Bush chides Gore for trusting gov't

■ Republican Cedar Rapids Mayor Lee Clancey announces her support of Gore.

By Erica Driskell
The Daily Iowan

CEDAR RAPIDS — Texas Gov. George W. Bush returned to Iowa Thursday to campaign in a hangar at the Eastern Iowa Airport before a crowd well-equipped with "Bush for President" and "U.S. Military Needs Bush-Cheney" signs.

"It is great to be back in Iowa, where it all began," the GOP presidential candidate said as he gave the thumbs-up sign to the more than 600 supporters filling the hangar.

If he were elected president, Bush said, he would give the power back to the people, unlike his opponent, Al Gore, who wanted to expand the role of the government.

However, Republican Cedar Rapids Mayor Lee Clancey said she won't be swayed by Bush's appeal to area voters. Clancey announced Thursday that she plans to vote for Gore because of his stances on education, taxation and women's rights.

"I have no doubt that Gov. Bush is a very personable and likable man. But what I'm looking for in a candidate is one who has intelligence and wisdom and vision and breadth and depth and knowledge of the issues that will allow that person to guide this country in the future," Clancey said. "And I believe that Al Gore has those attributes."

Clancey, a career Republican, watched the vice presidential debate at the Linn County Democratic Party headquarters.

"I believe Al Gore brings to this country a better kind of leadership than Gov. Bush does," Clancey said.

Bush did receive overwhelming support from the crowd, who cheered him as he spoke about his plans if he were elected. He said the ongoing battle about a program for prescription drugs can only be solved by the Republicans and Democrats working together, Bush said. He emphasized that his plan would benefit every American citizen.

Part of the projected national surplus should be spent on tax cuts for the people, Bush said, who still claimed that Gore used "fuzzy math" in Tuesday's presidential debates when figuring that the wealthy would get a large amount of the breaks.

Bush offered evidence of Gore's "fuzzy math" by showing the crowd an Iowa family with three daughters standing behind the governor during the rally.

The family currently pays $4,312 in federal income taxes, Bush said, and if he were elected president, that payment would drop almost 50 percent, saving the middle-class family $2,127.

As temps fall, heat bills rise

■ Higher gas prices mean higher energy costs, making it hard on students who pay for heat.

By Sharyn Hosemann
The Daily Iowan

With the first frost approaching, Iowa residents are being warned of higher energy bills heading their way.

Natural gas prices have been up since March, but residents will notice the impact in coming months when they turn on their heat.

"The key issue here is that wholesale gas prices have gone up, so Iowa will see a rate increase," Alliant Energy spokesman Chris Schoenherr said.

While Alliant predicts a 29 percent increase, MidAmerican Energy customer communication manager Marge Burke said the increase may be from 30 to 45 percent, as predicted by the national natural gas futures market.

This winter's projected total swell could be from $160 to $260 per household for the average Iowan. Burke said the uncertainty of severe weather makes it hard to speculate.

State Climatologist Harry Hillaker said it is a safe bet that below-average temperatures will occur this winter, making it significantly colder than last year's mild winter. Hillaker said temperatures will be lower beginning this week and that the first frost is expected today or within the week.

Wholesale gas prices have increased because of a good economy and the laws of supply and demand, Burke said.

"The industrial processes are running faster and longer using natural gas. It is the cleanest burning and most economical," Burke said.

Alliant and MidAmerican have purchased natural gas when prices were low and put it on reserve.

"We are diligent in the summer months to put gas in storage when we find the best prices," Schoenherr said.

Alliant and MidAmerican offer budget billing programs for those who see the price change as a financial problem.

"We are putting inserts that include budget billing information and tips on how to save on bills in along with the bills so customers will be informed," Burke said.

Some students, who are MidAmerican customers, were surprised to hear about the increase but don't see it

Homecoming 2000 enthusiasm rocks as Iowa shouts

■ This year's Iowa Shout includes spoofs of The Wizard of Oz and Scream.

Hard work, determination and spirit all made Thursday's Iowa Shout a success, participants said.

This year's event featured 12 skits that had UI spins on The Wizard of Oz and West Side Story as well as a Scream spoof and many song-and-dance numbers paying homage to NSync and Britney Spears.

Snow won't freeze Homecoming

■ Iowa City gears up for a spirit-filled, but possibly blustery, weekend.

By Tony Robinson
The Daily Iowan

Chilly weather and predictably snow will not discourage UI students and alumni from enjoying Homecoming festivities this weekend.

More than 83 groups will line up at 4:30 p.m. today to participate in the annual Homecoming parade, celebrating the theme of "2000 Reasons To Be a Hawkeye." Immediately after the parade, which commences at 6:15 p.m., a pep rally will be held on the Pentacrest, followed by fireworks in Hubbard Park.

Matthew Peasley, a UI junior and the assistant parade director, said the Homecoming office has put forth a superb effort and the activities will be fun.

"Taking part in Homecoming activities is a tradition, and there will be something that everyone can enjoy," he said.

Revolt sweeps Belgrade; Milosevic regime teeters

■ Hundreds of thousands of demonstrators seize Parliament and media outlets.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Mobs seeking to topple Slobodan Milosevic turned their fury on his centers of power Thursday, leaving Parliament and other key Belgrade sites in shambles and flames. The 13-year rule of the Yugoslav president appeared to have collapsed.

Opposition leader Zoran Djindjic said Milosevic was holed up near the eastern town of Bor, some 50 miles southeast of the capital, near the border with Romania and Bulgaria. He said the dictator had not been in touch with the opposition camp.

"As of today, Serbia is again a democratic nation," declared an opposition leader, Nebojsa Covic, referring to Yugoslavia's main republic.

"It belongs to all of us, to Europe and to the world."

By nightfall, the crowd's fury was spent as the symbols of Milosevic's power, including police stations and the state media, had fallen to the opposition. Huge crowds — U.S. intelligence estimated half a million people were taking part — wandered the streets and gathered in the squares celebrating their apparent victory.

Opposition leaders, including some former senior military officers, appealed to the armed forces to support their candidate, Vojislav Kostunica.

Ohio bicyclist finds home on the road

■ After losing his home to fire, Ohio man begins a cross-country journey.

By Amanda Gorsche
The Daily Iowan

William Galloway has seen angels and he has seen devils. And in the nearly four years he has been traveling across country on his bike, he has had the kinds of frightening and exhilarating experiences people "caught up in the fast lane" can only dream about.

On Thursday, he was fortunate enough to meet a few of those "angels" at Oreck Floor Care Center, 465 West Highway 1. After working for several days in Williamsburg, Iowa, Galloway was on his way to Wal-Mart to buy some warm clothing for his winter rides when he stopped for some refreshments at Donutland, 521 Highway 1.

Inside, a curious Iowa City resident, Kirk Graham, started looking at Galloway's recumbent-style bike fully equipped with a CB radio, trailer, sleeping bag, water bottles and high-beam headlights.

When Galloway exited Donutland, the two began a conversation that led to lunch and road stories at the store of Graham's friend Marsha Stock — the Oreck Floor Care Center next door. Graham and Stock said they are fascinated by the good fortune Galloway has found on the road and the freedom he experiences.

"Kirk and I are totally jealous," Stock said. "We have all these responsibilities."

Galloway began his life on the road after he lost all of his belongings in an apartment fire in 1997. Then 35, Galloway left his Madison, Ohio, home to avoid becoming "another homeless statistic."

"I didn't care if I lived or died," Galloway said. "I wouldn't become a bum, so I took it to the road. I turned anger into adventure."

And adventure he has had.

Traveling through all 48 continental states for an estimated 5,000 miles, he once cruised at 63 mph down a mountain into Helena, Mont., passing three semis on the way, he said. He found the most kindness in Tennessee, and once, in Louisiana, he swore he saw the devil in a man who offered to take care of him for the rest of his life, he said.

"I turned away and pedaled as fast as I could," Galloway said.

Using the name Pedal Pusher, Galloway communicates with people across the United States on the CB radio mounted on the front of his bike. Truckers don't believe he's traveling by bike until they see him, and people offer him jobs over the radio when they hear his story, he said.

Galloway does odd jobs along the way to support himself but said driving a truck across the country would be his ultimate fortune cookie.

"We have to see what your fortune is, Bill," Stock said.

Galloway cracked open the

do it," Galloway said.

After recounting his many adventures and finishing his lunch of Chinese food, Galloway was urged to open his fortune cookie.

"We have to see what your fortune is, Bill," Stock said.

Galloway cracked open the sweet little package and read the ironic message that has rung true for his experiences on the road so far.

He chuckled as he read, "He who loves you will follow you."

Yom Kippur, 24-hour fast to begin Sunday

■ The community prepares to celebrate the holiest day in Judaism's calendar this weekend.

By Annie Webbking
The Daily Iowan

UI freshman Scotty Pierce will be cleansing his inner spirit and repenting his sins to start the Jewish New Year with a clean slate on Oct. 8.

Pierce will fast for 24 hours in honor of Yom Kippur, which starts Sunday at sundown. That is why you fast — so your mind is not on food. You're supposed to be thinking about things that are more important than food.

— Carolyn Nevins,
UI freshman

During the 24 hours of Yom Kippur, Jewish people don't consume food or drink so that they can concentrate on remembering the hardships of other Jews, think about those who are less fortunate, and ask God and others for forgiveness of their sins.

"That is why you fast — so your mind is not on food. You're supposed to be thinking about things that are more important than food," said UI freshman Carolyn Nevins.

Also during Yom Kippur, Jews attend a series of services. This year, services are being held at the IMU for the Iowa City Jewish community. They start at 6:45 p.m. on Oct. 8 and continue with a service on Oct. 9 at 9 a.m. Afternoon and evening services will be held at Agudas Achim Synagogue.

UI freshman Evan Miller plans to go to services on Oct. 9 instead of going to class.

"I think it's more important

Kourtney Hoffman/The Daily Iowan

to go to services," Miller said. "I can get notes from my friends. This only happens once a year."

The UI is informed about the major holidays for which students should be excused. It is the responsibility of the students to talk to the faculty about making up tests and the faculty should be willing to work with them, said Gerald Sorokin, the director of Hillel Jewish Student Center. Sorokin said that since the holiday is late this year, it is especially in conflict with midterms.

"Occasionally we hear about students who feel like they are forced to violate their observance of the holiday because faculty members don't give them the ability to make up work," Sorokin said.

Yom Kippur is also a time to spend with family, said Pierce, who will be spending the holiday with his family in his hometown on the evening of Oct. 8 before coming back to Iowa City later that night. He said that in past years he and his family have gone on walks in the woods to celebrate and think about the importance of the holy day.

Pierce said that spending time with family helps much more than going to services when it comes to not thinking about hunger. The services are really long and it's hard not to think about food, he said.

CITY BRIEF
Family relocated after fire

The day after a fire caused approximately $20,000 in damage to his home, Rev. Michael Davis and fire investigators say they still don't know how the blaze began.

At 6:14 p.m. Wednesday, firefighters responded to a call at Davis' home, 742 Keswick Drive.

"We stepped on it pretty good getting over there," Iowa City Fire Department Battalion Chief Elmer Brenneman said, because the initial reports stated the house was completely engulfed in flames and that small children may have been inside. However, no one was home.

Only the back deck and the kitchen were on fire. Nineteen firefighters from Iowa City and Coralville were able to put the fire out in about 30 minutes.

Investigators concluded the fire started on the back deck and spread into the kitchen, but the incident is still under investigation.

The Red Cross relocated the Davis family to a local motel Wednesday night, where they will stay until their house is habitable again.

Pulliam Journalism Fellowship

Jump-start your newspaper journalism career with a solid program that boasts four Pulitzer Prize winners among its alumni - the Pulliam Journalism Fellowship. The Fellowship offers myriad career opportunities; in fact, a Pulliam Fellow from our first class of 1974, Barbara Henry, now serves as president and publisher of The Indianapolis Star. Moreover, a new graduate of our year 2000 class has just been hired as a full-time staff reporter at The Indianapolis Star.

Now entering its 28th year, the 2001 Pulliam Journalism Fellowship helps build a bridge from the classroom to the newsroom. Fellows are assigned to The Indianapolis Star or The Arizona Republic in Phoenix for 10 weeks each summer as staff reporters. We award 20 fellowships annually. The stipend is $5,775.

Traditionally, our fellowships have been open only to graduating college seniors. In 2001, we will be expanding eligibility to include college sophomores and juniors as well as seniors pursuing a career in newspaper journalism. We will be accepting applications for our Summer 2001 program in September 2000.

Visit our Web site at <http://www.starnews.com/pjf> or e-mail Fellowship director Russell B. Pulliam at russell.pulliam@starnews.com for an application packet. You also may request a packet by writing:

Claiborne trial set for March

The former UI dental student faces a variety of charges, including six counts of harassment.

By Nicole Schuppert
The Daily Iowan

At a brief conference Thursday, attorneys involved with the Tarsha Claiborne case agreed to begin the trial on March 5, 2001.

Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White met with the Johnson County case coordinator, Sandy Dains, to schedule the date. One of Claiborne's attorneys, Leon Spies, participated in the meeting via telephone.

A former UI dental student originally from Baton Rouge, La., Claiborne, 24, was charged in April with six counts of third-degree harassment and charges of criminal trespassing, hate crime and threats in violation of individual rights, according to court documents.

She was also charged with possession of marijuana after police searched her apartment, court records said.

During her interview with police, Claiborne allegedly admitted to sending racist e-mails to UI College of Dentistry faculty and students, leaving a plate of ramen noodles meant to represent brains on the doorstep of a third-year minority dental student and threatening to blow up the dental building, court documents said.

An earlier time for the trial was not available because of time conflicts with other cases the attorneys are involved in.

A January date would interfere with the schedule of Alfredo Parrish, Claiborne's other attorney, who might be involved with a month-long trial during that time. A February date would conflict with the Jonathon Memmer double-homicide trial, in which White is the prosecuting attorney.

Fed inquiry finds racial profiling

New York Mayor Rudolph Giuliani denies the charge against a unit of the NYPD.

By Donna De La Cruz
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Mayor Rudolph Giuliani on Thursday angrily denied reported Justice Department findings that an elite unit of the New York Police Department engaged in racial profiling while conducting an aggressive campaign of street searches.

The inquiry by federal prosecutors began after the 1999 shooting death of Amadou Diallo, an unarmed African immigrant killed by four members of the Police Department's Street Crime Unit. The officers, acquitted earlier this year, had said Diallo matched the description of a rape suspect.

In a 30-minute tirade at City Hall on Thursday, Giuliani said if officers ignored the race of possible suspects, the city's crime rate would skyrocket, and he questioned the timing of the leak of the findings, coming one month before the November elections.

"There's obviously something going on in the Clinton administration to try to target police departments unfairly, but to target the NYPD is absurd," Giuliani said.

"There is no racial profiling in the New York City Police Department," the mayor said. "We will fight this case anywhere."

Attorney General Janet Reno declined to comment, and White House officials referred questions to Reno's office.

Amid speculation, cause of UI student's death still unknown

It may be weeks before Johnson County Medical Examiner T.T. Bozek knows what killed Justin Reschly, 20, who transferred to the UI this fall.

Reschly's roommate discovered him after coming back from an early class on Sept. 25. At the time, Steve Parrott, the director of University Communications, said officials did not suspect foul play as the cause of death.

Bozek predicted that it could take weeks to determine the cause of Reschly's death because he had sent toxicology tests to a lab and was awaiting results.

There have been news reports that physical ailments, including heart attack and brain hemorrhage, are not suspected causes of death. However, Bozek would not comment.

"I don't have a final report, and I don't know anything specific," he said.

Reschly was from Wayland, Iowa. He had recently transferred to the UI to be closer to his family after playing basketball at Southwest State University in Minnesota. Reschly had played in the Iowa City Prime Time Basketball league and was thinking about walking onto the UI basketball team is to get people excited for Homecoming 2000 and to show participants and spectators a fun, school-spirit-filled evening.

Shouting out Homecoming spirit

"We're pumped," said UI sophomore Kim Vial, a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority. "All the houses worked really hard on this."

Most houses worked on their skits for a month, staying up until 2 a.m. at times, fixing sets and working almost daily to perfect dance routines, the participants said.

UI junior Melissa Nippert, who helped to coordinate the Alpha Delta Pi dance routine, was a part of one of last year's winning skits and said she wanted to do as well this year.

"We've been working for three weeks," she said. "It's a lot of pressure."

Her routine, which featured a unicorn trying to replace Herky the Hawk as the UI's mascot, was one of the three winners. Other winners included the team of Alpha Delta Pi, Alpha Xi Delta and Kappa Sigma; the team of Alpha Chi Omega, Delta Zeta, Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Dance Marathon; and the team of Delta Gamma, Phi Kappa Theta and Sigma Nu.

UI sophomore Michelle Wichter said she heard the noise from Iowa Shout reverberating through the IMU but did not attend the event.

"I thought it was only for Greeks," she said.

While the event is predominantly a Greek event, the UI cheerleaders and dance team, UI Student Government and Dance Marathon also participated.

"It's a fun time to be had by all," said Kurt Larson, a UI senior and member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon.

Podolak, who will journey back from Aspen, Colo., is a 1969 graduate with a degree in finance who participated in the UI football program from 1966 to 1968 as a quarterback and tailback. After making First Team All Big Ten in 1968, Podolak was drafted into the NFL by the Kansas City Chiefs.

"Homecoming is what the college spirit is all about," Podolak said. "Whether we win or lose, experience rain, snow or sunshine, it is an opportunity to come back and remember the great times of college without the tests."

Podolak later became a radio announcer for the UI football team, which will play Michigan State Saturday, concluding Homecoming events.

Although the Hawks are approaching the Homecoming game as nine-point underdogs, some UI students remain confident that spirits will be high and the contest will spawn a pleasant time, no matter the outcome or weather.

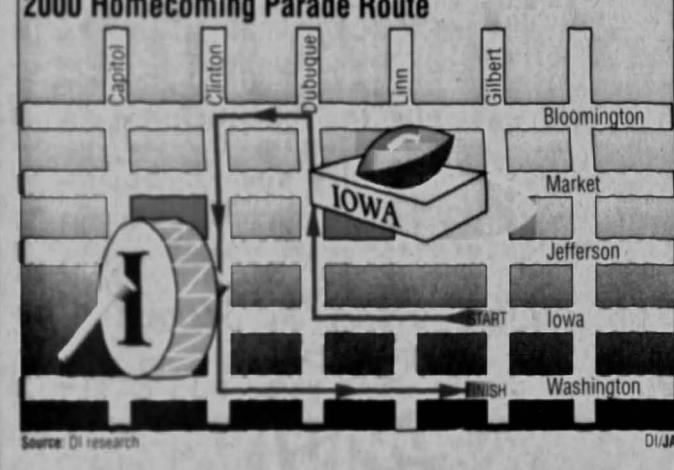

UI senior Scott Fiddelke said last year's weather during Homecoming yielded a very large crowd and was similar to this year's prediction.

"People will come because it's Homecoming, not for the team," Fiddelke said. "I remember shivering with everyone else last year while watching the pep rally, so I don't think the weather will affect students' enthusiasm or attendance."

UI sophomore Dave Fontechia said there should be a large turnout because of the numerous events.

"We might lose (the game) and it will probably be freezing, but that won't deter me from going and having a good time," he said.

being a blow to their pocketbooks.

UI senior Andrew Monroe said he will simply ask his parents to help him pay for the pricier bills coming his way. Not all students have this luxury.

"I am definitely going to have to start some sort of payment plan to handle my bills this winter," UI senior Kate Tabor said.

Many apartment managers, who cover heating for their tenants, will not re-adjust rent mid-lease to account for any rise in heating costs. Several local property management businesses do not penalize their current tenants for rate increases that occur after they have signed a lease. When tenants renew their leases, that is when they will feel the impact of rate increases.

Cheney, Bradley to make appearances in Iowa today

■ Bradley will be in the UI Homecoming parade, and Cheney will appear in Waterloo and Ames.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

Representatives of both the Republican and Democratic parties will appear in Iowa today to rally support for their candidate's presidential campaign.

Former New Jersey Sen. Bill Bradley will march in the UI Homecoming parade today accompanied by Johnson County Democrats in support of Vice President Al Gore.

"We're thrilled he's going to be here," said UI law student Chris Logli, the former president of Students for Bradley. "This is a show of unity in the Democratic Party."

Johnson County was one of Bradley's strongest areas of support in the nation — gaining 53.7 percent of the Democratic vote in the Jan. 24 Iowa caucuses.

Bradley will speak briefly following the parade at the Johnson County Democrats headquarters on the second floor of the Old Capitol Town Center at 8 p.m.

The event is open to the public. Access to the mall will be limited to the Clinton Street and parking ramp entrances because of the parade.

In Waterloo, Republican vice presidential nominee Dick Cheney and his wife, Lynne, will take in a local football rivalry at the game between East and West high schools tonight at Central Intermediate High School.

The Cheneys are expected to arrive around 7:15 p.m. for the second and third quarters of the game, said Don Blau, the East High assistant principal.

Andrew Malcolm, a spokesman for the George W. Bush campaign office in Austin, Texas, said Cheney will make himself available to the press during the game but will not formally speak.

"It is a good opportunity in an area of Iowa that is very important," Malcolm said.

Although Cheney's itinerary after the game is unclear, he is expected to campaign and tailgate at the Iowa State-Nebraska game in Ames Saturday, Malcolm said.

V.P. hopefuls spar in debate

■ Joseph Lieberman and Dick Cheney disagree about tax cuts and Medicare.

By Brigitte Greenberg
Associated Press

DANVILLE, Ky. — Democratic vice-presidential candidate Joseph Lieberman charged in campaign debate Thursday night that Republicans want to "raid the Medicare trust fund to pay for their tax cuts." But Republican Dick Cheney said there was more than enough money to go around, and it is "totally reasonable" to give relief to all taxpayers.

The argument that "somehow ... all of it is going to tax cuts isn't true," Cheney said of the huge surpluses forecast over the next decade.

The two men sparred — but politely — as they sat together for their only debate of the fall campaign. The atmosphere on a specially constructed stage at Centre College seemed more relaxed than it was Tuesday night, when presidential candidates Al Gore and George W. Bush met in Boston for the first of their three scheduled encounters.

Each man pledged to avoid personal attacks. Cheney took that one step further. "I promise not to bring up your singing," he said to Lieberman, drawing laughter from his rival.

"And I promise not to sing," Lieberman quipped in rebuttal.

The campaign understudies debated in a White House campaign as close as any in the past four decades. Bush and Gore are separated by only a point or two in most polls, pointing to a suspenseful final month of the campaign.

The two men reprised comments made Tuesday night by the presidential candidates when the topic turned to RU-486, an abortion pill recently approved by the government for use in the United States.

Cheney said the FDA had already acted, and the only issue was whether the drug was safe.

He said he and Bush are "pro-life," and the Texas governor would look for ways to "reach across the divide to reduce abortion."

Lieberman signaled his support for the FDA decision, and said there were fundamental differences between the two tickets on abortion.

"Al Gore and I will respect a woman's right to choose. And our opponents will not," he said.

Cheney, a former Defense secretary, and Lieberman, a two-term Connecticut senator, arrived in Kentucky earlier in the day.

Cheney, holding the hand of his granddaughter, 6-year-old Kate Perry, greeted well-wishers at an airport rally as he arrived in Lexington.

He said of the debate, "It's a great opportunity for Sen. Lieberman and I to have a conversation, if you will, with the American people and to lay out what it is we hope to do for the country."

Lieberman began his day with a jog around Lake Reba in Richmond with his wife, Hadassah, and son Matthew. "I want to talk about the issues. That's what it's all about," Lieberman said afterward, wiping his sweaty brow.

His T-shirt said "Fightin' Joe Lieberman" on the front and, in big block letters on the back, "CHAMP." Lifting his arms during his run, he pumped his fists like Sylvester Stallone in the movie Rocky.

Reno requests funds to continue tobacco lawsuit

Without more money, the Justice Department's suit could be dropped.

By Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department will have to drop its massive lawsuit against the tobacco industry unless Congress appropriates $23 million to pay for it, Attorney General Janet Reno said Thursday.

"Without that money, we will not be able to proceed," Reno said. "And I think it is imperative that we move forward to protect the American people and to give them their day in court."

So far, amid opposition to the lawsuit from Republicans and tobacco-state legislators, neither the House nor Senate bill would provide adequate funding to continue the civil lawsuit that could force the industry to relinquish billions of dollars in profits earned since 1954, Reno and her aides said.

The government claims the industry misled the government and the public about the addictiveness of nicotine and targeted children in its marketing. The industry has denied the claims.

The lawsuit recently survived an industry effort to have U.S. District Judge Gladys Kessler throw it out of court. Instead, Kessler narrowed the government's case by saying it could not recover federal money spent on health care for Americans with tobacco-related illnesses, but, she said, the government could still seek billions under a racketeering statute.

"You can't litigate a case against an organized and extremely well-financed defendant without minimal levels of funding," said Assistant Attorney General David Ogden, head of the department's civil division. "And we've looked at what the minimum is, and that's what we're asking for. If we don't get it, we simply can't proceed."

Ogden said $23 million would be needed in fiscal 2001, which began Sunday, up from the $13 million spent last fiscal year because the number of documents to be processed would escalate sharply.

Ogden said the money would be used to gather and analyze millions of pages of tobacco industry documents, some dating back to 1954, and an unknown number of government documents that the industry wants to see. The judge hopes to begin trial in January 2003.

A bill that passed the House this summer would allow the departments of Defense, Veterans Affairs and Health and Human Services to transfer $12 million to the Justice budget to help finance the lawsuit.

But the House version of the Justice budget contains restrictions on these and other money transfers that would require each to be individually approved by congressional committees, so the civil division could not count on getting that money, according to a senior Justice official, who requested anonymity.

NATION BRIEF

CDC: Adult smoking level holds steady

the latest year for which figures are available. The rate was 24.7 percent in 1997 and 25.5 percent in 1990.

The numbers fall far short of the CDC's goal of cutting the adult smoking rate to 15 percent by 2000.

The nation's smoking rate has dropped sharply since 1965, when 44 percent of adults smoked. The figure leveled off in the 1990s — between 24.1 and 26.5 percent — in part because smoking increased among 18-to-24-year-olds, who probably started in high school, the CDC said.

Airlines' on-time ratings slip again

August's worst performance was turned in by United Airlines.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Airline on-time performance continued to slip in August, falling to 70 percent for the 10 largest carriers, the Transportation Department reported Thursday.

That was below the 70.3 percent on-time rating in July, though not as bad as June's 66.3 rate.

And United Airlines continued to hold down the last spot with just 42.7 percent of its flights arriving on time in August.

While weather and airport capacity problems in the face of increasing travel volume have been blamed for many delays, United has also faced added trouble from a labor dispute with its pilots. That was finally settled Aug. 26.

Transportation Secretary Rodney Slater has met with airline executives and other aviation interests seeking ways to improve the industry's performance.

August's best on-time performance was turned in by Northwest at 79.2 percent. Continental was second at 77.7 percent, followed by Delta, 77.3 percent; TWA, 76.7 percent; and Southwest, 76.2.

Rounding out the 10 major carriers were American, 73.9 percent; Alaska, 69.6 percent; US Airways, 67.3 percent; America West, 59.5 percent; and United, 42.7 percent.

Five of United's flights were late 100 percent of the time in August: flight 624 from Chicago O'Hare to Reagan Washington National, flight 658 from O'Hare to Newark, N.J., flight 433 from Minneapolis-St. Paul to Denver, flight 325 from Denver to Billings, Mont., and flight 2779 from Denver to Phoenix, the department noted.

Delicate truce takes hold in West Bank

After U.S. mediation, the ferocity of the Mideast clashes ebbs.

By Laura King
Associated Press

BETHLEHEM, West Bank — A fragile U.S.-brokered truce appeared to take hold Thursday, as Israel rolled back tanks from sensitive positions near several West Bank cities. But one Palestinian was killed in a clash near the West Bank town of Bethlehem, and another died at a Gaza Strip crossroads.

In both the West Bank and Gaza, emotional funerals for victims of clashes with Israeli troops set off new skirmishes. And both sides braced for the possibility of large-scale trouble today, when officials feared that noon prayers — the most important of the Muslim week — could become a new call to battle.

One of Thursday's two deaths came at Netzarim Junction in Gaza, the scene of repeated battles as Palestinian mobs have besieged a lone Israeli outpost that guards the access road to a Jewish settlement. At least nine other Palestinians were hurt.

The ferocious street riots that swept the Palestinian lands beginning Sept. 28 have claimed at least 68 lives and injured nearly 1,900 people, nearly all of them Palestinian.

Today's prayers at Al Aqsa Mosque, the Jerusalem shrine at the center of the current outbreak of violence, were expected to be particularly fraught with danger.

Now, testing for Iowa teachers as well as students ...

A very good decision

Although Iowa and other states throughout the country face a severe teacher shortage, new legislation has been passed that raises the standards for getting into the teaching profession.

The state Legislature this year enacted a new requirement for future teachers: a law requiring anyone applying to an Iowa teaching education program to take and pass the Praxis I exam — a test of basic reading, writing and math skills.

This law is a step forward for the quality of education in this state and shows that our state cares about education.

Although the state is facing a teacher shortage, at least Iowa isn't lowering its standards to attract enough teachers to fill the state's classrooms. This shows that our legislators are genuinely concerned with education and they are prepared to have only the best teachers, even if it means having to make some class sizes larger because of a shortage of educators who pass the test.

The quality of education is one of the first things parents look at when moving to a different state.

The new law is also a good way to promote Gov. Tom Vilsack's campaign to bring people to Iowa. By passing such a law, it ensures that the state has quality teachers in its classrooms. The quality of education is one of the first things parents look at when moving to a different state.

This law also assures those parents outside Iowa that their kids are guaranteed a good education if they move here. The good education system in Iowa has always helped draw families, and the addition of this law will help strengthen that statement.

It is also important to note that now the UI College of Education will have a pre-admission test to get in. Pre-admission tests are very important in the education process. They indicate who has what it takes and who doesn't. Many colleges, such as those of law and medicine, already require pre-admission tests. This raises the caliber of students in these programs and therefore raises the quality of the graduates.

Iowa has made a positive decision in requiring teachers to take pre-admission tests to get into an education program in this state.

GUEST OPINION

Memories of the good ol' days of Homecoming at UI ...

Keep college graduates in Iowa

Homecoming at Iowa reminds me of some of the many things about the university and the state that I cherish — crisp autumn weather, the promise of a bountiful harvest and the camaraderie of good friends stand at the top of my list.

When I came to Iowa City from Cresco, Iowa, in 1963, my parents dropped me into a new and daunting environment. I suspect that, despite the bravado of some I met on campus in those early days, almost all of us entering the university for the first time harbored questions about our own adequacy to meet the challenges we were about to encounter.

Some weeks later, I welcomed my parents back to campus at Homecoming. What a glorious day that was! I'd found my feet in Iowa City and had settled into a new life of classes and extracurricular activities. I was eager to show my folks around.

Back in the 1960s, the Corn Monument was a much bigger deal than it seems to be today. As an engineering major, I was invited to participate in the construction of our college's totem to the Hawkeyes. An organizing committee of the Associated Students of Engineering developed the theme and drew the construction plans, clearly specifying how much corn was to be used to complete the project.

For engineering students, work on the Corn Monument launched Homecoming Week. I remember listening to students passing by as they speculated on what that year's monument would evolve into. By the time I took my parents to see it, the Corn Monument was a finished product, proud testimony to the creativity of engineering students.

As much as I enjoy Homecomings at the UI, I'm one of a growing number concerned about the number of graduates who return for it.

We were so creative, in fact, that when the football team went a couple years without a Homecoming victory, we suspended tradition and burned the monument after the game anyway.

Just as it does today, Homecoming in the 1960s meant a parade through downtown Iowa City on Friday night, Homecoming buttons, big yellow mums for girlfriends and moms — all culminating with the game on Saturday afternoon.

On Saturday, though, we enjoyed a couple treats that fans haven't experienced recently — a halftime show by the talented Highlanders with their bagpipes and drums and, later that evening, the spectacular Dolphin Show in the Field House pool.

I remember crowds packing the stands to the rafters and delighting in the derring-do of the swimmers and divers. One gutsy diver climbed to a platform nestled near the ceiling, donned a magic cape that had been doused in kerosene, and then made a fiery dive into the water below. You couldn't see anything like that back in Cresco. I think my parents were suitably impressed.

As much as I enjoy Homecomings at the UI, past and present, I'm one of a growing number of Iowans increasingly concerned about the number of our graduates who return for this special weekend from their homes outside the state. Why can't we keep more of our talented university graduates happily employed in Iowa?

We're still blessed with fantastic fall weather and bountiful harvests, and my crowd from the 1960s still gets together to reminisce. But is there enough for younger people to do in Iowa? Even at the UI, no doubt a hot spot of activity in the state, nothing nearly so entertaining has replaced either the Highlanders or the Dolphin Show during Homecoming Week. The situation in Iowa towns such as Oelwein, Shenandoah and Cresco is even worse.

If people from my generation can do anything to encourage young people to invest their talent in Iowa, we must dare to try a few things we haven't tried before. This summer, I risked the ire of some people and authorized the use of Des Moines' Water Works Park for a heavy-metal concert. From what I could tell, no damage was done and the audience loved it.

To meet the challenge of making Iowa attractive for young people, we should aim to multiply the number of activities likely to draw their interest. If it can't be the Highlanders or a Dolphin Show, could the answer be heavy metal?

City attorney should check the facts on price schemes

Forest Gump told us, "Stupid is as stupid does."

Ronald Reagan gave us the line, "There you go again." Put them together, and you have, "There you go, doin' stupid again."

Who is "doing stupid" again? None other than City Attorney Eleanor Dilkes.

It turns out that some folks on the City Council believe underage drinking and binge drinking by UI students are problems. They also think the local establishments are at the center of these problems.

Although the councilors are probably wrong, I believe their hearts are in the right place. Though when it comes to alcohol-consumption policy, I must say that at least three councilors appear to fit into that "do as I say, not as I do" school of thought.

So, being non-lawyers, the councilors asked their employee and supposed legal expert, Dilkes, to investigate the possibility of creating some regulations or ordinances that might:

(1) eliminate the right for bars to offer drink "specials," or (2) mandate the number of cups a customer can have when buying a pitcher of beer. From recent accounts, Dilkes supposedly told the councilors that some regulation in this area was possible. In fact, Councilor Ross Wilburn told me that Dilkes was going to draft something for the council's consideration.

All this talk about regulating business practices and setting minimum prices (e.g., disallowing half-price drinks) seemed a bit fishy to me, so I did a little checking. After a mere 10 minutes, I found four cases (three from the U.S. Supreme Court) that explained quite clearly why the city cannot pass any law in an overt attempt to make bars charge minimum prices for drinks.

The first case I found was California Retail Liquor Dealers Association v. Midcal Aluminum Inc. et al., 445 U.S. 97 (1980). California had a law that stated, "No state-licensed wine merchant may sell wine to a retailer at other than the price set (by the state)."

JOHN CALVIN JONES

It turns out that some folks on the City Council believe underage drinking and binge drinking by UI students are problems.

Although the state's purpose, helping smaller wine producers compete against larger firms, demanded price fixing, the statute was not constitutional because California failed to supervise the policy. And as the state did not establish "appropriate prices" or review the reasonableness of the price schedules, the wine-pricing program violated the Sherman Antitrust Act, 15 USC § 1, a law passed in 1890.

A federal court used the same reasoning in Miller v. Hedlund, 813 F.2d 1344, (9th Cir. 1986) to strike down an Oregon law that prohibited quantity discount sales of beer and wine. The court held that the regulations violated the Sherman Antitrust Act, as the law accomplished the result that constituted a "per se" restraint on trade. Moreover, the law was not allowable because the state did not "actively supervise" the pricing of beer and wine.

One year later, in 324 Liquor Corp. v. Duffy, 479 U.S. 335 (1987), the U.S. Supreme Court decided that a New York law setting minimum prices for retail sales of wine was unconstitutional. The court found the state's pricing system inconsistent with § 1 of the Sherman Act because New York's law mandated (minimum) resale prices for wine. Again, any time a state (or city) government tries to compel prices, such restricts the market and is not within the power of that level of government.

In fact, only one recent Supreme Court case tolerates price controls, but only as an aftereffect, not an intended goal.

Columbia (S.C.) v. Omni Outdoor Advertising, 499 U.S. 365 (1991), the city's zoning restrictions limited the available billboard space. As a result of the zoning scheme, the price for billboards increased. The Supreme Court upheld the zoning law despite the effect of restraining trade because all cities have a right to control development via zoning.

I really do not know what Dilkes does to earn her salary, but providing the council with quality information on short notice does not seem to be one of her strong points. Instead of "checking" on the range of possible price-control schemes the city can establish for its bars, Dilkes should review some case law, go to the council and just say NO!

Bambú keeps its worldly groove going

The band will perform in Iowa City tonight.

By Karen Schmiedeskamp
The Daily Iowan

For six years, Bambú has been jammin' in Iowa City with a unique mix of reggae, funk and Caribbean music, but recently, the group has evolved to a higher musical plane. Tonight, fans can witness this evolution first-hand when the band performs at the Green Room, 509 S. Gilbert St.

"Before, when you went to a Bambú concert, you pretty much paid five bucks, and if you'd seen one show, you'd seen them all," said Bambú guitarist Cory Niday. "But I think things are a lot different now, and material-wise, we have a lot of new stuff to offer."

combines the sounds from the Caribbean, Brazil, Africa and America.

"Although the music comes from a variety of places, it all has the same vibe," Grundstad said.

Tonight's performance will feature new material mixed in with some old favorites. The show will also include a guest saxophone player who will accompany the band for three tunes.

The group drew approximately 400 people the last time it played at The Q Bar, Grundstad said.

Carly James, an Iowa City resident and a fan of the band, said people are drawn to the performances by the good music and a chance to dance.

"People really get into it," she said.

The band is made up of a drummer, an auxiliary percussionist, a bassist, a guitar player and two singers.

One of the singers, Barbara Morillo, has been in the music business most of her life. At age 16, she made her first record deal. Throughout her career, she has made appearances on the "Dick Clark Show," the "Smothers Brothers' Show," and at one point she was under the same management as Sonny and Cher. Born in the Bronx, Morillo brings an East Coast perspective that adds to the band's diverse style, Grundstad said.

Also on vocals is Jason Shouair. Shouair moved to Jamaica at age 4. During his time there, he developed a style of rapping in a Jamaican dialect called ragamuffin. Shouair uses this technique with Bambú and adds to the group's world-music theme with his unique style, Grundstad said.

"I feel honored to be a part of this band," Grundstad said. "I used to watch every show when I was freshman."

Alford could get extension

■ Athletics Director Bob Bowlsby has talked about it briefly with the coach.

IOWA CITY, (AP) — Iowa basketball coach Steve Alford, who last month reaffirmed his commitment to the Hawkeyes by saying he was not interested in the Indiana job, might be seeing a contract extension.

"Steve and I talked about it very briefly when the Indiana situation was going on," Athletics Director Bob Bowlsby said Wednesday. "We're certainly open to talk about a contract extension. We haven't yet had substantive conversations about it, but I suppose we will in the not-too-distant-future."

Alford, in the second year of a five-year contract, has an estimated salary package of $585,000 including base salary and outside income. Incentives could push that to $1.5 million.

Alford's name surfaced as a possible successor to Bobby Knight when Knight was fired from Indiana. Alford played for the Hoosiers under Knight. The Iowa coach held a news conference Sept. 13 to say he was committed to staying at Iowa.

Iowa recruit Jason Holwerda said Alford called him the day Knight was fired and said he was staying at Iowa.

"He said he was trying to get a contract extension," Holwerda said.

Alford did not return messages left at the Iowa sports information office.

■ Last year's 49-3 embarrassment at Michigan State is history.

Coach Kirk Ferentz has been stressing all year that what happened last year is old news — that this 2000 Iowa football team is a totally different one.

Based on what happened to the Hawkeyes last year, they again came out and Michigan State in shut us down east the whole Lansing, let's hope game. It was he's right. embarrassing.

T he — Ladell Betts Spartans Iowa running back mangled the Hawkeyes last year to the tune of 49-3.

Iowa scrounged only 107 yards of offense in a game that was over at halftime, with Michigan State leading 35-0. Junior running back Ladell Betts remembers the game.

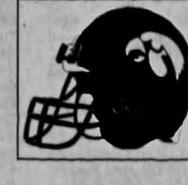

"Last year, they came out and shut us down the whole game," Betts said. "It was embarrassing."

But this year should be different.

Michigan State, No. 25 in the USA TODAY poll, lost most of its productive players from last year's team. Guys such as Bill Burke, Plaxico Burress and Amp Campbell all graduated. Burress was a first-round draft choice.

Iowa, although still without a win this season, has improved since last year's massacre, especially on offense. So far, the Hawkeyes have averaged 335 yards of total offense while playing one of the toughest schedules in the nation.

Most of that productivity has come from the passing game, which accounts for 251 yards of offense per game.

Ferentz

Despite graduating so many stars off last year's squad, Michigan State will bring a speedy and physical team to Iowa City Saturday, Ferentz said.

"They're not a heck of a lot different. They've lost a couple key performers. They're still a pretty good football team. They got caught by a tough Northwestern team last week. They're a big, physical team."

Returning for the Spartans is a 252-pound mountain of a running back in T.J. Duckett, who has rambled for 598 yards so far this season.

Giants rally falls short

■ Despite a late charge by San Francisco, the Mets hang on to win 5-4.

By Greg Beachum

SAN FRANCISCO — Jay Payton's quiet little single was bigger than J.T. Snow's dramatic pinch-hit homer.

Payton hit an RBI single in the 10th inning, and John Franco closed it out as the New York Mets overcame a game-tying, three-run homer by Snow in the bottom of the ninth to beat the San Francisco Giants 5-4 Thursday night.

Edgar Alfonzo had a two-run homer in the ninth for the Mets, who evened their best-of-five division series at 1-1 and won for the first time at Pacific Bell Park.

Game 3 is Saturday at Shea Stadium.

Given a 4-1 lead in the ninth, Armando Benitez wasted a standout performance from Mets starter Al Leiter, who held the Giants to five hits in eight-plus innings.

Cardinals manager Tony La Russa remains wary of the Braves, who find themselves struggling after calling themselves the team of the '90s.

"We recognize this is a three-win series, not a two-win series," La Russa said. "So nobody's celebrating."

Buck-Crookett

"There are no heads down on this team right now," head coach Rita Buck-Crookett said after the Hawkeyes' split tied them for third place in the conference.

While this is the first meeting with Northwestern and Wisconsin this season, Buck-Crookett says her team will be familiar with both of their styles of play.

Northwestern, which enters tonight's match tied with four other teams for sixth place, will be as scrappy as Indiana was. Last weekend, Iowa earned a hard-fought five-match victory on the road against the Hoosiers.

"They're going to make some technical errors," Buck-Crookett said. "We should be able to capitalize on them, but

Cardinals thump Atlanta 10-4

■ Behind hot bats, St. Louis jumps out to a 2-0 lead in the series.

By R.B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Another of the Atlanta Braves' golden arms left Busch Stadium badly tarnished, putting the St. Louis Cardinals within one win of the NL championship series.

Tom Glavine was pounded for seven runs and six hits in 2½ innings — his shortest outing in seven years — and the Cardinals beat the Braves, 10-4, Thursday to take a 2-0 lead in their best-of-five NL playoff series.

"It came at a bad time," Glavine said. "I needed to go out there and give us an opportunity to win, and I didn't do that."

Will Clark overcame a 2-0, first-inning deficit with a three-run homer, and Mark McGwire, limited to one at-bat per game because of knee pain, limped out of the Cardinals dugout in the eighth to hit a pinch homer off Mike Remlinger.

"What we were trying to do was go out there and get a good pitch to hit, basically the same thing that we did with Maddux," Clark said. "These guys are awesome pitchers. They're 20-game winners for a reason."

Darryl Kile limited Atlanta to two runs and four hits in seven innings, striking out six and walking two.

The reeling Braves are in danger of failing to make the NL championship series for the first time since 1990. They head home hoping either Maddux or Kevin Millwood (10-13) can win Game 3 on Saturday at Turner Field. Garrett Stephenson (16-9) is likely to start for the Cardinals.

St. Louis essentially is in the same position it was in 1996, when it took a 3-1 lead over Atlanta in the best-of-seven NLCS, then lost three straight.

"It's exactly the same thing," Braves manager Bobby Cox said. "We could very well pull that off. Heck, we won 15 in a row this year."

Cardinals manager Tony La Russa remains wary of the Braves, who find themselves struggling after calling themselves the team of the '90s.

"We recognize this is a three-win series, not a two-win series," La Russa said. "So nobody's celebrating."

Bucs face tough road test with Vikings

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

Two weeks ago, Tampa Bay was 3-0, the best team in the NFL — or at least the co-best with St. Louis. The defense was as good as ever, and the Bucs had an offense averaging 31 points in their first three games.

Two weeks later, the Bucs are 3-2 going on 3-3, facing a critical Monday night game in Minnesota. The Vikings have surprised the football-speaking world by starting 4-0 behind a quarterback, Daunte Culpepper, who hadn't thrown an NFL pass in anger until Week 1.

But the oddsmakers still believe the early-season lines.

This game opened as a pick 'em, and Minnesota is now favored by 1, meaning the Vikings don't even get the home-domestic advantage. That's normally 3, although in the Metrodome, the crowd noise can be enough to add six points.

The oddsmakers know.

Give Tampa the desperation factor that worked for Washington the last two weeks.

Give the Tampa defense an edge over Culpepper.

Give the Bucs the X factors: A team that isn't good enough to start 5-0 (the Vikings) won't. And a team that's too good to lose three straight (Tampa Bay) won't do that either.

And finally, give Tampa the revenge factor — Jeff Christy and Randall McDaniel were cut loose by Minnesota, and now start for the Buccaneers.

Even so, this Minnesota team has the electric kind of look it had two years ago, when it finished 15-1.

Gopher basketball players charged

■ Seventeen Minnesota basketball players must respond to allegations they cheated while at the University of Minnesota or risk losing class credits or even their degrees.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Seventeen former men's basketball players must respond to allegations they cheated while at the University of Minnesota or risk losing class credits or even their degrees.

"Very soon, the letters will be going out to the students," university Provost Bob Bruininks said Thursday. "We hope to move forward on this very quickly."

Very soon, the letters will be going out to the students.

— Bob Bruininks

Minnesota provost

Students who are found guilty, or don't contest the findings, could lose credits, have grades lowered or lose their degrees.

Bruininks said the retired professor implicated in the report is probably beyond the school's reach for most disciplinary action.

However, he said the professor will not be eligible for some benefits other retired faculty members enjoy, such as office space, computer equipment and clerical help.

The former professor also will not be allowed to teach classes, as some retired faculty members do.

Bruininks has said one reason more university employees weren't found responsible for fraud is that those who were most involved in academic cheating are already gone, including Gangelhoff and academic adviser Alonzo Newby.

Jones ends season with win in 100-meter dash

■ Fresh off the Olympic games, Marion Jones wins in her last meet of the 2000 season.

By Phil Brown
Associated Press

DOHA, Qatar — Olympic triple gold medalist Marion Jones was tired but triumphant at 100 meters Thursday, ending her season with a $150,000 payday.

Angelo Taylor, also slower than his Olympic winning time, gained enough points from his victory in the 400-meter hurdles to finish atop the men's 2000 season standings in the IAAF Grand Prix.

That earned him $200,000 on top of the $50,000 for winning his race.

Taylor trailed Saudi Arabia's Hadi Sou'a'an Al-Somaily after the last hurdle, but overtook him just before the tape in a replay of their 1-2 finish at the Olympics. Taylor won by 0.04 seconds in 48.14.

Jones was too far behind to overtake Norwegian javelin gold medalist Trine Hattestad for first in the women's standings, even though Hattestad lost by less than a half-inch to Cuba's Sonia Bisset Thursday.

Hattestad, who had gained bonus points with two world records this season, finished with 110 points to 104 for Jones. Gail Devers also had 104, but a tie-breaking formula gave Jones the $100,000 second prize and Devers the $50,000 third prize.

"I think Trine definitely deserves to win, with two world records," Jones said. "I just wanted to end the season with a win. You can see by the times that everybody was tired."

Jones won in 11 seconds, .09 ahead of American teammate Chryste Gaines but well behind her Olympic winning time of 10.75. Jones also has Olympic gold from the 200 and the 1,600-meter relay.

Five Olympic champions were beaten in the season-ending Grand Prix final, although it was no upset in the women's

SPORTS BRIEFSHometown turns out to surprise wrestler

AFTON, Wyo. (AP) — The entire town of Afton — pop. 1,635 — and then some, turned out to cheer Olympic gold medalist and hometown hero Rulon Gardner.

About 2,400 people surprised the wrestler Wednesday by packing the Star Valley High School gym as Gardner appeared on "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno."

The images were brought to Gardner live — and brought tears to his eyes.

"Oh, man. Hello, Star Valley. Hello, Afton! Love, Wyoming! Can't wait to come home and be around friends and family," he said.

Gardner handed him tissues as he struggled to hold back tears.

Rivalry regaining importance

■ Both Texas and Oklahoma are national powers once again as the two teams meet in Dallas.

By Jim Vertuno
Associated Press

AUSTIN, Texas — For 100 years, the Red River Shootout has been a border war, played during the hoopla of the Texas State Fair in a stadium evenly divided in Texas orange and Oklahoma crimson.

Home field advantage doesn't exist in the Cotton Bowl in Dallas.

Depending on which team you root for, it's either Texas-Oklahoma or Oklahoma-Texas. The preferred team comes first. Always.

In its heyday, winning was considered key to recruiting the top high school talent. It could make or break a program's future.

But it's been a long while since the game meant much to anyone outside of Big 12 country. Saturday's matchup will be the first time since 1984 in which both teams are in the top 15, with Oklahoma (4-0, 1-0) at No. 10 and Texas (3-1, 1-0) at No. 11.

The rivalry dates back to 1900, before Texas was known as the Longhorns, and when Oklahoma was still called the Rough Riders. Texas leads the series 55-34 with five ties. Nine times, either Texas or Oklahoma has come in ranked No. 1 in the nation.

"It's always important regionally, and this year it has more national attention," said Texas coach Mack Brown. "And now that both programs are improving, I think it will be good to get it back on the national level."

The fans, however, never wavered. The October game brings out their best, or perhaps their worst.

Texas cornerback Roderick Babers learned that last year when he played Oklahoma for the first time.

"When little old ladies are giving you the bird, that's when I knew there was some bad blood in this game," Babers said.

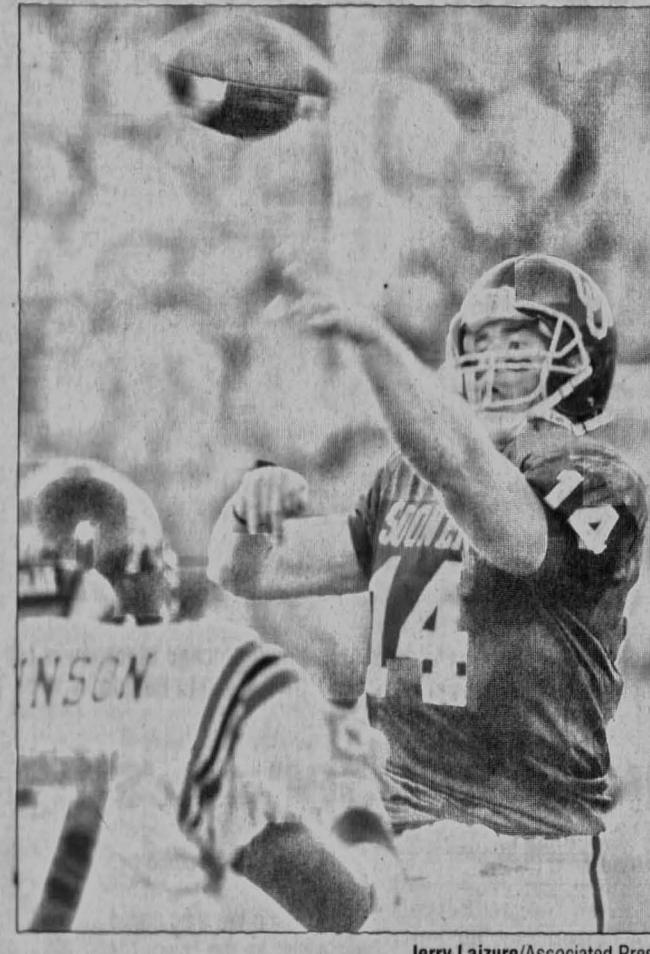

Fourteen years since he last laid out a Longhorn, Brian Bosworth still gets worked up about Texas.

Ask him about playing the Longhorns, and the former Oklahoma All-America linebacker starts talking faster and louder.

"I lived and breathed that rivalry," said Bosworth, a Texan who crossed the Red River to play for the Sooners.

"It was good vs. evil, And you know who was evil."

Never one to mince words —

Jerry Laizure/Associated Press

Oklahoma quarterback Josh Heupel will take on No. 10 Texas in Dallas Saturday.

He once referred to the Longhorns' color as "puke orange" — Bosworth sounds like he'd love one more game in the annual Red River Shootout.

His first came in 1984, when Texas was No. 1 and Oklahoma No. 3 — a game that ranks as one of the oddest ever.

Texas had walloped Penn State, 28-3, two weeks earlier, and Longhorns fans were talking national title.

Rain fell, players slipped and slid about on the field's artificial turf, and the teams combined for just 347 yards of total offense.

"I thought what a shame for that game to be played on that field because you could hardly stand up," said Brown, then the Oklahoma offensive coordinator.

After Oklahoma took a safety to make it 15-12, Texas got the ball back with 2:10 left to play.

The Longhorns drove the length of the field looking for the winning touchdown. But after a pass into the end zone failed — Sooners fans insist to this day it was intercepted by Keith Stanberry — Jeff Ward kicked a 32-yard field goal in a downpour on the final play for the tie.

"I have never seen or heard a crowd like that. The end of the game was just surreal," Ward said. "Oklahoma fans were mad; Texas fans were mad. Everybody was shouting. You felt miserable because of the rain."

"I looked over at the sideline, and (Oklahoma coach)

Barry Switzer is fuming and sloshing around because he's all caught up in the cords of the coaches' headsets."

Bosworth oozes contempt for the tie.

"They came and did the unthinkable, trying to tie it up," he said. "They were the No. 1 team. That was like shooting themselves in the head."

The tie didn't feel good in the Texas locker room either, Ward said, remembering the actions of coach Fred Akers.

"Akers jumped up on a bench and says, 'I don't like it either. If I could, I'd go out and meet them in the parking lot,'" Ward recalled.

By playing favored Texas to a tie, the Sooners set the foundation for their great teams of 1985-1987 that won one national title and played for another.

But the success didn't last. Bob Stoops is the fourth Sooners head coach since Switzer departed after the 1988 season. The Sooners have won nine games in a season just twice since.

Texas would go on to lose four of its last five games in 1984 and finish out of the rankings. In the 16 years since, three more head coaches have stood on the Texas sidelines. The Longhorns have won nine games or more four times and posted five losing seasons.

Brown and Stoops have revitalized the near-dormant programs.

Texas won the Big 12 South title in 1999 and climbed back into the top 10.

Huskers to go after Rosenfels

■ Undefeated Iowa State still has not surrendered a sack this season.

By Mike Branon
Associated Press

AMES — Iowa State quarterback Sage Rosenfels has gone untouched and unharmed this season, a big reason why the Cyclones are undefeated and off to their best start in 20 years.

ISU (4-0 overall, 1-0 Big 12) has yet to give up a sack, and that's helped Rosenfels average 248.8 yards of total offense per game, good for 22nd in the nation.

Coach Dan McCarney would prefer not to publicize the lack of sacks before his team plays one of its biggest games in years — a home date against No. 2 Nebraska on Saturday.

"You don't suppose that's up in the Nebraska locker room?" McCarney asked. "It's almost unheard of, to be honest with you."

Rosenfels is grateful to so far have avoided the wear and tear that all quarterbacks inevitably face.

"I feel a lot better preparing for the week not being sore," he said. "When you're sore, you don't want to do a lot."

them to get down the field and get some big yardage."

Said center Ben Bruns: "That hurts you when he gets hit or he gets pressured because he feels responsible."

As a freshman in 1997, Rosenfels saw what happens when a quarterback receives too many hard shots. That season, Todd Bandhauer took the brunt of most of the 46 sacks against the Cyclones.

"I know Bandy was really sore during that season, and he was sore throughout the week," Rosenfels said. "There were times he was just getting over some of his soreness on Thursday, Friday, or even that morning before the game."

Nebraska has collected eight sacks this season, but defensive tackle Loran Kaiser claims that number is misleading.

"We've had more hurries than people think. Sometimes those are just as good as sacks," he said. "We're just going to have to peel our ears back and get after the quarterback."

Bruns said the team talks about their protection of Rosenfels on Fridays and Mondays only.

"Before the game, it's something you want to keep, and after the game, it's something that you talk about because you're proud," he said. "The rest of the week, you just work on the things that it takes to keep it that way."

Miami's line hopes to contain FSU

■ Bryant McKinnie will try to keep his sack-less streak against No. 1 Florida State.

By Mark Long
Associated Press

CORAL GABLES, Fla. — Bryant McKinnie hasn't given up a sack.

Not this season, not in his college career.

Not ever.

"I'm trying to maintain that, too," he said.

It won't be easy.

McKinnie, Miami's starting left tackle, probably has the toughest assignment Saturday as the No. 7 Hurricanes (3-1) host top-ranked Florida State (5-0). He has to block Seminoles defensive end Jamal Reynolds, who has 10 sacks this season.

"It's a big week for Big Mac," guard Greg Laffere said.

Everyone knows it, especially McKinnie.

"As long as I stay focused and play my game, I'll come out the better man," said McKinnie, a 6-foot-9, 330-pound junior from New Jersey.

McKinnie is fairly confident for someone who has played football for only five years, including three on offense. But in such a short span, he's convinced just about everyone of his ability.

"He could potentially be a first-round draft choice as an offensive left tackle," said Hurricanes coach Butch Davis.

"He's massive, and he's quick, but he's still a puppy."

McKinnie was 130 pounds in third grade, about 40 pounds heavier than other boys his age. He was too big to play football, exceeding the weight limit imposed by his league in Woodbury, N.J.

"It was never really an issue for me," he said.

Instead, McKinnie just played basketball.

His quick feet, soft hands and enormous wing span made him quite a center. He played two years in high school, continuing to grow to the point where his coaches and father thought he might be better suited to play football.

So in 11th grade — after spending two fall seasons playing the bass drum in the school band — McKinnie joined the football team.

He made an instant impact.

Miami quarterback Ken Dorsey lines up a throw against Washington Sept. 9. Miami, ranked No. 7, takes on No. 1 Florida State on Saturday.

McKinnie was a standout defensive lineman as a junior and senior. He signed with Iowa in 1997.

But he was academically ineligible to attend Iowa, so McKinnie enrolled at Lackawanna Junior College in Scranton, Pa. He was quickly moved to offense, where he excelled at pass blocking.

He didn't allow a sack as a two-year starter. And he hasn't allowed one through four games this season.

But this certainly will be his biggest test.

"Whenever you mention Florida State, you know they are going to have a great defensive line and have two were-wolves at defensive end," right tackle Joaquin Gonzalez said.

This year is no different with Reynolds and David Warren.

"I don't think there's any getting ready for what you're going to see Saturday," said offensive line coach Art Kehoe.

"Basically they line up and say, 'You ain't nothing; we're going to kick your teeth out of your mouth.'

And every play, they're lining up and saying, 'Look, here we are. We're not moving.'

"And you better learn to do something about it."

McKinnie might have the ability to stop Reynolds. His long arms make it tough for defensive linemen to get around him. His quick feet make it easy for him to pick up line stunts. And his sheer size makes it nearly impossible for him to be pushed around in the trenches.

All he needs is experience.

"He's going to get a great education this Saturday," Davis said. "He'll learn more this Saturday he's learned in the last six months."

Williams announced the Spartans would be going with junior Ryan Van Dyke at quarterback. Van Dyke has thrown only seven passes this year and has sat out most of the season with an injury.

"I can't wait for Saturday to get here," Van Dyke said. "I've been given another opportunity to get on the field and unlock some of my potential."

The Hawkeyes have at least one thing going for them this weekend — it's Homecoming.

While Beutjer doesn't think the whole Homecoming atmosphere is all that different from any other game, he says Michigan State will have to put up with all of the anticipated 62,000 Hawkeye fans.

"(Homecoming is) no different than any other game. It's just a name for a festival or something," Beutjer said. "I'm excited to play my first game in Kinnick. At Indiana, I was a little nervous because they kept yelling on third down. Now Michigan State's going to have to go through that."

CARDINALS

Carlos Hernandez had a solo shot in the second and St. Louis made it 7-2 in the third on Ray Lankford's two-run double and Eric Davis' sacrifice fly.

Atlanta's top two pitchers, Greg Maddux and Glavine, who have combined for six NL Cy Young Awards, have given up 12 earned runs in 6 1/2 innings, a 17.05 ERA.

Jim Edmonds was 3-for-4 with three doubles and two RBIs for St. Louis, making him 6-for-9 with four RBIs in the series. He also made an over-the-shoulder catch of Rafael Furcal's drive to the centerfield warning track in the eighth.

"You'll see him do at least one of these every series," La Russa said. "To the left, to the right, in, back, he's just a complete center fielder."

Kile and Glavine were the only 20-game winners in the NL this season. While Kile evened his career postseason record at 1-1, Glavine dropped to 10-12.

Kile struggled with his control in the first, giving up an RBI single to Chipper Jones and a run-scoring groundout to Brian Jordan. But after Andres Galarraga's two-out double in the first, Kile retired 13 in a row, striking out the side in the second.

"Every game is different," Kile said. "Some days you come out of the chute with your command. I gave up the lead early, and fortunately we came back with some big hits."

St. Louis went 6-for-12 against Glavine, who hadn't been chased this quickly since last two innings in a 7-5 loss to Los Angeles on Aug. 19, 1993. The Cardinals' three left-handed hitters were for 4-for-6 with a homer, two doubles and five RBIs against them.

His only worse postseason outing was a two-inning stint in Game 6 of the 1992 NLCS against Pittsburgh in which he allowed eight runs.

it will be a fight to the end."

While the Wildcats are 4-10 overall, Buck-Crockett says that record is deceiving because the team is more talented than its record indicates.

"We've been there," she said. "We're taking them very seriously."

An even more serious threat will be the Badgers. Wisconsin will be the first Top 10 team Iowa has faced since its season-opening weekend at the Hawaiian Airlines Wahine Classic. The Badgers are 13-2 overall and tied with the Hawkeyes for third place with the same 3-1 record. After a big loss to Ohio State last weekend, Buck-Crockett said she expects Wisconsin will be looking to come back strong on the Hawkeyes.

"We need to really focus and get our attack going early," she said.

Wisconsin brings a style of play very similar to UCLA in that they are quick to come off the middle. They bring with them one of the best hitters in the conference in Sherise Livingston, who leads the team with 233 kills.

Iowa has been experimenting with minor changes in its lineup during the week, mainly due to a nagging injury to setter and hitter Fabiana de Abreu. Buck-Crockett said she would like to rest de Abreu at some point in the weekend to avoid further aggravating de Abreu's leg injury. Laura Pike and Larissa Lopes may set for the Hawkeyes while she rests. Jamie Lansing will move to the middle to provide a big block up front and Kelli Chesnut will play the entire court.

"Kelli is the smallest player on the court, but she is a very tricky player and she is jumping well," Buck-Crockett said. "Jamie has had a good week of practices and she brings some experience to the table."

Buck-Crockett said the team has been practicing well and home-court advantage should help the Hawkeyes this week, as they have tended to play Wisconsin well in Carver.

"I'm just excited," Buck-Crockett said. "Both games will be very intense."

Hamilton, who is hampered by an arthritic toe, lined the ball to the right-center and managed to get to second. Payton followed with a run-scoring single to center off Giants setup man Felix Rodriguez.

HAWKEYE ROAD BRIEFSWomen's Soccer

This weekend: The Hawkeyes have a tough road schedule ahead of them. They will travel to Ohio State today and to State College, Pa., on Sunday to take on the No. 6-ranked Lady Lions of Penn State.

The opponents: The Buckeyes (4-8, 0-5) are currently on a five-game skid and still looking for their first Big Ten win. But they showed some promise early in the season when they lost, 2-1, in a non-conference thriller against then No. 11-ranked Wake Forest.

Penn State (10-2-1, 4-0) is currently ranked sixth in the country, after making it to the Final Four last season. It is led by sophomore phenomenon Christie Welsh, who was picked as an alternate for the U.S. Olympic team, which won silver this year in Sydney.

Welsh was named Big Ten Freshman of the Year and Big Ten Player of the year last season. The Penn State forward shattered all the Big Ten and Nittany Lion records during her rookie season.

The keys for the Hawkeyes: Iowa must continue to follow its game plan, said Iowa coach Wendy Logan. The Hawkeyes are still getting to know Logan's system, and they need to continue to learn it each game. The Iowa squad needs to continue to start out quickly from the kickoff. Best case scenario: Iowa gets an early goal on Penn State, putting the Nittany Lions on their heels. Then the team holds off the offensive pressure of Welsh and her supporting cast for the win.

Coach Wendy Logan's comments: "Penn State should be (Iowa's) most challenging game so far. They have certainly proven that they are one of the top teams in the country. We want to see if we can put some pressure on them, and I think we can."

This week: The women's rowing team will travel to Rockford, Ill., to compete in the Head of the Rock Regatta on Oct. 8. The race features a 2.75-mile course on the Rock River. The Hawkeyes will enter five boats in the Pairs race, two boats in the Varsity Open 4+ and three boats in the Varsity Open 8+ race. The Novice team will also begin its season this weekend.

Last year: Last season at the Head of the Rock, the Hawkeyes won all three varsity races they entered. The Varsity 8+ boat took to the water, winning the event and defeating rival Wisconsin by eight seconds.

Last week: Last week, the Hawkeyes won all Varsity races they entered. The Hawkeyes won their fourth consecutive win in the Varsity Open 8+ last weekend at the Head of the Des Moines Regatta.

Competition: Many schools are entered, but most important is Big Ten rival Wisconsin. Indiana is the other Big Ten competitor.

Coach Mandy Kowal: "The Head of the Rock will be a dress rehearsal for the Head of the Charles. It is imperative that we come into this regatta more focused and ready to compete than our last race. I want to come away from the race with as many victories as possible knowing that we improved our approach and raced as we set out to do."

BOSTON — Sergei Samsonov, a contract holdout for most of training camp, scored with 3:20 left in the third period and the Boston Bruins spoiled Alexei Yashin's return to the Ottawa Senators on Thursday night.

The Senators were trailing 3-2 when Yashin, the Senators' career leading scorer who missed last season in his own contract holdout, assisted on Marian Hossa's power-play goal that tied the game with 8:34 left in the third period.

They took a 4-3 lead with 5:23 remaining when Magnus Arvedson skated by defensemen Jarmo Kultanen and beat goalie Byron Dafoe from close range.

Samsonov nearly was the target when he fanned on his first attempt to shoot the puck from about 10 feet to the left of Patrick Lalime. But he connected the second time and sent it over the goalie's left shoulder.

PHILADELPHIA — The Philadelphia Flyers are doing just fine without Eric Lindros — for one game at least.

The goal at 11:59 capped a terrible night for the Flames power play.

Calgary went 0-for-9 with the extra man while the Red Wings were 1-for-4.

Sergei Fedorov, Steve Duchesne, and Vyacheslav Kozlov also scored for Detroit, which was without injured captain Steve Yzerman. Yzerman is expected to be out for a week with a strained knee ligament.

Jason Wiemer, Jarome Iginla, and Phil Housley had Calgary goals.

After falling behind 3-1 in the opening 20 minutes, a period in which they were outhit and outhustled by the Flames, Detroit turned things around in the second.

The Red Wings were dominant, firing 15 shots at Fred Brathwaite and scoring twice to tie it.

BUFFALO, N.Y. — The Buffalo Sabres opened with a win, but their new season suddenly resembles the last as goalie Dominik Hasek is hurt again.

Hasek strained a ligament under his left kneecap in the first period of the Sabres' 4-2 victory over the Detroit Red Wings on Thursday night.

In the third period, with Brendan Shanahan off for roughing, Maltby and Kris Draper broke out on a 2-on-1 with Maltby firing a shot from 20 feet that trickled through the pads of goalie Fred Brathwaite.

HUNTINGTON, W.Va. (AP) — Unlike last December, Marshall had no furious comeback against Western Michigan. Now the Herd's home winning streak of 33 games — the longest in Division I-A — is over.

Robert Sanford rushed for 203 yards and a three second-half touchdowns to lead Western Michigan to a 30-10 victory over Marshall on Thursday night.

The Broncos (5-1, 3-0 Mid-American) avenged a 34-30 loss to Marshall in last year's conference championship game in Huntington.

Marshall (2-3, 1-1) had not lost at home since the Division I-AA championship game in 1995 against Montana. The Herd rejoined Division I-A in 1997.

Top-ranked Florida State now has Division I-A's longest home and overall winning streaks at 31 and 15 games.

Sox on the brink of elimination

■ Chicago's superior regular season record means nothing down 2-0 to Seattle.

By Jim Cour
Associated Press

SEATTLE — The best record in the American League now means nothing.

If the White Sox don't win Friday, their season is over.

And Chicago will be sending sore-armed James Baldwin to the mound against the Seattle Mariners.

"I guess I'm on a respirator," White Sox manager Jerry Manuel said Thursday. "Things haven't gone our way. If the season ends tomorrow, obviously I would be somewhat empty."

Aaron Sele (17-10) tries to make it a three-game sweep for Seattle and put the Mariners in the AL championship series against the New York Yankees or Oakland.

Seattle, which wasn't even assured of a playoff spot until the final game of the regular season, has outscored the White Sox 12-6, outhit them 22-14 and outhomered them 4-1.

During the regular season, Chicago scored a major league-high 978 runs. During the playoffs, the heart of its order is 2-for-22: Frank Thomas 0-for-7, Carlos Lee 1-for-8 and Magglio Ordonez 1-for-7.

During the regular season, Thomas had 43 homers, Ordonez 32 and Lee 24. In the playoffs, it's 0, 0 and 0.

Thomas has stranded nine runners with four flyouts and three popups. And that's at Comiskey Park, his home stadium.

At Safeco Field, he was 1-for-20 in six games this season.

Still, Sele will be concentrating on him.

"He's one of the superstars,"

Douglas C. Pizac/Associated Press
Chicago White Sox player Frank Thomas awaits batting practice Thursday.

Sele said. "You pitch those guys carefully."

Baldwin is doing everything carefully. Sunday's start in the regular-season finale was his first since Sept. 8, and he gave up five runs and six hits in three innings at Kansas City.

"James Baldwin probably will be pitching with some pain, but cannot damage his shoulder any further," Manuel said. "It's a matter of him dealing with the discomfort."

Manuel said he would pull Baldwin in the first inning if he wasn't effective. And he might even replace him with Sean Lowe, Chicago's scheduled starter for Game 4 Saturday — if there is a Game 4.

"Obviously, it's a very critical game for us," Manuel said. "I won't be saving anybody for Game 4."

Baldwin (14-7) had 11 wins before the All-Star break, winning his first seven starts of the season and his first three of the second half.

"I'm going to go out tomorrow and give it everything I've got," he said. "It might be four innings and it might be nine."

If there is a Game 4, Seattle's probable pitcher is expected to be left-hander John Halama, who won his last two starts, against Oakland and Anaheim, to help the Mariners get into the playoffs.

In winning the first two games 7-4 (in 10 innings) and 5-2, the Mariners got 10 scoreless innings from their bullpen. Kazuhiro Sasaki, who set a major league rookie record with 37 saves this season, had two saves. He struck out the side Wednesday.

Brett Tomko, Jose Paniagua, Arthur Rhodes, Jose Mesa and Sasaki have given up a total of three hits.

"They've done a good job," Manuel said. "They've got good, hard throwers out there, and normally we watch up pretty well against them."

While Seattle's bullpen has been solid, Rickey Henderson has been anything but. Henderson hit .183 in the final month of the season, then went 1-for-3 with a run scored in the opener. In the fifth inning of Game 2, with Seattle leading 3-2, he led off the fifth inning with a walk, moved to second on a sacrifice bunt, stole third and then scored on a ground ball to third that didn't reach the infield dirt.

But Henderson jammed his left index finger sliding into third base on his steal, came out of the game and had his finger heavily bandaged.

He took batting practice Thursday and expects to play.

"We'll determine tomorrow what our lineup is going to be," Mariners manager Lou Piniella said.

It will be the first postseason game ever at Safeco Field, which opened during the 1999 season. The Mariners would like to make it a celebration.

"You'd like to get it over with as soon as possible," manager Lou Piniella said. "We could use some rest."

New York hopes to clinch at home

■ The Yankees come back home armed with confidence and home field advantage.

By Josh Dubow
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Watch out, Oakland.

The New York Yankees have their swagger back, their boisterous fans on their side, and their postseason ace on the mound.

Almost written off after dropping the opener against the Athletics, the best-of-five AL division series shifts to Yankee Stadium on Friday night with teams tied at 1.

"Our confidence is building," reliever Jeff Nelson said Thursday.

That could be a scary thought for Oakland, especially with Orlando Hernandez pitching for the Yankees.

Hernandez (12-13) had a mediocre regular season, but he has always been at his best come October. El Duque is 5-0 in six career playoff starts with a 1.02 ERA, trailing only Sandy Koufax and teammate Mariano Rivera for the best postseason ERA among players with at least 40 innings.

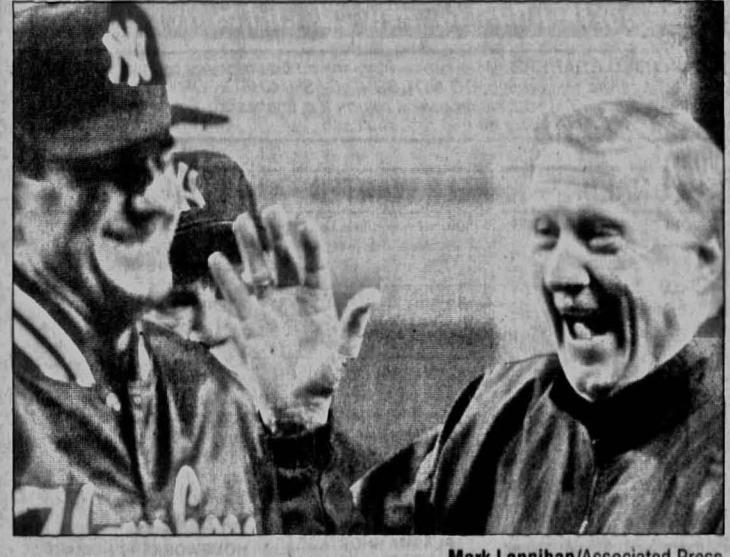

"He's just been big in big games for us," manager Joe Torre said. "He loves the challenge.... It's hard to explain, except that certain guys are driven by that challenge."

The A's have an unforeseen additional hurdle as well. They spent most of the day traveling, as their flight to New York was delayed in Kansas City because of bad weather and they weren't expected to arrive until late Thursday night.

But Oakland does have its ace on the mound. Tim Hudson (20-6) was the best pitcher in the league down the stretch, going 7-0 with a 1.16 ERA in his last seven starts.

Hudson hasn't pitched in the postseason before, but he did beat Anaheim on the final day of the regular season to clinch the AL West.

"We know with Huddy going out there we have a good chance to win," second baseman Randy Velarde said. "In my opinion, that game Sunday was every bit as big as a play-off game, and he won it for us."

Hudson wasn't intimidated in his only career start against the Yankees. He allowed no hits through 4½ innings on Aug. 30, 1999, before faltering in the fifth and losing 7-4.

"This is fun," the 25-year-old pitcher said. "I'm going to be one of the happiest guys out there. I love pitching in front of big crowds and huge stadiums."

But Hudson's pitching won't mean much unless Oakland's offense can revert to its regular-season form. After finishing second in the league in runs per game and homers, the A's have scored five runs with no homers in the first two games of the series.

"It's definitely an advantage," he said. "It's a different atmosphere here. The fans will get loud and show Oakland what real fans are all about."

Some of the A's are approaching the game with trepidation — Eric Chavez admitted to

The Yankees haven't hit much either, scoring seven runs without a homer.

Bay Area quake memories return

■ Oakland and San Francisco's playoff runs has fans remembering the 1989 season.

By Justin Pritchard
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Don't say it too loud, but the last time both Bay Area baseball teams made the playoffs the earth quaked so furiously that bridges buckled and freeways collapsed.

On Oct. 17, 1989, the magnitude 7.1 Loma Prieta quake killed 63 people, injured another 3,000 and caused $10 billion in damage to the shaken region. It also forced a 10-day postponement of Game 3 of the World Series between the Oakland Athletics and San Francisco Giants.

With both squads in this year's postseason, they're talking about the quake once more.

"Guys have mentioned it — that it would be a pretty horrible thing if it happened again," said Brian D'Arcy, a city police patrolman who was on duty during the World Series. "You have to assume you will have another one at some point."

D'Arcy also worked the opening game Wednesday between the Giants and the New York Mets. Across the bay in Oakland, the A's were hosting the New York Yankees.

Playoff baseball in the Bay Area wasn't always linked with earthquakes. In 1971, both the Giants and A's made the playoffs, and the earth stayed put.

One earthquake in two joint playoff appearances is an average not bad for a leadoff hitter. But it doesn't have locals shaking.

"I'd probably win the lottery before that would happen," Steve Arrogast of Palo Alto said with a laugh.

Still, wary of a jinx, Arrogast hedged: "If the stars align and the earthquake gods decide, then it might happen."

The closest thing to an earthquake god is David Schwartz, the U.S. Geological Survey geologist whose specialty is predicting quakes in Northern California.

"It's about a one chance in 10,000," he calculated.

Schwartz is not surprised pennant fever has locals drawing the parallel, but says no one should worry.

"There is no scientific basis for correlating the two Bay Area teams in the World Series with earthquakes," he said.

Much has changed in the region since 1989. At the time, California's economy was limping toward recession. Since then, the Internet has set off a latter-day gold rush in the region.

For sports fans, there are more important differences.

The Giants now play in new Pacific Bell Park, not the boggy confines of Candlestick — now 3Com — Park. That's where both teams were warming up when the Loma Prieta quake sent fans streaming onto the field.

The new ballpark helped make the Giants the city's hottest ticket. Meanwhile, the youthful A's struggled this year to generate anywhere near the excitement they enjoyed during their late '80s heyday, when Bash Brothers Jose Canseco and Mark McGwire filled the stands.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You will be compulsive about attaining your goals. Do everything possible to stay ahead of the competition, but don't lose perspective.TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your need to be in the limelight will lead you to do things that normally you wouldn't consider. You can expect to attract new friends and lovers, but be discriminating.GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't be too quick to put money into risky ventures. You need to clear your personal debts before shelling out more cash.CANCER (June 21-July 22): You will be uncertain about your personal life. Try not to push your partner to the limit. Your own insecurities will break down the connection you once had.LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Sudden changes at work may leave you feeling uncomfortable and insecure about your position. Maintain your professionalism, and start looking for a new job.VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You should be making personal changes that will help you feel better about yourself. Your need to do for others may lead toward some volunteer work that will result in meeting new people.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You can bet that someone you live with is experiencing difficulties. Put some time into making your surroundings better for everybody.SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your need for change should lead you on short trips. You will enjoy the company of friends or relatives. Keep an open mind, and you may loosen up a little.SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Look into personal legal matters that will affect your financial position. You need to tie up loose ends as quickly as possible.CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't let your emotions get the better of you. You are likely to take things the wrong way. Get an explanation if you are uncertain about a comment or a situation that has developed.AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Someone you work with may not be giving you the whole picture. Do some research of your own.PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You are attracting the wrong individuals. Don't lend money to those who are buttering you up. Compliments will be insincere, and you could be made to look like a fool.

New Kid On The Block

HOMECOMING 2000

FROM THE EDITOR

Young players give fans hope for future

Iowa is not in contention for any post-season games this year, but the Hawkeyes will return to bowl games soon.

A friend came up to me this morning and said, "Jeremy, how do you keep coming up with new things to write about a team that loses every week? Don't you run out of negative things to say?"

Well, I do. So this week, I will concentrate on the positives this Iowa team has displayed.

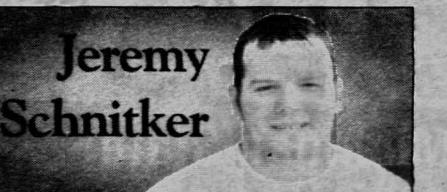

I won't talk about how I disappointed I am that nearly every other second-year coach in the country is having a good season — instead, I will talk about the bright future ahead for many of the young guys on this year's team.

I'll start with a kid named Jon "The Future" Beutjer. This kid looked phenomenal for a freshman playing his first collegiate game. He made great reads, looked at receivers other than Kevin Kasper and improvised. He's got a great personality and athleticism that Hawkeye fans haven't seen in a quarterback in awhile.

As long as this kid stays a starter, the guy who got him here on campus, Chuck Long, should worry about his records falling.

The offensive line, which has been blamed for everything but Watergate, has gotten worlds better since last year. It's still young and moving around in bunches, but it's improving.

Next year, with Ben Sobieski and Eric Steinbach healthy and Bruce Nelson, Dave Porter, Alonzo Cunningham, Sam Aiello and converted

6-foot-7 tight end Robert Gallery with a year of experience, I assure you this off-season will move the ball against anybody.

The defense — well it's hard to think of many positives about this, but I will bring up that it has played some great offensive players so far — that has a lot to do with it being so poor.

There comes a time when teams start to win.

For South Carolina, Northwestern and Clemson, that time is now.

For Iowa, that time is a little farther down the road.

But one day, within the extent of Kirk Ferentz's contract, even though he hasn't signed it yet, Iowa's time will come.

Good things happen to good people when they do things the right way.

Ferentz is a good guy, and since the day he was hired, he has said he would run this program the right way.

So, for all of you alumni coming back to Iowa City this weekend disgruntled about the lack of success of this program, don't worry.

Keep sending your I-Club checks and coming to games because this team will win sooner than later.

Heck, there are still seven games left this season.

So far, Michigan looks to be Big Ten's best

The Big Ten conference has been anything but predictable so far this year.

Wisconsin, a team many thought had a shot at the national title this year, is 0-2 in conference play. Northwestern is 4-1, 2-0 in conference play with wins over Wisconsin and Michigan State. Penn State has played horribly and is currently 2-3. Drew Brees and Purdue are 2-2.

Michigan, despite a non-conference loss to UCLA, has established itself as the league's premier team after a win over Wisconsin last week.

Illinois, a team many thought had a shot at the league title, is 0-2 in the conference with losses to Michigan and Minnesota.

Ohio State is undefeated and playing much better than last year. Minnesota has two losses so far this year, and the Hawkeyes are last in the conference with an 0-5 record.

JON BEUTJER

Beutjer has 'big goals' for Hawks

■ The redshirt freshman has wide eyes when it comes to the future of the Hawkeye program.

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

Jon Beutjer prayed for strength and patience. Once a high-school star, he stood on the college sidelines. He knew his opportunity would come someday, so he just kept working hard and waiting, but the competitive edge was making it difficult.

Following Iowa's 42-13 loss at Nebraska, Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz pulled aside his three quarterbacks — senior Scott Mullen, junior Kyle McCann and redshirt freshman Beutjer — and told them he was making a change. Beutjer was being promoted from third-string to starter.

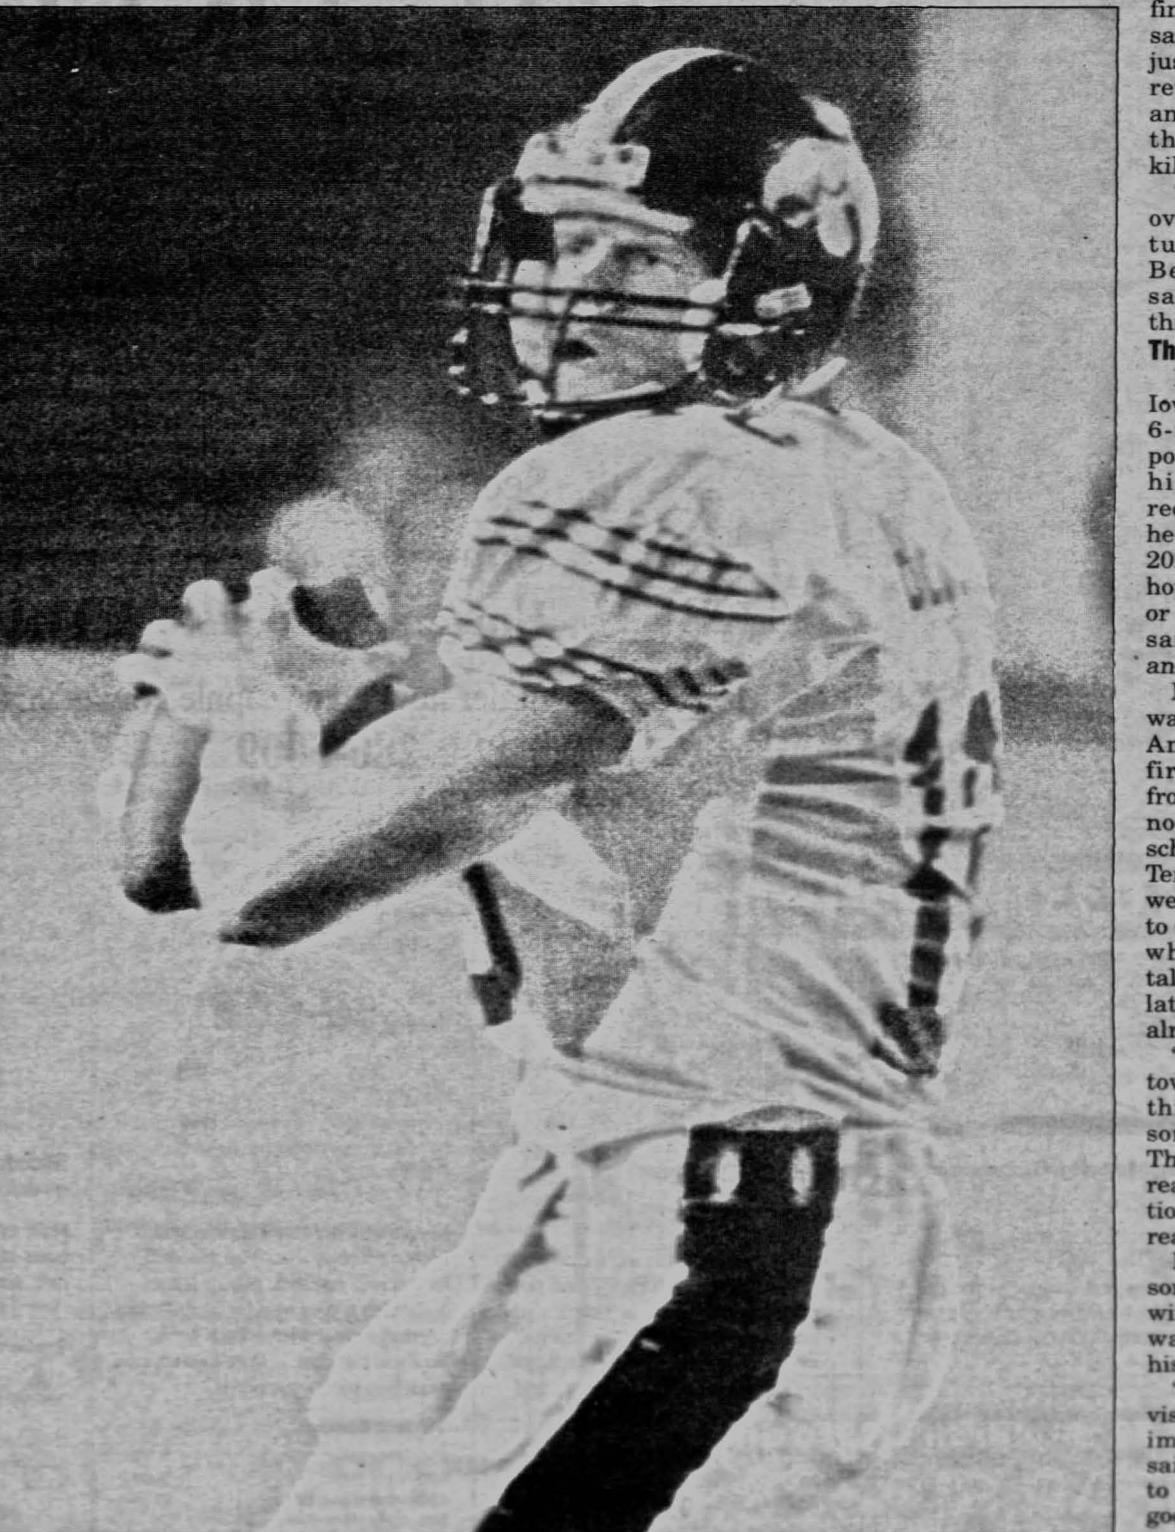

"I couldn't believe it, actually," Beutjer said. "My heart kind of dropped, and I was like 'Wow.' I started asking coach Ferentz questions about Indiana right away because I was so nervous."

Beutjer's prayers had been answered. This blue-eyed kid from Wheaton, Ill., just received the opportunity to fulfill his dream of quarterbacking a Division I football team.

He was nervous all week. He had to study film and prepare for three mid-terms. He didn't have time to return all his friends' phone calls. Beutjer was getting ready for Iowa's Big Ten opener amid the hype surrounding his first collegiate start. He knew what fans expected of him because he read it every day.

"People were writing me e-mails saying 'I've read about you in the paper. I've heard you're really good, and I hope you do good Saturday. I hope you are all everybody says you are,'" Beutjer said. "I felt a little pressure about that, but I kept praying and asking God for peace, and he gave me that during the game."

Beutjer was visibly nervous for most of the first half, but he started to get a rhythm. He strapped on his helmet, ran back out onto the field for the second half and let the football fly under the lights, just like he did in high school.

Iowa freshman Jon Beutjer looks for an open receiver last weekend against Indiana in Bloomington, Ind. Beutjer racked up 380 passing yards in Iowa's 45-33 loss. He will start his second collegiate game Saturday at Kinnick Stadium against Michigan State.

And just like in high school, he made the game look easy. Many said he seized his opportunity; Beutjer said he did not.

"I'm really working hard, but as long as we lose, I haven't taken a shot at my opportunity," he said. "As a quarterback, I need to go out there and do everything I can to help the team win." Perfection is what Beutjer strives for, but he would rather throw three interceptions and have Iowa win than pad his stats. All he cares about is digging the Hawkeyes out of this rut.

Last year, Beutjer had to watch his teammates suffer through a 1-10 season and couldn't do anything about it. He redshirted, so he was confined to the sidelines, but he said he was still a part of it, just as he's a part of the current 13-game skid. He wins and loses with the team, and this whole losing thing is killing him.

"He's said to me over and over again that he wants to turn this thing around," Beutjer's mother, Nancy, said. "He has big goals for this university."

The "Long" recruiting trail

Beutjer walked onto the Iowa campus last summer, all 6-feet-5-inches and 170 pounds of him. Ferentz said his biggest concern when recruiting Beutjer was that he was too skinny, but he's at 202 pounds now and said he hopes to get up to around 215 or 220. Beutjer's father, Jim, said he was a late bloomer and thinks his son will be too.

Nancy Beutjer said her son was recruited mostly by Mid-American schools, but his first scholarship offer was from Iowa State. Thanks, but no thanks, Beutjer told the school. He wanted to play Big Ten football. Illinois and Iowa were the only Big Ten schools to offer him scholarships, and when Penn State started talking to Beutjer, it was too late because by then he was already a Hawkeye.

"Iowa City is a football town," Nancy Beutjer said. "I think that's one of the reasons he wanted to go there. They were struggling, but he really liked the idea of tradition and that the people there really liked football."

Nancy also said that her son likes to surround himself with genuine people, and he was affected by Ferentz on his visit.

"Jon set up the official visit, and he was really, really impressed," Nancy Beutjer said. "He could not wait for us to meet coach Ferentz. He's a good people-person, and Jon's a good judge of that."

But perhaps the biggest recruiting tool of all arrived in the mailbox as Beutjer began his junior year of high school. The first letter he received from Iowa was signed by Chuck Long.

"I remember when I was recruiting him, I watched him dunk a basketball every

■ Ryan Hansen's team finds humor in the fact that he will be featured in Nov. 10 People.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

The People announcement that Iowa senior and safety Ryan Hansen will be listed as one of the sexiest men in America got a predictable reaction from the Iowa football team.

Hawk-eye players and coaches think it's pretty funny.

"That was kinda the sense I got in the weight room yesterday," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said. "In fact, I didn't know anything about it, but there was some banter flying around the weight room yesterday."

That's not a surprise. This is a football team, not a beauty school. So when teammates found out about the success Hansen's new modeling hobby has seen, they had to razz him about it.

"We got to (joke with him about it), yeah," punter Jason Baker said. "He enjoys it; it's funny. People will call him 'pretty boy.' But it's not too bad. Anything that creates a little laughter in the atmosphere is good."

Hansen, who posed for Esquire this summer to model clothing styles of the Heartland, will be in the Nov. 10 issue of People. Hansen, who is in his fifth year at the university after redshirting his freshman year, is also a UI law student.

Imagine being a football player for a Big Ten university, being in law school and having a part-time modeling career. Hansen, who did not attend Tuesday's weekly football press conference, is a busy man. But Ferentz doesn't worry that the senior will be too wrapped up with his various commitments.

(Ryan Hansen) is reserved. I think of Hansen as an academic guy; he's really smart. I don't know if he's the sexiest man in America, but somebody must think he is.

"Oh, no, I'm not worried," he said. "His point of conversation yesterday was that he had a 24-page legal brief that was due today. That's kind of a contradiction — a 24-page legal brief."

"That was what he's worried about. Ryan Hansen can handle whatever comes his way. I don't worry about Hansen. I never will."

Iowa running back Ladell Betts said he was surprised that Hansen got the recognition in People because he doesn't have a model-type attitude.

"He's reserved," Betts said. "I think of Hansen as an academic guy, he's really smart. I don't know if he's the sexiest man in America, but somebody must think he is."

Well, if People thinks Hansen is one of the sexiest men in America, who do the Hawkeyes think the sexiest men of the Iowa football team are?

According to Baker, it's offensive lineman Christophe Trappe. Offensive lineman Robert Gallery said he wouldn't want to be caught talking to anybody on the team about the matter. Freshman quarterback Jon Beutjer said he's not a good judge of guys.

Betts? Well, he thinks that if somebody on the team were

IOWA VOLLEYBALL

Hot start has Iowa volleyball team setting high goals

■ The team hosts a game tonight and again on Saturday.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

Iowa volleyball coach Rita Buck-Crockett is on a mission to prove there is more to UI athletics than football, basketball and wrestling.

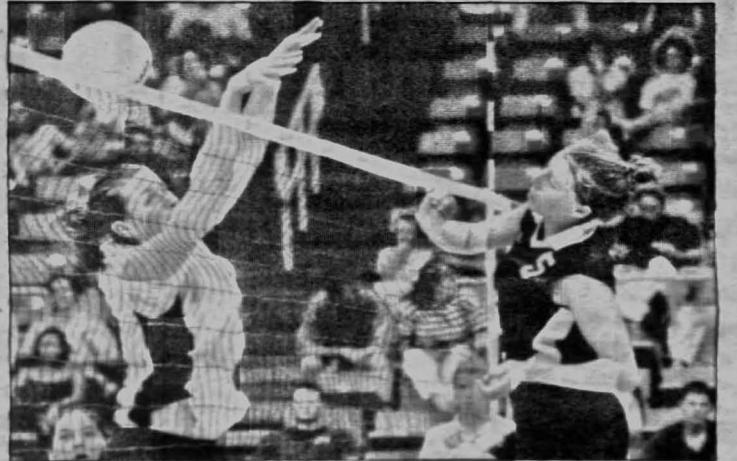

"It's not that big of a deal to be 3-1 right now," Crockett said. "Teams can still go to the NCAAs or make it into the Top 20, like we eventually want to."

Iowa last appeared in the NCAA tournament in 1994, when the Hawkeyes lost to Pittsburgh in the first round.

Fans will yet another chance to see the talented, young Hawkeyes take the court when they host Northwestern at Carver-Hawkeye Arena today at 7 p.m. and 10th-ranked Wisconsin at 7 p.m. on Saturday.

The sky seems to be the limit for the Hawkeyes this season as they continue to prove themselves with each match.

With little expectation coming off a 4-23 campaign, and with a young team, Iowa already has more victories than last season and is one win away from equaling its 1999 conference win total.

Zach Boyden-Holmes/The Daily Iowan
Katie Panhorst (right), Iowa's only four-year starter, spikes the ball in Carver-Hawkeye Arena earlier this season.

the Big Ten by taking a hard-fought five-game match against Indiana in Bloomington before falling to the Nittany Lions in four games.

"This team is not ready to be where they are," Crockett said. "They're ready to do even more."

For the most part, the Hawkeyes are a young team. Katie Panhorst is the only four-year member of the team, and Sara Meyermann, Larissa Lopes and transfer Laura Pike are the only juniors. De Abreu is a senior but is in her first season with Iowa after transferring. The remainder of the team is a mix of talented sophomores like Kelli Chesnut and Jamie Lansing and freshmen such as Renee Hill, Carolyn Giese and Brittany Naucke.

"As long as we're doing well and showing improvement every day, you know you'll get better," Crockett said. "This team just has a great attitude."

which way. He sold me from an athletic standpoint," Long said. "Jon wasn't a national recruit. People underestimated his ability and were skeptical about him, even some in our own office, but he's a guy you want in the system."

Like Beutjer, Long is a Wheaton boy. He sported No. 16 on his chest and curly hair on his head. Long was one of the premier quarterbacks in college-football history, and he wanted Beutjer to be a Hawkeye and a part of their tradition.

"Jon knew Chuck Long was a legend," Jim Beutjer said. "When he discovered they gave him No. 16, he was deeply honored. He feels no one should have that number. He feels uncomfortable in that number."

Long has since moved on to be the quarterbacks coach at Oklahoma. While Iowa recruited Beutjer, his father said he asked Long if he would be at Iowa for his son's career. Long said he couldn't guarantee anything — he wanted to be a head coach someday and would go where he had the best chance to advance. That's exactly what Jim Beutjer wanted his son to hear.

"Jon saw it was OK to set goals because here was someone with ambition," Jim Beutjer said. "He left for something he felt was better, and there is nothing wrong with that."

Long said it was hard to leave, but he and Beutjer developed a great relationship while together, and he called his recruit before Iowa's Sept. 30 game against Indiana and got the new No. 16's voice mail.

"I called to wish him good luck," Long said. "I'm real close to those guys, especially the ones I recruited."

Long's words of encouragement weren't the only ones Beutjer received. Following Iowa's loss to the Hoosiers, Jim said another Heisman trophy candidate approached his son. IU's Antwaan Randle El told Beutjer to keep working hard and that he was going to be a great quarterback.

He said Monday on campus and this burning desire to win while Beutjer was still learning the game at Wheaton South.

"He's infectious," Long said. "He's got that big smile. He's confident and easy-going. He makes others feel at ease. Guys tend to gravitate toward that. People believe in that."

What separates Beutjer from many of today's college athletes is his attitude and humble demeanor. He looks back and sees the growth he made during his redshirt season. Many players may have been bitter toward their coaches for not giving them a chance; Beutjer was not. He said he needed the time to adjust to the college game and that he wasn't ready, physically or mentally, last season.

This patience and respect for others was instilled into Beutjer at a young age. Nancy Beutjer said Wheaton South has one of the strongest football programs in the country. It's the home of Red Grange. Head coach John Thorn teaches his players a philosophy that bears the name of the Illinois football legend.

It starts with faith. Players can have absolutely no pre-judice and must make other people more important than themselves. There is no selfishness. They have to be willing learners. Thorn said Beutjer is one of the finest young men he's ever worked with.

Thorn will be there Saturday, too — not as a coach, but as a friend and fan. He said he doesn't think there is any way the skinny kid from Wheaton will disappoint.

"I think as a quarterback you have to go out there and prove every week," Beutjer said. "And the only way to prove is to help the team win the game, and that's my job, and that's what I want to do Saturday."

But the coach won't take the credit. He said the most important people in Beutjer's development as both a player and a person are his family. They never take pride in their son — they are always proud of him.

Last week, Beutjer had to prepare for his collegiate debut. This week presents a different challenge. It will be Beutjer's Kinnick Stadium debut. Many will have their first look at the new quarterback — the proclaimed future of Iowa's program.

Jim Beutjer said the entire state of Iowa couldn't put more pressure on his son than he will put upon himself; and while his son may be a little nervous, he will be excited to hear the home fans.

Jim Beutjer said when Beutjer came to Iowa games while he was being recruited, he vividly acknowledged the atmosphere inside Kinnick.

"He thought it was awesome — like nothing he had ever experienced," Jim Beutjer said. "And to hear them roar."

But he said the interesting thing about athletes is that no matter if 70,000 fill the stadium or if nobody is there, the reason they are there is for the love of the competition. And that, he said, is why Beutjer plays. He loves to win and to play football.

NFL ROOKIES

Rookies find NFL fast-paced, exciting

■ Four rookies in the NFL are graduates of Iowa's 1999 team.

By Nick Firchau
The Daily Iowan

If the NFL consists of the best of the best, then everyone there must be pretty special. The veterans are experienced. The young players are fast and strong. The rookies are thrilled to be there.

Four former Iowa Hawkeyes are currently butting heads with the sport's best players as rookies in the NFL: Matt Bowen of the St. Louis Rams, Zeron Flemister of the Washington Redskins, Austin Wheatley of the New Orleans Saints and Bashir Yamini of the Tennessee Titans. While all are competing for playing time, the difference in their stories is remarkable.

In front of the "Monday Night Football" national television audience, Rams safety Matt Bowen made one very important play. He lunged at Broncos tight end Byron Chamberlain and wrenched the ball loose from Chamberlain's grip, breaking up a key play for Denver. Things haven't been the same since.

"If you talked to me before the season and asked me about playing," said Bowen, "I'd say, 'I'll probably see some time maybe on special teams.' But I made one play on defense on 'Monday Night Football,' and now I'm starting against the Atlanta Falcons. That was a huge surprise."

It may be just football to Bowen now that he has adapted to the physical rigors of the league, but he knows that now that he has reached such a high point, he can't let up. The fear of injury and loss of playing time fuels Bowen to continue his work ethic.

"It's tough day-to-day. You definitely can't show up to practice and be lazy," said Bowen. "Because the speed is so intense, if you're lazy, you're risking an injury to yourself or one of your teammates. And everybody's always watching you, not only the coaches. You miss the student section, but it's like the whole stadium is the student section."

Bowen was invited by the Rams to come along for the ride when he was drafted in the sixth round.

"I'm in a great position right now," Bowen said.

That's an understatement.

Aside from injuries and the Austin Wheatley (86) signed with the New Orleans Saints and is vying for playing time.

Bowen began the season as the second-team strong safety for the Rams, but because of an injury to starting safety Devin Bush, Bowen has stepped into the limelight on play and special teams.

"You don't have time to do the things you would do normally, but you're not in a normal situation," said Bowen. "Everything is challenging and everything is new, but the bottom line is that it's football. It's still football."

It may be just football to Bowen now that he has adapted to the physical rigors of the league, but he knows that now that he has reached such a high point, he can't let up. The fear of injury and loss of playing time fuels Bowen to continue his work ethic.

"At my first game for the Titans, I was on the sideline because I had just gotten there," he said. "And there was a U.S. fighter jet that flew over the stadium — I guess it was part of the pre-game entertainment. There was just a lot of energy. You look around, and the crowd is made up of people from all different ages. You miss the student section, but it's like the whole stadium is the student section."

Following his productive senior season in both track and football, the Denver Broncos signed Yamini

Yamini quickly found out the players that surrounded him were of a different breed from those in college. Yamini said he realized while trying to earn playing time and respect in the league that adapting to the perfection is very difficult.

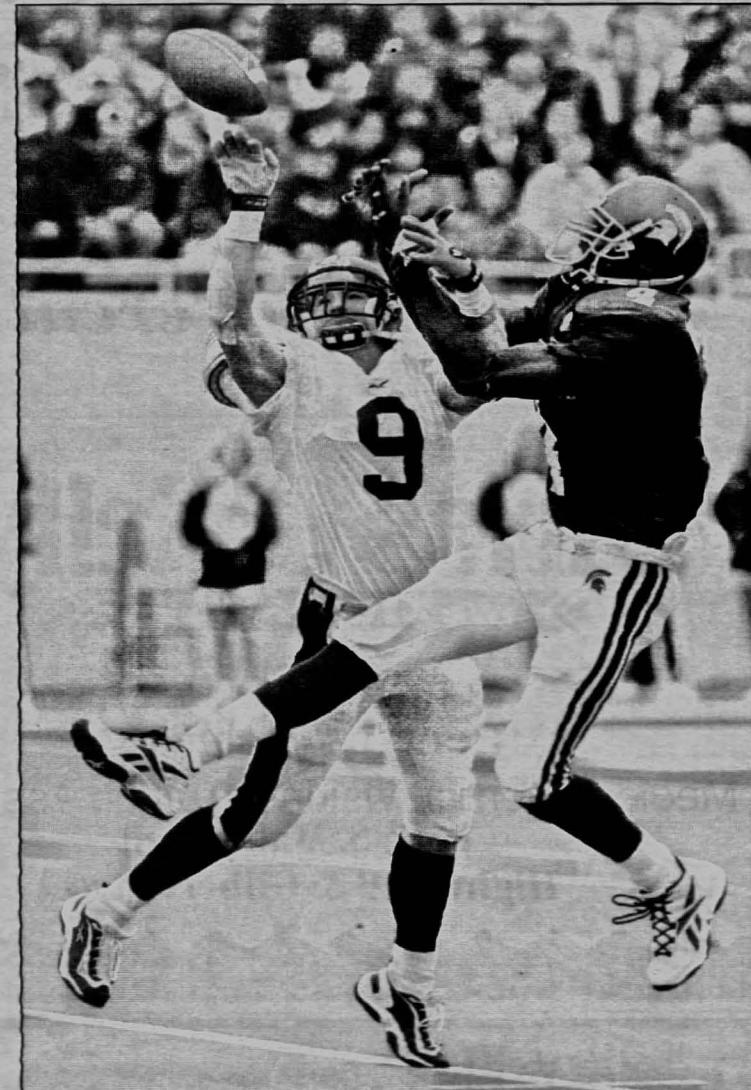

The Broncos placed Yamini on their practice squad following the camps. On Aug. 28, the Titans came looking for a receiver and placed him on their active roster.

"It was a dream come true," said Yamini. "Getting picked up by the defending AFC champions ... I was really excited. It's one thing to make it and play for an NFL team, but it's another to play for a really good team."

Yamini has adapted, and because of a string of injuries to the Titans' receiver corps, the team expects him to gradually see more playing time as he learns the offensive scheme.

"It's day-to-day, you have to play it that way," he said. "You never know what's going to happen with injuries or anything like that, so you just have to see what happens. You just have to keep getting better and keep working hard because, like I said, it's day-to-day."

"There's a small window for mistakes. You're always trying to prove something to the coaches, and there's not a lot of time," said Yamini. "You can't make mistakes in that time. That's the hardest thing in the NFL."

HOME SWEET HOMEFormer UI athletes call I.C. home

■ Career opportunities, families and atmosphere persuade many student-athletes to stay.

By Roseanna Smith
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City has the lure of a college town: Big Ten sports, happening nightlife and a relaxed college atmosphere. The draw of these Iowa City attributes have played a part in athletes' decisions whether to stay in the town after their collegiate careers.

For businessman and former Hawkeye football player Richard Willock, the draw to stay in Iowa City was the business aspect, he said. Passionate about shopping, Willock and former Hawkeye running back Tavian Banks and defensive back Kerry Cooks started their own clothing business, Goodfellaz, on Oct. 10, 1999.

"I love to shop, and this is one way of seeing all the clothes I would like to buy in the future," Willock said. "This urban stuff is cool, but I get to go to shows where there's Prada and Gucci and Versace, and I'm right in the middle of it. This is maybe a stepping stone to what I would like to get into."

I still keep in contact with the guys. When they come back, we get together and go to the game and tailgate, but I've distanced myself from football.

— Rob Thein,
former Iowa player who lives in Iowa City

"I have the opportunity to help young student-athletes to know what to expect when they get to college," he said. "Even if they don't decide to come here, it's important to understand the challenges, and they will remember that."

An Iowa City resident before his Hawkeye football career, fullback Rob Thein stayed here because of his family, he said. Going to Iowa City High School and growing up in Iowa City, Thein found a job in medical equipment sales after graduating last year.

Although he is not as involved with football, Thein said he is still in touch with his teammates.

More than that, he now calls Iowa City his home.

"I like Iowa City," Willock said. "It's a laid-back, comfortable atmosphere. I'm from the south side of Chicago, and it's a world of difference. Knowing that I can relax here sets my mind at ease."

From north-central Iowa, defensive back Joe Slattery also stayed in Iowa City because of a job opportunity. He also wanted to stay close to his family and a job in Coralville gave him that chance, he said.

Willock graduated from the UI in 1998 with a degree in sports management and admitted he'd only had four business-related classes at Iowa. The venture with the store was a pick.

That's been my dream in life.

I'd love to play NFL football," said Betts. "If not, so be it. I'm not sure if I'd stay in the area.

I'm more of a big city guy. I love

Iowa City, but I think I'd go back to Kansas City or Seattle.

I'm not a fan of big, big cities, like Chicago. That's too packed for me."

Richard Willock, who last played wide receiver for the Hawkeyes in 1997, has stayed in Iowa City since graduating in 1998. Willock, originally from Chicago, said he decided to stay in the area because it is smaller, cleaner and more peaceful.

Juniors and seniors on the current Hawkeye lineup are looking for prospects outside of Iowa City and hoping to make it in the NFL draft. Junior running back Ladell Betts said Iowa City is too small for his taste. Betts is ranked No. 8 as an Iowa career rushing leader and led the Hawkeyes against Indiana last weekend. He said that he is looking for a draft pick.

"That's been my dream in life. I'd love to play NFL football," said Betts. "If not, so be it. I'm not sure if I'd stay in the area. I'm more of a big city guy. HAWKEYE DEFENSE

Defense hopes to get help from opposition

Iowa's defensive weaknesses have been exploited all season, and the Hawkeyes hope to stop the negative trend.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

The only consistent thing one can expect of Iowa's defense so far this year is that it will play poorly against at least one form of moving the football.

One week, the defense looks somewhat tough against the run, not allowing Nebraska to score a touchdown off a running play. Then, one week later, Antwaan Randle El scores on the Hawkeyes seemingly every time he touches the ball.

Nebraska coaches lauded Iowa for being a physical team, then Indiana runs the Hawkeyes over like a Cambus.

So what's going on? Are these guys going to make some changes when they face Michigan State and the Spartans' 250-pound horse in T.J. Duggett?

"You just keep sawing wood," Ferentz said of his improving his defense. "It's like anything else. You try to be as smart as you can in your approach. There are no magic formulas there. You just need to keep improving on the fundamental play, breaking on the ball in the back end."

After last Saturday's performance against the Hoosiers, in which Iowa's defense obviously struggled, Ferentz didn't seem too concerned about his defense's lack of productivity.

"We've played some pretty good players and some pretty good teams so far this year," Ferentz said. "We've faced some excellent quarterbacks so far, and that's factored in, no doubt about it."

However, he was quick to point out that a lot of Iowa's defensive failures had to do with its competition this year.

Iowa is to blame for much of its problems, though.

Some examples include the fact the defense can't seem to stop anybody on third down, especially third and long. Ferentz said the tackling and team speed could always get better.

"If you want to pinpoint one thing, I think it's third-down efficiency," Ferentz said.

"We've played some pretty good players and some pretty good teams so far this year," Ferentz said. "That's what defense is all about. I think we're making strides there, but there is still room for improvement."

As far as drastic changes go, on the defensive side of the ball Ferentz says the

The speed and tackling was quite evident

against Indiana. The Hawks were outrun often last Saturday and other times were in good positioning to make a tackle but didn't.

"You never tackle well enough," Ferentz said.

As for team speed, Iowa seems to have little of it.

"If I'm here 10 years from now I'll still be complaining,

"We've got to get quicker and faster," Ferentz said. "That's what defense is all about.

I think we're making strides

there, but there is still room for improvement."

drastic changes they did to the offense midway through last year.

They're just going to stick to their game plan and bank on improving every week —

they may even get a little help from their opponents.

"There's not a lot of different directions we can go right now," Ferentz said. "It's kind of like when you strike out against Randy Johnson —

you probably don't go back and look at the drawing board too much. I mean, you go back and look at what you do, but sometimes you have to give great players their

MICHIGAN STATE

Spartans hope seclusion does the job

■ The Spartans know a victory in Kinnick is their key to remaining in the Top 25.

By Nick Firchau
The Daily Iowan

Following the disappointing 37-17 loss last weekend at the hands of the Northwestern Wildcats, coach Bobby Williams quickly announced that Michigan State's practices would not be open to the media during the week.

The reason? Williams said his team needed to regroup and focus on internal problems within the team.

The 3-1 Spartans are huddling behind closed doors and nursing bruised bodies and egos. MSU players stayed away from reporters' questions, and Williams took few phone calls. A calm set in on East Lansing.

If it's true that calm always comes before a storm, things could get wild when the 25th-ranked Spartans march into Kinnick Stadium to face a 0-5 Iowa team that has lost its last eight conference games dating back to last season.

After last week's loss, the Spartans are regrouping.

"We're just trying to get our focus back and get ready to play a pretty good football team this Saturday," Williams said about his team's strategy for the week. "We know we'll get Iowa's maximum effort. That's a very tough place to play. I know their fans do a really good job of getting into the game. It'll be a great environment and we're looking forward to it."

T.J. Duckett, MSU's star sophomore running back who leads the team in all-purpose yards with more than 145 a game, said that learning from last weekend's defeat, the team will have to start from the ground up.

"He's improved from last year to this year in that he knows more about what he's doing," said Williams. "Last year, he was a two-way player and spending most of his time on defense and very little time on offense. His knowledge of the offense has improved tremendously. Obviously, now he knows what he's doing, and he's able to play every down as opposed to last year, when we only used him in short yardage situations."

Duckett will be a major ingredient in the possible turnaround for Michigan State. The 252-pound truck started last season playing both running back in short-yardage situations and linebacker. But as the season carried on, his linebacker duties tapered off and he developed into a potent offensive weapon, rushing for 606 yards and scoring 10 of the team's 12 rushing touchdowns.

In four games this season, he has already rushed for 562 yards on 104 carries and four touchdowns.

Williams said the difference between Duckett's first season and this early part of his second is remarkable.

"He's improved from last year to this year in that he knows more about what he's doing," said Williams. "Last year, he was a two-way player and spending most of his time on defense and very little time on offense. His knowledge of the offense has improved tremendously. Obviously, now he knows what he's doing, and he's able to play every down as opposed to last year, when we only used him in short yardage situations."

The Spartans may need to rely on the stability and leadership of Duckett now more than they expected to at the beginning of the season. Junior quarterback Ryan Van Dyke was billed as the heir apparent to two-year starter Bill Burke, who graduated following MSU's 10-2 campaign last season that ended with a Citrus Bowl win over Florida.

The injured Van Dyke in the Marshall game and led MSU to victory. Smoker put up 157 yards and two touchdowns against Missouri the next week and tossed for 181 more yards in a victory over Notre Dame. The second of his two touchdowns, a 68-yard strike to receiver Herb Haygood with 1:48 left, was the deciding factor in the Spartans' comeback win. Haygood leads the team in receiving yards with 246 in four games.

Despite the loss to the Wildcats last weekend, it was Smoker's finest outing of the season. He pinned 233 yards on Northwestern, completing 17-35 passes and tossing a touchdown.

"We are a team that can definitely rebound from this loss," Smoker said after the game. "We have to come out this week and practice hard and get ready for Iowa. We will be ready."

Iowa's only points in the game, a 30-yard field goal, came after Tim Dodge returned the second-half kickoff 86 yards. Aaron Kampman led Iowa's defense with 12 tackles, while Ryan Hansen collected 10. Hawkeyes were held to seven net yards rushing, while MSU totaled 511 yards total offense.

Did you know ...

- Bobby Williams is in his first full season as the MSU head coach after taking over last season prior to its Citrus Bowl win over Florida. For 10 years, he was the MSU running backs coach.
- Williams was a four-year letterman as a running back and defensive back at Purdue.
- Iowa holds a 16-15-2 advantage in the series that began in 1953. The Hawkeyes hold a 4-0-1 record against Michigan State when celebrating homecoming, including a 37-30 comeback win in 1996 on MSU's last visit to Kinnick Stadium.
