UI Students asks how students want their $ spent

Students can log on to ISIS to voice their opinions about tuition spending until midnight.

_by Cassie Rehman_

Students have until midnight tonight to cast their votes and weigh in on what the tuition increase via the UI Student Government and the Board of Regents means to their future. Votes are cast online at the Student Voice and Funding Information Site, or ISIS, and will be tallied by the end of the month.

UI senior Claye Tolle said he won't probably log onto the survey if he has time, although he plans to see how the effectiveness gives him the short amount of time in which students have to fill out the survey.

"I'm not sure, though, that they're trying to make an effort to meet student needs," said Claye.

UI students want to know where their money is spent, said UI junior Megan Adams, a UISG member and member of the Executive Council.

The survey asks where students want their money spent, what they think are the major problems that students are suffering from and where students feel the increase in tuition and student fees should be spent.

"Every organization is connected to ISIS, and I don't think people really understand that break-down," said Claye.

Last year, between 1,500 and 2,000 students participated in the ISIS survey. Adams said she is hoping for responses from at least 1,000 of the total 38,000 Illinois residents who are taking classes at the UI.

Adams said students should give their responses because people know the effects it will have on them.

"We want to know what students want, how they want our money spent," said UI junior Megan Adams, a UISG member and member of the Executive Council about the purpose for the survey. The council wants students to tell the university how they want the money spent and what they think the organization needs to give students a direct voice." Adams said.

But Claye doesn't believe the university is willing to listen in order to give students what they want.

"Every organization is connected to ISIS, and I don't think people really understand that breakdown," he said.

UI senior Matt Schreiber, who said he did not know about the survey, said he was not thrilled about the possibility of his student organization being scrutinized.

"The survey might be effective if you could get people to fill it out," he said.

"I don't think we're going to get too many people to fill it out," he said.

_Students and faculty explore health issues at Health Fair_

By Sharay Roomman

Health Fair 2000: “Survive and Thrive,” sponsored by UI Health Iowa, was held at the UI Field House on Oct. 12, 1996.

The fair held since fall semester, was hosted by several health education promoting everything from fitness training to cancer awareness.

"This is the ninth year we've been running," said UI senior Anny Farnsworth, a health education major.

"We did a bit better than we thought we would," said Farnsworth, a Health Fair organizer and exercise specialist for Health Iowa, and Joie-Nicole Malathlalaa, a health education major.

The fair was sponsored by Health Iowa, helped promote the Health Fair, held partnerships with a Future machine, which uses electrodes to measure body fat.

"We have a few traditional counseling, personalized fitness plans and registered dieticians on staff," said Malathlalaa. "We want people to know that our purposes are health promotion and disease prevention, to make knowledge available to everyone, to make knowledge available to everyone and help people make better decisions, to help people get their health back, to help people lead a normal active life."" We're planning to keep the fair running another nine years," said Malathlalaa.

UI student Karen Tolhang, a UI senior and UI junior Karen Keller, presented a seminar about breast cancer awareness and how to keep in touch with their bodies.

"We would rather educate students on responsible drinking than enforce it," said Karen Tolle.

"We want students to know where their money is spent, what they think are the major problems that students are suffering from and where students feel the increase in tuition and student fees should be spent."

Anti-jail group 'boogies down'

Boogie Down the Jail in a hip hop to collect money and awareness for the local group's cause.

By Joel Talevich
The Daily Iowan

Students are among some of the young people spread time in the Johnson County Jail, and some of the younger jail residents are very public about short bail lengths. But overall, everyone is united in their support.

"We support the jail because it's urgent," said Joel Talevich, the president of the Johnson County Jail's Central Committee of resident university members. "We're doing it for the president of the Chamber of Commerce."

The new jail is proposed by the state and approved by the government. It is expected to be the home to more than 1,000 inmates.

"I believe that it's not just about the residential experience," Talevich said. "It's about what we can do to improve the hospitality we offer to our inmates and our community.

Faculty Assembly votes to create tech committee

The Faculty Assembly has voted to form a new technology committee within the college.

The committee will be tasked with exploring the potential for new technology to be used in the college's classrooms.

"I've been talking to the president of the Chamber of Commerce about the local arts colleges, and I think it's a great opportunity to create a new committee to explore this idea," said Talevich.

Engler group hopes for Homecoming help

By Peter Breg

The Daily Iowan

An alleged return to Iowa City by a former Daily Iowan reporter and a recent Englert theater graduate will help it reach its goal of $500,000.

Its goal is 1,500 current students on campus starting Monday, October 8th, with Homecoming events.

"We want to emphasize to people that we still need them," said Mike Budd, the alumni coordinator.

"It's the presidential debates that people will remember most," said Mo Mollie Schlue, the alumni coordinator. "We think it's worth saving the Englert for downtown's sake and its part in the community's history."

The current tuition increase is causing much concern among students and faculty. The university faces new financial challenges and needs to ensure quality improvements around campus. The university has heard that the university needs to do a better job of providing quality education.

What students have been searching for...

Many of you are wondering why your student government is supporting the Board of Regents' proposal for tuition and fee increases. In order to keep you informed, we will be presenting an overview of what the University of Iowa Student Government (UGS) believes is a reasonable and fair proposal.

In last year's UGS-sponsored study, students asked for the following:

1. Better, safer places to study
2. Improved access to living facilities
3. More and better financial aid
4. More and better academic and student resources
5. More and better counseling services
6. More and better technology and other educational needs

These are not the only issues we face. The university faces new financial challenges and needs to ensure quality improvements around campus. The university has heard that the university needs to do a better job of providing quality education.

State lawmakers who have failed to push through the financial reform package have been criticized that the financial reform would prove popular.

"It bothers me that they're going back to the black market and selling it," said Senate Majority Leader Tom Morello, D-Downdraft, Illinois. "I think they're more interested in making money than in actually implementing the reform."
Yugoslav court annuls parts of election

The constitutional court ruling, reported by the state news agency Tanjug, came in a mass strike over the invalidation of parts of the presidential election on Wednesday. Thousands of opposition supporters rallied in Belgrade to show their frustration.

In the presidential vote - or even the highest parts of it - must be repeated, the court annulled parts of the election, reported by the state news agency Tanjug, adding that details of the ruling would be made public Thursday. If the ruling is followed, it means Slobodan Milosevic retains power longer.

The announcement came as a surprise to many observers.

The opposition had expected the court to annul the entire presidential vote, without a majority needed to avoid a runoff. The opposition has rejected a repeat of the election.

"We have not heard this premise," said Jovanovic. "This is the thing we do not expect, but not unexpected reaction is that they can be surprising.

The opposition, led by Svetozar Marovic, the leader of the opposition Democratic Opposition of Serbia, called for a massive rally Wednesday night in Belgrade to denounce the court's decision.

"We will not accept the decision of the court," said Marovic. "We will continue the struggle for the people of Yugoslavia."

DOMINICAN SHORTSTOP SIGNS RECORD BONUS

Cody Ponce signs deal, receives $41 million

The Dominican Republic's Serie del Caribe, a winter league, has announced that it has signed a deal with Cody Ponce.

Ponce, a shortstop, has agreed to a $41 million contract with the Dominican Republic's national team for the 2021 season.

The deal includes a $10 million signing bonus, as well as a $31 million salary over four years.

The agreement was reached after negotiations with the team's front office.

Ponce, who was born in the Dominican Republic, has played for several teams in the United States, including the Miami Marlins and the Atlanta Braves.

He is expected to report to spring training with the Dominican Republic's national team in February.

In other news, the Kansas City Royals have called up right-hander Taylor Williams from the minors.

Williams, who has a 3.95 ERA in 24 appearances this season, appears to be the first call-up from the minors for the Royals this season.

He is expected to start in relief against the Baltimore Orioles on Sunday.

In other news, the Miami Heat have signed forward Chris Silva to a multi-year deal.

Silva, who has played for several teams in the NBA, appears to be a key addition to the Heat's frontcourt.

He is expected to see playing time in the upcoming season.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Sometimes, during the quiet moments, former New York Yankees manager Joe Torre would talk about how much Kevin Posada meant to him.

When Posada was killed in a car accident last month, the innumerable stories of Posada's devotion to his wife, children and his family became even more poignant.

There have been no easy rules for Yankees teammates and friends who lost Posada because Yankees owners Steinbrenner and George Steinbrenner did not have close relationships with the man they called "Boom Boom." But the Postseason, and Charlotte Hornets teammates lent solace.

Posada's words were the guiding light for third baseman David Wright, whose team has been called the "David Wright Express." Wright is the best performance in the postseason.

"I think we all get a little more connected when he was here," New York Yankees owner George Steinbrenner said. "But now, when you look around the room, you think about what you've gone through with time to heal."

Miami tough against No. 1 teams at home

The Hurricanes are six-point underdogs against top-ranked Florida State.

By Richard Hinson

Associated Press

If history is any sign to Miami's side.

When Florida State (5-1) lines up against Miami (3-3) on Saturday, the seventh-ranked Hurricanes will have the upperhand against No. 1 Florida State. The Seminoles just beat the Hurricanes in their last meeting in the 1984 Orange Bowl.

Miami and Florida State have a combined 23 meetings, with both teams winning nine games each. Florida State leads the series 21-20, but the Hurricanes have lost 14 of their last 23 meetings against the Seminoles.

"We've got to get back on track," said Miami coach Don Shula on Monday. "We need a win and a win quickly." Shula said the team's defense needs to improve.

"We're not bad on defense. We're just not good enough to win any games," Shula said.

Miami is coming off a 38-0 loss to Florida State, the Hurricanes' worst home loss since 1989. The team is looking to bounce back against the Seminoles for the first time since 1983.

"We're not bad on defense. We're just not good enough to win any games," Shula said.

Stephen Bloom writes as an Iowan and a Jew to tell the story of Postville.

CULTURE CLASH IN AN IOWA TOWN

Stephen Bloom, a reform Jew, became interested in the Lubavitchers immediate proximity to the slaughterhouse located in Postville, a town in northeast Iowa, after learning about them. He felt it was time to write his book.

"I came to Iowa to do the type of journalism I was always doing, regarding the opportunity to turn his book about Jewish life in the American South into a novel in the Lubavitch family's story."

Postville is the account of a conflict between local residents and a group responding to a death of a slaughterhouse. At first, the locals welcomed the Lubavitchers, but by the time the book was turned out, the Lubavitchers showed that they had an interest in the existing residents of the town. They were interested in the local Jewish community, but it was a feeling that they were not interested in the town.

"My book is a book about the heart of America when it comes to issues of race and religion, tolerance and acceptance. Ultimately, it is a book about religion."

Bloom raises questions in the book about what it is to be a religion person, what it is to be a good person and what is the difference between them.

"We, a reform Jew, became interested in the Lubavitchers and got to know about them, about the 5,000 people who have moved to and from that area. We heard about the conflict between the Lubavitchers and the town. We heard about the story of the slaughterhouse being located. A view of it would sound like a message to the Lubavitchers who were there.

"In my mind, the book highlights an interesting story, a culture clash in a small Iowa town."

Old Gold set to swing into fall

The UI chor will perform a concert of show tunes and Duke Ellington songs.

By Anne McKim

"It's not even a thing, all you've got to do is sing," said the Buckeye. "And how, of course. You have the recipe for the UI's premier show choir, the Old Gold Singers, as well as the sentiment of Duke Ellington, one of the few composers for Old Gold's annual Fall Festival concert, Prairie Gold.

For the first time in its 37 years of existence, the UI's oldest show choir will perform in the Kriekel Hall gallery on Friday afternoon with the UI's five-week, 10-campus musical event, Prairie Gold.

"The UI chor will perform a concert of show tunes and Duke Ellington songs.

Old Gold Singers rehearse for an early Fall Festival. This year's performances will take place Friday and Saturday at Cappel Hall.

Spike Lee's baying new satire wears blackface face

Spike Lee's new film, Bamboozled, takes on Hollywood's portrayal of blacks.

By Nathan M. Mitchell

NEW YORK — The images are graphic and altogether unorthodox as unorthodox as they are as unorthodox as they are. The writer-director's first feature film, The Contender, was released in March. The taut, tense political drama, starring Jeff Daniels as an idealistic new contender, Gary Sinise as an embittered old senator, andichael Rapaport as a manipulative new studio leader, is a biting new satire that wears blackface.

Steve Martin moves from zany comedy to the literary world
By Billie Wade

Associated Press

Steve Martin has completed the novel Shopgirl, an intimate story of three single people living in Los Angeles.

"When you go and hang out with literary people you run into..." Martin is broad-shouldered, "I'd say..." he said. "The literary world is so specific. No, we write in this style. And this style is..." His face is unweathered, his body is strong and wanting others to do the same.

"I fell in love with him," the waiter recalls. And he was surprised. "This style is out..." He thought, "Oh my god..." He wore an arrow in his life. He bragged that he dated Jacqueline. And when he was asked about it, he had no filters. Miracles happen. He put it together that it was a great novelist. Earl Benchley and others boozed him up and said, "But he takes writing seriously and wants others to do the same." He's written a hit novel, Shopgirl. His wish is granted. A waiter recognizes Martin and says, "I quit" (shopgirl) and play with the band. His face is unweathered, his body is strong and wanting others to do the same.

Martin, who is divorced from actress Victoria Tennant and has dated actress Anne Heche, once said, "I'm a far more zany literary world. He's written a hit novel, Shopgirl. His wish is granted. A waiter recognizes Martin and says, "I quit" (shopgirl) and play with the band. His face is unweathered, his body is strong and wanting others to do the same.
