Stars stump I.C. for Gore

■ The IMU was chock-full of big names Sunday at a Gore rally.

By Jesse Elliott
 The Daily Iowan

Actor Martin Sheen calmed the palpable tension at a star-studded Al Gore rally Sunday, as a largely Democratic crowd got more than it expected when two hecklers interrupted the already highly charged event.

Organizers estimated that nearly 1,000 UI students and Iowa City residents attended the rally for Democratic presidential candidate Gore featuring movie director/producer Rob Reiner, Sheen and other actors and actresses from "The West Wing" and "Chicago Hope."

Other public figures at the rally included Rep. Dick Meyers, D-Coralville, Johnson County Supervisor Sally Stutsman and Mary Mascher, a Democratic incumbent candidate for Iowa legislative District 46. Reiner told the crowd he was "looking for two things in a president — qualifications and the right views on the issues," both of which he feels Gore has.

Southern Baptists unraveling under conservatives

■ The theological conflict in America's largest Protestant group nears a climax.

By Richard N. Ostling
 Associated Press

NEW YORK — Is America's largest Protestant denomination unraveling?

Two decades after strict biblical conservatives began winning control of the Southern Baptist Convention, and four months after they reworked the doctrinal platform, it's beginning to look that way.

One congregation after another has voted to halt financial support or leave the Southern Baptists altogether. Last week, former President Jimmy Carter renounced membership in his lifelong denomination due to its "increasingly rigid" theology.

At heart, this uncivil war is theological. Denominational leaders say the Bible is "inerrant" — perfect in historical detail as well as spiritual teaching — and insist that those who work at Southern Baptist institutions uphold this. Their "moderate" opponents say Baptists do not believe in imposed creeds, and there should be more leeway in biblical interpretation. Subsidiary disputes involve abortion, homosexuality, politics, women and much else.

The climax could occur today if there's a declaration of semi-independence from the Baptist General Convention of Texas, which accounts for 13 percent of denominational funding and 17 percent of the Southern Baptists' membership of 15.9 million.

Proposals at the meeting in Corpus Christi would undermine the 75-year-old "Cooperative Program" that funds the denomination, slashing support to Southern Baptist Convention seminaries next year by $4 million and to headquarters agencies in Nashville, Tenn., by $1 million. Money would flow instead to favored schools and causes within Texas.

That would virtually de-fund five of the six Southern Baptist seminaries. The sixth is the largest in the world, within Texas.

A sense of where you are ■ Coming soon, cell phones and other mobile devices will pinpoint your location for others.

By Anick Jesdanun
 Associated Press

NEW YORK — Imagine walking by a Starbucks in an unfamiliar city. Your cell phone rings, and a coupon for coffee pops up on its screen, good only at that location.

How did your phone know you were even near that particular Starbucks? What else does it know about you?

Enter location tracking, coming to a mobile device near you. Features that one day can pinpoint your whereabouts to within the length of a football field raise enormous privacy concerns, but they also offer enormous benefits.

The challenge will be determining where to draw the line.

Consider a technology to be unveiled today. Called Digital Angel, a microchip worn close to the body promises to record a person's biological parameters and send distress signals during medical emergencies.

But misused, these types of capabilities could amount to virtual stalking.

Cell phones, handheld devices, even car navigation systems will soon have detailed tracking abilities, if they do not already. Services could begin appearing within a year or so.

Much of the drive will come from a federal law that requires cell phones to identify callers' locations to speed 911 emergency responses. If the industry has to install expensive equipment anyway, why not use it also to make money?

"There's going to be a dramatic increase in the amount of tracking that's made possible, in part by services they don't know they have," said Daniel J. Weitzner of the World Wide Web Consortium, which sets technical standards for the Web.

Such tracking will let someone visit a Web site and automatically get weather, movie showings or neighborhood restaurants, based on their current location. If they're lost, they will be able to ask for turn-by-turn directions. Those short of cash can be pointed to the nearest bank machine.

But if the information is

I.C. proves Halloween not just for kids

■ Halloween revelers hit downtown a little early with an array of original costumes.

By Amanda Gorsche
 The Daily Iowan

Homer, Maggie and Marge Simpson, the Village People and the crew from Monty Python's Search for the Holy Grail converged on downtown Iowa City this weekend to celebrate Halloween a little early.

Parties and costume contests, including competitions at both the Deadwood, 6 S. Dubuque St., and Quinton's Bar and Deli, 215 E. Washington St., brought out Iowa City residents and UI students alike who took pleasure in donning costumes in anticipation of the ghoulish holiday.

Lugging three glass beer pitchers in each hand and assuming the character of "Lulu the Polynesian waitress," Deadwood cocktail waitress and UI senior Angie Allbee said the downtown bar has the best Halloween contest in Iowa City.

"It's wonderful to see all of the diverse costumes here," she said. "This is the only bar that has personality."

Quinton's held a costume contest on Oct. 28 in an effort to raise money for the American Cancer Society by reeling in those who enjoy the holiday. Giving the $3 cover charge to breast-cancer research, the bar held a raffle and gave prizes away that had been donated by area businesses.

The idea was created to honor National Breast Cancer Awareness Month, said UI sophomore and bartender Lonn Lease. Quinton's will hold another contest Tuesday to raise additional funds for breast-cancer research, he said.

Board spares city in area-code split

■ Increased cell phone use has led to the creation of a new Eastern Iowa area code.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City has been spared from an area-code change that the Iowa Utilities Board made on Oct. 27.

Because of a shortage of available new telephone numbers within the 319 area code, the board voted to split Eastern Iowa into two different area codes.

"There were some heavy discussions with my seniors about asking for an area code split instead of an overlay," said Thayne Lowman, the UI voice services manager.

The board will decide on the new number later this year; it will take effect in 2001.

Representatives of the UI attended regional meetings to state their case, and they were confident that the board would choose an area-code split because of the overwhelming support it gained, he said.

The board's alternative would have been to give new phone numbers new area codes, which could have resulted in one household having two different area codes. It would also require dialing all 10 digits of a phone number. Splitting the region into two parts divides the area following local telephone-company boundaries and assigns one side a new area code.

The UI feared having to replace business cards and other materials printed with the current area code and losing contact with outside parties, Lowman said.

"I hate to venture to say, but ... it would have cost the UI hundreds of thousands of dollars," he said. "I think it would have been devastating."

The devastation the UI and Iowa City escaped is what some cities in Eastern Iowa, including Dubuque and Davenport, will face upon receiving a new area code later this year, said Kurt Hansen, the service manager of Sand Communications in Cedar Rapids.

Businesses will be forced to reprint stationery, business cards and notify their business partners of the change because the board didn't listen to the Iowa telecommunications industry's recommendation to adopt an overlay plan, Hansen said.

"It's a huge deal," he said. "In a short time, we'll all be dialing 10 digits, anyway. People should get used to doing that."

As a result of the area-code change, all cell phones in the affected area will have to be reprogrammed by the phone's dealer, Hansen said. All computers and fax machines will have to be reprogrammed as well, he said.

Increased cell-phone use has depleted Eastern Iowa of available phone numbers in the 319 area code, Hansen said.

"With the number of cell phones we've sold, especially in the Quad Cities, I could see the need (for a new area code)," said Mark Brock, an employee of Iowa Wireless in the Old Capitol Town Center.

Brock said Iowa Wireless sold approximately 1,000 cell phones to customers in Eastern Iowa this past month. The trend will only continue and possibly instigate area code changes in other parts of Iowa as well, he said.

In July, some towns in the 515 area code, including Creston, Newton, Marshalltown and Mason City, switched to 641.

"We're probably on solid ground for the next 10 years before something else has to be changed," Lowman said.

SPJ wins award for 2nd-straight year

■ Members of the UI Society of Professional Journalists are surprised by the repeat honor.

By Sharyn Hosemann
The Daily Iowan

For the second-consecutive year, the UI campus chapter of Society of Professional Journalists, 1999-2000 term, won the Outstanding Campus Chapter Award.

The UI chapter, a student organization with approximately 50 members, was awarded national recognition this weekend at the SPJ National Convention in Columbus, Ohio.

With little expectation of winning twice in a row, SPJ sent nine student delegates to represent the group at the convention.

"We were really surprised," said Richard Johns, a UI journalism professor and the SPJ adviser. "We beat out 11 other schools (in the nation) and were praised for our strength in all areas, including fund raising, community service and the quality of professional journalists who contributed to our programs, which set us apart from the other universities."

The award is given annually to the most deserving campus chapter and is based on an evaluation of the annual report compiled by the chapter's president. Out of 12 regions, each regional champion competes for the national award. The UI chapter went up against chapters from such schools as the University of Oregon and Indiana University — both well-known journalism schools.

UI senior Alissa Swango, who served as the president of SPJ during the term that won the award, was also shocked by the win.

"It had been a long time before we won for the 1998-99 term and then to win a second time is really rare," she said. "We weren't expecting it but (Johns) is an incredible adviser, and we've had excellent support from local and national journalists speaking to our chapter."

Before winning the national award SPJ had to win regionally.

"Our SPJ won the regional award over schools in Kansas, Nebraska, Missouri and Southern Illinois. We really focused on fund raising and community service by selling T-shirts and mugs and by sponsoring a family in the UI Dance Marathon. We've had our struggles with membership, but overall we've had good membership and involvement which truly makes a difference," Swango said.

Robert Leger, the Region Seven director for SPJ who judged the UI chapter for the regional competition, said it is fairly normal for a school to win the regional award two years in a row but extremely rare to win the national award two years consecutively.

"The UI SPJ has a history of a strong chapter and is well-organized," he said. "It has been consistently creative with fund raising and service projects in the past two years. The UI SPJ does what the professional SPJs do, and that makes it exceptional."

UI Professor John Soloski, the director of the UI journalism school, hailed the UI SPJ as a testament to hard work.

"The journalism students are starting to get the recognition they deserve for what they have been doing all along," he said.

Soloski said the selection of the UI SPJ over two of the top journalism schools, the University of Kansas and University of Missouri, marks the UI journalism school as one of the top programs in the nation.

Texas Medicaid fraud alleged

■ The dental program for poor children during George W. Bush's tenure is under scrutiny.

By Larry Margasak
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The letter sent to Texas Gov. George W. Bush carried a pointed message. Dentists in his state were unnecessarily performing more expensive procedures on poor children to earn higher reimbursement, a former Medicaid investigator alleged.

Bush, who has benefited from large donations from the state dentists' lobby, replied to the 1997 letter by instructing a top aide to look into the allegations and take "whatever action you deem appropriate."

Three years later, former Medicaid investigators who worked during Bush's tenure say little has changed to keep poor children from getting unnecessary work, such as more expensive crowns when all they need are fillings.

An Associated Press review of state figures shows Texas provides a much larger number of crowns to Medicaid patients, compared with other big states.

In fiscal 1999, Texas paid for 548,600 fillings and 227,300 crowns — a ratio of one crown for nearly every two fillings. In comparison, Illinois paid for 208,500 fillings and just 10,500 crowns — a nearly 20-to-1 ratio. And Pennsylvania dentists had 69,200 fillings compared with just 5,600 crowns — a more than 10-to-1 ratio.

Texas dentists receive between $68.75 and $85.51 for stainless steel children's crowns, compared with $27.30 for a single-surface filling and more for additional surfaces.

"What scares me is the lack of concern by the governor's office about fraud in the Medicaid dental program," said Bob Olson, who was the Texas attorney general's senior Medicaid fraud investigator for 12 years until his retirement in 1997.

Police say alcohol involved in pedestrian accident

Early on Oct. 28, an alleged drunken driver struck a pedestrian, who was charged with public intoxication, at the intersection of Gilbert and Burlington streets, according to police reports.

Witnesses claim that at approximately 2 a.m., they saw UI senior Jason Craig driving a Silver Honda Prelude west on Burlington Street across Gilbert Street when he allegedly struck Paul Smith, who was crossing the street toward Kum & Go, 323 E. Burlington St., said Iowa City police Sgt. Jim Steffen. Witnesses told officers that Craig had a green light when he allegedly struck Smith, who was not walking within the crosswalk, Steffen said.

Craig was charged with operating while intoxicated and had a blood alcohol content of 0.176, police reports said.

Smith was taken to the UI Hospitals and Clinics, where he was treated for a major incapacitating injury and was charged with public intoxication having a blood alcohol content of 0.130 five hours after the accident, according to police reports.

UI alumnus Jacob Vick had just gotten a pizza at Papa John's when someone told him a pedestrian had been hit by a car. A crowd had already formed when he saw two police cars and an ambulance at the scene.

"I wasn't really surprised when I heard the news," he said. "That intersection is a big walkway. Somebody is eventually going to get hit."

Craig was released from the Johnson County Jail on Oct. 28. — by Bridget Stratton

1,200 see Nader in IMU

■ The Green Party candidate inspires some locals to change their preference.

By Jesse Elliott
The Daily Iowan

Green Party presidential candidate Ralph Nader brought his anti-corporate views to the UI on Oct. 27 in an attempt to rally both Democratic Party and undecided voter support in the final days of the 2000 election season.

The event, held in the IMU Main Ballroom, drew approximately 2,000 Democratic, Republican and Green Party supporters from the UI and Iowa City community.

UI law Professor and School Board member Nick Johnson, who introduced Nader to the crowd, said he has worked actively in every Democratic presidential campaign since 1948 and held appointments under three Democratic administrations before deciding to endorse Nader earlier this year.

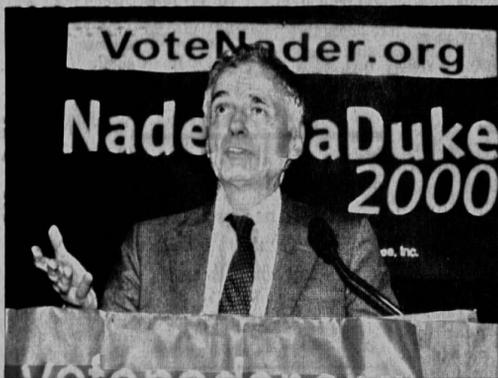

"This was not a trivial decision for me," Johnson told the crowd. "But I have come reluctantly to the conclusion that the two major parties are no more able of internal reform through instituting campaign-finance laws than a heroin addict is of kicking his habit."

He said that 30 years of broken promises from both of the two major parties to reform campaign finance, combined with Nader's commitment to rid the political process of private-interest money, led to his endorsement of Nader.

Nader took the stage at 7:30 p.m. to the applause of 1,200 people in the packed ballroom and another 700 in an overflow viewing room. He spoke for two hours, conducted an hour-long question-and-answer session, and met with supporters at a post-rally reception.

The main topics of his speech included "the current two-headed corporate party being nurtured by a Niagara of corporate money," the history of civil disobedience in America and the need for younger voters to be "skeptical, not cynical" in regards to the American political system.

The conventional response of cynicism to crooked politicians will not work," Nader told the crowd. "Cynicism shrinks back. Skepticism roars back."

Democratic supporters of the Gore/Lieberman ticket were not the only ones in attendance to give Nader's message a second thought after the speech.

Jasmine Bootman, an Iowa State University senior who was persuaded by Democratic, Green and Republican friends to drive the two hours to see Nader, was planning on voting for Republican candidate George W. Bush until the rally.

"I considered Bush the lesser of two evils," Bootman said. "But I had never realized before tonight how deep corporate sponsorship ran in our government. It's an ethical stand I just can't agree with."

Not everyone in the crowd was sold on Nader's message.

UI sophomore Patrick Harvey said he wasn't impressed by Nader, who was "not a very enthusiastic speaker."

"He's too extreme to get anything done," he said. "I like his arguments about the drug war and the need for a no-confidence box on the ballot, but he's got nothing to offer to the mainstream voting public."

Others in the crowd complained that even if Nader's intentions are good, his speech was too long to be effective, and much of the crowd dispersed before it was over.

But Nader himself was optimistic about the gathering, praising the UI and campuses across the country for having the public forums, libraries, research facilities and talented faculties that allow students to "use their idealism now to make a difference."

He won UI senior Jane Anderson's vote with this sentiment and others, she said.

"I was going to vote for Gore because he is not as supportive of big business as Bush," she said. "After this (rally), my vote goes to Nader."

Anderson also said the event had inspired her to get more involved in volunteer work with community organizations, another major point in Nader's speech.

"Stop growing up corporate," he urged the audience. "Start growing up civic."

Gore team trots out celebrities

■ Al Franken and Jesse Jackson visit the IMU, urging Nader voters and others to vote for Gore.

By Erica Driskell
The Daily Iowan

Shifting between comedy night at a local club to Sunday church mornings, "Saturday Night Live" comedian Al Franken and the Rev. Jesse Jackson spoke Friday to more than 700 people at the IMU to rouse support for presidential candidate Al Gore.

George W. Bush emphasizes his education accomplishments in Texas, where he claims test scores have improved substantially, but compared with the national level, this is not true, Franken said.

"For example, thanks to George W. Bush, 60 percent of high school students in Texas now read at a higher level than the governor," he said as the audience erupted in laughter. "That was not true when Ann Richards was there."

Choosing a candidate to vote for was simple, Jackson said on a more serious note, comparing the Republican and Democratic parties as two teams with different points of views.

On the right side, Bush offers stances against affirmative action, a women's right to choose and consumer-rights advocacy lawsuits, Jackson said.

Bush's attempts to arouse voters by including appearances with Gen. Colin Powell at his side stemmed from public scrutiny of Bush's lack of knowledge in foreign policy, Jackson said.

"The irony of it, is that Colin Powell is general because of affirmative action. Under George Bush it would have been illegal to make Colin Powell general, and, if Bush wins, he will make it illegal for future Colin Powells," Jackson said as audience members shook their head in disbelief and a few yelled out.

In an effort to appeal to Nader supporters in the audience, Jackson referred to the 1968 election, when Richard Nixon won the presidency because those on the left attacked the Democratic presidential candidate, Hubert Humphrey.

"Friends, we are all Democrats," Jackson said. "For an environment free of pollution, we must win. For Social Security, we must win. For women's right to choose, we must win. We must win. If we win, there is a better day. If we lose, it'll be a long dark night."

Jackson's analysis of two teams does not accurately reflect the views of third-party candidates such as Ralph Nader, said UI graduate student Jeff Charis-Carlson, the chairman of Students for Nader who attended the event.

"Lieberman came out and said affirmative action is not necessary," Charis-Carlson said. "Lieberman represents a group transformed from a nominal ally of labor to a business and other dependent party."

Jackson presented fiery rhetoric, which is what UI Students for Bush Chairman Christian Kurasek expected.

"Jackson said the Democratic Party is a team for everybody, yet they play to pick and choose who everybody is by offering only to the middle-class people," Kurasek said, who agreed with Charis-Carlson that Gore is reaching out to liberals such as Jackson because of the recent increase in support for Nader.

Jackson and Franken helped influence UI students to get out and register to vote before the deadline to hopefully vote for Gore, said Emily Hajek, a Students for Gore member.

"Jackson has a large constituency of his own, and Al Franken is just hilarious to hear," she said. "He offers a different perspective for those who aren't interested in politics."

that although he doesn't feel it is the responsibility of high-profile celebrities to endorse political candidates, their endorsements can draw attention to the candidates and issues that are important to the public. This is one of the reasons that Reiner and Sheen have been campaigning for the Democratic ticket so hard in the final weeks of the election season, he said.

One of the points that all five actors and actresses stressed in their speeches was the need for progressive Democrats who are thinking about voting for Ralph Nader, the Green Party presidential candidate, to choose Gore on Nov. 7. They argued that a vote for Nader will only undermine Gore's chances of beating Bush.

"There is a big difference between Democrats and Republicans," said Rob Tully, the chairman of the Iowa Democratic Party. "We Democrats care for all people, even those we don't personally know."

Reiner echoed Tully's concern that Bush's proposed income-tax cut "will benefit only the rich," despite the fact that Reiner himself would gain from the cuts.

"I'm a rich guy, and Bush's cuts will go to me," he told the crowd. "But I don't want them, not if it means living in a country whose kids aren't educated as a result."

At one point during Reiner's speech, two UI students in the crowd interrupted him to voice their concerns with Gore's stands on the war on drugs, American military intervention in Colombia and the federal minimum wage. Reiner was visibly shaken by the audience interruptions and the speakers after him all faced the same crossfire.

Sheen commended the protesters at the rally, saying it was "good to know that the Constitution is alive and well at the University of Iowa." He invited the two hecklers up on stage to have their say after the rally.

"Some measure of justice was expressed at this assembly," Sheen said, referring to the two vocal audience members, who said they were ardent Nader supporters. "Anger is a good thing if it motivates you to do something for justice. I love these kind of events in a public forum."

City Councillor Steven Kanner, who spoke with Sheen after the rally, said he, too, was glad the students brought up the points they did. He also disagreed with Gore's stands on military defense initiatives and missile defense.

"Everybody has a point of view, and it's rare they get a chance to express that in such a large assembly," Kanner said.

Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, which faces an $800,000 hit even though its students include 1,368 Texans.

Another measure at Corpus Christi could threaten the denomination in a different way.

It would open the Baptist General Convention of Texas to full participation by Baptists in other states. Proponent David Currie of Texas Baptists Committed says that would merely provide "safe haven" for unhappy congregations. But others think the Texas convention might eventually become a multi-state denomination, rivaling the Southern Baptists.

Campaigning is intense. On a new headquarters Web page, the top executive in Nashville, the Rev. Morris Chapman, says the Texans' complaints are false and misleading. "When someone is drilling holes in the boat, the crew must both bail water and try to repair the damage," he adds.

Currie's organization, which has worked for years to uncouple Texas from the Southern Baptist Convention, has helped plant similar groups of self-identified "mainstream" or "moderate" Baptists in 13 other states.

Four Texas activists have incorporated a Baptist Convention of the Americas on paper, in case a new denomination is needed.

One of the four, retired Sysco Corp. Chairman John F. Baugh of Houston, says that might not happen, but "something will be formed. We cannot in good conscience participate in activities of the fundamentalist faction in control of the SBC."

Within Texas there are already two statewide conventions, the one meeting in Corpus Christi and the competing Southern Baptists of Texas Convention, which has enlisted 419 congregations since 1998. That group supports the national denomination and its commitment to Bible inerrancy. Virginia also has two competing conventions.

Meanwhile, the Cooperative Baptist Fellowship, an Atlanta-based group of 1,800 congregations both inside and outside the Southern Baptist Convention, provides parallels to many Southern Baptist programs — foreign missions, church-planting, publishing, pensions — and there are hints it, too, might evolve into a denomination.

Location tracking coming near you — very near stored, location tracking could result in a 24-hour-a-day record of a person's whereabouts.

So what if a divorce lawyer wants to check if someone's been cheating, or if a social-service agent wants to know how many times a person has visited a candy store with his child?

"You have to ask, 'Who gets how much information?'" said Jason Catlett, the chief executive of Junkbusters Corp., a nonprofit privacy-monitoring group in Green Brook, N.J.

"Telephone records are routinely subpoenaed. They can be very intrusive, but far more intrusive is a complete log of your physical movement," he said.

But companies looking to gain business from location tracking insist that the worst-case scenarios presented are impractical to implement in reality.

"There's no way a database is large enough or cost-effective for Starbucks to monitor everyone's location on the offchance they can acquire a customer," said Jason Devitt, the chief executive of Vindigo, which offers 11 city guides through Palm organizers.

Lee Hancock, the founder and chief executive of go2 Systems Inc., said any short-term gains from such tactics would be offset by losses if they alienate customers.

Leading wireless and advertising companies agree that they must tread carefully because mobile devices are inherently more personal than desktop computers.

At DoubleClick Inc., whose ad-targeting system generated much of the Net's privacy complaints, officials won't deliver location-based ads right away. The company wants to develop privacy standards first, using lessons from the desktop.

"We've all learned what to do and what not to do, and we can port that over to the wireless market," said Jamie Byrne, the strategic director for emerging platforms at DoubleClick.

Any such ads will likely target a metropolitan region, rather than a city block, because audiences for block-by-block ads would be too small, Byrne said. Ultimately, he said, such targeting will help subsidize wireless services that customers want.

tume contests and parties for Halloween every year. He used air-conditioning insulation to create the three-foot high, black, spiked hair of the "Slim Jim Guy" from the beef jerky commercials.

Wearing yellow bib overalls, black sunglasses and painted on sideburns, the 56-year old Kurth said he comes up with an original costume from an advertisement each year.

"Last year, I had a huge moon head for my 'Mac the Knife' costume from McDonald's commercials," Kurth said. "I'm still a kid inside, and this keeps me young."

Many students chose to dress up and go out for the weekend because Halloween falls during the school week. UI senior Julie Baskerville used a safari shirt she found at home to impersonate Steve from the TV show "The Crocodile Hunter." She said she chose the outfit because she thought it would be comfortable and because she likes the show.

"Halloween is one of my favorite holidays," Baskerville said.

Political celebs flock to Iowa City ...

Don't fall for the hype

On Friday afternoon the Rev. Jesse Jackson and Al Franken spoke at the IMU and gathered support for Al Gore. On Sunday afternoon, the IMU hosted Rob Reiner and Martin Sheen for the same purpose. Though the city was swarming with celebrities, nothing was really accomplished.

The Democrats believe that Ralph Nader is a threat to Al Gore's voter base. The recognized faces were sent out by the Democratic Party mainly to sway Nader supporters not to waste their vote on Nader and inadvertently support George W. Bush. As has been stated by Gore and Lieberman, and reiterated by the Rev. Jackson on Oct. 27, "A vote for Nader is a vote for Bush." Franken and Jackson's main objective was to motivate those in attendance to vote, but they failed to really stress why Gore should receive those votes.

If the Democratic Party were truly worried about Gore's recent fall in the polls, it should have sent out substance rather than glamour. Celebrities attract spectators, but their message is rarely as powerful as that of the actual candidate.

Nader knew this. Nader spoke at the IMU on Oct. 27 to more than 1,000 enthusiastic supporters. By campaigning for himself, he is showing voters that they are the most important thing in this election.

The Democrats' circus of the stars proves nothing more than the fact that Gore is trailing slightly in almost every poll. The only fix to the low support that plagues Gore is his genuine interest in voters. No celebrity can push Gore's views or policies better than the man himself. No amount of fame will incite the same passion from supporters as the candidate.

Alaska puts marijuana on the ballot ...

Vote to end the war on drugs

On Nov. 7, UI students should take a moment from the presidential elections and watch the returns from Alaska. Alaska's Ballot Measure 5 would legalize marijuana for all adults. Furthermore, the measure would be retroactive, granting amnesty to many current prisoners of the war on drugs in Alaska. The measure made it onto the ballot with more than twice the required number of signatures.

It is not surprising to see potential for such a bold move for freedom in Alaska. It is the only state libertarian enough to pay its citizens instead of taxing them. The idea that liberty extends to social policies as well as economic policies should not be surprising.

Students at the UI should take note of what is going on up north. If you have ever gotten high, you should ask yourself if you should be in jail right now. Most of you have friends and family who have gotten high. Should your friends and family be in prison?

Even if you believe that those close to you have never used marijuana, you could still be a victim of the war on drugs. Our drug laws let the government listen to your phone calls and intrude into your private life. Congress is trying to let federal agencies subpoena your private records without your knowledge or a court warrant. If the police get the wrong address with a no-knock search warrant (so that you don't have time to flush the drugs down the toilet), you could get shot after the government busts down your door and shoots your dog.

You could still be a victim of the war on drugs ... The war on marijuana kills peaceful people.

Regrettably, even if the measure in Alaska passes, the measure would not abolish the Drug Enforcement Administration. California allows individuals to have more than an ounce of marijuana for medical use. That did not stop the federal government from breaking into Peter McWilliams' house in California. After they found marijuana at his home, the government gave him regular drug tests to ensure that his use stopped. McWilliams takes anti-virals to help him fight AIDS. He was taking marijuana to help with nausea. After the government took away his marijuana, the nausea set in, and McWilliams died choking on his own vomit. The war on marijuana kills peaceful people.

Though the vote on marijuana is in Alaska, UI students can help. UI students can vote for federal candidates who want to end the federal war on drugs so that states such as Alaska can free their citizens. Libertarian Russ Madden is running for Congress in Iowa's 1st District; he will support liberty by fighting to end the war on marijuana. For president, you can vote for Harry Browne, Libertarian, or Ralph Nader, Green, who both support ending the war on drugs.

Naked political truth

There comes a time in everybody's life when they just have to take their clothes off for money.

That point came quite recently for Paula Jones. You might remember Jones, whose claim to glory was her sexual-harassment suit against the president. If you don't, then I'm sure the December issue of Penthouse will refresh your memory. Jones, citing tax bills and the costs of raising two kids, bared it all for the adult magazine for a "confidential" sum of money.

"I thought it was the best thing to do for me and my children," said Jones of the decision to expose her nether regions to millions across the nation. "Of course, the money had something to do with it."

Of course. Now this I can understand. After receiving a very meager $151,000 from her Clinton lawsuit, it is easy to see how Jones would have trouble paying the bills. I mean, how far can six figures really get you these days, anyway? So Paula Jones, like Darva Conger and LaToya Jackson before her, obtained extra income the honest, American way — by getting naked. Jones described the Penthouse shoot as "an adventure, a once-in-a-lifetime thing." Oh, what a magical day I'm sure that was. Who wouldn't want to take part in that?

If you can handle the occasional odd stares at the grocery store or at church, then by all means: Strip down and cash in your check. Live the dream. And if Paula Jones can do it, why can't the rest of us?

So I gave Playgirl a call. I figured that, with rent coming up and a phone bill to pay, I could use the cash. A racy spread in a respectable nudie mag would be just the thing to boost my financial status, so I pitched the idea to the magazine.

The receptionist didn't seem too sure about what I was getting at, however. I assured her that I had no problem with getting completely naked, as long as the photos were tastefully done. She said that she'd pass my idea along to the appropriate person.

That was a start, I thought. But just to cover my bases, I fired off an e-mail to Playgirl which outlined my proposal: "My name is Jesse," I wrote, "and I'm interested in posing for your magazine. I view this as an exciting staff, and I hope to hear from you soon.

"P.S. People say I look like a Greek statue."

All exaggerations aside, I thought this letter would do the trick. Unfortunately, the magazine's e-mail system seems to be encountering some problems. Since I sent the note, I haven't heard much of a response. Just something about "processing my request" and getting "in contact" with me shortly. Hmm. This nude modeling business is trickier than I imagined. How did Paula Jones do it? She got the red-carpet treatment from Penthouse, but I've gotten nothing but the run-around from Playgirl. This, I think, is no way to treat a Greek statue.

But I'm not ready to give up yet. There's plenty of money to be had out there for a 5-10, 170-pound guy with a zest for nude modeling. If Playgirl continues to brush me off, then I'll find another publication that will shell out the dough. If I can pull in enough to pay for a few months' worth of rent, then it will be a mission well accomplished.

The beauty of it is that Paula Jones and I aren't the only ones who can do this. America, to borrow the cliché, is a land of opportunity. This pertains to many things, with soft-core pornography being among them. Any individual with a lack of self-respect and a dream can strike it big in today's world, and don't let anybody tell you otherwise. So take your clothes off. Dare to dream. And make some money.

Vote NO to stop the new jail

We hope voters will decide against building a new 255-inmate facility to be located west of Interstate 380 at a total cost of between $31 million and $37 million.

If Proposition A is defeated, Citizens for Alternatives to a New Jail pledges its continued involvement in this important countywide issue. We will work to involve the many groups left out of the original decision-making process. We will help begin a community discussion on affordable and sensible solutions to meet the incarceration needs of the county. We will encourage participation by the county attorney's office, defense attorneys, social-service agencies, Department of Corrections, magistrates and judges, clergy, substance-abuse facilities, Rape Victim Advocacy Program, the Mental Health Alliance, the Domestic Violence Intervention Program, other community organizations and individual citizens.

The community has our firm commitment to follow through in a positive fashion should Proposition A be defeated.

Students should oppose jail

UI students represent 40 percent of the population of Iowa City, yet only 5 percent choose to vote in local elections. Some students are saying: I'm only here for four years; I'm not part of the community. If we are not part of the community, then why do we make up a majority of the inmate population in the Johnson County Jail on a typical weekend? We are a large part of the community, and we have a voice.

The proposed new $20 million jail would hold 255 inmates, up from 92 currently. If the number of jail beds increase, so will arrests. It will increase the likelihood of your getting busted by the Iowa City police on a Friday night on the Pedestrian Mall. A night in jail could change your life forever.

The Entrepreneurs Against the New Jail don't want this to happen to you. With the support of the Citizens for Alternatives for the New Jail and Students for Local Politics, our goal is to increase student voter turnout from 5 percent to 30 percent for this election. We also want you to vote NO for the new Johnson County Jail on Nov. 7.

Russia, EU strive for oil deal

■ Russian and European officials talk about ways the EU can use Russia's energy reserves.

By Deborah Seward
Associated Press

PARIS — Russian President Vladimir Putin and European leaders will broach big ideas on ways the European Union can tap into Russia's vast energy reserves, but few concrete steps are likely to emerge at today's biannual EU-Russia summit.

Long-term energy security has become a hot topic in Europe with oil prices soaring, following weeks of giant protests against high gas prices in many European nations earlier this fall.

Europe is increasingly interested in securing sources of natural gas and oil beyond OPEC, and it is looking to Russia as a potential partner. Russia, which wants foreign investment to develop its energy infrastructure, has been courting Europe.

Deputy Premier Viktor Khristenko, the senior Russian official on EU matters, said Russia at this summit hoped to begin a high-level energy dialogue concerning "the energy security of Europe in the 21st century" that would lead to concrete deals about future pipelines and other energy projects.

That grand scheme is a major focus of today's talks between Putin, French President Jacques Chirac in his role as head of the rotating EU presidency, European Commission President Romano Prodi and other EU officials.

In addition to energy issues, Khristenko said, Putin would discuss the enlargement of the 15-member European Union and the economic and political impact on Russia, economic and financial cooperation, as well as scientific and technical links.

The explosive situation in the Middle East, the Balkans, NATO expansion as well as strategic issues were also expected to be discussed.

Speaking to journalists in Moscow before his departure, Putin said Russia welcomed the expansion of the European Union but opposes NATO growth in Eastern Europe as long as the Western military alliance doesn't want Russia as a member.

"The idea of a greater Europe seems quite attractive to me, a Europe in which there should be no hegemonism of any kind," Putin said in remarks shown on Russia's state-run RTR television.

Discontent still simmering in Peru

■ A group of soldiers revolts, disgusted with the president and his ex-intelligence chief.

By Will Weissert
Associated Press

LIMA, Peru — One day after President Alberto Fujimori dismissed the nation's three top military leaders in a bold move designed to bring stability to Peru, a group of soldiers staged a revolt Sunday, seizing a southern mine and reportedly taking an army general hostage.

Some 51 soldiers under the command of Lt. Col. Ollanta Humala joined three unidentified civilians in taking, then abandoning, the copper mining town of Toquepala, 535 miles south of Lima near the Chilean border.

The soldiers said they were disgusted with Fujimori and the continued influence of his feared former intelligence chief Vladimiro Montesinos.

"I will lay down my arms when the chain of command is legitimate and there is a president who has been truly elected by the people to whom I would swear 'subordination and valor,'" Humala said in a statement, demanding that Montesinos be thrown in prison.

Fujimori met Sunday with the new head of the army and chief of Peru's joint armed forces to discuss the military uprising, the presidential palace said. He made no public comment.

Peru has been in turmoil since the September release of a video showing Montesinos apparently bribing a congressman to support Fujimori. In the ensuing scandal, the president announced he would step down in July 2001 after new elections.

The political crisis intensified on Oct. 23, when Montesinos returned to Peru after a failed asylum bid in Panama and promptly went underground. Montesinos has a strong following in the Peruvian military, and rumors of a coup swirled. Peruvians debated whether Montesinos would allow his former boss to loosen the viselike control Montesinos has had on the military, electoral institutions and court system for the last decade.

But two days later, Fujimori led a charge through a posh resort community outside Lima in hopes of somehow stumbling upon his former spy chief, a man who has made his living keeping out of sight. No formal charges have been leveled against Montesinos.

Colombia holds mostly peaceful vote

■ Officials report only scattered disruptions in the local elections.

By Jared Kotler
Associated Press

BOGOTA, Colombia — Local elections took place peacefully across Colombia Sunday in what officials labeled a vote against the guerrilla and paramilitary violence tearing apart this South American country.

Colombians voted for governors, mayors and town council members, many of them independents challenging the two traditional political parties — the Conservatives and Liberals — who are increasingly blamed for Colombia's woes.

Charges that leftist rebels stole ballots marred closely watched voting in a guerrilla-held southern area. It was the first time in 36 years of fighting that Colombians had voted under formal rebel rule.

Fighting between rebels, rival paramilitary militias and government troops has left tens of thousands dead, forced millions to flee their homes, and crippled a once-vibrant economy. But amid a security operation involving some 150,000 soldiers and police, there were no reports of major clashes Sunday and only scattered disruptions to voting.

Despite its endemic strife, Colombia has one of Latin America's strongest electoral traditions and little history of military coups. Turnout appeared to be strong in the elections, with some people casting ballots even though they doubted whether it would make a difference.

"This country is a disaster," said Lucy Restrepo, a 52-year-old housewife, as she left a polling station in a wealthy Bogota neighborhood guarded by soldiers with machine guns and police checking bags for weapons.

"There is robbery, corruption, war. It's horrible," she said. "Who knows if my vote will help?"

Renewed Mideast violence kills 5

■ Israel sends tanks to Gaza as Ehud Barak meets with opposition leader Ariel Sharon.

By Jamie Tarabay
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — A column of Israeli tanks and armored personnel carriers rolled into the Gaza Strip and exchanged fire with Palestinian gunmen Sunday, a day of renewed clashes that left five Palestinians dead and dozens wounded.

Amid the turmoil, Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak met Ariel Sharon, leader of the hawkish Likud party, in an attempt to forge a coalition government. No immediate agreement was reported.

In Gaza, the Karni road junction resembled a battlefield, with acrid smoke from burning tires darkening the air and tanks moving along the road, their occasional fire punctuating the sound of assault-rifle rounds.

The army said it sent the armored column to secure free movement of Jewish settlers on the key road, which cuts through the strip and has been the site of violent Palestinian protests.

The tanks responded to fire from Palestinian police by shooting from mounted machine guns, the military said. A 14-year-old boy and a 31-year-old man were killed, medics said. At least 25 people were injured overall in Gaza.

"We've retaliated with tanks and helicopter gunships at certain points, and we used them with consideration," said the army chief of staff, Lt. Gen. Shaul Mofaz. The military, he added, plans to begin initiating action rather than reacting to gunfire.

Military officials said the army wanted to phase down its aggressive image and reduce friction with stone-throwing Arab youths, focusing instead on armed Palestinian radicals.

Also in Gaza, Palestinians set off a homemade bomb and fired at a bus carrying Jewish settlers near the Morag settlement. The army responded with fire, the military said.

They ain't misbehavin'

There's something very wholesome about community theater.

It's that "Let's put on a show!" attitude that makes productions such as Iowa City Community Theatre's Of Thee I Sing possible.

But it's that same wholesome sheen that leaves the theater's version of the 1931 Gershwin musical seeming a little undercooked.

Of Thee I Sing, a political satire set in the midst of the Great Depression, draws its strength from the pointedly clever writing of lyricist Ira Gershwin and librettists George S. Kaufmann and Morrie Ryskind.

Kaufmann and Ryskind crafted a rambunctious crew of political archetypes: A booze-guzzling Southerner, a sassy Irishwoman, a drowsy campaign vet, a pompous senator, a blow-hard campaign spokesman, and an overly eager and a completely ignored VP-to-be named Throttlebottom fill the campaign committee roster for the story's centerpiece — a youthful, smirking presidential candidate named John P. Wintergreen.

The premise induces a chuckle as well. Not wanting to exert themselves by tackling such issues as health care, education or the environment, the Wintergreen/Throttlebottom ticket builds its platform on one issue that no American could help but support: love.

What follows is a beauty pageant to find a young Wintergreen a suitable object of affection, during which Wintergreen takes matters into his own hands by falling for a charming young secretary with a killer recipe for corn muffins.

So, with such vibrant person-

Kate Boonstra and Don Schneider play Diana Devereaux and the French Ambassador in the political satire Of Thee I Sing. The play will run through Nov. 19 at the Johnson County Fairgrounds.

alities in place and a plot that at least induces a smile, the community-theater cast isn't required to act or sing phenomenally to transmit Kaufmann, Ryskind and Gershwin's humor. The actors need only roll with the intrinsic humor of the inflated egos and colossal dolts who that populate Of Thee I Sing. Unfortunately, instead of shooting for over the top, the cast opts for under control.

The lack of gusto is particularly noticeable during the musical numbers. George Gershwin's melodies are simple and straightforward, and they leave plenty of room for the actors to put their own stamp on each phrase.

But too often we notice the performers concentrating more on pitch and tone than character traits. Some quality facial animation would be all that's needed to cover any vocal shortcomings.

And even when freed from the admittedly challenging task of simultaneous singing and acting, the cast is still defensive. The liquor-soaked campaign pow-wow following the National Convention is much too light on sleaze. Somehow the cast just doesn't look comfortable downing whiskey.

The community theater does earn points for its timely choice of subject matter. In the show's opening number, a phalanx of Wintergreen supporters tote signs with innocuous slogans, such as "A Vote For Wintergreen Is A Vote For Wintergreen" and "Wintergreen Is A Man's Man's Man," that aptly mirror the general confusion and apathy that seems to be surrounding next Tuesday's presidential election. A vote for Gore (or Bush) is, well ... a vote for Gore (or Bush). That's really all you can say.

But despite the timely staging, Of Thee I Sing is just way too nice. Not to say that the entire show is built on political depravity, but at the important and potentially hilarious times that it is, what's sorely needed is a cast that can muster some energy to misbehave convincingly.

■ The longest actors' strike in Hollywood, which targeted TV and radio advertisers, is over.

By Leon Drouin Keith
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Representatives of television and radio commercial actors voted on Oct. 28 to go back to work, ending a six-month strike against advertisers that was the longest talent walkout in Hollywood history.

Actors can audition and attend calls starting today, said Screen Actors Guild spokesman Greg Krizman.

"We know there are a lot of pent-up demands," he said.

The vote by approximately 150 members of the boards of the guild and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists was nearly unanimous, Krizman said. The boards voted to end their stop-work order, endorse an agreement worked out with advertisers last week, and send the deal to members who will cast their votes by mail.

Because rank-and-file reaction so far has been positive, Krizman said, the three-year contracts should be official by the end of November.

The advertising industry and commercial actors made key concessions on labor issues that ranged from the payment of residuals to jurisdiction over the potentially lucrative Internet market.

The industry agreed to continue to give actors residual payments when their ads run on network television. The unions gave up their demand to spread the residual system to cable-TV stations.

The advertising industry also agreed to recognize the union's jurisdiction in Internet ads, which had been a contentious issue.

The unions claim a combined membership of 135,000.

Actors lost untold millions in commercial payments in the strike, which began on May 1, and some found themselves hard-pressed to keep up with car payments and mortgage bills.

The job action also cost the Los Angeles-area economy an

Blair Witch 2 can't scare up audience

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The witch in the woods casts a weaker spell the second time around.

Book of Shadows: Blair Witch 2, the follow-up to last year's low-budget surprise hit, The Blair Witch Project, was unable to knock off reigning box-office champ Meet the Parents.

The Blair Witch sequel took in $13.1 million at 3,317 theaters, debuting in second place for the weekend, according to studio estimates Sunday.

Meet the Parents, the comedy starring Robert De Niro and Ben Stiller, remained No. 1 for the fourth straight weekend.

Blair Witch 2 pulled in less than half what its predecessor did during its first weekend of wide release in July 1999. Blair Witch grossed a whopping $29.2 million on its way to a $140 million domestic gross after playing to sold-out theaters in limited release for two weekends.

It racked up those opening numbers in only 1,101 theaters, averaging a stellar $26,528 a cinema. Playing in three times as many places, the sequel averaged $3,949 a theater.

Blair Witch 2 cost about $15 million to make. The original cost an estimated $60,000 to shoot, plus around $300,000 to improve the sound and other steps to make it ready for theaters.

Estimated ticket sales for Oct. 27 through Sunday at North American theaters, according to Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc.

1. Meet the Parents, $15.1 million.
2. Book of Shadows: Blair Witch 2, $13.1 million.
3. Remember the Titans, $8 million.
4. Bedazzled, $7.7 million.
5. Pay It Forward, $6.9 million.
6. The Little Vampire, $5.5 million.
7. Lucky Numbers, $4.6 million.
8. The Contender, $2.5 million.
9. The Legend of Drunken Master, $2.3 million.
10. Best in Show, $1.8 million.

Life in the heartthrob lane

NEW YORK (AP) — Jonathan Lipnicki, 10-year-old star of the new movie Little Vampire, knows what it's like to be in the limelight. And he's not so sure he likes it.

"People used to be really wild. They would follow me around," he said in Sunday's Newsday. "They thought I had a cell phone in my backpack and stuff. And I was in kindergarten."

Lipnicki, who previously appeared in the films Jerry Maguire and Stuart Little, said he doesn't envy stars with heartthrob status.

"I've heard when girls meet 'N Sync and the Backstreet Boys, they throw up on them and faint. I wouldn't want to get thrown up on," he said.

Season's celeb greetings

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 100 actors, models and sports figures have found a new vocation of sorts — designing holiday greeting cards.

Cards designed by actors Christian Slater and Marlee Matlin were shown in Sunday's USA Weekly magazine. Slater's Christmas card displays a tree and gifts, while Matlin's Hanukkah card features the American Sign Language hand symbol for "I love you."

Boxer Sugar Ray Leonard, supermodels Cindy Crawford and Heidi Klum and actors Ashley Judd, Greg Kinnear, Jenny McCarthy and Rosie Perez also created holiday cards.

Proceeds from the cards, which go on sale Nov. 12, will go to the Elizabeth Glaser Pediatric AIDS Foundation.

The essence of Larroquette

SUN VALLEY, Idaho (AP) — This resort town's first film festival went off without a hitch as fans and Hollywood insiders showed up for screenings and workshops with top actors and directors.

Actor John Larroquette of "Night Court" fame told audience members that good acting comes from finding the essence of a character.

But sometimes absorbing the essence can go too far.

Producer Thom Mount said he had to coax Al Pacino from his trailer when he got so caught up in his role as gangster Tony Montana in the 1983 movie Scarface that he became paranoid.

In the swim of things

NEW YORK

(AP) — What does Australian swimming sensation and Olympic gold medalist Ian Thorpe do to unwind after stepping out of the pool?

Thorpe
Olympic swimmer

He slips into something a little more comfortable.

"Trunks are so small, you feel vulnerable," he said in Sunday's edition of the New York Times.

Thorpe, 18, was in New York for the opening of the Giorgio Armani exhibit at the Guggenheim Museum.

Wearing leather pants and an open-neck shirt, the 6-foot-5 swimmer could have been mistaken for an Armani model. But Thorpe stresses function over form.

"I don't have a great body," he said. "I have an efficient body. I have a natural advantage for my sport."

Thorpe won three gold medals and two silver medals in Sydney.

Iowa falls in opener

The Hawkeye men's swimming team loses at home against Wisconsin.

By Julie Matolo
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's swimming and diving team finished its first meet of the season with a conflict of emotions. A loss in the home dual meet left the Hawkeyes disappointed but happy with fast times and individual performances.

Personal bests and impressive Iowa times were not enough to keep up with Wisconsin. The final score was 112-51.

"We had some very fast times today," said head coach John Davey. "Times were fast, Wisconsin was just a little faster. We are in good shape right now. The scoreboard doesn't look the greatest, but we are happy."

Field-hockey team sends seniors out with win

Iowa ends its regular season with a 1-0 shutout of Northwestern.

By Roseanna Smith
 The Daily Iowan

Gina Carr's phone call home this week will be full of news.

Her parents, James and Janette, rarely miss an Iowa field hockey game, but because they wanted to see Carr play this weekend in the Big Ten Tournament, they decided to wait to make the trip from Milford, Pa.

In one of the first games the Carrs have missed and the last game of the regular season, Carr carried Iowa to its 1-0 shutout of conference rival Northwestern (6-11 overall, 2-3 Big Ten) Sunday.

Being in the right place at the right time, Carr connected with the back of the cage eight minutes into the game. Returning a Northwestern attempt to clear the ball from inside the circle, she put up the only point Iowa needed to win.

"Sometimes, you don't connect; when you do, it feels great," she said. "It makes you want to score more."

Iowa remained in the lead through the half, keeping mostly on the offensive side of the ball. The Hawkeyes took 16 shots but were unable to score again in the game. NU's goalkeeper Jessica Yates kept the cage impenetrable with nine saves.

After the half, Northwestern came back with a renewed offensive spirit, taking more shots on Iowa's goalkeeper Saleema Rogers.

"It was a little frantic," Iowa head coach Tracey Griesbaum said. "I had a sense that we didn't play as much together as we have been. We sustained in the first half but lost a little in the second half."

After an Iowa time-out at the 12-minute mark, the Wildcats were even more determined to tie up the score. Against a tough Hawkeye defense, two Northwestern penalty corner attempts were deflected with five minutes remaining.

Iowa's chance to tack on another point with a penalty corner with two minutes remaining failed, but the Hawks held on for the win.

"I feel relieved," Griesbaum said. "I don't feel that they played as well as they could have, but it's always good to have a W."

The win puts Iowa in a conference tie with Ohio State at 3-3 in the Big Ten and 11-7 overall. It also sends out senior captains Susan Gibson and Natalie Dawson on the wings of victory.

Gibson was pleased after Sunday's game, which marked the end of her collegiate career.

Crucial mistakes plague Hawkeyes

Iowa's defense stops Wisconsin, but the offense cannot capitalize.

Futility in the red-zone prevented Iowa from taking advantage of great defensive play and three Wisconsin turnovers in a 13-7 loss on Oct. 28.

Twice the Hawkeyes found themselves inside the Badgers' 20-yard line. Twice a Kyle McCann pass found its way into the hands of a Wisconsin defensive back.

McCann's first interception resulted in Wisconsin's only touchdown of the game. The junior's second would have given Iowa a touchdown had it not been tipped into the hands of Michael Broussard. Replays showed McCann's target, senior Kevin Kasper, was clearly held in the end zone, but that was just one play the Hawkeyes were unable to execute successfully.

"We let one get away," running back Ladell Betts said. "That was a winnable game. Take nothing away from Wisconsin. They played hard. We played hard, but it was definitely a winnable game. I feel bad for the defense guys, because they played a tough game. We didn't hold up our end of the bargain."

The emergence of Iowa's (1-8 overall, 1-4 in the Big Ten) defensive front has been a highlight in a season scattered with few thus far. Wisconsin (5-4, 2-4) is traditionally one of the Big Ten's best ground-pounding teams, and this year is no different. The Badgers entered the contest against

This one was winnable

As funny as it sounds saying a 1-7 team should've beat last year's Rose Bowl winner, it's true.

Iowa should have won Saturday's game.

Give the Hawkeyes a break here and a break there, and they could have won by a lot.

Take away two interceptions inside Wisconsin's 20-yard line by a quarterback who was starting his first game of the season, and Iowa could have had 14 points. Not to mention that one of those interceptions came as a result of Iowa receiver Kevin Kasper being blatantly held in the end zone.

The referee who was directly behind him must not have seen Kasper's sleeve ripped halfway across the end zone by a Wisconsin defender.

No surprise there though — Big Ten refs have been great this year!

Hawkeye crews cruise to victories in home meet

Iowa rowing coach Mandi Kowal says she is happy with all facets of her team's meet.

By Julie Matolo
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's rowing team earned a happy conclusion to its final race of the fall season. And the Hawkeye glory could not have been earned on a better place than the Iowa River.

The 10th annual Head of the Iowa Regatta brought an array of fans along the river Sunday. In the most competitive atmosphere Iowa has ever hosted, the Hawkeyes reminded their guests who owned the river.

"Every event, the Hawkeyes raced looked great," said head coach Mandi Kowal. "The Pairs, Open 4+, Novice 4+, Novice 8+ and Open 8+, looked even better than other years. We are making positive steps forward."

Positive faces were abundant after a first-place finish in the Women's Open 8+ event. Iowa's A boat captured the 22-boat event with a time of 14:03.91. The Hawkeyes put Wisconsin (14:22.66) and Texas (14:30.15) in second and third places, respectively. Iowa's B-boat finish was good enough for 10th (15:08.44).

"The Open 8's race was amazing," said senior Katie Garrels. "We far exceeded our expectations for this competition. We had a lot of momentum from the Head of the Charles, last weekend, which we used."

Iowa played host to more than 1,100 competitors for the regatta, the most participants ever. Seventy-nine more boats than last year were entered including crews who competed on the Iowa River for the first time. The Hawkeyes entered boats in five events in the 2.5 mile race.

In the Open 4+ competition, the Hawkeyes unofficially won first- and second-place finishes with Iowa's C and A boats, respectively. Kansas' A and C boats finished behind Iowa, leaving the Hawks' C boat with a sixth-place finish, unofficially.

In the Pairs competition, Iowa's A boat unofficially finished in second place behind Kansas State. Three more Iowa boats clung close behind for a third-, fourth- and sixth-place finishes. "This weekend was a perfect ending for the fall season," senior Katie Hurobut said. "Also, ending the season at home this way will carry us well into our spring season."

Iowa's Novice rowing team members, who began learning the sport a little more than two months ago, also pleased Kowal. In the Novice 8+ competition, Iowa's B boat finished fifth (16:39.46), and Iowa's A boat finished sixth (16:51.48) in the 36-boat race. The top Hawkeye boat in the Novice 4+ event was 16th.

"All Novice boats looked really good," Kowal said. "Coach Sean Tobin has set up a rowing calendar really well, and they have learned and

Sooners a convincing No. 1 with win

■ Improbable endings and Nebraska's loss marks a big day in college football.

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

The Sooner Schooner rides again.

On a day of frenzied finishes, Oklahoma simply sent its fans into a frenzy by knocking off rival Nebraska and replacing the Cornhuskers as the No. 1 team in the nation.

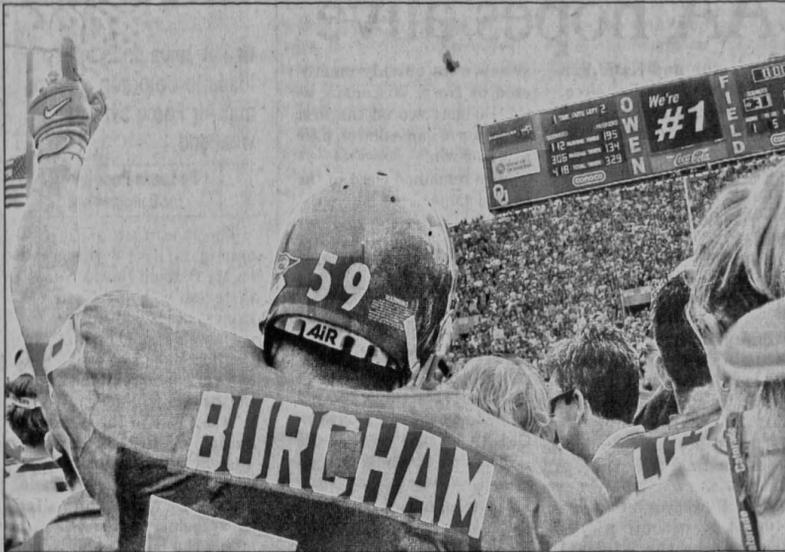

"It's a great feeling to be sitting where we are today," Sooners center Bubba Burcham said following Saturday's 31-14 victory over the Huskers. "It's been a long time. It's good to see us back on top."

Oklahoma (7-0, 4-0 Big 12) made it back to the top of the AP poll for the first time in 13 years. In 1987, the Sooners did it in similar fashion — by beating Nebraska in the final game of the regular season. However, Miami beat Oklahoma in the '88 Orange Bowl to win the national title.

This season, the Sooners are looking to return to the Orange Bowl — the Bowl Championship Series' designated national title game — on Jan. 3, where they just might find Miami, now No. 3, waiting again.

Oklahoma must win the rest of its games — at Baylor, Texas A&M and Oklahoma State and home to Texas Tech — then would likely have to beat Nebraska in a rematch in the Big 12 title game Dec. 2 in Kansas City.

Although many national-title scenarios remain, an Oklahoma-Miami matchup looks to be the early favorite. The BCS standings on Monday should have Oklahoma in first place, with Miami in the top four but poised to reach second place by next week if it can beat No. 2 Virginia Tech.

Chris Landsberger/Associated Press

Oklahoma's Bubba Burcham walks through a crowd of fans as he raises his finger in the air while holding an orange after Oklahoma upset Nebraska 31-14 Oct. 28.

Miami (6-1) beat Louisiana Tech 42-31 on Saturday, while the Hokies (8-0, 6-0 Big East), 37-34 winners over Pittsburgh, may be without Michael Vick, who has a sprained right ankle.

Says Miami coach Butch Davis: "If you think he's hurt, you're kidding yourself."

And now for the flash finishes. At Blacksburg, Va., Dave Meyer's passing set up Carter Warley's 27-yard field goal with 16 seconds left to keep Virginia Tech among the three remaining unbeaten teams. Vick returned to the sideline on crutches, his foot and lower right leg wrapped in a brace.

"I'll do anything in my power not to miss it," Vick said. "We'll see what happens after a few days."

At Clemson, S.C., the Tigers (8-1, 6-1 ACC) saw their national title hopes end when Kerry Watkins made a one-handed, 16-yard TD catch with 7 seconds left to give No. 25 Georgia Tech (6-2, 4-2) a 31-28 upset. No. 10 Clemson is at No. 4 Florida State (8-1, 6-0) next Saturday in Bowden Bowl II, matching Seminoles coach Bobby Bowden against his son, Tigers coach Tommy Bowden.

Woodrow Dantzler, Clemson's Heisman hopeful, left the game at halftime after reinjuring his left ankle. He threw for 76 yards and ran for 18 yards. For the Yellow Jackets, George Godsey threw for 454 yards and three TDs.

The Pacific-10 provided three amazing endings:

— At Tempe, Ariz., No. 7 Oregon (7-1, 5-1) beat Arizona State 56-55 in double OT when the Sun Devils faked a point after and missed on a 2-point conversion pass. The win keeps the Ducks, who never led in regulation, on course for a Rose Bowl berth.

Joey Harrington tied a school record with six TD passes — two in the final 3:21 to force OT.

— In a driving rain at Stanford, No. 8 Washington blew an 18-point, fourth-quarter lead, but Justin Robbins caught a 22-yard TD pass from Marques Tuiasosopo with 17 seconds left for a 31-28 victory over the Cardinal.

Randy Fasani threw a TD pass and ran for two scores — the second with 53 seconds to go — to give Stanford (3-5, 2-3) a 28-24 lead before the Huskies (7-1, 4-1) came through.

Washington, which owns a win over Miami but was beaten by Oregon, remains a game behind the first-place Ducks in the Pac-10.

— At Tucson, Ariz., Cory Paus scrambled 13 yards for a TD with 48 seconds as UCLA (5-3, 2-3) rallied for a 27-24 win over Arizona (5-3, 3-2).

Quoth the Ravens, never score

■ Baltimore is held without a touchdown for the fifth-straight game.

BALTIMORE (AP) — It's becoming the standard formula for success against the Baltimore Ravens: Score one touchdown and let the defense do the rest.

The Pittsburgh Steelers offense struggled under Kordell Stewart, but Baltimore went a fifth-straight game without a touchdown Sunday and lost its third in a row, 9-6.

Pittsburgh stretched its winning streak to five despite getting just one touchdown and a gift-wrapped field goal. Stewart, starting ahead of an ineffective Kent Graham, completed 9 of 18 passes for 133 yards and a score.

Bucs 41, Vikings 13

TAMPA, Fla. — The NFL's last unbeaten team went down without a whimper.

The Tampa Bay Buccaneers ended Minnesota's bid to remain perfect Sunday, routing the Vikings, 41-13, to stop their longest losing streak since 1996 and maybe save a season of great expectations.

"It's been so long since we've had a win ... It cures so many things," safety John Lynch said. "I don't care what you say, when you've lost four straight, the confidence sags a little."

Bills 23, Jets 20

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Another comeback bid by the New York Jets fell short when Steve Christie delivered in the clutch again for Buffalo.

Set up by the Bills' 57-yard drive engineered by Doug Flutie in the final 2:20, Christie kicked a 34-yard field goal as time ran out, lifting the Bills to a 23-20 victory Sunday. It was the third time this season and 15th time in his career that Christie has kicked a game-winner in the fourth quarter or overtime.

Colts 30, Lions 18

INDIANAPOLIS — Colts coach Jim Mora thought he'd seen all this before. A dominant first half, an unsatisfactory second half, and an opponent rallying late.

This time, though, the Colts staved off the rally and beat the Detroit Lions 30-18 to gain a share of first place in the AFC East.

The Colts lost, 38-31, to the Oakland Raiders in Week 2 after leading 21-0.

Falcons 13, Panthers 12

ATLANTA — After one of the most trying weeks of his life, Chris Chandler led the Atlanta Falcons to a rare victory Sunday.

He wasn't even sure how it happened.

Chandler directed the game's only touchdown drive before Morten Andersen kicked a 31-yard field goal with 2:53 remaining to give the Falcons a 13-12 victory over the Carolina Panthers.

Bengals 12, Browns 3

The Bengals have found a simple, winning formula, and until somebody else stops Dillon, Cincinnati is going to keep handing him the football.

And why not?

Dillon, who set an NFL record with 278 yards a week ago, rushed for 137 yards and one touchdown Sunday as the Bengals won their second straight with a 12-3 victory over the banged-up Cleveland Browns.

Dolphins 28, Packers 20

MIAMI — When the Miami Dolphins play, no lead is safe.

In a sequel to the worst collapse in franchise history, the Dolphins staged a comeback of their own Sunday, erasing a 17-point deficit Sunday to beat the Green Bay Packers, 28-20.

Larry Izzo ran 39 yards with a fake punt to set up a touchdown. Jeff Ogden scored on an 81-yard punt return, and the Dolphins' defense stiffened after a shaky start.

Jaguars 23, Cowboys 17

IRVING, Texas — The Jacksonville Jaguars are going to enjoy this week more than any in a long time.

Alvis Whitted turned a short pass from Mark Brunell into a 37-yard touchdown on the first drive of overtime, stopping Jacksonville's five-game losing streak with a 23-17 victory over the Dallas Cowboys on Sunday.

Rams 34, 49ers 24

SAN FRANCISCO — Trent Green and coach Mike Martz shouldn't worry so much. If they get the ball to Marshall Faulk, the St. Louis Rams will be just fine.

Faulk caught two touchdown passes, including a 16-yard pass from Green for the go-ahead score with 10:21 to play, and rushed for two more TDs as the Rams beat the San Francisco 49ers, 34-24, Sunday.

St. Louis (7-1) rebounded from its first defeat and the loss of MVP Kurt Warner, who wore a headset and a cast on the sideline after breaking his finger last week at Kansas City. Green fought off a huge case of the jitters to lead the Rams to 17 straight points to end the game.

Saints 21, Cardinals 10

TEMPE, Ariz. — Even when they play badly, good teams can find a way to win. The New Orleans Saints are showing signs that they are finally a good team.

The Arizona Cardinals, fired up under new interim coach Dave McGinnis, dominated the Saints statistically Sunday but turned the ball over four times in the second half as New Orleans won its fourth in a row, 21-10.

Chiefs 24, Seahawks 19

SEATTLE — Elvis Grbac and the Kansas City Chiefs weren't matched against Kurt Warner and the Super Bowl champions this time. And they didn't need anything close to 54 points to beat the struggling Seattle Seahawks.

One week after scoring their most points since 1966 against St. Louis, the Chiefs stepped down in class against the Seahawks. Grbac had three first-half touchdown passes, and the Chiefs made that hold up for a 24-19 victory Sunday.

"This was the first of three straight on the road," Chiefs coach Gunter Cunningham said. "I didn't care if we won by one point or 20."

Iowa just didn't make plays when they needed to. The Hawkeyes, led by a defense that played the best it has all year, couldn't make the big plays late in the game when they needed to. With an offense that only garnered 206 yards, the Hawkeyes just couldn't score.

SAY WHAT?

I empathize with what Iowa is going through because Kirk is a good friend of mine. It's obvious he hasn't lost his kids. They are still playing hard for him. When you're losing like this, and it's near the end of the season, it's awfully easy for kids to quit playing hard. They haven't. That's a tribute to Kirk.

— Barry Alvarez, Wisconsin coach

I felt our defense rose to the challenge. They stepped up and played well. We still got beat on a couple of third-and-long situations, but I saw some positive things. Bob Sanders stepped in and had a good game.

Volleyball team splits to keep NCAA hopes alive

■ The Hawkeyes loses to Wisconsin, but beat Northwestern over the weekend.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

With a crucial weekend split in Big Ten play, the UI volleyball team has managed to keep its hopes for an NCAA berth alive and well.

Iowa rebounded from a 3-0 loss to No. 6 Wisconsin on Oct. 27 to defeat Northwestern, 3-0, on Oct. 28. The split, combined with last week's crucial sweep of Michigan and Michigan State, gives Iowa a record of 11-9 overall, 7-5 in the Big Ten.

"This weekend really helps us," said coach Rita Buck-Crockett on her team's post-season chances. "We needed to win the matches we were supposed to win, and we were supposed to beat Northwestern."

The Oct. 28 match looked like a battle early, as Northwestern and Iowa exchanged points, with Iowa holding a slim 9-8 advantage. The Hawkeyes managed to find a late rhythm to score the game's final six points for a 15-8 victory. As a team in game one, Iowa out-hit the Wildcats .340 to .234. Sara Meyermann and Katie Panhorst tallied five kills apiece.

After allowing Northwestern the first point in game two, Iowa reeled off 12 consecutive scores on its way to taming the Wildcats, 15-2. Among the highlights of the barrage were six kills, two blocks and a service ace. The Hawkeyes pounded out a .556 hitting percentage, with Meyermann recording eight kills.

Iowa jumped to an 8-5 lead in the final game before the Wildcats served five aces on their way to collecting their next nine points. Trailing 14-11, Iowa stormed back to score the final five points of the match to win, 16-14.

Four Hawkeyes hit above a .400 clip on their way to demolishing the Wildcats. Renee Hill led the way with a .455 mark, while Meyermann and Carolyn Giese each hit .444. Panhorst tallied a .435 to round out the impressive display of offense.

Buck-Crockett was pleased with the play of several Hawkeyes on Oct. 28, but she especially noted Hill's, who has struggled lately.

"Renee is coming back," Buck-Crockett said. "Every player has her slumps, and she's coming on right now."

On Oct. 27, the Hawkeyes' hopes of another weekend sweep were quickly smothered by No. 6 Wisconsin, as the Badgers scored the first 10 points of game one on pace to a 15-5 win.

Iowa remained close in the second game at 9-7 before the Badgers scored the final six points of the game to win, 15-8. Game three remained close with the Badgers leading 5-4 before shutting the Hawkeyes out for the remainder of the game to win, 15-4.

Buck-Crockett said she did not believe the Hawks played as well as they could have on Oct. 27, but she credited the Badgers for playing extremely well.

Meyermann and Fabiana De Abreu paced the Hawkeyes statistically, with Meyermann recording a team-high 11 kills, while De Abreu added 3 kills, 20 assists and 7 digs.

Buck-Crockett said her team is on target for an NCAA position, and everyone is healthy and rested as Iowa prepares to return home. The Hawkeyes, who are currently fifth in the Big Ten, host defending national champion No. 11 Penn State and Indiana this weekend.

Soccer team loses twice in Colorado

■ The Iowa soccer team loses to Colorado College and Air Force over the weekend.

By Laura Podolak
The Daily Iowan

The mountain air of Colorado may have been too thin for the flatland Hawkeyes, who faltered in their final two games of the 2000 season.

Iowa's weekend began with a loss to Colorado College, 4-0, on Oct. 27 and continued when the Hawks fell one goal short in a 3-2 loss to the Air Force Academy (5-13-1) Sunday.

On Sunday, the duo of Sarah Keifer, a native of Colorado, and Kate Walse connected twice against the Falcons in an attempt to bury the birds, but it wasn't enough.

Although Iowa was first to score, Air Force continued its raid throughout the match, netting three of its 13 shots on goal to finish off the Hawkeyes.

Iowa's defeat on Sunday followed its disappointing loss to Colorado College (12-7).

The Tigers' commanding offense hammered 22 shots at Iowa goal keeper Liz Hendel, who recorded nine saves on the day.

Junior Linzy Wolman of Littleton, Colo., tried to show her home state a bit of her talent and keep her team in the game by recording five shots on goal.

The two nonconference losses dropped Iowa's record to 11-8 overall; it remains 5-5 in the Big Ten.

Going into this weekend, Iowa coach Wendy Logan said that although the Big Ten season had ended, the pressure continued to build.

Post-season play looms on the horizon.

Both Logan and the team say making the NCAA tournament has been a goal since the beginning of the season. The Hawks just missed an invitation last year.

Although the Hawkeyes' season has been a bit of a roller coaster, they still have a chance to make the Big Dance, but it won't be easy.

Before the team can look to the ultimate goal, the members must first focus on the task at hand: the Big Ten Tournament.

By finishing conference play with three-straight victories, the Hawkeyes most likely propelled themselves out of eighth place and out of a first-round match up with powerhouse Penn State.

The official seedings and time of match for the conference tournament will be announced early this week.

Big Ten tournament play will begin Thursday in Champaign, Ill.

Men's tennis end with poor showing

The Iowa men's tennis team concluded a roller-coaster season this weekend with a disappointing showing at the Rolex ITA Regional Tournament in Madison, Wis. One year after senior Tyler Cleveland won a title at the event, only one of the Hawkeyes' singles players and the doubles team advanced past the first round of play.

Senior Jake Wilson posted the team's singles win on the first day by defeating Bowling Green's Nicolas Lopez-Acevedo, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3. Wilson was then defeated by Ohio State's Chris Porter, 1-6, 1-6 in the second round.

Sophomores Stuart Waters, Pete

Rose and Hunter Skogman all suffered first-round defeats in the tournament, which consisted of 10 Big Ten teams and a number of teams from the Midwest.

The doubles team of Waters and Wilson posted a first round victory on Oct. 27 but fell in the next round on the second day of competition.

Houghton said he expects his team to be a little different in the spring because of the return of four players, including Cleveland, and the improvement of his players over the winter.

"What usually happens is that these guys will make a big jump here in the next month and a half. They can get a lot of individual work done because they don't have a tournament every other week," he said.

quarterbyquarter

To say that Iowa's offense couldn't move the ball in the first quarter would be an understatement. The Hawkeyes didn't have a single first down in the first half.

However, the Wisconsin Badgers put a drive together on their first possession and scored off a 46-yard field goal.

Despite their score, the Badgers offense was stagnant the rest of the first quarter. Iowa's defense held the Big Ten's leading rusher, Michael Bennett, in check during the first quarter.

The second quarter started off with Wisconsin kicking a field goal, putting them up 6-0.

Iowa, however, still struggled on offense. Their first two series' of the quarter went 3-and-out.

On third down at the Wisconsin 15-yard line, Kyle McCann had a pass intercepted by Jamar Fletcher. On that ensuing drive, Wisconsin scored off a Michael Bennett 1-yard touchdown run.

Iowa finally got the ball rolling on its next possession, but McCann had another pass intercepted on that drive.

Wisconsin started the second half strong, putting together a drive that took them down to the Iowa 25-yard line. On first down from the 25, Brooks Bollinger threw a pass that was intercepted by Ryan Hansen.

Two possessions later, Iowa put together its only scoring drive of the afternoon. On 1-10 from the 30-yard line, Ladell Betts took a run up the middle for 51 yards to the Wisconsin 19-yard line. Three plays later, McCann hit Kahlil Hill in the end zone for a 7-yard touchdown pass to put Iowa within six.

In the fourth quarter, Iowa's offense continued to improve but couldn't convert. On a third and long, Kevin Kasper fell short of a first down.

Iowa's next possession, which would be its last, Kahlil Hill dropped a pass on third down, and Iowa punted.

With eight minutes left on the clock, the Badgers used their power running game and ate up the remaining 8:17 left on the clock to hold on to the victory. Iowa's Tim Dodge almost intercepted a Bollinger pass on second and seven in that drive, but he dropped it.

Iowa swimming loses twice

The Iowa women's swimming and diving team began its first weekend of competition with back-to-back meets, tough competition, impressive race times but two losses.

"We swam well this weekend and unfortunately lost both meets," said head coach Garland O'Keefe. "The situation is kind of frustrating, but we swam well and can leave with our heads high."

The packed weekend took place on the road for the season-opener competition. Oct. 27 Michigan hosted the competition with Iowa and Wisconsin as guests. Wisconsin was crowned champion of the competition. The next morning Iowa was hosted by Michigan State.

Junior Melissa Loehndorf led the way for the Hawkeyes, taking second place with a season best time in the 1000-freestyle competition (10:08.09). Loehndorf also placed second in the 200-butterfly event (2:04.32). Allison Lyle also a junior took third in the 100 and 200-breaststroke competition.

Diver Laura Maldonado was the third Hawkeye to shine in the first meet of the weekend with her third place finish in the one-meter diving competition. Maldonado's score was a total of 246.23.

"Both our freshman and upper-classman performed really well this weekend and I am happy with their performances," said O'Keefe. "Our freshman did well with many personal bests and season bests."

Day two of competition brought disappointment in a different pool and different competitor, Michigan State. The Hawkeyes still provided impressive performances.

Loehndorf won the 1000-freestyle event and also the 100-freestyle event by one, one hundredth of a second. Senior, Stacey Wertz produced an in-season best in the 100-free event while Katie Wise produced a career best time in the same event.

Junior Allison Lyle won the breast stroke with a season best time. Senior Becca Schwartz, won the 200-freestyle event.

Hawkeyes place last

■ Coach Sara Swails is not happy with the finish.

By Julie Matolo
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's cross-country team came home disappointed after a painful finish at the Big Ten Championships this weekend — 11th.

"Big Tens was a really big disappointment," said head coach Sara Swails. "We went into the meet ready to run both mentally and physically. We didn't perform, and you can't do that at Big Tens."

The University of Wisconsin, the host and defending champion, won the conference championships. This meet involved a 5K run instead of a 6K run.

Iowa's top individual runner was sophomore Sarah Arenas, who turned in a 27th-place finish with a time of 18:01. Sophomore Michelle Lahann was the next Hawkeye finisher, with a time 18:44, good for 50th.

Men runners take 8th

■ Coach Larry Wiecezorek said his team needs to improve.

By Julie Matolo
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's cross-country team came home from Big Ten Championships disappointed in its overall finish. Attaining eighth place and a score of 203 left Iowa unhappy with the team standings but ready to work for a better finish in its next important meet.

"We have Regional Championships in two weeks and a chance for a better finish," said head coach Larry Wiecezorek. "We have good running, but we must improve."

The University of Wisconsin, the host of the conference meet and the defending champion, won the meet with a score of 44 points. Wisconsin also had the top individual finisher.

Senior Paul Sarris was Iowa's top finisher for the first time this season, placing 27th with a time of 25:06. Not far behind was Hawkeye Shaun Allen, with a time of 25:10, good for 32nd. Allen and teammate Eric McDermott ran lifetime bests during the championships.

Iowa has turned in many exciting performances this season but is still waiting for the moment runners turn in top performances in unison.

"If we get everyone to click on the same day, we can do well," Wiecezorek said. "In practice we do, but in meets, we are kind of inconsistent. We must run together and perform at the same time."

ish with a time of 18:01. Sophomore Michelle Lahann was the next Hawkeye finisher, with a time 18:44, good for 50th.

"We need to regroup and do well in two weeks at our next meet," Swails said. "This meet is the Regional Championships, where we need to run well."

In two weeks, the Hawkeyes will travel to Cedar Falls on Nov. 11 to compete in the NCAA Regional Championships. The University of Northern Iowa will host the meet.

"For our next meet, we will need mental preparation, more workouts and tapering," Swails said. "We must turn ourselves around for this meet — the meet that will qualify us to Nationals."

Waldorf steals show at Disney Classic

■ Duffy Waldorf shoots a 62 in the final round to seal the comeback victory.

By Doug Ferguson
 Associated Press

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. — Tiger Woods wasn't a winner Sunday, just a prophet. On the eve of the final round in the National Car Rental Classic, Woods warned everyone not to get wrapped up in his pursuit of Steve Flesch. "This golf course... anyone can shoot 62 out here without batting an eye," he said. He made a believer out of everyone — especially Duffy Waldorf.

over Flesch. "I would have to agree," Waldorf said when told about Woods' comment. "But he was probably thinking about himself shooting 62, not me."

Waldorf wasn't thinking about winning, not even after birdies on six of his first seven holes. He looked at the leaderboard just once — after he made the turn in 30, one stroke behind — and realized he had won only after watching Flesch miss a 7-foot birdie putt on the final hole that would have forced a playoff. "Obviously, it's a surprise to me," Waldorf said. "I got everything I could out of the round." His bogey-free 62 was the lowest closing round by a winner on the PGA Tour this year, and his 26-under 262 tied the Disney record set by John Huston in 1992, when three courses were used in the rotation. He also tied Larry Nelson in 1987 for the largest final-round comeback at Disney, and matched the biggest comeback on tour this year, by Phil Mickelton at Colonial.

Flesch, meanwhile, suffered a cruel twist of fate. Playing with the No. 1 player in the world in the final group, trying to win for the first time in 94 career starts on the PGA Tour, the left-hander from Kentucky held up his end of the bargain with two crucial birdie putts on the back nine. And he still lost. "I felt like if I beat Tiger, I would win the golf tournament," said Flesch, who finished with a 69. "It didn't work out. I think playing with him spurred me one a little bit, kept me focused on what was going on. We just had a guy sneak in on us and nip us by one." Flesch kept his composure, even to the last hole. Standing in the 18th fairway, he heard the roar when Waldorf sank his birdie putt, then hit his approach into 7 feet left of the hole.

it is over," she said. "Iowa has not been what I expected, but at the same time, it's been more than I ever imagined." In second place with 13 team points and 6 goals this season, Gibson said her progress has been what really made the difference. Previously, she had scored four career points. "I ended the way I wanted to, I think a lot of it has been with support from Tracey; it's made a world of difference," she said.

On the other hand, Dawson was not as pleased with her ending home performance. "It's probably one of my worst games this year," she said. "I feel good that we won and came out with the end result, but overall, I think I could've played better."

Despite an unsatisfactory personal performance, she said her teammates sent her out very well. Dawson said she will try out for a position on the U.S. National Team in January.

Bob Sanders stars in secondary for Iowa

GAME STORY

Iowa averaging nearly 200 yards a contest. Individually, Michael Bennett accounts for 170 of those total yards — tops in the Big Ten and second in the country. Iowa held the Badgers to 118 rushing yards and Bennett to just 81, almost 90 yards below his average. "It was just our goal as a defense to come in and have everybody flying at the ball," senior Anthony Herron said. "He's a real fast back. We just wanted to have reckless abandon and gang tackle him as much as possible and wear him down." The reckless abandon Herron spoke of was clearly seen in the play of freshman Bob Sanders. Normally a starter on the special teams, Sanders earned his first start as strong safety and notched a game-high 16 tackles, including one for a loss. He also forced a fumble as part of the special teams unit. "Every time I'm in there, I'm trying to make something happen and make the big play to try to change the game around for the team," he said. "I'm kind of proud of what I did today, but we lost the game."

In addition to the special teams' forced turnover, Iowa's defense also came up with a fumble and an interception, but the Hawkeyes were unable to capitalize on any Wisconsin miscues. The lone Hawkeye score came in the third quarter, when McCann connected with junior Kahlil Hill on a broken pass play, bringing Iowa to within six at 13-7. Neither team scored again. Iowa had an opportunity to get the ball back in the closing minutes of the game, but a penalty on a Wisconsin field-goal attempt kept the ball in the Badgers' hands. Iowa could do nothing but stand and watch quarterback Brooks Bollinger take the snap and put his knee on the ground to close the out the game. "We did a lot of positive things. Obviously, there are still a lot of negatives that we have to get corrected, and that's been the story for the last year and a half," McCann said. "We have to go out and get better. That's the bottom line. We're making too many stupid penalties and not making enough plays, and we can't afford to do that."

Iowa solid shutting down Badger back

Hawkeyes could have had the tying touchdown and the go-ahead extra point. If Tim Dodge could've intercepted a Brooks Bollinger pass on Wisconsin's last drive, Iowa would have gotten the ball back late in the fourth quarter. That's just the way things went for Iowa Saturday. The Hawks looked poised for a victory, much in the same way they did late in the game against Michigan State. Unlike the MSU game, however, Iowa didn't get a crucial offensive play late in the game. Instead, the Hawkeyes got dropped passes and punts that followed. On defense, the Hawkeyes played arguably the best they have all year. They hit hard. They stuffed Wisconsin's rushing game, holding the nation's second-leading rusher Michael Bennett to 81 yards on 29 carries. That's an average of 2.8 yards for a guy that ran for 290 against Oregon, the No. 10 team in the country. If you take away Badger receiver Chris Chambers' 191 yards of receiving, Iowa virtually shut down the Badgers. But, all the defense in the world couldn't help Iowa Saturday. The reason: Their offense was pathetic. No first downs in the first quarter. Four total yards in the first quarter and 206 total yards on the afternoon —

that's bad. The offense caught on in the second half. Junior quarterback Kyle McCann got better as the day went on, but the big plays just escaped Iowa. There's a lot to criticize on the offense no doubt — it played badly. But, the way the defense played Saturday had to give Iowa fans a smile or two. Sure, the guys gave up more than 400 yards, and Wisconsin's passing game managed to make Iowa look like chumps at times, but there was something about the defense Saturday that gave fans a reason to cheer. The Hawks hit hard. They blitzed effectively. The defensive front dominated an offensive line that has two All-Big Ten players on it. Chambers made the Hawkeyes look bad on many occasions, but in the second half, Iowa's defensive backfield improved. Considering half of them were true freshmen, that's encouraging. The Hawkeyes lost the game Saturday, but never once did they lose their confidence or desire to win. They kept coming back, bad break after bad break. Someday, that attitude should pay off for this team with a victory. For now, it's just something that sports writers talk about to make a 1-8 team sound respectable.

picked up rowing skills very quickly." The conclusion to the fall season will lead to winter indoor training in preparation for a longer rowing season next spring. Iowa's rowing team attributes success in their home race to all the support in producing the enormous event. "I am really happy with the success of the race, and I just can't thank all the workers enough," Kowal said. "A lot of support staffs and many people helping create great team effort to produce the regatta. My dream when I started to coach was to be able to concentrate on coaching. Because of so much help and support, that is what I have been able to do." DI reporter Julie Matolo can be reached at: julie-matolo@uiowa.edu

Iowa coach John Davey pleased with team's times

MEN'S SWIMMING

The two-day event left several Hawkeyes on top with first-place finishes. Senior Jay Glenn won the 200-freestyle with a time of 1:39.63 and finished in second place in the 50-freestyle event. Glenn left last year's Big Ten Championships as champion in the 200-freestyle. Ales Abersek, also a senior, won the 200-butterfly with a time of 1:49.78 and placed second in the 200-IM. Abersek was last year's Big Ten champion in both the 100- and 200-fly. Diving brought Iowa's sophomore, Roberto Gutierrez, to center stage in the first night of competition. After Gutierrez' third-place finish in the 1-meter event, he came back to win the 3-meter diving event with a final score of 203.45. "I didn't do well in the 1-meter, so I was disappointed," he said. "I went to the 3-meter and felt stronger, so I went for it. I was trying to do everything right." On the second day of competition, there were a few more Hawkeye champions. Freshman Jason Snider won the 400-IM with a time of 4:07.82. Close behind for second was teammate Abersek. "We had some good swims this weekend," said senior Nick Hinz. "Our freshmen swam well this weekend in their first collegiate meet." A final Iowa highlight came when the Hawkeye relay teams took the top two places in the final event. Times of 1:25.51 and 1:29.93 were good for first and second place in the 200-freestyle relay. "I am really happy with how the team did time-wise," Davey said. "They were good for a first dual meet. There were life-time bests already, this early in the season." In two weeks the Hawkeyes will host their second and final home meet of the season. Iowa will compete against Purdue on Nov. 10 at the Field House. DI reporter Julie Matolo can be reached at: julie-matolo@uiowa.edu

SPORTS BRIEF

Purdue picked as preseason favorite

CHICAGO (AP) — Purdue, the three-time defending women's Big Ten tournament champion, was picked Sunday as the preseason favorite by the conference coaches and media. Penn State, which advanced to the Final Four, was picked second, and Illinois and Wisconsin tied for third. Purdue guard Katie Douglas, the conference scoring leader last season, was the unanimous choice by coaches as the preseason player of the year. She also was the media's choice for player of the year. The Boilermakers return six seniors from the team that finished 23-8 last year. "I like having the target on our backs," Douglas said. "We can't ever slip in practice, we can't ever slip in games because of that marked target. We're just going to try to use it to our advantage." Douglas was joined on the pre-season all-conference team by teammate Camille Cooper, a center who averaged 15.3 points and 7.5 rebounds last year.
