Public Safety warns of magazine scam

Iowa State University was hit recently by a magazine-solicitation sting, an official says.

By Ryan Foley
 The Daily Iowan

A UI Public Safety officer wants students and others to be ready if a high-pressure magazine solicitation scam — which recently hit the Iowa State University campus — comes to Iowa City.

According to Officer Brad Allison, the scam goes like this:

One man, or a few men, approaches a female student on campus and asks her to fill out a survey, which includes her address and home phone number. As a gift for taking the survey, they tell the woman that she can select two free magazines. Once the student signs the survey after selecting the magazines, she is immediately asked to pay $40 and is threatened if she doesn't. In some cases, the men say they will show up at the woman's residence to get the money.

At ISU, two men allegedly posing as magazine salesmen in the residence halls — Nathan Turner, 19, and Joshua Moran, 21, both of California — were charged with criminal trespass on Oct. 14. Turner was also charged with assault after several women reported he touched them inappropriately.

The two men, decked out in college apparel, were going door-to-door on a late Saturday night in the residence halls, asking women to fill out a survey, according to police reports. They would let the women select two magazines and then demand some form of payment — which included money, car keys or "hugs and kisses," according to reports.

Allison, who specializes in crime prevention, released six tips Thursday through the UI Web site on what students approached by a magazine salesman should do. Public Safety will also put those tips on the "crime alert" section of its Web site. Allison stressed that students should report incidents of solicitation to Public Safety at 335-5022.

Allison said he learned about the scams Wednesday through a law-enforcement list-serve.

"We wanted to make students aware of what's going on and tell them what they can do," he said. While magazine solicitation has happened over the years at the UI, Public Safety has not received complaints — recently or otherwise — about a scam or threats, he said.

Solicitation on the UI campus is against the university policy.

Iowa City resident Bridgett Weis said she let a magazine salesman into her off-campus apartment over the summer. Before she knew it, she was writing two separate checks for subscriptions to two magazines.

"He was a fast talker and pretty persuasive," she said. "Honestly, at the time, I did not think I had bought two maga-

Game over — PlayStation 2 sells out

Sony's hot new gaming console comes to town Thursday and sells out almost instantly.

By Tony Robinson
 The Daily Iowan

The Sony PlayStation 2 hit stores Thursday, but it didn't last long, with most stores selling out of the new gaming console in a matter of minutes.

Sony Computer Entertainment Inc. released 500,000 PlayStation 2's in North America at a retail price of $299, with buyers taking extreme measures to ensure that they returned home with a system.

Shoppers were frantic to purchase the game — Sony's expected shipment was cut in half because of a shortage of parts.

As a result of not knowing how many game systems would be shipped on the launch date, there were no local pre-orders for PlayStation 2, and businesses in the area had to develop methods to control crowds of gamers attempting to purchase a console.

"People have been selling them for $3,000 on the Internet, so you can imagine what they would have done if we had not controlled them," said Scott Williams, an electronics associate at Wal-Mart, 1001 Highway 1 W.

As a form of control, tickets guaranteeing a PlayStation 2 were given out to customers at Best Buy in the Coral Ridge Mall, where customers camped overnight to get a shot at roughly 100 consoles. They sold out in less than an hour, said operations manager Doug Cronbaugh.

UI freshman Kurt Meyeraan was one of the eager customers waiting in line at Best Buy and considered himself fortunate to have received ticket No. 44, which guaranteed him a system as he approached the register.

"I would have had to wait a minimum of several weeks if I hadn't gotten mine today, and

Defying Clinton, House OKs tax, spending bills

The president is almost certain to veto the two measures.

By Alan Fram
 Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Less than two weeks from Election Day, Republicans muscled a tax-cut package and a spending bill through the House Thursday, setting up a double-barreled veto showdown with President Clinton.

Abruptly enlivening the last days of a Congress that had been languidly inching toward adjournment, Clinton was poised to veto both measures in a sharply partisan confrontation over tax reductions, school construction, health care and immigration.

The pre-election tussle seemed likely to draw public attention to the final days of a simmering budget battle that for weeks had been drowned out by the neck-and-neck presidential race, a terrorist attack on a U.S. destroyer and a Middle East crisis.

The House voted 237-174, mostly along party lines, for a bill that would pare taxes by $240 billion over the next decade for some small businesses, people saving for retirement and others. The tally fell short of the 289 votes the House would need to overturn a veto if all 433 House members voted.

The measure also would boost the hourly minimum wage by $1 and roll back Medicare cuts imposed on health-care providers three years ago.

Later, the House, by a 206-198 vote, passed the spending bill, which would provide $39.9 billion for the new fiscal year for the departments of Commerce, Justice and State. It also would revamp immigration laws and disperse hun-

UI an overnight political mecca

Jesse Jackson and TV celebrities will be here to support Gore; Nader will speak at the IMU tonight.

By Kellie Doyle
 The Daily Iowan

Celebrities are swarming to Iowa City this weekend to speak in support of Democratic presidential candidate Al Gore — appearances that UI senior Emily Hajek, the Students for Gore, hopes will sway some votes.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson, former "Saturday Night Live" performer and political satirist Al Franken, actor/director Rob Reiner — who directed Princess Bride and The Story of Us — and West Wing actors Martin Sheen and Dulé Hill are all scheduled to speak to the public free of admission.

"This is unreal. I'm so excited," Hajek said. "Hopefully, people who come just for the entertainment of it will leave wanting to vote for Gore."

Each celebrity will speak about the election and its importance for students, said UI senior Hope Welander, the vice president of membership recruitment and outreach for the University Democrats.

"It's so perfect for the university to have these people come," she said. "We've seen Al Gore and Bill Bradley, but this is new and something we haven't been a part of before."

Franken and Jackson will be in the IMU Richey Ballroom today at noon with doors opening at 11:30 p.m. The event was previously scheduled to take place in the IMU Terrace Room, but the location was changed to the Richey Ballroom because it

Turning back time again

Daylight-saving time means an extra hour of sleep for some but a hassle for others.

By Bridget Stratton
 The Daily Iowan

One less hour of daylight, changing clocks' times and modified sleeping patterns have some UI students and a Florida-based group wishing to put an end to daylight-saving time.

Ric Feinberg, a spokesperson for the group, which does not have an official name, in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., started a Web site to end daylight-saving time, saying there is no reason to observe it anymore. Daylight-saving time is an inconvenience for people who do not have time to change their clocks and do not want their sleeping patterns altered because of the time change, he said.

"I like to play outside with my kids when I get home from work. But with the time change, when I get home from work at 5, it is already dark," Feinberg said.

Sheila Danzig of Florida

created the Web site after speaking with her co-workers, Feinberg said.

"Basically, the idea came from water cooler talk in the office. Since (Sheila Danzig's) company produces Web sites, it came at virtually no cost," he said.

On the site, www.standard-time.com, visitors can sign petitions to either end daylight-saving time, have daylight-saving time all year long or keep things the way they are.

At its busiest month, the site received 30,000 hits, and

Psychiatric care's darker side comes to UIHC

■ An art exhibit depicts the biases of psychiatric care in the 19th and 20th centuries.

By Andrew Bixby
The Daily Iowan

Wrenching and emotional personal information about patients staying in the Iowa State Psychopathic Hospital in the early 20th century inspired visual artist Marguerite Perret to dig deeper and join with exhibition designer Bruce Scherting to create a historical perception of Iowa's mentally ill.

Diagnostik, which draws its name from a study published by Swiss physician Hermann Rorschach in 1921, will be showcased until May 4 in Medical Museum Gallery B at the UI Hospitals and Clinics. The exhibit uses artifacts, photographs and text from collections of the UIHC Medical Museum to create original art works, Perret said.

"It's an opportunity for people to learn about the biases of psychopathic care in Iowa in the late 19th century and early 20th century," she said.

Electric-shock equipment, straitjackets and a wooden caged bed combine with diagrams of surgical procedures and digitally altered images of solemn-faced doctors and disturbed patients to create a diverse and provocative exhibit, Scherting said.

"A mixture of text, artifacts, and a PowerPoint slide show combine to create a provocative exhibit that allows (the visitor) to actually enter into the pieces," he said.

A major theme of the exhibit draws upon images from Rorschach's Inkblot test, which used random ink formations as psychological evaluations. Much of the artwork uses shapes based on the Inkblot to reveal, obscure and modify images of the Iowa State Psychopathic Hospital, Perret said.

Horrifying and ambiguous displays make Diagnostik somewhat of an uncomfortable experience for museum visitors, said Adrienne Drapkin, the director of the Medical Museum.

"To see how people were treated, what conditions they were put through and for what reasons they were admitted just really gives one a reason to pause," she said.

The Medical Museum galleries, located on the UIHC eighth floor, are open from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 1-4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. The museum opened in 1989 as an educational resource focusing on the progress of medicine and patient care, emphasizing the UI's role. All programs and exhibitions are free to the public.

Iowa City resident Judy Nichols, who holds a Ph.D. in psychology, said the exhibit was a real eye-opener that would appeal to UI students.

Jerry Hynes/The Daily Iowan

Brenda Lewis of Ravenwood, Mo., admires works of art at the opening reception of Diagnostik Thursday.

"Questioning authority and standards seems to be important to students," she said. "I think (Diagnostik) is a bit anti-establishment because it questions what madness and insanity really are."

Diagnostik is a history of psychiatry in the United States and Iowa that stretches and plays with medical conceits, Drapkin said.

"Mental illness is still a mystery," she said.

Comm-Sci Student group to present Korean Film Festival

■ Four features, including the most expensive ever made in the country, and six shorts will be shown.

By Amanda Gorsche
The Daily Iowan

The Korean Communication Studies Group of the UI (Kolors) is bringing a unique cultural experience to the university — the second Korean Film Festival, which will begin today and continue through Oct. 29.

This year's festival will exhibit four Korean feature-length films and six short films in Shambaugh Auditorium and the Becker Communication Studies Building.

"Most people don't know about contemporary culture in Korea," said Myung-Keun Lee, a UI senior and the Kolors president. "We want to share our culture with people at the UI who are interested in film."

UI sophomore and Kolors member Jin-Yong Yoo agreed with Lee about making mainstream Korean culture more available to Iowa City and UI students.

Two of the feature-length films are of the action genre while two are melodramas, Lee said.

Shiri, an action film focused on an agent of the intelligence service of South Korea, is the most expensive film ever made in the country. The 1999 film produced the biggest success in the Korean film market and surpassed the gross of American-made Titanic, Lee said.

Kolors began as a group of friends meeting weekly for fun, but soon the group developed the goal of providing an identity for Koreans in the United States. Because most of the members of Kolors are communication-studies majors with interests in film production, Lee said, they chose the film festival format to communicate their culture.

Hee-Eun Lee, a UI graduate student and Kolors member, said that when she moved to the United States, she was surprised by the lack of culture in the American film industry. Although Korea has a small market for films, she said, it is much more diverse than the U.S. market, especially in the Midwest.

"This is not just a film thing," she said. "This is a rare opportunity to experience Korean films and Korean culture."

By choosing a variety of popular and artistic films, Kolors hopes to entertain and show the diversity and dynamics within Korean culture, from traditional to modern culture.

The recent popularity of short films in Korea spurred Kolors to choose an abundance of short films ranging from 10-35 minutes for this year's festival, Hee-Eun Lee said. The subjects of the short films range from young beg-

Iowa businesses want more airline service

■ At a Grassley-sponsored seminar, Iowans ponder how to generate interest among airlines.

By Susan Stocum
Associated Press

AMES — Everyone from airport officials to airline executives, travel agents and travelers must be on board if an Iowa community wants to lure new flights, participants in an aviation seminar said Thursday.

"In attracting an airline, you need the business community to buy in, and you need support from all entities involved," said Barbara Sloniker, the director of airline marketing for the Chamber of Commerce in the Sioux City area. "It really is a community effort."

About 70 people representing Iowa airports, community economic development groups and several major airlines attended the seminar sponsored by Republican Sen. Charles Grassley.

The airport managers are "a part of the whole pie of economic development," Grassley said from Washington, where he had to stay behind for voting. "They're a very important piece, but they're only a piece. And they need to go back and sit down with the civic, political, business and labor leadership of the community and make sure they've got a unified approach."

Former Gov. Terry Branstad, who served 16 years as governor before stepping down in 1998, said he saw businesses reject Iowa because they didn't feel the state had adequate air service.

Since leaving office, one of Branstad's projects has been the Global Aviation Improvement Network, a national campaign for better air service in smaller cities to help them compete for business, tourism and development.

"Our problems are not unique to Iowa. There are many others," he said.

Iowa has 78 airports that are eligible for federal money. Of those, eight are classified as primary airports, meaning they serve more than 10,000 passengers a year.

Mike Fastenau of the Iowa Department of Economic Development said the agency has surveyed top executives of Iowa companies. Many believe that air travel is crucial for a company considering where to expand. And those executives, Fastenau said, think Iowa is lagging behind other states.

Jail proposal draws more fire from UI students

■ UI students and county residents discuss the proposed jail's effects on the younger population.

By Anne Webbeking
The Daily Iowan

Many UI students are joining the fight against the proposed new jail and trying to encourage their peers to vote against the jail bond referendum on Nov. 7.

Sarah Walker, a UI senior who is a member of Entrepreneurs Against a New Jail — the student organization that opposes the jail — spoke to a crowd of about 20 in the IMU

Terrace Room Thursday about the reasons people should vote against the jail.

First of all, the process used to get the jail issue on the ballot was unjust, she said. A committee of 12 citizens was selected to decide on the issue. No minorities or persons under age 42 were represented on the committee, which was two-thirds male, Walker said.

Walker's second reason for opposing the new jail is the fact that no alternatives were explored, she said. She mentioned alternatives, such as community-based substance-abuse treatment centers, more methods of rehabilitation and changes in the system, which would include just ticketing a person charged with public intoxication, possession of alcohol under the legal age or possession of marijuana, she said.

In Linn County, if someone is charged with public intoxication, he or she is ticketed and then a cab is sent to take him or her home. Nonviolent offenders are dealt with in different ways, and Walker would like to see this implemented in Johnson County, she said. "It's not just a citizen issue, it's a student issue," Walker said.

Students will see immediate implications, including increases in rent and also increases in prices in what businesses such as bars charge the consumer, usually students, she said.

Walker said she believes the extra room in the new jail would increase the number of tickets given to students for nonviolent crimes.

Carol deProse, a member of Citizens for Alternatives to the New Jail, said she has been researching the number of tickets for possession of alcohol under the legal age and public-intoxication tickets that have been given over the past year and she has recorded the names, ages, time and locations of these tickets.

She has found a pattern showing that most of the tickets were given downtown were to young people, she said.

"It made me mad because I used to be one of you," deProse said to the audience at the meeting of fewer than 20 people.

She urged the audience to vote against a new jail and not to give Iowa City police the means to ticket more students. She advised people not to drink and drive and also not to let police come into their houses or apartments without a warrant.

"You've got to be aware, and you've got to vote," deProse said. "So turn your ballot over and vote no."

On Nov. 6, Entrepreneurs Against a New Jail will hold a march starting at 12:20 p.m. from the steps of the Old Capitol. Opponents of the new jail will march through the Pedestrian Mall to the police station and then to the jail.

Joseph Milton, a UI senior with the group, said he will take part in the march and hopes other students will, too.

Students give mentor a final farewell

■ Ruth Schaefer, who opened her home and heart to Asian immigrants for years, is dead at 90.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

In a world where her Vietnamese heritage pulled her in one direction and assimilation beckoned from the other, UI senior Linh Ly could always depend on her mentor and friend Ruth Schaefer to lend a supportive ear. On the morning of Oct. 12, Ly spoke to Schaefer for the last time through a curtain of tears as the 90-year-old Iowa City resident lay unresponsive because of a breast-cancer relapse.

Ly, 20, took solace in knowing that Schaefer, a UI alumna, had achieved her goal of helping the local Vietnamese community as her time on Earth neared its end.

Ly knew that the woman who had tutored her every week since she was a child until the day she left for college was still listening.

"They say the last thing to go is hearing," she said. "I tried to talk, but it was hard. I was crying most of the time. I told her I loved her, she's touched so many lives, and I'm never going to meet someone like her again."

News of Schaefer's passing reached Ly later that evening and quickly circulated in the Vietnamese community, which had adopted the former high-school teacher as one of their own.

It was she who bridged the cultural gap and delivered literature and encouragement to Asian immigrants seeking political asylum in Iowa City during the aftermath of the Vietnam War. It was she who opened her home to families in need of shelter and, for the past 10 years, to UI Vietnamese students in need of living accommodations.

"When I first met her, I couldn't read a book," said UI junior Brian Ly, who was 12 then. "If it wasn't for her, I wouldn't be in college now."

At Schaefer's encouragement, his parents sent Brian Ly from Los Angeles to live in Iowa City with his aunt and learn English under her tutorial. The hourlong sessions were held every Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday.

Schaefer tutored several Vietnamese children in Iowa City and helped their families with daily needs, including transportation to doctor and dentist appointments. Her work touched the lives of other Asian immigrants as well, but the larger Vietnamese community dominated most of her time, Linh said.

In return for her volunteer work, the community lavished gifts on her and welcomed Schaefer to all their family celebrations, she said.

"Her presence among the Asian community here is very strong," said UI senior Ngoc Vu. "She had fulfilled her life. She had done what she wanted."

Cancer didn't stop Schaefer two years ago when she was first diagnosed. Radiology, surgery, chemotherapy — she endured them all. But this time, Schaefer wanted to see her deceased husband, Linh said.

It was time for the Vietnamese community to accept Schaefer's decision to refuse a second round of treatment.

As family and friends gather tomorrow at 1 p.m. for Schaefer's memorial service at Lensing Funeral Home, 605 Kirkwood Ave., it will be a life they will celebrate — not a death they will mourn.

For many, it's a life that will not be soon forgotten.

"She was a loving, caring person and very open to new ideas," Linh said. "She's lived so much."

In death, her legacy will continue in the children she's helped raise, a scholarship being created in her name through the UI Foundation and the donation of her body to the UI department of anatomy.

Five earn local human-rights awards

■ The 17th annual event honors area residents for their civic achievements.

By Amanda Gorsche
The Daily Iowan

Five area residents were honored for their philanthropic contributions during the 17th annual Iowa City Human Rights Awards Breakfast Thursday morning at the IMU.

Professor Emeritus Janusz Bardach delivered the keynote speech, "Civil Rights — A Unifying Force in a Diverse World," to a crowd of approximately 200 in the Richey Ballroom. He spoke of his experiences as a prisoner in the Gulag under the regime of Josef Stalin, which he wrote about in his memoir, Man is Wolf to Man.

The Iowa City Human Rights Commission chose the recipients of the five awards, said Jan Warren, the commission chairwoman. It accepts nominations from Iowa City residents all year and then narrows down the candidates according to the service they have provided and the long-term commitment involved, she said.

"This event gives us an opportunity to look at the good things happening in human rights and honor those involved," Warren said.

The breakfast began in 1984 with only three awards but now provides the Isabel Turner Award, a business award; a Rick Graf Award for a long-term service commitment; an International Human Rights Award and an award for an individual in a service organization, said City human-rights coordinator Heather Shank.

Jael Silliman, a UI assistant professor of women's studies, was presented with the International Human Rights Award. Silliman was chosen because of her work locally and globally in women's rights for the past 20 years. She said that the award was unexpected and that she was not sure she was deserving.

"It was a great honor and a great surprise," Silliman said.

Jude West, a UI business professor who has been involved in advocacy for those with disabilities for more than 35 years, won the Isabel Turner Award. Jean Bott — and her accounting firm, A Great Balancing Act Inc., 345 E. College St. — received the business award for her continued support and service to the Iowa Center for AIDS Resources and Education, 321 First St.

Sally Murray was given the award for an individual in a service organization for her work in human rights at both the state and local level. Susan Buckley was awarded the Rick Graf Award for long-term service for her advocacy of human rights and women's rights in the Iowa City community. Both women were honored for their 25-year commitments to human rights.

Shank said the event is heartwarming and gives recognition to people in Iowa City who give their time to human rights. She said most people are not aware of the abundance of volunteers in Iowa City, so the ceremony acts as a confirmation of their existence.

"It gives me such faith in humanity," she said.

Gore barnstorms Iowa

■ The VP touts his health plan in Davenport and accuses George W. Bush of "fuzzy math."

By Greg Smith
Associated Press

DAVENPORT — Standing on an old red fire truck decorated with red, white and blue bunting and American flags, Vice President Al Gore shucked off his jacket, loosened his tie, rolled up his sleeves and asked for help.

"I need your help. Will you help me win this election? Will you help me keep this prosperity going?" Gore said at a rally of about 2,000 supporters from Iowa and Illinois.

Although Iowa offers just seven electoral votes, Gore was making his fifth visit to the state since being nominated for president. He was joined by AFL-CIO Secretary-Treasurer Richard Trumka and Gov. Tom Vilsack, whose lead the vice president followed in shedding his suitcoat and loosening his tie.

Charlie Neibergall/Associated Press
Democratic presidential candidate Al Gore rolls up his sleeves as Gov. Vilsack introduces him at a campaign rally Thursday.

"This election is about a serious, serious decision. It's about whether or not we're going to vote for a guy that has a plan and a record, or whether we're going to vote for a guy with rhetoric and schemes," Vilsack said.

With fewer than two weeks before Election Day, Gore and Texas Gov. George W. Bush are locked in a spirited battle for the White House. Iowa, which traditionally holds the first-in-the-nation caucuses, has voted for a Democratic president in the last three elections.

"Iowa, in many ways, started this effort," Gore said. "And now I need you to be with me at the conclusion of this journey just 12 days from now. Once again, Iowa may have the decisive voice. Iowa is in the catbird seat."

Military beef-up urged after Cole

■ Questions arise about the security of Navy ships in the aftermath of the Cole bombing.

By Robert Burns
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Citing the stunning ease with which terrorists attacked the USS Cole, Defense Secretary William Cohen and the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff urged American military commanders around the world Thursday to search for ways to shore up weak points in troop security.

Cohen and Gen. Henry H. Shelton used a secure Pentagon video communications link to stress the urgency of improving protections against terrorist threats, spokesman Kenneth Bacon said.

"The goal basically was to make a good system better, and to use the concern that has been generated by the attack against the Cole as an opportunity for all commanders in chief to make sure that they are reviewing their force protection postures and their procedures, to make sure that they are making any necessary changes," Bacon said.

The Cole was attacked by suicide terrorist bombers during a refueling stop Oct. 12 in the Yemeni port of Aden.

One question that has arisen in the aftermath is whether Navy ships should have more or better-trained security aboard.

The private Pentagon conference, which lasted a little over an hour, included the commanders of U.S. regional commands — covering Europe, Latin America, the Asia-Pacific and the Middle East — plus the civilian service secretaries and the uniformed service chiefs and commanders of U.S.-based major commands.

"Obviously, if there's going to be enhanced force protection in certain ways, it would require greater resources," Bacon said.

Changes irk some at Carnegie Hall

■ The new German boss, who has alienated some staff, finds a swastika in his concert box.

By Verena Dobnik
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Franz Xaver Ohnesorg, Carnegie Hall's new boss, has a last name meaning "without worry" in his native German. But there's plenty to fret about as he modernizes the 109-year-old landmark — and shakes up its staff.

Last week, a swastika was found in the executive director's concert box.

And "the most gifted man in the world for this kind of work" — as Carnegie President Isaac Stern calls him — is orchestrating a staff rife with dissonance.

Three senior staff members have resigned since the concert season began in September, and two others were fired Tuesday. The same day, Stern told 30 employees that the board of trustees would pay a consultant to listen to their complaints.

But Ohnesorg is ready to take the heat for what he calls his "vision" for Carnegie: "I am here to prepare this institution for the 21st century," he told the Associated Press. As for the swastika, "Of course it hurts. But I'm not here to speak about these personal feelings."

Marty Lederhandler/Associated Press

A year after he arrived in New York, the 52-year-old flutist's management style apparently has created widespread angst. Several weeks ago, a group of employees sent an anonymous letter to news organizations criticizing him. Ohnesorg had transformed the Cologne Philharmonic in Germany into a leading musical force in Europe when he was its director, though not without tension there, too.

"Many people did not have the right imagination. And, of course, I convinced them," he said.

Record number of Americans are homeowners

WASHINGTON (AP) — Home ownership rates have soared to 67.7 percent, the highest level in history, during the third quarter of 2000, Housing and Urban Development Secretary Andrew Cuomo said Thursday.

The rate surpasses the 67.5 percent target the Clinton Administration set in 1995. Cuomo said 71.6 million Americans own homes, a record number of them minorities, women and city dwellers.

In a statement, President Clinton hailed the new figures as "tremendous new evidence that more and more American families are realizing the dream of owning their own home."

"Higher home-ownership rates help build stronger families, create more stable communities and raise living standards for all Americans," Clinton said.

The new numbers cover July to September. They show that 48.2 percent of minorities (12.8 million) and 53 percent of women (16.6 million) own homes. Among minorities, 47.3 percent of blacks (6.1 million) and 46.7 percent of Hispanics (4.5 million) own homes.

And, for the first time, more than half of all urban residents are homeowners. Cuomo said 51.9 percent (16.6 million) of city residents own homes, up from 48 percent in 1994.

About 52.2 percent of households earning less than the median family income (23 million) in the quarter owned their own homes.

When he's not in school, 9-year-old Kaleb Stebens of Davenport loves to shoot hoops, watch the Bulls games and ride his bike. His mother calls his amazing recovery "nothing short of a miracle."

A man with third-degree burns over 70 percent of his body goes back to work. A woman partially paralyzed by a car accident leaves the hospital on her own two feet.

Nine-year-old Kaleb Stebens is hit by a drunken driver and is rushed to Children's Hospital of Iowa at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics with a crushed skull, severe brain trauma and many other injuries. Today he's back in school enjoying reading, writing and recess.

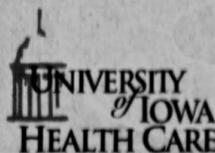

Rebuild a thousand fragments into a healthy little boy.

Is it possible?

What makes amazing recoveries like this possible? University of Iowa Health Care has a Trauma Center with a designation for the highest level of care, and pediatric trauma specialists on duty at all times. That means a team of trauma surgeons, neurosurgeons, orthopaedists, anesthesiologists, Pediatric Intensive Care Unit nurses and doctors, and many others who are specially trained to assess injuries quickly. They work together to save lives, ease pain and rebuild broken bodies piece by tiny piece.

By bringing together highly skilled experts from many disciplines throughout University of Iowa Health Care, communication, treatment and results are remarkably improved.

Study: Gene therapy controls Parkinson's in monkeys

■ After a second study is complete, researchers plan to ask for human tests.

By Paul Recer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A gene-therapy experiment relieved severe symptoms of Parkinson's disease in monkeys, and experts say the technique offers promise for treating the 1.2 million Americans who suffer from the disease, experts say.

A virus that had been joined with a gene that prompts production of dopamine, a chemical neurotransmitter, was injected into the brains of monkeys who had chemically induced Parkinson's disease.

Three monkeys that had severe symptoms of Parkinson's were restored to near normal by the gene therapy, said Jeffrey H. Kordower, the first author of a study appearing today in the journal Science.

"We are able to stop the disease in its tracks and to keep it from progressing," said Kordower, the director of the Research Center for Brain Repair at the Rush Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago.

"The experiment showed dramatic protective effects," said Dr. Ted M. Dawson, head of the Parkinson's Disease Research Center at Johns Hopkins University Medical Center. "It is promising, but I would be only cautiously optimistic."

Parkinson's disease, which affects about 1.2 million Americans, is a progressive disorder that affects brain cells that make dopamine. The loss of dopamine causes the classic Parkinson's symptoms: trembling, slow and stiff movement of limbs, a halting walk, speech difficulties and loss of balance. The cause of the disease is unknown, and there is currently no cure.

Before the gene therapy could be tried in humans, questions about safety would have to be answered, Dawson said.

Dr. Mark H. Tuszynski, head of a brain-disorder research center at the University of California, San Diego, said the experiment in monkeys was "fascinating" and offers the promise of "a very attractive therapy."

He said, however, that it is not known whether the brain cells affected by the chemically induced Parkinson's in monkeys are precisely the same as those affected by the actual disease in humans.

Kordower said a separate safety study is under way in monkeys, and when that is completed in about six months, an application for human clinical trials would be prepared for presentation to the Food and Drug Administration.

If all of the studies go smoothly, said Kordower, the gene therapy could be ready for human testing in three to five years.

NASA plans robot exploration of Mars

■ These robotic missions will pave the way for manned missions to the red planet.

By Paul Recer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a program of Mars exploration described as bold and flexible, NASA officials said six missions will be sent to the red planet this decade, and a mission to bring back rock samples could come as early as 2011.

The search of Mars for evidence of life, past or present, is the underlying theme of a long-term exploration that will include orbiters, landers and wheeled vehicles that may explore many miles of surface, officials said Thursday.

Scott Hubbard, the Mars program director, said the reorganized efforts are directed toward the fundamental questions: "Did life arise there, and is life there now?"

Ed Weiler, NASA's science director, said the robot missions to Mars are pathfinders for sending people there.

"We are preparing the way for humans, eventually, to go to Mars," said Weiler. There are no current plans, however, for a manned mission.

Three robot missions, an orbiter next year and two robotic surface rovers in 2003, already were planned. Thursday's announcement added another orbiter in 2005, an elaborate mobile science lab in 2007, and a "Scout" mission in 2007.

Hubbard said the new Mars exploration plan phases in increasingly complex scientific and engineering efforts, building toward the ability to land a robot on Mars, scoop up rock samples and return them to Earth. Plans now specify sample-return missions in 2014 and 2016, but early mission successes could advance a sample return to 2011, officials said.

"We have to seek before we sample," Hubbard said.

He said missions in this decade will concentrate on finding the best spot on Mars to pick up rock samples.

The design of the Scout mission is still undecided, but it will be based on proposals being collected from scientists. Current proposals include exotic formulas such as instrument-laden balloons that drift around Mars for months or an airplane to explore valleys and canyons on the red planet.

U.S. had 'close call' with N. Korea

■ A top Gore aid says the U.S. almost used force against the country's nuclear-weapons program.

By Barry Schweld
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration considered using force to shut down North Korea's nuclear-weapons program, a senior aide to Vice President Al Gore said Thursday.

"We had a close call," Leon S. Fuerth, the chief foreign policy adviser to Gore, said at the State Department.

"The Korean nuclear program was real. It was a threat to the security of our allies and a threat to our security. The ground was beginning to shift in the direction of a military confrontation," Fuerth said.

Speaking at the Open Forum, a 33-year-old seminar for the U.S. foreign service, Fuerth said, "We were in the (White House) situation room, checking to be sure if worse came to worst, the U.S. military was in a position to handle what might occur." He did not specify when that happened.

He said there was no "cook-book formula" to decide what to do about North Korea or Haiti, Bosnia and the Serbian province of Kosovo, where President Clinton used force against "egregious acts of internal criminality."

In 1994, North Korea agreed in negotiations with the United States to freeze its nuclear weapons program in exchange for civilian-style reactors and energy supplies.

Tensions were high at the time, and former President Jimmy Carter was sent to Pyongyang as an emissary to try to defuse them.

Since the freeze was negotiated, North Korea has pledged to stop testing its missiles and exporting weapons technology to other nations.

Currently, the Clinton administration is pursuing a policy of reconciliation with the Pyongyang government. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright held talks Monday and Tuesday with Kim Jong Il, the supreme leader, and other North Korean officials. Clinton is expected to visit

North Korea next month.

Still, on her way home Wednesday, Albright said it was absolutely essential that North Korea disclose details of its nuclear weapons capabilities if its relations with the United States are to reach their potential.

In a speech and in response to questions, Fuerth concentrated on Clinton administration foreign policy and on potential future approaches. He spoke of a need to address such problems as global warming, the spread of HIV-AIDS, the spread of dangerous weapons and worldwide terrorism and crime networks.

On using force, Gore's adviser said, "the world continues to be a dangerous place. And there continues to be a role for diplomacy backed by the credible use of military force, if necessary."

"The United States doesn't have the means, nor is it responsible, for dealing with every contingency everywhere in the world," he said.

"But just because we cannot be universal in our responses, we cannot be universal in turning our backs," he said.

Note tells of escape attempt on doomed Kursk

■ Divers find a message in a dead Russian sailor's pocket.

By Ivan Sekretarev
Associated Press

MURMANSK, Russia — Huddled in a destroyed submarine on the sea floor, a Russian sailor wrote a terse account of how he and 22 comrades tried in vain to escape, then scrawled a last message to his family, Russian naval officials said Thursday.

The note was found in the pocket of Lt. Dmitry Kolesnikov, whose body was one of the first to be recovered from the nuclear submarine Kursk, which sank on Aug. 12 with 118 men aboard. The message was the first firm evidence that any of the crew initially had survived explosions that shattered the submarine.

Written a few hours after the sub plunged to the bottom of the Barents Sea, the note tells a horrifying story in eerily straightforward sentences.

"All the crew from the sixth, seventh and eighth compartments went over to the ninth. There are 23 people here. We made this decision as a result of the accident," Russian navy chief Adm. Vladimir Kuroyedov quoted the note as saying.

"None of us can get to the surface," the message continued.

Kolesnikov's handwriting in the first part of the note was neat, Kuroyedov said during a meeting with the victims' relatives. But after the submarine's emergency lights went out, the 27-year-old seaman from St. Petersburg began to scrawl and desperation set in.

"I am writing blindly," Kuroyedov quoted the latter part of the note as saying.

The rest of the note was private and would be shown to Kolesnikov's family, said Vice Adm. Mikhail Motsak, the Northern Fleet chief of staff.

Most of the Kursk's crew apparently died instantly in the explosions that tore open the Kursk's first six compartments or within minutes as water roared into the submarine.

But the knowledge that some remained alive for hours revived the horror that gripped the nation after the sinking.

"I feel pain, enormous pain," Kolesnikov's widow, Olga, said on the NTV television channel. "I had a premonition my husband didn't die instantly. The pain I felt then has come true."

The recovered bodies are to be flown Saturday to Severo-morsk, the Northern Fleet's main port, for a memorial service. However, fierce winds forced the divers to suspend operations Thursday, and officials said they didn't know when bodies could be brought to the surface, the ITAR-Tass news agency reported.

The Russian government has been widely criticized at home for a slow and seemingly confused response to the disaster. Russian mini-submarines tried unsuccessfully for days to open the Kursk's escape hatch. There were reports that noises from the wreckage could have come from trapped sailors banging on the hull.

Protests greet Castro in Venezuela

■ Workers demand that aid to Cuba be redirected to creating jobs.

By Alexandra Olson
Associated Press

CARACAS, Venezuela — Cuban leader Fidel Castro arrived Thursday in Venezuela to full military honors Thursday — and controversy over the president's decision to offer the communist country cut-rate oil prices.

President Hugo Chavez has pleaded with Venezuelans to open their arms to Castro, his friend and political ally. The two leaders are to sign a pact Monday providing Cuba with a reported 106,000 barrels of Venezuelan oil daily on lenient credit terms and for barter.

But many Venezuelans — from union activists and opposition politicians to doctors, nurses and teachers — used Castro's visit to denounce Chavez's failure to make good on promised pay hikes.

Jeering, whistling and waving signs that read "Fidel Get Out!" thousands marched through Caracas' congested streets, demanding that the aid for Cuba go to underpaid workers and creating jobs.

In downtown Caracas, one banner read "Out With Fidel! We're dying of hunger." "We Want Work!" read another.

Opposition legislators said they would walk out when Castro addresses Congress tonight.

Protests failed to disrupt Castro's arrival Thursday. Clad in his trademark green fatigues, Castro arrived for his five-day visit to cheers of "Long live Castro!" He and Chavez then visited Cuban doctors working in towns along the Caribbean coast north of Caracas. The region was devastated in December by flooding and mudslides that killed thousands. Cuba has sent 450 doctors and medical assistants to help.

Chavez insists that Cuba, suffering from a 40-year-old economic embargo imposed by the United States, will pay for the oil by sending more doctors to Venezuela, helping to develop tourism and sending advisers to help the South American country's ailing sugar industry.

Suicide bombing rattles Israel

■ The attack at an army outpost raises Israeli fears of a new wave of bombings.

By Greg Myre
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — A Palestinian with a backpack of explosives blew himself up Thursday as his bicycle reached the concrete barrier of an Israeli army outpost, heightening fears that Israel could face a renewed wave of bombings.

The militant group Islamic Jihad claimed responsibility for the attack by the 24-year-old in the Gaza Strip, the first suicide bombing during a month of upheaval. Israel responded by blocking the main road in Gaza with a tank and bulldozing trees that Palestinians could use for cover to fire on the isolated base.

The diplomatic front appeared bleak, with Israel and the Palestinians giving a cool response to President Clinton's proposal of Washington meetings aimed at ending the violence. Street clashes broke out again in the West Bank and Gaza, and both sides maintained their hostile rhetoric.

"First of all, the Palestinians must stop the violence," said Danny Yatom, Prime Minister Ehud Barak's top adviser. "We can't accept the violence as it is today."

Palestinian leaders said the United States could no longer be the sole mediator, calling for the European Union, Russia and others to join future talks.

A 14-year-old Palestinian boy died of a gunshot wound to the head suffered two weeks earlier, but no deaths were reported in Thursday's clashes. In four weeks of fighting, 129 people have been killed, all but a few of them Palestinians.

The suicide bombing pointed to an escalation in the conflict and added to Israeli concerns that a bombing campaign may be unleashed following the Palestinians' release of 85 militants from jail two weeks ago. The Palestinians say they have re-arrested 22 people.

"We've been warning that these kind of attacks were in the works," said army spokesman Col. Raanan Gissin.

The bomber, identified as Nabil Araeer, pedaled his bicycle to the Israeli post until he reached the massive concrete blocks of the retaining wall. He then detonated several pounds of explosives in his backpack, the army said.

An Israeli soldier was lightly hurt in the blast at Gaza's Gush Katif Junction, where Palestinian rioters have clashed with Israeli troops guarding Jewish settlers.

Infected beef a British 'national tragedy'

■ Britain will set up an initial $1.45 million fund for the families of victims of mad cow disease.

By Emma Ross
Associated Press

LONDON — The government promised millions of dollars in compensation for families stricken by the human version of mad cow disease as it released an independent report Thursday showing officials were slow to respond to evidence of its threat to human health.

The government has not yet decided the size of the fund or how it will be distributed, Agriculture Minister Nick Brown said. But Health Secretary Alan Milburn said the government would allocate an initial $1.45 million next week.

Eighty people have died from the brain-wasting disease, and five other cases are suspected in Britain. Three lawsuits have been filed against the government.

"We intend to work closely with the families affected to identify the best way forward," Brown said, calling the disease

"a national tragedy."

Families of the victims welcomed the announcement.

"As a group of families, we should feel satisfied — not pleased but satisfied — with what we have achieved today," said David Churchill, whose son Stephan was the first person known to die from the disease.

David Brody, a lawyer representing the families, praised the thoroughness of the report and the "unprecedented level" of apology offered by Brown in Parliament.

The report, the result of a 2½-year inquiry headed by Lord Phillips, a high-ranking judge, concluded that officials did not seek to protect the farming industry at the expense of public health.

However, it said mistakes were made in the handling of the crisis, including a six-month delay in informing the public about the disease after government scientists identified it in late 1995, for fear of causing panic and damaging British trade.

"We do think, and have found, that there was what you might call a cover-up in the first six months," Phillips said.

Germany mulls banning far-right party

■ The country is suffering its worst spate of neo-Nazi violence since reunification.

By Burt Herman
Associated Press

BERLIN — Anti-Semitism is on the rise again in Germany, new statistics confirmed Thursday as authorities took the first step toward banning a far-right party accused of fanning hate.

"A country that had gas chambers for the annihilation of millions of Jews cannot tolerate organized anti-Semitism," Interior Minister Otto Schily said Thursday at a Düsseldorf meeting of ministers from Germany's 16 states.

In Düsseldorf and at a later meeting of state governors in the eastern city of Schwerin, all but two states voted to ask the country's highest court to ban the National Democratic Party.

The action is the government's most visible response to Germany's worst wave of neo-Nazi violence since reunification a decade ago.

A bomb attack at a Düsseldorf train station in July injured 10 immigrants, six of them Jewish, and plunged the nation into months of soul-searching about whether Germany has learned the lessons of its Nazi past.

Germany's Jewish community has enjoyed an unforeseen renaissance since the fall of communism, growing to 85,000 from about 30,000 in 1990. Immigrants from the former Soviet Union have been spurred by liberal laws encouraging Jews to return to Germany.

On Thursday, officials in the western city of Cologne laid a ceremonial cornerstone for the first permanent Jewish theater to be built in Germany since the end of World War II.

But leaders of the Jewish community have said continued violence may cause some to question whether it was right to rebuild Germany's Jewish community.

Anti-Semitic crimes doubled in the three months from June to September of this year compared with the same period last year — from 146 to 291, according to statistics released Thursday in the Bundestag, the German Parliament.

The National Democratic Party is implicated in that violence and has become a threat to German democracy, a report from law-enforcement officials from across the country said in a 500-page report reviewed by interior ministers.

The Pulliam Journalism Fellowship

Jump-start your newspaper journalism career with a solid program that boasts four Pulitzer Prize winners among its alumni - the Pulliam Journalism Fellowship. The Fellowship offers myriad career opportunities; in fact, a Pulliam Fellow from our first class of 1974, Barbara Henry, now serves as president and publisher of The Indianapolis Star. Moreover, a new graduate of our year 2000 class has just been hired as a full-time staff reporter at The Indianapolis Star.

Now entering its 28th year, the 2001 Pulliam Journalism Fellowship helps build a bridge from the classroom to the newsroom. Fellows are assigned to The Indianapolis Star or The Arizona Republic in Phoenix for 10 weeks each summer as staff reporters. We award 20 fellowships annually. The stipend is $5,775.

Traditionally, our fellowships have been open only to graduating college seniors. In 2001, we will be expanding eligibility to include college sophomores and juniors as well as seniors pursuing a career in newspaper journalism. We will be accepting applications for our Summer 2001 program in September 2000.

Swirling reggae, jazz and techno

Government Grown will shake up the Q tonight.

By Leanna Brundrett
The Daily Iowan

Imagine what would happen if John Coltrane, Wyclef Jean, Steely Dan and Steve Winwood of Traffic spent one night together and produced a love child. Nine months later, you would get Government Grown, the West Coast Trans-Rock-Reggae brain-child of Jeremy Moss and Tyler Hardwick.

The San Diego-based band manages to combine jazz, techno, reggae and Western-influenced beats to produce a unique live sound that will shake The Q Bar, 211 Iowa Ave., tonight.

Lead vocalist Moss and lead guitarist Hardwick formed Government Grown in 1994. That same year, Harley Orion (bass and back-up vocals) and Evan Polselli (keyboard and piano) joined the band to create what Moss called "a psychedelic sound, sort of like Taj Mahal meets reggae."

The Daily Iowan recently caught up with Moss via telephone to discuss emotions, lifestyles and delving into the deep beyond.

DI: How is Government Grown different from other bands?

Moss: We like to appeal to a wide range of people. If you want to come listen to a jazz band, then that's what you'll hear. If you come to hear a jam band, then you'll hear a jam band. Other bands only do certain things, but we like to take different genres and swirl them together to make a totally different sound. We're also trying to push the live aspect of music again.

DI: What bands/singers would you say have influenced Government Grown?

Moss: Definitely John Coltrane. Even though he's a jazz musician, his music is very melodic. Also, Peter Tosh, Steely Dan and Traffic. Traffic is a very highly underrated band.

DI: Where does the band get the ideas for songs?

Moss: We just write about various different emotions we experience as a band and the different lifestyles in different regions. We once lived in Denver, and now we're in San Diego. It's cool to cross-reference the different lifestyles of the two places, but San Diego has a bigger influence on us.

DI: If you guys could play any venue, where would it be?

Moss: I know I'd really love to play at Red Rocks in Morrison, Colo., because it's a natural rock amphitheater. It's where the Dave Matthews Band recorded one of its live CDs. Another cool place would be the Coors Amphitheater in San Diego because it would be cool to play a big venue in our hometown.

DI: Why should people come to The Q Bar on Friday night?

Moss: We really have something to give our audience. I think we really have an incredible power when we're live and our music can take people places. People can choose to come and have a really fun

ODB may go to prison for rehab skip

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rapper ODB is AWOL.

An arrest warrant was issued for Russell Tyrone Jones, the Wu Tang Clan member who goes by ODB, after he fled a court-ordered drug-rehabilitation center and didn't show up for an Oct. 17 hearing. His probation was revoked by Superior Court Judge Marshal Revel.

The district attorney is recommending prison time.

Jones, 31, was sentenced last November to the Pasadena treatment program as part of a plea bargain on a charge of making a terrorist threat. He was also placed on three years of probation.

Jones pleaded no contest to being a convicted felon in possession of body armor in February 1999 and to making threats at a West Hollywood nightclub in September 1998.

A King-ly reception

BANGOR, Maine (AP) — A 14-year-old from Dallas skipped school to fly to Bangor to meet author Stephen King at a rare appearance in his home town. His mom wasn't worried about him, though — she came along.

"I think I am the biggest King fan," aspiring writer Michael Altemeier said. "I'd never seen him live, so this is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity."

His mother ran the video camera as Altemeier, shaking with excitement, talked to King. King's comment: "You can't be from around here, since you act like I'm incredibly important."

The author obliged those who asked for photos during the two-hour event but declined to sign a pregnant woman's belly. He was persuaded to initial her T-shirt, however, which read "Stephen King fan under construction."

He also signed the arm of a man who said he was going to have the signature turned into a tattoo.

Brooks to release one more album, then retire

The singer plans on spending time with his family and writing screenplays.

Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Citing family and career concerns, country music star Garth Brooks said Thursday he plans to retire after releasing and promoting one more album.

"I'm here to announce my retirement," Brooks said at a news conference before a gala to celebrate 100 million album sales.

"I've done my career with the old saying, 'Burn bright, burn fast,'" he said. "I wasn't going to be somebody that we could come to really appreciate, like Billy Joel and James Taylor, and know that their stuff was timeless."

Brooks, 38, said he didn't want the new album, scheduled for release next summer, to be tagged a "farewell" project. At some point, he also may record a duet album with Trisha Yearwood and make a soundtrack album to accompany a film project from his production company in Los Angeles.

He said he wouldn't consider touring again until his youngest daughter, Allie, 4, goes to college but may play some shows. A series of network TV specials based on concerts may be filmed next summer to promote the new album.

But career concerns will be second fiddle to his children from now on, Brooks said. He and wife, Sandy, are considering a divorce but haven't made a final decision because of their three daughters.

He recently attended his 8-year-old daughter Taylor's first soccer game, which brought him to tears.

"I realized that in that one game, I had more fun than all 10 years of touring," he said.

Brooks hopes to write screenplays when not taking care of his children. He said he felt sure about the retirement decision because he had taken a year to think it over.

Blaring 'NSync isn't the only noise pollution in I.C. ...

Sounds of nuisance

Iowa City, in general, is a pollution-free city. With the exception of cigarette butts laying everywhere, the ground is pretty clean. There is one type of pollution, however, that is a problem: motorcycle-noise pollution.

While most automobiles in Iowa City are relatively quiet, certain motorcycles are incredibly loud. They can be heard approaching for hundreds of meters and drown out all other noise when nearby. When they accelerate, it can be extremely painful for pedestrians' ears. It is time for the lawmakers of Iowa City to step in and do something.

Some motorcycles can be as loud as 115 decibels (dB) when running around 35 mph. The decibel scale is difficult to understand because of its non-linear nature, but 115dB is within the dangerous range. For reference, 115 dB is roughly as loud as a chainsaw or a car horn at close range. These motorcycles are health hazards not only to the rider but to pedestrians as well. Also, they are a public nuisance, especially for anyone who lives close to someone who owns and rides one.

Should this kind of irritation continue? Iowa City police routinely break up parties for noise violations, so why do they not impound motorcycles, or at least write citations for roughly the same offense?

There are no laws in Iowa City directly regarding motorcycle-noise pollution, but there are related laws regarding sound trucks. These are trucks designed for sound output, such as the ones radio stations use for remote broadcasts. According to law, sound trucks must be no louder than 80 dB at a distance of 100 feet, cannot operate in residential areas, and can only operate from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

The motorcycles around town routinely break every one of these regulations. Although the regulations are not directly applicable, the idea is the same. Imagine someone driving a sound truck around town and blasting heavy-metal music at painful levels, and you have the rough equivalent of one of these motorcycles.

The easiest solution to this problem is for motorcycle owners and operators to install mufflers. However, if these people had cared about what their neighbors thought, they would not have bought the bikes in the first place. The only other solution is to make and enforce laws that set maximum noise-output levels for vehicles. Perhaps a few noise-pollution citations would open these people's ears to the nuisance they are.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Abortion is a woman's private choice

I am writing in response to Eric Dale's letter to the editor regarding abortion and the right to life. I find it ironic that a male has so much input on the issue of abortion since women are the ones who go through nine months of pregnancy and women are the ones who have to deal with the aftermath of their choices regarding pregnancy. Whatever a woman chooses to do with her pregnancy is just that — her choice. I don't believe anyone has a right to tell her what she can and can't do with her own body.

For most women, abortion is not an easy choice to make nor is it an easy way out. It's people like Eric Dale, who are obviously ignorant on the subject, who make the decision even harder for many women.

Eric Dale constantly referred to the Bible as an answer for why abortions should be outlawed, but let's remember that laws are not based on the Bible because of the amendment that states there is a separation of church and state. Not everyone believes in the same interpretation of the Bible, nor does everyone believe in the same sect or religion. Abortion is not a religious or a political issue — it is a personal choice.

Eric Dale says that an "unborn child is a unique being molded by the same hands of God." Well, if abortion is outlawed by the Republican Party and the Moral Majority, I don't believe God will be taking care of all the unwanted babies that will be delivered nor will he be responsible for the deaths that will occur by back-alley abortion doctors.

Abortion is a private matter, and it is the law. To reverse Roe v. Wade, which is what many pro-life activists want to do, would be a step backward for our country and for women's rights in general. Right-to-life activists need to understand and comprehend that they are not God and they have no right to tell others what to do with their bodies or how to live their lives.

Extending Scott Blvd. is easier than extending First Ave.

Problem: giving people on the east side of Iowa City access to I-80.

Solution #1: Extend Scott Boulevard.

Scott Boulevard was built to be an arterial road. It is lined with homes and driveways entering it, is close to no schools, and has a speed limit of 35 mph. The existing part of the road will need no alteration.

Solution #2: Extend First Avenue.

First Avenue was not built to be an arterial road. It is lined with homes and driveways entering it, is close to several schools, and has a speed limit of 20-25 mph. The existing part of the street will need major (though unstated) alteration: widening of the street, cutting down trees, new streetlights, and possibly regrading.

In this election, we're really voting on whether to try the easy solution — extending Scott Boulevard, which is already going to happen — before we embark on the difficult solution of extending First Avenue. Extending Scott Boulevard is universally seen as a good solution to the problem. Extending First Avenue is widely acknowledged to have many unknown and costly consequences. Isn't it only prudent to give the easy solution a chance before we choose the difficult one? Stop the First Avenue extension — vote YES.

Let's show Wisconsin what it means to be a Hawkeye

This is to all the fans who have ever called themselves Hawkeyes — past, present and future.

Events occurred two years ago when the visiting Wisconsin Badgers came to town to take on our beloved Hawkeyes. Many of us remember that it was the worst rioting in Iowa City during a football weekend in 20 years. That may have been so, but what allowed this to happen? Sure, we might not have been undefeated and ranked in the Top 25 at that point of the season, but that should not have held us back from showing our Hawkeye spirit. Why were over 40 Badger fans allowed to sit in the UI student section for the entire game without being asked by Kinnick Stadium security to go to their reserved seats? Why did we stoop to their level by throwing soda, food and other debris at each other during the game? And why were there more fans wearing red and white than black and yellow on our home turf?

The answer is simple: On Saturday, Oct. 24, 1998, we failed to show our visitors what it really means to be a Hawkeye! A Hawkeye represents rich tradition and strong character, no matter what the situation. We're proud to wear our black and gold through and through. And when opposing fans try to back us down, we get right in their face and show them who the real team playing on the field is. When the Badgers come to town this weekend, let's show our Hawkeye spirit! No matter the outcome of the game, we know who the real winners are — the young men who battle week in and week out because they have love for the game and hearts of true Hawkeyes. The team has had a tough year, and we as fans should refuse to give up on it now. Let's end this three-year drought and beat the stinkin' Badgers! Be loud, be proud, and go Hawks!

Politicians: Time has run out

One week shy of the election, and they thought we would not notice.

First instituted in 1918, then expanded in the New Deal-era 1960s, the federal government takes it away from us, puts it in a "lock-box" and promises that we'll see it again someday — in our autumn days.

We can only hope that we'll get back what we've put in, and one thing is certain: The rate of return on it is disgustingly low.

I say that it's time for us to eliminate this unfair redistribution. I don't want to privatize it, "fix" it or even just extend its lifespan for political advantage.

We must eliminate this scourge. Daylight-saving time must come to an end.

Growing up, daylight-saving time was just another fact of life. In the spring, we'd lose an hour and look forward to "getting it back" in October. Lost in the innocence of Dubuque youthfulness, I didn't question this government program.

Then I became a business major. The scales fell from my eyes, and I saw clearly.

I was born in February 1979. Two months later, the government took an hour away from me. Six months later, when they returned it, they didn't pay me any interest. There was no recompense for my lost moments, no payment for the foregoing of its utility for six months. Year in and year out, millions of Americans like me get the shaft.

I could have invested those 60 minutes in high-yield investments such as going to class or watching pro rasslin'. I could have called my folks. But the government decided to make my decisions for me.

At a modest yearly interest rate of 5 percent, after six months, the government should pay me 61 minutes, 30 seconds. In this booming economy, I might even be able to pull out 62 or even 62 1/2 minutes on the open market.

Business majors: You've heard of the Time Value of Money? Well, welcome to the Money Value of Time.

Everyone else: I fully accept that you stopped reading this four paragraphs ago. Or you're my mom.

Some say that daylight-saving time was the devious creation of Communists, or even France, but I know better. This is just another result of American politics.

Since I was born in February, every year I float an interest-free time loan to the government. But that's only half the story. While every person born between November and April pays into the system, everyone born between May and October gets a free hour from Uncle Sam — theirs to use for zero percent interest until the spring.

A quick look at the evidence shows why this is politically profitable. According to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, 1997 saw 2,013,000 births in the months of May through October, compared with only 1,856,000 births in the time-losing months.

By setting up this risky time scheme, the beltway boys have managed to ensure their political domination.

"Liberty and justice for all," I scoff at these.

Listen up, candidates for office: In my 21 years, I have lost a total of 31 minutes and 30 seconds in accrued interest to your pyramid scheme. No, George W. Bush, don't just privatize part of it. Sorry, Al Gore, but you can't "fix" this problem through bigger programs and more spending. No, Ralph Nader, you're not going to confiscate my work and give it to the bloated labor unions.

Don't give me excuses, rhetoric or empty promises. Time is money, gentlemen, and I want my freedom back. And don't even get me started on leap year.

Some UI students said they are enthused about the celebrities' visits to the university.

UI freshman Tom Bianciotto, who says he supports Gore, heard Jackson speak at his high school once, and said if he weren't going out of town for the weekend, he would attend the

"He was a very powerful speaker," he said.

Jackson is so influential that he has the ability to change the minds of people planning to vote for Republican

Nader is scheduled to speak in the IMU Main Lounge today at 6:30 p.m. After hearing about the celebrity appearances, she said her immediate reaction was to think that the Democrats

Although the PlayStation 2 is new to most, Matt Gibson, the owner of Iguana's Comic Book Cafe, 123 E. Washington St., said he imported the game four months ago from Japan for $500, where the game was released in March 1999.

Customers of his shop play the console for $5 an hour, but Gibson said he bought it for personal reasons.

"The game would be successful by itself, with the great graphics, but it also plays CDs and DVDs, which is incredible," he said.

New upgrades for the PlayStation 2 also include USB and FireWire ports that allow high-speed Internet connections, pressurized buttons and controllers and the capacity to surf the Web from a television screen. The system also operates at 300 MHz and has 26 games available, with 270 in development.

Sony officials said they are on target to deliver 1.3 million PlayStation 2's by Christmas, but that probably still won't meet demand.

10,000 people have signed the petitions — 95 percent of which signed the petition to end daylight-saving time, Feinberg said.

The U.S. Department of Transportation oversees the observance of daylight-saving time, said Joanne Petrie, a senior attorney in the office of the department's general counsel.

"The Department of Transportation oversees it because the railroad system set up the time zones," she said.

Daylight-saving time was first implemented in the United States during World War I as a way to save fuel by reducing the need to use artificial light. It was brought back during World War II and was observed year-round in various states across the United States, Petrie said. Then, in 1966, Congress passed the Uniform Time Act stating that if a state decides to observe daylight-saving time, it must use one of the federal mandated times. Individual states can decide whether to implement daylight-saving time. Arizona, Hawaii and the part of Indiana in the Eastern time zone opted not to observe the time change.

Although she understands that some people may find daylight-saving time inconvenient, Petrie feels that most people like having an additional hour of daylight in the spring and summer.

"Most countries that are not near the equator observe daylight-saving time," she said. "So it seems most people find it useful."

Feinberg hopes to send the petition to end daylight-saving time to a congressman.

"Because it was put in place to help conserve energy during World War I, there doesn't seem to be a reason for it anymore," he said.

But ending daylight-saving time is not something UI senior Tracy Ford would want to see happen in Iowa.

"I think it's practical because it gives us an extra hour of daylight in the summer when we need it," she said.

Although UI junior Daniel Andriik feels daylight-saving time is not needed anymore, he does not advocate ending it.

"It is an inconvenience in the spring, but it is really nice to get an extra hour of sleep in the fall," he said.

Because the time change officially begins at 2 a.m. Sunday, Iowa City bars will have the option of closing an hour later than usual. UI freshman Chris Chapman said he is looking forward to the extra hour of bar time.

"It will be great; it's another hour to have more fun," he said.

GOP leaders defy Clinton's veto threat, pass tax bill

hundreds of millions of dollars for lawmakers' hometown projects and industries nationwide.

The Senate was expected to vote on both measures today.

Clinton wrote letters to GOP leaders saying he had "no choice but to veto" the bills. He said the measures fell short of his proposals for liberalizing immigration laws for up to 2 million people, helping school districts build and repair schools, paring taxes for people facing health-care and long-term care expenses, and financing the federal lawsuit against the tobacco industry.

"You chose to put forward a partisan legislative package that ignores our key concerns," the president wrote lawmakers about the tax measure. On the spending bill, Clinton complained that Republicans were adding provisions "that would reward special interests at the expense of the public interest."

Republicans charged forward anyway, convinced that the controversial provisions were either widely popular or would appeal to the GOP's conservative base. This included their refusal to grant Clinton's plan for blanket amnesty for illegal aliens who arrived in the United States before 1986.

"Even though this is a great political time, and the politics are at a crescendo level, it's time for this body to quit the quibbling, to come together and pass good legislation," said House Speaker Dennis Hastert, R-Ill., delivering rare floor remarks as the House debated the tax bill.

Republican Rep. Dana Rohrabacher of California called Clinton's call for amnesty for illegal aliens "an insult" to legal immigrants and

"a betrayal of our country and our people," while Democratic Rep. Robert Menendez of New Jersey spoke of "the darkest shadows that might exist in our society."

"The Latino community is watching what this Congress does on these votes," Menendez warned.

Besides seeking amnesty, Clinton wants permanent residency for political refugees from El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Haiti. He also would let some applicants for permanent residency avoid having to return home to await a final decision.

CITY BRIEF

UI vehicle backs into Cambus, causes minor damage

A UI vehicle backed into a Cambus Thursday afternoon, causing approximately $200 in damage to the bus.

UI junior Mark Maicke, the driver of a UI General Stores van, backed out from between the Seamans Center and the Communications Center at 2:50 p.m. He backed straight into the bus, which was parked in front of the Main Library, denting in an inspection panel located near the bus' rear left wheel.

"I was sitting here at the bus stop, and people were getting on the bus. All of a sudden, I felt the bus rock," said UI junior Roshunda Pope, the driver of the Cambus. "I looked back, and I saw the van there."

Another Cambus picked up the students while Iowa City police Sgt. Dan Moore filled out the accident report. Moore did not give Maicke a citation, primarily because two large Dumpsters had blocked his rear view.

"No injuries, no big deal," said Moore, who estimated the damage to the bus at $200. The UI van did not receive any damage, he said.

Iowa faces rival Wildcats

■ UI field hockey will end its regular season at noon on Oct. 29.

By Roseanna Smith
 The Daily Iowan

The shots will be accurate. The defense will be solid. Everything will come together.

The entire Iowa field hockey squad is prepared to send off seniors Susan Gibson and Natalie Dawson well in addition to ending its regular season with a win in the final game before the Big Ten Tournament.

Iowa (10-7 overall, 2-3 Big Ten) will face conference rival Northwestern at Grant Field at noon on Oct. 29.

"It means a lot, leaving your last mark on the home field," said coach Tracey Griesbaum. "A lot has to do with all the work put in for years and how they want to play. The team is fighting hard to send them out in a positive note."

The Hawkeyes and Wildcats faced off last weekend at Northwestern, but it was not considered a conference game. The Big Ten schedule has each team meeting once instead of

Yankees win third series in a row

■ Luis Sojo hit a single in the ninth inning to power the Yankees over the Mets.

By Ben Walker
 Associated Press

NEW YORK — Best in their own backyard, best in all of baseball.

The New York Yankees, thought to be too old and too banged-up to make it this far, became the first team in a quarter-century to win three straight World Series championships, beating the New York Mets 4-2 Thursday night.

Luis Sojo, one of many mid-season pickups, hit a two-out, tiebreaking single off Al Leiter in the ninth inning to decide Game 5, stunning a Shea Stadium crowd that was sure there was more baseball to play.

The Subway Series turned out to be a short ride for New York fans who had waited 44 years for another one and hoped it would go seven games. Instead, the Yankees quickly matched the Oakland Athletics' three in a row from 1974-75, and won their fourth title in five years.

Only two other runs in baseball history can compare — Joe DiMaggio led the Yankees to five crowns from 1936-41, and Mickey Mantle helped take the Bronx Bombers to six titles from 1947-53.

And while the lasting image of this Series is certain to be Roger Clemens throwing the bat at Mike Piazza, this is the picture the Yankees will prefer to savor: Owner George Steinbrenner hoisting another big piece of hardware for the team's trophy case.

Game 4 hero Derek Jeter, who earned his fourth ring at only 26, and slumping Bernie Williams homered for the Yankees. But it was Sojo, who blossomed into a good-luck charm after rejoining the Yanks from Pittsburgh on Aug. 7, who delivered the winning hit.

Leiter battled all night, and struck out the first two batters in the ninth. Then he walked Jorge Posada and gave up a single to Scott Brosius, and Sojo followed by slapping a single up the middle on Leiter's 142nd and final pitch. Another run scored on the play when center fielder Jay Payton's throw home hit Posada and bounded into the Mets dugout.

Leiter remained winless in 11 postseason starts, while Mike Stanton won in relief of Andy Pettitte. Mariano Rivera pitched the ninth for a save.

Bill Kostroun/Associated Press

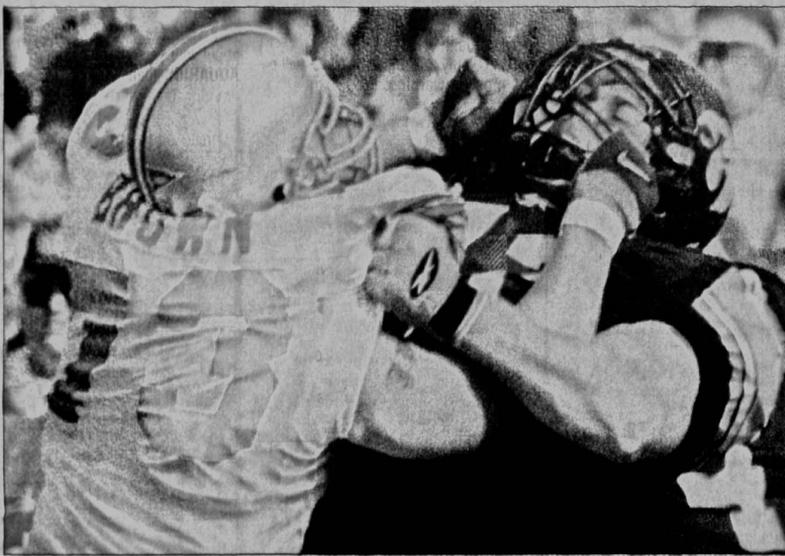

The Yankees celebrate after Jorge Posada and Scott Brosius scored on a single by Luis Sojo during the ninth inning of Game 5 of the World Series against the Mets Thursday.

At the stroke of midnight, Piazza fled out to the edge of the warning track in center field with a runner on base to finish it.

The Yankees fans in the sell-out crowd of 55,292 went wild after having been outshouted all evening.

Unlike the overmatched San Diego Padres in 1998 and the overwhelmed Atlanta Braves in 1999, the wild-card Mets were in it all the way. Their best chance, however, really may have ended when closer Armando Benitez could not hold a one-run lead in the opener.

These Yankees went into the playoffs with seven straight losses, and also dropped the opener in their AL series against Oakland and Seattle. In the end, though, manager Joe Torre's team showed what October experience is all about.

Brett Roseman/The Daily Iowan

Iowa's Bruce Nelson gets face-masked by Ohio State's Joe Brown during the Hawkeyes' 38-10 loss to the Buckeyes on Oct. 21.

Hawks, Badgers to tangle

■ Both teams have the same record in Big Ten conference play.

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

Kevin Kasper said he probably would have laughed if, before the season, someone had told him that Wisconsin's Big Ten record would be 1-4 heading into Saturday's game against the Hawkeyes, who have an identical record.

After all, the Badgers have dominated the conference for most of the 1990s, seizing three Big Ten and Rose Bowl titles, including the 2000 Rose Bowl. However, the loss of 1999 Heisman Trophy winner Ron Dayne coupled with the growing parity in the Big Ten have dropped Wisconsin to depths in the conference it hasn't experienced as of late.

Despite their Big Ten struggles and early season suspensions because of illegal shoe discounts, the Badgers have put together a 4-4 overall record. Wisconsin has to win three of its last four games to go to a bowl game. Otherwise, it will be the first time since 1997 the Badgers will stay home for the holidays.

The Hawkeyes, however, aren't playing for a bowl game — they're playing for pride and the hope of shaking up the final Big Ten standings.

"You never know who is going to win week in and week out," Kasper said. "We can match up with anybody as long as we go out there and execute."

Leading Iowa's offense Saturday against Wisconsin will be quarterback Kyle McCann. The junior from Creston, Iowa, will attempt to revive a standstill offense that has scored only 10 points in the last two games.

After freshman quarterback Jon Beutjer went down with an injury in the second quarter of Iowa's 38-10 loss to Ohio State on Oct. 21, McCann entered the game and was promptly sacked on his first snap. Buckeye defenders threw him into the Kinnick grass four more times, rendering him ineffective.

Last season, McCann played in four games, starting twice and completing 25 of 56 passes for 280 yards. In his freshman season, McCann saw more action and gave Iowa more production. He was the first freshman to lead Iowa in passing (1,179 yards) since Chuck Long in 1982.

Hawkeye senior center A.J. Blazek said both Beutjer and McCann love to throw, and although McCann doesn't bring Beutjer's athleticism, he does have knowledge and experience — Big Ten experience.

Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz praised McCann's meticulous game preparations, calling him one of Iowa's hardest workers.

McCann will face a Badger pass defense that has been surrendering 247 yards a game, mostly because opposing teams refuse to throw toward Jamar Fletcher, arguably the best defensive back in the country. He has four interceptions this

IOWA ROWING

Rowing hosts last race of the season

■ The Iowa rowing team will have a home-river advantage.

By Julie Matolo
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa rowing team could not be any more ecstatic about entering its only home event of the year.

Coming off a battle of colliding oars last weekend to produce the Hawkeyes' best performance of the season is reason enough to be excited. A few more are: seventy-nine more boats entered in this year's regatta than last year; sunny, 55-degree weather; Herky's presence; and the tailgating fans who dot the banks of the river.

This weekend, Iowa will host the 10th annual Head of the Iowa Regatta. Many see the event as the perfect way for the Hawkeyes to enter their final race of the fall season.

"The Hawkeyes are ready to work hard to maintain and or capture titles at their own regatta," said coach Mandi Kowal. "The varsity will remain focused on our strategies while increasing its aggressiveness. I would like to see this team take care of business."

Race day — Oct. 29 — will bring more than 1,100 competitors and more than 30 different men's and women's teams from various colleges, clubs and groups. The 2.5-mile race on the Iowa River will begin near lower City Park and extend to the IMU footbridge. The all-day event has its first race at 8:45 a.m.,

AD shows support for women's athletics

■ The UI athletics director becomes a member of the crew team for a brief while.

By Todd Brommelkamp
 The Daily Iowan

For a few fleeting moments Thursday morning, Bob

Bowlsby wasn't worried about public opinion or coaches without contracts — he was worried about getting wet.

Bowlsby

The Iowa athletics director joined the women's rowing team at 8 a.m. for a brief trip up the Iowa River to show his support for women's athletics as well as to promote this weekend's Head of the Iowa Regatta.

"We have a ways to go in completing the merger," Bowlsby said about the recent uniting of the men's and women's Athletics Departments. "There are still plenty of things we have to do, but things haven't been too bad so far."

Bowlsby seemed relaxed as he prepared to take his place alongside team members in the shell christened the Mary Louise Smith. Clad in an Iowa rowing sweatshirt and black running pants, he was far removed from the rigid, suit-and-tie wearing figure Iowa fans have become familiar with.

Stern: Timberwolves put franchise at risk

The Timberwolves are set back after losing five first-round draft picks.

By John Akers
Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — NBA Commissioner David Stern said Thursday that "shocking" fraud by the Minnesota Timberwolves forced him to inflict record punishment over a secret contract for star forward Joe Smith.

Stern stripped the Wolves of five first-round draft choices and fined the team $3.5 million for the agreement, which an arbitrator found was intended to circumvent the NBA salary cap.

"The fact is, we gave this a lot more thought than the parties in the Minnesota franchise who risked their future by engaging in one of the most far-reaching frauds we've seen," Stern said.

"This was a fraud of major proportions. There were no fewer than five undisclosed contracts tucked away, hoping they'd never see the light of day. This is fraud, that ripped to the heart of the (collective bargaining) compact. The magnitude of this stuff is shocking."

Stern's punishment of the Wolves could include one-year suspensions for owner Glen Taylor and anyone in the organization who took part in the deal.

Stern said he hoped to schedule hearings within the next two weeks with Taylor and other Timberwolves officials, possibly including Vice President Kevin McHale and coach Flip Saunders, to determine whether they will be suspended.

The NBA said the fine was the stiffest ever imposed by the league on any franchise, player or other individual and the maximum allowed. Spokesman Brian McIntyre also said he could not recall any team being stripped of multiple draft choices.

It's the loss of draft choices that is particularly damaging to a franchise that will be at or near the top of the salary cap as long as it is carrying forward Kevin Garnett's $126 million contract through 2004. Without draft picks or the ability to pursue high-priced free agents, management will have little room to bulk up the roster around Garnett.

"I was reading across the page and the draft picks just kept going," New York Knicks general manager Scott Layden said. "The money is probably the least of the penalty, but collectively it shows that the commissioner is not soft on circumvention."

At a team shootaround Thursday morning, Saunders said the Wolves were used to dealing with adversity.

"We've been through a lot in the last five years," he said. "We were written off when we lost Googs (Tom Gugliotta) and Stephon (Marbury). We won 50 games when a lot of people didn't think we could."

Saunders said he didn't know whether the Wolves would appeal the penalties.

Garnett said the ruling would not affect whether he stays with the Wolves when his contract expires.

"It's very, very easy to jump ship when things get hard," Garnett said. "It's very, very easy to start thinking differently. I'm not that type of person. I'm a loyal cat. I do know that running from your problems will not solve problems."

NBA arbitrator Kenneth Dam ruled Monday that the Timberwolves signed a secret agreement with Smith in January 1999 that was worth as much as $86 million over seven years. With the NBA, meanwhile, the Timberwolves filed a one-year contract worth $1.75 million, allowable under the salary cap.

Stern said he abided by the arbitrator's ruling when he voided Smith's current $2.5 million contract and his past two contracts with the Timberwolves, preventing Smith from signing a lucrative contract with them after this season.

Though Smith has said he would like to re-sign with the Timberwolves, NBA deputy commissioner Russ Granik said the arbitrator's ruling also would allow Stern to void a contract if Smith re-signed.

Volleyball

This weekend: Iowa will finish its two-week road trip with matches against No. 6 Wisconsin and Northwestern. The Hawkeyes will travel to Madison, Wis., to take on the Badgers tonight at 7 p.m. and finish the weekend with a 7 p.m. match against the Wildcats on Saturday.

On Iowa: Coach Rita Buck-Crockett's team is 10-8 overall and 6-4 in the Big Ten at the halfway point. Iowa is coming off two huge 3-2 victories last weekend against Michigan and No. 20 Michigan State. Fabiana De Abreu recorded back-to-back triple-doubles in the victories to garner Big Ten co-Player of the Week honors.

On Wisconsin: The Badgers are 19-2 overall and 9-1 in the Big Ten. The No. 6 Badgers defeated Iowa three weeks ago in Iowa City, 15-7, 15-8, 17-15. Hard-hitting Sherisa Livingston leads the team with 339 kills.

On Northwestern: The Wildcats enter the weekend a lowly 1-9 in the conference and 4-16 overall. Northwestern will be looking to rebound this weekend after losing two five-game thrillers last weekend to Illinois and Purdue. Erica Lange will lead the 'Cats' attack, ranking third in the conference with 1.56 blocks per game.

Quoting coach Buck-Crockett: "Going in to this trip, we felt like we needed to win three of four matches to relieve some of the pressure on us. We need to win the matches we won at home."

— by Todd Brommelkamp

Men's tennis

This weekend: The Hawkeyes will compete in their last tournament of the fall season in Madison, Wis., at the Rolex ITA Region IV Tournament today through Oct. 30. Unlike it did for the other tournaments this fall, Iowa will not send a full team to compete but rather four singles players and one doubles team.

Last tournament: Stuart Waters won his first singles title as a Hawkeye at the Purdue Invitational on Oct. 14-15. Waters won all three of his matches at the tournament in the A flight; the title was the second this fall for Iowa. Senior Desh Sekhri won a title in the 7/8 flight at the Clemson Invitational in late September.

Iowa's keys: Waters, who posted a 5-5 record this fall, will look to add to his string of success in the tournament, which will consist of players from more than 30 schools, including 10 of the 11 Big Ten teams.

Quoting coach Steve Houghton: "We're doing as well as we can. We've had some ups and downs, but I think we've seen a general line of progression this season, and we've had some success. This is one last opportunity for the guys to prove to where they will play on this team."

— by Nick Firchau

Soccer

This weekend: The Hawkeyes will travel to the mountains of Colorado Springs, Colo., this weekend to finish out regular-season play. They will meet up with Colorado College today and play the Air Force Academy on Oct. 29.

Last weekend: Iowa is on a three-game winning streak after winning its last home match and Big Ten game against Illinois on Oct. 20.

The Hawkeyes positioned themselves well, crawling out of the eighth position in the Big Ten through their final three victories. This ensures they will not meet Big Ten powerhouse Penn State in the first round of the Big Ten tournament.

On Iowa: The Hawkeyes find themselves dead even with Minnesota and Purdue for sixth in the Big Ten standings. Because the Hawkeyes beat the Boilermakers in head-to-head competition, they should find themselves above Purdue in the tournament seedings.

Quoting coach Wendy Logan: "I think it actually puts more pressure on us (now that the Big Ten season is over). Our overall goal is to get into the NCAA Tournament, and that has been established since day one. The reason I say it puts maybe a little bit more pressure on us is because we know that we are that much closer to realizing our goal of being in the Big Dance."

Coach Griesbaum says she is expecting another tough game twice, as in previous years. Both teams wanted to add a game to their ending in the nonconference match-up.

On its road trip last weekend, Iowa shut out both Northwestern and Indiana. Against the Wildcats, Iowa's Tiffany Fodera scored on a penalty stroke against All-Big Ten goalkeeper Jess Yates for the 1-0 win. Griesbaum expects another fight from the Yates.

"Their best player is their goalkeeper. She's a senior with a great career being first in the Big Ten as far as save percentages. That's quite literally the obstacle we're trying to get by. She typically has had excellent games against Iowa. We will have to sustain our shots this weekend."

Northwestern (6-11 overall, 2-3 Big Ten) is led offensively by Nicole Smith, who has 22 points off nine goals and four assists. Defensively, the Hawkeyes go into the game with three consecutive shutouts; they have not given up a goal since Oct. 13.

Fodera leads the Iowa offense with nine goals and 18 points besides her defensive duties. Also a rock in the backfield is Tiffany Leister, who leads the team with 35 shots on goal. Midfielder Lauren Edwards leads the team with eight assists. Gibson is also taking advantage of her final season and is second on the team in scoring with 13 points on six goals and an assist. Prior to this season, she had only four career points.

Griesbaum is expecting another tough weekend.

"Since we played them last weekend, we haven't forgotten how they play. I expect a very intense game," she said. "It is the final weekend of Big Ten play, so it does mean a lot for placing and seeding. We have kept a level head preparing for this weekend and have momentum going into this game."

Iowa will get support from home crowd

and it will last until 4:30 p.m.

The Hawkeyes will race three boats in the Varsity 8+ competition and four boats in the Novice 8+ race from 1:30-3 p.m. Look for Iowa's four boats in the Varsity 4+ event and two boats entered in the Novice 4+, at 9:55 a.m. and 11:05 a.m., respectively. And don't forget the exciting Varsity Pairs racing competition.

"The novices are looking to improve upon their last performance by focusing on specific technical and tactical racing components," Kowal said. "We are also able to have more novices row at their first regatta."

Last year, Iowa showed who was in charge of its river when the team turned in a number of impressive performances. Iowa's varsity rowing did not place lower than second. The Hawkeyes will compete in the same five events they participated in last year. This is the time of year the Hawkeyes look to the support of the energetic atmosphere.

"Even though we have a lot to do for the regatta, we enjoy hosting this event here in Iowa City," Kowal said. "The atmosphere is enjoyable, fun and beaming with Hawkeye support. I know the athletes take in great support they receive from friends, families and fans. The staff enjoys sharing the sport to the community and sharing the community with the Midwest rowing teams."

Kasper could break two Iowa receiving records

season despite being suspended from three of Wisconsin's first four games.

Saturday's duel pits Fletcher against one of the best receivers in the Big Ten — Kasper.

"I'm just going to go out there and give 110 percent every play," Kasper said. "It's going to be a good match-up. I'm looking forward to it."

The senior from Burr Ridge, Ill., needs just three receptions to break the Iowa record of 64 catches in a single season, set in 1980 by Keith Chappelle. Kasper also needs only 10 receptions to set the record for career receptions. Danan Hughes (1989-92) and Ronnie Harmon (1982-85) share the Iowa career mark of 146 catches.

Kasper is aware of his approaching milestones, but he cares more about snaring a win, and the W-bedecked Badger helmets should remind him of that.

"I've set some goals for myself, so I'm looking forward to achieving those goals," he said. "I'm just trying to do the best I can. The most important thing right now is just trying to win the game. That's the best feeling — to get those wins."

Bowlsby not a bad rower

"I may have a little too much stomach sticking out to get the oar all the way back," he joked to rowing coach Mandi Kowal as she offered pointers through a megaphone from another boat.

Team members laughed and exchanged nervous glances as Bowlsby peeled off his socks and pristine tennis shoes on the dock, most likely worried about the future of their rowing careers should they capsize. Their laughter quickly turned to cheers and applause as Bowlsby proved to be a quick learner.

"He actually did something most beginners don't do by paying attention to the person in front of him," Kowal said afterward. "Most people get in the boat, and their heads are all over the place."

Indeed, Bowlsby stared forward as he worked on his rowing techniques, feathering and squaring his oar, as well as working to row in unison with the rest of the crew. Afterward, Bowlsby credited Kowal and her team for his smooth introduction to the sport.

Kowal said Bowlsby's presence was something special for her team and helped to raise morale to an even higher level. Though the merger of the two departments is still in its formative stages, Kowal said, she is excited and optimistic about the future.

"This is a complete package now," she said. "I really feel like we are all on the same team now."

Tampa Bay skidding but favored

■ Despite being the only undefeated team in the NFL, Minnesota is a three-point underdog against the Bucs.

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

The Tampa Bay Buccaneers have lost four straight games after an 0-3 start. The Minnesota Vikings are the only unbeaten team left in the NFL.

So how come Tampa Bay is favored when the Vikings come to town Sunday? The spread is 3 points, up from 2½ to start, which means the oddsmakers figure the teams as even and give the edge to the Bucs on home field.

Law of averages. The Vikings are due to lose — they were almost beaten by Buffalo last week. Tampa Bay is too good to lose five straight. And ...

The Bucs were 3-4 last season and won eight of their last nine. Plus ...

• The Vikings beat Tampa Bay in Minnesota three weeks ago, but the Bucs led in the third quarter and might have tied the game had Keyshawn Johnson held on to the ball on the 5-yard line in the final minute.

• Minnesota almost lost at home to Doug Flutie and the Bills last week, needing a fantastic throw and catch by Daunte Culpepper to Randy Moss to win.

Moss also made the catch that beat the Bucs in the Metrodome, taking it away from Pro Bowlers Donnie Abraham and John Lynch. And Culpepper has done nothing but make good throws.

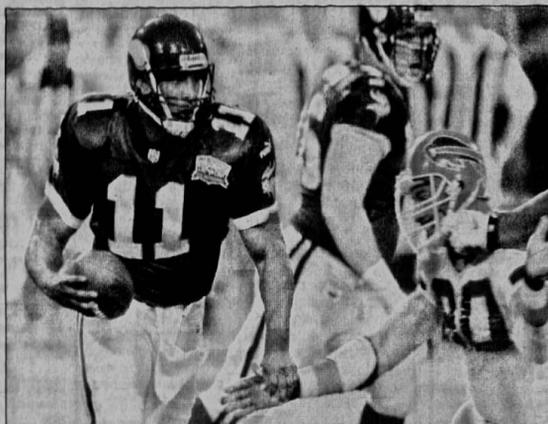

Law of averages and ... Tampa Bay needs this one more.

BUCS 22-20 Tennessee (plus 3.5) at Washington (Monday night)

Eddie George, is "day-to-day" after spraining his knee in Baltimore last week. When a star is "day-to-day" and the game is a week away, he plays.

TITANS, 15-13 Pittsburgh (plus 4.5) at Baltimore

Back on opening day, the Ravens won, 16-0, in Pittsburgh

Ann Heisenfelt/Associated Press

Minnesota quarterback Daunte Culpepper evades Buffalo's Phil Hansen on Oct. 22. The Vikings, the only unbeaten team left in the NFL, play Tampa Bay Buccaneers Oct. 29.

and actually scored a touchdown on a 53-yard pass from Tony Banks to Qadry Ismail. Baltimore hasn't done anything like that (score a TD) in four games, and Trent Dilfer will play quarterback this week.

RAVENS, 9-3 Kansas City (minus 3.5) at Seattle

Elvis Grbac has a sore elbow. So what?

CHIEFS, 20-12 Philadelphia (plus 3.5) at New York Giants

The Giants won, 33-18, in Philadelphia, their best offensive output of the season. It's hard to beat a team twice, but that's not the deciding factor. Try the Giants' 2-9 record after bye weeks.

EAGLES, 13-12 Jacksonville (plus 4) at Dallas

Last week, the Cowboys got Vince Tobin fired.

Tom Coughlin seems to have already quit on the Jags.

COWBOYS, 22-11 St. Louis (minus 7) at San Francisco

The highest scoring game in NFL history was in 1966, when the Redskins beat the Giants, 71-42, for 113 total points. Try 114 this time.

RAMS, 72-42

New Orleans (minus 6) at Arizona

The new coach is a factor, particularly when he's as fiery as Dave McGinnis. But Ricky Williams might challenge Corey Dillon's week-old rushing record against the Arizona defensive line.

SAINTS, 20-12 Green Bay (plus 4.5) at Miami

The Dolphins don't allow 30-point fourth quarters at home.

DOLPHINS, 16-10 New York Jets (plus 3.5) at Buffalo

The Bills don't allow 30-point fourth quarters anywhere.

BILLS, 22-20 Detroit (plus 7) at Indianapolis

The Indy defense is too porous.

COLTS, 31-27 Oakland (minus 7) at San Diego

Trap?

RAIDERS, 20-17 Cincinnati (minus 3) at Cleveland

The rejuvenated Bengals continue their move down in next year's draft.

BENGALS, 20-10 Carolina (minus 3) at Atlanta

MASH unit needed.

Men's swimming competes at home

■ Iowa will compete in one of its only two home meets.

By Julie Matolo
The Daily Iowan

The members of the Iowa men's swimming and diving team don't need to be told what they already have going for them — the crowning of Big Ten champions in three individual events last year and the return of three individual qualifiers to last season's NCAA Championships.

Nine letterwinners also are returning, and two Olympic-trial participants and a four-time Iowa high-school state champion add to the Hawkeye résumé.

Iowa even has the home-pool advantage for its first meet of the season.

What this group of Hawkeyes wants is to begin the new season with a win against Wisconsin. That will begin to satisfy Iowa's craving.

"This will be a competitive meet for both teams," said coach John Davey. "They beat us last year, so we are looking for a little revenge in our own pool. This is our first dual meet of the season, and it's important for us to get off on the right foot."

The Hawkeyes warmed up for their season two weeks ago, when teammates raced against each other in their October Shootout. Senior Jay Glenn won four events: the 50-, 100-, 200- and 500-freestyle.

Friday is the first official collegiate meet of the season. The two-day dual against Wisconsin will begin at 5 p.m. and resume Saturday morning at 9 in the Field House pool.

"Wisconsin and Iowa are pretty comparable, so it will be a close meet," Davey said.

This will be the first of two home meets for the Hawkeyes this season. On Nov. 10, the Hawkeyes will host Purdue. For now, the team's goals are to earn a win this weekend, work toward improving last year's eighth-place finish at the Big Ten, and qualify for the NCAA Championships.

"We are evenly matched with Wisconsin, so it is a great situation where we can hopefully get a win," said senior Nick Hinz.

SPORTS BRIEF

Pronger agrees to contract with Blues

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Chris Pronger, the NHL's most valuable player last season, has agreed to a contract extension with the St. Louis Blues that will make him one of the league's highest-paid players.

The Blues and Pronger announced the deal at a news conference Thursday at the Savvis Center, prior to the team's game against the Calgary Flames.

Pronger signed a three-year, $29.5 million deal beginning in the 2001-02 season.

SPORTS

IOWA HAWKEYES VS.

WISCONSIN BADGERS

11:10 a.m. Saturday at Kinnick Stadium • TV: KGAN • Radio: 96.5 FM and 800 AM

OFFENSE

Choosing between Wisconsin's Brooks Bollinger and Iowa's Kyle McCann is hard. Bollinger has a hard time throwing down-field and, well, McCann does, too. Michael Bennett gives the Badgers the edge.

INTANGIBLES

Wisconsin needs to win three of its next four games to be eligible for a bowl, and the Hawkeyes are 16-point underdogs. Not to mention Wisconsin fans get in the student section.

Who has the edge?

By Mike Kelly

COACHES

Barry Alvarez and Kirk Ferentz were both assistants under Hayden Fry. They have since gone separate ways, with Alvarez going to some Rose Bowls and Ferentz going to the NFL. Until Ferentz matches Alvarez's track record in the collegiate ranks, it's Alvarez.

SPECIAL TEAMS

Iowa's Nate Kaeding has been struggling of late, and Vitaly Pletsky is one of the most reliable kickers in the nation. Badger punter Kevin Stemske rates better than Iowa's Jason Baker as well.

DEFENSE

Wisconsin has Jamar Fletcher, but teams are smart and never throw his way. The rest of the Badger defense is brutal — for the first time this season, the Hawkeyes tie this one.

Runners set for Big Ten race

The men's cross country team travels to Wisconsin this weekend.

By Julie Matolo
The Daily Iowan

Working hard pays off, as one Hawkeye has found out. Iowa cross-country runner Joe Welter, a walk-on in the second year of his collegiate career, has proved this to his teammates. After being the top Hawkeye finisher in the last two meets of the season and breaking his career-best pace for the third time this season (25:12.7), Welter and the Hawkeyes look ahead to the men's cross country Big Ten Championships.

"The Jim Drews Invite was our best meet this season. Welter continues to be a strong and developing runner," said coach Larry Wiecek. "(Paul) Sarris and (Trent) Corey are also having a great impact on the team after getting back in to the swing of things. Right now we are on the upswing, firing on all cylinders and looking forward to a great Big Ten meet." The Hawkeyes will travel to Madison, Wis., to compete in the conference meet on Oct. 29. Wisconsin, the defending champion, is favored to repeat; the Badgers rank sixth in the nation. The Hawkeyes are looking to improve upon their ninth-place finish last year.

"We have a goal this weekend to produce peak performances and to have the best race of the season," Wiecek said. "If we focus on that, we will be very happy with the peak performance of the day."

Hawkeyes ready for Championships

The Iowa women's cross-country team looks for a strong showing.

By Julie Matolo
The Daily Iowan

Iowa's Sarah Arens was a top finisher in every meet of the season for the women's cross-country team. Two weeks ago, she was a top-10 finisher in the Chili Pepper Classic in Fayetteville, Ark., that involved 25 teams, more than 150 competitors and many top runners. This weekend, Arens and the Hawkeyes will compete in the women's cross-country Big Ten Championships. "We are doing a lot of extra mental work this week. This is the toughest meet of the season," said coach Sara Swails. "The Big Ten Championship is an even tougher race than the regionals. The Big Ten has a strong tradition, and every team is good. It is going to be a real barnburner." The Hawkeyes will travel to Madison, Wis., for the conference meet on Oct. 29. Iowa is looking to improve on its ninth-place finish at last year's meet.

No. 3 Wisconsin is the highest-ranked team in the conference, followed by No. 12 Michigan.

Last season, as a freshman, Arens led the charge for the Hawkeyes, finishing a solid 24th in the 94-athlete race. "I know this team will do their best," Swails said. "Sarah is aiming to be All-Big Ten. She has to finish in the top 14, and I feel she has an excellent chance to be on that team."

Iowa vs. Wisconsin

Katching up to History

FROM THE EDITOR

Finding the logic in Iowa's losing ways

In the last two weeks, I've thought long and hard about why this team can't seem to get things turned around, and I've not really begun to come up with any logical conclusions.

Jeremy Schnitker

I don't necessarily think the players are to blame. They have some talent — Ladell Betts is a legitimate Big Ten running back, Kevin Kasper is on the verge of breaking almost every one of Iowa's single-season receiving records.

Blaming the coaches doesn't make sense, either. Kirk Ferentz has NFL experience, defensive coordinator Norm Parker put together some spectacular defenses while he was at Michigan State and Vanderbilt. They all seem to have the right attitude and, for the most part, they approach games with logical schemes.

When I look at teams such as South Carolina and Northwestern, two teams that have turned their programs around, I don't necessarily see more talent on their rosters than I do on Iowa's. It would be safe to say that Lou Holtz has a more impressive résumé than Ferentz, but Randy Walker — who's this guy?

I'm not saying this Iowa team has the greatest coaches and players in the Big Ten, but I think it has more talent and coaching than its 2-17 record over the past two years says.

Going through and trying to find reasons for the team's decline in this team and this team's roster is difficult to do, so I calculated my own "theory," if you will.

It's so illogical, it's almost logical.

If you look at the history of Iowa football, you'll see that the Hawkeyes weren't all that good. Before Hayden Fry came here in 1978, Iowa hadn't had a winning season since 1961.

Before that 1961 season, though, Iowa had four consecutive winning seasons.

What that illustrates is that Iowa isn't a program that stays at the top season after season. It experiences success for a few years then loses for a few more.

What goes up, must come down.

Iowa experienced prosperity it had never experienced during the '80s and early '90s, and now this Iowa team is going to experience the downs that Iowa teams do after they achieve success.

The success of cross-state rival Iowa State also has a relation to Iowa's recent woes. If you look at the past, you'll see that when Iowa State has a winning season, Iowa doesn't.

This year, Iowa State has a winning record, and with seven losses, it's impossible that Iowa will.

Only in 1986 did both Iowa and Iowa State both have winning records. Since 1970, five of the six times Iowa State has had a winning record, Iowa has had a losing record.

I never thought I would be using such abstract logic to understand the lack of success a certain football team is having, but it's one of the only things that makes sense.

Sorry Kirk and Co., you're just going to have to ride history out.

KEVIN KASPER

Record books in reach of Kasper's hands

■ The senior is two catches away from Iowa's single-season receiving record.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

According to roommate and Iowa tight end Kyle Trippier, Kevin Kasper is a very particular guy.

On the field, Kasper is meticulous with the receiving routes he runs and is precise with the use of his hands — he has only two documented drops this year.

Off the field — when he goes out — his clothes always have to look perfect, and his hair is always in the right position.

When he writes, it has to be perfect.

He has to get up at the perfect time every morning to get somewhere at the right time.

"At home, that's the way it is," Trippier said. "When he dresses, everything has to be just right — he has to make sure he smells good and everything."

It's that type of perfection that has transformed a former walk-on into arguably one of the best receivers in Iowa history.

Five years ago, Kasper walked on at Iowa as a scrawny receiver from a suburb of Chicago.

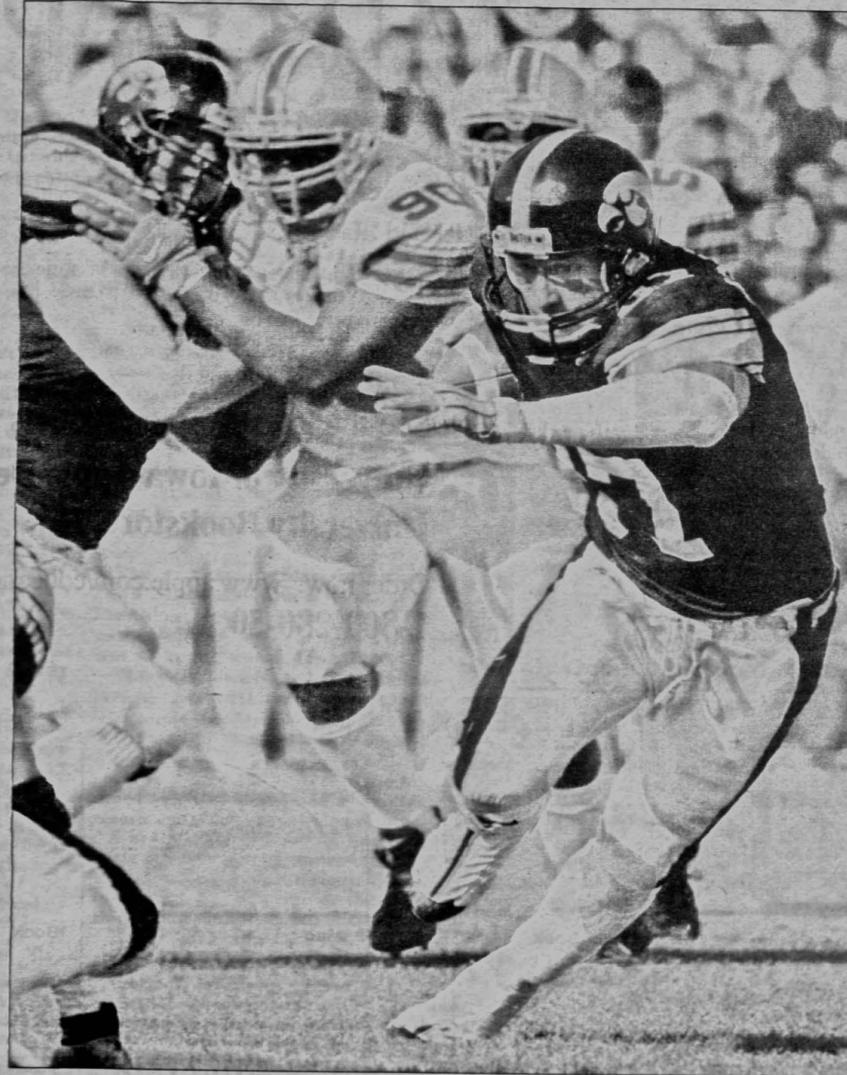

On Saturday, the fifth-year senior, who has 62 receptions this year and 137 for his career, will step into Kinnick stadium two catches shy of Iowa's single-season receiving record and nine grabs short of being Iowa's career leader in receptions.

The single-season record is 64, set by Keith Chapelle in 1980.

The career receptions mark is 146, held by Danan Hughes and Ronnie Harmon.

Kasper was so much of a walk-on, in fact, that he didn't even have a bio in Iowa's 1997 media guide in his red-shirt freshman year. He finished the year with one reception for 19 yards.

He wasn't highly recruited out of high school, where he was all-conference and all-area for Hinsdale South. It's doubtful whether anyone on that 1997 team, which included such luminaries as Tim Dwight and Tavian Banks, thought this kid would have opened the Iowa record books as he has.

If his accomplishments don't prove he's talented, they at least show he is a hard-working, self-made football player.

"Kevin is an ultimate football player," Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz said. "He treats every snap that he takes like it's very important. Not a lot of guys have that ability to focus."

Trippier said he remembers those days when Kasper was a scrub — making plays on the scout team against former Iowa defensive backs Tom Knight, a first-round NFL draft pick, and Plez Atkins.

He also remembers the days when Kasper was busting his butt to get to where he is now.

"I saw everything come together," Trippier said.

that," Kasper said. "It's been a long journey, but it's been an enjoyable one."

His quest for the records is typical of the way he came on campus. Nobody knew who he was then, and there's probably a lot of people out there who don't know he's about to become Iowa's all-time leading receiver.

Most folks probably don't consider Kevin Kasper with the same regard as they do Quinn Early, Dwight, Hughes and Harmon, but his record puts him above all those Iowa players who have enjoyed NFL careers.

Kasper doesn't mind. He's used to people not expecting him to be good. In fact, that was part of his motivation to work so hard at being good, said quarterback Jon Beutjer.

"He carries a chip on his shoulder," Beutjer said. "People told him he couldn't play Division I football. Look what he's doing now. When someone tells him he can't do something, he just works harder."

Part of the reason most aren't aware he's nearing the record is because it has happened so fast.

Kasper didn't really burst onto the scene until the Indiana game on Oct. 23 of last year, where he had 12 catches for 120 yards.

From then on, Kasper started plugging at the records.

The next week, he had a school-record 13 catches in one game against Ohio State. The week after, that he hauled in seven more receptions against Illinois.

After this weekend, Kasper will likely own every receptions record Iowa has.

Now he has to conquer the NFL, or at least make a team.

Scouts probably won't be drooling over Kasper's speed, but as far as hands and quickness go, he's as good as anybody. Beutjer said his agility is spectacular, and if you throw the ball anywhere near him, he catches it.

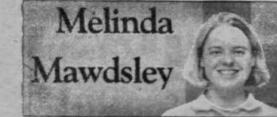

Ferentz, who spent five years as an NFL assistant, said Kasper has the tools to make an NFL receiver.

"I think he has a chance," Ferentz said. "I

Badgers' running game, Iowa's McCann keys to game

PREGAME PICKS

■ The Hawkeyes will also need a strong run defense.

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

At the outset of this year's football season, there were more than just beer bottles and discounted shoes flying around Madison, Wis. There was talk that 2000 would be the year of the Badgers. The red and white would get a turn to celebrate a national title.

Wisconsin is both the two-time defending Big Ten champion and Rose Bowl winner, so to say that Iowa is one game ahead of the Badgers would normally be welcome news for Hawkeye fans.

But Saturday's game is different. The Badgers are 1-4, and, as Iowa did, they defeated Michigan State for their only Big Ten win.

In addition, there is no Hawkeye defensive back-bulldozer named Ron Dayne on Wisconsin's roster. Instead there's junior Michael Bennett. He doesn't have Dayne's power, but he has Dayne's great numbers, averaging 170 yards a game coupled with more speed.

Iowa's defense up front did an effective job containing Ohio State's rushing game on Oct. 21, holding the Buckeyes to 108 yards, but Bennett's speed translates into trouble for the not-so-lightening-like Hawkeye front-line and secondary. When Bennett breaks a run, he's hard to catch and bring down.

However, Bennett cannot defeat Iowa single-handedly. Michigan State's T.J. Duckett tried but failed, so Wisconsin will have to find some air attack as well. Freshman Jim Sorgi, in his first career start last weekend, went touchdown for touchdown with the Big Ten's best quarterback in Purdue's Drew Brees, but he isn't starting.

Read about it every day in The Daily Iowan

Sophomore Brooks Bollinger is back from his Oct. 14 concussion. Bollinger has hasn't won a Big Ten game this year.

So as Wisconsin's starter returns, Iowa's goes to the sidelines. Freshman Jon Beutjer is out, and junior Kyle McCann is in. McCann has Big Ten experience, and his coaches and teammates say he has meticulous game preparation.

He needs to devise schemes to avoid the rushing Badgers because he isn't exactly agile out of the pocket. McCann won't make great scrambling, throwing-on-the-run plays.

His strength is standing in the pocket and finding the open receiver, and they will be open.

Amazingly, Wisconsin is surrendering more passing yards a game than the Hawkeyes despite having Jamar Fletcher, one of the country's premier D-backs. Figure he will be on Iowa's Kevin Kasper like a hawk, leaving the field open for the likes of Kahlil Hill, the tight ends and playmaker Chris Oliver.

If McCann gets time to throw, Iowa wins. If he eats grass, it won't.

The problem is McCann won't get time. The offensive

JASON BAKER

Baker shakes off teammates' punter jokes

■ Although they may tease him, teammates know Jason Baker is a good punter.

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

Two words conjure up laughs and spark a lot of jokes on most football teams: the punter.

Senior Jason Baker understands that role as Iowa's punter carries two huge responsibilities: setting up good field position and blowing off teammates' wise-cracks.

Baker

Junior defensive back and special-teams member Tim Dodge said Baker deserves everything he gets because he's mouthy and runs the show more like "an All-World middle linebacker" than a punter.

Senior wide receiver Kevin Kasper said that while the rest of the team practices, the punter is off shooting pool or lounging in the Jacuzzi.

Baker has never shot a game of pool in his life, and he admits he hates the kicker image, but he just laughs at what his teammates and friends throw in his face.

"Ask Tim who is stronger and faster," Baker said.

But besides being the punter, the reason Kasper and Dodge poke fun at Baker is because they, along with the rest of the Hawkeye team, have a tremendous amount of respect for Baker's talent and the integral role he plays in Iowa's success.

"He's the leader of the punts," Dodge said. "I think the biggest thing about him is he will come up with big punts at big times in the game."

That was evident in Iowa's Oct. 21 game against Ohio State. Pinned in the back of Iowa's end zone, Baker towered a punt 63 yards. He averaged 47.3 yards on six punts during the game, hitting two punts that were downed inside the Buckeye five-yard line.

Punting statistics are something Baker looks at as little as possible because they are deceiving. He said people who understand effective punters understand the importance of eliminating touchbacks and the big returns plus setting up the coverage team for tackles.

The bottom line in punting is hang time and field position.

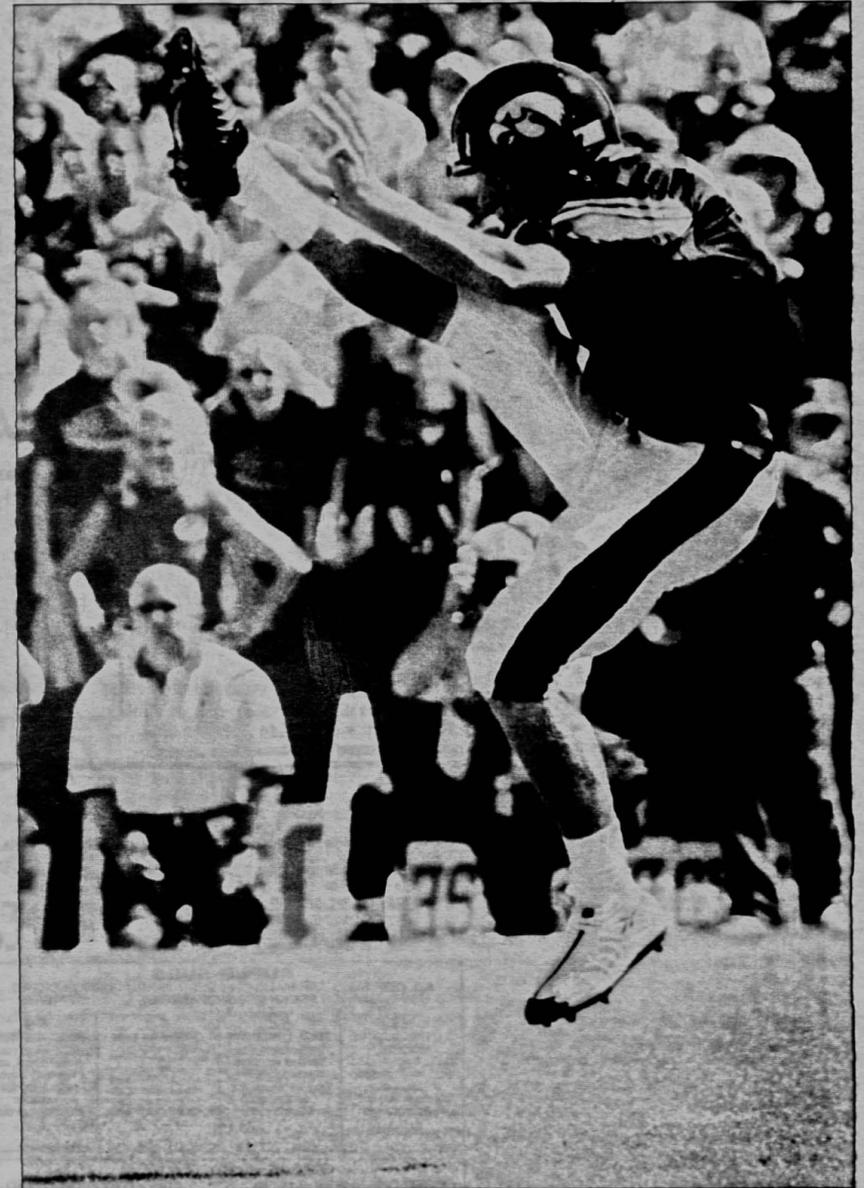

"I don't get all worried about All-Big Ten or this and that, which is what stats lead to," he said. "At any position, the way I measure a football player — and how good he is — is: Do you make the plays when you need them and are you the best, in my case, punter in each specific situation you are put in?"

He's the leader of the punts. I think the biggest thing about him is he will come up with big punts at big times in the game.

— Tim Dodge, Iowa junior

Practice begins by watching film and picking out one thing to focus his attention on. He, along with the rest of the place-kickers and punters, stretch and warm up for 30-45 minutes before practice, and then each individual has 20 minutes of his own time to loosen up.

When the rest of the special teams unit joins Baker, they will go through a five-minute walk-through of the opposing team's unit, followed by offensive and defensive walk-throughs. After the rest of the team is done stretching, Iowa runs through full-speed punt and kickoff situations.

Then Baker is back to 45 minutes of individual drills and short field-goal unit work. His practice ends with full-speed punt and kickoff returns, but his day is not nearly complete.

Pursuing a degree in business administration with a certificate in entrepreneurship, Baker spends most evenings studying. He wants to become familiar with all aspects of the business world and plans to secure a job before he graduates in May.

Baker said he would love to play in the NFL, but he isn't leaving that as his only option.

"Somebody once told me that the NFL stands for 'Not For Long.' I'm just going to make sure I have everything under control," Baker said. "I think I would be selling myself short if I missed walked in last night at about 11:45 p.m. (Monday) and saw a guy catch a ball over his left shoulder that nobody gave a chance."

Ferentz was talking about New York Jets receiver Wayne Chrebet, a undersized receiver from Hofstra who has made a name for himself in the NFL.

"I'm not saying Kasper will be the next Chrebet, but he does the same kind of things I saw Chrebet do when he was coming out of college as a walk-on four years ago."

It's funny that Kasper spends so much time doing his hair and picking out his clothes because those who watch him play in Kinnick don't see that side of him.

Instead, they see a gutsy little guy who makes his blocks, isn't afraid to go across the middle and is downright tough for a receiver.

A pretty boy?

"There was a story done on him a couple years ago, and I was explaining that this kid is a priss. He spends so much time in the bathroom," Tripeeer said. "He's not like that when he's playing, though."

opportunities for the long shot to play football, but I'm going to stay 110 percent active in football until somebody tells me I'm wasting my time."

It's hard to imagine somebody telling Iowa's record holder for career punts (245) and career punting yards (10,192) that he's no good. Baker owns three of the five longest punts in Iowa history. The longest — a 79-yard punt in 1998.

Like he said, statistics don't mean anything to professional scouts. He has four games left in his collegiate career — two in Kinnick Stadium — to make a name for himself, but his only concern right now is beating Wisconsin.

"I use every minute and every ounce of my energy to make myself as good a punter as I can and to help the team as much as I can," he said.

Baker retreats to his corner during practice, not to shoot pool, but to focus. Despite the jokes, he is a quiet leader, preferring for others to "do as I do, not do as I say."

He'll drop the football and swing through. Simple enough. After all, he is just the punter.

WISCONSIN

Wisconsin looks to get back on winning track

■ The Badgers and Michigan State are the only teams without a win in the Big Ten.

By Nick Firchau
The Daily Iowan

Wisconsin junior tailback Michael Bennett said this week that he's excited to take the long bus ride from Madison to Iowa City so he can spend a few hours hanging out and talking with his teammates.

Maybe together they can all figure out where they stand and exactly what kind of a team they are.

The Badgers will pull into Iowa City for Saturday's game as only one of two teams worse than the Hawkeyes in the Big Ten, the other being Michigan State. It's a place where no one ever thought they would be in late October after being ranked as high as fifth nationally in preseason polls.

But their record is deceiving. Wisconsin (4-4 overall, 1-4 Big Ten) is coming off a heart-breaking 30-24 overtime loss to a 6-2 Purdue team in Madison last weekend. The loss is the latest in a string of close defeats at the hands of solid programs including Michigan, Ohio State and surprising Northwestern. The Badgers also posted a 27-23 win over No. 10 Oregon on Sept. 9, which is the Ducks' only loss of the season despite a difficult run through the Pac 10.

"As I watched last week, I thought we played our best football game of the year, our best total game," said coach Barry Alvarez, who has led the Badgers to three Rose Bowl wins since 1994, including the past two seasons. "I thought we made a good deal of improvement from our previous two games. Hopefully, we'll have our team together for a while, and we can now make the strides that we thought we could have or that you'd like to make. My vision and expectations are to continue to improve."

The Badgers will look to improve against an Iowa team that has already served once as a rebounding point for a team coming off a disappointing loss. Last weekend, Ohio State righted its ship after an upset loss to Minnesota by thumping the Hawkeyes, 38-10.

Despite the Hawkeyes' record (1-7 overall, 1-3 Big Ten), Alvarez said he has respect for a potential upset in Kinnick Stadium because of the intensity and involvement of the Iowa crowd.

"I think it's one of the tougher places to play, just because the crowd is on top of you," said Alvarez, who was an assistant coach at Iowa from 1979-86 on the same staff as Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz. "If your benches are back against the wall, which they almost have to be, you've got the crowd right between them. I mean, they're right there. Seven or eight rows up, they hear everything that you're saying with your players, and they usually have something to say regarding that."

"If the crowd gets into it, I think it could be very loud. I think it's one of the tougher places to play, even though it's not one of the largest."

The Badgers will have a good chance at keeping the Kinnick Stadium crowd quiet

Wisconsin quarterback Brooks Bollinger eludes Iowa linebacker Fred Barr in last year's 41-3 Badger victory. Wisconsin is looking for Bollinger, who will be playing for the first time since suffering a concussion on Oct. 4, to have a big game this weekend.

Saturday if they can turn around some of the things that have plagued them this season. The Badgers average 22 points a game and have been dominated through the air, averaging 133.4 yards a game while giving up just more than 247 a game.

Fate may have thrown a wrench into the gears of the Badgers' pass offense on Oct. 4, when sophomore starting quarterback Brooks Bollinger suffered a concussion in a 17-10 Wisconsin win over Michigan State. Bollinger missed the second half of the game as well as the entire Purdue game because of the injury.

Into his place stepped red-shirt freshman Jim Sorgi, who finished the MSU game with 96 yards and a touchdown. Sorgi then made his bid for the Badgers' starting spot by completing 21-29 passes for 243 yards and two touchdowns against the Boilermakers.

Alvarez announced earlier this week that Bollinger has been cleared to play against Iowa, and despite Sorgi's play in his relief, Bollinger will be Wisconsin's quarterback.

"I feel good about the fact that I have confidence in both of them. I'm really proud of the way Jim has performed," Alvarez said. "But Brooks is our quarterback — he led us to 11 straight wins and a Rose Bowl."

Bollinger's numbers over seven games have been less than stellar, which has created the mild controversy in Madison. Bollinger has completed 60-124 passes for 706 yards with four interceptions and four touchdowns. Although Sorgi's numbers have the rumor mill turning for the Badgers, Alvarez insisted he would stick to playing only one quarterback.

"Obviously, if somebody's hot and somebody's not, you have somebody to go to," he said. "I think it's certainly a good insurance blanket to have somebody to go to that you can trust. But as far as using two, I've never been in a situation where I've had to go through that."

Bollinger said that the team will have confidence in whoever takes the snaps.

"As long as you have two people who can step in the huddle that guys respect in any situation, it's fine," he said. "And I think we have that."

One thing the Badgers also have is one of the finest tailbacks in the nation in Bennett, who is second in the nation in rushing with 169.6 yards a game. He leads the nation in overall rushing yards, with 1,187. Bennett has filled the role of last year's Heisman winner Ron Dayne, who became the NCAA Division I all-time rushing leader in a 41-3 win over Iowa in Madison last fall.

Despite being the best running back in a conference rich with talent this season, Bennett said Dayne taught him about humbleness before he left for the NFL, and that lesson has helped him as he has faced increasing national attention.

"I'm really not paying any attention to it — that's one of the things Ron told me," he said. "Outside of the numbers and everything, don't pay attention to those things because you tend to get caught up in it. If you focus on football and the team, then after the season you can look back on things like that. So he taught me a lot — to just approach it in a very humble way."

Following in Dayne's footsteps by winning a national rushing title would be quite an accomplishment for Bennett, but he said he carries the most pride in the fact that he rarely loses a grip on the ball.

"The one thing I am most proud of is that I only have one fumble this year," he said. "I may have jinxed myself just now, but I pride myself and keep kicking myself in the butt to hang onto the ball, even if I don't get a yard."

THIS WEEK IN THE BIG TEN

This is the week Purdue starts its Rose Bowl quest

Jeremy Schnitker

This is the first time this year that I've had to pick these Big Ten games, so give me a break — the picks might not be all that good. I do think that this is the week that Purdue stakes its claim as the best team in the Big Ten, Michigan State gets its first Big Ten win, and Penn State gets consecutive wins.

week it will prove it with a win over Illinois.

Spartan quarterback Ryan Van Dyke will finally live up to the hype surrounding him coming out of high school, and T.J. Duckett will continue to ramble through defenses. The Illini, whose only Big Ten win was against Iowa, will come out sluggish on the road after last week's loss to Penn State.

Michigan State 24, Illinois 21

win over Illinois last weekend behind a quarterback who was making the plays people were saying he could. Rashard Casey had a great game last weekend and will do the same this weekend.

Indiana is coming off a huge win over Minnesota last week, and I think it will experience a letdown after last week's elating win. The Nittany Lions' defense will hold Hoosier quarterback Antwaan Randle El in check.

Penn State 21, Indiana 14

Northwestern can move the ball, but I think people are starting to figure out the no-huddle, spread offense it runs. Minnesota has the defense to stop it, and the Gophers' offense should be able to move the ball against the Wildcats. Despite schemes, the Gophers have more depth and are simply a better team.

Minnesota 21, Northwestern 14 quest.

Drew Brees has been on in the Boilermakers' last two games, and best of all, the offense hasn't been totally dependent on him. Purdue has had a very balanced attack in its last two wins.

Ohio State is a very talented team, but it doesn't play that well as a unit. The Buckeyes had numerous penalties last week against Iowa, and their offense slowed down when they were ahead.

Purdue, however, is on a mission for the Big Ten title, and Brees is on a mission for the Heisman trophy — I don't see Ohio State or anybody in the Big Ten stopping either one.

Purdue 35, Ohio State 28

Illinois at Michigan State

Michigan State is on the brink of winning its first Big Ten game of the year. After last week's 14-0 loss to Michigan, a game in which the Spartans were close to coming back, it was evident that this team is better than its 0-4 Big Ten record — this

Penn State at Indiana

I firmly believe that Joe Paterno has things back on track in Happy Valley. Well, at least it's better than the team that lost to Toledo. The Nittany Lions came out with a convincing

Northwestern at Minnesota

This is a tough one. Minnesota, at times, looks like one of the best teams in the Big Ten, but then it goes out and loses to Indiana. Northwestern was a team most thought would be the worst in the conference this year, and it's in the middle of the Big Ten race. Go figure.

Ohio State at Purdue

There's a very good chance that the winner of this game will go on to win the Big Ten title. That being said, I've got to look at who I think is going to win this conference. Since this summer, I've been saying Purdue is heading to the Rose Bowl this year, and this game is where the Boilermakers start their

THE FANS

Badger fans won't be as wild for Saturday's game

■ The Badger win over the Hawks two years ago led to dozens of arrests and disputes.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

For those of you expecting a rowdy weekend full of drunk Wisconsin Badger fans parading downtown, burning flags in the student section and causing general debauchery — you're going to be a little disappointed.

This year isn't going to be as crazy as the last time Wisconsin folk came to Iowa City. "I don't think things are going to be that rowdy," said Wisconsin student Bryce Monson. "It's probably going to be pretty mellow. The rivalry isn't as big as it was two years ago."

In 1998, the Badgers beat Iowa for the first time in Iowa City since 1974 and treated downtown Iowa City as if it were their own. Chaos ensued. But Iowa has now lost to the Badgers three straight seasons, including a 41-3 blowout last year. It's not that big a deal for Wisconsin to beat Iowa anymore.

Not only has that aspect taken away from the contest — the Badgers themselves aren't having a banner year. Despite starting the season as national-championship contenders, the Badgers have fallen to 1-4 in the Big Ten. That's the same as Iowa's record.

Kevin Healy of Madison, Wis., another Badger fan coming to the game, said he also doubts whether things will get exceptionally wild.

"I don't think it's going to be crazy, especially if we lose," he said.

The night after the 1998 game, 88 people were arrested, the most during any home football game weekend that year.

There were approximately 2,000 people packed onto the Pedestrian Mall late in the evening. Chants were started by both Badger and Hawk fans, some leading to actual fights.

Despite the fans' antics of two years ago, it doesn't appear Iowa City is in for a second cheesehead invasion. Charles Green, the director of UI Public Safety, said he believes things won't get too out of hand. Public Safety won't take any special precautionary measures for this Saturday's game, he said.

Tim Evans, a UI senior, said he remembers the last time Wisconsin fans were in town — unfortunately.

"It was ridiculous," he said. "You go into Kinnick that Saturday and you see 40-50 fans in the student section wearing red. I just didn't understand why Kinnick stadium security people didn't ask them to leave."

Though Evans was disgruntled about what happened two years ago, he did think that this year would be a little less hectic.

"This game won't be as big," he said. "Both teams aren't that great."

Monson said it's not just in Kinnick that Wisconsin fans go crazy. He said he was at Wisconsin's Ohio State and Michigan State games this year, and the Badger fans invaded the OSU and MSU student sections also, he said.

"Last week, we were in the student section (for the Michigan State game) and got yelled at," he said. "There were some alumni below us that got upset."

Wisconsin fans are known to be some of the craziest in college sports. When their basketball team went to the Final Four, they invaded the streets of Madison. For home football games, the fans are as intense as any.

Healy said Wisconsin fans are some of the craziest around.

"If not the craziest," he
