The cost of alcohol in Iowa City might possibly rise in coming months because a proposal before the Iowa City Council, set for a second reading in a few weeks, would put an increase on the local levy for Alcohol-related problems.

The proposal, currently being researched and reviewed by the City Council, would increase current alcohol-related fees by 10 cents per $100 of assessed valuation. The increase would shift the cost to residents and businesses. The proposal is intended to fund services and programs related to alcohol-related problems.

City Attorney Tehran Al-Attar has concluded that the increase in alcohol-related fees could not be considered a local tax and would not constitute a local tax, but rather a surcharge. The surcharge would be imposed on the local levy for Alcohol-related problems.

The increase would be used to fund administrative expenses, such as those of the alcohol-related problems office, and would be used to fund programs and services related to alcohol-related problems.

The city council has not yet voted on the proposal, but has held discussions and reviewed the proposal. The proposal is expected to be discussed at a future meeting of the city council.

Town tries various weapons in drinking fight

Iowa City is just one of many university cities dealing with Alcohol-related problems.

By Megan Eckhardt

Iowa City Mayor Mary Lehman said she believes Iowa has a larger problem with underage drinking than others, due to the city's proximity to the University of Iowa. In 1998, authorities toured 2,137 citations for possession of alcohol under the legal age. From January to August of this year, 2,108 citations have been issued.

The high number of citations is mostly due to the policies of some university Greeks around the country.

Other college towns offer many alternative options for students other than only going to the bar, Lehman said. "We don't think there's an excuse for alcohol-related problems."

The university is working on various efforts to promote a safer campus environment. One such effort is a program called "Safe Steps," which provides students with information and resources to help them make safer choices.

City officials search for alternatives to 21-only

Both the City Council and local far and near voters look for ways to curb underage drinking.

By Tony Robinson

The Iowa City Press-Citizen

While the Iowa City Council and local far and near voters look for ways to curb underage drinking, the community has been focusing on the issue. Even so, the city council and other officials have come under pressure to find solutions.

Place restrictions on drink vendors, allowing one-night use and establishing multi-school programs are some of the potential solutions suggested as ways to curb underage and binge drinking. Ultimately, the goal of both the council and the mayor is to limit violations while not harming local businesses.

Customers and employees of vendors this summer, busy vendors this summer, have led up with activity that vendors and parents are raising concern. They say potential customers to stay away from their bars, and even from their homes.

Reports of vandalism, such as three break-ins at the River House, have been labeled by parents, and some business owners are becoming more tolerant, he said. Limiting drink specials and eliminating

UI seeks funds for new radiation center

The $25 million project would provide two new UI Radiation Therapy buildings, a program that would enhance the ability to provide the specific care required by a wider range of patients. This would provide new treatment options for patients with cancer and other diseases, allowing them to benefit from cutting-edge technology and expertise.

The project was approved by the Board of Regents and now awaits state funding. The project would not only provide new facilities but also attract new patients and talent to the region, boosting the local economy and improving patient care.

City would not profit from drinking laws

ORDINANCES

It is difficult to project if the city would generate any more revenue from the new proposal, said police Capt. Bill Campbell. The fines for drinking in public, which are 10 times larger than the current ones, are likely to bring in more revenue as it makes it difficult or discourage patrons from doing so. However, it is not usually seen to result in much revenue because it is difficult to enforce.

"I don't see it, we ever make a nickel," Campbell said. "It is not the amount you would think it would be." The police and fire departments have seen tickets go directly to the state.

Each ordinance citation is a $20 fine. Of the fines, 80% of the fine goes to state court costs and 12% goes to the state state costs. The remaining $800 is shared between the state and the county. If the fine is not paid or if the case is dropped, the fine will go unpaid or if it is dropped, the fine will be dismissed at the request of the defendant. If Campbell is correct, this would mean the share of money received from January, when the ordinance went into effect, would probably be higher than it does to not, "because establishments would try to avoid the ordinance," said Campbell.

If Atkin believes the amount of money received from ordinance citations is quite minimal, he said. "I think the $999 would eventually take the money." However, if any, is received by the city, it will not generate ordinance revenue whereas, if any, is received by the city, it will not generate ordinance revenue.

If Atkin believes the amount of money received from ordinance citations is quite minimal, he said. "I don't think this would be a big loss." It would be hard to come up with the $90, he added.

Drucker, the city treasurer, said he has not been able to plan for the ordinances passed in the city.

The renowned string-songwriter will read from his book, expected to be published in the near future. His latest collection of sketches and poems, "Teabag," has gained a critical and commercial success, with critics praising the author's ability to capture the essence of modern life. The novel is a contemporary account of a young artist navigating the complexities of the creative world.

On Saturday, October 16, you have the opportunity to meet the author at a special event. Held from 6:00 p.m. to 8:00 p.m. at the City's Night Club, this evening will feature a book signing, a Q&A session with the author, and a reception. Tickets are available online through the event's official website or at local bookstores.

Join us for an intimate evening with a renowned voice in literature, as we celebrate the release of "Teabag." This is a unique chance to engage with a writer whose work resonates with readers worldwide.
WASHINGTON — In the congressional equivalent of a blink of an eye, lawmakers approved the most sweeping auto safety legislation in decades.

The bill, which was passed just two months after the Chrysler Firestone recall, showed how important Congress believes auto safety legislation should be. It demonstrates how important the legislation is to the auto industry's relationships with federal regulation and the American consumer who demands strong government oversight and safety standards.

The legislation includes a provision that will allow automakers to develop an open-source approach to safety that will allow for quicker and more efficient safety improvements. It also includes provisions to increase the use of electronic stability control systems and to improve the accuracy of vehicle safety information.

The bill was passed by a nearly unanimous vote, with only two Republicans opposing it. The legislation is expected to be signed into law by President Obama in the coming weeks, and it will have a significant impact on the auto industry and the way it designs and produces vehicles.

Among other things, lawmakers learned that companies are not required to report foreign recalls to the federal government. This is a major news event against a globally based automotive industry that has mixed results on the federal government.

Women rally against mistreatment, poverty

Thousands march through Washington demanding equal rights and an end to violence.

By Daniel Benz

WASHINGTON — Thousands of women marched on the U.S. Capitol on Wednesday, demanding an end to violence and poverty in the United States.

The march, organized by the National Women's Political Caucus, began in front of the Capitol and ended in Lafayette Park, across the street from the White House. The crowd was estimated to be in the tens of thousands.

The women, who came from all over the country, chanted slogans and held signs that read "End Violence Against Women" and "Enough is Enough." They also sang songs and performed theater pieces to raise awareness about the issue.

The march was one of many that have taken place in recent years in response to violence against women. In 1993, the United Nations declared the first World Day for the Elimination of Violence Against Women, and in 2002, the United Nations General Assembly declared 2011-2020 the International Decade for the Elimination of All Forms of Violence Against Women.

The women’s movement is a major news event against a globally based social justice movement that has mixed results on the federal government.

Congress approves major auto-safety bill

From Hatch Pickler

WASHINGTON — In the congressional equivalent of a blink of an eye, lawmakers approved the most sweeping auto safety legislation in decades.

The bill, which was passed just two months after the Chrysler Firestone recall, showed how important Congress believes auto safety legislation should be. It demonstrates how important the legislation is to the auto industry's relationships with federal regulation and the American consumer who demands strong government oversight and safety standards.

The legislation includes a provision that will allow automakers to develop an open-source approach to safety that will allow for quicker and more efficient safety improvements. It also includes provisions to increase the use of electronic stability control systems and to improve the accuracy of vehicle safety information.

The bill was passed by a nearly unanimous vote, with only two Republicans opposing it. The legislation is expected to be signed into law by President Obama in the coming weeks, and it will have a significant impact on the auto industry and the way it designs and produces vehicles.

Among other things, lawmakers learned that companies are not required to report foreign recalls to the federal government. This is a major news event against a globally based automotive industry that has mixed results on the federal government.

Iowa's offense sputters in its 30-12 rout loss to the Illini.

By Mike Kelly

Champaign, Ill. — Joe Burrow experienced how tough the Big Ten can be against Wisconsin during Iowa's 30-12 loss on Oct. 15.

The Hawkeyes (5-1, 1-0) lost for the first time in the Big Ten this season after two weeks of dominance by the Illini (4-2, 1-2) in their first win in ten games.

On the second day of the ball, Illinois' Rhamondre Stevenson had the best of both worlds after throwing for 300 yards and three touchdowns.

With a quarterback just a quarter away, having two interceptions and getting sacked four times.

"We took one on the chin today, and that's part of the growing process," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said. "It'll get you down every week and that's the way it goes every week in college.

"I think we're just a quarter away, having two interceptions and getting sacked four times."

The Hawkeyes had the ball in the red zone twice but away with nothing both times.

It's the first half, with Iowa down already 3-0. If Nebraska. The Hawkeyes dropped to 1-12 in the Big Ten.

After Ladell Betts picked up the first touchdown and the Illini's quarterback threw a pass to the end zone, the drive was called off on Iowa's 19.

Burrow completed 17 of 32 passes for 177 yards and two touchdowns for the Iowa soccer team, which scored five in the second half. Iowa's first score of the second half, the Hawkeyes opened with methodical precision, grinding out a 15-play drive that ended with an 11-yard field goal.

Tie-breaker clutch for On the Line winner

Rick Laroe has the closest guess of the Louisville-West Virginia game, winning him a pizza.

With 20 competitive teams finishing 6-2, it now comes down to tie-breaker rules, and the number of combined point differential margins. The team with the closest guess is the winner.

The of course, is a little overblown, but it's always fun to see how close people can get to the actual score. The winner gets a pizza, and it's always a great way to enjoy some good food and a little friendly competition.

On the Line: Pick the winners of these college football games. This week, we have two games to choose from. The winner gets a pizza, and the losing team gets a burger. The scores will be announced on Friday, October 13. Good luck to all the participants!

Tie-breaker dances away with championship

With only two games left in the season, the championship is on the line. Both teams are looking to secure the top spot and earn the championship title.

The winner of this week's game will have a chance to make history and become the champion. Be sure to watch the game and see if your guess comes true.

Wizards take MLS cup

The Kansas City Wizards scored a dramatic overtime victory over the Columbus Crew, 2-1, in the championship game of the Major League Soccer Cup. The Wizards' goal was scored in the 106th minute by new acquisition Tony Meola, who came off the bench to make the decisive difference.

The Wizards take the MLS cup, the first major league trophy in the club's history. The Crew had won the previous two titles, but this year, the Wizards were the ones to emerge victorious.

The game was a thrilling one, with both teams playing to win. The Crew had the ball for most of the game, but the Wizards were able to contain them and score the go-ahead goal in the extra time.

The Wizards' victory was a sweet one, as they had been the underdogs in this match. They had won the regular season title and had been able to get the better of the Crew in the playoffs.

The MLS Cup is the highest honor in American soccer, and the Wizards' win will be celebrated throughout the country.

The Wizard's victory was a testament to the hard work and dedication of the players, coaches, and staff. They proved that with a little bit of luck and a lot of skill, anything is possible.

More national championship contenders fall in college football

Previously undefeated Ohio State lost this weekend.

By Richard Rosenblatt

The national championship contenders just keep falling by the wayside. The latest dropout includes: Minnesota and Ohio State, leaving the second half of the conference playing for second place. With one loss each, the two teams will determine who gets the Orange Bowl on Jan. 4.

"The Buckeyes are a little worse, Minnesota is a little better," said Ohio State coach John Cooper, whose Buckeyes bowed out of the outside looking in. Just about the only team that can catch both Buckeyes is the Sooners on or before the San Francisco Bowl on Dec. 30 and win the Big Eight. If the Sooners can't do it, the Hawkeyes' team could sneak in with a 9-2 mark.

"The teams that have the best chance of winning the Super Bowl are the ones that look the best at the end of the season," said Coach Bill Snyder of the Kansas State Wildcats.

NEW YORK — The New York Times made a pilgrimmage to the Carrier Dome this season, bringing along Iowa's most fancied football team. The Hawkeyes were in town to face the Buckeyes, a team that had won four straight Big Ten games. Iowa hadn't had a win in Big Ten play since last year's opening game at Minnesota.

Iowa's 41-13 victory on Saturday put them in the top four of The Daily Iowan's Backwards Bowl, a weekly ranking of the top 10 college football teams. The Hawkeyes are now tied with Ohio State for second place in the conference, with Michigan State in third.

The Iowa Hawkeyes hit the road for the fourth time this season on Saturday, taking on the Nebraska Cornhuskers at Memorial Stadium. The game was marred by a controversial call on the final play, which led to a missed field goal and Nebraska's eventual 13-7 victory.

The Hawkeyes had a chance to grab the lead with a field goal attempt in the closing seconds of the game, but the kick was blocked. Nebraska's score with 1:23 remaining sealed the win for the Cornhuskers, who improved to 5-2 on the season.
