Rob Gloster
Associated Press

SYDNEY, Australia — Marie-Jose Perec's bizarre withdrawal and escape from the Olympics added to the long list of track and field stars who never made it to the starting line at the Sydney Games.

Perec, two-time defending champion in the 400 meters, flew out of Australia one day before Friday's first-round heats in her event. She claimed a man forced his way into her Sydney hotel room and threatened her.

Several other top athletes will be sitting out the games because of recent injuries, or ailments that prevented them from qualifying for the Olympics.

Frankie Fredericks, who won silver medals in the 100 and 200 at both the 1992 Barcelona Games and the 1996 Atlanta Games, is out with an Achilles' tendon injury.

Donovan Bailey, defending champion in the 100, was battling the flu Thursday but vowing to try to defend his title. Just getting to Sydney was a major struggle for Bailey, who ruptured his Achilles' tendon two years ago and hurt his hamstring at a meet this summer.

Ludmila Engquist, defending Olympic champion in the 100-meter hurdles, retired in July because she was unable to recover from calf surgery.

Edward Wray/Associated Press

French Olympic sprinter Marie-Jose Perec leaves the Bedok police station in Singapore Thursday.

She made a dramatic return from breast cancer to win the bronze medal at the 1999 World Championships.

C.J. Hunter, world champion in the shot put, is sidelined following arthroscopic knee surgery. His American teammate, Regina Jacobs, who was among the favorites in the women's 1,500, had to withdraw because of a respiratory ailment.

Inger Miller was expected to be the chief threat to Marion Jones' hopes of sweeping the women's 100 and 200 sprints. Miller ranks second in the world to Jones in both events, and finished second to her in those races at the U.S. trials in July.

But Miller severely strained her left hamstring while training earlier this month, and decided this week to drop out of the 100 in hopes of giving her leg more time to heal for next week's 200.

Dieter Baumann, the 1992 Olympic champion at 5,000 meters, has been sus-ended for the Olympics because of a positive drug test — though he's appealing the suspension and still hopes to compete in Sydney.

Also missing is defending Olympic decathlon champion Dan O'Brien, who dropped out of the U.S. trials because of a left foot injury. And though Maurice Greene and Michael Johnson will be in other events in Sydney, they'll be missing from the 200 because they limped out of the final at that event at the U.S. trials.

The reclusive and mysterious Perec, whose need for privacy and security apparently overwhelmed her desire to run, also was the defending champ in the women's 200 — but hadn't even entered that event in Sydney.

After holding out hope all day that Perec somehow would return to the Olympics, the French team announced Thursday that she had withdrawn from the games and had flown to Singapore.

Bennett faces Savon for gold

■ Bennett has gone from prison to the Olympics in two years and is looking for a win.

By Tim Dahlberg
Associated Press

SYDNEY, Australia — Michael Bennett walked out of an Illinois prison with a Bible, some old letters and one lone reminder of seven long years — a small plaque he had gotten for winning his first prison boxing tournament.

If he can somehow find a way to beat fearsome Cuban heavyweight Felix Savon, he could bring home one other boxing keepsake — the Olympic heavyweight gold medal.

Both will hold a special place in Bennett's heart.

"That plaque was the one thing I wanted to hold onto," he said. "The mind is a powerful tool, and sometimes you want to forget. But that is one thing I want to remember."

Bennett began making some more memories Thursday at the Sydney Exhibition Center, where he opened his Olympics by beating a Polish fighter to advance to the heavyweight quarterfinals.

There he'll run smack into Savon, the big Cuban puncher who was winning his second Olympic gold medal in Atlanta about the same time some fellow inmates were teaching Bennett how to box in prison.

"You're going to see two great warriors doing battle," Bennett said of the Tuesday showdown. "I have all the confidence in the world."

That he won wasn't so remarkable. After all, Bennett is a reigning world champ of sorts. What was remarkable is that his first fight outside prison walls took place only two years ago, and he has had fewer than 40 fights since.

"I'm not trying to make up for lost time," the soft-spoken 29-year-old insisted. "I just want to fight the best."

He'll get that in Savon, a two-time Olympic and six-time world champion who dominates amateur boxing so much that International Olympic Committee President Juan Antonio Samaranch dropped by the boxing arena just to see him fight.

Samaranch left before Bennett fought, and it might have been just as well. Against a boxer who ran for two rounds and then held for two more, Bennett was able to get the win without displaying many of his recently acquired skills.

Bennett's story — which he patiently tells in measured tones that reflect his intelligence — is one of a bad decision that cost him dearly.

He was a part-time college student working at United Parcel Service when a friend hatched a plan to rob a Toys R Us after hours. Bennett went along with it, and the two were both later caught and sentenced to prison for armed robbery.

Bennett was sentenced to 26 years, a term that was later reduced to 15 years on appeal. With good behavior, he was out in seven, walking out of the Illinois State Prison in Menard, Ill., on July 28, 1998.

Once free, Bennett walked the streets of Chicago — but only to find a boxing gym to further hone his talents. He discovered the Garfield Park Gym and coach George Hernandez.

Bennett didn't take long to catch on.

He made it to the finals of the 1999 U.S. Amateur after having only nine fights. A few months later he won a world championship in Houston after Savon refused to fight him in the finals as part of a Cuban team protest over scoring in another bout.

Men's b-ball defeats Lithuania

■ Lithuania gives the U.S. men a scare while losing by nine points.

By Jim O'Connell
Associated Press

SYDNEY, Australia — On those rare occasions when a U.S. team stocked with NBA stars gets in a tight game, the same refrain is heard throughout the arena.

"They'll turn it on and win by 20."

That was true every time — until Thursday (Wednesday night CDT).

Lithuania, the team known for tie-dyed warmup shirts and consecutive bronze medals, was within five points of the United States with just under a minute to play and had a chance to cut the lead to three.

The final score was 85-76, but the big news was that a team had been within striking distance of a U.S. team as the clock wound down.

"You have to play the perfect game and you have the perfect game plan and you have to get lucky," Lithuania assistant coach Donn Nelson said. "I think the feeling was that the stars were lined up and if it was ever going to happen it was going to be tonight."

Nelson, who is an assistant coach to his father with the Dallas Mavericks, was the man who designed the game plan Lithuania used.

It wasn't anything extremely complicated. It wasn't anything a lot of other coaches have written on a blackboard a couple of hours before tipoff. It was just that this was the game plan that was good enough to enable Lithuania — a team that no one gave a chance — to keep it close for 39 minutes.

to play, then nothing's going to," Parker said. "You don't ever get down. It's what you do. You go down and try to win a game."

Not having won since last September, Iowa is down, but the guys aren't giving up yet, even if they do face a team that is favored to win by six touchdowns and that defeated the Hawkeyes, 42-7, in Iowa City last year.

"I don't think we're in awe of them or any team," Aaron Kampman said. "They're a good ballclub, but you got to out and give them your best."

According to coach Kirk Ferentz, the Hawkeyes are ready to play against Nebraska.

"The thing that has impressed me about this team is their mental makeup," Ferentz said. "I think we've got too much character, these guys have too much pride, and they've invested too much in this. I can't envision that — not at all."

defenders the Hawkeyes have.

All of the injured are on defensive, causing a lack of depth there. Five Hawkeyes see ample time in the four defensive positions: Michelle Mobily, Suzanne Rivers, Nicole Gatens, Jamie Jorgensen and Stephanie Lynch.

Logan said the back four are playing well together and are showing great confidence lately, but she gives a lot of the credit to sophomore goalkeeper Hendel.

"Liz is playing well. She is making quality saves in every game, and that takes some pressure off of the backs," Logan said.

The Hawkeyes game against Michigan State is scheduled to kick off at 4 p.m. today at the Iowa Recreation Fields.

coach Rita Buck-Crockett feels the preseason has helped ready the Hawkeyes for the rigors of Big Ten play. While both Illinois and Purdue played rather weak non-conference schedules, Iowa played three of the nation's top teams.

"That is one of the reasons we play tough teams in the preseason," Buck-Crockett said. "The freshmen have to see this is who we play every weekend."

The Fighting Illini enter tonight's match with a record of 9-2 and are coming off winning the championship at their own State Farm Illini Classic. Illinois also features one of the top players in the conference, Betsy Spicer. Shadia Haddad is another threat for Illinois, tallying over 20 kills in her last two matches.

"You're not going to see a lot of holes in Illinois," Buck-Crockett said. "They've lost some people, but they have gotten others to step right in."

Purdue comes to Iowa City looking to avenge last season's loss to Iowa in the conference opener. The Boilermakers come to town with a record of 8-4 but have lost their last three matches. Julie Doud leads the Purdue attack with 181 kills on the season.

Buck-Crockett said Illinois and Purdue offer slightly differing styles of play, with Illinois being bigger and stronger while Purdue uses its quickness. Buck-Crockett said the Hawkeyes match up well against the two, blending power and quickness with excellent blocking.

While she and her staff are still determining Iowa's starting lineup, Buck-Crockett said everyone on the team has healed and will be available this weekend.

The team's outstanding performance at the Hawkeye Invitational as well as the support of Iowa fans has Buck-Crockett excited about opening the conference schedule at home.

"Everything we do," said Buck-Crockett, "we do here on this floor."

"The girls have shown they like playing here, and they're ready."

the Hawks Nest is up and running Nov. 19 at our home opener," Alford said. "I hope it's organized because there are more students interested."

This year's preliminary numbers indicate 650 students have already signed up and paid, doubling last year's total. One of the reasons Alford said he came to Iowa was to help organize the fan base, especially the student section. Entering just his second season, even he is surprised at the pace at which the Hawks Nest has grown.

"We hope the product we put out this year is better than last year," he said. "Duke seats 10,000 people, and you always hear people talk about their student section. Carver (Arena) seats 15,500, so we have access to get even more students in there."

Student season-ticket sales have ended, but those students with tickets can still register for the Hawks Nest. Admission is $8 for those with a UI Alumni Association membership and $16 for all others. The deadline to sign-up is Sept. 29 in the Alumni Association office.

Barnard said the Hawks Nest is still designing a logo for the shirts but plans to stick with gold as the primary color.

What if Alford and his team take the floor Nov. 19 and see thousands dressed in gold?

"That would not be a bad problem," he said.

Golfers look to take care of business

The tournament will give local golf enthusiasts a rare chance to head down to Melrose Avenue and check out the college game. The action will start at 8:30 a.m. Saturday and will run all day as teams complete 36 holes. The final 18 holes began Sunday at 8:30 a.m.

Cincinnati, Marquette, Northern Illinois and Northern Iowa headline the 12-team field, but there is no mistaking that the Hawkeyes believe the tournament is theirs for the taking.

"We got to take care of business at home," Stutzman said. "Being at Finkbine, it'll be nice to have friends around and nice to not have to travel."

Stutzman said that being at home in golf is even more of an advantage than in other sports, such as football. While all football fields have 100 yards and two end zones, each golf course is unique. This adds to the reason that he is confident this weekend could break the winning drought.

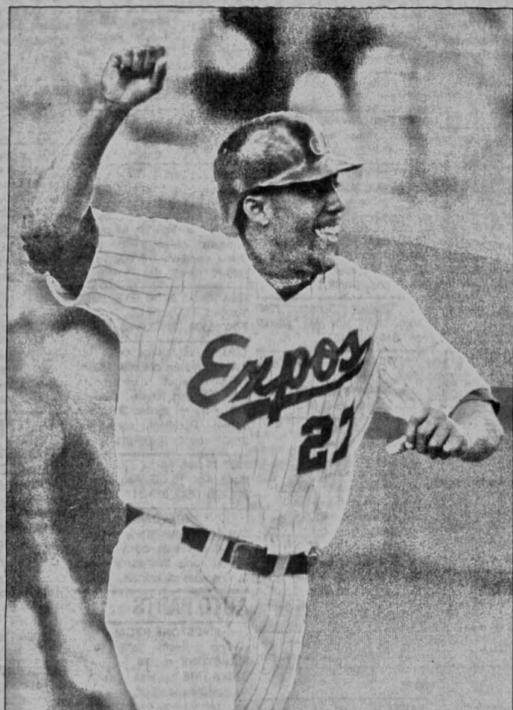

"We haven't won in four years, and if we can win here, it would be a huge confidence-booster and propel us to other heights," he said.

The UNI Classic on Sept. 17, 1996, was the last time the Hawkeyes walked off the course as champions. While their losses have not been a huge deal, the team would like to see the word "Iowa" on top of the leaderboard.

"When we had our meeting at the start of the year to set goals, we had guys say, let's win three or four times," Anderson said. "I told them fine, but let's win one first."

Montreal Expos' Vladimir Guerrero pumps his fist after hitting a home run against Florida Marlins' pitcher A.J. Burnett, his 43rd of the season, during the fifth inning of NL action in Montreal Thursday.

Red Sox, Indians split wins in double header

Associated Press

BOSTON — One big inning didn't produce a win for the Cleveland Indians in Thursday's opener. They tried again in the second game and that time, it worked.

Cleveland scored six runs in the sixth inning and beat the Red Sox, 8-5, in the second game of a day-night double-header after wasting a seven-run, first-inning lead in the opener and losing, 9-8.

The Indians took a half-game lead in the AL wild card race over Oakland, which played at Seattle. Toronto is 2½ games back in third, and the Red Sox dropped four games back with nine remaining.

Chuck Finley (14-11) won for the fourth time in five starts, allowing three runs and nine hits in seven innings, and Russell Branyan and Kenny Lofton backed him with two RBIs each.

Tim Wakefield (6-10) allowed six runs — five earned — and eight hits in 5½ innings. Boston tried to rally, scoring twice in the ninth, but fell short and went 2-3 in the series.

Astros 7, Cardinals 5

ST. LOUIS — A day after the Cardinals clinched the NL Central, rookie Tony McKnight allowed two earned runs in 6½ innings to lead the Houston Astros over St. Louis 7-5 Thursday.

Cardinals manager Tony La Russa didn't start Jim Edmonds and three other regulars.

Mark McGwire flied out against Marc Valdes as a pinch hitter with two on in the eighth and is 3-for-9 with two homers since returning from the disabled list.

Expos 10, Marlins 3

MONTREAL — Vladimir Guerrero set a Montreal record with his 43rd home run and Orlando Cabrera matched his career high with five RBIs Thursday, leading the Expos to a 10-3 win over the Florida Marlins.

Guerrero hopped and pumped his right fist in the air as he reached first base, his face breaking into a wide smile following his fifth-inning homer off A.J. Burnett (2-7).

Guerrero, who has hit six homers in the past five games, hit 42 last year.

Royals 8, Angels 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Johnny Damon broke out of a slump with three hits and two RBIs as the Kansas City Royals beat the Anaheim Angels, 8-3, Thursday night.

Damon, who had been hitless in 13 at-bats, hit an RBI single to start a five-run third inning for the Royals. His triple in the eighth made it, 7-3.

Blue Jays 3, Yankees 1

TORONTO — David Wells became the majors' first 20-game winner, pitching a five-bitter to send the New York Yankees to their fifth straight loss, 3-1, to the Toronto Blue Jays on Thursday night.

Wells (20-6), 37 years, 124 days, failed in his first three attempts to reach the milestone before becoming the second oldest pitcher to win 20 games for the first time.

Rockies 13, Padres 4

DENVER — Kevin Jarvis, making his first start since July 27, gave up one hit in six innings and retired his final 18 batters Thursday as the Colorado Rockies beat the San Diego Padres 13-4.

Todd Helton, Todd Hollandsworth and Terry Shumpert homered to help the Rockies end their five-game losing streak.

Phillies 6, Mets 5

PHILADELPHIA — Omar Daal didn't disappoint Brian Kingman, even though he had nothing to show for a strong outing.

Daal allowed one run over six innings as he avoided becoming the first 20-game loser in 19 years, and Pat Burrell drove in the winning run with a bases-loaded single in the ninth as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the New York Mets, 6-5, Thursday night.

Travis Lee hit his first homer as a Phillie and Bobby Abreu also homered as Philadelphia wasted a 5-1 lead, then recovered to defeat the Mets for the seventh time in 10 games this season. New York dropped to 7-13 in September.
