Despite pleas, regents raise ante

Spring 2002 UI graduates will pay 22.8% more in tuition/fees than when they were freshmen.

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

AMES — Despite the pleas of student government leaders from Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa, the state of Iowa Board of Regents voted 7-1 Thursday to raise the cost of tuition and mandatory fees by 9.9 percent for Iowa residents at the state's public universities next school year.

Regents also approved a 1 percent surcharge for nonresidents at the UI to create scholarships for out-of-state students. The surcharge is part of a 9 percent increase in tuition and fees that regents passed for nonresident students.

The bottom line is a $318 increase next year for full-time UI students who are Iowa residents, from $3,204 to $3,522.

Full-time nonresidents will pay $984 more — $11,950.

Ben Golding, the president of ISU's student government, presented the regents with 700 letters written by students and families expressing opposition to the increase.

Golding charged that the reason for the UI's 3.2 percent decline in fall freshman enrollment was the UI's 6.9 percent tuition/fees hike last year. At ISU and UNI, which had 4.3 percent tuition increases last year, fall enrollment for freshmen was up about an average of 5 percent.

"Listen to the students and families across Iowa who can't handle this significant burden," he pleaded, as approximately 75 concerned ISU students watched. Golding and his counterpart from UNI, Dan Sterenchuk, asked the regents to reduce the increase to 7.2 percent by cutting out the 2 percent quality component and scaling back the esti-

Council approves library land deal

The city reserves a site for the project and will lose $20,000 if voters do not approve an expansion.

By Megan Eckhardt
The Daily Iowan

In a closed executive session Thursday morning, the Iowa City Council voted 5-1 to pass a resolution accepting a contingent purchase agreement with the owners of the Leno & Cilek True Value Hardware building, located at 130 S. Dubuque St., for the Iowa City Public Library expansion project, which will be on the Nov. 7 ballot.

In the agreement, the city is under no obligation to purchase the building but has an arranged, locked price of $1.3 million. If the referendum doesn't pass, councilors agreed to pay the property owners $20,000, said Councilor Irvin Pfab.

Pfab said he disagreed with the $20,000 loss the city would take if the library expansion referendum fails and the manner in which the council handled the agreement.

"I don't think the city got a bargain," he said. "And how that went on behind closed doors is not the way to do public business."

Mayor Ernie Lehman, on the other hand, said he believed the city needed to secure the Leno & Cilek property.

"The important thing is if the bond issue passes, the city will be obligated to purchase the property," he said. "Our interest was protecting the cost of that ground."

Without an immediate purchase, the city expected the price of the building to increase, forcing the property to be condemned and the city to pay the cost that a committee will place upon it, Lehman said.

Councilor Mike O'Donnell said he thought the immediate purchase of the building was necessary for the completion of the project.

"That building needs to be purchased to accomplish the

I.C. man sentenced for sex crimes

The 75-year-old man faces 10 years in prison for trading drugs for sex with two teen-agers.

Iowa City resident Harold J. Manchester, 75, pleaded guilty to two counts of third-degree sexual abuse Thursday after being arrested in April for exchanging crack cocaine for sexual acts with two females, ages 13 and 15.

He also pleaded guilty to one count of possession of crack cocaine, a serious misdemeanor punishable by a mandatory minimum fine of $250.

Under the plea agreement, Assistant Johnson County Attorney Anne Lahey will file for the dismissal of Manchester's other seven charges, including three counts of prostitution, two counts of distributing controlled substances to minors and two counts of third-degree sexual abuse.

For the two sexual-abuse charges, which are Class C felonies, District Judge William Thomas sentenced Manchester to a maximum of 10 years and a minimum fine of $1,000 plus appropriate surcharges for each count. The prison sentences will be served concurrently rather than consecutively, Thomas

Look out — deer caught in a rut

Mating season means an increase in the number of deer-human encounters.

By Tracy Nemitz
The Daily Iowan

Late October through November marks the peak of deer-mating season, which can mean more frequent encounters between deer and people, experts say.

Witness Wednesday morning's incident at Quadrangle Residence Hall in which a deer charged through a glass door.

Tim Thompson, a state Department of Natural Resources wildlife biologist, guessed that the Quadrangle buck saw its reflection in a glass door and, mistaking its reflection for another deer, proceeded to charge the door, shattering the glass.

UI sophomore Ashley Crider, who works at the Quadrangle front desk, said no one was hurt in the incident and the deer fled toward Rienow Residence Hall.

"As we get a higher urban deer population — more deer, more windows — its just a higher likelihood that something like this could happen," Thompson said.

During rutting, male deer are more aggressive, travel over a larger area and often battle over females and territory. Officials say deer cause more accidents and sometimes will roam through populated urban areas as the season progresses. With an estimated 800 to 900 deer living within the Iowa City limits, experts say, the chances of deer-human encounters are more likely.

The tendency of male deer to travel more than usual can result in accidents when bucks move close to roads, said Lisa Mollenhauer, an administrative assistant to the city manager. Their minds are more on mating than on where they are and where they're going, she said.

Around this time of year, the number of traffic accidents caused by deer increases, said Coralville police Sgt. Bruce Freeman.

In Iowa City, there are four areas in particular where drivers should be cautious: North Dubuque Street near the Interstate 80 interchange; North Dodge near the I-80 interchange; Rochester Avenue; and Highway One near Wal-Mart. These areas are the sites of an especially high number of accidents, Mollenhauer said. She warned people to drive carefully, especially during the evening, when visibility is low.

Overall, she said, the number of traffic accidents has decreased from this time last year. This marks a change from the recent past, when the number of traffic accidents increased from year to year. She said the decrease may be

Weekend's worth of family values scheduled

■ Nearly 1,000 sign up for Family Weekend events, such as non-alcoholic tailgating.

By Natasha Lambropoulos
The Daily Iowan

Parents of UI students will make their way to Iowa City this weekend for a gala of tailgating, Hawkeye football, friendly gambling and campus tours.

The 12th annual Family Weekend, sponsored by the UI Alumni Association, kicks off today at 11 a.m. with scheduled tours of the UI, including Kinnick Stadium, Carver-Hawkeye Arena, UI Hospitals and Clinics and a number of campus buildings.

Other planned events include a screening of the Dan Gable documentary, nonalcoholic tailgating in Hawkeye Village, Family Fun Night and a closing brunch with UI President Mary Sue Coleman.

"We have nearly 1,000 people signed up for this weekend," said Julie Williams, the UI assistant director of alumni programs. "The film, tailgate and brunch are the three most popular events."

Freestyle: The Victories of Dan Gable, produced by David Gould, will be shown today at 7 p.m. in Macbride Auditorium. The documentary is about the life of Dan Gable, the legendary wrestler and former Iowa wrestling coach. It will be the second public showing of the documentary at the UI, Williams said. The producer, director and a cameraman will be at the screening to speak to the audience and answer questions, she said.

Family Fun Night at the IMU, sponsored by the Student Alumni Ambassadors, allows families to gamble with fake money and then later bid on donated Hawkeye memorabilia in an auction.

UI freshman Eric Grauer said he plans to attend the auction and brunch with his parents.

"I don't know much about it, but my parents heard about it, and they signed up," he said.

Some students say they plan to show their parents what a typical football weekend is like, beginning with tailgating and ending with a night of dancing and drinking at the bars.

"I am tailgating with my parents and all the guys in my apartment and their parents," said UI junior Ben Morrissey. "Then my dad and I plan to go to the bars and drink a lot."

UI sophomore Katie Lehner said she plans to take her mom to downtown Iowa City tonight and then wake up early to tailgate with her family.

"I have two midterms next week, so we might not go out on Saturday night," Lehner said.

Not all parents are able to attend Family Weekend, especially students whose parents live in other countries. Family Weekend is something new to Cristina Carrasco, a UI graduate student from Spain.

"My country does not have Family Weekend because students usually go to universities in their hometown," she said.

I.C. resident found guilty of bank robbery

■ The man faces up to 15 years in prison and a maximum $17,500 fine for the December 1999 heist.

By Mary Sedor
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City resident Torro Tolucka Roberts, 40, was found guilty of second-degree robbery and second-degree theft, a jury decided Thursday, for the Dec. 10, 1999, robbery of Commercial Federal Bank, 301 S. Clinton St.

Roberts will be sentenced on Nov. 17. He faces up to 15 years in prison — a mandatory 10 years for the robbery charge and a possible five-year sentence for theft.

He may also face a fine of from $500 to $10,000 on the robbery charge and from $500 to $7,500 for theft.

Defense attorney Mark Meyer said that although he is a firm believer in the judicial system, he is going to appeal the verdict.

"I think the jury worked long and hard arriving at a conclusion, and I appreciate its efforts to reach a fair verdict in this case," he said.

The jury found Roberts guilty of second-degree robbery because he either threatened the bank teller, placed the teller in fear, or committed an assault on the teller, said Linda Paulson, the prosecuting attorney.

Paulson said she is pleased with the outcome of the case.

"I think this was a very fairly tried case because both sides had a chance to present their evidence," she said. "The outcome represented the facts."

The jury concluded that Roberts was guilty of stealing an estimated $2,400 in $20 bills from the Commercial Federal Bank on Dec. 10, 1999, at approximately 5:30 p.m., after he gave a robbery note to the bank teller. Witnesses testified that the robber appeared to be concealing a weapon in his jacket pocket during the holdup.

The day following the robbery, Roberts paid cash for an airplane ticket to Las Vegas, which he reserved with a false telephone number, Paulson said. After arousing the suspicion of the airport clerk and security guards, Roberts returned the ticket, she said.

Roberts was arrested on Dec. 16, 1999, at his room at the Cedar Rapids Excel Inn, where he was registered under a false name. Investigators found $580 in $20 bills in Robert's possession, $100 of which were bills marked by the bank, Paulson said.

Juror Barb Lopez said she believed Roberts was guilty because the defense did not adequately justify some of his actions, she said.

"I think he is guilty because he had most of the (marked bills), he was trying to leave the day after the robbery, and he used a false name," she said.

Although pictures presented in the case were not of the best quality, Lopez said, she was still able to see that it was Roberts robbing the bank.

"The resemblance in the pictures wasn't the best, but I still found similarities to Roberts," Lopez said. "I didn't think the defense gave any good reason to justify Roberts' alibi."

Juror Ken Rew said while the case took time to decide, the "very compelling evidence" led to the jury's guilty verdict.

"I think that we all took the case very seriously," he said. "It was a tough job, but we feel confident that we did the right thing."

New Web site tallies college crime

■ The UI is among 4,000 universities that have sent statistics to federal page.

By Amanda Gorsche
The Daily Iowan

A new federal Web site is up and running, providing crime statistics from nearly 4,000 universities across the country.

The Office of Postsecondary Education, a program within the Department of Education, is the creator of the site, which features the UI.

The deadline for all universities to report their crime statistics was Tuesday, but it has been extended a week after the site crashed because schools were trying to send data in at the last minute. The UI is one of many universities that provided criminal offenses, hate offenses and arrests from 1997, 1998 and 1999.

In addition to providing crime statistics, the Web site <http://www.ope.ed.gov/security> provides a link to the UI Web page and to the Integrated Postsecondary Education Data System, which lists tuition and fees information for those interested in attending the UI.

Duane Papke, the associate director of UI Public Safety, said the site is a positive medium for future and current students who wish to obtain information about the UI. He said that Public Safety, through the dean of students' office, releases campus crime statistics to the federal government and current students.

"I believe the crime statistics will also be available soon on the UI Web site," he said.

The national site was created as the result of a law passed after the 1986 murder of a college student at Lehigh University in Bethlehem, Pa. The victim's parents learned after her death that 38 violent crimes at the university had not been made public in the three years before her death.

Steve Parrott, the director of UI Communications, said providing crime statistics is important. Universities reporting in different ways may, however, confuse those seeking information from the site, he said, because of unclear definitions of the parameters of reporting areas.

"I think we have to provide information so people can make an informed decision about the university," he said.

Campus police leaders across the country have expressed concern over compiling statistics because of the amount of time taken to put everything together. Papke said putting the statistics together has been difficult, especially with recent changes in requirements.

"It's been a minor nightmare," he said. "Following through with these obligations is very time consuming."

Federal law requires campuses to compile annual statistics of crimes that take place on campus. Recently, a $25,000 fine was set to punish those universities that do not follow through.

UI graduate student Lamar Gray said that even though it takes some extra work to compile the statistics, he thinks the new Internet site is a good idea.

"Living in Iowa, you can become complacent and forget about crime, but once you have more knowledge of it you make better choices," he said. "You wouldn't buy a house without examining that neighborhood's crime rate."

Simpson: Polio's legacy can't cripple him

■ Bob Simpson is running for the 1st District House seat every campaign day.

By Erica Driskell
The Daily Iowan

A typical campaign day involves early mornings, late nights and little time in between, as Bob Simpson knows well.

The 62-year-old Democratic candidate has been campaigning seven days a week since March for the 1st District seat in the U.S. House of Representatives against his opponents, Republican incumbent Jim Leach and Libertarian candidate Russ Madden.

"Some days are grueling, but we're winding down now," Simpson said as he waited in the car for campaign manager David Rozsa to pay for gas and return with early morning coffee from the convenience store.

"In doing this, you also need to schedule a rest. Otherwise, you'd be quite broken," he said. Simpson, an Iowa City resident, spends the majority of his days campaigning at high schools, senior dining sites, labor-union locals and businesses, in addition to public appearances in parades and festivals.

Campaigning began on this Wednesday morning at Monticello High School. Running behind schedule, Rozsa sped the gray Ford Taurus opportunistically while Ralph Bradshaw, Simpson's campaign scheduler, estimated how late they were going to be.

"David operates in the theory that they have to catch him first before they can fine him," Bradshaw said, while Simpson warned Rozsa to take it easy. Conversation shifted periodically from the national presidential debate Tuesday to the beautiful weather and rolling hills of Eastern Iowa.

"The more George (Bush) makes public appearances, the more people realize his policies are nonsensical," Simpson said.

Arriving at Monticello High School only minutes late, Simpson asked for a few minutes of quiet to collect his thoughts, while Bradshaw continued talking about a ham-and-cheese croissant that he had made for Simpson the night before but ate himself.

Simpson responded by commenting on the lunch he ate earlier in the week at Muscatine High School — macaroni and cheese with sausage links.

"I've never seen a combination like that before," he said.

An important part of Simpson's campaign has been numerous tours of Eastern Iowa high schools. The tours reach out to students by emphasizing participation, which, Simpson hopes, will increase voter turnout.

Focusing on high-school students has been one of the most important campaigning efforts because of the osmosis that occurs from students to their family members, Rozsa said.

"I'm not here to tell you what you want to hear. I am here to listen to you, once again to understand you, and potentially work for you," Simpson said to the more than 100 students who attended.

Before transitioning into a question-and-answer format, Simpson briefly mentioned his battle with polio when he was 3 years old, which has left him wheelchair-bound.

"Thus far, I have been able to overcome many obstacles in my life. Unfortunately, that is not the case for many persons with disabilities, and it is at that rate that I believe by running for this office I will be helping people to view with new eyes persons who have disabilities," he said. He believes his campaign efforts have drawn national attention because of his disability.

Immediately following the high school presentation, Simpson headed over to the Monticello senior dining center.

"There are great challenges in this part of the nation, in the Midwest, in proposing to represent very sophisticated areas like Iowa City and then rural areas that are sophisticated in a different way," Simpson said, as they pulled into the parking lot of the Monticello Senior Citizens Center.

At the center, Simpson casually spoke with elders mainly about health care and prescription-drug plans.

"Bob gets really energized about his campaign by doing this type of communication," Bradshaw said.

Political campaigning has been a positive experience for Simpson, who said he hasn't looked back since his decision in March to run for a House seat. But he admitted that the continual work has been tiring.

"I was blessed with good genetics that allow me to have the ability to take power naps during breaks," he said. "I don't know that I am less sharp than when I began campaigning, but let's put it this way: I'm more fatigued every morning I wake up."

Boy's story yields clue in USS Cole investigation

■ A 12-year-old says a man spoke to him before disappearing out to sea the day the ship was bombed.

By Salah Nasrawi
Associated Press

ADEN, Yemen — A 12-year-old Yemeni boy has told investigators that a man paid him to watch his car, then took to sea in a small boat and never returned, providing a key early lead in their search for clues about what happened to the USS Cole. Authorities have been focusing on two men who rented an Aden apartment where bomb-making material was later found. The two have not been seen since the U.S. warship was bombed Oct. 12 as it arrived in Aden to refuel, killing 17 sailors and injuring 39.

The Navy announced Thursday that it recovered the last four bodies of sailors killed in the blast. Thirteen bodies already had been flown to the United States, and the final four will be returned home soon.

FBI Director Louis Freeh, in Yemen for talks with President Ali Abdullah Saleh, said determining exactly who carried out the attack would be a challenge. The crime scene he toured Thursday was a "tangled mess of metal and wire," he said.

Officials believe two suicide bombers maneuvered a small boat packed with explosives next to the Cole and then detonated it.

The 12-year-old boy told authorities a bearded man wearing glasses gave him small change and told him to watch his car near the port on the day of the bombing, Saleh said Wednesday on the Arab satellite news station Al-Jazeera.

The boy said, the man then went to sea in a small boat he carried atop the car and did not return, Saleh said. Yemeni police apparently were able to trace the man to the Aden apartment.

Yemeni security officials said Thursday the apartment yielded documents they believe originated in Hadhramaut, a region along the eastern border with Oman that is home to lawless tribes that have kidnapped foreigners for ransom.

A vehicle believed to have been used by the attackers also contained documents traced to Hadhramaut, the Yemeni officials said. They said investigators were sent to the region Thursday.

Yemeni officials said another team of investigators was going to neighboring Saudi Arabia on Thursday. Many Yemenis from Hadhramaut have settled there.

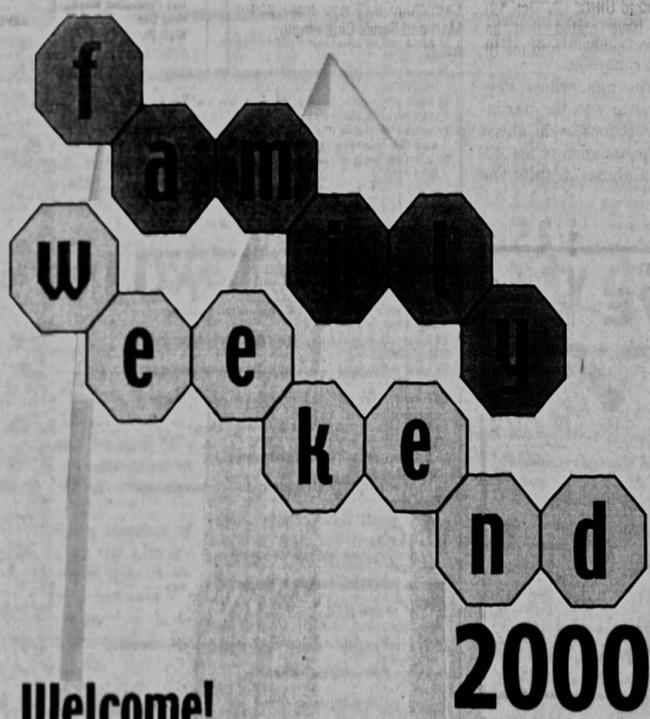

There has been no claim of responsibility for the Cole bombing that is considered credible.

Saleh, in an interview with CNN Thursday, said "it could be" when asked if Saudi dissident Osama bin Laden — whom the United States accuses of masterminding the 1998 bombings of its embassies in Kenya and Tanzania that killed 224 people — was behind the attack on the USS Cole.

Freeh said it was far too early to speculate.

A Taliban official in Afghanistan said Arab militants who met with bin Laden in late September left the country just four days before the attack on the Cole. The official, who is close to the security apparatus of the Taliban religious militia that controls nearly all of Afghanistan, asked not to be identified for his own safety.

FUN-FILLED FALL

Lucas Shepl, 8, blocks his face as 7-year-old Jackie Moore throws leaves at him Thursday afternoon in College Green Park. The two are joined in the pile of leaves by Lena Forman, 7, and Harris Johnston, 8. The four, students at Willowwind Elementary School, stopped on their way home to have fun in the fallen leaves.

Student anti-Muslim protests continue

■ Bosnian Serbs keep pressure on U.S. troops, demanding Muslims leave their city.

By Alexander S. Dragicevic
Associated Press

BRCKO, Bosnia-Herzegovina — Bosnian Serb students pelted U.S. peacekeepers with eggs and stoned Muslim-owned businesses Thursday to press their demand that Bosnian Muslims leave this ethnically tense city.

Two people were injured and 10 were arrested, Police Chief Dusko Kokanovic said. He urged authorities to declare a state of emergency in Brcko, where the students demonstrated for a third-straight day.

Hundreds of young Bosnian Serbs — high-school and college students, most in their late teens — ran through the streets chanting the name of indicted war crimes suspect Radovan Karadzic and shouting, "This is Serbia."

Kokanovic said five houses were damaged Thursday and that vandalism, looting and attacks on police were continuing.

U.S. troops from a NATO base outside of town set up roadblocks early Thursday, checking all vehicles entering Brcko for weapons and explosives. An American convoy was blocked by the crowd and pelted with eggs, tomatoes and bananas.

Local police requested and received reinforcements from both parts of ethnically divided Bosnia. Special units of NATO-led riot police, mostly Italian carabinieri, also arrived in Brcko.

Protests began Tuesday after a group of Bosnian Serb students beat up a Bosnian Muslim student last week. Serb and Muslim students share high-school buildings but attend classes in separate shifts.

After the beating, Muslims demanded better security and the Bosnian Serbs began demanding separate schools.

The students have since expanded their demands to full Bosnian Serb control of the city, now under multi-ethnic administration.

The crowd shoved its way through a police cordon and entered the town hall Thursday to present demands to municipal authorities who later met to discuss the situation. Hundreds of Bosnian Serb students sat in front of city hall awaiting an answer.

"There will be no compromise over the demands," one of the Bosnian Serb students, Srebrenko Savic, told reporters. Police prevented several protesters from removing a Bosnian flag from the town hall.

Douglas Coffman, the spokesman for the U.N. police force that monitors and supervises the local police in Bosnia, condemned the unrest.

"These students should really go back to school and let their elected politicians try to resolve the problems," Coffman said.

Garry Matthews, the international supervisor for Brcko, suggested the demonstrations were orchestrated by extremist Bosnian Serb political parties and urged local authorities not to give in to the protesters.

"This is a dirty game played by certain political elements," Matthews said.

The American head of the U.N. mission in Bosnia, Jacques Paul Klein, said he believed some Bosnian Serb politicians wanted to stir up ethnic hatred to help extremist parties in the national elections in November.

Brcko long has been considered one of the most serious potential flashpoints in Bosnia-Herzegovina since the Dayton peace agreement ended the country's 3-and-a-half-year ethnic war in 1995.

Bosnian Serbs overran the town during the war and expelled Muslim and Croat residents. The Dayton peace conference failed to resolve who would control the town.

Palestinian recounts trying to block mob

■ A police commander says he tried to save the two Israeli soldiers who were killed on Oct. 12.

By Karin Laub
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Disclosing new details of the mob killing of two Israeli soldiers, a Palestinian police commander said Thursday he tried to protect one of the men during the attack but he was hit by the assailants with a metal chair and hurled against a wall.

Moments later, the attackers struck the Israeli, covering on the floor, with office equipment, including a computer and a fax machine.

"There were knives, as well as kicking and punching," said Col. Kamal al-Sheikh, the police commander in the West Bank town of Ramallah, where the killing, took place on Oct. 12.

Al-Sheikh said he pushed away the crowd, bundled the critically injured Israeli into a car, and had him driven to the nearest Israeli checkpoint, where he later died. The second soldier was killed at the scene, his body thrown head-first from a second-story window of the Ramallah police station.

Israeli security sources have said at least six Palestinians have been arrested in connection with the killings and taken to Israel for interrogation. One source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Israel put together a list of 18 suspects and that the vast majority are believed to have gone into hiding.

The army commander in the West Bank, Maj. Gen. Yitzhak Eitan, said Thursday that the manhunt was "not over."

Al-Sheikh said he was aware arrests had been made in Beit Liguia and Beitin, two West Bank villages that remain under Israeli security control. The commander said no suspects were arrested in areas under full Palestinian control.

Sri Lanka bombing kills 2, wounds 21

■ A rebel triggers explosives attached to his body in opposition to the country's new Cabinet.

By Namini Wijedasa
Associated Press

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka — Shortly before Sri Lanka's president installed her new Cabinet, a suicide bomber blew himself up Thursday, killing two other people and wounding 21 — including three American women.

The military said the bomber was a Tamil Tiger rebel who hoped to attack members of President Chandrika Kumaratunga's Cabinet. The president campaigned for the Oct. 10 parliamentary elections on a promise to crush the Tamil rebellion.

"From now on, you may see more and more rebel attacks in Colombo," Harry Goonetilleke, a former air force chief, said after the bombing.

The bomber triggered explosives wrapped to his body after a police patrol challenged him: He died immediately, while a policeman and a civilian died later, said Dr. Hector Weerasinghe, the director of the National Hospital.

The wounded Americans were identified in hospital records as Pat Monteleone, Nansie Jubitz and Barbara Barker; Weerasinghe said they were out of danger. He said Barker suffered a chest wound, and the others suffered minor injuries.

Two of the women were volunteers for an American technical aid program, and the third was the wife of an official involved in the program. Hospital records did not show the women's hometowns, and the U.S. Embassy declined to give any details.

"We saw a soldier with a rifle pointing to the park ... and then two seconds later there was a massive explosion and we were all hurt," Jubitz told local television.

The bombing occurred near Colombo's main recreation park in an area with popular tourist shops and office complexes. It is about two miles from where the Cabinet was sworn in.

"The target of the bomber was Cabinet members, but our alert security officials foiled his plan," said military spokesman Brig. Sanath Karunaratne.

Kumaratunga, whose People's Alliance won the parliamentary elections, went ahead with the installation of her 43-member Cabinet despite the bombing.

Iowa native confesses to four killings

■ The man, who was raised in Ames, admits to the murders after being diagnosed with cancer.

By Catherine Tsai
Associated Press

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo. — Not long after Robert Spangler learned he was dying of cancer, detectives came knocking at his door on the chance he had something he might want to get off his chest before the end came.

He didn't disappoint them. Spangler matter-of-factly admitted killing his family in 1978 and pushing his third wife to her death at the Grand Canyon 15 years later, investigators said.

Now Spangler, 67, is under arrest on murder charges.

Detectives suspected Spangler for years, and some of his former in-laws suspected the worst of him all along. But the alleged confession came as his shock to friends and neighbors, who knew him as an all-around good guy who refereed youth soccer and acted in dinner-theater productions.

"He's the kind of person you'd like as a next-door neighbor until you find out about him," said neighbor Joyce Williams.

Sheriff's investigator Paul Goodman refused to speculate about why he confessed after all these years.

"A friend of mine said it's kind of like a golf game," Goodman said. "You get a great swing, a hole in one. Then you got to walk to the next hole and do it again."

By his own reckoning, Spangler may not be around for a trial, telling people in August he had been given six months to live. However, Phoenix authorities said they have noticed no significant worsening of his health.

In any case, prosecutors said his condition had no bearing on the question of whether to bring charges.

"He still committed the crime, so it doesn't matter how much time he has to live," said Michael Knight, spokesman for the Arapahoe County district attorney.

Spangler has been indicted by a federal grand jury in Phoenix in the 1993 death of Donna Sundling Spangler, wife No. 3. On Monday, he was charged in Colorado with murdering his first wife and two children because, according to prosecutors, he was dissatisfied with family life.

He is being held in Phoenix. Prosecutors said no decision has been made on whether to seek the death penalty. Spangler has yet to hire a lawyer.

a result of last season's deer kill.

To help further limit the number of accidents, Mollenhauer said the city is planning to put up a new reflector system near the roads and increase the number of deer warning signs.

Mollenhauer is quick to remind people that deer are not inherently dangerous this time of year. While some instances of deer attacks have been reported, she said, they are rare.

Coinciding with the mating season is the beginning of the deer kill in Coralville. Freeman, who also heads the Deer Management Program in Coralville, reported that 34 deer have been killed since Oct. 1.

9% tuition increase approved by regents mated cost of inflation from 5.2 percent to 4.6 percent.

Nick LeClair, an ISU freshman from Minnesota, was one of the students in attendance. He said the tuition/fees hike may force him to drop out of school at the semester break or after this school year. If that's the case, he said, he will have to forfeit his summer internship at IBM, and he's not sure whether he will ever be able to go back to school.

LeClair has been unable to purchase textbooks this semester because his $6,000 loan has not been cleared.

"The regents just ignored everyone," he said, shaking his head.

Regent David Neil said the presentations by Golding and Sterenchuk "did not fall on deaf ears," but the increase is needed in order to maintain the quality of the universities. The Legislature's less-than-anticipated funding last spring is directly responsible for the size of the tuition increase, the largest in 12 years, he said.

Neil, along with regents Clarkson Kelly, Deborah Turner, Beverly Smith, David Fisher, Roger Lande and board President Owen Newlin, voted in favor of the increases.

ISU senior Lisa Ahrens, the student representative on the board, voted against the increases, while Regent Ellengray Kennedy did not attend the meeting.

Ahrens was also the only board member to oppose the 1 percent surcharge for non-residents at the UI, which UISG told the board it also opposed.

UI Student Government President Andy Stoll told the board that 60 percent of 905 UI students who participated in a UISG survey were opposed to the surcharge, which is meant to generate $530,000 to attract out-of-state students with extra scholarships.

Although the surcharge passed, UI President Mary Sue Coleman and UISG reached a compromise afterwards. The scholarships will be "grandfathered in," meaning all UI nonresident students will be able to apply for them for the next few years, not just incoming freshmen, said Steve Parrott, the director of UI Communications.

UISG Vice President Chris Linn said the compromise was one of a few "small victories" his group earned during this year's tuition debate.

The student group has persuaded the UI administration to be more accountable about how students' money is being used, Linn said. The Web site that the UI has created, for example, details recent campus improvements.

While UISG "cautiously supported" the increase, Linn presented the regents with data that show spring 2002 graduates will pay 22.8 percent more for tuition/fees than when they were freshmen.

"It's about time we evaluate this system," he said. "While some students are supporting the increase, I don't think anyone is under the understanding that this is a reasonable increase."

Linn told the regents about the growing gap between in-state and out-of-state students at the UI. Tuition and fees paid by nonresidents at the UI are the third-highest in the Big Ten and 340 percent higher than those paid by their in-state counterparts.

The Legislature will decide this spring whether large tuition hikes continue, Neil said.

"Until the state puts higher education in front of tax cuts, we're going to face the same (hikes) next year," he said.

goal of the plan," he said. "It's better to have an agreement in place rather than seek one later."

Karen Kubby, a member of the committee on the Library Expansion Campaign, is divided on the decision but said she is pleased the council is showing interest in the need for an expansion.

"I think it's good preparation so we can get moving as soon as possible," she said. "But my other mind says it's a little premature."

Kubby said the library has been overcrowded for over 10 years and needs to accommodate a growing community.

"It's one of the services that city residents use most," she said. "At least 85 percent of the city has a library card."

The library expansion project calls for the purchase and demolition of the Lenocho & Cilek building west of the library. A two-story building would be built to the west along with an addition to the second floor of the existing library, approximately doubling its size. A portion of the new building would initially be leased to commercial vendors, and that is expected to cut down on the city's cost by $3 million.

The total project will cost $18.5 million and be funded by bonds, which will be paid by an increase in property taxes for Iowa City residents. The owner of a $100,000 house will pay $37.51 more per year, Kubby said.

The project is scheduled to be completed three years after revoked after an application is filed and an administrative judge approves it, said public defender Richard Klausner.

After his court appearance, Manchester was transported to the Iowa Medical and Classification Center at Oakdale. There, factors such as his age, needs, crime record and the nature of the offense will be used to determine an appropriate institution for his incarceration, Klausner said.

Klausner told Thomas that he hoped Manchester would eventually be able to rejoin society after completing treatment programs for drugs and sexual abuse. Manchester had an eighth-grade education, was a Korean War Veteran and had only one prior offense — operating while intoxicated while in his 60s, Klausner said.

"This is one of the saddest cases I've been involved in a number of years," he said. "Harold has had only one offense prior to the age of 73, and for 90 percent of his life, he has been a law-abiding citizen."

Lahey said she was satisfied with the plea bargain because "it ensured that he went to prison and will have to register as a sex offender for 10 years."

That Manchester didn't have a previous record of violent crime and his age were circumstances Lahey considered for the plea bargain.

"When you take these matters to trial, juries tend to be more sympathetic toward the elderly," she said. "They have a harder time believing (the elderly) are capable of criminal actions."

D.M. night-club death trial opens

■ Two white bouncers are accused of killing a black man they threw out of the club on Feb. 17.

By Mike Branom
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Accusations flew from both sides during opening statements Thursday in the trial of two white bouncers accused of accidentally killing a black man while ejecting him from a nightclub.

"This is a case about reckless restraint," Assistant Polk County Attorney Mike Hunter said during opening statements. "These two very large bouncers, by choking, stomping and kneeling on that person, thereby caused his death."

John Sandre, the defense attorney for doorman Tom Dueber, said: "Evidence will show that Mr. (Charles) Lovelady was hostile, was belligerent and was threatening. The conduct of that man that night caused that conflict to occur."

Dueber and Jeff Portman, both 26, are charged with involuntary manslaughter in the Feb. 17 death of Lovelady. They face up to two years in prison if convicted.

Lovelady, 26, died outside Graffiti's, a nightclub on Merle Hay Road, after a struggle with Portman and Dueber over a dress-code violation.

Polk County Medical Examiner Francis Garrity ruled that Lovelady died from "asphyxia due to traumatic compression to the neck" and called his death a homicide.

The prosecution and defense agreed that the dispute began over the hooded sweatshirt Lovelady was wearing and that he was ejected from the nightclub once before returning and confronting Dueber.

But the two sides' stories diverged from there.

Hunter said that as Lovelady had Dueber pushed against a wall, the "two very large bouncers" — a phrase Hunter kept repeating — retaliated by throwing Lovelady to the floor. Portman then got Lovelady in a chokehold, and Dueber stomped on his back.

Hunter said witnesses will testify that Lovelady put up little resistance and died soon afterward.

"The evidence against these two very large bouncers, we believe, will show their conduct was reckless," Hunter said. "They knew or should have known the risk of harm."

However, Terry Wright, Portman's attorney, said the doorman only scuffled with Lovelady after he had thrown a punch at Dueber. And, added Wright, Lovelady put up a ferocious struggle, which made Portman's grappling — an arm over the left shoulder and the other under the right arm — necessary.

IRS investigates offshore-bank accounts

■ The agency wants U.S. citizens to realize that all their income is taxable.

By Catherine Wilson
Associated Press

MIAMI — In a sweeping tax-evasion probe that could affect thousands of people, the Internal Revenue Service went to court to seek records on U.S. taxpayers with credit card accounts in three offshore banking havens.

Credit, debit and charge cards at banks in the Bahamas, Cayman Islands and the country of Antigua and Barbuda are covered by federal court petitions filed Wednesday against American Express Travel Related Services Co. and MasterCard International.

"We want to get the message across that all income to U.S. citizens is taxable," John Buchanan, the manager of the IRS trust program, said Thursday.

The investigation is one of most extensive IRS probes targeting offshore tax havens in history.

Promoters of offshore accounts advertise everywhere from the Internet to airline magazines with the message that income can be sheltered because the U.S. government cannot penetrate some foreign-banking secrecy laws.

But the headquarters for the Caribbean operations of the two financial-service companies are in the Miami area, and IRS lawyers believe their records are legally accessible.

The court did not immediately indicate when it would rule on the question.

The investigation, already under way for two years, targets tax evaders and non-filers.

The targeted countries have been known in international circles for years as favorite spots for drug-money launderers. The IRS probe is searching for both legally and illegally obtained assets.

"The countries that were selected were selected because they are representative of the problem," Buchanan said. "We know they have a high U.S. presence there, so the numbers could get very high."

Offshore accounts are legal for U.S. taxpayers, but they must file additional forms with the IRS about them and pay taxes on income earned in the United States.

MasterCard spokeswoman Sharon Gamsin said the company has cooperated with past federal investigations but added, "We are mindful of our cardholders' privacy concerns and maintain minimal, if any, personally identifiable information regarding MasterCard transactions."

A call to American Express was not immediately returned.

Investigators want identifying information, such as passport and driver's license numbers, for cards issued on the islands and information on transactions from 1998 and 1999, including car, boat and airline ticket purchases and hotel and car rentals in the United States.

The IRS doesn't know how many accounts created by U.S. citizens and residents are involved but believes the number to be in the thousands.

Rodham Clinton, Lazio use 'bogeymen' to gain votes

■ The New York Senate candidates link their opponent's policies to those of past politicians.

By Marc Humbert
Associated Press

BUFFALO, N.Y. — "He can't talk about the issues because he's too busy running away from his past — from his votes with Newt Gingrich," Hillary Rodham Clinton said to cheers from 150 supporters in Buffalo.

"We are not going back to the old ways — the old Cuomo ways," her Republican opponent in New York's Senate race, Rep. Rick Lazio, told supporters at his own campaign stop in town this week.

In the final, crucial weeks of the Senate campaign, both candidates are regularly seeking to link their opponent to political "bogeymen" they believe can swing votes their way.

The first lady has for months been using Lazio's links to Gingrich — the former House speaker whom the Long Island congressman served as a deputy whip — to portray Lazio as a conservative who is out of step with the state's voters. Lazio in recent days has stepped up his mention of former Gov. Mario Cuomo, a hero to many liberals.

The attempt to connect Rodham Clinton to Cuomo peaked on Monday as Lazio campaigned across the state with Republican Gov. George Pataki, the man who brought down the Democrat Cuomo in the 1994 governor's race.

"When you take a look at Mrs. Clinton, when you think of her policies, it's Mario Cuomo redux," Pataki said with Lazio at his side.

The anti-Cuomo offensive is geared primarily at more conservative upstate New York, a region that has historically been friendly turf for Republican candidates. Pataki swamped Cuomo there in 1994.

But it is a region where Rodham Clinton has spent a good deal of her time over the past year and where she is running a strong race against Lazio, according to recent polls. Also, while Pataki won easy re-election in 1998, he lacked the coattails to help save then-Sen-

Alfonse D'Amato from going down to defeat against Democrat Charles Schumer.

There are other bogeymen being used in the race.

Rodham Clinton is fond of saying Lazio's first vote in the Senate, if he is elected, would be to retain Republican Trent Lott as majority leader and also to support the continued reign of conservative Jesse Helms as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

"The fact that Rick Lazio served as Newt Gingrich's whip or that he would be voting for Trent Lott says something important to New Yorkers about his positions and his record," Rodham Clinton campaign spokesman Howard Wolfson said Tuesday.

Pope may step down in 2001, cardinal says

■ A Belgian cardinal increases the speculation that John Paul, old and frail, might abdicate.

By Victor L. Simpson
Associated Press

VATICAN CITY — An influential European cardinal has added his voice to speculation swirling for months: Pope John Paul II, burdened by age and illness, may resign.

Cardinal Godfried Danneels of Belgium suggested John Paul might step aside next year, having at that time achieved his dream of leading the church into the new millennium.

Mere mention of the issue has angered the Vatican, which sees such talk as seeking to weaken the papacy. Reaction to Danneels' suggestion was swift.

"This is the personal opinion of Cardinal Danneels, which we do not confirm," said a one-line statement issued Thursday by the pope's spokesman, Joaquin Navarro-Valls.

Danneels, who has been mentioned as a possible successor to John Paul, is the highest-ranking churchman to go public with the thought, which has been on the minds of many, given the pope's frail condition.

A top German bishop, Karl Lehmann, broke the ice in February, when he said he thought the pope would step down if he thought he could no longer lead the church.

John Paul will be 81 in May. His speech is slurred, and his hands tremble, both symptoms associated with Parkinson's disease, a progressive neurological disorder. Since hip surgery following a fall in his bathroom in 1994, he has had difficulty walking and climbing stairs.

He looked weak when he received Queen Elizabeth II at the Vatican Tuesday, needing a cane for support. While the queen's voice rang clear, the pope's was barely audible.

Danneels' comments were reported by Belgian and Italian media from advance excerpts from a book Frankly Speaking: Six Conversations with the Cardinal, to be released on Oct. 23.

Speaking about the retirement age for bishops of 75, the cardinal said, "I wouldn't be surprised if the pope also retired after 2000. He absolutely wanted to reach the Jubilee year, but I believe he would retire afterward," according to published reports.

26 Chinese men attempt to ship themselves to U.S.

■ The illegal migrants are the first ever found in a container, an official says.

By Margaret Wong
Associated Press

HONG KONG — Inspectors discovered 26 illegal immigrants from mainland China hiding in a shipping container bound for the United States after instruments showed carbon dioxide emanating from the container, authorities said Thursday.

The men got into the container in Hong Kong and were due to be shipped out today en route to Long Beach, Calif., Customs and Excise Department spokesman Peter Tiu said.

He was not immediately able to identify the company that tried to send the container, which was in a terminal waiting to be loaded onto a ship when authorities found the human cargo.

The young men inside had suffered no injuries. Authorities said they had basic necessities — drinks, canned food, instant noodles, blankets and clothing. Hui Chiu-chun, a divisional commander of the customs department, said six movable wooden planks in the floor had provided ventilation.

The immigrants were believed to have come from mainland China's Fujian Province.

Dozens of illegal immigrants are believed to have passed through Hong Kong undetected. Hong Kong authorities say they have increased efforts to stop the trade, including using handheld carbon dioxide detectors to help inspectors find signs of life.

Customs spokeswoman Bess Chow said Wednesday's case marked the first time officials had found illegal migrants in a container in Hong Kong.

"This case showed that the frequent inspections by our custom officers are capable of discovering such incidents," said Secretary for Security Regina Ip.

Radar malfunction causes gridlock at 30,000 ft.

■ Airliners are grounded nationwide by radar computer failure in Southern California.

By Jeff Wilson
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Hundreds of domestic and international flights headed into or out of the Southwest were grounded Thursday because of repeated breakdowns in the region's air-traffic control radar.

By the time the order from the Federal Aviation Administration was lifted more than four hours later, airports around the country were gridlocked with aircraft lined up on the ground, flights canceled and thousands of passengers stranded or delayed.

"I've got a grandma dying in New Mexico, and I can't get there," said Davis Hill of Boise, Idaho, as he waited for a connecting flight at Los Angeles International Airport.

The problem called into question again the safety of the nation's air-traffic control system.

The malfunction took place at the FAA's Los Angeles Center in the Mojave Desert community of Palmdale, an air-traffic control center covering much of California and parts of Nevada and Utah. The system broke down twice in the morning.

FAA spokesman Jerry Snyder said a backup system took over, and there were no safety problems for the approximately 100 aircraft in the air.

However, the backup system doesn't have the automatic feature that passes off planes from one regional controller to another; it requires a controller to manually type in the flight information.

Hundreds of flights into and out of Los Angeles, San Francisco, San Diego, San Jose, Las Vegas and Salt Lake City were grounded.

Ninety minutes into a wait for a return flight out of San Francisco, Bridge Carney said that he had spent 3½ hours aboard a plane waiting to take off from Los Angeles.

"We got pushed to the No. 1 position, and the computer shut down again," he said. "You've just got to grin and bear it."

Snyder said the failure was the result of a computer software upgrade Wednesday night. "It's not accepting the software," Snyder said.

Smith & Wesson lays off 125 workers

■ The gunmaker blames sagging sales and background-check backlash.

By Jeff Donn
Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. — Smith & Wesson is laying off about 125 employees, or 15 percent of its work force, blaming slumping sales and a boycott by buyers angry over its gun-safety agreement with the government.

The workers, including some managers, will be laid off within the next week in Springfield, home to 725 employees. The company also has 100 other employees in Houlton, Maine.

"One of the frustrating things for us is that some of the damage has been done by the pro-gun side," spokesman Ken Jorgensen said Thursday.

Smith & Wesson has been faced with angry competitors and buyers since it signed the agreement with municipal, state and federal officials in March.

Under the agreement, the company promised to demand background checks on gun-show buyers, install safety locks and work on high-tech guns that can be fired only by their owner. In exchange, public officials agreed to drop Smith & Wesson from lawsuits against the industry.

Jorgensen said the company feels legally bound to the accord, but talks are under way with public officials to spell out "clarifications." He declined to offer details. "Hopefully, that will be positive for everyone," he said.

Patrick O'Malley, a National Rifle Association lobbyist, said Smith & Wesson should scrap the entire agreement.

John Velleco, a spokesman for the boycott-backing Gun Owners of America, called the layoffs "a sign that the boycott is working and people don't want to support a business that is in collusion with the most antigun administration in the country's history."

Government officials have enlisted dozens of cities to give preference to Smith & Wesson when buying guns for law enforcement. The idea was to encourage other gunmakers to sign on, but so far the plan has not worked.

Floridians take up arms to protect trees

■ Agriculture workers are chopping down citrus trees in an attempt to kill a bacteria.

By Jamie Hernandez
Associated Press

MIAMI — Enraging homeowners, Florida agriculture officials are going into back yards and cutting down people's beloved citrus trees in an effort to stamp out a crop-destroying strain of bacteria.

The campaign has led to armed standoffs between agriculture crews and homeowners.

"We have had all our rights taken away," said Nick Michaels. "People's property is being destroyed. We have Nazis here in Florida with Gestapo tactics."

The problem is citrus canker, a type of bacteria that causes oranges, grapefruits, lemons, limes and other fruits to fall prematurely and leaves lesions on fruit and leaves. The outbreak, confined mostly to the southern part of the state, poses a major threat to central Florida's $8.5 billion citrus industry.

There is no chemical that will kill canker in plant tissue. As a result, more than 750,000 trees have been cut down and burned since 1995 in residential areas of three Miami-area counties.

State rules allow the destruction of trees within 1,900 feet of an infected tree, no matter where it is. And citrus trees cannot be replanted in the affected areas for two years.

Florida Agriculture Department spokesman Terry McElroy said crews hope to wipe out the disease over the next six weeks — if homeowners cooperate.

A Broward County man was arrested Wednesday after he threatened to shoot a worker who came into his yard to remove a tree. On Monday, a dog died as crews ground up a stump next door; the owner suspects they were using chemicals that killed his pet, but the cause of death has not been determined.

NATION BRIEF

Study: Prosperity hasn't eliminated food shortage

ATLANTA (AP) — Despite a booming economy, about 5 percent of adults say they are worried about having enough food for themselves or their families, according to a government study released Thursday.

The 1996-98 telephone survey, released by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, showed respondents in eight states reporting what the study calls "food insecurity."

Approximately 30,000 households participated in the survey in Kansas, Louisiana, Maryland, Missouri, Montana, Pennsylvania, South Carolina and Virginia, responding to the question: "In the past 30 days, have you been concerned about having enough food for you or your family?"

In 1996, the study's first year, 6 percent of respondents said they had such worries. In 1997, that figure grew to 6.2 percent before falling to 4.6 percent in 1998.

The CDC study did not measure food supply or hunger in households.

The rate of concern was higher for women and increased as the number of children in the household grew. It was lowest among whites and married people.

"My hope is that, by looking at the characteristics of food insecurity — for example, higher rates for women and people with lower education and socio-economic levels — I hope this can guide state programming to address the problem," said Kelly Evenson, a researcher at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill involved study.

Don't fear the 'Net ...

Credit where credit is due

As the Christmas shopping season approaches and shopping malls around the country begin to fill up, more people are considering the Internet as a viable option for shopping. However, many Internet amateurs are terrified of releasing credit card numbers over the web. MasterCard has been running commercials with pasty-faced cybergeeks taunting their victims, only to be vanquished by MasterCard's "new" cyber-safe credit card. What they forget to mention, however, is that your credit card number is much safer on the Internet than almost anywhere else.

Virtually all online businesses offer some sort of data encryption on their Web sites when sending or receiving personal information. This encryption is a powerful mathematical system that turns useful information into meaningless gibberish for anyone who does not possess the decryption key. This means that whenever you send your information, only those authorized to receive it can read it. How powerful is the encryption? Even with extremely powerful computers that cost thousands of times more than anyone could ever charge to a credit card, it would take millions of years to decrypt a single credit card number. One would have better odds just making up card numbers in his or her head and trying them out.

On the other hand, how many times a day does someone make a face-to-face purchase with his or her credit card and throw the receipt in the trash? Almost all credit card receipts have the card number printed on them in plain Arabic numerals that anyone with a first-grade education can read. No one needs a powerful, expensive computer in order to dig through garbage and take all the receipts he or she finds. This practice is called Dumpster diving and is still the preferred way to get someone's financial information. If only trash cans had some sort of encryption.

The Internet is a great place to shop because of its discount bookstores and auction sites. MasterCard wants you to believe that the Internet is a dark, scary place where only MasterCard holders are safe. It is a classic example of a company playing on ignorance and fear in order to push a product. This Christmas, if you want crowds, pushing and high prices, then head to the local mall. If you want convenience, quality and security, then shop on the Internet.

"THE DRINKING DEBATE RAGES ON ..."

Respect: A two-way street

Ah, the life of an undergraduate. Idyllic, isn't it? Lying in the leaves on sunny fall days, contemplating Nabakov while sipping overpriced Starbucks coffee, making angels in College Green Park after the first snowfall.

Yep. I've often heard that undergrads exist in a state of perpetual bliss, happy as the proverbial clam, because they're not in the "real world."

What a bunch of crap. During the four years I taught rhetoric, I talked with students who landed in the hospital for eating disorders, students raped by family members or college "friends," students who dropped out to return to abusive partners, students dealing with newly diagnosed mental illnesses, students struggling to balance their parents' beliefs with their own new ideas. That all seemed pretty "real world" to me.

So, I tried never to be a hard-ass about deadlines. I remember the days when being left by my first lover and dealing with family trauma paralleled studying for midterms and writing my 21st paper of the semester.

As a teacher, I wanted my students to do well. I knew their lives at the UI could be tough and that doing well takes time, so I'd give the extra days.

True, I'm not a fan of the whiny, disorganized, drunk, or generally inept student. My patience has limits. Did I extend deadlines because of hangovers, arrests for underage drinking or late-night trips to see random bands?

Nah, not knowingly. Despite the times I felt cynical about students, I attempted to treat them with the respect they deserved. I learned some of this respect and care from rhetoric department Professor Mary Trachsel. Mary, my professor in two different graduate courses, taught me to care for my students by treating all of her own students with energetic, active respect.

Through assigning weekly reading journals and writing thoughtful, lengthy responses, Mary demonstrated a path to learning that was both rigorous and caring, both challenging and restful.

Thanks to Mary and other mentors, and thanks to the beautifully limited rhetoric class sizes, I came to know many of my students well. And I grew protective as I watched their struggles.

But I think some instructors define "respect" in a less straightforward manner. One of my best students recounted a most horrific story: Her mother, who had been ill with cancer for years, died just as the leaves started to fall and daylight savings time came to an end — and just before a chemistry midterm. Did the chemistry professor say, "Gee, student, I am so sorry about your mother. I know that's painful, so why don't we arrange for a make-up exam after the funeral?"

No, I don't know what that man was thinking, but the university had to force him to let her take another exam, and even then he'd only do it with proof from the funeral home. Imagine the biggest loss of your life — you're trying to be strong for your younger siblings, trying not to lose it all when you see the face of your father. Still, you'd better think clearly enough to get a copy of the receipt from the funeral home — one with your mom's name on it.

Though he doesn't get a free pass for treating my student like cat food, I see several reasons for his attitude. First of all, I wonder how big that class was — 1,000 people? Perhaps he felt that if he let one little bit of his class out of his plan, hundreds of other students might revolt. Second, I wonder how many times students with no excuse but partying lied to him in order to get out of exams. Students who do that make it harder for those whose stories are true.

Still, no one has the right to take away your status as a human being, in this or any world. Solutions? For now, just one: That chemistry professor needs to take a class with Mary Trachsel. Maybe then he'd learn to treat students with respect. Maybe then he could help make the life of an undergrad that much closer to the ideal. And no matter what, he owes my student — our student — a deep and heartfelt apology.

GUEST OPINION

Celebrate America's heritage ...

Reject big-buck politics

Wake up America! Can't you see what's happening to your country? Your rights and your property are being stolen from you in broad daylight.

The Web site www.billionairesforbush.org (well worth checking out), is having fun with the presidential election. But it also reveals a shocking truth.

We're being taken. It's happened before in this country. And Iowans can fight back today like our great grandparents did before us. We can recapture our democracy for the people.

After the Civil War, the Democratic Party came to be controlled by big business and the wealthy. It did little to help poor farmers.

Disenchanted Democrats organized a People's Party. It advocated regulation of banks and railroads, a progressive income tax, an eight-hour workday, cooperatives, bigger education budgets, direct popular election of U.S. senators and the popular referendum.

By 1892, Iowa's James B. Weaver was the party's nominee for president.

In 1911, the Wisconsin branch created a workers' compensation program, workplace safety legislation, maximum hours for women and children, a state income tax and state life-insurance fund.

By 1912, many Republicans were disgusted with big business' control of their party.

Those Republican dissidents formed the Progressive Party. It advocated abolition of child labor, the women's vote, primary elections, national social insurance and restrictions on injunctions in labor disputes. In 1924, it advocated the right to collective bargaining.

The Yugoslavs have taken their government back from Slobodan Milosevic. It's time we recaptured ours.

Wisconsin's efforts with public works and unemployment compensation in 1931 became a model for much of President Roosevelt's legislation — as were many of the Socialist Party's proposals.

Read the history of the Greenback-Labor Party, Grange, Farmers' Alliances, People's Party, Progressives, Populists and Socialists. It turns out that most of the major innovations in our nation's law and policy have come from third parties. Major parties, bankrolled by big business, back change only when it's necessary to win.

Billionaires for Bush or Gore lists 66 corporations that have given over $50,000 to the candidates. And why not? The Web page also provides real examples of the formula at work. A million dollars in "soft money" can produce billions in defense contracts, subsidies, price supports, licenses, tax breaks, use of public lands or anti-trust exemptions.

And you pay for it all. As New York's William "Boss" Tweed used to say, "I don't care who does the electing, as long as I get to do the nominating." Today's corporate political bosses agree — they don't care which of their identically-dressed nominees wins.

A spokesperson put it very candidly to a TV reporter during the Democrats' convention.

Asked about the corporate entertainment and massive funding, he replied, "Shut up and listen. We have to win."

That's what politics is about. Winning. Whatever it takes. Negative ads? Multi-million-dollar special-interest contributions? Stretching the truth? We have to win.

Our great grandparents supported James Weaver. Today's disenchanted Democrats and Republicans are supporting the Green Party and its presidential candidate, Ralph Nader. No one's more independent of special-interest money.

The phony Debate Commission, controlled by the two parties and funded by their corporate friends, not only excluded Nader from the debates, their security thugs wouldn't even let him in the hall with his ticket. As a result, the most important issues in this campaign weren't even asked about, let alone addressed.

The Yugoslavs have taken their government back from Slobodan Milosevic. It's time we recaptured ours from the corporate-controlled puppets of big business called Republicans and Democrats.

Support Iowa's proud third-party tradition. Check out www.votenader.org. Wake up! Vote. And vote Nader.

Museum resurrects forgotten artists

■ Two exhibitions featuring Kenzo Okada and Seymour Lipton will open this weekend.

By Karen Schmiedeskamp
The Daily Iowan

The age of abstract expressionism will be in full view this weekend at the UI Museum of Art as the works of two recently overlooked yet highly influential abstract artists of the 1950s will be reintroduced.

The museum will celebrate the opening of an exhibition of paintings by Kenzo Okada — Kenzo Okada: A Retrospective on the American Years 1950-1982 — tonight. Tomorrow, an exhibition of sculptures by Seymour Lipton — An American Sculptor: Seymour Lipton — will open.

"The work of these two artists is groundbreaking," said Pamela Trimpe, the museum's curator of painting and sculpture. "Their works fell out of style, and they have been overlooked for a long time. It has been an unexpected opportunity for us to reintroduce and introduce their art."

As part of the celebration, Stephen Prokopoff, the curator of the Okada exhibition and former director of the UI Museum of Art, will hold a gallery tour. Okada's widow and two of her sisters will also be at tonight's reception. The three women flew in from Tokyo for the opening. Okada, who died in 1982, integrated the traditional Japanese artistic style with Western modernism. Large blocks of soft color in his paintings appear to slide together almost effortlessly, producing a soothing effect.

"Okada combined the lyrical soft colors of Japanese tradition with modern Western abstraction," Trimpe said. "There is no harsh line or form in his paintings; the figures fade into each other."

Okada fled Japan after World War II in search of artistic freedom. He moved to the United States and became a citizen in 1950. By 1953, his paintings had achieved popularity, attracting major collectors of modern art, Trimpe said.

A dentist with a passion for sculpting, Lipton was another artist whose works were widely collected during the post World War II era.

Lipton used an unprecedented technique of brazing nickel-silver rods onto sheets of metal. This technique, which Lipton performed using an oxyacetylene torch, resulted in a rustproof, highly textured surface.

His sculptures are reminiscent of the modern metallic themes seen in the movie Edward Scissorhands. Although most of Lipton's artistic creations are made of metal, wood and stone, they look as if they could spring to life at any given moment.

The UI Museum of Art will resurrect the work of abstract expressionist artists Kenzo Okada and Seymour Lipton in two exhibitions opening this weekend. They will be on display through Dec. 17.

"There is a sense of movement and rhythm in his sculpture because of his use of welded materials," Trimpe said.

The exhibition will feature 34 sculptures, 16 moquettes and 33 drawings. The moquettes and drawings demonstrate the creative progression Lipton went through before reaching a finished sculpture. A moquette is a "mock" sculpture — a smaller version of the intended artwork.

"Most of the moquettes and drawings were just lying around in his studio until he died," said Beverly Balger, the registrar at the Palmer Museum of Art at Pennsylvania State University. After his death, the works of art were discovered, and some were put on display in museums.

Trimpe said the museum will offer tours of the exhibitions periodically while they are on display. They exhibit until Dec. 17.

UI sophomore art major Lauren Angelico said she plans to visit the exhibitions.

"It's good to see new artwork circulating through the art department," she said. "It's great exposure for the students and the artists themselves."

Hollywood goes to the devil with latest flicks

■ A slew of movies dealing with the devil are coming out just in time for Halloween.

By David Germain
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Hollywood is playing devil's advocate. With Halloween approaching, a rush of films starring the Prince of Darkness is hitting theaters, from apocalyptic thrillers to lighthearted romps.

Harold Ramis, the director and a co-writer of the comedy Bedazzled, which opens today, said the current crop of satanic flicks may be a carryover from the millennium fever of last year, when such end-of-the-world movies as End of Days and Stigmata came out.

Or it could just be coincidence. "It's not like we call each other up and ask what devil movie is going to be hot this year," said Ramis, who has directed Analyze This and Groundhog Day.

Bedazzled stars Brendan Fraser as a techno-nerd who strikes a deal with a voluptuous Satan (Elizabeth Hurley) for wealth, power and the love of a beautiful co-worker. The movie is a remake of the 1960s comedy starring Peter Cook and Dudley Moore.

Adam Sandler then stars as the devil's dimwitted son in Little Nicky, debuting Nov. 10. The movie co-stars Harvey Keitel as the devil, Rodney Dangerfield as Grandpa Lucifer and Patricia Arquette, who starred in Stigmata.

"We were very determined to come out before the Adam Sandler movie. We didn't want to be the second devil comedy this year," Ramis joked.

Then there's Lost Souls, which opened Oct. 13 — it had been scheduled for release last year but was delayed because of the crowded market, the filmmakers say. The movie stars Winona Ryder as a zealot on a crusade to convince a non-believer (Ben Chaplin) that he has been chosen as host for the earthly incarnation of Satan.

Other devilish fare: The new cut of The Exorcist, featuring Linda Blair as that head-spinning, soup-spewing girl possessed by Satan, came out last month and has exceeded box-office expectations. And the 1970s flick The Omen recently came out in a DVD box set with its three sequels.

On top of the new crop of devil movies, the horror sequel Book of Shadows: Blair Witch 2 debuts next week, while Wes Craven Presents: Dracula 2000 arrives in December.

Moviegoers' appetite for all things hellish seems strong. Distributor Warner Bros. expanded The Exorcist last week to 1,655 theaters, up about one-third, pushing the re-issue's gross to a healthy $30.5 million in just over three weeks.

And despite generally poor reviews, Lost Souls managed to open as last weekend's No. 3 movie, grossing $8 million and easily outpacing three other new movies.

"People are endlessly fascinated with questions of good and evil," said Nina Sadowsky, a producing partner of Meg Ryan, whose Prufrock Pictures made Lost Souls.

"It's like Winona's character says in the movie: If you're so sure of one, doesn't that mean you have to be sure of the other? If people want to believe in God, a higher power that is good, doesn't it follow that you have to believe in a higher power that is evil? I think that's the core concept of these movies," Sadowsky said.

Estes creates music opportunity in Iowa

OSKALOOSA, Iowa (AP) — Five South African students from a high school founded by baritone Simon Estes say the opera singer helped them find opportunities for college in the United States.

In 1998, 40 members of the Simon Estes High School choir attended Des Moines-area high schools as exchange students. This year, with scholarships and help from Estes, five are enrolled as freshmen at William Penn University in Oskaloosa.

Estes mentors students from the private high school in Claremont, South Africa, for poor, musically talented black students.

"Simon Estes is our guardian angel," student Xolisa Nikani said. "I have an opportunity to become a better person because of him."

Oskaloosa is about 60 miles southeast of Des Moines and about 45 miles northeast of Estes' hometown of Centerville, Iowa.

The Pulliam Journalism Fellowship

Jump-start your newspaper journalism career with a solid program that boasts four Pulitzer Prize winners among its alumni - the Pulliam Journalism Fellowship. The Fellowship offers myriad career opportunities; in fact, a Pulliam Fellow from our first class of 1974, Barbara Henry, now serves as president and publisher of The Indianapolis Star. Moreover, a new graduate of our year 2000 class has just been hired as a full-time staff reporter at The Indianapolis Star.

Now entering its 28th year, the 2001 Pulliam Journalism Fellowship helps build a bridge from the classroom to the newsroom. Fellows are assigned to The Indianapolis Star or The Arizona Republic in Phoenix for 10 weeks each summer as staff reporters. We award 20 fellowships annually. The stipend is $5,775.

Traditionally, our fellowships have been open only to graduating college seniors. In 2001, we will be expanding eligibility to include college sophomores and juniors as well as seniors pursuing a career in newspaper journalism. We will be accepting applications for our Summer 2001 program in September 2000.

Visit our Web site at <http://www.starnews.com/pjf> or e-mail Fellowship director Russell B. Pulliam at russell.pulliam@starnews.com for an application packet. You also may request a packet by writing:

Iowa ready to get back in Kinnick

■ An Ohio State win will keep the Buckeyes in Rose Bowl contention.

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

Both Iowa and No. 14 Ohio State are anxious to get out on the Kinnick Stadium grass Saturday.

Iowa wants to show the home fans that the real Hawkeye team was the one that willed itself to win against Michigan State — not the team shut out by Illinois.

"The loss was pretty tough as a team, especially as a quarterback not putting any points on the board, which is my main job and our offense's main job. We didn't do that, so it hurt, but we have to push that aside and get ready for Ohio State," said Hawkeye QB Jon Beutjer.

Ohio State needs the win to avenge its first loss of the season on Oct. 14 and to stay in Rose Bowl contention.

Buckeye coach John Cooper was embarrassed following his team's 29-17 upset loss to Minnesota, calling it "the worst Ohio State has played in a long, long time."

He has been busy addressing the evident problems that surfaced after the Buckeyes compiled a meager 200 yards of total offense. Most of the questions he's been answering revolve around his quarterback, Steve Bellisari.

Despite averaging roughly 364 yards and 30 points a game, Cooper is growing impatient with his junior signal caller's development.

In comments Cooper made earlier this week, he touched on Bellisari's tendencies to "swing for the home run." He said his quarterback needed to pay more attention to what's developing in front of him and what the defenses are giving him.

The players he's not finding in the end zone are Buckeye starting wide receivers Kenyon Rambo and Reggie Germany. The two are considered among the most talented in the country, but they have no touchdown receptions through six games this year.

Regardless of Cooper's discouraging comments, his team is still 5-1 and tied with four others for first place in the Big Ten at 3-1. At No. 15 in the country, the Buckeyes remain the conference's highest-ranked team — one spot ahead of Michigan.

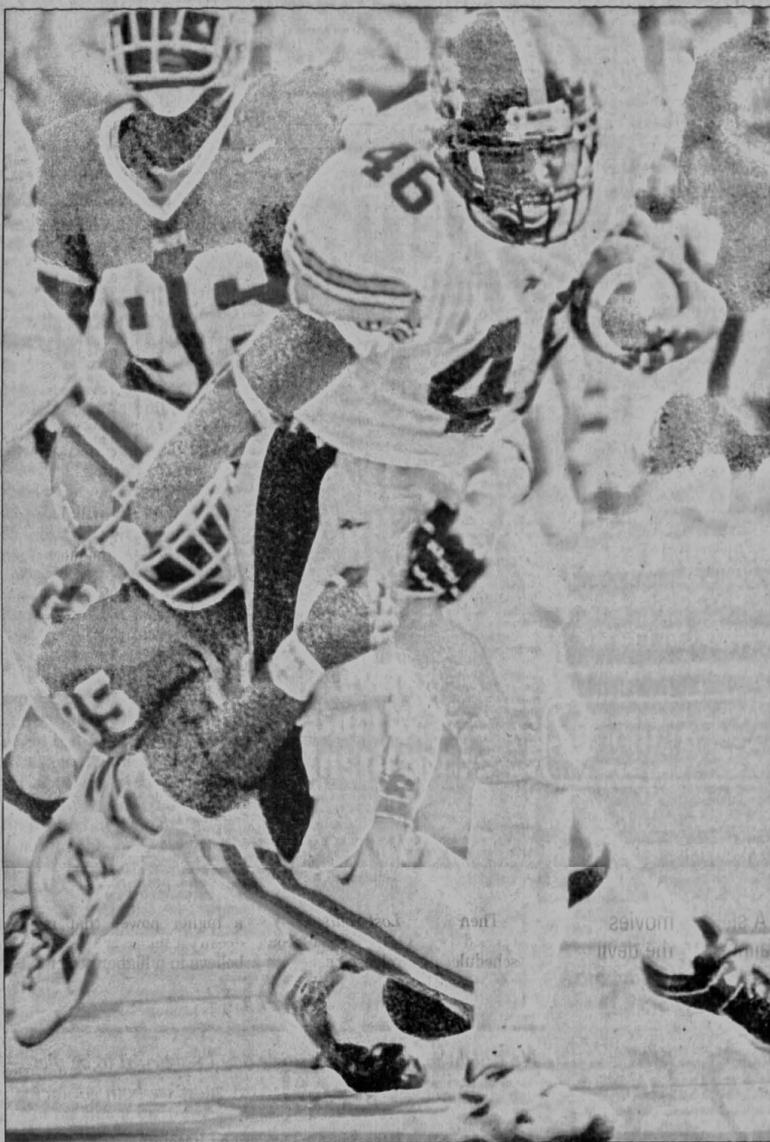

The productive defense is largely responsible for Ohio State's success halfway through the season. The Buckeye defense only surrenders 14 points a game. It is also tops in the conference at stopping the run. Iowa's defense ranks next to last and last, respectively, in these categories.

Offensively, the running game is a facet of the game Iowa wants to continue to build. Junior back Ladell Betts had a season high 115 yards on 23 carries against Illinois, but his teammates on both sides of the ball will have to perform much better Saturday if they want to contend with Ohio State. Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said his team will have to be at its best to beat the physical and perennial Big Ten power.

"They have great players. They are well-coached and are very sound," Ferentz said.

Iowa lands big recruit

■ Marcellus Sommerville says he wants to play for the Hawkeyes.

By Nick Firschau
The Daily Iowan

Despite what seemed like a lifelong love for the Kentucky Wildcats, Marcellus Sommerville, a 6-foot-6, 210-pound small forward prospect from Peoria, Ill., has decided to play for Iowa.

Sommerville notified Hawk coach Steve Alford of his decision Wednesday, saying he had chosen Iowa over Kentucky, Purdue and St. Louis. Bob Gibbons, a nationally known recruiting analyst, has ranked the Peoria Central High School standout as high as a top-20 player nationally.

Although Sommerville has played in the post during his high-school career, he is expected to play at the small forward or shooting guard spot for the Hawkeyes.

"Coach Alford recruited him as a shooter," said Chuck

Soccer team faces tough Illinois squad

■ The Illini are 6-3 in the Big Ten; Iowa is 2-6.

By Laura Podolak
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa soccer team has a light load this weekend — one game — but that one game will be far from easy.

The Hawkeyes take on the Fighting Illini of Illinois, currently ranked third in the Big Ten with a record of 6-3 (10-5 overall).

"All the scouting reports show that Illinois is a very good team, but I think we are a good team, too," Iowa coach Wendy Logan said.

Illinois has shown its strength this season, losing only to Penn State, Wisconsin and Michigan. Four of its six wins were shutouts. The most notable of these was a 5-0 victory over Indiana on Oct. 15.

Illinois brings with it the co-Big Ten Player of the Week, sophomore Laura Freeman, who helped lead the Fighting Illini to two victories last weekend. Freeman netted three goals in victories over Purdue and Indiana. She shared the honor with Iowa sophomore Sarah Lynch.

Although the Hawkeyes are situated at eighth place in the Big Ten, the last slot accepted

Detroit handles Bucs

■ James Stewart powers the Lions past Tampa Bay with 116 yards rushing and 3TD's.

By Fred Goodall

TAMPA, Fla. — The Detroit Lions keep finding ways to win.

James Stewart ran for 116 yards and three touchdowns and Jason Hanson kicked two field goals Thursday night as the Lions came from behind to beat the struggling Tampa Bay Buccaneers 28-14.

The victory gave Detroit (5-2) a split of the season series against their NFC Central rivals, who have lost four straight since dominating the Lions 31-10 at the Silverdome on Sept. 17.

The Bucs (3-4) began the season with three consecutive victories, but inconsistency on offense and uncharacteristic mistakes on defense and special teams have contributed to the team's first four-game losing streak since it started 0-5 in 1996 — Tony Dungy's first season as coach.

Tampa Bay led 8-0 before falling apart, finishing with a costly fumble, three interceptions. It gave Detroit an open-

Teams confused by Subway Series' logistics

■ The World Series could cause some traffic problems in the Big Apple.

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

NEW YORK — George Steinbrenner was casually strolling through the locker room at Yankee Stadium on Thursday afternoon when he was stopped by a clubhouse boy.

"Mr. Steinbrenner! Mr. Steinbrenner!" he called out to the New York Yankees owner. "Do we get to go to Shea Stadium?"

The Boss was stumped. "I don't know," he said. "You'll have to ask someone else."

That's how it's been much of this week when it comes to the Subway Series and logistics.

Though the two ballparks are only 14 minutes apart — with the Grand Central Parkway, the Major Deegan Expressway and the Triboro Bridge all closed to normal traffic, that is — this World Series is presenting all kinds of problems.

As in, if Mets star Mike Piazza wants to drive directly to Yankee Stadium, will the Yankees let him park in their lot? There were workouts at both places as the teams prepared for Game 1 Saturday night at the Bronx.

The Mets said Al Leiter will pitch the opener instead of Mike Hampton, who started Game 1 in the NL playoff series against San Francisco and St. Louis.

"Al has followed Mike all year, and Mike pitched the last game, so it is Al's turn to pitch," Mets manager Bobby Valentine.

For the Yankees, Jose Canseco was added to the World Series roster after being left off in the AL championship series. Manager Joe Torre wanted an extra bat, especially for the middle games at Shea.

"It was tough, it was very tough," Canseco said. "I've always been used to playing. I was working hard to stay ready."

In the meantime, both teams tried to settle their off-the-field plans.

The Mets, for example, will let the Yankees use the weight room at Shea Stadium. The facility is located inside the Mets' clubhouse.

This summer, after Roger Clemens beamed Piazza, the Mets blocked the Yankees from Americans start Presidents Cup in perfect fashion

■ The International team never led a match after the third hole.

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

GAINESVILLE, Va. — No one can say this American team doesn't care about playing in the Presidents Cup.

Led by the brilliant play of its rookies and a clutch putt from Tiger Woods, the United States got off to a perfect start Thursday by winning every alternate-shot match for a 5-0 lead over the International team.

"We're very happy to be here, and motivated to win," Tom Lehman said after he and Phil Mickelson won the first match of the Presidents Cup, a 5-and-4 rout of Greg Norman and Steve Elkington.

It was the second time the Americans have led 5-0 after the first session, matching their record start six years ago at the Robert Trent Jones Golf Club.

"It was a bit of a shocker,"

Steve Helber/Associated Press

United States teammates Tiger Woods, right, of Orlando, Fla., and Notah Begay of Albuquerque, N.M., celebrate their first-round match win at the Presidents Cup golf tournament in Gainesville, Va.

International captain Peter Thomson said. "They've all got to pull their socks up and play a little better. And we'll see what happens."

Three matches reached the 18th hole, but it was never really close.

The International team, which handed the Americans their worst loss ever in team match play two years ago in Australia, led in only two of the five matches at any point, but never after the third hole.

Stewart Cink and Kirk Triplett, both playing in their first team competition, made seven birdies in 17 holes on a difficult course for a 3-and-2 victory over International rookies Mike Weir of Canada and Retief Goosen of South Africa.

"I set him up with a lot of birdies and he drained them all," Cink said. Fittingly, Triplett closed out the match with a 40-foot birdie putt.

The other U.S. rookie, Notah Begay, also won his match — and not just because his partner was Woods, his former teammate at Stanford. Begay sealed their 1-up victory over Ernie Els and Vijay Singh with an approach into 10 feet on the 18th.

But it was Woods who turned back any hope of a great comeback from the International team's best two players, atoning for an errant tee shot on the 16th with the kind of putt he has been making throughout his record-smashing season.

Clinging to a 1-up lead, Begay chipped from under a tree well past the pin, but the ball came back down the slope to about 20 feet.

"I just hit a terrible shot," Woods said. "And then Notah hit a great shot out of there, just put it on the green. And I told him the job was done, I'm going to make it."

Woods made the par putt for a halve of the hole, ramming his fist toward the cup as it fell. He and Begay slapped hands sideways and tapped fists.

"I got a little excited," Woods said with a sheepish grin.

"We've been looking forward to this day," Mickelson said. "We were ready. It showed."

Tyson-Golota — expect the unexpected

■ Tyson says tonight's fight will be his last.

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
The Associated Press

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — The fight is billed simply as "Tyson-Golota."

No catchy phrases for tonight's match, such as "Tyson vs. Golota: A Mouth-Watering Experience."

The promoters have elected to play it straight.

But bill it as you will, Mike Tyson vs. Andrew Golota is a fight with a third-man theme.

Can referee Frank Garza, 5-foot-8, 172 pounds, control Tyson and Golota if one or both heavyweights stomp on the Marquis of Queensberry rules, as they have been known to do?

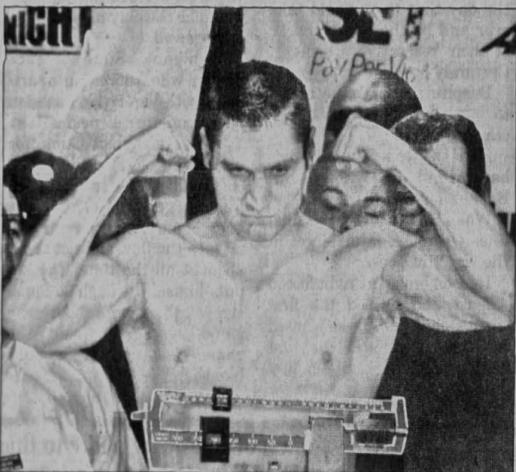

Both men have fought and won often within the rules, and their match in the 20,000-seat Palace at Auburn Hills could be hard, but clean.

If such a fight was guaranteed, however, the question of whether it would be on pay-per-view for $49.95 would be a legitimate one.

A lot of people will attend the fight or buy pay-per-view expecting the unexpected, and it could be Tyson's last fight.

At Thursday night's weigh-in, the former champion said: "This is definitely my last fight." Few people took him seriously, however.

When told of Tyson's com-

Carlos Osorio/Associated Press

Boxer Andrew Golota, a native of Poland living in Chicago, pumps his arms after weighing in at 240 pounds Thursday. Golota will meet Mike Tyson in a heavyweight match tonight.

ment, Jay Larkin, who runs boxing for Showtime, said: "A pig just flew over."

The pay-per-view telecast will begin at 8 p.m. CDT, with the Tyson-Golota fight to start between 10 p.m.-10:30 p.m.

"I plan to fight clean as much as possible," said Golota, a native of Poland living in Chicago.

"Both fighters are professionals and know how to fight," said Al Certo, Golota's trainer. "I think the media wants a dirty fight and has been trying to talk the fighters into it. I think it is going to be a good fight. If Tyson does fight dirty, Golota might pick him up and body slam him or throw him out of the ring."

The media merely reported that Golota was twice disqualified for repeatedly hitting Riddick Bowe low, that he bit Samson Pou'ha on the shoulder and that he head-butted Danell Nicholson.

The media did not lead Tyson to bite Evander Holyfield's ears, knock down Orlin Norris after the bell, or attack Lou Savarese after the 38-second fight had been stopped.

For pushing referee John Coyle aside and throwing punches at Savarese June 24 at Glasgow, Scotland, Tyson was fined $187,500 but not suspended by the British Boxing Board of Control. The fine has been paid.

Tyson charged across the ring and knocked down the 6-foot-5 Savarese with a left hook to the side of the head just seconds after the opening bell in Glasgow.

He'll probably try to do the same thing to Golota.

As for how long the fight might last, Tyson said, "As long as it takes to kill somebody."

Golota appeared intimidated when he was stopped in the first round by Lennox Lewis in a bid for the WBC title Oct. 4, 1997.

Ask if he thought Golota would be intimidated tonight, Tyson said, "That's his problem."

"Golota is not intimidated by Tyson," Certo said. "Tyson should be intimidated by Golota. Tyson is a small guy and he is older now. When you get older, big fighters intimidate you."

"To me he's a little guy — 6-foot-5 (actually 6-4), 240," said the 34-year-old Tyson, listed as 5-11 1/2 but who appears closer to 5-foot-9. "To me, he's very small."

Golota weighed in Thursday at 240 pounds. Tyson was at 222.

(4-5, 10-6) should stay above the Wildcats and safely in eighth place, even without a win this weekend.

The Hawkeyes, although secure at eighth place, do not have to settle for that spot. Only two games separate second from eighth.

Penn State is the only team that is out of reach. With a record of 8-0, the Nittany Lions have clinched the Big Ten conference.

Along with Illinois, Wisconsin and Michigan sit at 6-3 in second. Fifth is Michigan State with a record of 5-3-1. Sitting alone in sixth is Purdue, which the Hawkeyes pummeled Sunday, 7-1.

Just above Iowa is Minnesota with a record of 4-4. If the Hawkeyes record a victory today and Minnesota falters, there is the possibility of passing the Golden Gophers.

If things play out to the benefit of the Hawkeyes, they could see themselves move up into sixth place.

"I feel good after last weekend; we had two great performances," Logan said. "It really boosted our confidence."

Iowa is in control of its own destiny — it must hand Illinois its fourth loss of the season if it hopes to move up in the rankings. With a win over the Fighting Illini, the Hawkeyes should find themselves at the Big Ten tournament on Nov. 2-5.

The game against Illinois is not only the last Big Ten conference game of the season, but it is also the Hawkeyes' last home game. Kickoff is scheduled for 4 p.m.

QBs finally meet in rival game

■ Drew Henson and Ryan Van Dyke will be on the same field this Saturday.

By Larry Lage
Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — The wait is almost over.

After almost three years of anticipation, No. 16 Michigan's Drew Henson and Michigan State's Ryan Van Dyke will be on the same field Saturday.

The similarities with the junior quarterbacks just begin with the day they were born, Feb. 13, 1980.

Eighteen years later, recruiting analysts rated Henson, of Brighton among the top three and Van Dyke, of Marshall among the top ten quarterbacks in high school.

"Those guys were probably the most highly touted quarterbacks to come out of this state at one time, maybe ever."

Despite the hype, both had to wait their turn to be starters in college.

Henson was Tom Brady's backup and Van Dyke was Bill Burke's for two years.

When their wait on the sidelines was over, injuries got in the way this season.

Henson broke his right foot in August and missed the first three games. Van Dyke bruised his right thumb in the first quarter of Michigan State's first game and was sidelined for the next three contests.

Freshmen quarterbacks filled in for both and fared relatively well.

But Henson quickly established himself as Michigan's undisputed quarterback ahead of John Navarre, while Van Dyke has not done the same with Jeff Smoker. Van Dyke had to share time with Smoker last week and the same is expected Saturday.

"The injury set him back quite a bit," Michigan State coach Bobby Williams said.

Henson has completed 64.9 percent of his passes for 887 yards with seven touchdowns and no interceptions. Van Dyke has connected on 45.5 percent of his throws for 318 yards with three touchdowns and five interceptions. Van Dyke chose not to speak with the media after the 17-10 loss to Wisconsin on Saturday. He wasn't given the option of speaking this week because Williams decided his captains would be the only players to be interviewed.

Michigan State's Jace Saylor, who shares an apartment with Van Dyke, has seen his roommate's struggles.

"It's a goofy situation for him right now," Saylor said. "It's really tough on him. I tell him to get away from the game some. To try to relax and go with the flow and not think about it all the time. The kid puts himself through so much stress thinking about the game, worrying about the game, studying film and stuff like that."

"He knows he does it to himself, but that's just the type of guy he is. He beats himself up mentally a lot. He's a competitor, he's been doing this his whole life. He'll be doing this sooner or later."

Despite the similarities between Henson and Van Dyke, they have never met.

"I've never talked to him, never crossed paths," Henson said. "I was doing my own thing, I knew I was coming here from the start and he decided to go to (Michigan) State. It's not going to be a big part of the game this week. He's running his offense and I'm running mine."

Yanks will be taking bus to Shea

SERIES

using the weight room during interleague play.

"It was absolutely the right thing to do," Mets general manager Steve Phillips said. "I probably should've called Brian (Yankees GM Cashman) before I did it, rather than after. Knowing the emotions of our players, I thought there was a potential for a problem."

"Tensions have cooled down to the point where nothing will happen," he said.

Torre also hopes calmer heads will prevail.

"I think it's a disservice to people what's going on," he said. "Whenever you pick up a newspaper, whatever network you watch, that's all you see is Mike getting hit in the head."

"I would like to believe this World Series is more about competition and fun than about getting even and inciting riots," he said.

The Mets plan to meet at Shea on Saturday, possibly for some batting practice, and then bus over to Yankee Stadium to dress. There will be an early bus around 2 p.m. EDT, a later one with most of the players and then one at 6:45 p.m. for wives and families.

There was a chance, however, that Piazza would head straight from his New Jersey home to Yankee Stadium. During interleague play, the Yankees let him park in their lot — this time, he was figuring on taking a taxi.

The Yankees also planned on taking a bus or two to Shea. That was fine with Game 1 starter Andy Pettitte.

"What I think most about it is that we don't have to get on another airplane," he said. "Man, we have been doing so much traveling."

Forward picks Iowa over Kentucky

Buescher, Sommerville's coach at Peoria Central. "He's a little slow at 6-6 to play inside in the Big Ten. He can definitely shoot it, but he's going to have to work on his passing and his ball handling."

Sommerville led Peoria Central to a 23-5 record last season and posted 13.8 points and 9.4 rebounds per game in the paint.

"Marcellus brings all the intangibles," Buescher said. "He brings toughness, and he's a very good competitor. He has been a very good leader here for our team. We lost four starters, and he is the only one returning. He's just a great player."

Sommerville visited Iowa City on a recruiting trip on Oct. 7 and then visited Kentucky last weekend. His decision to play at Iowa and the change in his position will require Sommerville to improve on a number of aspects of his game, according to Buescher.

"He needs to continue to grow as a player; he's going to improve on his decision-making," said Buescher. "So many players have the skills, but they don't know how to play the game. Marcellus is very unselfish, and I think he's definitely going to improve this season."

Sommerville is the third recruit to orally commit to Iowa for next season. Pierre Pierce, a 6-foot-3 point guard from Westmont, Ill., and Erik Hansen, a 6-foot-11 center from Euless, Texas, are the other two. The Hawkeyes have one scholarship remaining for next season; they are believed to be in strong pursuit of JaQuan Hart of Flint, Mich. Hart has narrowed his choices to Purdue, Michigan and Iowa.

ing to get back in the game when Nate Webster blocked a punt and Ronde Barber couldn't recover in the end zone for a touchdown and the Bucs settled for a safety and the 8-0 lead.

Stewart scored on runs of 4, 4 and 1 yards, the last two coming in the final 4:28 when the Lions pulled away from a 14-14 tie. Hanson kicked field goals of 32 and 47 yards, while Charlie Batch was 13-of-31 for 144 yards and no interceptions.

The Lions began the night ranked 22nd in offense and 29th in defense, but had a winning record because they did a good of protecting the ball. Tampa Bay sacked Batch seven times, but didn't force any turnovers.

Martin Gramatica kicked field goals of 27, 43, 50 and 55 yards for Tampa Bay.

The Bucs defense failed to hold fourth-quarter leads in two of Tampa Bay's first three losses and penalties and mistakes on special teams helped the Lions stay in the game despite being dominated much of the opening half.

After driving for field goals on their first two possessions, the Bucs squandered an opportunity to go up 13-0 when Webster blocked John Jett's punt but Barber couldn't get control of the loose ball for a touchdown.

The ball slipped from the safety's grasp three times before teammate John McLaughlin tried to fall on it in the end zone only to fall awkwardly and leave the ball exposed for Detroit's Ron Rice to recover for the safety.

Things got worse for the Bucs when Mike Alstott fumbled on Tampa Bay's next play. Rice recovered, setting up Hanson's 32-yard field goal on a drive the defense had to a chance to turn back when Brian Kelly dropped what should have been a third-down interception.

Trailing 11-3, the Lions drove 70 yards in 12 plays to tie the score just before the half on Stewart's touchdown and 2-point conversion run. Bryant Westbrook's interception and 16-yard return to the Tampa Bay 19 led to Hanson's field goal that put Detroit ahead 14-11 with 11:29 remaining in the third quarter.

The Bucs offense sputtered after outgaining the Lions 107-28 in the opening quarter. The Bucs only managed one first down in the next two quarters and didn't come close to scoring until Gramatica's 55-yard field goal set the stage for Detroit's game-winning drive.

IOWA HAWKEYES

VS.

OHIO STATE BUCKEYES

11:10 a.m. Saturday Kinnick Stadium • TV: KGAN • Radio: 96.5 FM and 800 AM

OFFENSE

This area is more even than the rest, but Ohio State's superior talent and speed far surpass Iowa's.

INTANGIBLES

The Buckeyes are ticked off after last week's upset at the hands of Minnesota at Ohio Stadium. It blew their shot at an undefeated season. Not to mention some folks are calling for Cooper's job.

Who has the edge?

By Jeremy Schnitzer

COACHES

John Cooper is considered the dean of Big Ten coaches, and rightfully so. He's been around longer than anyone except Joe Paterno. His teams are always talented, and they've beaten the Hawkeyes every year since 1991.

SPECIAL TEAMS

This one is a tie. Both have exceptional return men: Iowa's Kahll Hill and OSU's Ken-Yon Rambo. Both kicking games are decent, it's difficult to say who is best.

DEFENSE

The Buckeyes have the best rush defense in the Big Ten, and the fifth best passing defense in the conference. They're big and they're fast, and they get the job done.

The Hawkeyes didn't do anything right in last week's 31-0 loss to Illinois in Champaign. Freshman Jon Beutjer had his worst outing in an Iowa uniform, as the Hawkeye offense failed to score for the first time this year.

HAWKEYE BRIEFS

Rowing

This week: The University of Iowa rowing team will travel to Boston to compete in the 36th annual Head of the Charles Regatta on Oct. 21-22. The event features 20 different racing events along a 3-mile course on the Charles River. Iowa will enter a boat in the Varsity 8+ race and one boat in the Varsity 4+ competition.

Last competition: Two weeks ago, the Hawkeyes traveled Rockford, Ill., to compete in the Head of the Rock Regatta. The Hawkeyes brought home a win and a second-place finish in the pairs race. A second-place finish in the Varsity 8+ and a third-place finish in the Varsity 4+ were also added to their medal count.

Coach's comment: "The Hawkeyes are determined to have a good performance in Boston," said head coach Mandi Kowal. "Since the selection of the boats last Wednesday, each boat set up their own plan to succeed on race day. I have not seen a group of athletes own and take charge of their performance as these boats have done in the past three days. They are setting themselves up for success, and we can see that with every practice. It is amazing what can happen if you put your mind to it."

Next competition: The Hawkeyes will next take to the water at home on the Iowa River on Oct. 29. Iowa will host the 10th annual Head of the Iowa Regatta, featuring schools and clubs from around the Midwest. Competition will begin at 8:45 a.m.

Women's tennis

This weekend: The Hawkeyes will travel to Atlanta to compete in the Yellow Jacket Invitational, which will run from Friday through Oct. 22. The Hawks will compete against some of the stronger teams they've seen this fall season, including the defending NCAA champion Georgia Bulldogs, Florida State, Clemson, Baylor, Mississippi State, Big Ten rival Illinois and host Georgia Tech will also compete.

Last tournament: Iowa had a successful run at the Eck Classic in South Bend, Ind., from Sept. 29 through Oct. 1. Sophomore Cassie Hass earned fifth place in a tough flight A, while freshmen Pascale Veraverbeke and Jennifer Hodgman both placed second in flights C and D, respectively. Senior Erica Johnson and sophomore Steffi Hoch also placed third in singles flights action.

Iowa's keys: The Hawkeyes will look for more strong performances from Haas and junior Toni Neykova. Both players will compete in the tournament's A flight and will be looking for some big wins against some solid competition. Johnson and Veraverbeke could have another good showing — this time they will both compete in the B flight. Freshman Jody Scheidt will attempt to win her second singles title of the fall season as she competes in the C flight with freshman Jennifer Hodgman. The team has reworked its doubles lineup, putting the teams of Scheidt/Neykova and Haas/Johnson in the tournament's A flight and sophomores Steffi Hoch and Beth Hayden in the B flight.

Brett Roseman/The Daily Iowan

Iowa's Tiffany Fodera tries to grab the ball away from Southwest Missouri State's Liz Lopez during the Hawkeyes' 2-0 win on Oct. 1.

Coach's comment: "We have made steady improvement throughout the fall season," coach Paul Wardlaw said. "I am pleased with singles, especially after the tournament at Notre Dame. This weekend's tournament features a stronger field than at Notre Dame, and we will face some good tests from other teams. Our doubles continue to improve, and we are trying three new doubles combinations this weekend. I am curious to see how each team will fare."

— by Nick Firchau

Volleyball

This weekend: The UI volleyball team will begin a grueling four-match road trip by traveling to Michigan. The Hawkeyes will face Michigan today at 6 p.m. in Ann Arbor before taking on Michigan State in East Lansing, Mich., Saturday at 7 p.m. Both times are CDT.

On Iowa: The Hawkeyes are perched at the .500 mark with an 8-8 record overall and a 4-4 mark in Big Ten play. Iowa is riding a three-match losing streak — its longest since beginning the year 0-3. However, all three losses have come at the hands of nationally ranked opponents: No. 10 Wisconsin, No. 8 Minnesota and No. 11 Ohio State. Iowa sits alone at sixth place in the Big Ten.

The Wolverines are 12-6 overall, but only 3-5 in conference play, which ties them with Indiana for seventh. The Wolverines feature a versatile player in Nicole Kacor, who has 227 kills to lead the team and also ranks third in the Big Ten with 3.53 digs per game.

On Michigan State: Iowa faces yet another ranked opponent in the No. 20 Spartans. Michigan State is tied with Penn State for fourth place in the conference with a 12-5 overall record and a 5-3 state in the conference. Michigan State ranks second in the league in hitting percentage (.260) and fourth in blocks per game (3.44).

Coach's comment: "We're peaking right now," said Rita Buck-Crockett. "We need to go ahead now because the teams we are playing are already at their max. We need to start capitalizing when we get the chances to do so."

— by Todd Brommelkamp

Field hockey

This weekend: The Iowa field hockey team is on the road for the last time of the regular season. The Hawks (8-7 overall, 1-3 Big Ten) make it a Big Ten weekend, with two conference games back to back. Saturday Iowa faces off against Northwestern on Saturday at 2 p.m. Game time is set for noon for the Oct. 22 game against Indiana.

Iowa keys: Splitting a pair of road games last weekend, the Hawks were led by Gina Carr, whose hat trick against Central Michigan on Sunday cleared a shutout 6-0. UI junior back Tiffany Fodera returned to the Iowa lineup at the Temple Invitational on Sept. 10 and leads the team with seven goals and 14 points.

On Northwestern: The Wildcats are 5-10 overall (1-3 Big Ten) and are coming off a win against Southwest Missouri. Northwestern is led by junior back Nicole Smith, who has 17 points on seven goals and three assists.

On Indiana: The Hoosiers are in their first season of field hockey since 1982 and are 1-7 overall (0-3 Big Ten). Brooke Magers is leading Indiana with five points on two goals and one assist.

Coach's comment: "Northwestern will be a tough team, and one much improved from the beginning of the season. We will need to play a tough game to be successful. We're looking to raise our level of execution inside our offensive 25."

"Physically, we need to play two back to back games on the road with trace relentlessness," said head coach Tracey Griesbaum.

SPORTS BRIEF

McSorley gets hearing with NHL

NEW YORK (AP) — Marty McSorley had his day in court. Now he's set to talk about rejoining the NHL.

McSorley, who earlier this month was convicted of assault with a weapon for hitting another player with his stick during a game, has been granted a meeting with NHL Commissioner Gary Bettman regarding his reinstatement.

"Yes," league spokesman Frank Brown said Thursday when asked if McSorley contacted the NHL. "A meeting has been scheduled, and no other details will be divulged. The commissioner will issue a ruling when he has resolved the matter."

McSorley, then of the Boston Bruins, was suspended for the final 23 games of last season after striking Vancouver's Donald Brashear in the head with a two-handed swing of his stick. The 17-year veteran is still under suspension and needs Bettman's approval before he would be cleared to resume his career. McSorley is an unrestricted free agent.

McSorley, 37, testified in his trial that he didn't intend to hit Brashear in the head in the Feb. 21 game. He contends he was instead trying to hit him in the shoulder to provoke him into fighting.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Implement your creative ideas in your home-renovation plans. You will come into money through rebates, surrenders or some hidden asset that you've had sitting for some time.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Romantic involvement will lead to a serious union. You should make plans that concern your future together. Travel should be on your agenda.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may need to put in some overtime at work. Be professional, and your employer will favor you. Joint financial ventures will not be as lucrative as you are led to believe.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Self-deception regarding relationships will cause heartache. You need to get some sound advice from someone who cares about your emotional well-being.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Problems with co-workers will get out of hand. Gossip will lead to a poor reputation. Put some time and effort into making your home environment better.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You can ask for favors today. Use your connections to get ahead. Your communication skills will help others to see things your way. Persuasion will be your best asset.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your situation on the home front will be volatile. You must be honest with yourself as well as with your mate. Escapist tendencies may lead to confrontations.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Educational pursuits will lead you in an unusual direction. Your beliefs and attitudes may be changing in a more spiritual direction. Meditation will be enlightening.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take care of those less fortunate than yourself. You can make excellent financial deals. Changes in your domestic scene will be helpful to your emotional outlook.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Love interests will be plentiful if you become involved in groups that you truly believe in. You will be able to form partnerships that are lasting and advantageous from a business standpoint.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Sudden changes at work may leave you a little confused. Acceptance will be the key. You may want to start looking for a new job. Doors that you least expect will open.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You need to plan social activities that will enable you to meet stimulating friends and a potential lover. Your desire to experience unusual things will lead you to unique forms of entertainment.

How to score at the bars

- Ask people if they've seen the valet. Complain that he parked your Lamborghini in the wrong spot.
- Casually mention the hot tub that was installed in your apartment last weekend.
- Complain that "owning this bar is actually kind of a hassle."
- Girls: Tell guys wistfully that you "just don't have anybody to confide in about football and hockey."
- Guys: Same thing in reverse, but be sure to use "Friends" and Bette Midler.
- Grow a mustache and introduce yourself as Tom Selleck (not advisable for girls).
- Use an accent — any accent.
- Ask people if they happen to know your uncle, Bill Gates.
- Guys: Introduce yourself to women as Larry Bandera, Antonio's brother.
- Girls: Introduce yourself as Lucy Roberts, Julia's cousin.
- Hey, baby, my name's Jesse. What's yours?

Iowa vs. Ohio State

Battling the Big Ten

FROM THE EDITOR

Iowa 'fans' will regret actions in next few years

After I saw the score of the Oklahoma-Kansas State game last weekend, I knew what was going to happen — people were going to bring out the whole Bob Stoops thing all over again.

Jeremy Schnitker

I have to admit, at first I thought it would be a great story idea. Write another column wondering why he isn't here, whine about how upset people should be that he isn't, and try to predict how much better Iowa would be doing if he were here.

But the more I thought about it, I realized that it is a point that really does not even need to be talked about — it's old news.

In fact, the only reason I'm even talking about it now is to explain why it doesn't need to be talked about.

Hawkeye fans, you have a great coach right now in Kirk Ferentz, and I think it's a shame that so many are already giving up on him.

Sure, Iowa isn't that good of a football team right now — the Hawks have only won one game so far and might not win another this year. But you know what? Ferentz knows this. He knows this team has a long way to go, and it bothers him.

He thinks about it every day, he probably loses sleep over it every night. He's felt pressure since he's stepped foot on campus, and he still feels it now.

The average Hawkeye fans don't see that, though. Instead, they like to talk about a guy who used to play here and supposedly picked the Oklahoma head coaching job over Iowa because Bob Bowlsby and Ann Rhodes didn't offer the job to him soon enough.

Has it ever occurred to anybody that Stoops maybe didn't want to come to Iowa? That the talent and recruiting base he had down in Oklahoma is twice what Iowa's is? Maybe he didn't even consider Iowa at all.

Obviously, he didn't want to coach at Iowa that badly, so forget him, Iowa fans. I did two years ago.

Iowa fans, now's the time for you to show support — when the team is down and wins are few and far between. This is the perfect time for fans to rally around these players, give them support and pray for them to get better.

Sell out Kinnick every Saturday to give recruits a reason to be excited and see the potential in this Iowa program.

Don't call up radio and TV shows bashing Iowa players and coaches.

Instead, keep sending I-Club checks so Kirk Ferentz has a facility that kids from all over will want to play in.

Folks, I understand losing sucks. Writing about a losing team isn't a whole lot of fun, either. But what good is anybody doing cursing and booing a group of people that puts more time and heart into this university than just about any student and many faculty members.

Hawkeye fans are at a crossroads right now. Either stick around, or jump ship.

A warning to all of you fans who skip ship, though — when Iowa goes to a bowl game in a few years, you're going to look like real chumps when you come crawling back.

Doyle raises bar for players in strength program

Chris Doyle has gained the respect of the Hawks and is gaining national attention for his work.

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

Amid the lines of dumbbells, squat racks and medicine balls sits a man and a gray rock.

The man is Chris Doyle, Iowa football's strength and conditioning coach, and with one win this season, his team put a chip in the rock. He wants them to break it, figuratively speaking.

As a demand/program, that rock symbolizes our becoming a championship program," Doyle said. "One win doesn't make us a championship program, but I certainly believe we are headed in the right direction."

The strength and conditioning program is an important element in building an elite-level team. Blazing the trail at Iowa is the spirited and knowledgeable Doyle. Prior to joining the Hawkeyes, he served as an assistant at Syracuse, Notre Dame and Wisconsin before breaking into the head coaching circuit at Utah.

In 1999, he joined head coach Kirk Ferentz's staff and immediately left his handprint on the Big Ten, earning the conference's Strength Coach of the Year Award despite Iowa's 1-10 record.

One early Wednesday morning spent in the music-blaring, chain-clanging weight room makes it clear why the Hawkeyes continue to reap the benefits of Doyle's presence.

The bald-headed former Boston University offensive lineman strolls among the 8:30 a.m. group, the last of his morning sessions, as they squat and bench. He has fun with the guys, but he's the coach and expects the same attitude in the weight room as his colleagues expect on the field.

"We believe in a demand/confront mentality," he said. "If they don't do what we demand, we confront them."

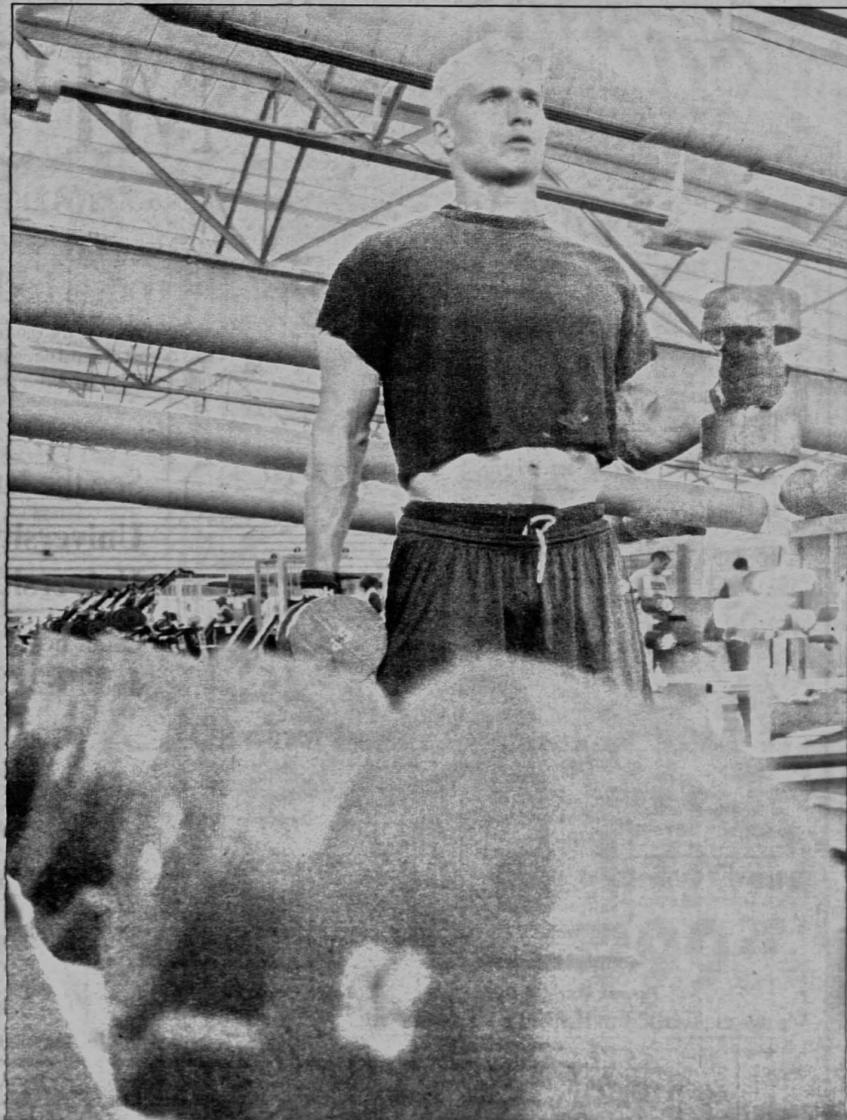

This tough-minded commitment to strength and conditioning has increased Iowa's average weight by 10 pounds, while slightly dropping the players' average body fat. The personal approach Doyle and his staff of James Dobson, Bob Miller and Scott Pospisil use has left Iowa players hungry to put plates on the bars.

"One of the things I live by is that people don't care how much you know until they know how much you care," Doyle said. "First and foremost, if that kid walks through the door and thinks you don't give a hoot about him, he's going to see through that real quick, and you are going to have an awful lot of trouble getting that athlete to do anything."

"If they walk through that door and know there's somebody on the other side that has a passion about helping them become a better player, it's going to be pretty easy to motivate them."

Despite the clear advantages of a strength program, many colleges, including Iowa, haven't always stressed its importance, especially during the season. Junior Aaron Kampman said four or five years ago, the attention was directed towards simple maintenance and light lifting here and there during the year.

The passive attitude that was generally taken toward implementing a rigid strength program reflected both the lack of knowledge and infancy within the field. Doyle said the first college strength program emerged only 20 years ago, so his area of study continues to evolve. With the recent construction of Iowa's 10,000-square-foot facility, the university has provided the Hawkeyes with the necessary tools to curl and flex with the country's elite.

Doyle said the Hayden Fry Football Complex is the finest facility he's worked in, and it coincides with Iowa's commitment to building a winning football team.

And while the number of wins — two — equals his years spent in Iowa mesh shorts, he's impressed with the Hawkeyes' ability to consistently show up focused in his so-called office.

"We talk to them about being a thermostat, not a thermometer," Doyle said. "A thermostat responds to the climate. It can be set at 68 degrees and stay at 68 degrees. Regardless of what's happening on the field, they have to come in and stay on task."

Kampman is one of many poster children for the benefits of both a high level of dedication and a well-organized strength program. Following his sophomore season, he moved from linebacker to defensive line. Doyle was called in to help with the transition and subsequent adjustments. He and his staff first addressed the needs of the position and of Kampman. His lean body mass came on easily, and now they are continuing to drive up his lower body power and explosiveness.

The reward? Kampman recorded 16 tackles, a blocked field goal and his first career

Buckeyes will shake Hawks in fourth quarter

Barb Woods, Iowa line-backer LeVar Woods' mother, told me this week that she had a good feeling about Saturday's game against No. 14-ranked Ohio State.

Now, I know that parents can be a little too optimistic about games their kids play in, but after I did some studying on this Ohio State team, I began to wonder if she might be right.

Will the Hawkeyes win? Well, I'm not going to go that far, but I think they will play better and maybe, just maybe, pull an upset. But don't put me down for $100 on the Hawkeyes — I have to admit this Buckeye team is pretty solid.

It has team speed everywhere. On defense, the Buckeyes are so fast it's scary.

Their offense has speed, too. Ken-Yon Rambo is a gamebreaker, along with fellow receiver Reggie Germany. Jonathan Wells and Derek Combs are solid at running back.

The Buckeyes will head into Iowa City talented and also angry. They saw their hopes at an undefeated season and possibly a chance at the national title dashed last Saturday when they were beaten by Minnesota, 29-17.

As for the Hawks, they may not match up with Ohio State that well, but they will play better than they did last week at Illinois.

They've got a home crowd and it's Parents Weekend. The Michigan State win two weeks ago showed that home field is definitely an advantage for these Hawkeyes.

The thing that really stands out this week isn't that Iowa is really that good — it's that Ohio State isn't as good as people probably think it is.

Despite all the talent the Buckeyes have, they really haven't moved the ball exceptionally well. They rank eighth in the Big Ten in total offense

3 DOWN TO GO	BALL ON 2

with 364 yards per game. Iowa ranks 10th with 310 per game.

That's very average for a team that consistently gets the best recruits in the country.

Ohio State's rushing defense leads the Big Ten, but that doesn't matter. Iowa hasn't run on anybody all year, so what does it matter how good the opposing team's rushing defense is? Iowa is used to having no running attack.

However, on pass defense, the Buckeyes are in the middle of the Big Ten pack as far as statistics go. And when you're playing Iowa, you have to be prepared to stop the pass.

I don't necessarily think Iowa is going to win this game.

I've seen a lot of good Hawkeye teams get pummeled by the Buckeyes — they have owned Iowa the past five years. But, I don't think the game is going to be a total blowout.

The Hawkeyes will have relative success throwing the ball, as long as they can pick up the blitzes that will likely come in hordes.

Iowa's defense probably won't play that well, but it didn't play well against Michigan State, and the Hawks still found a way to win.

Special teams will be the key and both teams have good ones. Ohio State's is a little more deep, and the Buckeyes don't depend on it as much as Iowa does — that, I think, will be the difference.

The Hawkeyes will hang on as they have in most games this year, and it will be an exciting game for three quarters. But the Buckeyes, with superior talent and speed, will prevail.

LEVAR WOODS

Woods finds success on, off field

■ From a small town in Iowa to the bright lights of the Big Ten, LeVar Woods has adjusted well.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

When you get on the topic of her son LeVar, Barb Woods likes to talk a lot.

She likes to talk about her son's first trip to Iowa City and how he thought it was too big and he didn't want to go, but she talked him into it.

She likes to talk about how good the small town of Inwood, Iowa, was to her son and daughter, despite their being a different color of nearly everyone else in town.

She talks about how she loves to watch her son play defense, even though LeVar says she wanted him to be a receiver when he was a kid.

She doesn't mind that her kid is engaged at such an early age — she feels her son is mature enough for it.

As for the NFL, well, she thinks her son has a chance. And just like he gave Iowa, she hopes he gives it a shot.

Don't let all of this make you think that Barb Woods is a fanatic mother that likes to brag about her kid whenever she gets the chance, though. Any other parent would probably say the same things about LeVar — her son is that good of a kid, and it shows in a lot of areas.

On the football field, he's arguably the best player on Iowa's defense. He is currently the leading tackler on Iowa's team with 58, nine for a loss. He's big, he's fast, and he's as tenacious as any linebacker in the Big Ten.

Off the field, he's a quite, mild-mannered kid that recently got engaged and is on the way to earning a teaching degree.

On and off the field, he's a leader that people like to associate themselves with.

"I've said this before — off

Brett Roseman/The Daily Iowan

Iowa defensive lineman LeVar Woods (97) helps Mikel Brown tackle Kansas State wide receiver Martez Wesley earlier this season.

the field, you tell guys if you want to be like somebody, be like LeVar," head coach Kirk Ferentz said. "LeVar is one of those guys that what he has, he gives every week."

"From a playing standpoint, effort standpoint, leadership standpoint — what a tremendous young man."

Whoa, that's a football coach now — it's not often that a player gets that type of praise from his coach, especially during the season.

Most coaches are worried about a guy's head getting too big, but obviously Ferentz doesn't worry about that kind of stuff with LeVar.

As for the players — like mom and coach — they have nothing but good things to say about LeVar too.

"He's like my big brother — I mean, that sounds corny, but he's always there to show me anything," said Woods's backup at outside linebacker, Grant Steen. "He's a down-to-earth guy. Last semester, he was a student teacher; he gets along with all types of people. I don't think there's anybody in the locker room that could say that they've ever had problems with LeVar."

Well, there's one that does. In fact there's a guy in the locker room that hates Woods — well, at least he used to.

Teammate Roger Meyer had a strong dislike for Woods when the two were the studs on rival high schools West Lyon and Central Lyon.

According to the two, their dislike had a lot to do with what other people thought they should be like. The two

"LeVar Woods ... my archival in high school," Meyer said with a smile, when answering a question at Tuesday's press conference.

Archival? What kind of person can hate this guy that everybody loves? Folks, it's called small-town high school football. You don't have to know somebody on a rival's team to hate him — it's just a given that you do.

"I couldn't stand him in high school," Woods said of Meyer. "I honestly didn't know him, it was just the aura of Roger Meyer and West Lyon vs. Central Lyon."

Of course, he's only joking. Of Sports Editor Jeremy Schnitker can be reached at: jschnitk@blue.weeg.uiowa.edu think it was kind of foolish, looking back at it now.

"We didn't get along in the public's eye," Meyer said. "But we didn't know any better, either. The rivalry, what other people thought."

They get along just fine now, and both will be starting this Saturday against Ohio State — Meyer at middle linebacker.

The high school football stuff is all in the past. Now LeVar's concerns are his fiancée, graduating and trying to get some wins for this Hawkeye football team.

Barb Woods says that's what makes her so proud of her son. He's grown up and become into a great person.

When she looks at some of the kids that didn't leave Inwood, Iowa, she sees how much more mature her son has become.

"He's really aged — that's why I'm not worried about his engagement," Barb Woods said. "That's what I like about him being in Iowa City — he's really grown up down there."

With the season over half-way through, talk about him moving on to the NFL has been brought up, and rightfully so.

He has the size and physical tools to play in the NFL. Iowa linebackers coach Brett Bielema says the NFL situation is what LeVar makes of it.

"It really is a lot based on the person involved and the situation he's thrown into," Bielema said. "There are a lot of guys who maybe they aren't supposed to make it, but maybe they get into a camp and catch a break here or there."

"There's a lot of luck involved in addition to hard work and perseverance, which he controls."

Until the NFL chance comes, Woods will be finishing his playing days in Kinnick and listening to his mom's advice — sometimes even at midfield.

"She was my father figure growing up, because I didn't have one," LeVar said. "Now I'll hear her name, and I'll catch her in the stands yelling at me, telling me to be more aggressive, or use your hands more."

"I try to take do some of the stuff she says and pay attention to it, but sometimes I think she's a little off her rocker."

Of course, he's only joking.

THIS WEEK IN THE BIG TEN
High-risk weekend for top three conference powers

Melinda Mawdsley

Five schools sit atop the Big Ten standings at 3-1, including surprising Northwestern and Minnesota, but as Week 5 unfolds, the better teams in the conference are beginning to emerge. Purdue's offense is clicking, and Michigan's defense is coming together, leaving them and the other three schools no room for error if they want to smell the roses on New Year's Day. Northwestern has the conference's bye-week, so here is what's on tap for the weekend.

Michigan State at No. 16 Michigan
 Michigan made a great offensive Indiana team look horrible in its 58-0 dumping of the Hoosiers Oct. 14. IU came into the game averaging more than 30 points a game behind the slick and quick Antwaan Randle El, but the former Heisman hopeful was contained in every aspect of his game, while the Hoosier defense, the worst in the Big Ten, had no answers for Michigan quarterback Drew Hensen and the wild Wolverines.

This week Michigan hosts MSU, the cross-state rival; however, the Spartans are playing anything but warriorlike, sitting in the conference basement at 0-3. MSU handed Michigan a three-point loss last season, but this year, the Spartans will be lucky to even get a field goal.

Michigan 48, Michigan State 10
No. 17 Purdue at Wisconsin
 Since Wisconsin's 47-44 loss to Northwestern to open the Big Ten season, the Badgers have scored a combined 34 points in their last three games. Last week, backup quarterback Jim Sorgi replaced Brooks Bollinger, after the latter suffered a concussion; and Wisconsin finally got its first Big Ten win. Not to take away from Sorgi's efforts or the Badger defense, but the win was over the offensively clueless Spartans. The fun is over.

Purdue 34, Wisconsin 21
No. 22 Minnesota at Indiana
 Minnesota beat a great but overrated Ohio State team last Saturday in Columbus. However, the Golden Gophers did prove they can win on the road in a hostile environment.

Too bad, then, that Memorial Stadium is not hostile. Indiana is struggling to get 32,000 fans in the stands. That, coupled with the beginning of basketball season and its new open practices, won't help, but the IU football team is used to playing in the Assembly Hall shadows.

Every week there's an upset in the Big Ten. This game will be the one. Indiana is not going to be held scoreless for two straight games and will figure Randle El is working extra hard to rally his troops.

Indiana 35, Minnesota 31
Illinois at Penn State
 Penn State leads this series, 8-1, including a 27-7 win last year in Champaign, but the Nittany Lions are doing anything but putting up glasses and toasting this season. Consistently a powerhouse, the mighty Nittany Lions are 2-5 overall and 1-2 in the Big Ten after being ranked as high as No. 2 in the country last year.

But Illinois is 1-2 as well, and its lone win came on Oct. 14 against Iowa. The Fighting Illini did put together both a great defensive effort, led by Big Ten Defensive Player of the Week Fred Wakefield, and an efficient offensive performance in the 31-0 win.

Penn State had two weeks to prepare for Illinois and forget about its loss to Minnesota. Penn State legend Joe Paterno is still five wins away from breaking Bear Bryant's record for most Division I head coaching victories, and it appears he will stay stuck on 319 wins for yet another week.

OHIO STATE

No. 14 Buckeyes hungry for win in Iowa City

■ Despite a loss to Minnesota, Ohio State still hopes for a Big Ten Championship.

By Nick Firchau
The Daily Iowan

Just when it looked as if things couldn't get any crazier in the Big Ten this season, another surprising score flashed across the bottom of nationwide TV screens last Saturday.

The Minnesota Golden Gophers rolled into Columbus last weekend and dumped the Ohio State Buckeyes from the undefeated ranks with a 29-17 upset, the first Gopher win at OSU since 1949. The Gophers (5-2 overall, 3-1 Big Ten) took a share of the conference lead with equally surprising Northwestern and No. 16 Michigan.

The Buckeyes have since dropped six spots in the Associated Press poll to No. 14, where they will stand as they head into Iowa City this weekend to face a Hawkeye team that last week plummeted back down to Earth after a 31-0 drubbing at the hands of Illinois. Iowa upset No. 25 Michigan State on Oct. 7, 21-16.

"All champions have to bounce back after setbacks, and this is what we feel this was — a setback," said OSU sophomore linebacker Matt Wilhelm. "We still have the same goals in mind. We want to win a Big Ten championship and make a BCS bowl game. These are both No. 1 on our list."

Ohio State head coach John Cooper said his team was "a little big-headed" heading into the game with the Golden Gophers, and the outcome was devastating to the team.

"It was a long weekend for the football Buckeyes. We did not have a very good ball game, to say the least," said Cooper, whose Buckeyes now stand at 5-1 overall and 2-1 in the Big Ten. "I'm embarrassed at the way we played. That's one of the worst games we've played in a long, long time around here."

The Buckeyes couldn't have asked for a better remedy to the conference's recurring upset blues. They will face an Iowa team that has won only one of its last 15 conference games and two of its last 14 games at Kinnick Stadium, dating back to 1998.

"With the Big Ten, nothing is an automatic," Wilhelm said. "Some people might have thought Minnesota was an automatic win, but they came in here and beat our tails all over in our hometown. Iowa may come at a good time with us being down just a little. I can't say they come at a great time, but I think they come at a nice time for us because we've had a letdown."

Cooper echoed these sentiments, saying Iowa is "certainly not the most talented team we will play, obviously." After reviewing film of the Hawkeyes' one win and six losses, the OSU squad sounds unthreatened by a possible Iowa upset similar to the Hawkeyes' win over Michigan State.

"I don't worry about Iowa as much as I worry about our football team," Cooper said.

The Buckeyes have little to worry about. They come into the Iowa game averaging just over 30 points a game on offense while allowing only 14.2 per game. Their opponents, however, have been less than stellar. The team's biggest win came 23-7 at Wisconsin, a team which has not lived up to high preseason expectations.

The team's offense, which posts an average of 364.3 yards per game, is anchored by three players. Junior quarterback Steve Bellisari has put up 167.5 yards a game in the air on 62-122 passing with seven touchdowns this season. He lit up Arizona for 240 yards and two touchdowns in a 27-17 Buckeye win on Sept. 9 but was held to just 130 yards last week in the Minnesota loss.

A big key to the Buckeyes' loss last week was the absence of senior tailback Derek Combs, who missed the game because of an ankle injury. Combs is the team's leading rusher with 491 yards on 82 attempts this season with three touchdowns, including an 80-yard touchdown dash without his right shoe in the win over Wisconsin. He is expected to return from his injury and start against the Hawkeyes.

In the loss to Minnesota, the Golden Gophers pinned 381 yards of total offense on the OSU defense and turned the ball over only once.

Following the loss to Minnesota, in which both the team's offense and defense looked uncharacteristically bad, a win at Iowa is essential for Cooper and OSU to rebound in the Big Ten. Following the Iowa match-up they will travel to Purdue and Illinois and will host Michigan State. The Buckeyes' final game of the season at home against Michigan may decide the Big Ten champion in a wildly unpredictable season.

"There are a lot of good teams," Cooper said. "I think the past few weeks have proven anything can happen in this league. The team at the bottom can beat the best team in the league. You don't take anything for granted, and you work hard. You give it your best shot in practice. Certainly, we need to play with a lot more emotion than we did last week."

BLACK & GOLD BLOWOUT

Hawks ready to swoop, soar

■ The Hawkeyes will play in their first scrimmage of the season after Iowa's football game Saturday.

By Mike Kelly
The Daily Iowan

Saturday will be Hawkeye fans' first chance to see Iowa basketball's top-rated recruiting class in action — well, sort-of action.

Carver-Hawkeye Arena will host the team's annual intrasquad scrimmage, the Black and Gold Blowout, 45 minutes after the football Hawkeyes finish their gridiron battle with Ohio State.

For freshmen Brody Boyd and Jared Reiner, the scrimmage will be a baptism of fire for the former small-town residents, even though it is in pale comparison with what is to come when the Big Ten's finest stroll into Iowa City.

"Jared and Brody get into this competition about whose town had more things in it," UI junior forward Rod Thompson said. "So Division-

I basketball will definitely be a change for them."

Expect all the Hawkeyes to see action in the intrasquad game, but expect the guard tandem of four-year-starter Dean Oliver and Arizona transfer Luke Recker to see action on the same squad.

Iowa coach Steve Alford said at the Iowa Media Day the two worked incessantly over the summer together in order to get used to each other's styles and habits.

"Luke always complains when he is not on my team," Oliver said. "He should be one of many guys who will pick up some of the scoring slack this season."

Recker is not the only new face in Iowa's backcourt. Former Kentucky player Ryan Hogan is eligible to play this season after sitting out a mandatory year after transferring. Hogan earned a national championship ring with the Wildcats in 1998, playing sparingly.

Alford said he expects Hogan, along with Boyd, to contribute valuable minutes in the wake of Kyle Galoway's departure and Rob Griffin's dismissal over the summer.

Another position that is up for grabs is small forward. Alford said one of his team's strongest assets is having so many players that can play both the inside game and take the ball outside and utilize their agility and shooting touch.

Freshman Glen Worley and Courtney Scott, as well as returning Hawkeyes Duez Henderson, Rod Thompson and Joe Fermino, can all play the "three" position depending on which lineup Alford chooses to put out.

Alford said he is comfortable with having so many new faces on his roster because that is how he envisioned his second year.

"When we got here, there was an empty recruiting class," he said. "We knew that we had to have a big class. We will never go below the NCAA limit when it comes to how many times we can be on the road recruiting."

Brett Roseman/The Daily Iowan

Senior Dean Oliver returns to Iowa's squad this year as one of the premier point guards in the Big Ten.

After the Black and Gold Blowout, the Hawkeyes have three weeks before the exhibition season starts with a game against Athletics in Action on Nov. 10.

BASKETBALL SUPPORT/STRENGTH PROGRAM

Special to the DI
 Iowa players Jason Smith and Jared Reiner wait for the Hawkeyes before Iowa's contest with Michigan State Oct. 7.

Hoop stars greet team every Saturday

■ The basketball team is practicing, but its support remains strong for its counterparts.

By Jeremy Schnitker
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa football team may not be getting love from a lot of people right about now.

The Hawkeyes are 1-6 and have only won two games in the past two seasons. Ticket sales are down, and fewer games are being televised as the season progresses. But, around the university, one group of fel-las has been giving this team all the love it needs.

The superfans have been the Hawkeye basketball team, and they've been giving their support since day one.

"We have a couple guys that live with football players," forward Duez Henderson said. "Before every home game, we have a tailgate. When they run out on the field, we're right there."

It's not much of a surprise that these guys would be close — they spent time in the dorms together as freshmen, probably living on the same floor in Slater Residence Hall. Defensive tackle Jerry Montgomery currently lives with Iowa guard Dean Oliver.

Many grew up together in the same state — junior-college transfer Reggie Evans has his "Florida boys," as he calls them. Defensive back

Program thrives with strong staff

■ Three assistants help teach Chris Doyle's strength and conditioning program at UI.

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa strength and conditioning coach Chris Doyle received praise for his improvements to the Iowa football program. Then he promptly passed it along to his three assistant coaches.

"Our staff has great interpersonal skills. They are great teachers, and they are where the tire meets the road," he said. "They are in here grinding everyday, and the positive relationships they've developed are seen in the positive feedback we've gotten from our strength and conditioning."

Like Doyle, James Dobson is in his second year of the Iowa strength program. Doyle and Dobson first worked together at Wisconsin, where Dobson served as a student assistant for three seasons after graduating with a degree in kinesiology. Dobson then moved on to serve as the assistant strength coach at Southern Methodist University from 1996-98 before joining Iowa's staff to help implement the new system.

"The players have definitely bought into the program, and it's grown leaps and bounds," he said. "They accept the challenges every day and take them in stride."

Physical improvement evident in team

interception on Oct. 7. He earned Big Ten Defensive Player of the Week honors in just his sixth game at the position.

"Obviously, he's helped me put on weight and gain muscle," Kampman said. "I've gotten stronger and faster, and all those things help on the football field."

Kampman's performance is a highlight reel for Doyle's philosophy of increasing speed, change of direction and vertical jump, along with strength. In the off season, Iowa players train twice daily, dedicating roughly 40 percent of their time to weightlifting. The other 60 percent is spent in position-specific drills and development. During the season, the workload decreases for the two-deep roster, as the players focus more on game preparation, but the intensity is undoubtedly maintained.

Brett Roseman/The Daily Iowan
 The four men responsible for Iowa's strength and conditioning program, (from left) Chris Doyle, Bob Miller, Scott Pospisil and James Dobson, work with the team daily in the Hayden Fry Complex.

Bob Miller also worked alongside Doyle. When Doyle accepted the Utah head strength coach position, Miller served as his assistant coach. Prior to his time at Utah and Iowa, Miller also worked with the strength program at Yale University from 1993-97. At Iowa, he is serving as a graduate assistant while he pursues his master's degree in sports psychology.

The final member of Doyle's highly esteemed and respected staff is former Hawkeye defensive lineman Scott Pospisil. Pospisil, a native of Mount Vernon, joined the Hawkeye program as a walk-on in 1996, earned defensive scout team Player of the Year in 1998 and was named a defensive team captain his senior year, starting six of Iowa's 11 games.

As a training member of the new Hawkeye program for one year under Doyle, Pospisil grew close with the staff and was a perfect addition to the team after former assistant Tony Williams left for the Chicago Bears.

Pospisil said the transition from player to coach has not been difficult because he's familiar with both Doyle's philosophies and the system.

"I really like this program, so it's easy to teach," he said.

The confidence comes from improvement and results, which Iowa is seeing. Now those results need to follow the Hawkeyes from between the walls of the weight room to between the lines on the field.

"I think he has done a great job motivating our players," Ferentz said. "What he's asked them to do, they've bought into. They see the value in it. We're just starting the process here, but we're certainly a more physical team this year than we were a year ago."

And Coach Doyle's rule: The more physical team wins on Saturday.

Hawks still battling

Things haven't been so great for the Iowa football team lately, except for its win over Michigan State two weeks ago on Oct. 7.

The Hawkeyes are 1-6, last in the Big Ten conference standings and last in Big Ten defense. But some new faces in the crowd have given some excitement to this team.

Iowa is starting seven freshmen Saturday: Jon Beutjer, Chris Smith, Jonathan Babineaux, Benny Sapp, Sam Aiello, Robert Gallery and Nate Kaeding.

While their youth has showed at times, these young guys have played well considering the daunting task of being a freshman on a Big Ten team. Beutjer played exceptionally well against Indiana and Michigan State before having a less-than-stellar outing last week at Illinois.

Kaeding has been perfect in his extra-point attempts. Smith lead the team in tackles in the Illinois game.

Iowa has also received solid play from its older players. Receiver Kevin Kasper is having a great year. He leads the Big Ten in receptions. Kahlil Hill leads the conference in kick returns, and Ladell Betts is closing in on what could be his first 1,000 yard season as a Hawkeye. Iowa has taken its hits — from some big-time teams, but they continue to come back and play every week. — by Jeremy Schnitker
