Israeli rockets target Arafat's home

Escalating violence leaves hopes for Mideast peace nearly extinguished.

By Ibrahim Hazboun
Associated Press

GAZA CITY, Gaza Strip — In a day of incendiary violence that left Mideast peacemaking in ashes, Israeli helicopters rocketed Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat's compound Thursday in retaliation for the mutilation of three Israeli soldiers by a mob of enraged Palestinians.

Late Thursday, Arafat spoke in a conference call with President Clinton and Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, Arafat's office said.

Mubarak, who was in Britain, met with British Foreign Minister Robin Cook and later invited Israeli and Palestinian leaders to attend a summit, British sources said. There was no immediate confirmation of a summit from any side.

The day began with U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan and CIA head George Tenet trying to broker a truce to end two weeks of daily fighting. But it degenerated swiftly, with both sides unleashing pent-up rage.

The Palestinians inflicted the worst losses yet on Israeli troops, while Israel's combat helicopters staged unprecedented attacks on high-profile Palestinian targets while tanks rumbled to the outskirts of Palestinian cities.

One Israeli rocket struck 150 feet from Arafat's seaside residential headquarters, with the Palestinian leader inside at the time, his aides said.

"This is a declaration of war — a crazy war," said Saeb Erekat, a senior Palestinian official.

Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak said Arafat "does not appear to be a partner for peace at this time."

Barak said he held Arafat indirectly responsible for the killing of the soldiers and said Israel would hunt down those involved. He demanded that the United States publicly affix blame to Arafat for the collapse of the peace talks and the escalation of violence.

Barak also renewed calls to the hawkish opposition party Likud to join an emergency coal-

Mideast violence concerns locals

By Bridget Stratton
The Daily Iowan

As the conflict between the Palestinians and Israelis escalates, current and former UI students from the Mideast are finding it difficult to be away from their families while their homeland is in turmoil.

Early Thursday, U.N. Secretary-General Kofi Annan and CIA head George Tenet attempted to broker a compromise to end the two weeks of violence. However, the talks deteriorated soon after, and both Israeli and Palestinians engaged in the worst acts of violence since the conflict began on Sept. 28.

In response to the killing of three Israeli soldiers in Ramallah, Israeli helicopters attacked Yasser Arafat's headquarters and the police station and the Palestinian TV headquarters in Ramallah.

The current leader of the General Union of Palestine students, UI graduate student Osama Saba, said his 16-year-old sister's school is right next to the police station in Ramallah. He is not sure if his sister was in school when the attack occurred.

Suicide bombers blast U.S. Navy ship

WASHINGTON — In a sinister slip through Navy security, suicide bombers in a small boat tore a gaping hole in a U.S. warship Thursday at a refueling stop in a Yemeni harbor on the Arabian Peninsula, U.S. officials say. The blast killed six members of the crew, injured 35 and left 11 missing.

The crippled ship was tilting slightly in the harbor at Aden, Yemen, but the Navy said it was not in danger of sinking.

No one has claimed responsibility, Defense Secretary William Cohen told a Pentagon news conference.

President Clinton said the attack on the USS Cole, one of the world's most advanced warships, appeared to be an act of terrorism, the worst against the U.S. military since the bombing of an Air Force barracks in Saudi Arabia in 1996 that killed 19 troops.

"We will find out who was responsible and hold them accountable," Clinton pledged.

He dispatched investigative teams from the FBI, the State Department and the Pentagon to Yemen. Clinton also ordered a heightened state of alert for all U.S. military installations around the world.

After the attack, ambulances rushed to the port, and Americans working with Yemeni authorities cordoned off the area. Yemeni police sources said without elaboration that a number of people had been detained for questioning; it was not clear whether any were suspects.

The State Department issued a worldwide alert, saying it was extremely concerned about the possibility of violence against U.S. citizens and interests. Americans were urged to maintain "a high level of vigilance."

In a parallel travel warning, Americans were advised to defer all travel to Israel, the West Bank and Gaza, and those already there were told to stay at home or get to a safe location. Americans were warned not to go to Yemen.

Yemeni President Ali Abdullah Saleh talked with Secretary of State Madeleine Albright, pledged his cooperation in the investigation and visited some of the injured who were hospitalized locally. He insisted in a CNN interview that his country did not harbor "terrorist elements" and said, "I don't think it's a terrorist attack."

The Pentagon said it was contacting families and would not release victims' names until later today. But the parents of sailor Craig Wibberley, 19, of Williamsport, Md., confirmed Thursday night that their son was killed in the bombing, according to the Herald-Mail of Hagerstown, Md.

It was the first attack targeting the U.S. military in Yemen since the Pentagon pulled out all 100 American military personnel based there in January 1993 after bombings outside the U.S. Embassy and at hotels where some Americans were staying. U.S. intelligence has blamed Osama bin Laden's Al-Qaida organization for some of those bombings.

Matchbox twenty ignites Carver

As the lights dimmed in Carver-Hawkeye Arena Thursday night, high-school seniors Elizabeth Heinz and Kristen Haas of Des Plaines, Ill., screamed and jumped out of their seats for their third matchbox twenty concert in the past week.

The band first took the stage singing its hit song "Bent" for an estimated 5,500 fans.

Thursday's concert was part of matchbox twenty's college campus tour, co-promoted by SCOPE and SFX Contemporary Group.

Last Thursday, Heinz and Haas were in Champaign, Ill., and then drove to Madison, Wis., for another show on Oct. 15.

"Their music is inspiring, and they are so creative," said Heinz, who has been a dedicated fan for the last four years. "Plus, they're all so hot!"

"I like this tour because they put a lot a creativity toward songs, and there's a lot of lights," said Heinz.

By going to the latest concerts, the dedicated duo was able to meet the head security guard and score "meet and greet" backstage passes to talk with band members before the concert.

"I was in complete awe," said Heinz. "I had a speech prepared, but I just totally forgot it."

All fears aside, Haas described the group members as easy to talk to.

"They were really down to earth and friendly," Haas said.

UI juniors Emily Bracke and Lydia Fine also were able to obtain backstage VIP passes at last night's concert; Bracke won an on-line contest. They, too, thought the band was very welcoming.

"They were so awesome," said Bracke. "Rob is going to be my future husband."

Fine, who wasn't really a fan before, said she will listen to the band in the future. "The band members were really sweet and talkative. Rob Thomas was so

Campus scoffs as Friday the 13th rolls around

Many in the UI community are skeptical about superstitions and unfounded fears.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

Today is Friday the 13th. It is a day vilified by myth, and one that just happens to coincide this year with the first full moon after the autumnal equinox — a harvest moon.

Today, the Earth, sun and moon align to shed light on the moon's entire face.

Today, children fall down more often, minor bumps and bruises increase in number, and controlling them is futile.

"They act totally wild," said UI senior Amy Nugent, an assistant at the UI Hospitals and Clinics Childcare Center. "They won't listen."

"We just laugh about it. It's not a big deal anymore. I'm going to do a lot of praying."

Nugent isn't the only one apprehensive about the day. David Penick, a taxi driver for Yellow Cab, 404 E. College St., said he expects a lot of drunkards and odd behavior once night creeps over Iowa City.

"It's just going to be wild and goofy," said Penick, who has driven a taxicab in Iowa City for 21 years. "Every wacko and schizo in the county will be out.

I think the psychiatric hospital just lets them out."

Friday the 13th and a full harvest moon make a potent combination, he said.

The two events occur simultaneously only about once every 200 years, said UI physics and astronomy Professor Steve Spangler.

Iowa City police and UI Public Safety say it's a day like any other, and no extra precautions will be taken.

Several UI students echoed that skepticism.

"I think it's all in the brain," said UI graduate student Kevin Kriegel. "People make too much of Friday the 13th, and many mishaps stem from that."

For many, superstitions were childhood fads that dwindled with age.

"I always thought it was fun

UI looks to up faculty salaries

■ The UI's salaries have slipped from third to fifth in the Big Ten.

By Jessi Todden
The Daily Iowan

While UI faculty and staff members will have an average 4 percent increase in salaries for the 2001 fiscal year, an annual report of Big Ten salaries raises concerns with some officials.

In the last five years, the UI's ranking in salaries has gone from third to fifth among Big Ten schools, according to

We cannot continue to keep falling if we're going to keep the best faculty and staff here.

"We cannot continue to keep falling if we're going to keep the best faculty and staff here," UI interim Vice Provost Leslie Sims said.

A good faculty will attract a lot of external funding and serve as ambassadors for the UI, he said.

"When they participate in national events and win national awards, they bring positive recognition to the UI that's important in recruiting new faculty and students," he said.

Many efforts to better inform the state legislators about the importance of the UI's maintaining competitive salaries to keep top faculty and staff members at the UI are currently under way, UI Staff Council President Pat Kenner said.

"We need to make sure that the Iowa Legislature understands the benefits that the UI provides throughout the entire state," she said.

Faculty members will talk to state legislators about the UI's funding needs and why staying competitive among other schools is important to maintain high-quality education at the UI, Sims said.

The UI is also continuing to look for other sources of funding, in addition to reallocating funds, in order to have the money to attract high-quality faculty, Kenner said.

"We can't keep raising tuition," she said.

The UI is currently operating a program called Capital Campaign, which tries to get alumni and friends of the university to donate money to fund the endowment, said Jonathon Carlson, a UI law professor and former Faculty Senate president.

"Our students will have a tremendous opportunity to work and learn from the talented world leaders who teach at this school, making them more favorable for good jobs," he said.

Many faculty members like the quality of life in Iowa and would like to stay here, but the UI has lost good teachers to significantly better offers from other schools, UI Staff Senate President Carolyn Colvin said.

"If we don't have a faculty, we don't have a university," Carlson said.

The regents requested $27.4 million for salary increases for the 2001 fiscal year but received only $18.2 million. The average UI salary is $74,300 for the fiscal year 2001 — $10,000 less than the Big Ten's salary leader University of Michigan, where the average faculty salary is $85,300.

CITY BRIEF

Local man charged with child endangerment

A father was charged with child endangerment on Oct. 5 after he allegedly hit his child for not finishing his homework.

According to Iowa City police records, Tieron Lamont James, 28, 1001 Cross Park Ave. Apt. A, was charged after his son reported to his school counselor that his father gave him a "whuppin" because he hadn't taken home a consequence sheet from school for not doing his homework.

The victim reported being struck on his back several times and on the palms of his hands with a belt. The victim had severe bruising and redness to his back and arms, said police Sgt. Jim Steffens.

The next day, James allegedly admitted to "disciplinary" action with the belt, said Steffens, stating he struck the victim approximately five times on each hand and 10 times on the buttocks. James allegedly told police that he thought the belt may have missed and struck his back because the victim was moving, Steffens said.

The defendant was released from Johnson County Jail on his own recognizance. A preliminary hearing is set for Oct. 26 at 2 p.m.

Grad student seeks compensation from UI

■ A UI investigation of the student gave him "physical and emotional problems," he says.

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

A UI graduate student is seeking monetary compensation from the university for "physical and emotional problems" he says are the result of an investigation into whether he violated the UI Policy on Human Rights, according to a memo released Wednesday.

The state of Iowa Board of Regents will consider the case of the male student, whose name has not been released, at its meeting in Ames next week.

Charles Wright
Legal director

The student is also asking that the regents review the investigation, performed by the UI Office of Affirmative Action. The investigation, stemming from a student's complaint after an unspecified incident, concluded there was insufficient evidence to find him guilty of violating the human-rights policy.

Charles Wright, the regents' director of legal affairs, said the board office could not release the student's name or details regarding the incident or investigation because it would violate the Buckley Amendment, which guarantees students' rights to confidentiality in such matters.

The UI Policy on Human Rights states that "in no aspect of its programs shall there be differences in the treatment of persons because of race, creed, color, national origin, age, sex, disability, sexual orientation, gender identity ..."

Wright said he does not believe that the student has filed any lawsuits.

Without a lawsuit, it is unlikely the student will be compensated monetarily by the UI, he said.

The regents' board office recommends that the regents deny the student's appeal, the memo states, because the UI followed the correct procedures in the matter, and the student was given "adequate due process."

Confidential memoranda and documents regarding the issue will be available to the regents before they make a decision, Wright said. Typically, the regents look at the documents and take

UI Hospital School requests name change

■ Officials want to make the name more sensitive to patients' needs.

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

The UI Hospital School, a statewide resource for Iowans with disabilities, will likely change its name in an effort to better reflect its mission.

UI officials have asked the state of Iowa Board of Regents to consider changing the hospital school's name to the UI Hospitals and Clinics Center for Disabilities and Development. The regents are likely to approve the name change at their meeting in Ames next week.

The name "hospital school" is bothersome to some people with disabilities, their families and health-care professionals because they associate it with "forced segregation and the loss of ability to control one's destiny," according to a report sent Wednesday for regents' consideration.

A law passed last spring by the Iowa Legislature changed the names of the two state-run hospital schools to "resource centers" for similar reasons.

Mark Moser, an administrator in the hospital school, said he discussed the need for a name change with regents in September when they toured the UIHC.

"They've already been sensitized to the idea," he said. "We're hopeful that the proposal will move forward."

The new name also more accurately highlights the mission of the statewide resource and its capabilities, Moser said.

Officials picked the new name after speaking with patients and their families, local and state health-care professionals and workers at the hospital school.

The hospital school opened in 1947 as the Iowa Hospital School for Severely Handicapped Children. It changed to its current name in 1960, Moser said.

State gives approval to Iowa City deer-kill plan

■ A commission OKs the use of sharpshooters but suggests the city look into bow hunting in the future.

By Erica Cox
 The Daily Iowan

The Natural Resources Commission Thursday authorized Iowa City to hire sharpshooters to kill the city's deer for the third consecutive year, but it encouraged the city to consider using bow hunters in the future.

The commission voted to permit the city to hire sharpshooters to shoot up to 500 deer by March 20, 2001, in an effort to control the overpopulation of deer.

Tim Thompson of the Department of Natural Resources said the commission may have encouraged an alternative method because of the advantages of bow hunting.

"Deer herds are a resource for the state, so maintaining the population is serious, and bow hunting has fewer negative consequences," he said.

Sharpshooting has more regulations regarding location, Thompson said.

"Anywhere you can sharpshoot, you can bow hunt, but not vice versa," he said.

Other concerns with sharpshooting are the expense to taxpayers and safety. The bow hunters themselves pay the costs of bow hunting, while the city pays for sharpshooter, Thompson said.

"The people doing the sharpshooting are professional and accurate; however, there is always a safety concern," he said. "A bullet can travel a mile."

A member of the city's Deer Management Committee, Janet Ashman, was not surprised that the commission suggested using bow hunting — but, she said, bow hunting is not humane.

"I am an animal advocate, and my feeling is if the deer have to die I rather them die a humane death," she said.

"A humane death to me is a quick and painless death, and bow hunting does not guarantee this."

Iowa City resident Dennis Gaunt said he is in favor of the sharpshooting method because he feels the deer population has gotten out of control.

"Two years ago, during the winter, we had up to 10 deer in our backyard," he said. "They destroyed several bird feeders, ate from trees and left a mess of droppings all over the yard. Last year, after the deer kill, we only had two deer."

UI graduate student Brigitte French disagreed, saying any kind of shooting is just a temporary and violent solution to a big problem. A better solution, she said, would be contraception or sterilization.

"In this time of social upheaval, it's a dangerous value to show our children," she said. "I want my children to learn peaceful co-existence, not violent intolerance of other beings."

Coralville has opted to use bow hunting instead of sharpshooting for the past two years.

The Coralville City Council looks at the deer plan each year, and Councilor Diana Lundell said the city decided on bow hunting because Coralville does not have as high a deer population as Iowa City.

"The council feels our deer problem was not as severe as Iowa City's, and we did need such an aggressive approach as sharpshooting," she said. "If population increases, we may relook at the management plan, but right now private bow hunters have kept the deer at a good level."

As an alternative to sharpshooting, Thompson said, a combination of methods is an option.

"Coralville killed 40 deer last year, and if the same method was used in Iowa City, that's 40 fewer you have to shoot and less money for the taxpayers," he said.

Race to raise $ for schools

■ Local schools have high goals for this year's Road Races' fund-raiser.

By Vanessa Miller
 The Daily Iowan

Organizers expect 3,000 people to turn out on Oct. 15 at 9 a.m. for the second Iowa City Road Races' "Run for the Schools." The race, which will begin downtown near the Recreation Center, 220 S. Gilbert St., will raise money for local schools' fund-raising foundations.

Participants can choose to either walk or run a half mile, one mile, 5K, 10K or half-marathon. Last year, 2,750 people participated, and the foundations hope to increase that number this year, said Kaitlynn Voigt, the executive director of the Iowa City Community School District Foundation.

"We are trying to double the proceeds," she said. "Last year, we achieved 97 cents per student. There are approximately 10,600 students in the district."

Last year, both the city schools foundation and the Catholic Community Foundation for Regina received approximately $20,000 in proceeds; both have set goals to more than double that this year, organizers said.

"We are hoping to raise $50,000 this year," said April Rouser, the executive director of the Catholic foundation. "I think that the schools have done a good job of getting the students involved. They even had a few incentive programs to raise money."

Fund raising took shape in the form of car washes and a "coin-flip" day. Students raised $1,600 by flipping coins into a small cup of water in a large pool, Rouser said. The school offered a reward for the most money raised, allowing students to wear jeans instead of uniforms for a day.

All of the proceeds that go to the Catholic foundation will be split for several different uses.

"Fifty percent will go to teachers, endowment, 25 percent will go to technology, and 25 percent will go to a playground for the elementary school," Rouser said.

When participants register for the run, they will be able to choose which foundation they would like their donations to support. If the money goes to the city schools foundation, it will also be broken up and used in several different areas. Half of the proceeds will go directly to the schools, and the other half will go to the foundation.

Registration will be on the second level of the Old Capitol Town Center today until 8 p.m., Saturday until 5 p.m., and on Oct. 15 beginning at 6:30 a.m. The registration fee is $15; all participants will receive a T-shirt.

Superintendent Lane Plugge plans on showing support by participating this Sunday.

"We have a group of administrators that are going to walk. Well, some are going to run; I am going to walk," Plugge said.

A group from the UI's Russian department will also race.

"Our graduate students, faculty and undergraduates are all paying their own money to run in the race to support Iowa City schools," said UI graduate student Lisa Dykstra. The group estimates the department will have 25 runners wearing T-shirts that say "run for the schools" in Russian.

"We are excited about the opportunity to help out local schools," Dykstra said.

Stressing equal rights for the gay community was the focus of gay-rights activist Urvashi Vaid's Thursday night speech at the IMU.

Vaid, the director of the Policy Institute of the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force, just finished her first book, Virtual Equality: The Mainstreaming of Gay and Lesbian Liberation. She said she came to the UI so she could reach people and students she might not otherwise have the chance to speak with.

"Gay and lesbians rank as the third-largest category of victims in hate-related crimes," she said. "This is why we need to educate and speak out publicly."

Vaid said there are many myths about gays and lesbians, such as they are dangerous, unnatural and unhealthy. The key to acceptance and her activism is to educate the community about these myths, she said.

"Misunderstanding is the biggest challenge we are facing," said Vaid, who was selected as one of the 50 most influential leaders younger than 40 by Time in 1994. "These myths are deeply embedded into our culture, which makes it difficult, but not impossible, to challenge."

The most important issue facing the gay and lesbian community right now is religious rejection and the movement toward acceptance within the church community, Vaid said. Most of the time, she said, individuals focus on legal matters, but religion incorporates a deeper meaning and acceptance.

"We are moral people and have spiritual needs like everyone else," she said.

Recent UI graduate Michael Hesselstine said Vaid's speech allowed students and the community to interact and broaden the attitudes of students. However, Hesselstine believes there is a larger issue than religious rejection, he said.

"The biggest problem facing the gay and lesbian community is that sexuality is even an issue," he said. "Gays and lesbians are people just like anyone else."

Despite the difficulty in the fight for equality, Vaid said there are three victories that have changed attitudes: redefinition of gay and lesbian, cultural visibility and political access.

"We have made progress, but there are still individuals we have not reached," she said.

The UI Lecture Committee invited Vaid to speak to students after recognizing her achievements and dedication to advocating gay and lesbian rights. Brandon Hayes, the director of internal affairs for the UI Lecture Committee, said he chose Vaid because of her national exposure and her importance in the movement.

"The gay and lesbian community wants and needs to hear a national lesbian activist," he said. "Heterosexuals also need this exposure to reduce stereotypes and to show their support."

university students are least busy so they can make time in their schedules to get vaccinated," Ross said.

In order to market the vaccine to students, an Outreach Clinic will be set up in the IMU. The clinic will have Student Health nurses on hand to administer shots and give out information on the flu. UI health officials are uncertain about the dates, but it will last three days and start at the beginning of November.

UI faculty and staff can receive free vaccinations beginning today and ending on Nov. 13, when they will cost $6.

No shortage of flu shots, UI officials say

Health-care providers encourage students to get the vaccine.

By Sharyn Hosemann
The Daily Iowan

After warning the public of a low supply of the influenza vaccine, the federal Centers for Disease Control recently released an update assuring the public there are plenty of doses available.

Mary Ross, the supervisor of the Drug Information Center at UI Hospitals and Clinics, said the staff was never overly concerned about the supply level. UI health officials are confident that their distributor, Aventis Pasteur of Pennsylvania, will meet the demand.

"CDC said some shipments will be delayed because of the high demand, but we will have 99 percent available before December," she said.

The flu is caused by a virus that can easily spread from person to person by coughing and sneezing. The vaccine, Fluzone, stimulates antibody production and builds up an immunity. Flu-zone takes effect two weeks after a patient receives the shot.

But because there are so many strains of the flu virus, the vaccine must be updated every year, said Larry Afifi, the UI Student Health Service nurse manager.

"There are approximately 100 different strains of influenza, most of which are not serious, but the most serious are identified and put into one vaccine each year," she said. "Even if people are vaccinated, there is a chance they might come down with the flu, on a milder level, because the virus changes so often."

The flu manifests itself in the form of fever, sore throat accompanied by a dry cough, and body aches, including headaches, Ross said.

The biggest concern for health professionals is getting the vaccine to those at high risk and to workers in the medical field.

"People with chronic illnesses affecting the immune system, heart and lungs, as well as asthma, are most at risk. If not vaccinated, these people may develop secondary pneumonia," Ross said.

The flu affects so many people every year that health officials advise people to get the vaccine even if they don't think they are at risk.

Ross said those who are allergic to the shot have four other drug options.

With appointments, UI students can get vaccinated for $15 at Student Health.

UI junior Amy Courtney was vaccinated before she started school this fall.

"I got the shot right before school started and am glad that I won't have to suffer through the flu," she said.

Getting the word out to students on the vaccine has proven a challenge for Student Health.

Jump-start your newspaper journalism career with a solid program that boasts four Pulitzer Prize winners among its alumni - the Pulliam Journalism Fellowship. The Fellowship offers myriad career opportunities; in fact, a Pulliam Fellow from our first class of 1974, Barbara Henry, now serves as president and publisher of The Indianapolis Star. Moreover, a new graduate of our year 2000 class has just been hired as a full-time staff reporter at The Indianapolis Star.

Now entering its 28th year, the 2001 Pulliam Journalism Fellowship helps build a bridge from the classroom to the newsroom. Fellows are assigned to The Indianapolis Star or The Arizona Republic in Phoenix for 10 weeks each summer as staff reporters. We award 20 fellowships annually. The stipend is $5,775.

Traditionally, our fellowships have been open only to graduating college seniors. In 2001, we will be expanding eligibility to include college sophomores and juniors as well as seniors pursuing a career in newspaper journalism. We will be accepting applications for our Summer 2001 program in September 2000.

I.C. man accused of forgery, theft

■ He allegedly writes fraudulent checks and makes credit card charges totaling more than $4,000.

By Amanda Gorsche
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City man turned himself in to Iowa City police at 4 a.m. Thursday, allegedly admitting to two counts of forgery, two counts of unauthorized use of a stolen credit card and single counts of second- and fourth-degree theft.

Christopher William Jones, 19, 433 S. Johnson St., is being held at the Johnson County Jail on $25,000 bond.

According to police reports, Jones stole checkbooks from two separate victims and began writing checks to himself and forging the signatures. Jones also allegedly used one of the stolen checkbooks to deposit money into the other victim's account to conceal any missing funds.

Police records report that Jones wrote checks to Gumby's Pizza, 702 S. Gilbert St., and a branch of Commercial Federal Bank and purchased fraudulent money orders from Hy-Vee, 812 S. First Ave., written out to himself. The total amount allegedly forged was $4,079.75.

Jones is also being charged with two counts of unauthorized use of a credit card. According to police reports, he told officers that he stole a credit card from a friend of his roommate while she was visiting their residence. He allegedly stole the second credit card when visiting the home of another acquaintance.

According to police reports, Jones admitted to forging the checks so he could keep the cash and spend it. He also allegedly said he planned to attend a concert in Des Moines and needed money.

Sgt. Brian Krei said Johnson County began investigating the case on Sept. 15 after an alleged victim reported the fraud to the authorities. The arresting officer uncovered more information and notified others that he believed they were victims, Krei said.

"Often times with forgery, people don't even know they are victims," Krei said.

Jones is also being held for an outstanding warrant in Polk County for fourth-degree theft.

Krei said that fourth-degree theft demarcates stolen property valued at $200-$500, while second-degree theft involves property which ranges in value from $1,000-$10,000.

Law event to focus on poverty

■ The annual symposium will address the feminization of poverty.

By Amanda Gorsche
The Daily Iowan

The UI College of Law's Journal of Gender, Race and Justice will host its fifth annual symposium today and Saturday.

"The Changing Face of Need: Feminization of Poverty and the Law" will address issues that affect women both nationally and internationally through panel discussions at the Boyd Law Building. In addition, a keynote address will be given by Joel F. Handler of the UCLA College of Law today at 8 p.m. at the Sheraton Hotel, 210 S. Dubuque St.

Each year, the topic of the annual symposium is chosen by the writing staff of the law journal, said UI law student Griselda Vega, the senior articles editor and symposium coordinator. The topics are relevant to gender, race or identity issues, she said.

Last year's symposium, "A Critical Legal Perspective on Entertainment," included a panel discussion concerning women in sports.

"We try to pick topics that are important in society," Vega said. "We want them to be as cutting-edge and innovative as possible."

Seventeen speakers from law schools throughout the country will gather to discuss a variety of laws that contribute to the feminization of poverty, including marriage as a source of income, welfare reform and the stratification of the labor market, she said.

Following their presentations, visiting professors will write original pieces covering their chosen topics to be published in the next Journal of Gender, Race and Justice, Vega said.

Ellen Lewin, the chairwoman of the UI Women's Studies Department, said the feminization of poverty is a "tremendously important issue in the United States and around the world."

The study of the feminization of poverty highlights not only the increasing number of women in poverty, it also examines the structural and institutional factors behind the phenomenon, Lewin said.

"It is simply a statistical fact that men, in general, earn more money than women," she said.

Each panel will target a separate set of laws that aid in the feminization of poverty, including tax policy and family laws, said UI law student Amity Stauffer, the managing editor of the journal.

The symposium "targets laws that are particularly brutal to lesbians, women of color and women from less privileged countries," she said.

The symposium is free for UI staff members and students, $25 for non-UI students and $40 for the general public. All members of the community are encouraged to attend; the fees may be waived if need is shown.

"Critical mass behind change can create momentum for changing laws," Stauffer said.

Dow Jones drops 379 points

■ The U.S. military ship attack and Mideast tension are factors in the decline.

By Lisa Singhania
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones industrial average plunged 379 points Thursday, nearly dropping below 10,000, as new Mideast violence and soaring oil prices compounded worries about weak company profits.

The Nasdaq composite index fell to its lowest close this year, extending a post-Labor Day slide dominated by fears that technology companies aren't growing fast enough to justify lofty stock prices. The index has dropped in 14 of the last 16 sessions.

Home Depot led the Dow's decline after the retailer became the latest blue chip company to warn it would not meet third-quarter expectations.

The Dow closed down 379.21 at 10,034.58, the lowest it's been since March. It was its fifth-largest point drop ever, but the 3.6 percent decline did not even approach the top 25 percentage losses.

Broader markets also fell. The Nasdaq composite closed down 93.81 to 3,074.68 — its lowest close of 2000. The Standard & Poor's 500 index tumbled 34.81 to 1,329.78.

"In an already nervous market, this is all we didn't need," said Al Goldman, an analyst with A.G. Edwards & Sons Inc. in St. Louis. "A terrorist attack, increased hostilities in the Middle East and a spike in oil prices — shake it all up and you get blind dumping of stocks."

The apparent terrorist attack on a U.S. military ship in Yemen sent oil prices up as much as 10 percent, helping to re-ignite inflation fears.

Has science gone too far? Hardly ...

Leave cloning alone

A Canada-based religious cult called the Raelians has announced its plans to be the first to clone a human being. It plans to clone an American couple's 10-month-old daughter, who died in a medical accident, using cells they saved from her body.

Many prominent biologists say the technology is available and, given sufficient resources and time, the Raelians could succeed. Many people think that cloning in general is a crime against nature and should not be pursued for any scientific purpose. These fears are irrational and unbiased, and they stem from people's desire to deny their physical and biological roots.

There are many examples of cloning in nature. Many single-celled organisms and some primitive insects reproduce asexually. These organisms produce hundreds of thousands of genetically identical offspring. It is not the desired form of procreation from an evolutionary standpoint, but on the other hand, these organisms have been around for hundreds of millions of years and are still going strong. Is cloning a strange and alien form of reproduction? Definitely. Is it unnatural and evil? Definitely not.

Is cloning a strange and alien form of reproduction? Definitely. Is it unnatural and evil? Definitely not.

The only reason the Raelians should stop their efforts is because they have the possibility to cause many people grief. Currently, the techniques used for cloning animals are not very refined and have a high failure rate. Of those clones that survive to birth, many of them die in infancy despite excellent health care. To combat these probabilities, the Raelians have decided to have many women carry a cloned embryo. While this increases the chances of success, it also means many of those women will probably have dangerous miscarriages. The high infant-mortality rate means that even if some of the clones survive the pregnancy, their surrogate mothers might be forced to watch them die in early infancy. Finally, if a baby does survive, it will always live in the shadow of the original who died. It would be a miserable existence knowing that you were a replacement.

The true fear of cloning comes from the human desire to be something supernatural — something more than physical. If someone could produce a physically identical copy of you, what would make you special? Many people ascribe special meaning to their own existence, and the possibility of copies threatens their special place in the universe. The advent of cloning is forcing us to face the stark truth that we are not special. We are just an assemblage of cells, as is every other organism on the planet.

No clear answers in UISG survey results

Survey says: Next to nothing, depending on whom you ask. As for UISG, we don't know whom it asked, and that could make all the difference.

Monday, UISG released the results of its long-awaited survey, conducted online, regarding the tuition increase. The results are predictable, to some extent, but they leave one fairly important question unanswered: Who exactly participated in this survey? Given some of the answers, it's highly relevant to the debate.

A total of 905 UI students, mostly undergraduates, responded to the survey. That's a sample amounting to 3 percent of the UI enrollment. Twenty-seven percent of undergraduates responded that they'd like to see the fee pay for a "partnership with @Home and DSL provider." @Home (Cable Internet) and DSL are high-speed methods of connecting to the Internet from home. No question, these super-fast connections beat aggravating dial-up services (Dial-up? That's so 1998). But how wise is it to use student computer fees to pay for home computer use?

Computer fees are required for all students, rich and poor alike. A new computer costs roughly $900 these days, which amounts to almost one-third of a year's tuition. Given that roughly 75 percent of UI students received financial aid in 1998-99, according to the Office of Student Financial Aid, it isn't a broad leap to believe that a new computer is out of the reach of at least a few UI students. But those students will still pay their fees ...

Fees that subsidize the use of home computers ... Home computers owned by kids richer than the ones paying the subsidies. Shouldn't the well-off kids be helping out the poorer ones, and not vice-versa?

The UISG poll was conducted on the Internet, and that may have injected bias into this question.

Assume for a moment that a UI student is awake (and not at the bars) 17 hours per day. The student is likely on campus five hours per day, roughly. For students with computers at home, they would have been able to vote for an @Home subsidy during any of those 17 hours. A student without a home computer can only vote during the five hours he is on campus — a voting window 70 percent smaller than the home user has. Not necessarily a fair fight at first glance.

It could very easily be the case that students of all incomes responded to this survey and supported the subsidy. But before UISG figures out who voted for what — or at least from where they voted, off or on campus — it had best proceed with caution.

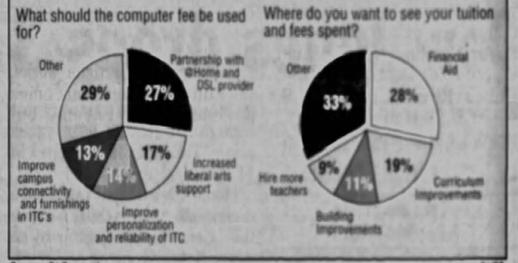

In the interest of full disclosure, this writer has @Home. It's absolutely great. But the only ones subsidizing this connection, besides me, are the two people who call me "roommate."

Financing Financial Aid

The second-most interesting piece of info to come out of this survey is that 28 percent of students responding to the survey said they'd like to see the tuition increase pay for ... more financial aid?

Great. I'll pay you $1 to give me 75 cents? Even this lowly journalist sees that

Tuition/fees:

Source: DI Research

something is amiss in Loanville.

Undoubtedly, some of the increase in financial aid will redistribute money from wealthier students to less-wealthy ones. Some will pay for scholarships — academic or otherwise. But at the end of the day, if 100 percent of UI students are paying into this financial aid pot and 75 percent are getting money back, then a good chunk of this student body is writing checks to themselves and hoping that they don't bounce.

Before the state of Iowa Board of Regents raises our tuition so it can loan us more money, maybe it should consider cutting out the middleman.

Kudos to the UISG for putting together this survey to aggregate the voice of the students ... even though it would have been nice to have done it before the members made up their minds in the first place. The surveys in the works, such as the survey on Iowa City alcohol policies, are a great idea, assuming that the results paint the entire picture. The numbers don't lie. Then again, this time they didn't say much at all.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Vote to extend Scott Blvd., not First Ave.

The extension of Scott Boulevard serves the purpose of a north-south route connecting eastern Iowa City with Captain Irish Parkway. The Scott Boulevard extension will move traffic away from the schools in the immediate area of First Avenue as it routes traffic toward I-80. Other cities are building perimeter roads to avoid traffic in their neighborhoods. Iowa City should do the same. A "yes" vote allows the Scott

Boulevard extension to adequately serve the city's auto- and truck-traffic needs.

Flora Cassiliano
Iowa City resident

Money, convenience and inevitability are the reasons I hear given most often for extending First Avenue to Captain Irish Parkway. Profits, a few minutes of time, and an unverified assumption that the extension was "always" in the plans are set against the safety of 40 percent of Iowa City's schoolchildren, the viability of neighborhoods along

First Avenue and the stewardship of Hickory Hill Park — reasons for opposing the extension.

"Economic growth" is repeated like a mantra to justify the extension. But not all growth is healthy. Growth is not the same as development. More businesses do not automatically amount to a better quality of life. Many other factors contribute to quality of life, such as the preservation of such rich resources as parks, neighborhoods and children.

Time is money, says my neighbor. No, time is a gift — the only true currency we have to spend — given to nurture relationships, community and human growth. Wise economic development plays a vital part in this (the people I know who are against the extension are not anti-growth). But profit must not be the bottom line.

Extending First Avenue is not only humanly and environmentally detrimental, but also economically unwise. Scott Boulevard (just a few minutes' drive east of First Avenue) will be connected to Captain Irish Parkway, as it is much better structured to do. It may even save time — speed limits are 35 mph on Scott Boulevard and 20-25 mph through First Avenue school zones. This will serve traffic needs and facilitate growth north and east in Iowa City, making the cost and risks of a First Avenue extension unnecessary.

Let's not turn First Avenue — and Iowa City — into one great strip mall out of economic insecurity or greed.

Please vote YES to STOP the First Avenue extension.

Area businesses will display a wide variety of art in this year's Autumn Gallery Walk.

The Daily Iowan

A snow globe conceived as a book, sculptural clothing, jewelry, ceramics, prints and more will be on display today from 5-8 p.m. as 14 Iowa City businesses host receptions during the Autumn Gallery Walk.

The self-guided event features works from a wide variety of perspectives ranging from natural to futuristic.

The walk was created in the early 1990s as a way to showcase work that would be featured in the Domestic Violence Intervention Program's Fine Art and Fun Auction, said Astrid Bennett, the walk's spokeswoman and the manager of the Iowa Artisans Gallery, 117 E. College St.

The Domestic Violence Intervention Program discontinued the auction after several years, but the gallery walk continued. It has grown from one walk each year into three walks, and business participation has increased from five to 14.

The Autumn Gallery Walk's sites this year include Iowa State Bank, 102 S. Clinton St.; M.C. Ginsberg Objects of Art, 110 E. Washington St.; ARTS Iowa City, 129 E. Joining the walk for the first time this year is Art Mission Inc., a conservation framing shop. Art Mission will feature a mission theme with the work of artist Helen Hyde in an exhibit called Antique Prints.

"It's very exciting to be a part of the walk. As an artist, I've displayed (my work) in it, but this is my first time with a business," said Art Mission owner Kathleen Rash.

A few blocks to the east, AKAR Architecture will display works with a natural theme. Salt-glazed ceramics by Blair Meerfeld and oil paintings by Marty Mitchell of Saguache, Colo., will display art that reflects natural structures and images.

"You get a strong feeling of the outdoors from their work," said AKAR employee, artist and UI graduate student Jennifer Otis. "Unlike some art, their creations give you an emotional response. Their work is stunning."

When: 5-8 p.m. today

Where: Downtown Iowa City

Admission: Free

Moving away from the natural world and into the digital, ARTS Iowa City will host two exhibits that display themes of the future.

The first exhibit, created by painter and illustrator William Haroff, is called Words+Pictures: Pictures+Words. The exhibit will include mail art, digital prints and his own versions of the snow globe conceived as a book.

For those interested in cultural art, Studiolo will feature pieces that reflect an Afro-centric point of view in Stormee's Coats of Many Colors.

The exhibit displays art by clothier Stormee Stover that is suitable for sculptural display or streetwear and that reflects her African-American heritage.

LOCAL

"The police station shares a wall with the school," he said. "When I went there, we would peek over the side and see what the police were doing. That's how close they are."

For UI pharmacy student Nathaniel Meridor, a native of Afula, located in the West Bank, having served in the army and seeing media coverage of the soldiers who were attacked by a Palestinian mob, it is difficult for him to be so far away. Meridor supports the peace process and hopes the two sides will come to an agreement soon.

"I hope people will realize that war and violence is never a good solution," he said. "But, I also have to be realistic, and the prognosis is not good."

The violence concerns UI graduate student Ilan Lohr

because it reflects the amount of anger and hatred the Palestinians have for Israelis.

"From the perspective of Israelis, Ariel Sharon's visit was just an excuse to let some steam out because they are frustrated with the peace terms," he said.

Even if peace talks resume and prove to be fruitful, it will not necessarily have an effect on the people involved, Lohr said.

"There is a serious gap between diplomacy and reality," he said. "The (conflict) has been going on for many years, and there is something much more basic going on."

For Saba, the conflict is very basic: Sharon's visit to a contested Jerusalem shrine is just another example of Israel's power over Palestinians.

"What (Palestinians) want is to be able to live as human beings in a sovereign state," he said. "We want freedom."

Sharon's visit was the "straw that broke the camel's back," said Mohammad Yousef, a recent UI graduate.

The message that Sharon's visit with police officers and troops gave to Palestinians is that they are still the power in Israel, he said.

Saba and many others on both sides of the conflict with family members in the Mideast spend many hours a day checking coverage over the Internet and listening to Mideast radio stations.

It is difficult for Saba to be away from his family now, and, although he's hopeful, the heightened tensions make him worry that the peace talks may fail again.

"There should always be light at the end of the tunnel," he said.

Likud has rebuffed Barak in the past, saying it would join only if he abandoned the peace talks. However, opposition leader Ariel Sharon — whose visit to a contested Jerusalem shrine two weeks ago triggered the violence — met with Barak Thursday.

Thursday's turmoil appeared to extinguish hopes that Israel and the Palestinians could soon negotiate a truce and bring an end to 15 days of bloodshed that have left at least 95 people dead, the vast majority Palestinians.

The attack on Arafat's compound and other key Palestinian targets was the first major Israeli assault on important Palestinian sites since Arafat returned to the region in 1994 and the two sides launched negotiations aimed at a comprehensive settlement.

A smiling, defiant Arafat was cheered by hundreds of Palestinians as he toured the Gaza sites hit by rockets, including a power station, a government building and a police station.

"Our people don't care and don't hesitate to continue their march to Jerusalem, their capital of the independent Palestinian state," he said.

While Israelis and Palestinians traded sharp words, Annan made a seemingly futile plea for calm.

"I appeal to all — leaders and citizens alike — to stop and think about what they are doing today and what kind of tomorrow they want for their children," he said. After a brief trip to Lebanon Thursday, Annan returned to Israel to deal with the crisis.

short!"

The group's kindness was evident when lead guitarist Adam Gaynor gave Fine his guitar pick.

"I gave him one of my bracelets and he said he never accepted a gift without giving back one," she said.

The band attracted fans of different ages from surrounding areas.

Eleven-year old Kathy Posten attended the concert with her mother, Carol Posten, both from Muscatine.

"They're good singers," said the young Posten. Her mother said she just liked Thomas.

Kellie Phillips, a junior from Coe College in Cedar Rapids, said she really enjoyed the group and had never seen them before.

"I was really excited to hear that they were coming," she said, after buying a matchbox twenty T-shirt and poster. "They have really good music and their new CD is really good."

to be superstitious because it makes events like Friday the 13th fun," said UI junior Carl Lindskoog. "I think they're untrue, but I don't think there's anything wrong with it if you don't get carried away."

The moon will look its biggest as it rises in the east at sunset and will reach its highest point in the sky at midnight, he said.

A man of science, Spangler has left his superstitions behind time.

"I'm a rationalist," he said. "The more I learned about science, the more I dropped them. (Superstitions) are harmless enough."

Some local bar managers said they expect students to party a little earlier and harder today regardless of their beliefs.

"I expect a good crowd because it's Friday the 13th," said Erron Halen, the general manager of the Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St.

Iowa gets meet at home

The men's swim team will compete in the annual October Shootout this weekend.

By Julie Matolo
 The Daily Iowan

A preview of this year's season will interrupt the two-day practice schedule for the Iowa men's swimming team. The 5:30 a.m. workouts and morning weightlifting sessions will come to a halt this weekend as the team will go through a dress rehearsal for its first dual meet of the season, coming up in two weeks.

"This first meet will be important to see where we are and how we are developing as a team," said head coach John Davey. "It will be a tune-up for the dual meet campaign."

The annual October Shootout will take place Saturday and Oct. 15 at the UI Field House pool. This season, the Hawkeyes plan to move up from last season's successes, including three Big Ten event champions and three individuals who competed at the NCAA tournament. Though surpassing these accomplishments are in the backs of their minds, this weekend entails a different agenda.

READ THEN RECYCLE

Alford ready for students at Game Night

Iowa will host its second annual Game Night tonight at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

Steve Alford took the basketball and slammed it on the Carver-Hawkeye arena floor. The first-year head coach wasn't angry at the Hawkeyes — his team hadn't even started practice yet.

He was angry at an apparent bad call by an official — an intramural official — in the 3-on-3 finals between Alford's team and three Iowa students. Alford's team eventually won, but not before the fans were introduced to the most competitive man on campus.

The 3-on-3 challenge will again highlight this year's Game Night activities, and Alford's team members will again put their skills on display in defense of their title. Once again, Alford said he hasn't even thought about losing.

Junior guard Luke Recker warned the opposition as well: "All you students out there, if you think you have a chance to beat Coach Alford, I'd be willing to bet the house it's not going to happen."

Alford will team with 6-foot-10 administrative assistant Brian Jones, but Jones is the only member of Alford's staff eligible to play. He said assistant coach Greg Lansing is out with an injury and Rick Walker, Sam Alford and Jerry Strom can't play "because of age and lack of talent."

So Alford found himself on familiar ground — out on the recruiting trail.

"It only took me one day of tailgating at the football game, and I found this 6-foot-11 kid named Lohaus," he said. "So when the student body shows up and sees 6-foot-10 and 6-foot-11 along the front line, maybe their expectations will lessen a little bit."

And maybe their expectations will drop when the history reveals that Lohaus is Brad Lohaus, a former Iowa player and 11-year veteran of the NBA. Lohaus is just concerned that he's not going to touch the ball, and with good reason.

Alford informed Jones and Lohaus they will be passing and screening.

"I've never seen him (Alford) pass the ball," Lohaus said with a laugh.

The excitement generated by the 3-on-3 challenge is just one of the many activities slated for the evening. Alford said the night is for the fans, and from day one he has said the fans are an integral rock in the foundation he's trying to build at Iowa.

But "Game Night" is also for the players, and at midnight Alford will introduce his Hawkeyes, marking the beginning of a much-anticipated

Hawkeyes heading to Illinois

Iowa faces Illinois one week after defeating Michigan State.

By Jeremy Schnitker
 The Daily Iowan

Leading up to Saturday's game at Illinois, the Iowa football team finds itself in an unfamiliar position — it's coming off a win from the previous week. The Hawkeyes haven't had to prepare for a game with a win the previous week since early October of last year.

Last season, Iowa was coming off a 24-0 win over Northern Illinois when it traveled to East Lansing to take on Michigan State. Michigan State beat Iowa, 49-3, that week, and the Hawks went on a 13-game losing streak.

So this year, Iowa comes off an upset win over Michigan State and travels to Illinois to face the Fighting Illini.

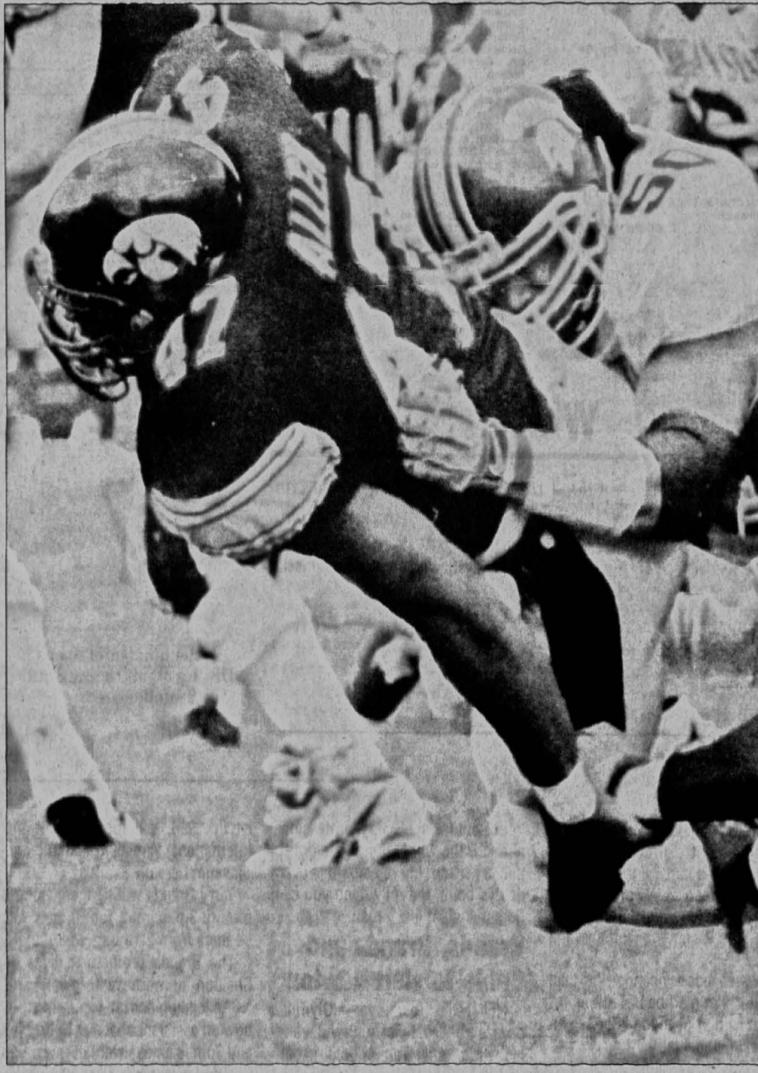

How will the team respond? Will the Hawks come out confident and get a win, or will they go back to their losing ways?

This year, Iowa has two things going for it that it didn't last year: One, the Hawks beat a much better team than Northern Illinois, and two, they play a rival.

"We got this win, so we know how to win as a team now," said freshman defensive back Demond Sanders. "Now we can go from there."

Junior Aaron Kampman, who was this week's Big Ten defensive player of the week after a 13-tackle performance against Michigan State, said the Hawks have enough lead-

Hawkeyes need wins for postseason hope

The Iowa women's soccer team looks for two wins this weekend.

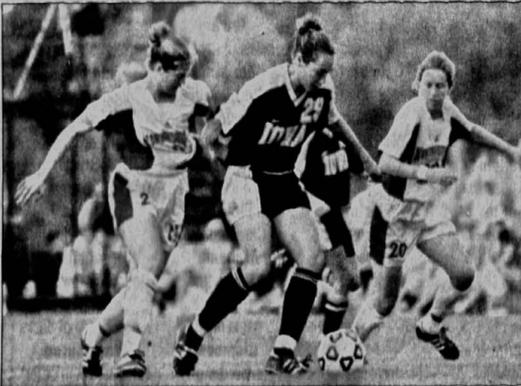

By Laura Podolak
 The Daily Iowan

It's crunch time for the Iowa women's soccer team.

The opportunity of postseason play could slip through the fingers of the Hawkeyes if they fall short of two wins this weekend.

Only eight out of the 11 teams continue on to the Big Ten tournament at the close of the regular season, and the Hawkeyes find themselves in that final spot going into this weekend.

Iowa (8-6 overall; 2-5 Big Ten) landed in the unfortunate position of eighth place after two devastating losses to Ohio State and Penn State last weekend.

Conrad Schmidt/The Daily Iowan

Sarah Lynch moves through defenders.

Last weekend is no longer important for the Hawkeyes. Facing ninth-seeded Indiana and fifth-seeded Purdue this weekend, the Hawkeyes need to win both games to position themselves in a slot where they will have a chance to compete in postseason play.

Iowa coach Wendy Logan

said this weekend is as important as important can be. If the Hawkeyes drop either of the two games this weekend, they face a very difficult road to making the Big Ten tournament, one of their main goals at the beginning of the season.

"We need to treat this weekend like it is postseason play," Logan said. "We are still in control. If we do well, we will be in a position to be in postseason."

The Hawkeyes started off the season well, going undefeated in their first four games. Since then, they have gone yo-yoed back and forth — one win, one loss — until last weekend, when they dropped their first back-to-back games of the season.

Although they earned victories in significant games against Wake Forest and

Iowa to face Buckeyes

The Hawkeye volleyball team hosts Ohio State Saturday night.

By Todd Brommelkamp
 The Daily Iowan

They aren't the No. 1 team in the country, and they aren't perfect by any means, but the Ohio State Buckeyes may be the toughest team the Iowa volleyball team has faced yet this season.

The Hawkeyes will host the No. 11 Buckeyes at Carver-Hawkeye Arena Saturday at 7 p.m.

Ohio State is currently undefeated and sitting on top of the Big Ten with a 16-0 record overall and 6-0 in the Big Ten. It will play No. 8 Minnesota, which beat Iowa, 3-0, Wednesday night, on Friday before coming to Iowa City.

The Hawkeyes are 8-7 overall and 4-3 in the Big Ten after consecutive three-game losses to the Gophers and Wisconsin. Both Minnesota and Wisconsin are currently tied for second in the conference.

Iowa coach Rita Buck-Crockett remains optimistic about a turnaround after Wednesday night's loss.

"We do good things," she said. "But when we need to do good to get over the hump, we play like a medium-level team."

The Hawkeyes will need to do several things well to shut down a deep Buckeye team. Ohio State has one of the best benches in the Big Ten, featuring five players with more than 160 kills. Dana Stearns leads the team with 197, an average of just under four kills per game. Stearns also leads the team in hitting.

In order to down Ohio State, Iowa will have to hit the ball well from the beginning. The Buckeyes have held opponents to a .143 hitting percentage while tallying their own percentage of .278. Overall, Ohio State outranks their opponents in hitting percentage, blocks, digs and service aces.

An injury to Fabiana De Abreu will not help matters for the Hawkeyes. De Abreu, who has handled hitting and setting chores this season, left Wednesday's match in the middle of game two after suffering an ankle sprain. Her availability is questionable for Saturday.

Crockett said the key to regaining the winning form the team showed at the beginning of the season will be in cutting down on the same mistakes.

Defensive struggle expected in D.C.

■ Two of the stingiest defenses in the NFL take the field in Washington.

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

In its last three games, Baltimore has allowed 10 points, all in Jacksonville last week, and seven were on a late touchdown drive engineered by Jamie Martin after he replaced Mark Brunell.

But the Ravens have scored just 27 points in their last two games — on nine Matt Stover field goals.

On Sunday, they travel 25 miles down the road to visit the Redskins, whose three-game winning streak is largely the work of their multimillion-dollar defense.

Is this a scoreless tie waiting to happen?

Not quite. Las Vegas has made the over-under 34.5, not very much for a game that should be played in good weather. The Redskins are favored by 3.5, meaning if you play the exact odds, the score comes out something like 19-15.5, Washington.

But Washington has injuries on the offensive line, not good against one of the NFL's top front sevens.

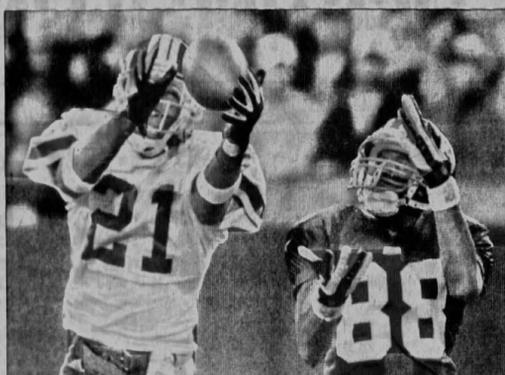

The Ravens, on the other hand, have Tony Banks at quarterback. Last week against the Jags, Banks looked like St. Louis Tony — the shaky QB who underthrew and overthrew receivers.

Banks will have trouble throwing against the Washington secondary — Champ Bailey, Deion Sanders and Darrell Green are the best cornerback trio in the league.

But Stephen Davis will have trouble running against the Baltimore front, particularly without Tre Johnson, Cory Raymer and probably Keith Sims. Irving Fryar, who despite his 38 years has been Washington's best receiver, also is out.

Stover, 18-of-20 on field goals this season, is more experienced and probably more dependable than Kris Heppner, signed this week by the Redskins after going 6-for-9 in four games with Seattle.

That's the difference.

Court rules in favor of female kicker

■ Duke must pay Heather Mercer $2 million for dismissing her from the football team.

By Paul Nowell
Associated Press

GREENSBORO, N.C. — A jury awarded a female place-kicker $2 million in punitive damages Thursday, ruling Duke University cut her from the team solely because of her gender.

Jurors deliberated just over two hours before deciding the school discriminated against Heather Mercer, who graduated in 1998. They met briefly after arguments on damages to rule Duke must pay a $1 compensatory penalty and the larger amount as punishment.

"I feel great. ... I consider it a complete victory. Any monetary award is completely icing on the cake," Mercer said. "I wanted to be told what they did was wrong, and it was."

Lawyer Burton Craig said Mercer, who now works for Charles Schwab & Co. in New York, will use the award to finance a scholarship for female place-kickers. Her own football career is over, he said, but she will continue with fencing.

The university claimed Mercer, now 24, wasn't talented enough to play for a Division I football team. The jurors ruled sex was the motivating factor in the way she was treated and that Duke officials, informed of her complaints, failed to act.

Duke lawyer John Simpson said no decision has been made on whether to appeal the federal jury's ruling.

"We're disappointed by it. Like they say in football, I left everything on the field," he said.

During deliberations, jurors asked to see videotapes of Mercer and other kickers practicing. They also reviewed the transcript of a secretly taped conversation between Mercer and assistant football coach Fred Chatham.

They also sought from Judge James Beaty a definition of the phrase "deliberate indifference," meaning whether Duke officials knew Mercer was having problems and did nothing to correct them.

To award compensatory damages, jurors had to find

Chuck Burton/Associated Press

Heather Sue Mercer, center, leaves the federal courthouse in Greensboro, N.C., Thursday with family members and her attorneys.

Mercer suffered actual financial losses because of Duke's actions. For punitive damages, they had to find Duke acted with malice and reckless indifference.

In closing arguments Thursday, Mercer's lawyers said she wanted to be treated like any other member of the football team. That's exactly what happened, the attorney for Duke said.

"(Coach) Fred Goldsmith chose not to see Heather Sue Mercer as a football player," said Melinda Lawrence, an attorney for Mercer. "He chose not to see her skills. He chose only to see her as a woman."

Simpson said the case was not about discrimination but about a young woman naive to the cold reality of Division I football, and penalized Goldsmith for being a nice guy and trying to help Mercer.

He pointed out that male kickers who were not members of a scout team — which played against the first-string team in practice — also were cut, and reminded jurors that six other kickers on the team at the time testified Mercer lacked the necessary skills.

Mercer testified Wednesday she was able to kick 48-yard field goals, although she was more comfortable from 43 yards.

Her former coach and most of her fellow kickers disagreed, saying she just wasn't good enough to kick against teams like Florida State and Clemson.

Mercer never suited up for a Duke game. In September 1999, Colorado walk-on kicker Katie Hnida became the first woman to dress for a Division I-A football game, but didn't

Irish's Davie not feeling the pressure

■ Notre Dame coach Bob Davie says he is enjoying himself despite a make-or-break year.

By Tom Coyne
Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — This is supposed to be Bob Davie's season on the edge, the season he'd better win or else. Yet despite being just a game over .500 heading into Saturday's game against Navy, Davie appears remarkably at ease.

"I'm probably, quite honestly, enjoying myself now as much as I've ever enjoyed myself in coaching," he said.

Nearly every preseason story about Notre Dame speculated that Davie's job was in jeopardy. Since then, the Irish have lost starting quarterback Arnaz Battle in what Davie describes as probably his "worst nightmare." They also lost defensive leader Grant Irons.

"I'm glad the reality of that didn't hit until it hit," Davie said. "I'd hate to have thought forward in the summer and think about that scenario."

The No. 20 Irish (3-2) also were embarrassed when Nebraska fans filled about a quarter of the seats at Notre Dame Stadium, and even Davie concedes the Irish are only a couple of plays from being 1-4, with each of the last four games decided by six points or less.

But Davie has not shown signs of being a coach on the edge. Every time someone has brought up job security — and it comes up regularly — Davie has said those outside the program are making more of it than those on the inside. The speculation comes with the job, he said.

"People kind of like it to be that way here," he said.

Last week when Davie talked of celebrating his birthday, a reporter asked if his wish when he blew out the candles was a solution to his quarterback troubles. Davie said the quarterback problem was far from his mind.

"There's a big picture," he said. "There's always going to be those kinds of issues. So if I wished for anything, it wasn't going to be that. It would be on a much bigger scale than that, involving a lot of things, starting with my family first."

Davie talks with reporters every evening after practice and his manner is at ease, frequently cracking jokes. His players have noticed that Davie is more relaxed.

"I think he's more experienced and more relaxed," said tight end Dan O'Leary, a fifth-year senior recruited to Notre Dame by Lou Holtz. "He's got a couple years under his belt. I think he understands everything."

Davie said the reason he's enjoying this season more is he's more involved. The former defensive coordinator has taken over play calling on defense, and it's clear watching him on the sidelines just how involved with the defense he is.

IOWA HAWKEYES

VS.

ILLINOIS FIGHTING ILLINI

1:05 p.m. Saturday Memorial Stadium • TV: none • Radio: 96.5 FM and 800 AM

OFFENSE

Jon Beutjer could be the next Kurt Kittner, an unsung quarterback from the Chicago burbs who makes it big. He is not quite there yet.

INTANGIBLES

Illinois is too good to lose three consecutive Big Ten games; it is at home and has had an extra week to prepare.

Who has the edge?

By Mike Kelly

COACHES

Ron Turner has done at Illinois what Kirk Ferentz hopes to do at Iowa. Turner proved he could win big games last year at Ohio State and Michigan. This is another big one for his team.

SPECIAL TEAMS

Kahlil Hill is starting to fulfill his kick-returning potential, and Illinois is at the bottom of the conference in return yards. Jason Baker continues to be solid. A clear edge for Iowa here.

DEFENSE

Illinois' run defense is almost as bad as Iowa's, but the Illini have only surrendered three touchdowns through the air this season, and that is what pulls them through.

HAWKEYE ROAD BRIEFS

Field hockey

This weekend: The Iowa women's field hockey team travels to East Lansing, Mich., to play Michigan State at 7:30 p.m. today. In the second game of the weekend, the Hawkeyes will face Central Michigan Oct. 15 at noon.

Iowa's keys: Iowa is led by junior midfielder Maria Merluzzi, who is tied as the team's scoring leader with back Tiffany Fodera; both have 12 points. Last weekend, in Iowa's upset of No. 17 Ohio State, Merluzzi scored the game-winning goal. Fodera and Tiffany Leister stop offensive threats in the backfield.

On Michigan State: The Spartans (7-6 overall, 0-2 Big Ten) are coming off a loss Tuesday to Central Michigan, 3-2 in overtime. Ranked No. 16, Michigan State snapped out of a three-game losing streak last week with a 5-1 win over St. Louis. Sophomore goalkeeper Murielle Evans started the season for the Spartans with a .758 save percentage, good for fourth in the Big Ten.

On Central Michigan: Central Michigan (7-5 overall, 3-2 Midwest Athletic Conference) is grounded at home for a five-game stand and is going for 1-0 after defeating Michigan State. The Chippewas will play again against Ball State Saturday at 1 p.m. before facing Iowa.

Coach Tracey Griesbaum on Michigan State: "The outcome of the game against Ohio State has really given us a little bit of a spark. We are going to take that momentum and energy level into Michigan State, and I'm prepared for an all-out battle.

Griesbaum on Central Michigan: "They've had an inconsistent season, but we'll have a chance to see them play Saturday before we play them on Sunday. It's a non-conference game, but we still want to up our record. We need to have the ability to play two solid games in preparation for the Big Ten tournament." — by Roseanna Smith

Men's tennis

This weekend: The Hawkeyes travel to West Lafayette, Ind., today to compete in the Purdue Invitational. This is the third tournament of the season for Iowa and the last team tournament of the season before the Rolex ITA Regionals on Oct. 27-30, in which individual players will compete for regional titles. Although coach Steve Houghton is unsure which teams will compete in the Purdue Invitational besides the host Boilermakers, the team is expecting stiff competition from Big Ten opponents.

Last tournament: Senior Desh Sekhri took home the title in the 7/8 seed flight at the Clemson Invitational in South Carolina, which took place Sept. 29-Oct. 1. Sekhri's title was the first of any Iowa player during the short fall season. Senior Jake Wilson and sophomore Hunter Skogman also performed well in singles competition, each recording two victories. Skogman and fellow sophomore Pete Rose paired well as doubles partners by advancing to the quarterfinals.

Iowa's keys: This is will be the first time this season that the Hawkeyes will square off against Big Ten competition. Sekhri, Skogman and Wilson have all posted 4-3 singles records this fall and will look to build on the momentum they have after two solid showings in previous fall tournaments. The team of Skogman and Rose has posted a 3-3 doubles record and has advanced to at least the quarterfinals of both tournaments this fall.

Quoting coach Houghton: "We're looking forward to this meet. This will give us a first look at some Big Ten competition and will help us prepare for the Rolex ITA Region IV Tournament in two weeks. This is their last competition to solidify their position or number on the team, and it's a good chance to show me what they can do." — by Nick Firchau

Gophers' Ohnstad arrested for DUI

■ The depleted Minnesota basketball team takes another hit as its sixth-man is charged.

ST. PAUL (AP) — Minnesota basketball player Mitch Ohnstad will appear in Rice County court Oct. 23 on charges of driving under the influence of alcohol and marijuana possession.

According to police and court documents reported by the Saint Paul Pioneer Press on Thursday, Ohnstad was arrested Aug. 20 in his hometown of Faribault after he was stopped for driving 53 mph in a 30 mph zone.

Police allege that Ohnstad's blood alcohol level was 0.15 percent, above the legal limit of 0.10 percent, and that he admitted he was drunk. Police allegedly discovered a green leafy substance officers believed to be marijuana and a marijuana pipe in his car.

It was the senior's second arrest for drunken driving. After an arrest March 19, 1999, he pleaded guilty, was fined and sentenced to perform 24 hours of community service.

Ohnstad, who averaged 7.8 points while playing in all 28 games for the Gophers last season, could not be reached for comment, the Pioneer Press said.

Minnesota coach Dan Monson said he was unaware of the arrest and would not comment on Ohnstad's future with the Gophers until he had talked with Ohnstad. Monson said Ohnstad was still with the team, which begins practice Saturday.

NFL BRIEF

Statements to be allowed at trial

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — A motion to suppress statements made by the man who admitted killing former NFL player Rae Carruth's pregnant girlfriend was denied Thursday.

Carruth's lawyer, David Rudolf, then asked permission to admit Van Brett Watkins' medical records, which Rudolf said detail jailhouse threats to kill law enforcement officers and Watkins' use of an antipsychotic drug.

Superior Court Judge Charles Lamm said he would decide that issue later. He is expected to rule on a number of motions during a two-day hearing that started Thursday.

Carruth, 26, and three other men — Watkins, 40; Michael Eugene Kennedy, 25; and Stanley Drew Abraham, 19 — were charged with murdering Cherica Adams. Watkins, who pleaded guilty to second-degree murder and agreed to testify against Carruth, could be sentenced to more than 50 years in prison.

Men's swim team returns 9 lettermen

SWIMMING

"It is our first meet of the season and also a good opportunity to see what the freshmen are capable of doing," Davey said. "It is also to see where we are in our training at the moment. So this will be counted as a test to see who will swim which events in the dual meets."

This weekend will not bring the competition of an official collegiate meet but will include USS club teams. The Hawkeyes, though, will be focused on finding their familiar racing feeling and also what they need to improve on last year.

The Hawks return nine letter winners. A solid core of five seniors return this year led by last year's Big Ten Swimmer of the Championships, Ales Abersek. Also returning are two-time all-American diver Simon Chrisander and last year's Big Ten event champion Jay Glenn. Junior Nick Hinz and senior John Lonergan will also be expected to provide another year of strong contributions to the team. Iowa's newcomers will also be expected to have a big impact on the team.

"We are training pretty hard at the moment," Davey said. "So, the guys are tired, and they are not going to swim lifetime bests, but it is a good indication as to who will be swimming which events in the dual meets and might give us some indication as to some events the freshmen may be prepared to race."

The two-day event will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. Oct. 15. Look for the Hawkeyes at home on Oct. 27-28 for their first official meet of the season. The Hawkeyes will host Wisconsin for the two-day dual meet.

ership to re-focus after an exciting and emotional victory. "There's enough of us that are level-headed and say that win was great and move on," he said. "We're just going to take things one win at a time."

The Hawkeyes will be hopping over the Mississippi, and some of the guys on the Iowa team will be going back to familiar territory.

Iowa boasts 16 players who hail from Illinois, including Kevin Kasper, Jon Beutjer, Anthony Herron and Chris Oliver. For some of these guys, this is like the Iowa-Iowa State game — there are a lot of familiar faces and friends on the opposing team's sidelines. There will even be some former teammates, so you know some bragging rights will be involved.

"On the field, we're not going to be friends," Beutjer said of playing former teammate and

Illinois receiver Eric McGuey. "It's going to be an all-out war."

Kasper doesn't like Illinois at all, he said. The Illini passed him up on the recruiting trail when Kasper was at Hinsdale South High School. "I'm from Illinois, and they never recruited me," Kasper said. "So there's a little animosity. I don't like them very much."

Even for the Illinois guys, this game has a little extra meaning because of the proximity to Iowa.

"It's a big game because we have a lot of friends a lot of friends that go over to Iowa," Illini quarterback Kurt Kittner said. "Iowa recruits heavily over here, especially in the Chicago area."

Beutjer, who was recruited heavily by Illinois isn't going getting too warm and fuzzy about playing the Illini.

"I don't like Illinois," Beutjer said. "That's why I'm going here."

SPORTS BRIEFS

Men's cross country

This week: The Iowa men's cross-country team will travel to LaCrosse, Wis., this weekend to compete in the Jim Drews Invitational. The competition will take place Saturday.

Last meet: Two weeks ago, the Hawkeyes finished fifth at the Indiana State Invitational. Iowa was led by Joe Welter, who placed 10th with a career-high time of 25:33.20.

Missing Hawkeye: One of Iowa's top runners, NCAA all-regional selection Nick Nordheim, is redshirting this season because of a foot injury.

Coach Larry Wiczorek: "This is our last week to tune up before the Big Ten meet. We have had two good weeks of practice since our last meet, and we need to just take another step forward. This weekend will give us a chance to see if Sarris and Corey can step up into the top five to make the difference."

Women's cross country

This week: The Iowa women's cross-country team will travel to Fayetteville, Ark., to compete in the Chili Pepper Classic Saturday. The competition will take place on the University of Arkansas campus. Competition will include 20 different teams, including NCAA runner-up Arkansas.

Last week: Two weeks ago, the Hawkeyes placed second in the Midwest Pre-Regional meet with 59 total points. Sarah Arens led the Hawkeyes with a season-best time of 21:58, finishing third overall.

Iowa's key: Sophomore Sarah Arens continues to lead the Hawkeyes, improving every meet of the season. Arens ran a season best time of 21:58 and was Iowa's top finisher in every meet of the fall season.

Coach Sarah Swails: "Last year we placed ninth out of 25 teams, and I would like to improve. I am interested to see how we stack up against Arkansas."

Freshman Glen Worley was a spectator last year. This year the music and fireworks will be for him.

"It was real exciting sitting there last year," he said. "So I can only imagine what it's going to be like when they turn the lights off and everyone gets pumped up."

Last year, roughly 5,000 students welcomed Alford's first team to the court. This year, between 8,000 and 10,000 fans are expected.

DI reporter Melinda Mawdsley can be reached at: melinda-mawdsley@uiowa.edu

"When there is this much excitement for a new team, it's just fun to get out there and kind of get things going on the right note," said senior Dean Oliver. "I hope this is just the beginning."

Junior Rod Thompson had some advice for fans wondering whether or not to spend a Friday night in Carver.

"They are going to be the first to see us," he said. "If I were them, I would take advantage of that. Last year, I thought it was exciting. This year it will be twice as big."

SOCCER

Wisconsin, the Hawkeyes have fallen to teams they should have defeated.

Now, they have approached the crossroads for late-season play, the most important time of the year, Logan said.

"It is always more important what you do at the end of the season," she said. "We need to continue to peak and improve."

Logan said the Hawks are focusing more on their game plan, to be as strong and competitive as they can, rather than worrying about their opponents.

Amid the pressure, there is good news going into the weekend. Sophomore Teesa Price, who injured her MCL earlier in the season, has been practicing this week. Logan said she will look for Price to help with depth and experience in the defensive backfield.

The Hawkeyes' first competition will be against Indiana Friday at 4 p.m. The Hoosiers have records of 1-5-1 in the conference and 7-5-1 overall.

Purdue has more impressive numbers, with records of 4-3-0 in the Big Ten and 9-5-0 overall. The Hawkeyes will take on the Boilermakers of Purdue at 1 p.m. on Oct. 15 at the Hawkeye Recreation Fields.

Mets beat Cardinals 6-5, take 2-game lead

■ Al Leiter starts strong but gets snubbed from the win; New York leads the series, 2-0.

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

Will Clark on Robin Ventura's two-hop grounder — set up Benny Agbayani's first sacrifice bunt of the season. Payton followed with a single off losing pitcher Mike Timlin.

Clark's misplay did not rival Bill Buckner's error in Game 6 of the 1986 World Series, but the result was the same: Mets win.

"It's a very, very tough loss," Cardinals manager Tony La Russa said.

New York now returns to Shea Stadium for Game 3 Saturday, sending Rick Reed to pitch against Andy Benes.

The Mets' victory also kept them on track for a Subway Series, meaning they may not have to leave New York for the rest of the year. The Yankees and Seattle are tied at one game each in the ALCS.

Turk Wendell wound up with the win and Armando Benitez pitched the ninth for a save in a game that lasted one minute short of four hours. Leiter got a no-decision, leaving him winless in nine postseason starts.

Timo Perez's mad dash around the bases helped New York take a two-run lead in the eighth.

The Mets' late-season sparkplug singled with two outs, took off on Matt Morris' full-count pitch and hustled home when Edgardo Alfonzo hit a soft single into the no man's land of shallow right-center field. Todd Zeile greeted reliever Dave Veres with an RBI single for a 5-3 lead.

The Cardinals came back to tie it in the bottom half, with a run scoring on John Franco's wild pitch and another on pinch-hitter J.D. Drew's double. After pinch-hitter Mark McGwire was intentionally walked, Wendell struck out Craig Paquette to end the inning.

Bad omens abounded for Ankiel, even before he took the mound. There was a full moon above the ballpark and former St. Louis star shortstop Ozzie Smith bounced the ceremonial first pitch.

Then Ankiel suffered a meltdown, the same kind that saw the 21-year-old rookie throw a record five wild pitches in an inning last week in Game 1 against Atlanta.

Ankiel hit the backstop with five of his first 20 pitches, though only two of them counted as wild pitches. All of the crazy tosses came in the same place — the spot that would be high-and-away to a right-handed hitter.

Ankiel was mercifully pulled after getting only two outs in the first inning. He seemed to be biting his lip as he walked off to sympathetic applause, with fans no doubt wondering whether he had caught the same wildness disease that derailed Mark Wohlers and Steve Blass.

Both teams sported new lineups for Game 2. Mets shortstop Mike Bordick, hit by a pitch in the right thumb a day earlier, did not start while Fernando Tatis, Shawon Dunston, Ray Lankford and Eli Marrero started for St. Louis.

Mike Piazza hit his third career postseason homer, a solo shot off rookie Britt Reames that put the Mets ahead 3-1 in the third.

In the fifth, the Cardinals came back to tie it behind Edgar Renteria's hitting and Ankiel's cheerleading.

Renteria, who had three hits and stole three bases, got it going by grounding an RBI double into the left-field corner. Ankiel led the shouting in the dugout, pumping his fist for emphasis.

Davis takes new role as IU opens practice

Interim Indiana coach Mike Davis will take a low-key approach as the Hoosiers open practice.

By Michael Marot
Associated Press

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — Don't expect to see Mike Davis barking out instructions tonight when Indiana opens practice.

Or correcting mistakes. Or taking center stage. Instead, Davis is ushering in a new era of Hoosier basketball with his own version of Midnight Madness.

"This is their reward for really working hard," Davis said. "They're going to have some fun, but they're not going to be out there clowning around."

Hoosier players will find the atmosphere more relaxed.

Gone are the days of fired coach Bob Knight's Midnight Practices, in which players were required to do drills.

Instead, Davis, who accepted the interim job at Indiana last month, has implemented the sorts of festivities — 3-point shooting and dunk contests — not normally associated with such a high-profile event.

The practice will be Davis' first appearance in front of Hoosier fans since Knight was fired for violating Indiana's "zero-tolerance" policy after he allegedly cursed and grabbed a freshman student in the entrance to Assembly Hall.

Davis, too, is taking a relaxed approach.

"I'm going to sit back and watch unless someone challenges me in the 3-point contest or the dunk contest or something," he said, laughing. "I would compete in the 3-point contest, but I couldn't compete in the dunk contest because I haven't been able to touch the rim for the last 10 years.

"And whether I would win would depend on who I would be up against."

Not only is Davis trying to keep the night more enjoyable he's also invited the Indiana women's team to participate for the first time in recent years.

Knight had little to do with the women's basketball team in past seasons.

"I think they've got a great coach in coach (Kathi) Bennett, and I think the women's program is going to go to the next level," Davis said. "It gives these players a lifetime memory of participating with the men."

It won't be the only time, either.

On Nov. 10, the Hoosiers' exhibition game against Marathon Oil will be preceded by a women's game against a Finnish team, and a week later the women's season-opener against Washington will precede the men's season-opener against Pepperdine.

Bennett, who also is entering her first season at Indiana, couldn't be happier.

"There's a genuine excitement among the players," she said. "It's kind of like, 'Oh my gosh, this is big-time.' It signifies that you've arrived."

"I was really excited when he called because I knew this would be a great opportunity for us."

PREDICTING THE BIG TEN

In the Big Ten, everyone's got game

Last season was a banner year for the Big Ten, with two teams advancing to the Final Four and Michigan State winning the national championship.

Perhaps the most impressive thing about the Big Ten's run was that Wisconsin made the Final Four but was just a middle-of-the-pack team in the country's most dominant conference. Any team could win this year, except for maybe Northwestern, and in that respect, this year will be no different from last year — it will only look that way.

Morris Peterson, Manteen Cleaves, A. J. Guyton and Brian Cardinal are all gone. So are Lon Kruger and Bobby Knight. This is not Tom Davis' Big Ten. Let's look at the contenders.

1) Illinois (22-10, 11-5)

When Lon Kruger bolted for the NBA, he left behind the best team in the Big Ten. All-American candidates Cory Bradford and Brian Cook lead a team of experienced, quality players that did not bolt for the NBA. All five starters are back, and former Tulsa coach Bill Self just walked into one of the most promising new coaching jobs this side of Chapel Hill.

If the Illini handle the coaching transition smoothly, it may be time for champagne in Champaign this March.

2) Michigan State (32-7, 13-3)

The only thing that keeps Michigan State from being No. 1 in the Big Ten is lack of experience.

The Spartans should start two freshmen, albeit really good freshmen, in point guard Marcus Taylor and center Zach Randolph. Andre Hutson and Charlie Bell have been there before and know how to win, but it will take time for this team to gel.

No group of players will be missed more than Mo Pete, Cleaves or A.J. Granger, who accounted for 58 of Michigan State's 89 points against Florida in the NCAA Championship.

If Bell answers the bell when Big Ten play comes around, the Spartans should go deep into the tournament.

3) Iowa (14-16, 6-10)

No team should make a bigger turnaround in the Big Ten than the Hawkeyes.

Reggie Evans and freshman center Jared Reiner add the much-needed depth to a team that finished 10th in the Big Ten in rebounding last season.

4) Wisconsin (22-14, 8-8)

Everyone loved the Cinderella Badgers last season as Dick Bennett and the neo-"Hoosiers" made it to the Final Four. Everyone except the rest of the Big Ten, who knew how Wisconsin's disrupting pace could wreak havoc with unsuspecting foes.

The Badgers lose two of their best outside shooters in Duany Duany and Jon Bryant, and losing people who can make shots does not bode well. Mike Kelley and Mark Vershaw sustain last year's mystique with man-to-man defense that makes the scores of Wisconsin games resemble St. Louis Rams games.

Normally a team with five senior starters coming off a Final Four appearance would be ranked No. 1 not only in the conference, but in the nation. Wisconsin is that exception.

Traditional powers Purdue, Indiana and Ohio State are down this season.

But as always, upsets happen, sportswriters are wrong, and the Big Ten is full of surprises.

BACK COURT

Lack of respect motivates backcourt tandem

■ Luke Recker and Dean Oliver are excited to shock the magazines that left them out of preseason rankings.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

Iowa men's basketball coach Steve Alford says he pays no attention to rankings of an individual player's abilities in preseason publications. He looks more at who will be the best fit for his program.

Both Dean Oliver and Luke Recker have been virtually ignored in national magazines touting the skills of various guards in the nation, and both are on a mission to prove their critics wrong.

"That'll be in my locker at all times," said Oliver of a Sporting News article ranking several guards before him. "All I can do as a player looking at any of those magazines is get motivation from them."

While Oliver has been overlooked, Recker seems to have been almost completely forgotten by the national media since leaving the University of Indiana following his sophomore season. After leaving the Hoosiers to transfer to Arizona, then being involved in a near-fatal car accident that left his girlfriend paralyzed, a season away from the game appears to be what Recker needed in order to get his life back on track. He said the fact that magazines and polls ignore him does not overly concern him.

Iowa basketball player Luke Recker speaks with the press during media day at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. He has not played competitively since the 1998-99 season with the Indiana Hoosiers.

"As we say on the team, Luke hasn't got a lot of love," said Alford on his shooting guard's press clippings.

Ignored or not, the duo will combine to form one of, if not the most, experienced and talented back courts in the Big Ten. Last season, Oliver averaged 13.6 points per game while leading the Hawkeye offense on the floor. Recker played in all 34 games for the Hoosiers his sophomore season and averaged 14.5 points during his two seasons in Bloomington.

With the addition of veteran guards such as Recker and junior transfer Ryan Hogan, who won a national championship with Kentucky in 1998, Alford said he looks for the pressure to be taken off Oliver's shoulders during his senior season.

"Dean is a pro," Alford said. "I think he'll have that type of year." Freshman Brody Boyd will also be able to come off the bench to spell Oliver, something former Hawkeye Jason Price could not do because he was more of a shooting guard than a point guard, Alford said.

Oliver and Recker spent much of last summer building a chemistry that will carry them to success on the court. The duo teamed up for 2-on-2 games with Hogan and Boyd and also switched off so they could play against one another, just as they did when Recker was at Indiana.

Both players are friends and hold the other in high regard.

"He's really silly, and I have to calm him down all the time," Oliver said of Recker. "I'm more calm, so I guess we just kind of blend together."

Dean doesn't know how much I respect him," Recker said. "He has no idea how much he had to do last year."

One thing the pair will work on this season is turning Oliver into a more vocal floor leader, like former Michigan State point guard Manteen Cleaves. Both Hogan and Recker are confident they will be able to use their experience to help turn Oliver into a more vocal leader on and off the floor.

Oliver has a clear picture of what he has to do to take his game to the next level. "Win a national championship," he said, laughing. "That's what you judge a point guard by."

ALFORD TALKS TO STUDENTS

UI students learn 'Basketball 101' from the best

■ UI coach Steve Alford hosts an introduction to the upcoming season.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

Last Tuesday evening, a normal class appeared to be congregating in Pappajohn Business Building's Buchanan Auditorium. Students filed in mostly in small groups, drinking sodas and discussing the events of the day. They took their seats and continued to chat while glancing around the room for their professor, Iowa men's basketball coach Steve Alford. The moment he arrived, things suddenly looked more like a high-school gym during a pep rally than a classroom.

"What other class has babes throw out shirts on campus?" Alford asked as he was greeted by Herky and members of the Iowa cheerleading squad tossing shirts and leading cheers for the more than 300 students in attendance.

Tuesday evening marked the second year in a row Alford has presented the student body with "Basketball 101," a laid-back introduction to the upcoming basketball season.

The coach looked professorial in his tailored pants and canary shirt with a sleek black blazer and his trademark perfect hair, but from the very beginning, the talk felt more like listening to Shecky Green than the intense, serious coach students and fans see on television.

The evening was filled with one-liners and barbs: Alford took his best shots at everything from former Hawkeyes like Jacob Jaacks to students wearing other schools' apparel.

"Purdue?" he said with expert comedic timing after one student alluded to the recent situation at Indiana without mentioning the school by name.

Alford also took time to discuss the upcoming season, focusing on the Hawk's Nest student section and the role

The Hawk's Nest is all over our highlight film. Face it — when you're 14-16, there aren't a lot of other highlights.

— Iowa coach Steve Alford

he hopes it will play.

"The Hawk's Nest is all over our highlight tape," Alford said while discussing his recruiting visits to players' homes. "Face it — when you're 14-16, there aren't a lot of other highlights."

The coach passed around a picture of official Hawk's Nest shirts, explaining they were exclusive to the student body. Other versions would be sold, but the 1,000 gold Nike shirts are off-limits to everyone but members. Only Duke has allotted as many shirts for its student section and, Alford said, he hopes he doesn't have to give any leftovers to friends and family.

Alford said he would like to see the Hawk's Nest travel to away games, such as at Drake, this season, but he also said he would like to see a large presence during next month's exhibition season to ready his players for what is to come.

"I'd rather see our freshmen wet their pants against Athletes in Action than Wisconsin-Milwaukee (Iowa's first non-conference opponent)," he said. "In fact, I think we might wear gold uniforms that night so you don't see any stains."

Following his opening remarks, Alford opened the floor for questions, which ranged from such topics as basic offense and defense to the removal of Rob Griffin from the team to Alford's relationships last season with Bob Knight and Tom Davis.

Alford drew applause when he said he would not use the new Tiger Hawk logo and laughed when someone questioned how he would like to be addressed on campus.

"I won't grab you," Alford said. "I promise."

He continued to joke with students when asked about his relationship to Sam Alford, his father and an Iowa assistant coach.

"I'll fire him," he joked when asked what he would do if questioned by the elder Alford. Remembering times when he was 16 and his dad wouldn't let him drive the car, he said he relishes being able to tell his father he has to work late and can't leave for a haircut.

NEW FACES IN THE PAINT

Alford finds depth in small-town superstars

■ Iowa's centers come from small towns and are expected to make a large impact early.

By Mike Kelly
The Daily Iowan

For Iowa's newest big men, the road to Division I basketball crossed through some small places.

Freshman Jared Reiner and junior-college transfer Reggie Evans know what it is like to be big fish in small ponds. Reiner is a Tripp, S.D., native, and Evans attended Coffeyville, Kan., Community College for two years. Now they have hit the relative metropolis of Iowa City and are expected to contribute a rebounding punch, which the Hawkeyes lacked during the past couple seasons.

Iowa coach Steve Alford calls Evans "an animal" in the paint and praises the 6-foot-8 forward for his defensive mentality. Reiner is Iowa's first true center since Tom Davis left, and he should provide defensive help in the low post this season.

Reiner said the transition to college life has been relatively easy, despite hailing from a town that has no stoplights, two bars, a convenience store and a cheese factory.

"I catch a lot of crap from the rest of the guys about being from such a small town," he said. "It never ceases. The guys will call me things like 'Big Tripp' and things like that."

Fellow big man Evans knows how his teammate feels. Originally from Pensacola, Fla., he traded the warmth of Florida for the cruel winters of the Kansas prairie because of his ambition to play college basketball — somewhere.

"If you would have told me two years ago I was going to end up at Iowa, I would have laughed and walked away," he said.

Evans made the most of his junior-college career, averaging 22.5 points and 12 rebounds per game last season. The should be downright scary inside. He likened the two freshmen to thoroughbred horses and said he expects big things from them in the future.

"They are going to be a big part of our team this season," Alford said. "We told Jared and Reggie when we recruited them that it is not about the scoring — we just want them to do what they do best. We don't expect them to step in and score 20 points per game."

Reiner is used to doing just that. He had an illustrious high-school career, averaging 16 points per game and 10 rebounds as a senior despite being double- and triple-teamed. He earned numerous honors on and off the court including South Dakota Player of the Year and class valedictorian.

Alford said he has been pleasantly surprised by Sonderleiter. Sonderleiter was probably the least-touted of the five freshmen.

"Sonderleiter has been the biggest surprise," Alford said. "No one really talked about him last year. But it does not matter if you are ranked third or 203rd, as long as a guy fits our system."

No matter who emerges as Iowa's premier player inside, he will have to perform better than the Hawkeye front line did last season. The Hawkeyes were outrebounded in 20 of 30 games in 1999-00 and failed to reach the post-season with a 14-16 record.

Iowa played last season without a true center. Jacob Jaacks filled the role, even though he was only 6-foot-8. He was the team's leading rebounder, averaging a mere 7.3 per game.

The young big men all know they must step up their games in order to compete in the rough-and-tumble Big Ten.

"I've been working on my outside shot and in the weight room," Sonderleiter said. "Going from 1A high school basketball to this is like going from the playground to the NBA."

Five newcomers, three veterans, one goal

Luke Recker
Guard
Height: 6-6 Weight: 210
Year: Jr. Major: Communications
Nickname: Rim-Recker Shoe size: 13
Hometown: Auburn, Ind.
Favorite TV show: "SportsCenter"
Favorite musician: Garth Brooks
Hobbies: Movies, family
Why he'll make an impact: After transferring from Indiana to Arizona to Iowa, Recker has not seen a competitive court since the 1998-99 season. He averaged 16.1 points and shot 36.4-percent from 3-point range as a sophomore at Indiana.

Dean Oliver
Guard
Height: 5-11 Weight: 175
Year: Sr. Major: Open
Nickname: Dino Shoe size: 12
Hometown: Mason City, Iowa
Favorite TV show: "Chris Rock," "Arfiss"
Favorite musicians: Tupac, DMX, Jay-Z
Hobbies: Golf
Why he'll make an impact: He was Iowa's co-Most Valuable Player the past two seasons, and he probably won't have to share this year. He's the clear leader on the team, averaging 13.6 ppg. and shooting 37-percent from the field last season.

Reggie Evans
Forward
Height: 6-8 Weight: 245
Year: Jr. Major: Open
Nickname: Joker Shoe size: 15
Hometown: Pensacola, Fla.
Favorite TV show: "P.C.V.," "Up All Night"
Favorite musician: Hot Boys
Hobbies: Listening to Cash Money
Why he'll make an impact: Everything depends on how he jumps from junior college stardom to the Big Ten. Slam magazine named him one of the top 10 juco players, after he averaged 22.5 points, 12 rebounds and shot 52-percent from the field as a sophomore.

Jared Reiner
Center
Height: 6-11 Weight: 255
Year: Fr. Major: Open
Nickname: None Shoe size: 16
Hometown: Tripp, S.D.
Favorite TV show: Seinfeld
Favorite musician: Pearl Jam
Hobbies: Golf
Why he'll make an impact: The freshman was considered one of the top prep centers in the country, and is Alford's first true recruit at this position. Reiner will be looked to defend the low post, something that hasn't happened in Iowa City in a couple of years.

Duez Henderson
Forward
Height: 6-7 Weight: 200
Year: Jr. Major: Communications
Nickname: Du Shoe size: 14
Hometown: Detroit, Mich.
Favorite TV show: "Comicview"
Favorite musician: Mystikal, DMX
Hobbies: Pool, bowling, movies
Why he'll make an impact: He started 26 games last year for the Hawks. He made his presence known in the middle and finished second on the team in rebounding with 5.1 rpg. He averaged 6.9 ppg., and shot 45.7 percent from the field.

Rod Thompson
Forward
Height: 6-6 Weight: 230
Year: Jr. Major: Communications
Nickname: None
Hometown: Galesburg, Ill.
Favorite TV show: "Martin"
Favorite musician: R. Kelly
Hobbies: Video games, music
Why he'll make an impact: He'll provide veteran depth up front, which will be especially crucial early in the season. Last year, he played in a limited role and averaged 4.1 points and 2.9 rebounds. He had a career high 15 points against Northern Iowa last year.

Ryan Hogan
Guard
Height: 6-4 Weight: 185
Year: Jr. Major: Commerical Rec.
Nickname: Hogie Shoe size: 13
Hometown: Deerfield, Ill.
Favorite TV show: "NBA 2Night"
Favorite musician: Godsmack, Beastie Boys
Hobbies: Flying airplanes
Why he'll make an impact: He'll bring confidence and a desire to prove himself. He sat out one season after transferring from Kentucky, where he played a limited role on the 1998 NCAA Championship Wildcat team.

Glen Worley
Forward
Height: 6-7 Weight: 220
Year: Fr. Major: Communications
Nickname: G-Dub Shoe size: 14
Hometown: Iowa City, Iowa
Favorite TV show: "Comicview"
Favorite musician: Tupac
Hobbies: Video games
Why he'll make an impact: He's the main sign that in-state recruiting is back in Iowa's hands. He racked up all of Iowa's top basketball honors as a high school senior at West High. This year, he's one of the players that can play inside and out.

POSITION-BY-POSITION

Newcomers add offensive spark to Hawks

Hawk fans will be greeted with eight new faces and a handful of veterans when Iowa hits the court this season.

By Nick Firchau
The Daily Iowan

Point Guard
This will mark the last season that senior Dean Oliver has to prove how good he actually is. After years of playing second fiddle to the likes of Michigan State's Mateen Cleaves and Ohio State's Scoonie Penn in the national press, Oliver has a solid chance this year of leading the improved Hawkeyes to some big games.
Coach Steve Alford said a number of press organizations have ignored Oliver in their preseason evaluations.
"I thanked them because now I have a highly motivated point guard," Alford said.
Oliver is coming off his most productive offensive season at Iowa, averaging 13.6 points per game and more than 2 steals per game.
Freshman guard Brody Boyd is expected to come off the bench to spell Oliver. Boyd enters the Iowa program as the third-leading scorer in Indiana high-school basketball history, and he averaged 32.4 points per game as a senior.

Forward
At the forward spots, Alford and the Hawkeyes will rely on experience and the exciting promise of another newcomer to the team.
Junior Duez Henderson will serve as the team's most experienced forward after starting 26 games last season and averaging 6.9 points per game. His experience will be called upon following the loss of Rob Griffin, a mainstay in last season's starting lineup who was released from the team in the off-season due to disciplinary reasons.

Shooting Guard
The team's biggest changes will come at this spot. Gone are the days when long-range gunners Kent McCausland and Kyle Galloway bombed away from the perimeter. Although Galloway was expected to play with the Hawkeyes this season, he quit in the off-season because of recurring back pains.
In his place will be the much heralded 6-foot-6 junior Luke Recker. Recker will return to Big Ten action after redshirting last season following his transfer from Indiana to Arizona and then again to play with the Hawkeyes.
In his sophomore season at Indiana, he put up 16.1 points per game and shot .364 from beyond the stripe. He will take the floor for Iowa averaging 14.8 points per game against Big Ten opponents in his career.
Another transfer, junior Ryan Hogan, will also see some substantial time in the backcourt. Hogan is a transfer from Kentucky who also used last season as a redshirt season. He, like Recker, will look to light it up from downtown. His career three-point percentage is .380.

Center
The Hawkeyes will have another new feature this season at center: real height.
Freshman Jared Reiner is the biggest of the team's recruits and is the team's biggest player. The 6-foot-11 center was USA TODAY's South Dakota Player of the Year as a senior at Tripp-Delmont High in Tripp, where he put up impressive numbers in leading the Wildcats to the state title. Reiner averaged 23 points, 12 rebounds six blocks and three assists as a senior.
Sean Sonderleiter, a 6-foot-9 freshman from Des Moines, will also compete for time at center. Sonderleiter was a USA TODAY All-American honorable mention as a senior at Christian Academy, where he averaged 16 points and 13 rebounds per game.

Things you need to know

- 1. New (baby) faces
Eight new Iowa players will hit the court this year, including three transfers and five freshmen. Coach Steve Alford says Sean Sonderleiter and Jared Reiner have some potential for physical growth. As for now, Alford said some of the young guys still have "baby fat in their faces."
- 2. More games, more fans
Iowa has cut its pre-conference road games in half since last season, hitting the road only three times this season. Among the home games are showdowns with Iowa State and Northern Iowa. Meanwhile, the Hawks Nest's population has skyrocketed since Alford's arrival. Carver-Hawkeye Arena is now officially unsafe for visiting teams.
- 3. The tattoo trend continues
As during last season, a number of Iowa players will be donning tattoos this season (as if the returners would have them removed). New additions to the inkwell are Cortney Scott's "C-Scott" and Reggie Evans' outline of the state of Florida with the words "Dirty South" just above where Pensacola is located. "I guess it's a Florida thing," said Evans. We'll take your word.
- 4. Gnarly waves
The Hawkeyes will travel to Honolulu for the Rainbow Classic at the end of December, where they'll battle for a championship with seven other teams. With all these Indiana, Iowa and South Dakota boys, Joe Fermino (Massachusetts) and Evans (Florida) may be the only ones who have seen an ocean. But have they worn grass skirts yet? Stay tuned.
- 5. "Bar security, to the door"
If the team happens to go out on the town one night, some of the new guys may get left sitting on the curb. Fermino can lead the older guys in a post-game celebration (he's 22), but Scott may have to look for a good fake ID (he recently turned 18). Good luck, Cortney, you're 6-foot-6 and 245 pounds; farmboys rarely get that big.
- 6. The Hoosier connection
Luke Recker says his favorite flick is Hoosiers and his favorite song is John Mellencamp's "Small Town." Now he's got Indiana native Brody Boyd in his backcourt and Hoosier hero Alford as his coach. Too bad, Bloomington; these guys look better in black and gold.
- 7. Added muscles
The additions of Evans and Scott have created quite a competition in the weight room. Evans, Scott and Rod Thompson are said to be the heaviest of the heavies when it comes to the bench press, putting up 270 pounds regularly (so they claim).
- 8. The 3-on-3 shootout
Alford will attempt to defend his 3-on-3 title at the Black and Gold Blowout on Oct. 21, but his team has changed. While searching for a couple new teammates at a recent Iowa football tailgate, Alford looked to the skies and found his new big man. Former Hawkeye and NBA player Brad Lohaus is rumored to be playing with the coach this year. By the way, he's 6-foot-11. Yikes.
