UI student travels to Boston to protest debates

Students from around the nation will protest the exclusion of Green Party candidate Ralph Nader.

By Jesse Elliott
The Daily Iowan

UI senior Joannes Pool made the 20-hour trek to Boston on Sept. 30 to join Green Party supporters from across the nation in protesting the exclusion of Ralph Nader from tonight's presidential debates.

Pool will join an expected 1,000 participants in tonight's demonstration at the University of Massachusetts campus, the site of the presidential debate between Vice President Al Gore and Texas Gov. George W. Bush.

Nader and Reform Party candidate Pat Buchanan received 3 percent support (or less) in recent national polls — short of the 15 percent mark required by the bipartisan Commission on Presidential Debates, the event's sponsor.

These same polls, however, show that a third or more would like to see a four-way debate, with Buchanan and Nader joining Gore and Bush.

Protesters in Boston promise to raise a ruckus, with one group threatening to dump televisions into Boston Harbor.

"Protests in the United States and around the world have really been making a difference in the last year," Pool said in a phone interview from Boston. "I wanted to be a part of that difference, to be a part of something national and something that has an effect."

Officials have shut down the UMass campus and militarized it for the nationally televised debates, Pool said. The Secret Service asked the university to cancel its classes today, and they erected orange plastic fencing in the streets.

While neither Nader nor Buchanan plans to crash Tuesday night's event, both will make themselves available to reporters before, during and after to provide their analyses.

Pool's companion on the journey to Boston was Derek Moore, a first-year student in a Kansas City community college. Students from Ohio, Washington state and many East Coast states also traveled to Boston to join Nader supporters at the University of Massachusetts.

Monday night, Pool met with other activists from 4-9 p.m. to

Homecoming 2000 court searches for diversity

Brett Roseman/The Daily Iowan

UI juniors Amber Lichtl and Kelly Lavery hang a Homecoming 2000 banner in the window of the Airliner Monday. Lavery, who is the Homecoming 2000 Sweepstakes director, said the downtown banner making was open to all UI student organizations and was an opportunity to get the different groups together to meet each other.

Once a bastion of the Greek system, the Homecoming court is now more representative of the campus.

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

The diversity of the 2000 UI Homecoming Court is evident: One member is a religious enthusiast from a town of approximately 30 people, another is aspiring to teach history in South America next year.

And the other six have found their own niches at the UI and in life as well.

The UI Homecoming Commission pushed to have a more diverse Homecoming court this year, and it is pleased with the result.

Traditionally at the UI, fraternities and sororities are most involved during Homecoming week activities, but only four of the eight people on the court this year are Greek.

"We did a lot of promoting to get a sample of everyone on campus — not just the Greeks," said Michelle Flores, the Homecoming Commission's special events director.

"That half of the court is not in the Greek system shows that we accomplished that."

Last year, some UI students complained to UI Student Government leaders about Greek dominance on the court — five members of the court were in fraternities or sororities. The UISG then passed a resolution encouraging a wider array of people to apply.

While this year's group is diverse, the females on the court have at least one similarity: All four are either members of UISG or have been in the past.

Thirty-one females applied to be Homecoming queen; eight males applied to be king. The five judges narrowed down the female applications to the 10 best based on leadership, service and scholarship. Those 10 females and the eight males were interviewed last week, with those scoring highest being named members of the court.

Final interviews

Wednesday will determine the winners. Each will be asked the same question, and the highest scoring male and female will win.

The king and queen will be announced at the pep rally on the Pentacrest Friday around 8 p.m.

Also to be announced at the pep rally is the winner of the best Homecoming banner to follow the theme "2000 Reasons to be a Hawkeye," Flores said. Any UI student group was welcome to participate in the contest.

Banners were due early last week and judged on Wednesday for creativity, artistic ability, and how well they tied to the theme, Flores said.

M.B.A. program third quickest in payback

Business school administrators and students are pleased with the Business Week survey.

By Anne Webbeking
The Daily Iowan

Students in the UI Masters of Business Administration program receive the third-quickest payback on their investment among 82 M.B.A. programs studied, says a recent report by Business Week magazine.

The report, which comes out every two years, also ranked the UI in the top 50 out of the programs that were surveyed — 67 U.S. schools and 15 from around the world.

The first 30 schools were ranked by specific number; the next 20, including the UI, were not ranked.

While the top-50 ranking was the same as two years ago, the ranking of third was new for the UI, said Gary Gaeth, the associate dean of the School of Management.

He credits the new ranking to UI graduates' continually increasing salaries because the school is placing its students in higher-level positions.

The ranking is also based on the UI's low tuition rate — cheapest of among Big Ten schools — and the low cost of living in Iowa City, in addition to the pay graduates receive, an average of $70,000 after getting their degrees.

It takes a UI M.B.A. graduate an average of 3.7 years to make up the lost salary and the cost of tuition. Brigham Young University in Utah had the best return rate — 3.5 years.

UI first-year M.B.A. candidate Jennifer Brophy came to the UI for these reasons as well as for the excellent instructors.

"I've been looking at M.B.A. schools for three years. Iowa was the best overall package," she said.

Brophy, who worked for three years after getting a communications degree from the UI, said she came back in hopes of doubling, if not tripling, her earnings after graduation. She hopes to work for either Kraft or Proctor &

Judges grill lawyers about Napster ruling

An appellate court decision could come at any time, observers say.

By Ron Harris
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — A federal appellate judge told a lawyer for the recording industry Monday that demands for Napster Inc. to scale back or shut down its music-sharing service might be a tall order considering the nebulous nature of the Internet.

"How are they supposed to have knowledge of what comes off of some kid's computer in Hackensack, N.J., to a user in Guam?" 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Robert Beezer told Russell Frackman, a lawyer representing the Recording Industry

Association of America.

Frackman said the answer may reside in the ability of Napster to take copyrighted song titles and redesign its popular service so as not to transmit those files.

The exchange came during a critical hearing in the ongoing legal battle between Napster and the music industry. The industry group claims that Napster contributes to copyright infringement by allowing its purported 32 million users to download music directly from each others' computers.

The recording industry considers the case pivotal in its battle against online piracy.

Attorneys for each side had 20 minutes to make their case Monday. The three-judge appeals panel adjourned with-

Council gives drinking policies priority over smoking issue

The council will formally discuss possible steps concerning downtown drinking within a month.

By Megan Eckhardt
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City City Council decided at a work session Monday night to put a smoke-free restaurant ordinance on hold in order to concentrate on drinking downtown.

The council voted unanimously to pursue a smoke-free restaurant ordinance in the future, but the councilors agreed that the city attorney's office did not have the manpower to simultaneously examine both smoke-free and alcohol ordinances.

"I do believe that alcohol is a more immediate problem —

(the smoke-free ordinance is) not less of a problem, just less immediate," said Mayor Ernie Lehman.

The council is expected to include the drinking issue on its public agenda within the next month.

The goal of the proposed alcohol ordinance is to reduce the amount of alcohol distributed to intoxicated and underage persons. The ordinance may ban some drink specials and out-of-sight sales, and put a minimum price on alcoholic beverages.

Administrative actions, or civil suits, would be used to prosecute an establishment that violates underage or excessive-drinking laws. If a set amount of evidence is compiled, it would be brought against the establishment and discussed at a public hearing.

Administrative penalties that comply with state codes would be issued, including fines in a graduated system and suspension of licenses, said City Attorney Eleanor Dilkes.

Evidence would be gathered by asking intoxicated persons questions, concerning what establishment they were at

County's early voting doubled since '96

■ The auditor's office says 50-75 early voters have been coming in each day since Sept. 28.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

A competitive presidential race, a growing familiarity with early voting and technological advances have all contributed to the highest early voting rate ever in the county, said Johnson County Auditor Tom Slockett.

In its first week, early voting and ballot requests in Johnson County are double what they were in the 1996 general election and triple the count in 1992.

The auditor's office has seen a steady stream of 50 to 75 early voters daily since Sept. 28, said Kathy Elliott, an elections clerk. Early voting will continue until Nov. 6, the day before Election Day.

"There's something going all the time," Elliott said. "The phones are ringing, people are calling to see how they can get an absentee ballot, and people are coming in to register and vote."

More than 2,325 Johnson County voters — 3.42 percent of the county's registered voters — have either requested ballots by mail or voted in person at the auditor's office, 913 S. Dubuque St., or at a satellite voting site. Ten percent of the mail-in ballots have been returned.

"It reflects a high interest in the election and will probably reflect the overall turnout," Slockett said.

With George W. Bush and Vice President Al Gore in a close race, voters care more about the outcome of the Nov. 7 election, said UI senior Ken Wingert, a campaign manager for the Johnson County Republicans.

"It's a dead heat in Iowa, and it's a dead heat nationally, so people are paying more attention," he said.

Iowa City resident Tom Nicknisch and his wife, Barbara Nicknisch, stopped by the auditor's office Monday evening to cast their votes early because of an upcoming vacation. They found it convenient and easy but said they still prefer voting on Election Day.

"I enjoy voting on Election Day," Tom Nicknisch said. "I would only do this if I were going out of town."

By law, all ballots are sealed until election night. Although the number of Democratic voters who requested a ballot is five times greater than the number of Republican requests, Slockett said, it is too early to make any predictions.

To attract younger voters, satellite voting stations will be available at the IMU Oct. 24-27 and Nov. 3 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and at the UI Boyd Law Building from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Oct. 25.

"No other auditor makes early voting easier for college students in the state," said UI freshman Mayrose Wegmann, a volunteer with Johnson County Democrats.

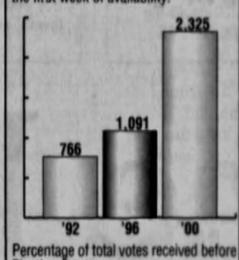

Other satellite stations will be available Oct. 20 through Nov. 6 at various locations throughout Iowa City and Johnson County.

For more information about satellite sites and early voting, visit the Johnson County auditor's Web site at www.jcauditor.com.

City officials defend new-jail decision

■ The county supervisors hold a meeting to inform voters about the proposed jail.

By Mary Sedor
The Daily Iowan

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors hosted an informal meeting Monday designed to answer questions local voters have about the proposed $20 million jail.

"Voters need to know everything we do to make a decision on where to house inmates," Supervisor Mike Lehman said.

On July 13, the supervisors approved a recommendation from the jail steering committee to approve the new jail. Voters will make the final decision in the Nov. 7 election on whether the county should build the jail, using bonds to fund the project.

Sheriff Robert Carpenter presented the audience with a brief history of the jail issue, saying the county needed a new jail as early as 1986.

The Iowa Department of Corrections notified supervisors in January that the jail was overcrowded, he said. If the overcrowding is not alleviated, Johnson County will be forced to transport inmates to neighboring jails. Currently, the jail averages 98.7 inmates daily, six more than capacity.

David Maupin, a member of the Jail Overcrowding Study/Steering/Site Selection committee, also presented his committee's findings to the board.

"The conclusion we reached after looking through all the facts and figures is that people are being put in jail for things they weren't put in jail for in the past," he said. "It was a question of mathematics."

If the jail is not built, Maupin said, it will cost approximately $65 per day to transport inmates to a jail that can house them. The jail bond would provide a set amount of money residents that would pay, whereas transferring the prisoners would lead to an increase, he said.

Some citizens feel that the supervisors are not presenting the entire issue.

Carol deProse, a member of the Citizens for Alternatives to the New Jail who attended the meeting, said she felt the supervisors were "selling their opinions to the public"; they should instead ask the public what it thinks about the jail decision.

"They aren't really hearing any other side than their own, and therefore they are unresponsive to the public voice," deProse said.

Bar urges re-election of most judges

■ Iowans will have the opportunity to vote for or against the state's justices.

By Erica Driskell
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa Bar Association recommended Monday that voters retain 91 percent of the state's 87 judges in a survey of bar members.

Every two years the plebiscite, a survey completed by attorneys in the bar association, is released to let voters know the bar's recommendations. The survey asks members whether the various state judges — Supreme Court, the Court of Appeals, district, district associate and associate juvenile courts — should be retained, said Joe Holland, the president-elect of the bar association.

Around one-third of the judges are up for retention every two years, he said. This year, two Supreme Court justices and four Court of Appeals, 46 district, and 35 district associate and associate juvenile judges are on the ballot. Voters will have the opportunity to vote for or against Supreme Court justices, Court of Appeals judges and their own local judges.

In the 6th District, which encompasses Johnson County and five surrounding counties, 12 judges are up for retention. The bar recommended that voters re-elect all of them.

In previous years, the survey asked attorneys to answer the fundamental question of whether judges should be retained with a simple yes or no. This year, the survey has expanded, asking attorneys 11 questions that require them to rate various judicial qualities, Holland said.

This was done in order to give the public better information about the judges and allow the judges to receive feedback in order to make improvements, he said.

"Most people don't have that much interaction with judges," Holland said. "Lawyers do have that interaction and can give better guidance to the public."

Historically speaking, most judges in Iowa are retained, said Donn Stanley, a spokesman for the Iowa secretary of State.

"The Iowa bench has a pretty good reputation," he said.

Information from sources other than the plebiscite about judges up for retention is available but not easily attainable, said Carroll Edmondson, the 6th District court administrator.

Voters are able to look at reversal rates among judges' rulings, but many times that number is deceptive because the Iowa Supreme Court has the ability to reverse the Court of Appeals reversal, which reverts the decision back to the judge's initial ruling, Holland said. A judge also rules on issues that have not been previously addressed in Iowa, meaning that no legal precedence can be followed, Edmondson said.

"It's hard when there is no legal guidance. They do their best; sometimes, the Appellate Court agrees," he said.

Anyone interested in learning of the plebiscite survey results can visit www.iowabar.org/main.nsf, Holland said.

I.C. to undergo 'culture' shock

■ The Union Bar says Boy George and Culture Club are coming to town.

By Kellie Doyle
The Daily Iowan

The Union Bar's '80s Night will be in full force on Oct. 11, as Boy George and Culture Club bring back the sound that made them a success more than a decade ago.

The show at 121 E. College St. will begin at 7:30 p.m. Tickets can be purchased at Record Collector, 125 E. Washington St., beginning today at 2 p.m., or on the Internet at www.ticketweb.com starting at 10 a.m.

The Union Bar's talent buyer, Anthony Crissie, was speaking with an agent from the William Morris agency over the weekend when the agent mentioned booking the group. "He informed me of an available date, and I jumped right on it," he said. "I think it's going to be a lot of fun."

'80s music and other "surprises" provided by the Union will lead up to the concert because there is no opening act scheduled, Crissie said.

The band will take the stage, playing such hits as 'Do You Really Wanna Hurt Me' and 'Karma Chameleon,' he said. "I think the KRUI '80s show goes very well, and I know '80s music appeals to a wide variety of people," Crissie said.

Everyone performing with the band will be an original member, he said. "Boy George will be here," Crissie said. "It's a sure deal."

Culture Club is the biggest band the Union Bar has ever had a confirmed booking for, and the performance will be a once-in-a-life-time experience, he said. "It's not just a concert — it's a show," he said.

After first hearing that Boy George and Culture Club were coming to Iowa City, some were eager, while others were confused.

"I didn't even know he was still alive," said UI graduate student Kris Cebulla, who does not plan to attend the concert. "But I used to listen to him years ago." Although UI senior Melissa Kruse said she thinks Boy George is a little unusual, she said she would like to go.

"Maybe I'd go out of curiosity, just to see if they sound like they used to," she said. "I saw the video for 'Karma Chameleon' once, and it was just really strange."

UI freshman Scott Tydell was more enthusiastic about the band's appearance.

"He's a crazy guy, and because the Union is one of the craziest places to be — why not?" he said.

For others, '80s music, particularly Culture Club music, just doesn't do it for them.

"I was never much into '80s music," UI senior Corey Hopkins said. "Not Boy George '80s music, anyway."

DI reporter Kellie Doyle can be reached at kellie-doyle@uiowa.edu

Decorah is picture-perfect, institute says

■ The northeast Iowa town wins decorative honors in a nationwide contest.

Associated Press

DECORAH, Iowa — This picturesque town of 8,100 people in northeast Iowa is being honored as "the prettiest painted place in the Great Plains," according to the Paint Quality Institute.

"We felt our community had a good chance of winning this honor," said Jessica Solum, the executive director of the Decorah Area Chamber of Commerce.

She said her hopes were raised after showing judges around town.

"They did seem to be very impressed with our community," she said. "We had a concentration of very beautifully painted houses and businesses."

The institute sent applications to 15,000 towns across the nation earlier this year. The Chamber of Commerce took 30 slides of buildings and homes throughout the community and submitted them.

Among the 15,000 applications, 120 towns, cities, neighborhoods and historic districts were nominated.

Judges from Better Homes and Gardens, Architecture, Victorian Homes and American Painting Contractor magazines reviewed the slides and chose three finalists in each of nine regions.

The judges then took to the road in June.

"One of the reasons Decorah stood out from the rest of the finalists was it had a high concentration of very attractively painted homes," Debbie Zimmer, a decorative painting consultant with paint institute, told the Decorah Journal. "Decorah had a nice mix of residential and commercial buildings. I think that fact really separated the community as the 'prettiest painted place.'"

Decorah beat out Grinnell, Iowa, and Crete, Neb., in its division.

Already the news has generated a number of calls to the Chamber of Commerce about the town's architecture and tours of neighborhoods, Solum said.

The other regional winners were Norwich, Conn., Lake Charles, La., Telluride, Colo., Cape May, N.J., Marshall, Mich., Warrenton, Va., and Eureka and Exeter, Calif.

Oelwein middle school goes geothermal for energy

■ The school taps the Earth's energy, taking advantage of the subsoil's constant temperature.

Associated Press

OELWEIN, Iowa — Oelwein Middle School is using geothermal energy as a way to save $7,500 each year, and Alliant Energy is promoting the school's program as an alternative energy source.

Administrators chose geothermal energy when the time came this summer to replace a dozen leaking heating and cooling units at the school.

"I thought it would be efficient and very cost-effective. It's really something else," said Oelwein School Board member Tim Conrey, a customer service representative for Alliant, who suggested the option.

The geothermal system was financed through an $850,000 low-interest loan from the Department of Natural Resources Iowa Energy Bank Program. The loan also paid for the removal of the rooftop units and repair of damaged portions of the roof.

School officials say installing the new system was a better option for the district, which was faced with replacing the school's 12 rooftop units for $1.2 million.

At the heart of geothermal energy is the constant 50-degree temperature of subsoil. It works like this:

An environmentally safe antifreeze solution, carried in plastic pipes, is pumped through a well field where it absorbs that 50-degree temperature. The antifreeze is carried back to the school where it is pumped to 54 above-ceiling units, which transfer the liquid's heat to room air. During the summer, the flow is reversed to cool the school.

Principal John Amick said each classroom has a thermostat that controls that room's temperature to within a fraction of a degree — an improvement on the former rooftop units, which lacked room controls.

STATE BRIEF

Agents find fewer meth labs, but problem is spreading

DES MOINES (AP) — Iowa is finding fewer methamphetamine labs, but the problem is spreading, most recently to northwest Iowa.

Clay County sheriff's officials said they didn't find their first meth lab until this year, the Des Moines Register reported in a copyright story in Monday's editions.

The number is already up to several dozen, Chief Deputy Dennis Linn said. Deputies are finding drug-making equipment "dumped in remote areas, off bridges, in parks and timber areas," he said.

In Des Moines, 74 meth labs and dump sites have been found this year, less than half the 1999 total, the newspaper said. Statewide, the number this year is 428. For all of 1999, it was 803.

State agents wonder if there are fewer labs because so many drug makers are in jail, or if they're getting smarter.

The number of inmates behind bars for drug crimes in Iowa has more than doubled in the last five years, according to a recent report.

A study by the Iowa Division of Criminal and Juvenile Justice Planning said Iowa has 1,611 inmates classified as drug offenders. That's up 108 percent from 1995.

Jerry Nelson, the special agent in charge of the Iowa Division of Narcotics Enforcement, said meth makers will be indoors as the weather gets colder. He expects citizens will smell the results, and reports of strange odors will rise.

Strikes paralyze Belgrade

■ Slobodan Milosevic blasts the Serb opposition, calling it a Western puppet.

By Dusan Stojanovic
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — In his first address to the nation since a disputed election, Slobodan Milosevic Monday branded his opponents as puppets of the West. A wave of unrest aimed at driving him from power swept Yugoslavia, and the government responded by arresting dozens of strike leaders.

The general strike and road blockades brought Yugoslavia to a virtual halt in the most serious challenge yet to Milosevic's 13-year rule. Even the government weather bureau said it would stop issuing forecasts until he concedes defeat in the Sept. 24 presidential election.

In at least two towns, protesters broke into television stations, which are among the pillars of the Milosevic regime.

Students wave leaflets reading "He's Finished," referring to Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic, while they march through downtown Belgrade Monday.

The strikes even spread to Milosevic's birthplace, Pozarevac, where approximately 20,000 protesters blocked roads and stopped public services, the independent Beta news agency said.

A spokesman for the opposition coalition, Cedomir Jovanovic, reported several incidents including a clash with police in Surcin, 12 miles west of Belgrade, in which four people were injured.

Dozens of strike leaders were arrested, opposition officials said. The opposition called for people to converge on the capital Thursday in a push to drive Milosevic from power.

Vojislav Kostunica, the opposition leader who says he won the election outright, told reporters "what is happening now is a revolution — a peaceful, nonviolent, wise, civilized, quiet and smart democratic revolution."

Milosevic has admitted finishing second to Kostunica and called a runoff for Oct. 8. But in his televised speech, he accused his opponents of seeking to plunge the country into a "foreign occupation" in which "Yugoslavia will inevitably break up."

Riots rage across West Bank

■ Israel uses tanks and gunships, and Palestinians counter with rocks and rifles, as the death toll passes 50.

By Laura King
Associated Press

RAMALLAH, West Bank — Israeli troops rolled out tanks in a show of force and sent helicopter gunships aloft Monday to battle Palestinians wielding rocks and automatic rifles, as riots raged through the West Bank and Gaza Strip, leaving scarcely a Palestinian town or village untouched.

The spiraling violence, now in its fifth day, has killed at least 51 people and injured more than 1,000 — nearly all Palestinian — and it has left hopes for a Mideast peace accord in tatters. Both sides acknowledge that talking about peace was becoming untenable with a full-scale war being waged in the streets.

In an urgent bid to restore calm, U.S. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright announced she would meet Wednesday in Paris with Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat.

The two sides "must find a way ... to end the current psychology of confrontation and begin to restore the psychology of peacemaking," Albright said in a statement Monday.

Even as pleas for restraint poured in from around the world, the climbing casualty count fueled Palestinian fury and spurred revenge attacks against Israeli civilians, particularly Jewish settlers.

On the road to the Jewish settlement of Ariel in the West Bank, a 24-year-old Israeli was shot and killed — reportedly when he stopped to change a tire. A school bus on its way to the Jewish settlement of Shiloh came under fire, but no one was injured.

Fighting also boiled over into Arab towns in Israel proper, rattling the nerves of Israelis who have long feared an intifada, or uprising, by Arab citizens of the Jewish state. Eight Israeli Arabs were killed in Monday's clashes alone.

Police and Arab rioters fought a three-hour battle in the alleyways of the Israeli town of Akko. Rioters trashed shops in the Israeli Arab town of Nazareth, Jesus' boyhood home. In the coastal city of Haifa — often cited as a model of harmonious coexistence of Jews and Muslims — Israeli Arabs staged a general strike in sympathy with their Palestinian brethren.

The Palestinian lands, though, remained the epicenter of violence, with a shifting battlefield that hopscotched from north to south and back again. In the West Bank and Gaza, Israeli soldiers fought dozens of running battles — many with live ammunition — with Palestinian youths wielding stones and firebombs.

U.N. appeals for Asian flood relief

■ Tens of millions are homeless in the wake of flooding in Southeast Asia and the Indian subcontinent.

By Chris Decherd
Associated Press

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia — The United Nations Monday issued an appeal for $10.7 million to aid flood victims in Cambodia, while a U.N. team assessed the damage from Vietnam's worst flooding in decades.

Parts of Vietnam, Cambodia, Thailand and Laos have been devastated by floods along the Mekong River and its tributaries that affect more than 6.5 million people. Vast areas of rice paddies have been destroyed, and at least 470 people have died — 184 in Cambodia, 224 in Vietnam, 47 in Thailand and 15 in Laos.

Meanwhile, in India and Bangladesh, monsoon rains and the unexpected release of waters from man-made reservoirs claimed more than 1,000 lives and left 20 million people either marooned or homeless. U.N. teams also were assessing the destruction there.

The United Nations said the $10.7 million it seeks for Cambodia would assist 850,000 of the most vulnerable flood victims.

"We've got to act quickly," said Monika Midel, the Cambodia director of the U.N.'s World Food Program. "We've got to go out, and find the hungry, and deliver rice to them."

According to Cambodian government figures cited by the United Nations, the flooding has affected 2.2 million Cambodians — about one-fifth of the country's population. Many flood victims have lost all or most of the year's primary rice crop.

The aid would help provide food, clean water, rice seed, shelter, medicine and health care over a six-month period. Funds also have been allocated for repairing roads and irrigation and drainage systems.

Peou Samy, the secretary-general of the government's disaster-management team, said his committee's rice stocks have been depleted despite substantial donations by private businessmen.

"Now, we are relying on the U.N. for rice," Peou Samy said.

Some 35,000 Vietnamese families have been evacuated while an additional 27,000 still need to be moved to higher ground, said Do Ngoc Thien, the deputy director of the Flood and Storm Control Department. More than 700,000 homes have been inundated, he said.

Northwestern College of Chiropractic has earned an international reputation as an innovative leader in chiropractic education, scientific research and patient care. The College is the foundation of the newly created Northwestern Health Sciences University, which offers the widest array of choices in natural health care education in the United States. The success of students at Northwestern College of Chiropractic is the result of a rigorous academic curriculum, limited enrollment, industry-leading clinical education programs, and easy access to superior learning facilities. The recent addition of a pioneering master's-level program in integrative health and wellness has moved Northwestern to the forefront of natural health care education.

Here's what you can expect at Career Day 2000:

- Learn about the chiropractic profession.
- Meet Northwestern faculty, staff and students.
- Tour our campus and visit science and chiropractic methods laboratories and one of our seven outpatient clinics.
- Receive admissions and financial aid information.
- Learn about our pioneering master's-level courses in integrative health and wellness.
- Enjoy a complimentary lunch.

Registration deadline is Oct. 6, 2000.

Coming in from the margins

■ Ana Castillo will read from her latest novel, Peel My Love Like an Onion, tonight at Prairie Lights.

By Kristen Gast
The Daily Iowan

Ana Castillo has been proving herself as a force in Chicana literature since she started writing in the 1970s. It is a role she has had to define on her own.

"Twenty-seven years ago, nobody was interested in poetry addressing Latinos. We were basically preaching to the choir," she said. "Now that I have enough exposure, it's not like that. As a brown woman, it is important for me to make my characters beautiful brown women because I don't see that going on enough."

Her new novel, Peel My Love Like an Onion, continues a dignified portrayal of working-class women of color. Castillo will read from the book today at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St., at 8 p.m.

The book follows Carmen "la Coja" Santos, a flamenco dancer with a leg crippled from polio, through a cultural and emotional minefield as she copes with lost loves and restrictive social codes.

The book, Castillo said, deals with "gender within traditional culture, but her disadvantage, her marginalization, has as much to do with her color and coming from a working class background."

"She would never want anyone to feel sorry for her. She does not see herself as being a pitiful individual. She is someone who lands on her feet, someone with integrity."

Politics of identity, sex, sexuality and culture are intertwined throughout all of Castillo's work. When she was in college and was first beginning to take her writing seriously, she was also involved with community activism. She worked with Latino groups in Chicago, primarily working on arts-out-reach projects.

"I think anyone who says their work is not political is being foolish," she said. "If you don't give a damn, that shows too, and it's a political conviction."

Lately, though, Castillo's political criticisms have been aimed more at the American political system as a whole than at any single issue.

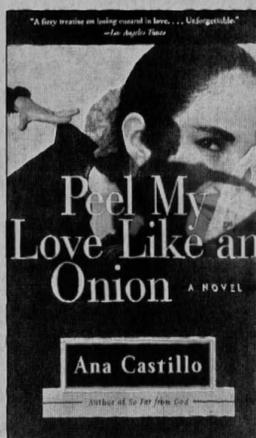

"What's really disturbing for me in the last couple elections is that both parties have moved so far to the center that I can't tell which is which. As someone of Mexican background, I can't help but look around and say, 'How is this affecting people from my background?'"

The answer, she says, is that the effects have not been positive.

"I pay through my ears for health care," she said. "And what's even more disturbing is that for the last couple of elections, we started to see 'Which is the lesser of the two evils?' not, 'Which of these is best for us?'"

These sorts of issues inspired Castillo to start concentrating on writing, and she counts among her influences "anybody that was a person of color or who understood being on the margins."

Over the course of her career, Castillo has published poetry, fiction, essays and a children's book. She credits her versatility to her non-traditional writing background. Castillo holds a bachelor of arts in art education, a master's degree in Latin American/Caribbean studies and a Ph.D. in American studies.

"This is the only country I know of where you go and get a degree to be a writer. Traditionally and historically, you become a writer if you feel you have something to say. The Latin American background I went for was very important because it taught me how to think and analyze."

The book will soon be published in Spanish under the name Carmen la Coja.

The art of listening very slowly

■ Radiohead follows its landmark OK Computer with Kid A.

By David Bauder
Associated Press

NEW YORK — For nearly an hour recently, the video channel MTV2 aired a film of something many viewers had probably never seen: a record album spinning on a turntable, the needle inching toward the center.

To accompany the visual, MTV2 played Kid A, a new album by the rock band Radiohead that will arrive in stores today. Not just one song, but 10 of them. The whole album.

Approximately a dozen radio stations are also playing the album from start to finish.

The approach, a quaint throwback to the days of giant headphones and shag carpets, is a sign of respect for Radiohead and, perhaps, of a backlash in the music industry against short attention spans and the dominance of hit singles.

Radiohead is encouraging listeners to treat the album as a unified piece of art. It isn't releasing a single or making a video to accompany any of the songs.

"We don't have time like we used to," said Chris Hufford, Radiohead's manager. "There are certain things that are great for moving fast. But Radiohead is all about taking things slowly and getting people into it slowly."

The British band's last album, OK Computer, was critically hailed as a rock landmark and, without the benefit of a hit single, sold 1.7 million copies. This week's release of the follow-up has been eagerly awaited.

Led by the eerily beautiful voice of Thom Yorke and vaguely reminiscent of Pink Floyd, Radiohead's music can sound strange yet rewards repeated listening. Rolling Stone describes Kid A as a "space-rock opera."

Musicians still make albums, of course, even concept albums. Yet with so many entertainment options competing for attention, if there's no hit single being played on the radio, albums frequently go unheard.

Long popular in Europe, compilation discs that string together hit singles of various artists have recently started selling well in the United States.

CD players also give listeners the chance to skip over songs they don't like at the press of a remote control button or to program out the unfamiliar altogether. With records, such a chore required getting up, going over to the turntable, and moving the needle.

Kid A isn't a concept album. But it was programmed to flow smoothly, and tracks with more commercial potential were left off if they didn't fit the sound, Hufford said.

"They're not trying to lead any new sort of political front to make albums more popular," he said. "They enjoy albums. They enjoy the piece of work. The concept where you sell an album on the back of one or two singles and the rest is just padding is complete anathema to them."

Capitol Records, counting on the album to be a big seller during the holidays, organized listening parties to give fans a sneak preview. The company is making sure listening posts are set up in many stores so fans can sample before they buy, said Rob Gordon, the company's vice president of marketing.

MTV2 had never played an entire album before, but it agreed when Radiohead's representatives approached station executives.

"This was a band whose past track record shows it is very important and likes to take risks," said David Cohn, the general manager of MTV2. "We listened to this new record and felt it was happening again."

Perhaps this example will give other artists the incentive to take risks, Cohn said.

"It is unique and refreshing in this day and age that a band is looking at the whole album," he said. "Many artists probably think they are and probably are writing an album as a whole. But they don't market it that way."

The chickens were right for Barker

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Game show host Bob Barker has rescued five chickens that were part of the show "Big Brother."

"The Price Is Right" host and Nancy Burnet, an animal-rights activist, went to Studio City, the site of the "Big Brother" house, Sunday to collect the chickens, whose eggs were used by the show's participants for food.

Barker and Burnet told CBS they were concerned about the welfare of the chickens used on its just-completed show. The network agreed to turn over the chickens so that they could be put in a refuge.

'Peanuts' fans get Snoopy

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — An auction of Snoopy statues has fetched $823,000 to help pay for memorials to "Peanuts" creator Charles Schulz.

The statues were among 101 Snoopys created and designed by local artists that graced St. Paul this summer as a tribute to the cartoonist.

At the direction of the Schulz family, the proceeds will be used for a permanent bronze sculpture in St. Paul featuring the "Peanuts" gang, an endowed chair of illustration at the College of Visual Arts in St. Paul and scholarships to the Art Instruction Schools, a Minneapolis correspondence school.

"To see such a welcome from people, to see the joy on the children's faces running up to Snoopy, there is nobody who would have had a bigger smile on their face" than Schulz, said daughter Jill Schulz Transki.

Schulz died of colon cancer on Feb. 12.

The Pulliam Journalism Fellowship

Jump-start your newspaper journalism career with a solid program that boasts four Pulitzer Prize winners among its alumni - the Pulliam Journalism Fellowship. The Fellowship offers myriad career opportunities; in fact, a Pulliam Fellow from our first class of 1974, Barbara Henry, now serves as president and publisher of The Indianapolis Star. Moreover, a new graduate of our year 2000 class has just been hired as a full-time staff reporter at The Indianapolis Star.

Now entering its 28th year, the 2001 Pulliam Journalism Fellowship helps build a bridge from the classroom to the newsroom. Fellows are assigned to The Indianapolis Star or The Arizona Republic in Phoenix for 10 weeks each summer as staff reporters. We award 20 fellowships annually. The stipend is $5,775.

Traditionally, our fellowships have been open only to graduating college seniors. In 2001, we will be expanding eligibility to include college sophomores and juniors as well as seniors pursuing a career in newspaper journalism. We will be accepting applications for our Summer 2001 program in September 2000.

Visit our Web site at <http://www.starnews.com/pjf> or e-mail Fellowship director Russell B. Pulliam at russell.pulliam@starnews.com for an application packet. You also may request a packet by writing:

It's your tuition. know where it's going

The proposed increases for 2001-2002

Resident

Non-resident

■ Higher Education Price Index Increase (5.2%)

The Higher Education Price Index (HEPI) is based upon economic factors that effect the cost of running an educational institution, such as the cost of energy, faculty salaries, building maintenance, and technology.

┘ Separation of Fees from Tuition and Fee Increase (2.7%/0.8%)

Separation of fees from tuition yields an increase in tuition because while the mandatory student fees are taken out of base tuition, the level of tuition does not decrease. As a result, the amount of money that goes to tuition increases, since it is no longer going toward fees.

■ Quality Improvement Increase (2.0%)

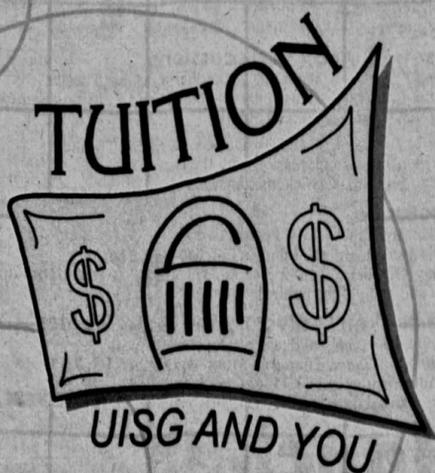

The two percent increase for quality is in place to support the University's improvement plans. These plans include modernizing auditoria and classrooms across campus, recruiting next generation science faculty, improved electronic connectivity, improving common gathering places, opportunity for womens athletics, and funding the UI Retention Initiative.

┘ Non-Resident Surcharge (1.0%)

The one percent non-resident surcharge will go toward funding the UI National Scholars Award, which is given to incoming non-resident students with high academic standing. The University hopes to attract more high achieving non-resident students.

what we've heard

UISG always strives for what is best for students. Over the past three years, the Board of Regents has increased tuition by 2% for quality. Students are not opposed to increasing the quality of their education, but they want to see the increases in quality. Students want to know that their degree will be worth their investments. Students want more communication with their administrators, and they want a voice in the future quality improvements at the University of Iowa.

an open letter

September 29th, 2000
Dear President Coleman,

On behalf of the University of Iowa Student Government (UISG), we are writing to share the opinions of the UISG Student Assembly (SA) on the Board of Regents Office recommendations for tuition and fee increases for 2001-2002.

A copy of the resolution the Student Assembly approved is attached. The resolution expresses the SA's cautious support of the Board Office's recommendation for a 5.2% HEPI tuition increase and 2.0% tuition increase for quality improvements, the second year of redirecting designated tuition to mandatory fees, and reasonable increases in already established fees. In addition, the SA agreed with the university's request for a larger increase in the computer fee to keep up with the recommended computer fee increase at Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa.

The Student Assembly also wants to ensure that students have a strong voice in the use of the extra revenue generated for quality improvements. It is also apparent that the university could do a better job of disclosing to students where extra tuition revenue is spent. Students have a right to a detailed accounting of how their money is used to enhance quality at the university. We are now in the third year of tuition increases that include money for quality improvements, but many students ask where the improvements have been made. The SA also wants a better explanation of how quality is defined and how improvements in quality are measured.

There are a number of ways the University could improve its communication to students. We suggest any number of the following: creating a web page that is updated continuously as improvements are made, placing ads in The Daily Iowan, inserting information into a U-bill, or putting information in the Schedule of Courses.

Let's not forget that while justified, the proposed increase is still large. Large increases in tuition are financially devastating to some students. The UISG believes strongly in having the opportunity for an affordable and accessible education for all students. The university must find these students and provide more resources to ensure that they are not left behind in their education.

We look forward to working with you soon as we solicit more input on this issue.

Sincerely,

The University of Iowa Student Government

October 2, 2000

Dear Andy, Chris, Megan, Larissa, and Sara,

Thank you for sharing with me the Resolution on 2001-2002 Tuition and Fee Increases passed by the Student Assembly on September 11. I am impressed by our students' desire to participate actively in improving the quality of the University of Iowa. We share the goal of having a great university, enhanced by tuition and fees that also provide additional financial aid for all who qualify.

Since the resolution was passed, the governor and many legislators have told me that they have a very positive impression about the leadership of UI students on this issue. I continue to speak out about the importance of continued investment by the State to match the advocacy of students for high quality public higher education.

For the past five years, I have valued my interaction with student government leaders and students with whom I interact at meetings and in classroom settings. I and members of my administration value advice from students about how best to invest all of our resources to create a better educational environment. I and all of my administrators will continue to meet, talk with and seek input from students about budgetary decisions. This interaction is essential for me to lead the University and for us to make good decisions about our future.

Likewise, we need to communicate more effectively with students about annual improvements in the learning and living environment. We are working on a new Web page listing improvements and plan to have it online within the next few days. I believe we should explore spreading this news through an annual ad in the Daily Iowan and other modes of communication. Sharing this information widely will help all of us make good recommendations and decisions about the future of the University.

Finally, please take time to participate in the survey about quality improvements. Your voice is important.

Sincerely yours,

Mary Sue Coleman
President

what we're doing

UISG is giving the student body a powerful voice in the future funding of the University. From Monday Oct 2nd through Thursday Oct 5th an online survey will be held, gathering student opinions. The results of the survey will be sent to the Board of Regents and President Mary Sue Coleman. With your help, we can lobby the administration and guide the future usage of your tuition dollars. Help us tell President Coleman where you want to see improvements.

ELECTION 2000 — THE DEBATES

Gore and Bush (and no one else) go head to head ... Other voices will be heard Tonight, millions of Americans will watch the first presidential debate between Al Gore and George W. Bush. On Nov. 7, millions more will vote for Gore or Bush without ever seriously considering a third-party candidate.

Despite Ross Perot's success as a third-party candidate in recent elections, the two-party system doggedly hangs on in American politics. "A third-party vote is a wasted vote," we're told.

Sadly, that statement is true in today's political climate. A vote for Nader, Browne, Buchanan or any of the four other third-party candidates on November's ballot will only take votes away from Bush and Gore, one of whom will surely win. The best thing to do seems to be to choose between Gore and Bush, regardless of which candidate matches your values.

In recent years, Americans have indicated that they're tired of being forced to choose between only Republicans and Americans are tired of being forced to choose between Republicans and Democrats.

Democrats. Perot's success is evidence of their dissatisfaction, and a Gallup poll conducted last summer found that 46 percent of Americans would want a third-party candidate if Gore and Bush were the only two candidates on the ballot.

Third parties need to be more welcome in American politics in order to give voters the choices they want. Newspapers, magazines, Web sites and other media outlets that report the candidates' stands on issues should make a point of reporting third-party candidates' positions as well as those of Republicans and Democrats.

In addition to the media increasing their coverage of third-party candidates, the Commission on Presidential Debates should open up the debates to third-party candidates. Currently, a candidate must have the support of at least 15 percent of voters in polls conducted by major news organizations. If that percentage of voter support were changed to 5 percent (or even lower), the debates would be much more accessible to third-party candidates.

The commission's primary purpose is to sponsor and produce debates for "leading presidential candidates." Nader is certainly a leading candidate, considering that he currently has 4 percent of the vote, while no other candidate can break past 2 percent.

Although we won't see a third-party candidate debate tonight or win a major election in the near future, there's hope for more real candidate choices in future elections if American voters keep voicing their dissatisfaction with the two-party system. If readers, viewers and voters speak up loudly enough, the powers that be in American politics can't help but listen.

Rocking along the trail

So the truth finally comes out.

Because of my allergies — which more or less involve Attila the Hun and his Golden Horde rampaging through my sinuses, using their Golden Rod — the International Olympics Committee ruled that I couldn't cover the Sydney Games.

Turns out that the medicine I take to stem Attila the Allergies contains the dreaded pseudoephedrine — which means that my writing could be enhanced.

That'll be the day, said my writing adviser.

Which is why I was left behind to cover the presidential debates. I apologize in advance for inducing spontaneous fits of uncontrolled yawning.

(Programming note: NBC will indeed air tonight's debate, but, in keeping with its time-tested policy, it will broadcast the Gore-Shrub yak-fest half a day after ESPN reports the results.)

A lot of people have been waiting with bated breath for these debates. At least that's what the chattering crowd that lives inside your TV set would have you believe.

Frankly, I think that the only people eager to watch these debates either work for one of the campaigns or they're the type who wait with bated breath for the Olympic synchronized-swimming competition.

In either case, they need adjust their medication.

The presidential debates will come down to two things: George W. Gore will try to prove that he's got more personality than a rock, and George W. Shrub will attempt to show that he's got more brains than a rock.

Bet you never imagined that, after all the hundreds of millions of dollars that the two campaigns have spent, the presidential race would come down to geology. You should have paid attention in that Earth Science class.

It's fitting, somehow, that geology rocks. So's to speak. Meaningful change in human society seems to move at a geological pace — a couple of inches per epoch, give or take a millennium.

Just think about it. Human beings have spent the last 124,000 years or so evolving from hunter-gatherers, discovering fire, inventing language, culture, Thai cuisine and Oprah, just to get to the point where the choice for the most-powerful man on the planet comes down to Gore and his Shrubness.

It's enough to make you stop believing in evolution. If I were a betting man (which, as my poker-playing cronies can assure you, I'm not), I would bet that Gore has an easier time showing he has a personality than the Shrub does proving he has a brain.

I mean, all Gore has to do is kiss his wife again. That passes for personality on TV.

His Shrubness, on the other hand, has to demonstrate that he can speak English, a task he has yet to master.

The Shrub is, after all, the guy who said, "Is our children learning?" (In Grand Rapids, Mich., on Jan. 11. The quote is the title of Paul Begala's book on the Shrubness' accomplishments. It's a thin book.)

And just to prove that his grasp of subject-verb agreement is something less than firm, the Shrub also said, "Laura and I sometimes don't realize how bright our children is until we get an objective analysis." ("Meet the Press," April 15.)

And then there was that memorable moment on Feb. 16 when his Shrubness showed both his fluency in English and his command of foreign policy: "There is madmen in the world, and there are terror."

Luckily for the Shrub, he can speak Spanish. Allegedly, anyway. There was this exchange on MSNBC's "Hardball" on May 31:

Shrub: First of all, Cinco de Mayo is not the independence day. That's dieciséis de Septiembre, and —

Matthews: What's that in English?

Shrub: Fifteenth of September.

No. It's Sept. 16.

Of course, this is about what you'd expect from a guy who has to brag about his "compassion." Women know about guys who brag about themselves. If a guy talks about, say, "dimensions," odds are that he's got about as much "dimension" as the Kalahari Desert has liquid nourishment. In much the same way, a politician who must describe himself as "compassionate" probably has an empathy level rivaled only by Attila the Hun.

And just judging by the number of executions his Shrubness has presided over during his tenure as the governor of Texas, it's no accident that comparisons with Attila spring to mind.

Have a good debate.

Ralph & Pat: Don't call us, we'll call you

And the sign says the long-haired freaky people need not apply.

Tonight's Bush-Gore debate will attract attention for a variety of reasons. One interesting side-note to tonight's proceedings will no doubt be the absence of alternative candidates Ralph Nader and Pat Buchanan, two of the more "long-haired, freaky people" (to borrow a line from the Five Man Electrical Band's protest anthem, "Signs") in the cast of Election 2000, at least from a mainstream America point-of-view.

Both claim that they rightfully deserve spots at tonight's debate. Both need to get a grip on reality.

According to the Sept. 30 Zogby Poll, Nader received 2.8 percent of the vote; Buchanan got 0.5 percent. Why both of these candidates consider themselves to be legitimate contenders to the throne is beyond me.

Buchanan lost his support years ago, when the economy turned around. Nader looked good to disgruntled Dems in May, but as soon as Gore turned this into a tight race, Nader lost a sizable chunk of his support.

I am firmly in favor of alternative parties getting their message out. I tuned in to C-SPAN Sunday to watch Harry Browne (Libertarian), John Hagelin (Natural Law) and Howard Phillips (Constitution) promote their candidacies at an alternative debate. Nader and Buchanan declined the invitation; apparently, they are above such an event.

Funny, Browne was beating Buchanan in the Sept. 30 Zogby Poll, and he was just 1.6 percent behind Nader.

Boy, Ralph, you're really in the big game, aren't you?

Do all candidates deserve a spot at the debates? I'm undecided. A line has to be drawn somewhere — if every candidate were guaranteed a spot at the debates, who wouldn't run?

The best option would be for the government to get out of the debate business altogether. There are plenty of alternative media — just about every political show offered to host the candidates. When government dollars aren't being spent, then debate hosts could decide for themselves who merits a spot, for whatever reasons they choose.

In the meantime, alternative events such as the one aired on C-SPAN are an excellent way for minor parties to promote themselves. A third-party vote is not wasted — if you don't believe me, then please check out my discussion of this issue in the upcoming edition of Smack! (www.uiowa.edu/~smack/), the

RU-486 gets FDA approval ...

Not a bitter pill to swallow

After 12 years of safe use worldwide, the abortion pill, RU-486, has finally become available to American women. The real victory of RU-486 is this: It actually restricts the time frame in which women can have an abortion. Abortions with RU-486 eliminate late-term (second- and third-trimester) abortions. To put it most simply, taking RU-486 detaches and expels the embryo from the woman's body, so the pill only works within the first seven weeks of conception. However, many concerns were still raised with the FDA approval of the drug. Many are concerned that the cost of the pill (still undetermined by drug companies) will make it unavailable to low-income women. Currently,

The important word is choice. Giving women the right to choose isn't a bad thing.

The Emma Goldman Clinic in Iowa City hopes to offer the drug at the same price as a surgical abortion, with adjusted rates for such factors as income and insurance. Therefore, abortions will be neither less nor more accessible to anyone, regardless of financial status.

Some worry that the ease of the abortion procedure with RU-486 will encourage more women to obtain abortions. Still others worry that widespread use of the drug will further distance the consequences of sex from the act itself. But the drug will be no easier to access than a surgical abortion. Women must still go through counseling before making their choice.

And the important word is choice. Giving women the right to choose isn't a bad thing. Many people claim to be pro-life, with exceptions, such as when the pregnancy is a result of rape, or if it compromises the mother's health. How much longer can we lie to ourselves? Pro-life with exceptions is really pro-choice.

If women are going to choose abortions, there should be a method available to them that is less damaging to their bodies but also prevents late-term abortions, which can be more damaging mentally than the physical procedure. And now, with RU-486, there is.

Who's tracking you?

With the onset of this technological age, Big Brother (the Orwellian fixture, not the television show) looms in the shadows.

Just as I can go to the Internet now and find out who won an Olympic event 10 minutes ago, the security systems of the world can find out what Web site I used to see where Lance Armstrong finished in the street-cycling race.

This is not news. Everyone has come to grips with what this type of monitoring means — how profiling of Internet users can allow different companies better means of discovering just who looks at what Web site. If it can make money for someone on the Internet, then someone has either discovered the way to do it or is working on it right now while you read this column.

But what if you are reading this column while waiting to log into a UI computer somewhere on campus. You entered your HawkID. You are waiting for the systems folder to open so you can start in on that paper you have been putting off since it was assigned, so you check out the Internet. No big deal, you glance at the same sites you hit everyday, from your e-mail to Outside Online to peruse an article.

You are logged into the computer so the UI knows when you want to print. Does the UI also know what Web sites you are viewing? Does it watch students who use the computers for morally questionable activity? Or does it just monitor to find out how much time each student spends working in an ITC? I don't know. But the UI does.

When school started up this semester, many upper-classmen were dumbfounded by the need to log on to computers. Multiple rumors circulated about why this system was imposed. Students guessed that it was an easier way to pay the cost of printing on the new laser printers. Others thought that is was a measure to keep townspeople off university hardware. And others ignored the system, logging in and doing their homework.

Still, I would like to have some answers from the UI. If this was a measure to help printing capabilities, why do all printers print out the receipt first, wasting a few thousand pieces of paper every day? If this is a tactic to prevent non-university students from using the computers, why do this to the community? Iowa City and the university live in a peaceful co-existence; there is not a call among students to prevent a resident of this town from using the library ITC.

And the ultimate question that comes about in my mind, which has seen "X-Files" for too many years, not to mention every Oliver Stone movie: Is the UI monitoring what its students do while logged into a computer? I would hate to think this liberal-minded college would stoop to such a level. I would hate to think this liberal-minded college would try to monitor me, but Big Brother grows stronger every year, and maybe it has infected some minds here in town.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Libertarians offer all the choice to smoke or to not smoke

On the surface, a local ordinance to ban smoking in restaurants seems to target health concerns. Some people want their health and comfort promoted even when they infringe on other people's rights.

The ordinance sets smokers and non-smokers against each other in another tug-of-war over rights. I've been on both sides of the cigarette. I smoked for 20 years, and smoked more than two packs a day until the day I quit four years ago. I had better things to spend my money on.

Some government officials believe disagreements can only be resolved by passing new laws. As a strong supporter of freedom, I have a different solution. It's so simple, I'll share it right here.

Attention restaurant owners: Some people want to know whether you have a smoking or smoke-free environment. Posting a note on your door and in your ads will supply that information.

That's it. No new laws. No intrusive demands. It's just a citizen's request for information for smoke-conscious people so they don't have to open a restaurant door and get a whiff of sidestream smoke.

For the next step, people have to take responsibility for their own health and comfort by letting their money talk. Some restaurants will cater to non-smokers, and some will cater to smokers. This is a perfectly reasonable way to ensure that people who don't want to be exposed to smoke don't have to be. Private business owners, smokers, and non-smokers still have their rights.

But maybe this is the wrong track, and this issue isn't about health and comfort at all.

Maybe this issue is about social engineering or forcing politically correct behavior. Maybe this issue is about whether adults are smart enough to take care of themselves or whether the government needs to rescue them. In this battle over social behavior, the government has already decided that it controls private property. The only question is who gets the special favor of using it.

Property owners deserve to control their own property. It is the only answer that saves everyone's rights.

discuss the various options for the protest.

"One possibility mentioned was the creation of a national media spectacle," he said. "We would march to the front doors of the debate and stage a peaceful sit-down protest, demanding that Nader be let in."

Pool said he will have to consider whether getting arrested for his cause would be worthwhile.

"I'm not too concerned about having civil disobedience on my record," he said.

In Iowa City today, UI

Students for Nader will hold a rally on the Pentacrest to coincide with the national protests.

Beginning at 12:20 p.m., local Nader supporters will speak on behalf of the Green Party candidate's key issues, including an increase in the federal minimum wage and ending the death penalty.

"We hope our message will

Music industry lawyers grilled on Napster

out reaching a decision, which could come at any time.

Through pointed questioning, the judges appeared to suggest that U.S. District Court Judge Marilyn Hall Patel's injunction in July shutting down Napster could prohibit legal uses of the music-sharing software, such as the trading of non-copyrighted music.

David Boies, who prosecuted the government's antitrust case against Microsoft Corp., argued that Napster is merely an Internet service provider and should not be held responsible for all the activities of its users.

Napster attorneys also claim the promotion of artists who permit their songs to be shared would be hurt by reinstating Patel's injunction, which was stayed just hours before it was to take effect in July.

Crucial to Napster's case is a 1984 Supreme Court decision that allowed Sony to continue manufacturing VCRs that can duplicate copyrighted materials. Attorneys for the company claim that ruling also covers Napster's service.

But Frackman argued that Napster was specifically created to aid users in infringing copyrights. He said the music industry is not "trying to stop the Internet" but simply trying to stop Napster from allowing pirated music to be swapped.

Napster, started in a Northeastern University dorm room last year, pioneered the concept known as peer-to-peer computing, in which people share files from their own computers rather than a central server. In Napster's case, users can download music from each other that is stored in the MP3 format.

Napster chief executive Hank Barry said the company has been in discussion with individual record labels about a possible settlement, but no deals have been reached.

One solution might be a monthly fee to use Napster's service, though Barry said that is just one of several proposals he has put on the bargaining table. "Whether $4.95 a month or $1.99, the whole structure of this thing is trying to compensate artists," Barry said.

"We're willing to pay very substantial amounts to the artists. With a very conservative estimate, the first-year payments to the artists would be in the neighborhood of a half a billion dollars."

Even if the recording industry succeeds in shutting down Napster, it still faces the enormous challenge of trying to halt the online swapping of pirated digital music.

Unlike Napster, popular programs such as Gnutella and Freenet allow users to swap music without going through a central server. Experts say shutting down such services would be next to impossible because of the Internet's very nature.

Hilary Rosen, the president and CEO of the recording-industry group, has said she hopes for "increased cooperation between innovation and industry" to get more music available online.

"It is really awfully hard in the marketplace today to compete with free," she said Monday.

Council puts drinking ordinance at top of list and if they were sold alcohol. Undercover officers would also be stationed in establishments to monitor and observe alcohol sales, said Police Chief R.J. Winkelhake.

"We would work in cooperation with other surrounding departments, because our officers are too well-known downtown," he said.

Although the councilors are not in agreement about how they should act, they agreed that something needs to be done about downtown drinking.

"I think that banning drink specials is a waste of time," said Councilor Irvin Pfab. "But I think it's time we stop talking and do something."

Pfab would like to consider placing tougher penalties on establishments, and he would support a 21-and-older ordinance, he said.

"I believe that this alcohol problem can be solved in a couple months if we make it known that we will not back down," he said.

Lehman said he agreed that the council needs to form opinions and generate a proposal for the city to consider as soon as possible.

"I agree that we need to get it done, but we have to do it right," he said.

If the ordinance does not solve the problem, the city would try other steps, including a 21-and older ordinance.

"If we are unsuccessful, that's where we will head (to a 21-ordinance)," Lehman said. "But I think that that's a road that we would rather not go down."

Chiefs come from behind

■ Kansas City rallies from a 10-point deficit to beat Seattle 24-17.

By Doug Tucker
Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — There's nothing like a 73-yard play to snatch momentum away from one football team and give it to the other.

The Kansas City Chiefs, trailing 17-7 and backed up to their own 5-yard-line late in the third period, got a giant spark from Elvis Grbac's big completion to Derrick Alexander and scored 17 straight points to beat the Seattle Seahawks 24-17.

Both teams had won their last two games after losing their first two.

The Seahawks were in control for 2 1/2 quarters. They took a 17-7 lead on a 27-yard field goal in the third quarter by rookie Ryan Lindell, who was making his first NFL start.

But four minutes later, Grbac stepped back from his own 5 and hit Alexander streaking down the right side, beating Shawn Springs and going 73 yards before Reggie Tongue dragged him down from behind.

One play later, Alexander beat Springs in the end zone on a 17-yard pass, giving the Chiefs a 3-play scoring drive, with Grbac-to-Alexander accounting for 90 of the 95 yards.

After Eric Hicks' third sack of Jon Kitna forced the Seahawks to punt a few minutes later, the Chiefs drove to the Seattle 8 and Pete Stoyanovich tied it at 17-all with a 27-yard field goal with 3:18 into the fourth quarter.

Then, with all the momentum belonging to the Chiefs, Dante Hall sped 22 yards with a Seattle punt and the Chiefs took their first lead of the night with 4:26 left when Mike Cloud beat Willie Williams to the end zone.

Michigan State closes practice after upset loss

■ In wake of its loss to Northwestern, Spartan coach Bobby Williams says his team needs to solely focus on Iowa.

By Malcolm Johnson
Associated Press

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Two days after Michigan State's thrashing by Northwestern, coach Bobby Williams said he has closed the Spartans' practices this week.

But he says it's less to hide anything than to get his players to concentrate on the job at hand.

This week, the main job is preparing to play Iowa. And despite the Hawkeyes' 0-5 record, Williams said he anticipates a real challenge at Iowa City — especially following Saturday's loss.

"As far as practice this week, I'm going to close practice," Williams said Monday. "I think we need to regroup and have to get some players healed."

"We have a serious injury situation, and I want to make sure that we get the players back involved, and hopefully the guys that were out last week will be back in the lineup this week."

"We've had practices pretty much open to the media and public," Williams said. "We just need to get our focus back within the team and let it stay there."

The Spartans are in need of refocusing, following Saturday's 37-17 defeat by the Wildcats. That dropped Michigan State from 18th out of the Top 25.

"We're quite disappointed by the loss Saturday," Williams said. "I thought Northwestern did a fine job; going into the game, we knew it would be a tough football game. It turned out that way."

"We had some players who played fairly well; we just didn't have enough of them. We had several opportunities to get back into the game and make a game out of it. We just couldn't capitalize on the field position that we got."

Now, he said, it's time for the Spartans to collect themselves before their 3-1 record gets worse.

"So hopefully, we'll be able to regroup this week and rally the troops and get ready to play another football game," Williams said.

He said Iowa, 1-10 last season, "is definitely a much-improved team. They scored quite a few points in the Indiana game (a 45-33 loss) and played Nebraska (a 42-13 loss) very, very well — had the lead there and had a chance to go into the half down by one ...

"So it should be a great game. I think our players are anxious to get back to practicing and get going."

Baseball's second season

Seattle's Alex Rodriguez congratulates Kazuhiro Sasaki, center, after the Mariners defeated the Angels, 5-2, to clinch a wild-card berth.

■ St. Louis manager Tony LaRussa names Rick Ankiel the starter in Game 1 against Atlanta.

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Tony La Russa pulled a surprise even before the Cardinals-Braves series began.

First, he sent Darryl Kile to the interview room, making it appear the 20-game winner would start Tuesday's playoff opener against Greg Maddux. Then, when asked about his pitcher, La Russa said, "I think it's going to be a conversation stopper."

Only at the end of his news conference Monday did the Cardinals manager reveal he was picking 21-year-old rookie Rick Ankiel as his surprise Game 1 starter.

As he left Busch Stadium later, Kile refused to talk about the switch, covering his ears and mumbling loudly so he couldn't hear questions. Ankiel (11-7), who had been expected to start Game 2 on Thursday, was able to escape media attention. By the time La Russa's news conference was over, Ankiel had left Busch Stadium.

If La Russa's decision shocked the Braves, they weren't letting on.

"Is he going to do that?" manager Bobby Cox said. "That's fine. We've got some high averages against lefthandlers, but this kid, he's got three good pitches."

Kile was pushed back to Game 2 partly because La Russa said he's the only starter capable of coming back on three days' rest if a fifth game is needed next Monday. Ankiel would pitch Game 4 with four days' rest.

Ankiel wasn't the only new wrinkle for the Cardinals. La Russa may bench slumping third baseman Fernando

Soccer 'junky' brings winning attitude

■ Linzy Wolman's versatile abilities and scoring punch make her an integral part of Iowa's soccer team.

By Laura Podolak
The Daily Iowan

Linzy Wolman traveled more than a thousand miles from her home state of Colorado to be an Iowa Hawkeye. She left behind the Rocky Mountains for the rolling hills of Iowa because she could feel the closeness of the Iowa soccer team and she wanted to be a part of it.

Now, as a junior, Wolman still feels that the team is as tightly knit as it was two years ago on her recruiting visit.

She said that being so far away from home has not always been easy, but her teammates have helped her make the transition.

"During freshman year, there was a point where it was difficult, but being around my teammates and meeting a lot of new people helped my transition," she said.

Iowa's Linzy Wolman leads the team so far this season with seven goals and six assists.

Wolman began to love the sport of soccer at a young age. She found one of her earliest soccer idols on the home field of her future high school.

April Heinrichs, the coach of the U.S. national team, went to Heritage High School, which Wolman would later attend, when Wolman was growing up. Wolman was intrigued by Heinrichs' abilities. Observing soccer at such a young age helped fuel Wolman's desire for the sport.

The junior said that she definitely sees soccer in her future, whether that means she is between the lines on the field or pacing the sidelines.

"I hope to continue playing. Hopefully for the women's U.S. Association, which is scheduled to start in April 2002," Wolman said. "I have also thought about coaching younger kids."

She said she has always enjoyed working with children and can think of no better way to interact with them than to teach them the game she loves.

Her roommate, junior defender Michelle Mobily, also sees soccer in Wolman's future in some way.

"Part of her life will have soccer in it, as a coach or as a player," she said.

Wolman's passion for the game is obvious — ask Iowa head coach Wendy Logan.

"She's just a soccer junky," she said. "She is always upbeat

Hawks shuffle linemen

■ Former tight end Robert Gallery converts to the line for the first time in his life.

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

Robert Gallery was handed a new assignment before the Sept. 30 game against Indiana. After starting at tight end in Iowa's first four games, the redshirt freshman was moved to the right side of the offensive line.

Injuries and performance have forced

Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz to tinker with his offensive lineup. Every game this year has featured a new starting group.

While the most obvious change was at quarterback with Jon Beutjer replacing Scott Mullen, the less-obvious switches have been on the line. The latest twist is converting Gallery from a tight end to a full-time blocker.

"With Eric Steinbach's injury a week ago being significant, we couldn't do anything less," Ferentz said. "Robert is a team guy all the way, and he agreed to do that, so we're working on the switch and what that entails."

Falling to Freshmen

Prior to Indiana's win over Iowa on Sept. 30, the Hoosiers had suffered two losses off come-from-behind efforts from freshmen quarterbacks. North Carolina State's Philip Rivers torched IU with 401 passing yards and five TD completions on Sept. 2. Two weeks later, Kentucky's Jared Lorenzen tallied an impressive 339 passing yards on his way to victory.

So a familiar story unfolded when Iowa freshman Jon Beutjer started leading Iowa back, and it appeared as if he may send IU falling to another freshman QB before Indiana sealed the win in the fourth quarter.

"You come in 0-4 and down 21-0 or 21-3, and they just keep playing," Indiana coach Cam Cameron said. "That's what a new quarterback does for you. He doesn't know any

Five big league managers fired
 ■ One year after being named manager of the year, Jack McKeon is fired by the Reds.
 By Josh Dubow
 Associated Press
 Cincinnati manager Jack McKeon and Arizona's Buck Showalter were fired Monday after finishing seasons that didn't duplicate last year's success despite adding high-priced star players.
 "Expectations were high," said McKeon, who couldn't lead Ken Griffey Jr. to the playoffs. "If there's got to be a fall guy, I'll be glad to take the responsibility."
 After no in-season managerial changes for the first time in 58 years, skipper are finding the offseason not so secure.
 Pittsburgh's Gene Lamont was also fired — one day after Terry Francona was cut loose in Philadelphia — and others could follow soon.
 Los Angeles' Davey Johnson and Toronto's Jim Fregosi will hear about their fates in the coming weeks. Minnesota's Tom Kelly, the senior manager in the majors at 14-plus seasons, will meet with Twins president Jerry Bell on Tuesday to discuss his future.
 Tampa Bay's Larry Rothschild won't join the list of unemployed skipper, although three coaches were fired. Houston's Larry Dierker and Montreal's Felipe Alou were already given reprieves last week.
 Three high-profile managers could control their own fates after the postseason. San Francisco's Dusty Baker, Seattle's Lou Piniella and the Mets' Bobby Valentine will be free agents and will be at the top of many teams' lists.
 Showalter, the only manager in Arizona's three-year history, won the NL West in 1999 but lost in the first round of the playoffs to the Mets and fell to third place this season.
 "We think that it's time to move in another direction. Kind of time to work on what we need to do to move on," owner Jerry Colangelo said.
 With an $80.8 million payroll, baseball's sixth-highest, expectations were high in Arizona.
 On May 10, the Diamondbacks were 26-10 and led the NL West by 6½ games, but they slumped after that. Not even the acquisition of Curt Schilling from Philadelphia in late July provided a spark.

IOWABRIEF
Leister fine after head injury
 Iowa field hockey sophomore back Tiffany Leister was immediately released from the UI Hospitals and Clinics Sunday.
 Leister was taken by ambulance to the hospital after receiving a hit to the back of the head and falling on her neck 10 minutes into Sunday's home game against Southwest Missouri State.
 Head coach Tracey Griesbaum said the action was purely precautionary. Leister was released in time to attend the team meeting following the game; she is expected to practice this week.
 The women will play at home against Ohio State on Oct. 8 at noon.

Rams, Redskins looking to Super Bowl

■ The Rams have a tough road ahead, while looking to match the Dolphins, 1972 record.

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

There's a little stirring these days among those gents from the 1972 Dolphins. Not a lot yet. The St. Louis Rams are 5-0 and have 11 games plus the playoffs to go to match Miami's record as the only unbeaten team of the Super Bowl era.

But consider that the Rams, who have lots of credibility this year after winning the Super Bowl last season, went into Sunday's game with San Diego averaging 40 points a game and upped that average to 43 by scoring 57 against the Chargers.

"I've never seen anything like that," said Jim Harbaugh, the San Diego quarterback who's seen a lot in 14 NFL seasons. "They score so fast their defense is right back on the field."

That's one reason the other team scores, too, which may finally be St. Louis' downfall.

In their first two games, against Denver and Seattle, the Rams had to score on the final drive to win 41-36 and 37-34. On Sunday, the Chargers put up 31 points and 384 yards.

But the Rams, of course, did nothing more than gain 614 yards, and Kurt Warner's quarterback rating was perfect: 158.3, the highest a quarterback can get. He played just 2 1/2 quarters and threw for 390 yards.

Warner has now thrown for 1,947 yards in five games, or 389.4 per game. That computes

6,230 for the season, or 1,146 more than Dan Marino's record of 5,084, set 16 seasons ago.

But enough numbers. Let's see how to scare the '72 Dolphins.

Start with the defense, the alleged flaw.

It's improved since the Denver and Seattle games as Kevin Carter's play improved, and it should be getting defensive tackle D'Marco Farr back fairly soon. A lot of the points, such as San Diego's, are garbage points allowed by a defense that loosens up after the blowout is complete.

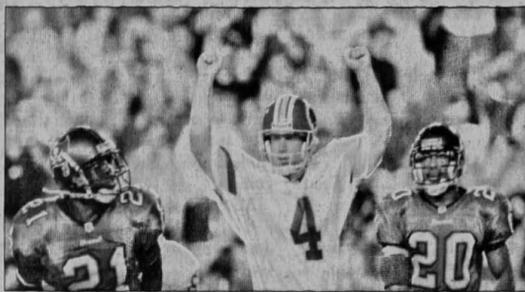

Then there's the schedule.

The Rams have the same edge San Francisco had for most of the '90s — no one in the NFC West scares anyone. No one but the Rams, in fact, is over .500, meaning St. Louis will probably clinch the division by mid-November.

But... The schedule is a lot tougher coming off a Super Bowl victory than it was last year, coming off 4-12.

On Oct. 22, the Rams go to Kansas City, probably the toughest outdoor venue in the NFL and a grass field that takes just a little speed from Isaac Bruce, Torry Holt, Az-Zahir Hakim and Marshall Faulk.

On Nov. 20, they have a Monday night home game against Washington, which is beginning to play up to its pre-season hype. On Dec. 10, they visit Minnesota, and the next week have a Monday night game at Tampa Bay. If they get that far, a lot of the Miami folks will probably travel north to root against them.

On the other hand, look out for history repeating itself.

Two years ago, Denver started 13-0 and was primed to head for Miami for a Monday night showdown that would determine if the Broncos could match the 1972 Dolphins. On the way, they had to stop at the Meadowlands to face the mediocre Giants, a whistle stop so to speak.

The Giants won, 20-16, the folks in Miami celebrated and all the hoopla in south Florida ended.

This year, the Rams could start 9-0. On Nov. 12, eight days before the Washington game, they go to the Meadowlands to face the Giants, who are at about the same level as the 1998 team.

Any predictions?

Redskins fans are among the NFL's most knowledgeable. When the team played at RFK Stadium, the grandstand would shake when the Redskins did something good. And the fans showed up in good years and bad — for teams that won three Super Bowls under Joe Gibbs and for teams that couldn't tie their shoes during the 70s and mid-90s.

In those days, the pregame show was simple. The Redskins' marching band would come on the field, play "Hail to the Redskins," and the national anthem and depart.

The FedEx scene is 180 degrees away, particularly in the two years Daniel Snyder has owned the team.

Twenty minutes before the game, a disc jockey takes the field to explain to the fans when to cheer — like on third down for the opposition. On every third down for the opposition, he reminds them. On Sunday, he was euphoric in noting, "The Giants are going doowwnn!" meaning the Skins could share first place if they won.

Bottom-half payroll teams in playoffs

■ The difference between the best and the worst teams is the smallest in major league history.

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Hey, big spenders: The playoffs no longer are your private club.

After five postseasons dominated by the high rollers, three teams from the bottom half of the payroll chart made the final eight this year, including the Oakland Athletics, just 25th in spending among the 30 major league teams.

"The game is played on the field and not on paper," Chicago White Sox first baseman Paul Konerko said. "You can't measure some things. You can't measure how guys will jell or how they will pull for one another. Some things you can't scout, and money has nothing to do with all that."

The New York Yankees entered the playoffs with a record payroll of $113.4 million, according to figures compiled by the commissioner's office and based on Aug. 31 rosters.

Among the other playoff teams, Atlanta is second ($95 million), the New York Mets fifth ($89.8 million), St. Louis eighth ($72.4 million), Seattle ninth ($62.6 million), San Francisco 18th ($54.2 million), the White Sox 21st ($36.9 million) and Oakland 25th ($32.7 million).

While the Yankees limped into the playoffs by losing 15 of 18, the A's finished 14-3.

"We did it by building within," Oakland co-owner Steve Schott said. "We've got a core of players that are outstanding, especially Jason (Giambi). It's a real thrill to see these guys perform."

In the first five seasons after the 1994-95 strike, only one team not among the top half by payroll made the playoffs: The 1997 Houston Astros, who were 18th, were swept in the first round.

The eight postseason teams were all among the top 10 last year and the top 12 in 1998.

"One of the questions that comes to mind is were the

The game is played on the field, not on paper.

— Paul Konerko, first baseman, Chicago White Sox larger-income clubs able to weather the strike better, which is what you expected," players' union head Donald Fehr said. "What you had was the industry coming back, and it takes time to rebuild teams."

Big-money busts this year included Los Angeles (third at $94.2 million), Boston (fourth at $93.9 million), Arizona (sixth at $80.8 million) and Cleveland (seventh at $78.7 million).

"It is an aberration," commissioner Bud Selig said. "Jerry Reinsdorf and the White Sox, the Oakland people, they said to me, 'See us next year. How are we going to perpetuate this? We don't have a chance.'"

The nine biggest spenders all had winning records.

The five teams with lower payrolls than the A's — Pittsburgh ($31.9 million), Montreal ($28 million), Florida ($25.9 million), Kansas City ($24.5 million) and Minnesota ($15.9 million), all had losing records, going a combined 361-448.

The top five spenders combined to go 447-362.

"The Mets are in the playoffs, the Yankees are in the playoffs, Atlanta is in the playoffs, and on and on and on," said Selig, who argues the game's economic system needs changes.

For the first time in modern baseball, no team won 60 percent or more of its games and no team lost 60 percent or more.

The .198 difference between the best winning percentage (San Francisco at .599) and the lowest (the Chicago Cubs and Philadelphia at .401) was the smallest in major league history, according to the Elias Sports Bureau, baseball's statistician.

The previous mark was .201 in 1959, when the White Sox were at .610 and the Washington Senators were at .409.

POINTCOUNTERPOINT

Can the Rams go undefeated?

Even though going 16-0 is nearly impossible in the parity-filled NFL, the St. Louis Rams are the only team with a chance of going undefeated.

The high-powered offensive attack is even better than it was last year, even though opposing defensive coordinators had an entire off-season to figure out what Kurt Warner and company were doing better than anyone else in the NFL.

The Rams average more than 40 points per game (albeit against mediocre competition), but it does not appear the Rams can be stopped; in fact, even the backup running back ran for 100 yards in one game.

The rest of the Rams' schedule is not easy. Games against the Giants and Buccaneers should pose the toughest challenge to St. Louis' superiority.

Even though the Rams won't put up 40 points against the likes of Warren Sapp and Jesse Armstrong, they will not be shut down, and I don't foresee them scoring fewer than 20 points at any time this season.

If their defense rises to the occasion, conservative offenses such as Tampa Bay's and New York's will not be able to put up the necessary points needed to beat the offensive monster that is St. Louis.

Playing in the patsy NFC West only helps the Rams' chances. No one in that division should get within 20 points of St. Louis, and they play them twice.

It is unlikely but entirely possible that the Rams will go undefeated this season.

— Mike Kelly

The Rams are definitely a good football team, and will likely make the playoffs again this year, but as for an undefeated season? Nah, not these St. Louis Rams and not in today's NFL.

Only one team in NFL history has gone undefeated: the 1972 Miami Dolphins. One team in the NFL's existence, and it was nearly 30 years ago.

I will be bold and say no team in modern NFL times will go all 16 games without losing.

First of all, 16 games are a lot of games to play — somewhere in there, some team that is not necessarily better than the Rams will sneak up and beat them.

There is too much parity on the NFL now. Anybody is capable of beating anybody on any given day, and sometime this season the Rams will experience that.

Also, their vaunted passing game will, one of these days, not work in the way that it has. One of these days Kurt Warner is going to be off, and his receivers will either drop a few balls or some defense will find a way to stop them for at least one afternoon.

To say that Warner and the Rams are going to put up 400 yards passing and 40 points a game all season is absurd.

Somewhere, somehow, somebody is going to beat these guys, and it might even happen on more than one occasion.

Sixteen games are too many, and the NFL is too tough for one team to go the distance without a loss.

— Jeremy Schnitker

SPORTS BRIEF

'Big Mac' pinch hits against Atlanta

ST. LOUIS (AP) — For the St. Louis Cardinals, having Mark McGwire available to pinch hit is better than having him on the disabled list.

"You've (got) maybe baseball's greatest home-run hitter sitting on the bench—that's an exciting possibility for your team," manager Tony La Russa said Monday, a day before the Cardinals and Atlanta Braves began their first-round series. "The other side knows that, so it's a big advantage for us."

McGwire has been taking it one at-a-time since coming off the disabled list for patella tendinitis in early September. He's 5-for-15 with two home runs and three RBIs, and long ago got used to the idea that this would be his role.

La Russa suggested recently that McGwire could stand at first base for a few innings to get an extra at-bat, but McGwire responded that he didn't want to be an "ornament."

"There's nothing I can do about it," said McGwire, who's making his first postseason appearance since 1992. "It's well-documented, and I don't need to repeat."

Tatis (3-for-36 slump) in favor of Placido Polanco.

Mets at Giants

SAN FRANCISCO

Wearing sunglasses and an open-collared black shirt, Brian Sabean exudes California cool in the afternoon sun at Pacific Bell Park.

Then somebody mentions the high stakes and small error margin in his San Francisco Giants' upcoming divisional playoff series, and Sabean's calm is blown out of the park and into McCovey Cove.

"The series scares the hell out of me," the San Francisco GM said. "I think the biggest reason is that (both) teams are very powerful. The 97 wins and the home-field advantage don't mean (anything) until we get out of the first round."

San Francisco takes on the New York Mets in the best-of-5 series beginning Wednesday at Pac Bell. The Giants' 97 victories gave them baseball's best record, the NL West title and the right to open the playoffs with the first postseason game at their beautiful new park.

But the celebratory playoff atmosphere will be tempered by the knowledge that first-round failure could be devastating to either team.

San Francisco, which also had the game's best home record, would be terribly embarrassed by a first-round loss. Despite their lofty record, the Giants are in unfamiliar territory. They haven't won a postseason game in manager Dusty Baker's eight-year tenure.

Yankees at A's
OAKLAND, Calif. — One has the last two World Series championships, the highest payroll in baseball and superstars such as Derek Jeter and Bernie Williams.

The other hasn't seen the playoffs since 1992, ranks near the bottom of the payroll list, and features what's-their-names such as Eric Chavez and Terrence Long.

The New York Yankees and the Oakland Athletics are a study in contrasts. And those differences will be magnified Tuesday night when the two teams open their best-of-5 AL playoff series in Oakland.

The Yankees will start Roger Clemens (13-8) against Gil Heredia (15-11).

"There's a mystique about the Yankees. They've been here before," A's outfielder Ben Grievie said. "I'm not saying that's going to intimidate us. That's just the way it is."

The two teams also had strikingly different Septembers, with the A's holding the advantage. And at 87-74 overall, the Yankees have the worst record among this year's playoff teams.

The Yankees lost 15 out of their last 18 games, including the final seven. Nonetheless, the Yankees clinched the AL East on Sept. 29 for their third straight division title.

The September slump was on everyone's mind: Would it affect the series against the A's?

"You know, what we've done to this point doesn't really matter now," Chuck Knoblauch said. "But it's still fresh in my mind — what we've done in the past few weeks. If you have a choice, you'd like to play well going in."

Mariners at White Sox

Instead of being devastated and depleted, the Seattle Mariners are back in the playoffs for the first time since 1997, and it's A-Rod's team now.

"In '98 we lost the Big Unit. In '99, we lose Griffey, and now we're in the playoffs. It doesn't quite figure out right," Alex Rodriguez said Monday, a day before Seattle's first-round opener against the White Sox.

"But we have a better team, a more balanced team," he said. "It's not a knock against those two guys; it's a compliment for us."

different. He hasn't lost a ballgame, so he just plays. The kid obviously did a nice job."

Primetime Performers

Senior Kevin Kasper has clearly been Iowa's go-to receiver, but Iowa finally got the breakthrough game from Kahlil Hill that it had been waiting for. Under the Memorial Stadium lights, the junior wide receiver set individual career marks with 11 catches and 132 yards.

Junior Ladell Betts also had his best game of the season, rushing for 118 yards. It marked the sixth time the running back surpassed the century mark while at Iowa, but it was the first time this season.

The Amazing Antwaan

Some may argue the Big Ten's best quarterback and athlete resides in Bloomington, Ind. Following IU's Oct. 30 win, quarterback Antwaan Randle El had rushed for 2,059 yards and posted 4,730 passing yards in his career. He's the sixth player in Division I history to have gained 2,000 yards on the ground and 4,000 through the air.

"It's great. I don't know how to express it," Randle El said. "It wasn't a goal or anything, but I accomplished it, so it's great."

and enthusiastic. She is always smiling. She is just a whole lot of fun to coach."

An obvious love of the game and a great attitude are not all that the Colorado native brings to the Iowa squad.

Wolman is the Hawkeyes' leading scorer with seven goals and six assists. She has netted four out of the eight total goals Iowa has scored in conference play.

As if that weren't enough, there is more to take into consideration when discussing Wolman's scoring contribution to the team: She has not always been in scoring position. Because of a lack of depth in the defensive positions, she has spent time filling in for the back line of defense.

"She has played every position, and she did it with a great attitude, with no complaints," Logan said. "She has done everything for us on the field."

Logan said Wolman is the perfect model of a team player. She is always thinking of what is best for the team, even if that means she plays to protect Iowa's goal when she really wants to be attacking the opponents'.

"That is her attitude: 'I'll work for the team,'" Logan said.

Her teammates also notice her uplifting temperament.

"She brings a great attitude," Mobily said. "She is always first to help clean up and get stuff ready for practice."

It was hard for Logan to name Wolman's biggest contribution to the team, because she brings so much. But when it comes to skills on the field, Logan narrowed down Wolman's greatest attribute to consistency.

"Every day she is mentally prepared and consistent," the coach said. "She always brings her 'A' game, not only in matches but at practice."

Wolman said she does not take her time on the soccer field for granted.

"The past couple of months I have realized that you have to do everything you can while you can do it, because you never know when you won't be able to do it anymore," she said. "You can't take for granted what you have."

For a player that helps bring her team to a higher level, she sure seems to have her feet firmly on the ground.

Spartan quarterback not fully recovered

MICHIGAN STATE

One player that Williams wasn't ready to name a starter was quarterback Ryan Van Dyke, who won the starting slot in the preseason but bruised his right thumb in the Spartans' opener. Van Dyke can throw, but has trouble taking snaps, Williams said, leaving freshman Jeff Smoker possibly in line to start his fourth straight game.

"I expect Ryan to do a little bit more this week," Williams said. "We're not exactly sure where he is."

"Every day, he's gotten better. Certainly he wasn't ready to play Saturday, but he's a lot better than he was when he first got the injury."

"I don't know where he is right now," Williams said. "He just started taking snaps for the first time Saturday (in pregame warmup). He wasn't able to do that last week."

"He's throwing the ball. ... We need to know if he can take anywhere from 25, 30, 40 snaps. ... It's gotten better, but it's still not 100 percent right now."

Graham still QB in Pittsburgh

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Though Kent Graham missed the Steelers' 24-13 upset of Jacksonville on Sunday with a hip injury, coach Bill Cowher said Graham would be the starting quarterback when he is healthy.

Graham said. "I want to get back in there as quickly as I can to get back in rhythm."

Kordell Stewart completed 10 of 16 passes for 132 yards in leading the Steelers to their first win this season.

"It's nice to know that Kordell came in and played an excellent game and made good decisions," Cowher said.

"I'm obviously happy about that."

Duval wins first tournament since 1999

David Duval says his back is fine and focuses on Tiger Woods.

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

PINE MOUNTAIN, Ga. — David Duval needed only one week to answer two critical questions about his career: His back is fine, and so is his game.

The next hurdle could take a little longer. While Duval made a spectacular return by winning the Buick Challenge, Tiger Woods was in the middle of his vacation.

"We all know Tiger Woods is the best player in the game, and that he's better prepared than everyone else," Duval said. "You can talk about it until you're blue in the face, but somebody's got to go out there and do something about it."

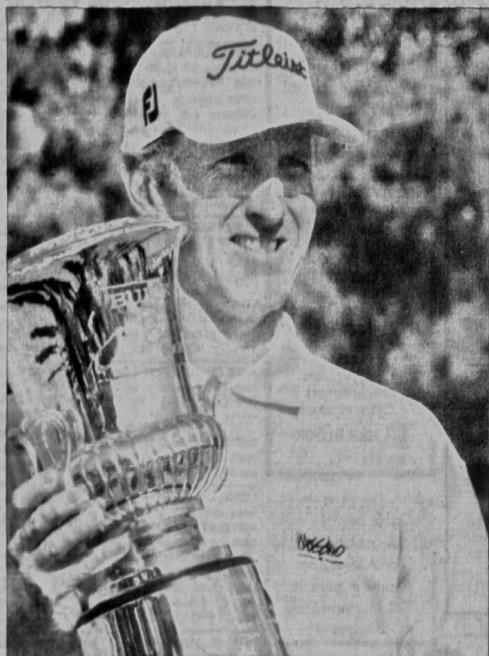

Maybe that somebody will be Duval.

Strong enough to finish a tournament for the first time since the British Open because of a sprained ligament in his back, Duval made 16 birdies during the weekend, including three on the final four holes, for a two-stroke victory over Nick Price and Jeff Maggert.

It was his first victory of a season that, until Sunday, had been a lost cause.

And there are still miles of ground to cover.

While Duval was flat on

Robin Trimarchi/Associated Press

David Duval holds the trophy after shooting a 7-under-par 65 for the day and a 19 under par total to win the Buick Challenge, Sunday.

his back for six weeks while recuperating in Idaho, Woods won three of the four tournaments he played — the PGA Championship, the World Golf Championship event at Firestone and the Canadian Open.

Duval won for the first time in 29 tournaments, dating back to the BellSouth Classic in the spring of 1999.

During that span, Woods won 16 times, including five majors, and nearly as much money as Duval has made in his career.

"That's OK," Duval said. "Eighteen months ago, everyone was asking what's wrong with Tiger. Memories are short out here, as they are in every sport."

Eighteen months ago,

Duval was the toast of golf. While Woods was still trying to sort through an overhaul of his swing, Duval won 11 times in a span of 34 tournaments and rose to No. 1 in the world by winning The Players Championship in his hometown.

Now, he is so far behind Woods in the world ranking that Duval concedes — and a computer in London confirms — that it will be at least two years before he can close the gap. His victory at Callaway Gardens only solidified his spot at No. 3.

While Ernie Els was a runner-up in the first three majors this year, and Phil Mickelson has already won three times this year, Duval's 11 victories over 18 months is reason to believe he has the best chance of trying to slow Woods' assault on the record books.

That will have to wait until next year, when a new season begins with a full slate of major championships before them. Duval, though, seemed eager to get started.

"I'll do everything I can to be prepared," he said. "There's a lot of golf left this year that is important to me."

That starts Thursday with the Michelob Championship at Kingsmill, where he has won two of the last three years. After the Presidents Cup, Duval ends the year with the Tour Championship at East Lake Golf Club in Atlanta.

Ravens' defense is getting a little stingy

Baltimore has forced three shutouts in five games so far this season.

By David Ginsburg
Associated Press

OWINGS MILLS, Md. — Having recorded three shutouts in five games, including two in a row, the Baltimore Ravens have earned the right to claim they have the best defense in the NFL.

"I would say yes," linebacker Ray Lewis said Monday.

The three shutouts have come against three of the weaker teams in the league — Pittsburgh (1-3), Cincinnati (0-4) and Cleveland (2-3) — and Miami has yielded fewer points than Baltimore.

But the Ravens have added their name to the list of some of the stingiest NFL defenses over the past several years.

The Ravens became the first team since the 1985 Chicago Bears to record two consecutive shutouts when they blanked the Browns 12-0 Sunday. The victory, which came on the heels of a 37-0 rout of the Bengals, enabled Baltimore to become the first team since the 1991 Washington Redskins to notch three shutouts in one season.

Coach Brian Billick wants more. Aware that such comments will likely end up on a bulletin board in the Jacksonville locker room, Billick said the Ravens (4-1) will be striving to make it three straight against the defending AFC Central champions.

"When you get a shutout, you have the right to talk about getting two. And when you get two, you have the right to talk and think and dream about getting a third shutout," Billick said. "To think you're going to go down to Jacksonville get a shutout, I would bet the odds would be prohibitive."

"But when you have two shutouts, you have a right to talk about a third. That is a goal for our guys."

A secondary goal, at least, considering that the Jaguars burned the Ravens for 36 points in Week 2. Winning the game, and retaining first place in the division, is Baltimore's main focus.

"I'm not going down there trying to pitch a shutout. I'm not Pedro Martinez or anything like that," defensive tackle Rob Burnett said. "We're going down there to win the game. If we have to win it 100-99, I'll be happy."

The 1970 St. Louis Cardinals and the 1976 Pittsburgh Steelers were the only NFL teams over the last 30 years to record three straight shutouts in the same season. The '76 Steelers also hold the record for most shutouts in a season (five).

"We've got a lot of football left to play. We have three shutouts this early in the season; getting five is a lofty goal and is something you have to put in front of your players," Billick said.

2000 SYDNEY OLYMPICS WRAPUP

NBC's Olympic coverage turns back the clock

NBC thrived on personal profiles and story-telling.

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press

NEW YORK — In some ways, NBC's coverage of the Sydney Games was about turning back the clock.

Competition was aired on tape up to 24 hours after it happened. Cold War themes were revived, and the ratings reached depths not seen for an Olympics since the 1960s.

The 17 days in Australia could have a lasting legacy for future TV coverage of Olympics. NBC, paying about $3.5 billion for U.S. broadcast rights through 2008, hopes not.

And, as long as Dick Ebersol is chairman of NBC Sports, there is no plan to abandon his Olympic philosophy: emphasize storytelling and athlete profiles. After all, the network did make money off the Sydney Games and won the ratings every night.

"Some people are results-oriented, but the majority of people that watch the Olympics are there for the passion, striving, sacrifice you don't see in our pro sports," Ebersol says.

The 2002 Winter Games are 16 months away (as NBC pointed out Sunday, taking four minutes to plug its Salt Lake City coverage), and there will be a mix of live and taped telecasts. In Sydney, NBC decided to air all but one event on tape because of the 15-hour time difference with the East Coast.

At the next Summer Olympics, in Athens in 2004, the network again will show only taped events in prime time because of the time difference. During the day, however, some events will air live.

Ad sales could be affected somewhat by Sydney ratings so low NBC had to add extra commercials to satisfy sponsors. The network already has long-term sponsors tied in; about 55 percent of commercial space has been sold for 2002, about 25 percent for 2004, NBC says.

"Advertisers will be back," said Paul Schulman, president of media buyer Schulman/Advancers NY. "NBC got them to where they should be in terms of how many people see the ads. NBC is in the Olympics business, and it doesn't want to lose advertisers."

One thing seems certain: The Summer Games won't be staged in late September again.

"There will be an effort made to schedule the 2008 Games in July or August to accommodate U.S. television," said Neal Pilon, a TV consultant who oversaw coverage of two Olympics as president of CBS Sports.

One repercussion from Sydney could be felt right away.

The extra ads filled some of the space set aside for promoting NBC's fall shows. The ratings were 14 percent under what advertisers were told they would reach when they spent up to $600,000 for 30 seconds in prime time.

"Would it have helped to barrage viewers with promos? Sure," said Stacey Lynn Koerner, VP of broadcast research at TN Media.

"Would the promos have been that much different from what was already seen? Probably not."

The Sydney ratings dropped below 11 each of the last three nights, finishing up with a 10.9 Sunday (each rating point represents a little more than 1 million homes).

That left the cumulative rating at a 13.8, the lowest for any Summer or Winter Olympics since 1968, when ABC paid a total of $7 million to air both.

With Olympics over, Sydney can take a breath

Australia says goodbye to the Games with a huge celebration.

By Ted Anthony
Associated Press

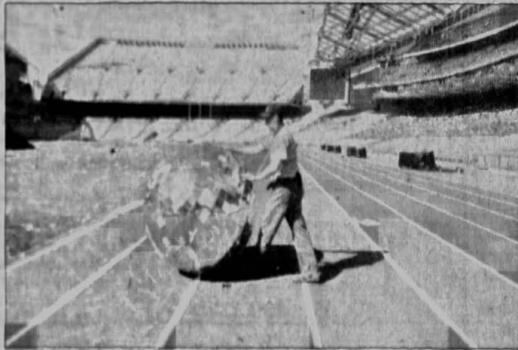

SYDNEY, Australia — They are gone now, or at least leaving — more than 10,000 athletes, 20,000 journalists and millions of fans, the people who made the 2000 Summer Olympics come to life. Sydney, while hardly empty, can now take a breath.

Australia said goodbye to the games Sunday night with a citywide explosion of light and a festive closing ceremony that delved into the nation's id with some very curious results.

Fireworks rolled east across the sky, an 8.5-mile "fuse" that carried the Olympic torch's symbolic light from the stadium along barges in Homebush Bay to a humanity-crammed downtown. There, the majestic Harbor Bridge exploded like a giant Roman candle in a fusillade of pyrotechnics.

"Seven years ago, I said, 'And the winner is Sydney,'" said Juan Antonio Samaranch, the retiring president of the International Olympic Committee. "Well, what can I say now? Maybe, with my Spanish accent, 'Aussie, Aussie, Aussie.'"

The crowd and more than

Rick Rycroft/Associated Press

Paul Van Eck, the turf supervisor for the Sydney Olympic Stadium, rolls a mirror ball across the track as crews clean up the mess left over from the closing ceremony of the Sydney Olympic Games Monday.

10,000 athletes thundered the response now known across the world: "Oi! Oi! Oi!" Organizers wanted a relaxed closing show that let competitors and spectators send the games off in style. And a raucous, untethered party they got.

It veered oddly among comedy, ancient ritualism and scenes that seemed straight out of a hallucinogenic reverie — dramatic testament to what choreography, technology and an arenafull of enthusiastic spectators can do.

The festivities began minutes after last-place finisher Elias Rodriguez of Micronesia ran into Olympic Stadium, ending the men's marathon. And if anyone worried these would be dubbed the "Drug Games," it didn't show Sunday night: The Olympic flame went dark, but the partying went on.

As with any Olympics, the 2000 Summer Games offered a dizzying selection of memorable moments to take home — and some that all wish they could forget. From the pool to the track, the baseball field to the wrestling ring, athletes made the marks of a lifetime.

It was the Olympics of the Thorpedo. Of Cathy Freeman, the aboriginal sprinter who shouldered a nation's racial burden. Of Eric Moussambani, the swimmer from Equatorial Guinea who barely finished and captured the imagination of an underdog-friendly world.

It was an Olympics of whooshes — Ian Thorpe and Susie O'Neill and Jenny Thompson and Inge de Bruijn whooshing through the water. Marion Jones and Maurice Greene whooshing along the track. Stacy Dragila and Tatiana Grigorieva whooshing over the bar and claiming spots in pole-vaulting history.

It was an Olympics of surprises and unexpected twists: the U.S. softball team rallying for gold after a series of stunning losses; American wrestler Rulon Gardner defeating the most formidable foe of all, Russian Alexander Karelin; the U.S. men's basketball team nearly falling to Lithuania; Lance Armstrong losing the 33-mile time trial to his close friend Viatcheslav Ekimov of Russia.

Finally, it was the Olympics of doping and cheating, showcased as never before thanks to more stringent IOC testing policies and punishments. Positive tests claimed five medals, including a gold captured by Andreea Raducan, the little Romanian girl whose doctor prescribed cold medicine that turned out to be banned.

horoscopes

Tuesday, October 3, 2000 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get out as much as possible. You need people around who will help boost your ego. Seminars will bring information and open doors to interesting new connections.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Changing your job may mean making a residential move. Your financial situation is looking brighter. Consult with family members before making a final decision.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Educational courses may turn into more of a social connection. Your new friends will introduce you to someone very special.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Get down to brass tacks. You need to put your time, effort and energy into your professional direction. Take work home if you feel it will help you advance.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You will have a real yen to party. Don't forget about your mate because you are having too much fun on your own. You may owe your partner an apology. Your need to be in the limelight may cause friction with the one you truly love.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't let your emotions get the better of you. Your partner may blow situations out of proportion today. Try not to let your financial worries get you down. Keep your thoughts to yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Getting together with friends and meeting new people will bring the mental stimulation you require. Travel will be beneficial and will open your eyes to new ideas.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your temper will be tested. Financial concerns may cause anxiety. You may want to put your family on a stricter budget. Use your energy to help children achieve their goals.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You mustn't make decisions that will have lasting effects. Don't get involved in ambiguous investments or wagers. Remember your family obligations.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Involvement in secretive affairs will affect your reputation and cause emotional upset. Family members will misinterpret you, and discord could lead to estrangement.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Spend time with individuals who can give you information. You will need to get away to gain perspective. You can make good decisions regarding your direction.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Clear your decks. You need to recycle, renew, and redo. Look at your options. You may need to sit down and discuss your personal life with your mate. Changes are in order.

The Ledge

Things you won't hear in tonight's debate

- Now introducing... Ralph Nader.
- My opponent has a really good point.
- My opponent's wife is HOT!
- Just let me look my audience in the eye...
- My running mate made a really good point yesterday...
- You know, Mr. Lehrer, that's a really dumb-ass question.
- This is so much fun when you're stoned.
- And now, an intelligent question from the audience.
- I hablo English just good.
- When do those busy interns show up?
- Something relevant to the American people.
- You know, while making out with an elderly lady yesterday, I got this great...
- Buddhists are people, too.
- Moderates are such wimps.
- I invented the Electoral College.
- Politicians are always doing — I mean, saying — lines they shouldn't.
- Party on!
