1st Ave. extension carves a rift in I.C.

Few issues have divided the city as much as the controversial extension has.

By Erica Driskell
The Daily Iowan

Not clearly defined on the yard signs, but stated adequately on the ballot, the question abides as it has for more than two decades — should paving the First Avenue extension, which would connect First Avenue to Captain Irish Parkway, be removed from the city's Capital Improvement Program?

Proponents of the extension claim that it would provide a strategic location for fire and ambulance services, relieve dense traffic on Dodge Street, and fulfill planned growth within city limits.

Opponents claim the extension isn't safe, would harm the environment and Hickory Hill Park, and would worsen traffic, leading to an increase in traffic accidents.

A "yes" vote is a vote against the extension, while a "no" vote supports completing the arterial road, creating a 1,600-foot extension linking southern and northern areas of Iowa City.

One only has to glance at vandalized "Yes" and "No" yard signs around town to see how heated the issue remains less than a week before Election Day. Many yard signs have been stolen, residents along First Avenue and Dodge Street say.

Although the election will decide the fate of the extension for only the next two years, the controversy will continue far beyond that for many Iowa City residents. It has alternately simmered and boiled over for two decades.

Completing the extension will only promote residential growth and development, which will result in loss of valuable land, said David Johnson, an Iowa City resident who lives on Dodge Street.

"A lot of beautiful land has been already taken from Iowa City," he said. "I understand the congestion, but I don't think extending First Avenue would alleviate the problem here."

Improving the transit system and installing additional stoplights could alleviate the traffic

Voters will decide if the First Avenue extension should be removed from the City's Capital Improvement Project.

Skate park offers shelter, accessories

Skateboarders can continue to skate through the winter at Revolt.

By Andrew Bixby
The Daily Iowan

After a year of searching, a month and a half of blood and sweat, and more than $7,000 in insurance and building costs, William De Souza Lobo has turned an abandoned warehouse on Iowa City's far south side into an indoor skate haven for local skateboarders.

Revolt, 1805 Stevens Drive, opened its doors Sept. 16 to local skaters looking for somewhere legal and warm to skate and a place to buy skateboard parts and accessories.

From the street, Revolt is nothing more than a hole-in-the-wall warehouse with a gravel parking lot. Once inside, the deafening slams, clicks and cracks of rubber wheels and custom-made skateboards on newly built wood ramps coalesce with blaring music and the lingering smell of fresh sawdust to create what some local skateboarders consider their only safe place to skate.

UI freshman Noah Stern, an Iowa City native, has been skateboarding for five years and has been charged with criminal trespassing for skateboarding on UI property.

"I like Revolt's indoor park because I'm tired of getting chased around by the cops," Stern said.

Although skateboarding is illegal on UI property, Iowa City does offer an outdoor skate park in Mercer Park, which De Souza Lobo helped build, and has plans to build a second outdoor skate park in Terrell Mill Park, across from Mayflower Residence Hall, said Terry Trueblood, Iowa City's director of parks and recreation. If a bid is awarded by the Iowa City City Council, construction on the new skate park should begin in April, Trueblood said.

After 17 years of skateboarding, De Souza Lobo, originally from Paraguay, said he decided Iowa City needed a skate shop that was owned by a skateboarder and someone who UI sophomore Stewart Underhill skates at Revolt Skate Park on Tuesday evening. Underhill comes in every day at 2 p.m. to open the store for owner William De Souza Lobo. Skateboarders now have a place to skate legally and out of the cold of winter.

UI sets cap on early registration hours

Most students won't be able to register for more than 16 hours during preregistration.

By Mary Sedor
The Daily Iowan

Beginning with early registration for the Spring 2001 semester, UI students in the College of Liberal Arts, the Henry E. Tippie College of Business and the College of Engineering will be limited to registering for 16 semester hours or fewer. In previous semesters, students were able to register for as many as 18 semester hours without requiring special permission.

After Dec. 6, when early registration ends, the cap on registration will be lifted and students will be able to register for up to 18 hours without requiring special permission. Graduate and professional students will not be affected by the change.

Last fall, the Tippie College of Business ran a pilot project that allowed students to register only for 16 semester hours during early registration. Nancy Hauserman, the associate dean for undergraduates in the Tippie College of Business, was in charge of the project.

The Leadership Council, a group of student advisers for the Tippie College of Business, proposed the registration cap because they felt students were having difficulty getting into the classes they needed.

Hauserman said the Leadership Council was concerned that a number of students, in order to keep their options open during registration, register for more classes than they plan to take. This closes courses for students who register later.

Republican presidential candidate George W. Bush waves to supporters during a campaign rally at Valley High School Wednesday night in West Des Moines, Iowa.

Bush seeks Iowa win

Bush assures a crowd of 5,000 that he will sweep the state on Nov. 7.

WEST DES MOINES — With less than one week before Election Day, Texas Gov. George W. Bush rallied troops at Valley High School in West Des Moines in a final push for the presidency. More than 5,000 people packed the gymnasium waving red, white and blue pom-poms.

Chants of "six more days" filled the air while Bush took the stage over an hour late and gave the thumbs-up sign. "Let it be known that here in Iowa, with six days left to vote, I am here asking for your vote," Bush said.

Iowa, a state that hasn't elected a Republican president since Ronald Reagan in 1984, is considered by political analysts to be a toss-up between the Texas governor and Democratic candidate Vice President Al Gore.

House GOP members vote to continue session

While the Senate has dismissed for the elections, the House will work until Friday.

By Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Mired in Congress' budget war with President Clinton, the Senate began sending its members home Wednesday for the impending elections and planned a lame-duck mid-November session to complete its work.

After initially saying they would follow suit, House Republicans decided instead to stay in town at least until Friday. Six days before the election, they were leery of Democratic accusations that Congress was quitting and leaving the job undone.

"We want to keep ourselves from falling into a trap," Rep. John Boehner, R-Ohio, said.

Senators began streaming to the airport after voting by voice to keep federal agencies open through Nov. 14, when lawmakers would reconvene. House GOP leaders had said they would approve the same measure by today, and Democrats said Clinton would sign the bill.

But after a private meeting, House Republicans emerged with a different strategy — stay in session at least until Friday and continue passing daily measures to keep federal agencies open a day at a time.

"We are not going to be bum-rushed out of town and have a bad deal," said House Speaker

Dennis Hastert, R-Ill.

Rep. Marty Martinez, a former Democrat, spoke up at the closed-door meeting to warn that Democrats were intent on setting a political trap for the GOP, said a Republican on condition of anonymity. The lawmaker quoted Martinez as saying, "I know how they think."

Just Tuesday, House Majority Leader Tom DeLay, R-Texas, said Congress should take a break because "the political atmosphere has been poisoned."

3 stores set up shop at Old Capitol mall

The mall welcomes new tenants Hollywood Caricatures, Arjayel Exports and Sueppel's Flowers.

By Tracy Nemitz
The Daily Iowan

Wednesday marked the introduction of two unique businesses to the Old Capitol Town Center, as well as a more traditional one.

Hollywood Caricatures, located at a kiosk in front of Zales Jewelry, provides hand-drawn customer portraits and artistic renderings of famous people. Within the week, employees hope to begin selling tie-dye T-shirts, employee Robert Gray said.

"We wanted to be at this location because we offer things college kids enjoy," Gray said.

Located across from Hollywood Caricatures is Arjayel Exports, which sells collectible driftwood. In his first day of business, owner Robert Lee said he sold a few of the collectibles excavated from the banks of the Coralville Lake.

The pieces of driftwood, which date back to the 1800s, are from maple, cottonwood and green ash trees. Gray, an Iowa City native, sees these natural decorations as "pieces of Iowa history."

Gray offers his clientele a broad choice of driftwood, which can be used for aquariums, terrariums and crafts, he said.

Accustomed to selling his products at craft shows and flea markets, Lee said he is enjoying the stability his Old Capitol Town Center location provides.

Earlier in the day, Sueppel's Flowers also celebrated its Old Capitol Town Center opening with a ribbon-cutting ceremony.

Located in the former Eichler's Florist location, Sueppel's employees said they enjoyed their first day back in the spot the store occupied four years ago.

"People have been stopping by, thanking us for coming back. In 25 years of service, I have never seen a reception like this," said co-owner Bud Sueppel.

Aside from the usual walk-in services, Sueppel's also offers wire service delivery to any location worldwide and everyday specials for local customers, said Carol Sueppel, a co-owner of the business.

The Old Capitol Town Center has also seen the expansion of the Goodfellow Authentic Urban Wear store. Goodfellow, which moved into the mall Aug. 1, found that after three months, a larger vicinity was needed, said co-owner Richard Willock.

"We had a good turnout for our Halloween promo," he said. "We are anticipating a pick-up around the holidays."

Kerry Sanders, the general manager of the Old Capitol Town Center, attributes the appearance of new businesses to CB Richard Ellis Inc., the mall's new management leasing company. The company, which took over management of the mall on July 1, has produced a "flurry of activity," Sanders said.

Mike Krantz, the operations director of the mall, said this is only the beginning of filling currently vacant stores.

"We have lots of things hanging," said Krantz. "We are going to fill this place up."

"Bringing new stores into the mall is a good idea," UI senior Sommer Bergdale remarked.

"But I would like to see more clothes stores or another department store — something more relevant to college students."

New Wal-Mart greets customers

Working as a greeter keeps some folks busy during their retirement years.

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

Beverly Cox was all smiles Wednesday afternoon.

With a smiley-face button on her blue vest and a grin on her face, the 74-year-old greeted the mobs of customers who came to check out the Wal-Mart Supercenter, 2801 Commerce Drive in Coralville, during the first day its doors opened to the public. The 220,000-square-foot store, located just north of Coral Ridge Mall, is a full-size discount store and grocery store all in one, including a meat department and a bakery.

The new store is a lot busier than what Cox is used to — she's worked at the much smaller Iowa City Wal-Mart, 1001 Highway 1 W, for two years — but to her that just means she'll have more people to help out. "I'm just a greeter," she says, pausing to wink through her glasses. "But I have the best job in the whole store. It's great to meet all the people."

As a greeter, she says, she is "the eyes and ears for the store's management." If she hears a complaint or compliment, she passes it on. She directs customers to where they need to go. And, most importantly, she helps meet the needs of customers with disabilities, something she is definitely qualified for — Cox worked as a registered nurse for 37 years.

Cox, of North Liberty, began working as a greeter at the Iowa City store two years ago with her husband, a 75-year-old retired pastor, to keep herself busy. But her husband had two seizures last May, which caused him to quit the job to rest at home.

"That scared me, but he's getting better," Cox said. "I'm thankful that I'm 74 and I can still work."

Working as a greeter, a position that is pretty unique to Wal-Mart stores, has also kept Betty Ward of Washington, Iowa, busy during her retirement years. Ward, 75, worked at the Wal-Mart in Washington for 10 years before transferring to the Supercenter in Coralville.

Taking a break from passing out shopping carts to customers, Ward said she feels her duties as a greeter do not go unnoticed. The general public appreciates having an employee hand them their carts and having someone to answer their questions about the store right off the bat, she said.

Marilyn Cerven of Coralville said she enjoys the greeters. "The employees here are very respectful," she said.

It took Cerven, who said she came to check out the new store and its prices, three hours to see almost every department.

When asked what was in her completely filled cart, Cerven replied with a laugh: "about everything imaginable."

Salesman acquitted in gift-law case

The Iowa Gift Law was allegedly broken by Richard Knowles.

By Jessi Toddan
The Daily Iowan

After approximately two hours of deliberation, the jury came back with a verdict of not guilty for Richard Edward Knowles on the serious misdemeanor charges he faced because he gave Hawkeye basketball tickets to two UI employees in 1997 and 1998.

Knowles, 65, who was employed by SmithKline Beecham Pharmaceuticals, allegedly broke the Iowa Gift Law by giving two pharmacy workers at UI Hospitals and Clinics sets of UI basketball tickets. At the time, Knowles was a Cedar Rapids resident, but he is currently retired and living in Minnesota.

The law prohibits restricted donors from giving public employees gifts when the supposed donor might benefit from the exchange.

Prosecutors tried to prove their burden by presenting evidence that Knowles would benefit because of a contest his company was holding when he gave those tickets to the UI employees, Spies said. "That was bogus," Spies said. "He was not eligible for that contest, and the supply that he sold was not excessive enough to indicate any intention to win a contest."

The UI pharmacy employees, Lawson Coapstick and Ronald Shelton, said they both knew the defendant for several years at the time of the gift and were in charge of purchasing decisions for the pharmacy. Knowles gave Coapstick and Shelton the basketball tickets first in December 1997 and again in January 1998.

Coapstick and Shelton were not charged with breaking the gift law and testified they were unaware a law was being broken, Knowles' attorney, Leon Spies, said.

During Coapstick's testimony, he said Knowles gave him the tickets because his son played basketball for Iowa City West High School, so Knowles wanted to give his son a chance to see the Hawkeyes play, Spies said. Shelton also testified Knowles gave him the tickets so he and his family could attend a game in Carver-Hawkeye Arena for the first time, Spies added.

"It was a friendly gesture by Knowles. He wasn't going to use the tickets anyway," Spies said.

Knowles said he was unaware he was breaking any law and it was the burden of the state to prove that he knew about the law and also purposefully broke it, Spies said.

Following the incident, Knowles was fired from his position at SmithKline Beecham after nearly 37 years of service because of the publicity generated by the investigation and trial, Spies said.

"His career reflected a high degree of professionalism," Spies said. "Many doctors, nurses and administrators at the hospital felt a wrong had been committed against Knowles by the effort to prosecute him."

This case came to light after UIHC contacted UI Public Safety with concerns. Public Safety then began an investigation in January 1998, Johnson County attorney J. Patrick White said.

The trial lasted two days with closing arguments on Tuesday, White said. Neither the lawyers nor the defendant was present when the sealed verdict came back and their presence wasn't required for this, White said.

Coapstick said Wednesday he was advised not to comment for this story.

Board of Supervisors candidates say students matter

■ Five bid for three vacant spots on the Johnson County Board of Supervisors.

By Melissa A. Wieland
The Daily Iowan

While Democrats have ruled the Johnson County Board of Supervisors for the past 54 years, Republican Myron Smalley and Libertarian Tim Borchardt hope to change that. But the three Democrats in the running want to keep their streak alive as the five candidates vie for three four-year seats.

The board's responsibilities include handing jail issues, maintaining ambulance and human services, upkeep of county buildings and grounds, setting property taxes, establishing building zones, supervising road systems and approving beer, liquor and cigarette sale permits. County officers also report to the board.

All five candidates said they believe the jail issue is central to the election, and all but Borchardt support the proposed new jail.

Republican Dick Brown's name will also appear on the ballot, though he dropped out of the race because of health concerns.

In this breakdown, the candidates share their main campaign issues and explain why it is important for UI students to be involved with the election of supervisors to the board.

Tim Borchardt

Tim Borchardt, a 40-year-old Libertarian candidate, is an Iowa native and an 11-year Iowa City resident. Borchardt said his main views are different from those of the other four candidates because he is opposed to government intrusion and the burden of taxation.

He said he believes in a top-to-bottom review of the tax system and he will fight to increase the value of the dollar and to decrease taxes.

Borchardt said he is against government intrusion on to private property and he feels there should be less government involvement because the government is always intruding into our personal lives and our private property.

"We can't even build a treehouse in our yard without the inspection of the city," he said. "Government has gone too far and invades our basic freedoms."

Borchardt said students should be interested in him because he will stand up and protect rights and laws. He said he wants students to know he is a person who will let them voice their concerns and someone who will be accessible to them. He said he will uphold the law of the land.

Borchardt has had no prior experience in politics, but he ran for City Council last year. He is currently the production supervisor of the Leher Company.

Pat Harney

Pat Harney, a 58-year-old Johnson County resident and Democratic candidate, will have served as an Iowa City police officer for 33 years when he retires in February. He said his retirement will make him more available to the community. Harney said he decided to run because he has an interest in Johnson County and wants to help the area maintain its culture and diversity.

Harney said the county needs to use the land-use plan as a guide, not as a permanent plan, and that each case needs to be looked at individually. He added that Johnson County must continue to provide for its senior and mentally challenged citizens.

"We don't want to shortchange anyone in the community," he said.

"Human services are overcrowded, and the problem needs to be looked at."

He said it's important for students to get involved because although they may not be directly affected by the actions of the board, issues such as roads and the jail are all dealt with at the county level, he said.

Terrence Neuzil

UI alumnus Terrence Neuzil, 30, is a Democratic candidate and a fifth-generation Johnson County resident. If elected, Neuzil said he will be the youngest supervisor ever elected to the board.

His main platforms include encouraging long-term managed planning and development in land use and the importance of human services and intergovernmental communication, he said.

Neuzil said his main concern is the development of Johnson County. He said Johnson County is growing and he wants to fight urban sprawl, protect agricultural land and the environment — while at the same time encouraging economic growth, governmental communication and community services, he said.

"If we develop the community, there will be more opportunities for residents to participate and grow," he said.

Neuzil also said intergovernmental communication, which includes communication with the UI, is important because it incorporates student input, something essential to Johnson County, he said.

"I want to pursue better communication and relations with the UI," he said. "If elected, I will make the UI key players in developmental planning."

Neuzil has been on the board of directors for the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce and the Jaycees' Board of Directors.

Myron Smalley

Myron Smalley, a 43-year-old native of Johnson County and Republican candidate, still resides in the house he grew up in on Dean Road, just outside of Iowa City. Smalley said he wants to be on the board to bring the voice of rural citizens, to maintain private property rights for citizens, and because he believes there needs to be more fiscal responsibility and a more wise use of taxpayer money.

"The current board has shut down residential county zoning, which has raised the land value, and thus, rent has increased for college students," he said.

He said although his main emphasis is on rural voters, he has reached out to students by attending meetings for College Republicans and Students for George W. Bush. Smalley said students should be interested in the county election because property value affects students. If the values change, students' rent will increase, he said. He also said road issues along with human, ambulance and sheriff services are equally important for students to pay attention to.

"All the issues debated in the Johnson County Board of Supervisors election are directly and indirectly affecting students," he said.

Carol Thompson

Incumbent Democrat Carol Thompson, 58, is a 37-year resident of Johnson County who currently lives in River Heights, Iowa.

Thompson said she believes in human services and thinks it should be one of Johnson County's main priorities because these programs provide general assistance to residents and the mentally ill.

"By supporting these residents, we are helping the entire community," she said.

Thompson said another issue that concerns her is the land-use policy. She said the board makes long-term decisions for the land and this land use affects property tax, which impacts students.

"Students need to understand that decisions made at the county level affect (them)," she said.

Thompson added that she goes to UI student-sponsored programs to educate herself on issues that are of concern to students.

Student Hunger Drive nets 19 tons of food

Food gathered by area high-school students will be distributed throughout Johnson County

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City City Councilor and Crisis Center Director Ross Wilburn has faith in the power of young people. At last night's awards ceremony and press conference for the first Johnson County Student Hunger Drive, Johnson County high-school students affirmed and exceeded his beliefs by weighing-in approximately 38,491.5 pounds of non-perishable food they had collected over the last six weeks.

The effort included each of the seven high schools in the county and was inspired by a 14-year-old program in the Quad Cities, said Iowa City resident April Rouner, who initiated the food drive in Johnson County.

"It was very impressive not only for a first-time effort on their part, but for a food drive," said Wilburn. "I know what young people are capable of... that they can do impressive things for the community."

Iowa Mennonite High School in Kalona received $1,000 from the center, located at 1121 S. Gilbert Court, for raising the most pounds of food per student — over 3 tons total.

"It's a lot of food," said 16-year-old Iowa City resident Johanna Bontrager, a junior at Iowa Mennonite High School. "It's great to know we helped a lot of people."

Bontrager accepted the check for her school at Wednesday's ceremony. All 140 students at the school pitched in to raise food through grade-level competitions and trick-or-treating, among other fund-raising programs, she said.

The students will contribute the $1,000 to a community project or the Crisis Center, Bontrager said.

"It was exciting to see them step up and do very well," said Iowa City resident Nancy Kelso Weikal, a guidance counselor at Iowa Mennonite High School. "(The food drive) is a lot of fun, and it feels good to do something for other people. It's great to give youths the opportunity to experience that."

All 38,491.5 pounds of the food collected will be distributed in the county and is expected to last three months, Wilburn said.

Rouner said, 50 percent of all nonperishable food distributed by the center to agencies such as the Salvation Army, the Emergency Housing Shelter and the Domestic Violence Shelter will feed persons under the age of 18.

The student food drive will be held again next year and participants hope it will grow as successfully as the program in the Quad Cities has with each successive year, Rouner said.

problem on Dodge and Governor streets, said Johnson, who believes that there is excessive traffic on those streets.

Iowa City resident Kenneth Wessels said preservation of the natural terrain, such as Hickory Hill Park, is important in the Iowa City area and that natural terrain would disappear if the extension were built. He also said traffic would tend to dominate the environment around the First Avenue area.

"Almost all the people are discussing the extension over black-and-white maps with roads and dotted lines," said Wessels, who believes pedestrians and bike riders would not be able to cross roads easily in the First Avenue area if it were extended. "If First Avenue does not go through as an arterial (road), I think that people in that area would be able to enjoy some peace and quiet."

Some residents believe that roads such as Dodge and Governor streets are already too dangerous in Iowa City for pedestrians and school children traveling on the streets.

Proponents pushing for the extension say the First Avenue connection would alleviate traffic problems on Dodge and Governor streets, while opponents argue the extension would create a threat for school children because of the presence of four schools adjacent to First Avenue — City High School, 1900 Morningside Drive; Hoover Elementary, 2200 Court St.; Regina Catholic Education Center, 2120 Rochester Ave.; and South East Junior High, 2501 Bradford Drive.

"First Avenue wants to preserve its neighborhood, but what about our neighborhood?" said Iowa City resident Reta Emerson, who lives on Dodge Street. "We have a lot of children here, too. I went to City High; I know that it's off to the side of First Avenue. Horace Mann Elementary is right on Dodge Street."

Other residents view the extension as necessary so that drivers are able to get from one side of Iowa City to the other without backtracking.

Although no road is essential because of other possible routes, Iowa City resident David Thompson said the road is logical. Completing the extension does not necessarily mean that traffic flow will increase, he said.

"Just to say that First Avenue will have too much traffic because of the extension ignores that there is already a problem there," he said.

Iowa City residents who have not lived on or around Dodge and Governor Streets do not understand the extent of traffic and accidents that occur, which would decrease if the extension were to be built, said Anne Madsen, who lives near Dodge Street on Bloomington Street.

"People who are trying to block the extension haven't lived here very long. Maybe it's my turn to have an area nice and quiet to live in," Madsen said, who has been in the Iowa City area for 57 years. "If we want to be members of the community, then we need to work for the community."

Extension opponents and proponents seem to agree on only one thing: The battle isn't over yet.

"I think it will be built no matter what the voters say because any time large amounts of cash are involved, those things get done," Johnson said, as he continues to fight the extension. "This issue will continue struggling to go on until it happens."

"Even if it's a 'no' or a 'yes' ballot majority vote, it's going to be controversial," Thompson said. "I don't think this will go away."

would still be doing this long after skateboarding's popularity ran out.

"When it isn't cool anymore, every other place is going to back out," De Souza Lobo said. "Skateboarders are going to keep skating regardless."

Because De Souza Lobo works a daytime job to support himself and Revolt, UI sophomore Stewart Underhill comes in three or four days a week to open the store at 2 p.m. Underhill said he's a full-time volunteer who helped build and works at Revolt simply for the love of skateboarding.

"The whole thing is to keep the money with the people who care about (skateboarding)," he said.

UI sophomore Josh Miller

said that before Revolt existed, he always had to order his skateboard parts and accessories from catalogues. He said, however, he wasn't impressed with Revolt's indoor skate park.

"It's really cramped in there," Miller said.

An initial $25 insurance fee gets local skaters in the door of the skate park, De Souza Lobo said. After that, it's $5 for a three-hour session.

"Because people won't have anywhere else to skate during the winter, I have to keep them in and out," he said.

Open Tuesday through Sunday, 2 p.m.-9 p.m., Revolt is the only skateboard shop in Iowa City that caters exclusively to the sport and its equipment, De Souza Lobo said.

Preregistration hours limited for Spring 2001

REGISTRATION

Hauserman said Enrollment Management, a group of representatives from various colleges, discussed the change in registration and decided to implement the change throughout the university.

Susan Felker, the program director for undergraduate business administration, was also part of the pilot program. She said the Leadership Council was concerned about students registering for classes for friends with later registration dates, then dropping the courses.

Felker said with the pilot program, students just registered for what they needed and that during the course of early registration, four students out of approximately 1,400 requested special permission for extra hours, she said.

"Normally if something were a big problem, we would have tons of students coming in to complain, but we didn't have any problem," Felker said.

Felker said the 16-hour cap was not a problem for students in the College of Business. On average, students are registered for about 13 or 14 hours, Felker said.

Catherine Pietrzyk, the UI senior associate registrar, said that as of Tuesday, 15,974 students were currently enrolled in the College of Liberal Arts. Of this number, 826 students are currently taking more than 16 semester hours.

Student reactions are mixed about the registration cap. UI junior Lega Fominyen said she is currently taking 17 semester hours and is planning to take 17 next semester.

"I think it is a hassle because as I get more serious about school, I have to take more hours," Fominyen said. "It is just going to be more work for everyone."

However, some students do see the change as a step in the right direction. UI senior Lakshmi Kantamneni said she understands the motivation behind the change.

"I think the university is trying to make the process more fair for people who register later so they can get into the classes they need."

Bush counts on Iowa's votes

BUSH

"We're going to win Iowa," Bush said. "I know that this state hasn't voted for a Republican candidate for president in quite a while, but the people of this state understand that we can do better in Washington, D.C."

During his speech, Bush chided Gore for his reliance on big government to effectively run the country, calling the vice president "by Washington, of Washington and for Washington."

On issues, Bush spoke of Social Security, tax reform, education and health-care reform. Education should be in the hands of local communities, Bush said.

"I'm not interested in being the federal superintendent of schools. We trust our local people to run the schools," he said.

Bush said that his opponent has failed to reform Medicare even though he said he would in '92, '96 and 2000.

"I'd like to refer to one of Al Gore's famous phrases, 'You ain't seen nothing yet,' and he's right — we ain't seen nothing yet," Bush said. "But we've seen enough. You've had your chance, you have not run, and we will."

The public was excited to see Bush campaigning in Iowa so few days before the election, said Josh Bowen, a co-chairman of UI Students for Bush.

"Bush is on fire, and he is ready to go," Bowen said.

Bush's ability to come off as relaxed allows people to see him as a person, said Adam LaBoda, a member of Students for Bush.

"At Gore's rallies, they have to manufacture the rally and excitement. But here tonight, the excitement is obviously natural," LaBoda said.

UI freshman Brandon Creel compared seeing Bush for the first time in Des Moines to a pilgrimage, saying Bush's intellect was obvious. "People question Bush's intellect, but in fact, Bush scored higher than Gore on the ACTs," he said.

Bush continues his campaign trail within days of the election by heading to Florida, where he will be joined by his brother, Florida Gov. Jeb Bush, while Gore brings his campaign to Iowa Friday, speaking at Iowa State University.

Candidates: Buy 'em, sell 'em, swap 'em ...

A vote for a vote

Those of you who are still deciding between Ralph Nader and Al Gore — consider trading your vote.

Several Web sites have been created as forums for supporters of Gore and Nader to swap their votes. Web sites such as Voteswap2000, NaderTrader and Votexchange2000 have formed to combat the "A vote for Nader is a vote for Bush" opinion many Gore and Nader supporters face.

The sites push for Nader supporters in the swing states, such as Iowa, to vote for the vice president. In exchange, Democrats in the states already dominated by George W. Bush would vote for Nader. The sites' goal is to help Gore win the presidency while still giving Nader the 5 percent of the popular vote the Green Party needs to qualify for federal funds in the 2004 presidential race.

Here are the issues: How will this affect the outcome of the election, and how legal is this system? A Chicago judge has already shut down a vote-buying Web site, voteauction.com, where users were asked to submit their votes for sale to the highest bidder. But the Web sites that focus on trading votes say what they're doing is legal. The NaderTrader home page claims that the U.S. Justice Department, which investigates potential instances of voter fraud, says the sites are legal because they "serve as a clearing house. There is no pecuniary exchange, and it is an agreement between private partners."

Although the sites might be legal, how does one vote "swapper" know the other person will actually vote for the intended candidate? They don't. The sites use the honor system, meaning anyone can come to the Web site and say they will vote for a candidate while never intending to do so. This endangers both the Nader and Gore races. The sites advocate trading votes with a trustworthy friend or relative, but if that's not possible, a person then must use the system to find someone willing to swap votes. This person may or may not be trustworthy. Although he or she can be contacted by e-mail, it is still difficult to find out if a partner is really going to vote for the intended candidate.

Another problem with the system is that a primary goal of the Nader presidential race is to strengthen state Green parties. If Nader gets 2 percent of the popular vote in Iowa, then the party will have ballot status and will be more effective in pushing legislation and candidates at the state level, where it counts the most. Trading a vote with someone out of state weakens support for the Green Party at the state level.

The Internet has already infiltrated much of society, and this adds a new dimension to this year's campaign. But the system may bring into question the credibility or integrity of the election count.

Everyone must decide for herself or himself if he or she wants to risk trading a vote — there is no guarantee it will actually be traded, and it would also weaken the state's Green Party.

GUEST OPINION

Peace requires compromise

The violence that has dominated news coverage of the Middle East the past three weeks is a political and human tragedy. Supporters of the peace process cannot help but regret the decline in goodwill and optimism that had sustained relations between Israelis and Palestinians since the Oslo process began in 1993. The fact that the political breakdown was accompanied by violence on both sides is particularly sad — not only for the families of the dead and injured but also for the vast majority of people who support compromise.

The recent history of Israeli-Palestinian relations has established a status quo that differs markedly from that of the pre-Oslo era. Both communities have recognized the legitimacy of the other's goals: Israelis acknowledge that the Palestinians are a people with legitimate national aspirations, Palestinians acknowledge Israel's right to live within secure borders.

The Palestinian Authority now governs all the major cities of the West Bank and Gaza and shares authority with the Israelis over much of the unpopulated area. The government of President Yasser Arafat has its own police force — one that has worked hand-in-hand with Israeli security forces to trace terrorist threats and arrest perpetrators. This arrangement is an improvement for everyone over Israeli military authority.

The Camp David negotia-

Both communities have recognized the legitimacy of the other's goals.

tions of last summer were seen by many as the last, best hope for completing an agreement acceptable to both sides. The Israeli proposal, made by Prime Minister Ehud Barak, went well beyond any previous concessions any Israeli government had considered. In effect, Barak offered the Palestinians sovereignty over areas of Jerusalem, including the Muslim and Christian quarters of the Old City. He all but accepted the Palestinians' claim that Jerusalem is their capital city and not just Israel's.

The problem is that Arafat rejected Barak's peace proposals. Perhaps Arafat thought he could do better by waiting for the next Israeli prime minister to take office. Perhaps he was too politically weak to persuade his constituents that this deal was the best they could hope for. Or perhaps he wanted to take one more shot at forcing Israel's hand by organizing another intifada.

He was wrong. The violent Palestinian demonstrations of recent weeks were unnecessary and counterproductive. Peaceful protests of Israeli opposition leader Ariel Sharon's visit to the Temple Mount would have communicated a strong message to Israel and the world that the Palestinians want to retain control over Muslim holy places — a reasonable and legitimate position.

But by throwing rocks and Molotov cocktails at Israeli soldiers, and by situating civilians directly in the line of fire, the Palestinians have put the Israelis in a no-win situation. If Israel does nothing in response, it risks facing an escalation that puts its very existence in jeopardy. Israel has always been under direct threat from neighboring countries, many of which openly support Palestinian national aspirations and refuse to recognize Israel.

If, on the other hand, Israeli soldiers respond to protesters with military force, then the Israelis look like oppressors and bullies. From Israel's point of view, this is the better of two bad alternatives: It must protect its borders and the safety of its citizens, even at the risk of international alienation.

No one is happy about the current situation in the Middle East. It is crucial that both sides take steps to end the violence and return to a state of mutual respect from which constructive negotiations can once again begin. Too many lives — Israeli and Palestinian, Jewish, Muslim and Christian — have already been sacrificed in pursuit of extreme goals that are unrealistic. It's time for everyone to take a realistic look at the situation and make real compromises.

Get Real

by Bill Penisten

My Nokia and impending 'Gap-dar'

Coming to a Nokia near you — Big Brother is watching ... or he may be very soon.

Enter location tracking. This feature may soon be installed in many mobile devices, including cellular phones, to send your location to your telephone at any given time, in any given place.

Now, you can actually be directed to the mall, as opposed to relying on your animal-like instinct of gravitation toward the nearest Gap.

With automobile navigation and cellular phones, among other devices, this tracking ability may be available to the public within the next year.

But right now, a technology called Digital Angel is on the market. This device is worn close to the body and can quickly detect bodily problems, sending out signals when a medical emergency occurs.

Wow, I suppose in theory this is a wonderful idea. An advanced medical warning before disaster strikes. What could be better?

However, I am a bit concerned with the technology that will follow. I don't want my Nokia to know where I am all the time. And I'm curious — if my cell phone, an inanimate object, can know where I am, who else can find me?

I don't want just anyone with technological capabilities to be able to locate me at all times. That kind of reminds me of ... well ... stalking.

I remember when I read 1984. I thought, "How absurd." No one could install monitors that could constantly see where people are and what they are doing. Americans wouldn't stand for that.

Instead, the mobile-phone industry will sneak the tracking device in under our noses. I feel like a deer or something. Why don't they attach a plastic tracker to my ear? Long live American freedom.

In addition to these abilities, this device can also give directions, turn by turn, to people who are lost. God forbid we have to ask someone for directions. I remember an evening when my father drove around Evanston, Ill., for more than an hour trying to find the way back to the interstate, to the sounds of my mother's and my groans. I guess the whole world has finally inherited my dad's inability to ask for help.

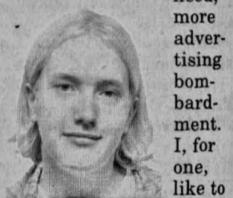

"Down with all face-to-face, human contact. Live through electronic devices." I know that many people are attached to their cell phones, but that mentality ridiculous. Do you remember the movie The Net? Sandra Bullock played Angela, a woman whose life was taken away by a group on the Internet. The group got her Social Security number, address, credit-card numbers and control of virtually all of her possessions. If things like this are possible, don't agencies fear the possibility of people being tracked down, even injured, because of this information? Like I said, when I make calls on my cell phone, I don't want people to know where I am. I don't want any psychos to know I'm in a parking ramp at 12:30 a.m. and locked out of my car as I call my roommate for a spare key. And I certainly don't want my boyfriend to know I'm actually calling from Mr. Wonderful #2's house and not my apartment.

Privacy is guaranteed to us by the Constitution.

But, the companies who are looking to gain business from location tracking insist that these stalking-related, possibly violent scenarios are not realistic. Another aspect of this tracking device would enable the company to put up ads on your cellular phone for businesses near "your location." That's all I need, more advertising bombardment. I, for one, like to search for ways to save money. And I don't like the idea of spending more money on my cell-phone bill to be pierced with a tracking device, trailed by potentially violent criminals, followed around like I live in a George Orwell novel, and trapped in a what was going to be an innocent little date. Screw technology. I want privacy, not the Information Superhighway running straight through my Nokia screen. Call me old fashioned, but I believe I'll stick to my more primitive cell phone. And I thought adding Snake to a cell phone was amazing.

Education, politics priorities for Lensing

■ Vicki Lensing is running for Minnette Doderer's former seat in the Iowa House of Representatives.

By Anne Webbeking
The Daily Iowan

After the polls close and the election results are tallied Nov. 7, the first thing Democrat Vicki Lensing is going to do is call her daughter in Lawrence, Kan.

Whether Lensing wins or loses her campaign for the 45th district of the Iowa House of Representatives, she said she wants to let her daughter, who has been one of her biggest supporters in the campaign, know the outcome.

"I told her if I wasn't the first person she called, I wouldn't talk to her again," said Amanda Lensing, a sophomore at the University of Kansas.

Lensing decided to run for the seat because of her work with the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce and the Districtwide Parents Organization, which has sent her to Des Moines numerous times. She said she felt as if her life was leading her to the state's capital and that the next step would be to run for the state Legislature.

If elected, she will take over for Minnette Doderer, who is retiring after 36 years of work in the state Legislature. Although Doderer didn't endorse her in the primaries, she said she will vote for her Nov. 7.

A 1975 graduate of Iowa City West High School and a 1979 UI graduate, Lensing has two other children who attend Iowa City City High School.

Lensing

Because of her children and her background in the Iowa City community, Lensing said she is in tune with the needs of children and credits education as her main platform.

Education at all levels is important, she said. If students don't get a solid education in kindergarten through 12th grade, then they limit their chances of a college education. Increasing teacher pay is one way Lensing wants to improve education to help children reach this goal.

Lensing believes that the state Legislature must start improving education now, before the problem gets worse. It must come up with a plan and start it soon, Lensing said.

She said she believes that education is directly connected with other problems the state faces, such as economic development, health care and the aging population.

"They all have to work together," Lensing said. "The challenge is going to be how to fund all these things."

With the election less than a week away, the Democratic hopeful isn't taking anything for granted and will continue to share her message with community members.

"It's important for them to see you and know that you're available," Lensing said.

Nancy Williams, Lensing's campaign manager, said one of Lensing's strengths is that she listens to people and does her homework on the issues.

"She is very much one who listens to all sides and is good about considering the different facets of anything before she solidifies her own position," Williams said.

UI senior Sarah Hornbrook said Lensing is also very concerned with students and is willing to listen to them. Hornbrook spoke on Lensing's behalf at the UI Student Government debate Oct. 11 because Lensing was unable to attend because of a prior commitment to the Iowa City Chamber of Commerce.

"It's important in the state Legislature to get to know students and their concerns, and she's done that," Hornbrook said.

Amanda Lensing said her mom has made her and others more aware of politics and what is going on in the world.

She remembered a time two weeks after her 18th birthday when her mom picked her up from school and took her to vote in an election. Voting has always been very important to her mom, she said, and she has made her children and other young people in the community aware of the political process.

Judge moves Macchia sentencing again

The sentencing date for former UI student and fraternity member Daniel Macchia, who pleaded guilty to assault with intent to commit sexual abuse, has been moved for the second time.

On Tuesday, Judge Vern Robinson granted the Department of Correctional Services' continuance request. The sentencing has been rescheduled for Dec. 1 at 1:30 p.m., according to court documents.

The department needed more time to prepare a presentence report because it was unaware that Macchia is living at his home in Hinsdale, Ill. In the request, the department stated that it had not learned about the order for the presentence investigation until Oct. 24.

The sentencing date was moved the first time from Nov. 3 to Nov. 9 because of a scheduling conflict for defense attorney Paul D. Miller.

On Feb. 20, a female victim, whose name was not released, told Iowa City police she awoke to find Macchia having sexual intercourse with her while she was asleep on a couch at the Kappa Sigma fraternity house, 724 N. Dubuque St., according to police records.

The victim reported she had consumed approximately one-third of a bottle of whiskey before she fell asleep and that Macchia had not asked her permission for the contact, according to police records.

Macchia was originally accused of third-degree sexual abuse for the incident, but his plea of guilty to assault with intent to commit sexual abuse was approved on Sept. 28. The crime Macchia pleaded guilty to is an aggravated misdemeanor with a maximum punishment of two years in prison, a $5,000 fine, or both.

Two arrested for Ped Mall robbery

Ryan Albaugh, 22, and Scott Todd, 26, were arrested for first-degree robbery and public intoxication on Oct. 30 after allegedly threatening a victim on the Pedestrian Mall with a bicycle chain.

Bail is set for $15,000, and a preliminary hearing is set for Nov. 9 at 2 p.m.

Albaugh and Todd were arrested at 7:15 p.m. on the 100 block of South Dubuque Street on the Ped Mall.

Iowa City police were dispatched to the scene to look for two white males who had threatened the complainant after the victim refused to give them money.

Albaugh fit the description of one of the white males and admitted to police that he had asked for money, according to court documents.

After the victim refused to give the men money, Todd then said, "How about it now?" as he displayed the chain, said Iowa City police Sgt. Jim Steffen.

Todd continued to follow the victim, making threatening gestures and statements that made the victim feel assaulted, according to the report.

Albaugh has two prior convictions: one on Nov. 3, 1998, and another on June 6.

Jump-start your newspaper journalism career with a solid program that boasts four Pulitzer Prize winners among its alumni - the Pulliam Journalism Fellowship. The Fellowship offers myriad career opportunities; in fact, a Pulliam Fellow from our first class of 1974, Barbara Henry, now serves as president and publisher of The Indianapolis Star. Moreover, a new graduate of our year 2000 class has just been hired as a full-time staff reporter at The Indianapolis Star.

Now entering its 28th year, the 2001 Pulliam Journalism Fellowship helps build a bridge from the classroom to the newsroom. Fellows are assigned to The Indianapolis Star or The Arizona Republic in Phoenix for 10 weeks each summer as staff reporters. We award 20 fellowships annually. The stipend is $5,775.

Traditionally, our fellowships have been open only to graduating college seniors. In 2001, we will be expanding eligibility to include college sophomores and juniors as well as seniors pursuing a career in newspaper journalism. We will be accepting applications for our Summer 2001 program in September 2000.

Airline defends pilot's decision

■ Before the doomed Singapore Airlines Flight 006 took off, the airport was being lashed by winds and rain.

By William Foreman
Associated Press

TAIPEI, Taiwan — Families of Singapore Airlines crash victims flew to Taiwan to retrieve their loved ones' bodies Wednesday as officials worked to figure out what caused the plane to burst into flames during takeoff, killing 79 people — at least 23 of them Americans.

Survivors said they felt Flight 006 hit something as the plane barreled down the runway. But as emergency workers pulled bodies from the charred, blue-and-tan wreckage Wednesday, early speculation also pointed to wind as a possible factor in the Boeing 747-400's accident: At the time of takeoff, the airport was being lashed by the swirling gusts and torrential rains of an approaching typhoon.

Some relatives of those who died have blamed the pilot, Capt. C.K. Foong. On Wednesday, one woman pounded the counter at a Singapore Airlines ticket counter in Taipei and shouted at the company's employees, "How could you take off in this weather?"

But the airline — which had not had a major accident in 28 years of operation — defended Foong's decision.

"Conditions were well within safe operational limits," company spokesman Rick Clements told reporters in Singapore. He noted that a flight by Taiwan's China Airlines took off just 15 minutes before the Singapore Airlines flight's takeoff.

Taiwanese aviation official Billy K.C. Chang said Tuesday night's visibility levels of 1,650-1,980 feet at Chiang Kai-shek International Airport exceeded the minimum requirement of 660 feet needed for takeoff. Measuring safe wind speeds is more complicated, but the gusty winds were not excessive, he said.

In general, control towers in Taiwan monitor wind speed and direction, visibility, air traffic and other factors before authorizing takeoffs, especially during storms such as typhoons. It is then up to the pilot to decide whether to go ahead with the takeoff or to abort it if unexpected problems develop on the runway.

As investigators probed and victims' loved ones hurled accusations amid their tears, medical workers tried to identify the bodies, many of which were badly burned.

Most of the corpses were stored in body bags in an old terminal at the airport. Lined up in neat rows, the 70 or so bodies were laid next to caskets of honey pine and dark cherry wood. DNA tests were expected to be completed Thursday.

In addition to the 79 people who died in the accident, 39 were hospitalized and 61 suffered minor injuries or escaped unhurt, Chang said.

Nine killed in latest Middle East fray

JERUSALEM — Three Israeli soldiers were killed Wednesday in clashes with Palestinians in the West Bank, the military said, after wounded Israeli soldiers were pinned down by intense Palestinian gunfire that prevented their evacuation. They were the first Israeli soldiers to die in combat since Oct. 1.

Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak called his Cabinet into special session and said Israel would not tolerate what he called "grave escalation." A statement from his office said

Laurent Reboours/Associated Press
A mourner carries the body of one of the four Palestinian protesters who were killed by Israeli soldiers on Tuesday.

Barak told the Cabinet his army "will act forcefully but without being dragged into adventurism."

The fiercest battle took place outside the village of Al Khader, near Bethlehem. Two Israeli soldiers, one an officer, and three Palestinians, including a policeman, were killed in the clash. Israeli attack helicopters and tanks were sent in to open fire after Palestinian gunfire prevented Israeli forces from evacuating the dead and four wounded soldiers.

Another Israeli officer died when Palestinians opened fire at an Israeli outpost near Jericho. Israel retaliated by sending helicopter gunships and tanks to attack the Palestinian intelligence headquarters in Jericho, the military said.

Also, three Palestinians were killed in armed clashes in the Gaza Strip Wednesday. Since Palestinian rioting erupted Sept. 28, at least 158 people have been killed, most of them Palestinians.

At a televised news conference, Barak said, "Israel will not sit idly in the face of the grave escalation initiated by the Palestinian Authority."

Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erekat was unable to leave for talks in Washington, set for Friday. He said Israeli forces refused him permission to leave his home in Jericho.

Cabinet minister Shimon Peres and Barak aide Gilead Sher met with Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat, the first high-level meeting since the riots erupted. After the three-hour meeting, Peres left without comment. Earlier, at a televised news conference, Barak said Peres was not going to negotiate but to bring Israel's message that it would not tolerate Palestinian violence.

NATION BRIEF

FBI determines explosive used in Cole blast

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI laboratory tests have concluded that C-4, a military-style plastic explosive, was used in the attack on the USS Cole in Yemen, a federal law enforcement official said Wednesday.

And in another development in the investigation, U.S. and Yemeni negotiators were near an agreement that would let FBI agents in Yemen observe interviews with suspects and witnesses and submit questions, but they could not participate directly in questioning, said the official, who requested anonymity. President Clinton, Secretary of State Madeleine Albright and FBI Director Louis Freeh had appealed to Yemen's leaders to allow joint questioning.

Two former counterterrorism officials said the use of C-4 in the attack that killed 17 U.S. sailors suggested at least that an organized group was behind the attack. One of them said it raised the possibility of state support but fell short of conclusively indicating some government sponsored the attack.

C-4 is a plastic explosive developed for the U.S. military in the Vietnam era.

"It lasts forever. It doesn't deteriorate," said Vince Cannistraro, a former CIA counterterrorism expert.

The explosive is made for military use in the United States and in at least several NATO nations. It is not available on the open market, like the fuel oil and fertilizer used to make the bomb that destroyed a federal building in Oklahoma City.

Although the C-4 formula is not a secret, one former U.S. military counterterrorism expert said, "C-4 is not used in industrial blasting. It usually comes from a military source."

"Organized criminal groups have stolen C-4," this former military official said, speaking on condition of anonymity. "It requires some amount of organization to do that. But it doesn't require government-level support to get it."

Cannistraro said C-4 has been included in U.S. military sales to Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and even to Iran while the shah was still in power. The U.S. military used it during the Persian Gulf war.

TENNIS BRIEF

Hawkeyes to compete in Michigan

The UI women's tennis team will begin competition in its last tournament of the fall season today at the ITA Midwest Regional Tennis Tournament in Ann Arbor, Mich. The main tournament, which will include players already granted a draw and the top eight who advanced from today and Friday's qualifying rounds, will begin on Saturday and run through Nov. 6. Iowa will have six players vie for draws into the main tournament. Junior Toni Neykova and sophomore Cassie Haas have already qualified for the main singles tournament, which will consist of players from 35 different schools in the Midwest region. Iowa is coming off its best outing of the season at the Yellow Jacket Invitational on Oct. 20-22 in Atlanta, Ga., where two doubles teams won flight titles. The doubles team of Neykova and freshman Jodi Scheldt will hope to continue its success on the heels of a flight championship in Atlanta. "The strength of our team is really in its depth, which is not especially revealed in this kind of individual tournament," said coach Paul Wardlaw. "But we're expecting a great tournament from all the players."

Beginning quest for NCAA berth

■ If the Iowa women's soccer team wins the Big Ten meet, it will earn a bid for the NCAA Tournament.

By Laura Podolak
 The Daily Iowan

Players on the Iowa soccer team hope to avenge an early season double-overtime loss to No. 3 seeded Michigan today in the first round of the Big Ten Tournament. That game is scheduled to start at 2 p.m. in Champaign, Ill.

Iowa (11-8 overall, 5-5 Big Ten), who goes in as the No. 6 seed, boasts three of the top five ranked scorers in the conference. Senior Kate Walse (No. 3) leads the Hawkeyes in points scored with Sarah Lynch (No. 4) and Linzy Wolman (No. 5) close on her heels.

Iowa coach Wendy Logan said she hopes these offensive threats, all with unique scoring abilities, will put pressure on the Wolverines.

"We have some positive aspects that could cause problems for them," she said. "Michigan will have to find a way to stop our players from scoring."

Michigan, like Iowa, brings a team that has balanced scoring. Although the Hawkeyes, sitting third in the conference in total scoring, have a slight advantage in the rankings, the Wolverines are close behind in fourth.

But, Michigan also has shown toughness on defense. The Wolverines finished the regular season ranked fourth in the conference in team goalkeeping. Iowa finished tenth.

The Hawkeyes, who pulled themselves out of eighth place with three straight wins to close conference play, avoided a first round matchup with conference champs Penn State (17-2, 10-0). Although it was imperative for the Hawkeyes to get out of a rematch with the Nittany Lions, Logan said she feels that the parity in the Big Ten will make the tournament interesting.

"I am not putting too much stock in the seedings this year," Iowa coach Wendy Logan said. "There are only two games between second and eighth place, which shows it's a very competitive group of teams."

If the Hawkeyes put together a victory in the first round, they will face either Wisconsin or Purdue. The Hawkeyes beat both teams in regular season play.

The Big Ten Tournament marks another important time for the Hawkeyes because it

'Bama coach to resign

■ Mike DuBose says he is leaving Alabama at the end of the season.

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — The sight of Alabama players sitting on the turf in disbelief after a humiliating homecoming loss was just too much for one of the proudest programs in college football.

Coach Mike DuBose will resign at the end of the season, bringing an end to four turbulent seasons. He survived a sexual harassment scandal to lead the Crimson Tide to a conference title last season but watched the team collapse this year.

"I thought Monday in my heart and soul that I needed to make a change," athletics director Mal Moore said Wednesday during a news conference. "We both agreed that new leadership is needed to move the program forward."

Alabama was ranked No. 3 in the preseason poll, with many fans expecting the Tide to roll through their Southeastern Conference opponents and make their way to the national title game.

But the Tide opened with a loss at unranked UCLA, were shut out by Southern Mississippi, also lost to Arkansas and Tennessee and fell 40-28 on Oct. 28 to Central Florida. At 3-5, Alabama needs victories in its final three games to make the SEC championship game and stay alive to qualify for a bowl game.

L.A. Dodgers hire unknown manager

LOS ANGELES — The Dodgers' new manager realizes many fans are probably wondering, "Jim who?"

Jim Tracy knows the same questions were asked about another unknown: Walter Alston, who was hired by the Brooklyn Dodgers in 1954.

"I've been through that before," Tracy said Wednesday at a news conference called to introduce him as the team's new manager. "I look forward to establishing myself here in a way that, hopefully when my time is through here, people will speak of me in the same vein as Walter Alston and Tommy Lasorda.

Tracy, the Dodgers' bench coach, signed a two-year contract to succeed Davey Johnson, who was fired Oct. 6 after two years. The Dodgers haven't made the playoffs since 1996 and haven't won a postseason game since winning the 1988 World Series.

"I'm very grateful I'm being given this opportunity," Tracy said. "I have no fear whatsoever taking on this situation. My focus will be on re-establishing the pride, re-establishing

Penn St. happy again

■ Oct. 28 marked Penn State's second win in a row.

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

The hard times in Happy Valley are gone — at least for now.

Penn State's offense is finding its tempo, the defense is coming off its best game of the season, and even kicker Ryan Primanti executed to perfection, hitting a 39-yard field goal in the Nittany Lions' 27-24 victory over Indiana Oct. 28 with just 18 seconds on the clock.

That win was Penn State's second in a row — something that seemed unlikely at the season's outset.

When the Nittany Lions rolled into Iowa City last year, so did their No. 2 ranking and an apparent shot at the national title. The Nittany Lions tossed Iowa aside, 31-7, and continued to beat up on the Big Ten through the remainder of October.

Then November came, and the national title hopes left. Penn State lost three straight games, beginning with a home loss to Minnesota.

Brett Roseman/The Daily Iowan

Penn State's David Macklin breaks up a possible touchdown by Ladell Betts during last year's game on Oct. 9, 1999.

The Nittany Lions suffered another blow — two of them, actually — when, at season's end, senior Courtney Brown went first in the NFL Draft and junior teammate LaVar Arrington was selected second.

Not only was the defense shaken up heading into this season, but question marks surfaced around Penn State's offense when starting quarterback Rashard Casey was accused of allegedly assaulting an off-duty police officer.

Those charges have been dropped, and the Nittany Lions have begun to overcome their woeful 1-4 start by winning three of their last four, including a 22-20 victory over Purdue in Beaver Stadium.

"I've always thought this was going to be a good football team when it's all said and done," Penn State coach Joe Paterno said. "I think we're getting to that point. We just need to stay focused."

The fire and focus that's emerged as Penn State makes a final push toward a bowl begins with Paterno.

Brooks to coach 2002 Olympic hockey team

Herb Brooks is the same coach who coached the U.S. team to the "Miracle on Ice."

By John Akers
 Associated Press

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Herb Brooks isn't looking for a "Miracle on Ice" — just a gold medal in Salt Lake City.

Brooks, who led the U.S. hockey team to the gold medal against huge odds in 1980, was introduced Wednesday as the head coach of Team USA for the 2002 Winter Games. This time, he'll be coaching players from the NHL, not a group of amateurs.

"That was then, this is now. It's apples and oranges," Brooks said. "This team, if it wins, it won't be a miracle. I don't think it will even be an upset. This team can stand with the top six or seven teams in the world."

Joining Brooks as assistants are minor league coach John Cunniff and former Olympic hockey coach Lou Vairo. Pittsburgh Penguins general manager Craig Patrick will be the U.S. general manager, while St. Louis Blues general manager Larry Pleau is associate GM.

In 1980, Brooks and Patrick, the assistant general manager and assistant coach, led a group of college players to an upset of the Soviet Union en route to the gold medal at Lake Placid. It was the last time the United States won a medal in men's hockey.

Brooks is in his sixth season as a member of the Pittsburgh Penguins' scouting staff. He was 29-23-5 after taking over as the Penguins' coach partway through last season.

Brooks and his staff said they were just beginning the planning stages for the 15 months before the Olympics. The United States will select eight -12 players in early January and the rest later.

"You're looking for players whose name on the front of the sweater is more important than the one on the back," Brooks said. "I look for these players to play hard, to play smart and to represent their country."

Brooks' team will have only three days to prepare for the games while the NHL shuts down for a 12-day period.

Brooks said he preferred the old format, in which professionals were not allowed to play with amateurs, but he accepts the change.

"Without change, there's no progress," he said.

At the 1998 Winter Games in Nagano, the United States tied for fifth place despite using NHL players, and the team came under criticism for its behavior. A room at the Olympic Village was trashed by U.S. players following their elimination.

Phillies hire Bowa as new manager

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Larry Bowa, whose fiery personality helped lead the Philadelphia Phillies to the franchise's only World Series championship and got him in trouble with management, was hired Wednesday as the team's manager.

"When all was said and done, experience, knowledge of the game, love of the game and, more importantly, knowledge and love of Philadelphia ruled the day," general manager Ed Wade said.

Bowa said he could not guarantee victories.

"The one thing that I will bring to this ball club is intensity," he said. "These guys will go out and play hard every night... When you start accepting losing, I think you've got a problem."

Logan: NCAA bid not impossible offers the only option for them to earn an invitation to the NCAA Tournament.

After getting overlooked for a bid into the tournament last year, the team wanted to do everything it takes to get an invitation in 2000.

But, the season hasn't turned out exactly as planned.

Although the dream is still alive, it was somewhat smothered by two road losses to Colorado College and Air Force Academy on Oct. 27 and 29. "The losses put more pressure on us to do well," Logan said. "We control how we do or finish."

Logan said that her team is taking the saying "one game at a time" even one step further.

"From now on, we are taking it one half at a time, one play at a time," she said. "All the players need to take care of their individual responsibilities."

Now, virtually the only way the Hawkeyes can receive the extremely competitive NCAA bid and forego the anxiety of watching another year slip through their fingers is to earn an automatic bid, which goes to the team who wins the Big Ten Tournament.

Iowa must defeat teams such as Michigan, Purdue and Wisconsin. It may have to put away the nationally ranked Nittany Lions to fight its way into the Big Dance.

Impossible? Logan doesn't think so.

"We could make a good run at the tournament," she said. "We just need to play well and maybe catch a couple of breaks along the way."

Players stunned by resignation

stunned right now," quarterback Tyler Watts said. "We're going to stick together. Across the board, everyone would love nothing more than to win these last three and go to Atlanta to coach."

DuBose followed Gene Stallings as coach in 1997, five years after the Tide won their sixth national title. Bear Bryant led Alabama to five titles between 1958-82.

Moore said DuBose would be paid his salary and benefits through January 2002 and there would be "no lump sum payment."

DuBose, 47, a former Alabama player and longtime assistant coach, was under contract through Jan. 31, 2004. He is 24-20 in four seasons as head coach.

Moore said he will search for an experienced head coach to replace DuBose, who was given the job without college head coaching experience.

The athletic director said he would pick a successor without a search committee. He declined to identify any possible successors but said "you always have coaches in mind in these situations."

Moore said money would not be an issue, though DuBose's $525,000 annual compensation package made him one of the Southeastern Conference's lowest paid football coaches.

"We will do what we need to do to move forward this program, and take it to the level that is expected and demanded of it," Moore said.

He said DuBose would coach the team through a bowl game if it makes it that far. Moore isn't worried that that might affect the interest of prospective successors.

"I will be looking for coaches that I feel certain will be in bowl games, from top programs that have had success and are having success at the present," Moore said.

DuBose met with the team Wednesday afternoon after working out final details of the resignation agreement with Moore.

"It was very emotional," defensive end Kenny King said. "The head coach, assistant coaches and players were very emotional, and tears were shed."

Defensive tackle Jarret Johnson said DuBose was subdued in practice, which was closed to the media.

"You could just tell it hurt really, really bad," Johnson said. "He tried to get in there and be himself, but he was too emotional."

DuBose did not attend the news conference, but issued a statement saying he had been fortunate to be part of the Alabama tradition for much of three decades. He thanked players, assistant coaches, fans and alumni for support and commitment.

"Most importantly, I thank God for all the opportunities he give me each and every day," DuBose said.

Moore said that as the season went along it appeared "we were starting a slide or downward spiral" that DuBose could not stop.

University President Andrew Sorenson said DuBose had given a "great effort" but that all agreed "a change in leadership is warranted."

DuBose led the Crimson Tide to the SEC crown last year, a season that began under a cloud after DuBose nearly lost his job in an embarrassing sexual harassment scandal.

totally the tradition of this organization."

Tracy is the 24th manager in franchise history, but only the sixth since the Dodgers moved from Brooklyn to Los Angeles after the 1957 season. He's the fourth since Lasorda retired midway through the 1996 season following a minor heart attack.

Alston managed the Dodgers for 23 years before retiring, and he was succeeded by Lasorda, the team's third-base coach, in 1977. Both are in the Hall of Fame.

Tracy, 44, joined the Dodgers two years ago as bench coach under Johnson. He held a similar position the previous four years under Montreal Expos manager Felipe Alou.

"Selecting him, I was 100 percent in favor of it," said Lasorda, now a senior vice president for the Dodgers. "I'm telling you, I completely endorse him. I like his style; I like his philosophy."

Lasorda was ready when Tracy's status as an unknown with minimal big-league managerial experience was mentioned.

"That's what they said when Walter Alston got hired — 'Walter who?' He did the job for 23 years," Lasorda said. "I think Jim's going to do a good job."

Tracy was chosen late Tuesday over Dodgers batting coach Rick Down. Eleven candidates were interviewed, according to Dodgers Chairman Bob Daly, including New York Yankees coaches Willie Randolph and Chris Chambliss, and former Los Angeles pitcher

Orel Hershiser. "His loyalty to Davey impressed me," Daly said. "What I liked about Jim is he didn't answer the questions the way he thought we wanted to hear them answered. He answered them honestly."

Daly said he never asked to interview higher-profile candidates such as Dusty Baker of the Giants, Bobby Valentine of the Mets and Lou Piniella of the Mariners, who all wound up re-signing.

"I never believed any of them were available," Daly said. "I'm very happy we stayed inside. I think that will take us to the next level as fast as possible."

Wizards beat Charlotte 95-77

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Richard Hamilton scored 15 of his 23 points in the fourth quarter Wednesday night to lead the Washington Wizards to a 95-77 victory over the Charlotte Hornets.

Five Wizards scored in double figures to give first-year coach Leonard Hamilton his first victory as an NBA coach in front of a hometown crowd. Hamilton, who coached 10 seasons at the University of Miami before getting the Washington job, is a native of Gastonia, N.C.

Rod Strickland added 18 points for Washington, Juwan Howard had 13, Felipe Lopez scored 12 and Mitch Richmond had 10 to move into 25th place on the all-time scoring list.

Jamal Mashburn and Elden Campbell scored 13 each to lead Charlotte (1-1).

Celtics 103, Pistons 83

BOSTON — Paul Pierce showed no ill effects from being stabbed last month, scoring 28 points Wednesday night — 20 in the first half — to lead the Boston Celtics to a 103-83 victory over the Detroit Pistons.

Antoine Walker had 33 points and 12 rebounds as the Celtics improved to 3-1 in season openers in the Rick Pitino era.

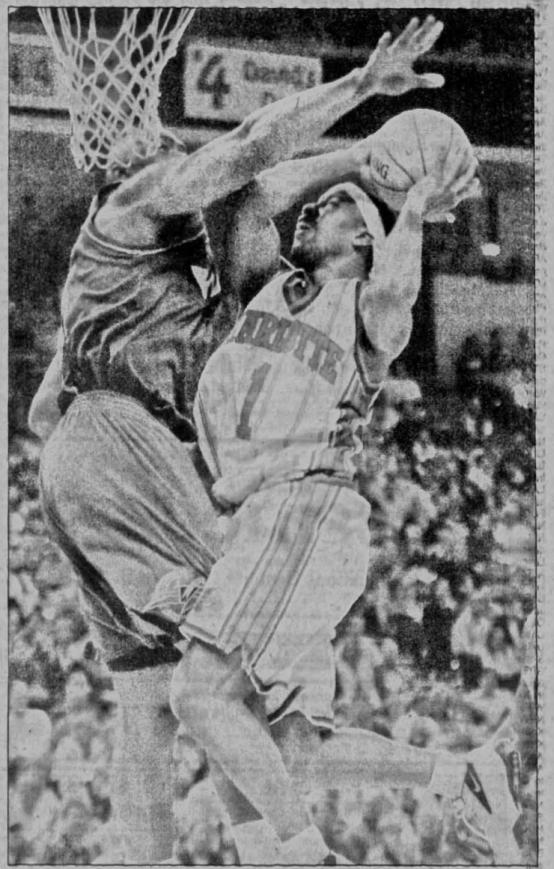

One night after scoring a career-high 44 points in Detroit's season-opening victory at Toronto, Jerry Stackhouse scored 20 but shot just 7-of-21. The Pistons shot just 36 percent overall as they fell behind 56-40 at the half and got no closer than nine in the second half.

76ers 104, Raptors 98

PHILADELPHIA — Allen Iverson scored 24 points and the Philadelphia 76ers overcame a big first quarter by Vince Carter to beat the Toronto Raptors, 104-98, Wednesday night.

Iverson also had five rebounds and five assists. Eric Snow scored 16 and Tyrone Hill added 12.

Carter scored 15 of his 25 points in the first quarter when the Raptors opened a 10-point lead. Mark Jackson added 16 points and 12 assists, and Antonio Davis had 18 points and 11 rebounds.

Chuck Burton/Associated Press
Charlotte Hornets' Baron Davis is fouled by Washington Wizards' Obinna Ekezie in the first quarter at the Charlotte Coliseum in Charlotte, N.C., Wednesday.

Cavaliers 102, Kings 100

CLEVELAND — Lamond Murray scored all six of Cleveland's points in the second overtime before slapping the ball away from Doug Christie just before the final buzzer Wednesday night as the Cavaliers won their home opener, 102-100, over the Sacramento Kings.

Murray, who finished with 18 points, reached in and poked the ball away as Christie was about to go up for a potential game-tying shot.

Andre Miller had 17 points and eight assists for the Cavs before falling hard and bruising his right knee in the second overtime.

Heat 105, Magic 79

MIAMI — Opening night for the Miami Heat began with a standing ovation for Alonzo Mourning and ended with Pat Riley's 1,000th coaching victory.

The revamped Heat meshed marvelously, even without their ailing All-Star center, racing to a 20-point lead after 7½ minutes and beating the Orlando Magic, 105-79, Wednesday night.

Lions' spirits are high right now

PENN STATE

ries — all as a Nittany Lion — Paterno is just two wins shy of tying Bear Bryant's record for most Division I victories. Paterno, otherwise known as "Joe Pa," is the father figure of Penn State football, devoting 51 years of his life to coaching, 35 as its head man.

Still, tradition doesn't win games, as his team has learned this season. But, Paterno is still relatively pleased by the recent play of Casey and the offense.

"That's the biggest difference from now and earlier in the season," Penn State's senior free safety James Boyd said. "The offense feels pretty good about themselves. They know they can play with anybody in the country. At first they just had to find a chemistry and what worked good together, and I think they've got that now."

While the offense is coming together, what distinguishes Penn State from many is its defense. The Oct. 28 game against Indiana was played with true Nittany Lion pride. Penn State's defense held the dangerous Hoosier quarterback Antwan Randle El to just 154 yards, 319 yards less than he recorded the previous game against Minnesota.

Paterno said his team is in no position to lose focus even with the 1-8 Hawkeyes coming to town. Sophomore tailback Larry Johnson agrees.

"Our spirits are real high right now, but we're also focused on what we need to do," he said. "We have doors that need to be opened, and it starts with Iowa."

Ripken, Orioles agree to one-year contract

BALTIMORE (AP) — Cal Ripken and the Orioles agreed Wednesday to a $6.3 million, one-year contract that virtually ensures he will end his playing career in Baltimore.

Ripken, 40, also received $6.3 million this year in the final season of his recently expired contract.

"Obviously, I am very pleased to have the contract completed," Ripken said. "I always have been an Oriole and I always want to be an Oriole. My back feels great, and I'm looking forward to having the opportunity to compete."

The two-time American League MVP and 18-time All-Star had discussed with the team whether to include an option year for 2002 in the new contract. Ultimately, the sides decided to take it one year at a time.

Ripken, who holds the major league record for most consecutive games played at 2,632, has spent his entire career in Baltimore.

He was limited to 86 games in 1999 because of lower back pain and missed two months this season for the same reason.

When he has played, he's been effective. Ripken hit .340 with 18 homers and 57 RBIs in 1999, and last year he hit .282 with two homers and 12 RBIs in September after returning from a lengthy stint on the disabled list.

Tech ready for Miami with or without Vick

■ The VT backup hopes he fares better than Ken Dorsey did last year.

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

Virginia Tech quarterback Dave Meyer hopes to fare better in Saturday's Hokies-Hurricanes game than Miami's Ken Dorsey did in last year's matchup.

Dorsey, who replaced an injured Kenny Kelly in the second half of the Hokies' 43-10 win in '99, was harassed nearly every play. He was sacked twice, intercepted once and hit just six of 17 passes for 45 yards.

"I was overwhelmed and my head was spinning," Dorsey said. Meyer, a fifth-year senior, starts for the injured Michael Vick when No. 2 Virginia Tech (8-0, 6-0 Big East) visits No. 3 Miami (6-1, 3-0) in a national title elimination game at the sold-out Orange Bowl.

"I'm ready," said Meyer, who led the Hokies on the field-goal drive that produced a 37-34 win over Pittsburgh last week. "From week to week, I prepare to start, whether I'm the backup or starter."

Vick, among the Heisman Trophy favorites, has a sprained right ankle but coach Frank Beamer hasn't counted out his star. Vick will be fitted with a special ankle brace and may play. Miami coach Butch Davis expects to see Vick, and more Vick.

"He's not hurt," Davis said earlier this week. "If you think he's hurt, you're kidding yourself."

He's hurt for sure, but how seriously remains to be seen.

Against the Panthers, Meyer was seven of 13 for 114 yards, his last three completions going for 12, 11 and 11 yards to set up Carter Warley's game-winning 27-yard field goal with 16 seconds left.

"He's tall, he's athletic. He can throw the football. He's smart," Beamer said of Meyer. "I think it's obvious he's not quite as quick as Michael. He doesn't throw the ball quite as quick. His release is not like Michael's and he probably doesn't throw quite as far as Michael."

ISU AD was once a coach at Iowa

■ Bruce Van De Velde says his new job is a dream come true.

Associated Press

AMES — For Bruce Van De Velde, being named athletics director at Iowa State isn't just the realization of a dream he's had of running a department at a major university in a premier conference.

"Iowa State is that, but more than that, it is my alma mater. It is my home," Van De Velde said Wednesday as he was introduced as the successor to Gene Smith, now at Arizona State.

Van De Velde, 45, currently a senior associate athletics director at Oklahoma, called the Iowa State job "a professional milestone, a destination, something I have worked hard and long for for many, many years."

The Sterling, Ill., native is no stranger to Iowa. He graduated from Iowa State in 1981 and was Hayden Fry's recruiting coordinator at Iowa from 1988-91.

In addition to working at Oklahoma, he also has been part of the athletics departments at Kansas State and Missouri. Van De Velde also was athletics director at Utah State for one year.

Charlie Nelbergall/Associated Press

Bruce Van De Velde speaks during a news conference after being introduced as Iowa State University's new athletics director, Wednesday afternoon.

In addition to being an assistant football coach at Iowa State, Nebraska Wesleyan and Dana, Van De Velde was associate athletics director for football operations during part of his time at Kansas State.

He said his immediate attention at Iowa State would be on football, specifically coach Dan McCarney's contract.

McCarney is in the first year of a two-year extension given to him in 1998, the fourth year of his original contract. With last Saturday's win against Missouri, McCarney has guaranteed Iowa State its first winning season since 1989.

"In terms of coach McCarney's contract, it is a top priority for me and I think for our administration to try to get something done with that just as soon as possible," Van De Velde said. "I want to sit down and talk with coach McCarney and visit with administration and go from there. I think everyone in the Big 12 Conference and really all around the country is aware of the job those coaches have done this past year."

Long Island under the name the New York Dragons. The Barnstormers played for six years in Des Moines, the smallest city to have an Arena Football League team.

The new owners are Charles Wang and fellow software company executive Sanjay Kumar. They paid about $190 million for the Islanders last April.

"As much as we wanted to keep an AFL franchise in Des Moines, the financial dynamics of the league have changed dramatically over the last six years to where it just wasn't financially feasible to operate a team here," Foster said.

The team never turned a profit. It lost $1.2 million last season, Foster said, despite average crowds of nearly three-quarters capacity.

Warner, the NFL MVP last season, joined the Barnstormers the year they were formed and twice led them to the championship game before signing with the St. Louis Rams in 1998.

The Barnstormers qualified for the playoffs five times, compiling an overall record of 61-32. The team lost the championship game in 1996 and 1997.

Loving and losing the Garden

Picks of the Week

■ When the Angels of Heaven Saw the Daughters of Man is a meditation on love.

By Shawn Sebastian
The Daily Iowan

For those folks with Charlie's Angels on their mind, there's a new type of angel in town — the angel of heaven.

When the Angels of Heaven Saw the Daughters of Man, written by playwright Erik Ehn, brings together international and local collaborators and actors for the play's two-week run at the E.C. Mabie Theatre today through Nov. 12 at 8 p.m.

Angels is a movement and musical piece that takes place in a time described in the book of Genesis, after man's expulsion from the Garden of Eden and before the Great Flood. During this time, humans were so beautiful to the eyes of heaven that angels descended on earth to intermarry with mortals.

"This play is basically a love story. A love story on a spiritual scale," said Ehn, the playwright and director of Angels.

Although the piece stems from a passage in the book of Genesis, it doesn't follow traditional rules of drama or storytelling.

"It doesn't necessarily have a plot," Ehn said. "It is more of a meditation that we turn over in our mouths like candy."

The play meditates on ideas of perfect love, too-perfect love, memories, letting go and a host of other themes.

"We're working with about a hundred different concepts here because the development of the play was so organic," said cast member and UI student Cristela Carrizales.

Angels was unique from its very inception. When the actors came on to the project, they did not have scripts. Instead, they had an outline for an idea. Ehn wanted to create as little structure as possible, but his primary goal was to create an environment of openness in which every member of the production could contribute her or his own ideas to the final product.

"This is a relationship-based piece," Ehn said. "People trusted me to put on a good show, and I had to trust others to share their gifts with us."

By creating an environment of trust and creative freedom, the play evolved from a vague idea into a polished production.

"From the very beginning, nothing was set in stone," assistant director Jeremy Wilhelm said. "This play has grown tremendously from its conception point. We have filled out the original skeleton."

Through various writing exercises and improvisations, the cast contributed a pool of images, experiences and phrases that the play continually drew upon throughout its evolution.

"I've never been a part of a production where we have built something from the ground up," Carrizales said.

Ehn added, "There is no one director for this piece. Various directors collaborated, and various forms of text, movement and music co-mingled. Nothing takes priority over anything else."

The cast, which helped to write and direct the piece, includes several visiting actors, writers and directors. Among them are Laurie Carlos from the Twin Cities, Minn., and Grisha Coleman from New York, former members of the Urban Bush Women Dance and Theatre Company in New York, and Sanja Krsmanovic Tasic and Maja Mitic from the Dah Teatar in Belgrade, Yugoslavia. UI students make up the rest of the 17-member cast.

"They come in with tremendous talent and technique," Ehn said of his visiting collaborators. "This play involves leaving Eden, and these people have a very personal understanding of exile and survival."

When the Angels of Heaven Saw the Daughters of Man is a piece that will evolve over its 10-day run. Ehn hopes each performance will more honestly portray the idea of humans gaining the favor of heaven and losing it. The play will develop new methods of using music, movement and text to contemplate and communicate a love that runs so deep it goes beyond our mortal understanding.

Grace
Jeff Buckley
Columbia/Sony

Your first listen to Grace will leave you utterly mystified.

And that's not a bad thing.

The late Jeff Buckley had an amazing ability to craft songs that feel completely formless and flowing and force you to listen in a way you've never listened before. The mixed meters, shifting dynamics and malleable chord progressions seem to exist outside any conventional musical structure and simply appear of their own accord.

Adding to the enigma are the lyrics on the album's title track, which eerily hint at an unexpected death. In 1997, following the completion of Grace, Buckley fulfilled his own prophecy by mysteriously drowning in the Mississippi River.

A little humor for those of us who would rather laugh at the political system than break down in tears.

Al Franken was on campus last week in support of Al Gore, and he lays out his leftist views for all to see in this book, which mocks prominent conservatives and calls Bill Clinton the best president of the 20th century (it was written before Monica).

Despite Franken's partisan views, Democrats and Republicans alike should get a good laugh out of this book, provided they don't take it too seriously.

Haunted Poe

FEI/Atlantic

Poe has just released her second album, and, as titled, it is definitely her most haunted so far. Her music has the same Gothic innuendo as her reputation. The highlights of this album are the little electronic tricks that float through the songs. These satin undertones are what create her unique, ghostly sound.

Poe is a natural at being ghostlike, but she often trips the specter with her attempts at funk. The album opens with the ominous euphonic title track, "Haunted," where she sets a disembodied tone; then songs such as "Walk the Walk" and "Not a Virgin" come across with a gutsy attitude that does not fit with the composition. She'd be better off to leave us in the surreal world. Her strong vocals are magnificent, although sometimes her lyrics sound a little silly, grabbing too hard at a rhyme.

Poe has created for herself an aura of mysticism and fear, so when she floats back down to Earth, it just sounds weird.

Charlie's Angels Various Artists

Columbia/Sony Music
Soundtrax

The soundtrack to the motion picture Charlie's Angels is an anachronism of sex and pop. Just like the movie.

Buying this album is like renting Drew Barrymore's body on a disc. It might be a very good thing or a not very good thing, depending on your personal tastes. But that's what putting out soundtrack albums is about, I guess.

The record is made up mostly of "old favorites" such as "Brandy" (Looking Glass), "True" (Spandau Ballet), "Groove is in the Heart" (Deee-Lite) and many more. It starts out with a track by Destiny's Child, which is featured twice in the album, and sets a bold girl-power tone, which is rather ironic considering the whole draw to the movie is that guys want to have sex with Charlie's Angels, but never mind that.

There are a couple more new originals by Aerosmith and an intense mix by Fat Boy Slim. Oh, and I almost forgot, it also includes that timeless classic by Sir Mix-A-Lot "Baby Got Back."

So, generally, the point is, all you men better watch yourselves, because Charlie's Angels are back and they are bad ass. However, to all you Angels out there, you might want to check your feminism, because it may have gotten lost in all that cleavage.

A touch of Brazil comes to Clapp

Johnson County Landmark will feature Rafael Dos Santos and his compositions.

By Karen Schmiedeskamp
The Daily Iowan

For those of you only familiar with the Austin Powers version of the bossa nova, Johnson County Landmark, the UI's premier jazz band, will show you how it's really done. Friday night, the band members will bring a touch of Brazil to the stage of Clapp Recital Hall.

The concert will focus on the UI School of Music's long-standing connection with Brazil.

John Rapson, the Johnson County Landmark conductor and director of UI jazz studies, has made many trips to Brazil, exposing the people of Brazil to American jazz. Many faculty members have played and taught in Brazil, and a large number of Brazilian students have been attracted to the music school as a result.

"Our connection to Brazil is very, very important to us," Rapson said. "It's like a sister state to us."

Johnson County Landmark will perform with Brazilian Rafael Dos Santos and members of his quintet. Dos Santos was a pianist for the UI band for three years and a graduate assistant in jazz studies for four years.

The concert was planned as a sort of welcome back for Dos Santos, Rapson said. This is Dos Santos' first return visit to the United States since he moved to Brazil several years ago. He is the chairman of the popular music department at the Universidad Estadual Campinas in Campinas, Brazil.

"The interesting part of this concert is that we're not just trying to simulate Brazilian music. We know it's going to be right (stylistically)," said UI senior and band member Alicia Rau. "With the composer there, you really get the full effect of the music."

Johnson County Landmark will play several of Dos Santos' compositions along with works by other Brazilian composers.

"Rafael is a pedagogue as well as an accomplished composer," Rapson said.

The band will play approximately 10 works, including two traditional jazz pieces. The rest of the concert will consist of Brazilian music.

"The music is very fast, kind of skippy, if that's a word," Rau said.

She called the music carnival-like. Samba, bossa nova, maracatu, baião and choro are just a few of the Brazilian styles that Johnson County Landmark will play.

Christopher Nicholas, a UI graduate student in music, said he plans on attending the concert because of the reputation of the band and its conductor.

"John Rapson is brilliant," he said. "I love how his programs are put together. He works magic."

Quad Cities ready to go hard-core

Eminem and Limp Bizkit are heating things up across the country, and Iowa is no exception.

By Leanna Brundrett
The Daily Iowan

Where would you find a guy named "Stan" who got "Nookie" in a "Broken Home?" In a soap opera plot about a poor homeless man?

Nope. Instead, you would find yourself face-to-face with Eminem, Limp Bizkit and Papa Roach singing the lyrics to these songs on Nov. 5 at the Mark of the Quad Cities.

While some people are excited about the concert, which is part of the groups' Anger Management tour, others just can't bear to fake the enthusiasm.

"I hate Limp Bizkit," Iowa State University freshman Kris Kroona said. "Its first CD was great, but its art form has changed, and now it's only doing it for the money. It's trying too hard to fit in with the music scene now."

The message that Eminem relays isn't cool, and he needs to stop harassing celebrities, said UI freshman Elyse Tefka.

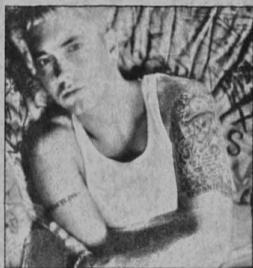

"I like his music, but I think he only does crazy stuff so he can have something to write about," she said. Although she likes Limp Bizkit's music, too, lead singer Fred Durst's personality is too "bad-ass" for her.

Others feel nauseous when talking about the rap artists.

"I'm so sick of Eminem," said UI sophomore Megan O'Keefe. "He's overplayed, he's rude, and he just says things to give himself a fake personality."

However, O'Keefe doesn't think Limp Bizkit is fake. She boasts about being a Limp Bizkit fan since her junior year in high school. She likes the band's hard-rock and rap style and said the only two concert-related goals in her life are to see Limp Bizkit and the Dave Matthews Band live. As soon as O'Keefe heard about the Anger Management concert in the Quad Cities, she was determined to go, but her plans fell through.

Despite the allegations against Eminem about his relationship with his wife, some hard-core fans don't believe all the hoopla. UI sophomore Desiree Espinoza said she would do "anything short of running around naked" to meet Eminem.

"His music is art," she said. "It's just another form of expression. His lyrics don't mean anything, and all those allegations of him trying to kill his wife are just a bunch of crap."

Espinoza has been trying for the past week to win tickets from B100, the local Quad Cities radio station. So far, though, she hasn't had any luck.

Coralville resident Chris Yetter doesn't like rap, but he likes the message that Eminem presents. He knows that the allegations against Eminem are most likely true but feels all Eminem is doing is questioning normal societal standards.

"He just says things that people wish they could, but don't," Yetter said.

Blair Witch Project 2 not very bewitching

■ The sequel has a disappointing opening weekend, finishing behind Meet the Parents.

By Mark Wilson
The Daily Iowan

Once upon a time, in a land not so far away, the movie camera became accessible to the common person. Though not of the professional quality like those of major motion picture studios, these personal cameras served a variety of purposes effectively. We no longer would forget little Billy's Bar Mitzvah. We would now be able to laugh at the endless crotch shots on "America's Funniest Home Videos." And at last, one could make a surprise film about a few teens getting chased in the woods that would gross $140.5 million in its national theater run.

The film was called The Blair Witch Project (as if you were the ones lost in the woods). What you might not have known was that for the sequel, Book of Shadows, $15 million was given to a new director to recreate the magic and the money of the original. With a budget of $14,970,000 more than the first Blair Witch, this should be simple — for anyone. But the box-office numbers show differently.

Not able to dethrone Meet the Parents (which has been at the top of the box office for the last four weeks), Book of Shadows pulled in a meager $13.1 million on the opening weekend, certainly shocking the movie execs who wrote that $15 million check.

In addition to the success of The Blair Witch Project, the sequel had what would seem to be the best possible release time for a horror film — Halloween weekend. So, why hasn't the sequel lived up to Artisan Entertainment's expectations at the box office thus far? To answer this question, I didn't turn to movie execs or movie reviewers. I turned to the only people who really matter in the grand scheme of the movie industry: the people who decide to buy, or not buy, a ticket.

"The only reason anybody saw the first was because they thought it was true, and it was-

Blair Witch 2 a shadow of the original

Film: Book of Shadows: Blair Witch 2
Director: Joe Berlinger
Writer: Joe Berlinger and Dick Beebe
Starring: Kim Director and Jeffrey Donovan
Length: 90 Minutes
Rated: R

There are three things you can count on in life: death, taxes and if a movie grosses more than $100 million at the box office, Hollywood will find a way to make a sequel. Oh wait, there's one more: With the possible exception of the Godfather II, chances are pretty good the sequel will suck.

Out of this capitalistic tradition comes Book of Shadows: Blair Witch 2, the follow-up to last year's low-budget hit The Blair Witch Project. Why is it called Book of Shadows? Good question. Much like Urban Legends 2: Final Cut, which had almost nothing to do with urban legends, there's no such mysterious text to be found anywhere in the movie. A more appropriate title might have been: Drugs, Alcohol and Camping: What Not To Do In The Woods.

The movie starts promisingly enough with a documentary-style montage about the uproar surrounding the original Blair Witch. Various residents of Burkittsville, Md., where BW1 was filmed, are portrayed discussing the effect the movie's success has had on their lives. As one might suspect, the constant throng of tourists and thrill-seekers hoping to get a glimpse of the real Blair Witch is a continuing annoyance for most of them.

Besides the fact that this opening segment bears no real connection to the rest of the plot, the most disturbing thing is that it turns out to be the only compelling part of the entire film. I couldn't help but wonder why the filmmakers hadn't simply made a real documentary about this subject. It certainly would have been more interesting than the movie's actual story, which follows five travelers on the ill-fated "Blair Witch Hunt," a guided tour through the haunted woods where the three filmmakers from BW1 disappeared.

Leading the tour is Jeffrey Donovan (like the original, all the actors and characters share the same name), an opportunistic former mental patient who also sells trinkets on the Internet. His passengers on the tour include Stephen Turner and Tristene Skyler, a couple who are researching a book on the hysteria surrounding the Blair Witch; Erica Leerhsen, a Wiccan with a chip on her shoulder; and Kim Director, a Goth-girl, complete with black clothes and makeup, who "just thought the movie was cool."

The Blair Witch Project was cool, despite the enraged response it got from some audience members who couldn't stomach the shaky, hand-held camera and improvised dialogue. It was, at the very least, something different. Book of Shadows has a more conventional visual style, which might please some viewers. Unfortunately, the increased production value can't save it from its ridiculous plot and laughable screenplay.

Director Joe Berlinger and Dick Beebe have concocted a script with so much absurd dialogue that you actually start to appreciate Heather Donahue's ceaseless shrieking and cussing in the original.

This sequel also suffers from a flimsy, unsatisfying ending — a huge disappointment considering BW1's memorable (and truly scary) closing sequence. The LONDON (AP) — Elton John is taking his top accountants to court to recoup millions of dollars in touring costs he claims they mistakenly charged him.

The 53-year-old singer and pianist is suing Pricewaterhouse Coopers and Andrew Haydon, the former managing director of John Reid Enterprises. Both companies looked after his business interests.

Exactly how much money the rock star claims to have lost has not been revealed, although British newspapers reported Tuesday the amount topped $29 million.

Chelsea hints at Oxford

SCHENECTADY, N.Y. (AP) — Chelsea Clinton may be headed to Oxford University next year.

Clinton has taken the fall semester off from Stanford to spend more time at the White House with dad as his presidential tenure draws to a close and to hit the Senate campaign trail with mom.

President Clinton attended Oxford as a Rhodes Scholar.

Blair Witch 2 washes out

BLAIR WITCH

n't," said UI freshman Dan Kapaldo. He has refrained from seeing Book of Shadows.

As most people know, The Blair Witch Project was a documentary-style film, while the sequel is a standard Hollywood product. The choice of whether a format change was a good idea is undecided.

"It wasn't an actual movie," Illinois resident Jamie Bechman said of The Blair Witch Project's documentary style. He has seen the sequel and prefers it to the first because it was more scary.

However, some would not have minded a second motion-sickness-inducing documentary.

"I guess the format (of Book of Shadows) wasn't as good as the first, but it didn't really matter to me," Illinois resident Greg Halburg said.

The many debates of Book of Shadows will certainly continue among Hollywood check-writers everywhere, long after Blair Witch 3 is in the bargain rental section. But several fans seem to have already made up their minds.

Uncertainties at home will lead to questioning your feelings. Do a little digging. Someone you live with may not be telling you all the facts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Educational pursuits will be informative, but not necessarily helpful with regard to your present situation. Don't divulge secrets to those who will use them against you later on.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Deception around finances and legal affairs is evident. Be careful when you sign contracts or agreements. You will have to get sound advice.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You may not have been completely honest with yourself or your mate about your feelings. Try not to blow situations out of proportion concerning in-laws and relatives.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your boss may not be telling you the whole truth. Get promises in writing. Oral agreements will be soon forgotten.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't fool yourself. Diets and getting in shape take work. Don't look for quick ways to make changes or money.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22):

horoscopes

Thursday, November 2, 2000 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You won't be seeing things too accurately at an emotional level. Don't let your personal situation interfere with your productivity at work.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Problems with female co-workers will lead to uncertainties regarding your position. Don't become involved in gossip if you like your position.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Financial deals will not be as they appear. Don't donate to organizations you know nothing about. Friends may expect you to pay their way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You will only be fooling yourself if you don't face your problems head-on. You have an unreal view of your personal situation, and you must sort it out before things can get better.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Secret enemies may be trying to make you look bad. Don't lash out at those who haven't been fair. The best revenge will come through your own successes.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Don't gamble or get into dubious get-rich-quick schemes. You need to take care of your health.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22):

The Ledge

By Jesse Ammerman

You know it's time to do laundry when ...

• You've taken to wearing Saran Wrap and paper bags to class.

• The sweatshirt you've worn for the past three weeks now responds to "Jim" and keeps hogging the remote control.

• Your pile of clothes looks remarkably similar to the Washington Monument, and visitors don't mind paying $3 to view the structure.

• President Clinton has surveyed your dorm room and assigned federal funding to restore the area.

• The UI is now forcing your sock pile to pay tuition.

• A new rodent species has been discovered at the bottom of your laundry basket.

• Your boxers keep arguing with you about which side of the room is theirs.

• Student protest groups are campaigning against your laundry buildup — but they're staying in Jessup Hall to avoid getting near it.

• Studying your laundry pile is now a required assignment for UI microbiology students.

• The washing machine stubbornly refuses to accept your laundry, always telling you to "shove off."

• Your roommate continually wears a HAZMAT uniform around the apartment.
