Auditor finds no local illegal solicitation

■ The Auditor's Office investigates reports of illegal solicitation at satellite polling spots.

By Erica Driskell
 The Daily Iowan

While the Johnson County Auditor's Office reported hearing accusations of illegal solicitation procedures in connection with such issues as the First Avenue extension and library expansion, officials discovered the accusations were unfounded.

The solicitation rules for early and absentee voting differ from those for Election Day, said Tom Slockett, the Johnson County auditor.

On Nov. 7, polling places are well-established for voters wishing to cast their ballots, he said. No campaign information is allowed inside the polling places; it must remain 300 feet from polls, he said.

In satellite and absentee voting, booths are placed in everyday work environments where people commonly gather, which is why information pertaining to issues and candidates are allowed inside the buildings. But the information must remain 30 feet away from voting booths and not be heard or seen, said Slockett, who added that the First Amendment is protected strictly.

"Poll workers keep an eye out if there is anything that gets too close and let solicitors know," he said. "I ask them to regularly check to make sure no buttons or information are left around polling areas."

Slockett said he heard complaints recently from First Avenue-extension opponents that proponents of the extension were stuffing IMU voting booths with fliers promoting the extension. An investigation by the Auditor's Office found these complaints to be unfounded, he said.

"I think, in a way, the campaigns being conducted are trying to portray themselves as being victimized," Slockett said.

Last-ditch politics - Gore, Bush crisscross state

■ The vice president spoke in Ames on Nov. 3, and the governor will be in Davenport today.

 The Daily Iowan

One day before the 2000 election, Iowa is still up for grabs in the presidential race, experts say. This year's close battle has the GOP and Democratic off in various regions of the state, hoping to win Iowa's seven electoral votes.

Over the weekend, Vice President Al Gore scheduled two visits to the state - one at Iowa State University on Nov. 3 and another brief stop in Waterloo earlier today, at 12:15 a.m. The rally was organized at the Waterloo airport, giving Gore just enough time to hop out of his plane and then jump back in, the Iowa Democratic Party said.

Texas Gov. George W. Bush, along with his wife, Laura, will join Republicans today at the Adler Theater in downtown Davenport at 4:30 p.m. for an "Iowa Victory 2000 Rally." Doors will open at 3 p.m., and tickets are not required. Actress and Republican activist Bo Derek and singer Wayne Newton are scheduled to speak in support of Bush.

Bush also spoke at a rally on Nov. 1 in Des Moines, and Gore addressed a crowd of thousands in Ames on Nov. 3.

In Ames, Sen. Tom Harkin, Gov. Tom Vilsack and Rep. Leonard Boswell, D-Iowa, welcomed Gore, his wife Tipper, and his daughter Kristin to an outdoor rally in Campanile Park.

Hawks Nest ready to 'hoop' it up

Members of the UI Hawks Nest gathered Sunday night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena for a rally to welcome the 2000-01 men's basketball season.

Head coach Steve Alford established the club last year, rounding up 300 members. This year's edition has more than 700. Several members credit the close involvement with the game of basketball and proximity of members' seats to the court as draws for the club.

"To be this close to the action and to make this much noise is fantastic," UI medical student John Paszek said. "And this is a great time to be in the Hawks Nest because you're going to have the best seats for a team that's just going to get better over the next few years."

After receiving free pizza and soda Sunday, members picked up their season tickets allowing them to sit in the Nest, a Carver section located next to the UI Pep Band behind the south basket. Members are expected to lead student cheering and to support the Hawkeyes at games. They pay an extra $20 for their season tickets in order to join the club.

Helping support the Hawkeyes is an important reason why many people join the Hawks Nest, said Jayna Berens, a UI sophomore and club member.

"Cheering for the team makes a world of difference," she said. "It gets them pumped up and lets them know that fans are behind them."

In addition to their seating, members were given specially designed Nike shirts to identify themselves as Hawks Nest members.

"I wanted for the Nest to have something other fans couldn't get," Alford told members Sunday. "It's a way to thank you for all your support and for having fun here."

The coach went on to credit the Nest with helping to make basketball games a good family environment.

"One of my goals when I came here was to make sure families could enjoy themselves here," Alford said. "We've been having fun, and we do it with class. We don't do anything tasteless."

The Hawkeye basketball season will officially begin on Nov. 19 against Wisconsin-Milwaukee, following two exhibition games.

"Obviously, there's a lot of excitement about this season," Alford said. "We're grateful for all the support you've given us, and we're going to continue to support you."

Pesticide-Parkinson's link shown in study

■ Research shows that rats given a common pesticide exhibit Parkinson's symptoms.

By Joseph B. Verrengia
 Associated Press

New research using rats suggests that long-term exposure to a widely used pesticide kills brain cells and triggers debilitating physical symptoms associated with Parkinson's disease.

Scientists say the experiment's results strongly indicate what scientists have suspected for several years - that the most common form of Parkinson's disease might result from toxins in the environment.

The new study, published in the December issue of Nature Neuroscience, does not prove that the pesticide used in the test, rotenone, causes Parkinson's in humans.

But scientists who reviewed the experiment said the results are powerful and should reinvigorate the search for environmental toxins that may contribute to Parkinson's, the most common neurological disorder after Alzheimer's.

"This is more evidence that a class of compounds may increase the risk of developing Parkinson's," said J. William Langston, the director of the Parkinson's Institute in Sunnyvale, Ca., who was not involved in the study. "It is not direct evidence that rotenone causes Parkinson's. The whole puzzle hasn't come together."

More than 1 million Americans suffer from Parkinson's.

Muscle control ebbs as brain cells in a region called the substantia nigra produce less dopamine, a hormone vital to normal nerve function. The illness is marked by small tremors, such as facial tics and shaking hands. Advanced symptoms include a shuffling gait, speech difficulties and muscle weakness.

There is no cure; current drug and surgical therapies tends to lose effectiveness over time. New therapies involving transplants of stem cells, the body's master cells from which all tissues grow, have been slowed by federal funding restrictions on experiments using embryonic tissues.

In approximately 10 percent of patients, Parkinson's strikes before age 50. These rare cases probably are caused by inherited genetic abnormalities.

However, most patients show their first Parkinson's symptoms after age 60. Researchers believe older patients may have suffered brain damage from chronic exposure to unspecified toxins.

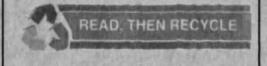

In the experiment conducted at Emory University in Atlanta, neurologists implanted tiny pumps in the rats to continuously administer low doses of rotenone through the jugular vein for as long as five weeks.

Rotenone is an organic product made from extracts of tropical plants. It is wide-

Profs lean toward Gore in predictions

■ The 2000 elections are a "political junkie's dream" come true, one professor says.

By Jesse Elliott
The Daily Iowan

With Election Day only one day away, several professors at the UI say anything is possible in the national races. UI political scholars agreed that the congressional, senatorial and presidential elections should keep Iowa City residents in suspense until the final electoral votes come in late Tuesday night. "Regardless of what national polls and pundits say, nobody has any idea what's going to happen," said Fred Antczak, the associate dean of the liberal arts college. "The polls to watch are the individual state polls." The national polls Antczak referred to have recently placed George W. Bush slightly ahead of Al Gore but within the polls' margins of error.

Antczak said that despite what national polls currently indicate, Gore will win the presidential race in the end. But it will depend on the states' electoral votes.

"On Election Day, it all comes down to the questions of local conditions," he said. "Will the weather be bad in California? Will the Chicago machine be able to get out the city Democratic vote and counteract the southern Illinois rural votes? Will (Missouri Gov. Mel) Carnahan's death tip the Missouri race one way or the other?"

Political science Professor Peverill Squire said the 50 separate contests are so close he won't even venture a guess at who will be the next president. He has done the electoral math over and over in his head and on paper and still a solid prediction eludes him.

"It's a complete tossup," he said.

Political science Professor Michael Lewis-Beck, however, the statistics are clear.

"I am sticking to my May prediction," Lewis-Beck said. "Gore with 55.4 percent of the two-party vote."

He remains confident that the formula he used in 1996 to predict Bill Clinton's victory to within 0.1 percent will prove to be correct again.

In addition to a Gore win, Lewis-Beck said, 2000 will be a watershed year in American politics, with the Democrats also taking control of the House and Senate. Both branches of Congress are controlled by the Republicans, 222-209 (with two seats held by Democratic-voting independents and two seats currently vacant) and 54-46 in the Senate.

"The Dems will gain 23 (seats) in the House and six in the Senate," Lewis-Beck said. "They will lock up the Congress and the presidency."

Antczak said he doesn't foresee a scenario in which the Democrats could take all three positions — the presidency as well as a majority in the House and Senate — and "even if they do, they're too ideologically divided to really cause radical changes in American policy in the next few years."

Squire said the unpredictability of the political realm has caused some unexpected surprises in the closing weeks of the election season.

"The Democrats have a better chance now than I would have thought possible months ago," he said. "But this will not be a watershed regardless of whether either major party takes all three, simply because the margins of majority will be so razor-thin to suggest any dominant national trends to

In the more likely case of a mixed government, with only one or two branches going to one party, Antczak said, "We will have a true test of who can bring people together" in the "bipartisan spirit" that every candidate has talked about extensively.

But on Jan. 1, 2001, only one candidate will get the chance to follow through on his campaign talk.

"After the $800 million spent, after all the hype and all the fancy media attention, this one is still tight enough that it will be a good old-fashioned election — with the candidates getting themselves out there to walk the districts of their constituency," Antczak said. "The only question will be: Who can turn out more people on that one most important day? It's a political junkie's dream."

Harkin stumps through Iowa City for Gore

■ The U.S. senator is on a two-day, 36-city Iowa tour to get out the vote for the vice president.

By Jesse Elliott
The Daily Iowan

The common refrain from Iowa Democratic Party head Rob Tully — "No time for sleep boys, sleep just makes you groggy" — turned into a common theme at a Sunday night Democratic rally in Iowa City.

A crowd of 200-plus Johnson County Democrats packed the Iowa City Democratic headquarters on the second floor of the Old Capitol Town Center to cheer on Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, and a host of other state and local Democratic office-holders.

Harkin's tour, which started on the morning of Nov. 4 in Council Bluffs and continued to a midnight Sunday rally with Al Gore in Waterloo, was a signal to his constituents that Iowa will be a deciding factor in Tuesday's presidential election, he told the crowd.

"There is a reason we've had all these visits in the last week," he said, referring to recent Iowa campaign appearances by Republicans George and Barbara Bush, Bob Dole and George W. Bush himself, who was in Des Moines last week and will be in Davenport today. "Iowa's seven electoral votes have the potential to decide who will be the next president. It's that close."

UI junior Ben Rogers, who interned under Harkin in Washington, D.C., over the summer and in Cedar Rapids last during the last Winter Break, said Harkin's endorsement of Gore will be an important one, especially for college students.

"I already voted for the Gore-Lieberman ticket," Rogers said. "A lot of that decision had to do with Gore's higher education credit proposals."

Harkin told The Daily Iowan he also agrees with Gore on what the government's role in public education should be.

"Students will benefit under a Gore administration in three ways," he said. "Tuition credits and deductions up to $10,000, reduced student loan payback for teachers who teach after college in the public systems and an elimination of the national debt."

Harkin explained that Gore's plan to pay off the debt will cause reduced interest rates in the future, which will make it easier for students not just to take out college loans but also to buy houses and cars.

The Iowa senator attacked the Republican Party and Bush for what he called "the same old trickle-down economic plan of the 1920s and the 1980s."

"You saw what the plan got us then — a depression in the '20s and a recession in the '80s," Harkin said. "Well, we don't want to go back to failed policies of the past. We've learned our lessons."

UI sophomore Christian Kurasek, the chairman of UI Students for Bush, said Harkin's criticism of the Bush plan was nothing more than "a simple scare tactic."

"It proves that (the Democrats) are finally realizing they can't win on the issues," he said. "They're resulting now to scaring votes out of people."

During the Iowa City rally, Harkin joked about his "preaching to the choir." But, the senator said, the purpose of the rally was not to convert but to make sure that constituents who have not already been to the polls do so Tuesday.

"We may be ahead in some of the Iowa polls, but we haven't won anything yet," said Rep. Dick Myers, D-Coralville. "We haven't got Gore elected; we haven't got our local representatives elected; we haven't got the vote out. Now is the time to get it done."

Jennifer Frost, Harkin's press secretary in Washington, D.C. and a graduate of the UI, said: "The bottom line of this trip is to get the young people out to vote."

Harkin may not get much sleep in the next 24 hours, he said, but as Iowa Secretary of State Chet Culver told the crowd, "I think I speak for all of us when I say if Al Gore gets elected, we will all sleep a whole lot better for the next four years."

Regional festival puts art on

Thirteen Midwest artists show that art can be wearable at Art Wear 2000.

By Pam Dewey
The Daily Iowan

Eye-catching ethnic prints, brightly colored fuzzy hats and smooth, "sensual" silver jewelry reminiscent of Egyptian art were just a few of the wearable art pieces on display at Iowa City's Art Wear 2000.

The semi-annual show, which took place at the Old Capitol Town Center from Nov. 3 through Sunday, displayed and sold wearable art from 13 artists from around the Midwest.

The exhibition, the brainchild of the Iowa Arts Festival Public Relations committee, was created to raise awareness and funds for the Iowa Art Festival, said committee President Robyn Hepker.

Art Wear 2000 only features the finest artists, she said, stressing that all participants must go through a strict selection process. First, the committee puts out a call for artists, and then they must submit slides of their work. The final selection of the featured artists is made through a "juried" process.

Some of the wearable art that was featured included quilted coats with ethnic fabrics, woven shawls, scarves, hats vests, beaded jewelry, as well as a variety of sculptural works in silver.

Artist Loren Keller, who calls her work "body ornamentation," said she liked Art Wear 2000's emphasis on wearable art.

"I create jewelry that feels good when you wear it," she said.

Fellow participant Hope Solomons agreed with Keller that jewelry should feel comfortable. She stressed that people should not only feel comfortable wearing jewelry but also buying it.

"Jewelry is a form of ornament," she said.

Hepker also said the emphasis on wearable art was important because wearable art is usually hand-made and often one-of-a-kind.

Overall, she said, she thought the exhibition was a success. She saw a lot of people come check out the artist's wares and added that many of the artists already have a following, which helped contribute to the success of the show.

Keller, who also designed the commemorative pins for the event, felt the show had a good response, and she met many great people. "(The show) gives people in the community a good idea of what we do — as far as wearable art goes."

Because the show has enjoyed past and current success, the Iowa Arts Festival Public Relations Committee plans to hold the show again next year.

As Solomons said, "It's just been fun to do."

Englert group proposes payment plan

The group says spreading the payments out would allow it to start renovations.

By Megan L. Eckhardt
The Daily Iowan

While wary of investing additional funds in the 88-year-old Englert Theatre, Mayor Ernie Lehman said he is confident the Iowa City City Council and Englert Civic Theatre Inc. will come to an agreement tonight at the council's work session.

The Englert Civic Theatre Inc. — formerly known as the Englert Coalition — is a nonprofit organization that plans to renovate the theater for live performances. Six months ago, the city agreed to sell the property to the coalition for $500,000 if funding could be raised by Nov. 8 but specified no method of payment. The Englert group has raised more than $550,000 from donations and pledges.

According to a report by City Manager Stephen Atkins, the group now requests that the city sell the theater for $500,000 on a four-year contract without interest — $200,000 less than what the city paid for the property when it bought the theater from Pohl Family Properties in February.

The Englert group president, Justine Zimmer, said the proposal would allow the group to proceed with renovations, such as hiring an architect and reviewing building codes, without using all its cash at one time.

"It allows us to still keep our commitment to buy the building and keep some cash to start renovations," she said. "There's no point in buying a building, using all our cash, and then sitting on it."

The group plans on having the theater ready for public use within a year of the purchase, Zimmer said.

The original agreement between the city and the Pohl family stated that the city had to enter a purchase agreement with a nonprofit organization, namely the Englert Coalition, within nine months of the initial purchase or the family would buy the theater back for the original price. Because of this agreement, the city has until Nov. 8 to determine a plan of payment for the property.

Officials estimate that the city would lose nearly $65,000 in interest revenue under the Englert group's proposal, adding to the $58,000 the city has already lost in property taxes, building maintenance, utility costs and insurance paid during the nine-month period.

The council has yet to form a consensus on the actions it wants to take, but Lehman said he believed the council would be as cooperative as possible.

"I'm very interested in working something out. It would be good for the community and good for the downtown," he said. "But I don't think it's the intention of the council to invest more funds than we have already."

The city originally purchased the property because many residents were worried that a privately owned Englert Theatre would be made into a bar or restaurant, although that was never implied, Lehman said. Others were concerned about retaining the historic aspects of the building, which was built in 1912.

CITY BRIEF

Local man charged for assaulting wife with knife

An Iowa City man was arrested for child endangerment and assault with a dangerous weapon after allegedly pulling a knife on his wife and 2-year-old son.

The woman told Iowa City police that she was holding their son at 6 p.m. on Oct. 29 when Paul Hunstad, 28, approached and threatened her with a 4 1/2-inch knife. According to court documents, Hunstad, 3556 Shamrock Place, struck his wife on her right forearm, which she was using to protect her head.

The woman then turned away from the defendant and fled to a back bedroom to call 911. When police arrived, she was "shaken and crying" and showed the officers a scar where, she said, Hunstad had previously cut her, the records said.

Hunstad denied the allegations. He had a panic attack during an interview with police and was transported to Mercy Hospital, 500 E.

Market St., police said. Hunstad left the hospital against medical advice.

He was released from the Johnson County Jail on Nov. 3 on $4,000 bail and was issued a mandatory no-contact order with his wife, said police Sgt. Brian Krei.

Hunstad's preliminary hearing is scheduled for Nov. 13 at 2 p.m.

Day of the Dead celebrates life

Iowa City residents and UI students remember their ancestors through food, music and dance.

By Tracy Nemitz
The Daily Iowan

UI senior Emily McClain slowly made her way through a crowd of approximately 200 people who filled Old Brick, 26 E. Market St., on Nov. 4. Dressed almost completely in black and carrying a bouquet of flowers, she walked over to a small altar located on the left side of the room and placed the flowers among the offerings of candy, bread and candles others had left before her.

As she knelt before the altar in prayer, a mariachi band took the stage at the front of the church. The crowd cheered, and McClain stood and made her way to the back of the room. As the band began to play, she clapped enthusiastically along to the music and dance.

The purpose of the gathering was to celebrate El Dia de Los Muertos, the Day of the Dead. McClain came to honor the memory of her great aunt, who died three years ago.

"She is a good spirit in my life," McClain said.

The Day of the Dead, which occurs Nov. 1-2, is a Mexican holiday, said UI graduate student Monica Ackerland, who works in the Spanish department.

Some people believe that during this time, the souls of the deceased return to earth and are reunited with their loved ones, she said.

In Mexico, families traditionally cook the favorite foods of the deceased and place them on an ofrenda, or altar, located in their homes. It is believed the spirit will return to eat the offerings, Iowa City resident Eras-torres said.

Prayer and trips to clean the graves of the deceased are also an important part of the day, Torres said.

Bob Vanderbeek, a UI professor of social work, compared the Day of the Dead with All Saint's Day.

"It is a time for people to remember those who have died — to celebrate that their spirits are with them," he said.

The School of Social Work, one of the event's sponsors, also looked at the event as a way to unite people of different backgrounds, Vanderbeek said.

"We wanted to use art and music to bring different cultures together," he said.

For this occasion, white

Christmas lights were strung from the windows. Pictures of loved ones brought by those in attendance were scattered on altars, as well as placed in front of the performance stage.

Red, purple and yellow paper depictions of skeletons dancing and playing musical instruments hung from the walls. Small plastic skulls and skeletons were placed on the altars, and several of those in attendance had their face painted to represent skeletons.

The inclusion of skeletons are meant to represent death in a playful way, Ackerland said.

"They are a way of not taking death so seriously," she said.

In addition to the mariachi band, a celebratory atmosphere was created through the acoustic music of several other musicians, raffles, food and an appearance by the dance troupe Los Matachines.

"In Mexico, this is a sad day," Torres said. "But here it is a party; it is fun."

Iowa City man charged with prostitution, assault

An Iowa City man was arrested on Nov. 3 after allegedly assaulting a female employee of Touch of Mink, 602 S. Dubuque St., on Sept. 7 when she refused his alleged offer of payment to have sexual intercourse with him.

Taon Pham, 28, 106 Elizabeth St., was charged with one account of prostitution and one account of assault causing injury, according to court reports.

Pham allegedly entered the business and purchased its service with his credit card. He then allegedly offered to pay an employee $30 if she would have sexual intercourse with him, according to court records.

After being told to leave, Pham requested that he have his money returned to him. When the employee refused, he allegedly grabbed her arms, pointed in her face, and began yelling at her. Pham then allegedly kicked the woman in the stomach.

The woman suffered a cut to the hand and pain in the arms and stomach, according to police reports.

A preliminary hearing is scheduled to take place on Nov. 13 at 2 p.m. Pham was released from the Johnson County Jail Sunday after posting a $10,000 bond.

Area man charged in death of friend

■ The suspect is being held on $1 million bond.

By Jen Provenzano
The Daily Iowan

A Washington, Iowa, man was arrested late on Nov. 3 after an investigation into the slaying of another Washington man.

Trent Ryan Lorence, 20, 738 E. Jefferson St. in Washington, was charged with first-degree murder and burglary.

According to the Washington County Sheriff's Office, David M. Clark, 24, was found by his mother in his residence at 732 E. Jefferson St. on Nov. 3. He had died that evening around 5 p.m. of gunshot wounds.

Law-enforcement officers found a live .25 round and a spent .25 caliber shell casing at the site, according to police reports. On Nov. 3, police saw Lorence driving Clark's 1996 maroon Ford Explorer in the alley behind the crime scene, the reports said.

The authorities obtained a search warrant for the Explorer and for a bag belonging to Clark that was found in Lorence's vehicle, police reports said. While searching the bag, police allegedly found items belonging to Lorence — a homemade silencer, a .25 caliber handgun and additional .25 caliber ammunition, according to the reports.

Washington County Sheriff Yale Jarvis said Clark and Lorence were reportedly friends. Law-enforcement officials have no apparent motive for the shooting at this time.

Lorence is being held on a $1 million bond in the Muscatine County Jail.

Washington native Jared Kerr, now an Iowa City resident and Kirkwood Community College sophomore, was shocked to hear about the shooting in his hometown, which occurred just one block away from his parents' current residence. However, while his mother has expressed concern over the possibility of similar incidents taking place in the future, he is not worried because it is generally a safe area.

"I don't think it's a reflection of the neighborhood," he said. "It was just a conflict between two people."

Dems eye long shot: control of Senate

■ The parties' efforts to turn out the vote are the key as the GOP defends its Senate majority.

By Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — On the eve of an election with little more than a dozen of the 34 Senate races still competitive, Democrats face a Herculean task to have any hope of bringing six years of Republican control to an end.

GOP senators hold a 54-46 margin in the outgoing Congress and go into the election with 35 holdovers returning to the 31 Democrats with two years or four years left in their terms.

But Republicans also have a virtual lock on 12 of the 19 seats they are defending; Democrats are safe in only 10 of their 15 seats at stake.

"Democrats will have to thread the needle electorally to regain the Senate," said Marshall Wittmann, a senior fellow for the Hudson Institute, a conservative public-policy group.

From Florida to Washington state, 11 races appear extremely competitive, an unusually high number that means Democrats can take over, but only if things break their way.

Speaking Sunday at a union breakfast in Woodbridge, New Jersey Democratic Senate candidate Jon Corzine said, "We have probably the closest presidential election we've had in the last 40 years. If people get out and vote, we can make a difference."

With so many tight races and a lack of overriding national issues in the Senate campaigns, each party's phone calls, mailings and door-to-door canvassing will be crucial.

As she has on the eve of the past seven elections, Mary Crouse plans to spend this evening telephoning fellow Minnesotans and asking them to vote Republican.

"It's a formula we've used," said Crouse, 67, a retired stationery store sales manager from the St. Paul, Minn., suburb of Forest Lake. "And it's worked."

Multiply Crouse by tens of thousands of volunteers, add many millions of dollars, and sprinkle in drives by dozens of special-interest groups, and that is what both parties are doing nationally.

Also trying to mobilize voters are outside groups such as the Christian Coalition, the National Rifle Association, the AFL-CIO and the NAACP.

"Turnout is everything for Democrats," said Jim Jordan, a spokesman for the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee. Without "first-class turnout operations, we don't win."

Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., predicts that his party will retain control. "Obviously, both sides understand how important turnout is," he said. "We've paid a lot of attention to that."

Of the 11 races that seem closest, seven are for seats now held by Republicans, giving Democrats more targets of opportunity.

Democrats will have to gain five seats to take control. A victory by Democratic presidential nominee Al Gore means that Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., would leave the Senate to become vice president and be replaced by a Republican appointed by the state's GOP governor, John Rowland.

The highest profile Senate race is in New York, where Hillary Rodham Clinton is pitted against GOP Rep. Rick Lazio. Capitalizing on the strong feelings Rodham Clinton engenders with the public, Lazio managed to out-raise her $33 million to $27 million through mid-October and make the race the second-most expensive in Senate history and a close contest.

The most expensive Senate race ever is across the Hudson River in New Jersey, where Democrat Jon Corzine, the former chief executive officer of Goldman Sachs investment bank, is expected to spend more than $60 million of his own money. Moderate GOP Rep. Bob Franks has about one-tenth that amount at his disposal, but he has made the race close by making Corzine's spending an issue.

Legislature races becoming key

■ Because most Legislatures control redistricting, the makeup of Congress is at stake.

By Robert Tanner
Associated Press

From rural eastern Texas to working-class neighborhoods in Green Bay, Wis., a few hundred close legislative races have prompted a last furious push of political street fighting as next year's redistricting makes statehouses key to control of Congress.

In nearly half the states, each party sees a realistic chance to win or lose control of the Legislature and so has spent millions of dollars on what usually are low-budget local races. But as Election Day nears, it all comes down to door-to-door campaigns.

"It's old-time politics, shaking hands, eyeball to eyeball," said Mike Gaston, a GOP chairman in Clark County, Wash., where Republicans hope to overcome a 49-49 split in the House and win three seats to take the Senate.

The struggle for control goes on each election, with enormous ramifications for who sets the state agenda for policy. But this year adds national weight, because in all but five states, the Legislature controls redistricting. Whichever party is in control will have greater power to draw new lines for congressional seats, and the results could define control of Congress for the next decade.

"It's kind of the destiny of the party for the next 10 years," said Tom Hofeller, the redistricting director for the Republican National Committee. "It's very critical."

Right now, Democrats control both chambers in 19 statehouses, Republicans hold 17, and 13 are split. Nebraska's unicameral legislature is nonpartisan.

In 33 legislative chambers in 23 states, control hangs on a switch of six or less seats. While the nation focuses on the presidential race, a significant amount of resources has gone to these legislative races.

"We feel pretty good we'll get our first Republican majority in the statehouse in 130 years," said Texas GOP spokesman Robert Black. Republicans hope to take the House, now held by Democrats, 78-72, and keep the Senate, where they are ahead by one seat, 16-15.

Similarly tight races pop up across the country, from South Carolina to Wisconsin to Nevada. The parties have concentrated their firepower most heavily on states where population changes mean a gain or loss of congressional seats: Pennsylvania, Arizona, Texas.

Both parties set up operations to funnel money and resources to state operations to assist the legislative races. But, at the end, it comes down to getting out the vote in a year when the airwaves and street corners are packed with campaign ads.

NATION BRIEF

Vote for your hopes, Nader says

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ralph Nader defended his presidential campaign Sunday and said he won't stop urging people to "vote your conscience" and support him — even if it hurts Al Gore.

Defiant and unapologetic, the Green Party candidate rejected criticism from Democrats who fear his campaign will help throw the election to Republican George W. Bush by siphoning votes that otherwise would go to Vice President Gore.

"A vote for your hopes, a vote for your dreams, a vote for a higher expectation level of what our country can become and what it means to the world — those are the votes that you need to register, not the lesser of two evils where at the end of the day, you're still left with evil," Nader said during his final campaign rally at the MCI center.

Approximately 8,000 people paid

$10 apiece to hear him speak at the "Super Rally." Similar star-studded events also attracted crowds by the thousands in Boston, Chicago, Minneapolis, New York and other large cities.

Nader averages roughly 4 percent in national polls, but support for him is much higher in states where the race between Bush and Gore is very close, including California, Minnesota, Michigan, Oregon, Washington state and Wisconsin.

His role as a potential spoiler to Gore has put Nader under increasing pressure from Democrats who want him to quit. Even former allies have campaigned for him to get out of the race, if only in states where the race is tight.

Nader did not respond to appeals for him to drop out, instead focusing on favored topics, including corporate influence in government, universal health care and helping the working poor.

■ The vice president garners 44 percent of the vote, with the Texas governor at 42 percent.

Associated Press

DES MOINES — As Vice President Al Gore sweeps through Midwest battleground states hours before voters begin casting ballots, he remains neck and neck with Texas Gov. George W. Bush, a new poll shows.

The copyright Iowa Poll, published in the Des Moines Sunday Register, shows that 44 percent of likely Iowa voters support or lean toward the vice president, and 42 percent back the Texas governor or lean in his direction. With a margin of error of plus or minus 3.5 percentage points, neither candidate has a clear lead.

Conducted by Selzer & Co. of Des Moines, the random telephone survey questioned 805 voters who said they will vote Tuesday. It was conducted over five days ending on Nov. 3.

With the results so close, the 10 percent of likely voters who say they remain undecided could determine who wins Iowa's seven electoral votes in the presidential election.

Support for third-party candidates could also be a factor in such a close race. Green Party candidate Ralph Nader gets 3 percent and Reform Party candidate Pat Buchanan draws 1 percent.

The poll reveals a fluid situation for both candidates. Approximately 9 percent of likely voters supporting either Bush or Gore say they could still be persuaded to change their vote.

Bush's drunken-driving arrest 24 years ago does not appear to have hurt him in the poll. He drew more support than Gore on average during the last three nights of polling, including Nov. 3, when campaign coverage was dominated by the story.

Both candidates campaigned in the state while the poll was taken — Bush on Nov. 1, Gore on Nov. 3.

Bush has erased most of the eight-point lead that Gore had among likely voters in the last Iowa Poll. It was taken in August, when Gore's post-convention riverboat tour took him to several Iowa cities along the Mississippi River.

Men have helped Bush gain ground. In the new poll, Bush captures 49 percent of the support of likely male voters, and Gore gets 40 percent — a gain of eight points since late August for Bush, a loss of two points for Gore.

Gore continues to enjoy a big lead among women, 48 percent to 35 percent.

The vice president also does especially well among likely Catholic voters, drawing support from 51 percent compared with 34 percent for Bush.

On the other hand, Bush leads 46 percent to 42 percent among Protestants, who are twice as numerous as Catholics in Iowa.

Each man has secured the allegiance of 87 percent of likely voters from his respective party, making the battle for independent voters critical.

Group to seek slavery reparations

■ The group will show how slavery stigmatized and exploited blacks, one leader says.

By Paul Shepard
Associated Press

A powerful group of civil-rights and class-action lawyers who have won billions of dollars in court is preparing a lawsuit seeking reparations for American blacks descended from slaves.

The project, called the Reparations Assessment Group, was confirmed by Harvard law Professor Charles J. Ogletree; it appears to be the most serious effort yet to get American blacks compensated for more than 240 years of legalized slavery. Lawsuits and legislation dating back to the mid-1800s have gone nowhere.

"We will be seeking more than just monetary compensation," Ogletree said. "We want a change in America. We want full recognition and a remedy of how slavery stigmatized, raped, murdered, and exploited millions of Africans through no fault of their own."

Ogletree said the group, which includes famed attorney Johnnie Cochran, first met in July; it will hold its fourth meeting in Washington D.C. later this month.

"This country has never dealt with slavery. It is America's nightmare. A political solution would be the most sensible, but I don't have a lot of faith that's going to happen. So we need to look aggressively at the legal alternative," Ogletree said.

For now, there are more questions than answers in the planned litigation. The group still must determine when the suit will be filed, exactly who will be named as defendants and what damages will be sought.

While declining to discuss specifics, Ogletree said the federal government, state governments and private entities such as corporations and institutions that benefited from slave labor could be targets of the legal action.

"Both public and private parties will be the subject of our efforts," he said.

Ogletree said the Reparations Assessment Group includes attorneys Cochran and Alexander J. Pires Jr., who won a $1 billion settlement for black farmers who claimed discrimination by the U.S. Department of Agriculture; Richard Scruggs, who won the $368.5 billion settlement for states against tobacco companies; Dennis C. Sweet III, who won a $400 million settlement in the "phen-fen" diet drug case; and Willie E. Gary, who won a $500 million judgment against the Loewen Funeral Inc., the world's largest funeral-home operators.

Also in the group is Randall Robinson, the president of the TransAfrica Forum, a think tank specializing in African, Caribbean and African-American issues. Robinson recently wrote the book The Debt: What America Owes to Blacks, which argues for reparations.

"This will be the most important case in the history of our country," Pires said on Nov. 3. "We all agree the suit has to tell the story of what slavery has done to blacks in America ..."

"We are still suffering from slavery's impacts today," he said.

Ogletree said the assessment group will call on experts in education, politics, family development, health and economics to help trace how slavery's outgrowths such as segregated schooling and neighborhoods have affected society today.

Enslavement of Africans in America began in the 1600s. A slave sale was recorded in 1619 in Jamestown, Va. The "peculiar institution" helped to fuel the prosperity of the young nation while also dividing it. Slavery was not officially abolished in the United States until the 13th amendment was ratified, in 1865.

Reparation supporters point to recent cases where groups have been compensated in cash for historic indignities and harm.

A letter of formal apology and $20,000 were given by the U.S. government to each Japanese-American held in internment camps during World War II.

Austria last week established a $380 million fund to compensate tens of thousands of Nazi-era slave laborers who were born in six Eastern European countries.

Reparation opponents argue that victims in the Nazi and Japanese-American cases were directly harmed, while many generations separate enslaved blacks and their modern-day descendants.

In addition, those opposed to reparations say it isn't fair for taxpayers and corporations who never owned slaves to be burdened with possible multi-billion dollar settlements.

We are still suffering from slavery's impacts today.

Citizens for the Future of Iowa City — which favors the extension — said he decided long ago that his group would not distribute pamphlets near any type of polling places.

"That meets the letter of the law but certainly does not meet the spirit of the law," he said about soliciting information to the public. "I think it's legal but not appropriate."

The goal for proponents of the extension has been allowing the voters to decide their own stances on the extension by providing information for the voters, he said.

"Any campaign that does not deal with facts of any issue is unfortunate," said Elliott, who added that if fliers were stuffed in the voting booths promoting the extension, it was no one in affiliation in the Citizens for the Future of Iowa City.

Citizens For Common Sense Growth, which opposes the extension, lists complying to laws as a No. 1 priority, said Randy Brown, the group's co-chairman. It is the responsibility of the voter-poll attendees and auditor to make sure all laws are being followed, he said.

"Thirty feet is virtually nothing. You could be pretty close to the booths," Brown said.

The Iowa City Public Library, 123 S. Linn St., which also offers absentee voting, provided information in its lobby in support of library expansion but took down the information before voting began, said library Director Susan Craig.

"We've been pretty good about even letting candidates have meetings here during days when we have absentee voting," she said. "I do think the rules seem reasonable, and everyone should follow them."

pick-up truck surrounded by hay bales, Gore spoke for 20 minutes of his plans for agriculture, education, health care and middle-class tax cuts.

In reference to ISU and his audience of high-school and college students, as well as parents and other adults, Gore proposed a middle-class tax relief that would make college tuition tax deductible at the rate of $10,000 a year.

Gore told the crowd of 3,000 that Bush proposed partial privatization of Social Security, wants to take a $1 trillion out of the trust fund, and has promised it to two different groups of people.

"Now, I know that one plus one equals two, but 1 trillion promised to two different groups of people doesn't add up," he said.

The vice president mocked Bush's slip on Nov. 2, when the Texas governor said Social Security was not a federal program.

"Do you want to entrust the Oval Office to somebody who doesn't even know that Social Security is a federal program?" Gore asked his supporters.

The vice president told Iowans he would keep Social Security in a "lock box" and veto anything that takes money out of the trust fund other than for Social Security, he said.

In response to the Ralph Nader and Bush supporters, as well as pro-life protesters standing outside the fenced-off rally, Kristin Gore, 23, said, "The stakes are too high for apathy this year; they're too high for a protest vote."

"As a young woman, I want someone in the highest office who will vigorously protect our right to choose."

Al Gore encouraged Iowans to make the right choice Tuesday, and he admitted he felt secure that he had Iowa's vote.

"This country is faced with making the right and responsible choice," he said. "We can either go forward toward more prosperity that includes everyone, or we can take a right wing U-turn and go back to the old ways of the old days."

He did not, however, refer to Bush's arrest for drunk drinking in 1976, which has recently come to light.

UI Students for Bush said the Democrats have been making a lot of personal attacks on Bush as the elections get nearer.

"I think it's just a desperate, last-chance attempt to smear the governor," said UI sophomore Christian Kurasek, the chairman of the Bush group.

UI senior Jennifer Jaehrling, the executive director of Students for Bush, said in reference to Bush's drunk-driving arrest: "At this point, I don't think it will affect voters. He didn't deny it, and he admits to making a mistake."

Study shows pesticide-Parkinson's link

ly used as an agricultural pesticide and to kill unwanted fish in reservoirs.

People most frequently would be exposed to rotenone by ingesting residue in food or by handling the compound.

Scientists acknowledged the pump method used in the experiment did not duplicate rotenone exposure in the real world but said it was a more direct and reliable method for research purposes.

"Rats can be picky about what they eat, and they might not like eating rotenone," said J. Timothy Greenamyre, the study's senior author. "Whether the pesticide would have the same effect in people via normal routes of exposure is not clear." Greenamyre said half of the rats gradually showed Parkinson's symptoms.

Examination revealed that large numbers of dopamine-producing cells in the rats' brains had died or were damaged. In addition, the cells showed fibrous protein deposits that closely resemble Lewy bodies, deposits found in brain cells of Parkinson's patients.

"Together, it's what you see in Parkinson's," Greenamyre said.

How rotenone might have triggered these changes in rat is unclear. University of Pennsylvania researchers Benoit I. Giasson and Virginia M.-Y. Lee, who reviewed the Emory experiment, suggest the pesticide might target the mitochondria, a genetic bundle that generates most of a cell's energy.

Such damage unleashes rogue molecules known as free radicals that wreak havoc in cells. Free radicals have been implicated in many degenerative diseases.

"Neurons are particularly sensitive," Giasson and Lee noted.

Greenamyre said future rotenone experiments with rats would test new drugs aimed at protecting dopamine-producing cells.

In the meantime, he suggested that farmers and public health agencies reconsider pesticide usage.

"Pesticides are essential for growing crops, but we may need to think about minimizing their environmental impact," he said.

Yugoslavia looks to reach out to West

■ The country's new foreign minister says normal relations could be restored within two weeks.

By Misha Savic
Associated Press

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia — Yugoslavia could patch up diplomatic relations with the United States and major European powers in a week or two and start cooperating with the U.N. War Crimes tribunal, the country's new foreign minister said Sunday.

"It's only normal that we have close cooperation with the United States, with Russia," Foreign Minister Goran Svilanovic told the Beta news agency, one day after the new government was inaugurated.

Svilanovic, an ally of Yugoslavia's new president, Vojislav Kostunica, said relations could be restored within the next couple of weeks with countries who severed ties last year during NATO's air campaign, including the United States, Germany and Great Britain.

Following the ouster of Slobodan Milosevic, Kostunica has been struggling to end a decade of Yugoslavia's international isolation.

Svilanovic became the foreign minister in a parliamentary vote late on Nov. 4 when the country's first non-communist government in more than half a century was sworn in. Kostunica's Serbia-based, 18-party Democratic Opposition of Serbia alliance and the Montenegro-based Socialist People's Party make up the new Cabinet.

Milosevic and three of his associates were indicted by the U.N. war-crimes tribunal at The Hague for alleged atrocities committed in Kosovo.

While both Kostunica and Prime Minister Zoran Zizic have expressed skepticism about the impartiality of the tribunal and ruled out immediate extradition of the suspects, Svilanovic said the country must take responsibility for war crimes.

"We cannot and must not avoid to face the consequences of the war," he said. "We need to do everything to reveal to our public everything that was done, whether in the name of alleged Serb national interest or against Serbs."

2 killed; tensions high in Gaza strip

■ President Clinton will meet with Arafat and Barak this week to try to mediate the dispute.

By Greg Myre
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Scattered clashes across the Gaza Strip and West Bank Sunday left two Palestinians dead, 17 injured and tensions high despite a truce agreement and plans for upcoming meetings in Washington.

President Clinton, who has been trying to restore calm to the region, will play host to Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat Thursday and Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak three days later, on Nov. 12, the White House announced Sunday.

Both Palestinians killed Sunday were shot in the Gaza Strip. One was Maher Mouhmad Alsaadi, a 16-year-old boy hit in the head during a confrontation near the Al Bureij refugee camp, according to Shifa hospital director Mouawia Hassanian.

At least 10 Palestinians were wounded in Gaza, and seven were hurt in the West Bank in a clash outside Bethlehem, just south of Jerusalem, Palestinian security forces said.

In the West Bank, two Jewish settlers, a man and a woman, were wounded when Palestinian assailants ambushed their car and opened fire, settler spokesmen said. The military command confirmed the shooting incident.

In a plea for peace, tens of thousands of Israelis filled a Tel Aviv square on the night of Nov. 4 to pay tribute to former Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, who was assassinated at the site five years ago by an ultranationalist Israeli opposed to trading land for peace with the Palestinians.

The current violence has hardened attitudes on both sides and put seven years of peace negotiations on hold. Many dovish Israelis, including some of those at the rally, said their faith in the peace process has been shaken. Many Palestinians, meanwhile, said they have little to show for the lengthy negotiations.

Barak told his Cabinet Sunday that the large turnout was "an impressive and emotional demonstration" of the Israeli commitment to peace.

"It's unfortunate that on the other side such a demonstration of the peace process could not occur," he said in a reference to the Palestinians.

In a speech at the Nov. 4 rally, Barak warned Arafat that Israel "will not surrender to violence, and we will defend our civilians and Israeli soldiers everywhere."

Arafat and his aides did not appear ready to tone down the rhetoric. The Palestinian leader met with families of the dead Sunday, and his top aide, Tayeb Abdel Rahim, told the families: "The uprising will continue until we have an independent Palestinian state."

Compensation in Taiwan crash belittled

■ The victims' relatives want an apology and more than the $400,000 offered by Singapore Airlines.

By William Foreman
Associated Press

TAIPEI, Taiwan — Some of the grieving relatives of people killed in the Singapore Airlines crash said the company's $400,000 compensation offer was not enough, while others demanded an apology from the pilots who tried to take off during a storm on a closed runway filled with construction equipment.

As families mourned the dead, and investigators continued to comb through the wreckage of the Boeing 747-400 at Chiang Kai-shek airport, the number of fatalities in last week's accident rose to 82 with the death of a Taiwanese man who suffered burns on more than 80 percent of his body. The Los Angeles-bound Flight SQ006 was carrying 20 crew and 159 passengers.

Over the weekend, the airline announced that, within two weeks, the families of people killed in the accident would each be offered $400,000, a sum five times the amount the company is required by international law to give in liability cases.

An airline official in Singapore said Sunday that the compensation for the injured would be decided on a case-by-case basis.

"It depends on the degree of injuries, how severe they are," said the official who did not want to be identified. The official said the airline would pay all the families within two weeks.

All claims stemming from international air travel are governed by the Warsaw Convention, which imposes a $75,000 per passenger limit on liability. Families can seek more if the air carrier is engaged in willful misconduct, such as breached security or poor maintenance.

The Singapore Airlines compensation wasn't enough for some relatives. Hsu Chau-peng, whose brother died in the crash, said Singapore Airlines should raise the amount to $500,000, the semi-official Central News Agency reported.

One man, whose brother and pregnant sister-in-law were killed, told reporters that his family wasn't ready to accept the compensation. "If my parents think it's enough, then I won't have an opinion," the man, who was identified only as Mr. Hsu, said in an ETTV cable news interview.

Iraqi passenger flights defy no-fly zones

■ Two planes carrying 156 people cross the no-fly zones.

By Walei Faleh
Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraq sent domestic passenger flights carrying 156 people into skies patrolled by U.S. and British warplanes Sunday, the first challenge of its kind to the no-fly zones that Iraq considers infringements on its sovereignty.

Two planes left Baghdad at 1 p.m. bound for Basra in the southern no-fly zone and Mosul in the northern zone, the official Iraqi News Agency reported. They returned safely to Baghdad approximately four hours later, the agency said.

Iraq, which says the flights mark the resumption of regular passenger service to the cities, used converted Russian-made military cargo planes for the flights — an Antonov with 42 passengers to Mosul and an Ilyushin with 114 passengers to Basra.

The resumption of the flights, which Iraq announced on Oct. 30, came nearly a decade after Iraq's fleet of 15 Boeing airliners was moved to Jordan, Iran and Tunisia to escape bombing during the 1991 Gulf War. They remain abroad.

Passengers aboard the inaugural flights included officials and journalists who returned with the planes to Baghdad. Thousands of people had gathered to welcome the planes on arrival in Basra and Mosul, according to INA.

Transport Minister Ahmed Murtada Ahmed Khalil said flights will take off daily to the two cities.

The United States says Iraqi military planes have violated the zones often with quick in-and-out forays since December 1998, when Iraq began challenging the patrols. The new challenges — though in military aircraft — marked the first civilian flights into the zone.

The U.S.-British patrols bar fixed-wing Iraqi aircraft or helicopters from entering the zones; there was no word on Sunday on whether Iraq had given Britain and the United States advance notice of the domestic flights.

Vote Lensing, Mascher and Myers ...

Support the Reps who support the students

Who will you vote for on Tuesday?

If you answered "Gore," "Bush," "Nader" or any of the other assorted presidential candidates, you're only partly right. Johnson County races, including those for state representative, are also on the ballot.

The People's Republic of Johnson County tends to be pretty liberal, and most of the state representative candidates reflect that. Even Paul Heyn, the lone Republican candidate, opposes a state ban on partial-birth abortions and the reinstatement of the death penalty. It's up to every voter to find an issue that tips the scales in a candidate's favor. For UI students, finding that issue is easy — it's education.

The Board of Regents recently voted to increase our tuition by approximately 10 percent. This increase would have been much smaller if the state Legislature had not cut funding for state universities. To help avoid a similar increase next year, we need to vote for state representatives who will fight to leave funding for state universities intact.

Democratic incumbents Mary Mascher and Dick Myers have proven their worth in this area. Mascher, who represents southern and western Iowa City in District 46, names education as her top priority. District 49's Myers, who represents Coralville, North Liberty and parts of Iowa City, favors increasing state funding for public universities. His opponent, in contrast, told the Iowa City Gazette he supports freezing universities' budgets for 10 years to make them run more efficiently.

We need to vote for state representatives who will fight to leave funding for state universities intact.

Mascher and Myers' statements aren't merely election promises. The two strongly supported the public universities in last year's fight for funding. According to UISG President Andy Stoll, "We were very well received by our Johnson County representatives in Des Moines this past year when the university was faced with the massive budget shortfall. Their commitment to higher education in Iowa as a resource for all Iowans was very apparent, and their pride in the UI was demonstrated in their strong efforts to restore the funding shortfall to the UI."

The District 45 state representative race, which affects northern Iowa City and University Heights, is harder to decide based on experience, because all three candidates are new to politics. William Garrett, who was nominated by petition, favors a moderate tuition increase, and Republican Paul Heyn says education is his top priority, but only Democrat Vicki Lensing seems to make the connection between last year's decreased state funding and this year's tuition increase. "Underfunding and tuition increases of this magnitude cannot continue," Lensing told the Iowa City Gazette. Although all three District 45 candidates appear to support public universities, Lensing's acknowledgment of this link gives her the edge for students.

On Tuesday, you have the opportunity to positively affect your education at the UI. Don't risk wasting that opportunity. Vote for one of Johnson County's Democratic candidates for state representative.

Invest local resources wisely ...

Expand the Public Library

Iowa City deserves a better Public Library, and on Nov. 7, the people of Iowa City have the opportunity to make it a reality.

There will be three referendums on the ballot — a new jail, the extension of First Avenue and the betterment of our library. Of the three, the library proposal is the most logical.

The First Avenue extension can wait. Drivers will continue to travel the same routes they have been using for years, and no one will be the worse for it. Building a new jail is equally ridiculous, given its cost and the other issues surrounding its "necessity" and operations.

But while people complain

$37 a year is a small price to pay for such an unlimited resource.

that the jail is overcrowded, warranting the construction of a completely new one, the library is also overcrowded. And all the library asks for is a bit of remodeling and a little extra space.

Many voters are worried about the cost of adding on to the library. To fund the expansion, property owners in Iowa City would only pay an increase of roughly $37 a year in property taxes. According to some estimates, 70 percent of Iowa City's residents hold library cards. This makes the Public Library one of the most highly used facilities in the city, and $37 a year is a small price to pay for such an unlimited resource.

What the people of Iowa City vote for will reflect highly on our values. Do we believe that inmates deserve better treatment than the patrons of our library? We shouldn't provide comfort to those breaking the law. We should reward those broadening their knowledge with a better environment.

On Nov. 7, vote YES to the expansion of the Public Library. Vote YES to a better community.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Why you shouldn't vote

I don't vote, and for some reason people have a problem with this. Freshman year, I was actually punched by a guy I knew when I told him I didn't vote, but he was a political-science major, so I forgave him. I'm not even registered, so don't bother bugging me about it until Election Day; it's too late.

It seems like all people have this idea that they should vote, like they have a say in what the government actually does or something. I don't understand this idea, personally. If we actually could influence what the government does, I'd like to think we wouldn't have authorized spending $600 billion on a missile-defense system that can't distinguish between an incoming enemy missile and a weather balloon. I'd like to think that we wouldn't have authorized ATF agents to storm a compound in Texas and inadvertently kill 50 or so people. I'd also like to think we wouldn't then put ourselves on trial because we felt guilty about it, but then find ourselves innocent. I hope we would have refrained from sending INS agents armed with semi-automatics to take a 6-year old child away from his family.

These incidents are not limited to this decade, either. Kent State. Internment camps. Segregation. Slavery. Trail of Tears. This is government by the people, all right. Everyone is represented. This is the same government that would have thrown me in jail for up to five years and fined me up to $100,000 if I had not signed a piece of paper authorizing them to come and take me away at any time and make me kill people. And still people wonder why I don't vote. The fact is that the separation of wealth in this country is worse than it was in France before the revolution, and the only thing holding the current government up is the fact that it has convinced everybody that they actually have input into what the government does. If we don't like it, we can change it, right? We have so many choices of political parties, don't we? So many options. Isn't America wonderful? We have the freedom to choose who takes our money from us for the next four years, who throws us in jail when we say things they don't like, and who shoots us when we stand up to them. God Bless America.

Joe Obrycki
UI junior

Why you should vote

For those in need of a reason to vote on Nov. 7, here are two:

1. Because Matthew Shepard cannot.
2. Because Dr. Laura can.

The Tao of Bush

On Tuesday night, the much-anticipated final episode of the TV docu-drama "Election 2000" will air on TV sets across the world.

Things are a bit difficult to predict at this point, but there exists the distinct possibility that George W. Bush will be elected president.

Somehow, this would not surprise me. The United States is a nation that fell, on different occasions, for the "Macarena," the Backstreet Boys and the original George Bush. So to see Bush 2.0 be appointed to the most powerful position in the universe would not be a total shocker.

Before anybody goes sprinting to the polls to vote for W., though, it is important that everybody gets well acquainted with Bush's philosophical leanings. Here, then, is a short collection of Bush's nuggets of wisdom from the campaign trail (thanks to Slate's Jacob Weisberg, who has been compiling Bush's inspirational phrases throughout the past several months.)

Bush on:
Families: "Families is where our nation finds hope, where wings take dream." — La Crosse, Wis., Oct. 18. It's good to know that wings are now capable of independent thought.

Imports and the origins thereof: "It is clear our nation is reliant upon big foreign oil. More and more of our imports come from overseas." — Beaverton, Ore., Sep. 25. So true, George, so true.

Foreign policy goals: "I will have a foreign-handed foreign policy." — Redwood, Calif., Sep. 27. As opposed to a domestic-handed foreign policy, of course.

Trustworthiness: "Well, I think if you say you're going to do something and don't do it, that's trustworthiness." — CNN online chat, Aug. 30.

Developments within the space-time continuum: "I think we agree, the past is over." — Regarding a meeting with John McCain, May 10. I think I agree, too.

The guilt of death penalty recipients: "I do not believe that we've put a guilty ... I mean innocent person to death in the state of Texas." — On NPR's "All Things Considered," June 16.

His brother's current occupation (during an interview with Jim Lehrer): "I talked to my little brother, Jeb — I haven't told this to many people. But he's the governor of — I shouldn't call him my little brother — my brother, Jeb, the great governor of Texas."

Lehrer: "Florida." Bush: "Florida. The state of Florida." — "The NewsHour with Jim Lehrer," April 27.

Nature: "I know the human being and fish can coexist peacefully." — Saginaw, Mich., Sep. 29. True indeed. The question is, however, can the human being and George W. Bush coexist peacefully? We'll learn more after time unfolds, and the past is over. After Tuesday's elections, we should know whether the high-minded sage of West Texas will espouse his philosophies from the Oval Office or his ranch. For society's sake, let's hope it's the latter. We did away with the "Macarena," and we can get over Bush, too.

Can angels dance on a pinhead script?

Film: Charlie's Angels
Director: McG
Writer: Ryan Rowe, Ed Solomon and John August
Starring: Drew Barrymore, Cameron Diaz, Lucy Liu and Bill Murray
Length: 92 Minutes

Many critics and moviegoers are describing Charlie's Angels as a good old-fashioned "popcorn" movie. It's a sound analog.

Produced for a whopping $92 million, this update of the popular '70s TV series is like an expensive, stale box of movie theater popcorn.

Cameron Diaz, Lucy Liu and Drew Barrymore star as Charlie's new group of elite, crime-fighting "angels." Their assignment is to locate computer-software mogul Eric Knox (think Bill Gates), who has been abducted by his megalomaniacal rival, Roger Corwin. Corwin, it seems, wants to get his hands on Knox's new voice-identification software. If successful, it would mean the end of privacy as we know it (gaspl).

The plot gets thicker with a series of twists and turns, but who cares? Director McG knows publicity photo

Charlie's Angels Alex (Lucy Liu), Natalie (Cameron Diaz) and Dylan (Drew Barrymore) deliver a mindless and only mildly entertaining version of the original TV series.

what his audience wants to see: explosions, car chases and, most importantly, Barrymore and company kicking ass in skimpy outfits. To the delight of adolescent males everywhere, Angels delivers all three.

Unfortunately, the entire movie feels as though it was pasted together with crazy glue. According to a recent article in Newsweek, Barrymore, who also served as the film's producer, "likes to create an atmosphere where everybody can offer opinions, which led to chaos and no final script."

In fact, 14 different writers were brought in to try to "fix" the script. The result is a hodge-podge of disconnected scenes that prevents the movie from ever gaining any real comedic momentum.

It doesn't help that Bill Murray — the only true comic in the cast — is shamefully underused as Bosley, the angels' mentor. And Tom Green (of MTV fame) produces more awkward silences than laughs as Barrymore's goofy love interest, Chad.

Two bright spots are provided by Sam Rockwell as Knox, and Crispin Glover (a.k.a. George McFly), in a hilarious turn as the villainous Thin Man. Glover doesn't have a single line of dialogue, but his cartoonish movements and facial expressions are more fun to watch than any of the movie's Matrix-style action sequences.

Granted, Charlie's Angels is just a popcorn movie. But even mindless entertainment should be well-made. Thanks to amateurish direction and clumsy editing, Angels manages to be totally mindless but only mildly entertaining.

Meditations on reaching, but not touching

When the Angels of Heaven Saw the Daughters of Man is not exactly a play, not exactly a musical, and not exactly a piece of performance art. Angels is a piece that uses words, music and movement equally to create a dreamlike experience that may be puzzling and virtually incomprehensible but is undeniably evocative.

Angels is a meditation on the story in Genesis 6:1-4 that describes a time when humans were so lovely to the sight of heaven that angels came down to marry them. It states, "that the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair, and they took their wives of all which they chose." The work explores the emotions and issues involved with gaining the favor of heaven and eventually losing it.

To convey these weighty and elusive ideas, the cast of Angels combines words and phrases culled from the seemingly disparate sources of ancient biblical texts, the modern technological age, rural knowledge, contemporary slang and even the Serbian language. The music ranges from visceral chants and moans to synthesized industrial beats to blurts of a trombone and the strums of an acoustic guitar. The performers dance fluidly, jerk and convulse with agony, and lie completely still in suspended anticipation.

These components first intertwine when the mortals begin to work. Harsh yellow lights bake the stage as the actors achingly pull on wires and pantomime labor.

The theater pounds with a robotic beat and metallic drops that keep the steady pace of toil going. The cast then groans out phrases such as, "Electricity breaks me," "Tears in circuitry," and "I strip wire with a playing card/This work is hard."

The disjointed, non-linear language is reminiscent of the lyrics of modern rock musician Beck. One line in Angels, "Epilepsy vision tongue shatters through taste," is similar in form and tone to a verse in Beck's song, "Devil's Haircut" when he sings, "The temperature's dropping at the rotting oasis/Stealing kisses from the leprous faces."

In both of these examples, when the audience members attempt to make sense of juxtaposed words and phrases as if they were part of a story, description, or even a sentence, they are completely lost. However, if people surrender to the mood, they will understand the emotion behind the language, even if they do not understand the language itself.

Comprehending the meaning of the words may be challenging, but attempting to decipher a plot is completely futile. For those unacquainted with the background of the story, it is virtually impossible to determine who is an angel, who is a mortal, who is falling in love with whom.

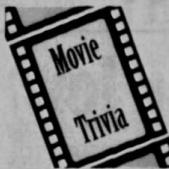

The plight of those who attempt to glean some kind of understanding, a singular theme, or greater meaning may best be described by a song sung by actress and collaborator Laurie Carlos when she says, "I can reach, but I cannot touch."

When the Angels of Heaven Saw the Daughters of Man is not a conventional piece of theater, and therefore it cannot be viewed in a conventional way. The play is a combination of visual poetry and verbal artistry that paints pictures that cannot be communicated with standard sentence structures or by using usual dramatic conventions.

Angels is a meditation that explores feelings with the honesty and intensity of a dream — a dream so vivid that you wake up smiling or crying. You may not be able to explain exactly what happened, or why certain emotions have been evoked, but you cannot deny what you feel after the experience.

NATION

Jobless rate remains at 30-year low

■ Economists say the longest stretch of prosperity in U.S. history has drawn many groups into the labor market.

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The nation's unemployment rate remained at a 30-year-low of 3.9 percent in October, the government said on Nov. 3 in the last major economic report to be released before voters go to the polls to elect a new president. The Labor Department report showed that even though the economy has slowed under the impact of six interest-rate increases by the Federal Reserve, labor markets remain exceptionally healthy.

The unemployment rate for Latinos dipped to a record low of 5.6 percent, down from 5.6 percent in September. The jobless rate for women edged down to 3.4 percent, the lowest level in 47 years, and the unemployment rate for blacks, at 7.3 percent, was near the record low of 7 percent set in September.

Economists said the low rates showed that the longest stretch of economic growth in U.S. history, nearly 10 years, has drawn more and more groups into the labor market.

Who is responsible for this prosperity and how it can be sustained have been major issues in the presidential race between Vice President Al Gore and Republican challenger Gov. George W. Bush.

Gore argues that Clinton-Gore administration fiscal policies created the record budget surpluses that spurred a business-investment boom. He contends that Bush's proposed $1.3 trillion tax cut risks wiping out the surpluses and threatens a recession.

Bush, however, has argued that more credit for the good times belongs to congressional Republicans, who forced Clinton to balance the budget, and the inflation-fighting skills of Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, a Republican.

President Clinton, brought off the sidelines in the campaign's closing days to energize the Democratic base, said that the unemployment report "was more good economic news for the American people" with the 3.9 percent level "half of what it was in 1992," when Clinton beat Bush's father to win his first term.

On Wall Street, investors had little reaction to the unemployment figures, remaining worried about weak company profits. The Dow Jones industrial average ended the day down 62.56 at 10,817.95.

In a second report on Nov. 3, the Commerce Department said new orders to the nation's factories rose 1.6 percent in September, a stronger-than-expected increase that was led by sharp demand for electronics and communications equipment.

NATION BRIEF

Glickman: No plan to cut crop subsidies

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman says he has no plans to cut federal crop subsidies next year, which would decrease if he followed a formula established in the 1996 farm law.

The government guarantees farmers a minimum price, known as a "loan rate," for crops such as corn, wheat, soybeans, rice and cotton. When market prices are below the loan rate, as they are now, farmers are paid the difference between the loan rate and the market price.

The 1996 formula calculates the subsidy rate based on fluctuations in market prices. Under that formula the rate for corn would fall from $1.89 per bushel to $1.76, the wheat rate would drop from $2.58 to $2.43, and the soybean rate would drop from $5.26 to $4.92.

"Unless market conditions improve dramatically in the coming weeks, and commodity prices go up, I intend to use my full statutory authority to keep loan rates at their maximum levels," Glickman said in a letter to Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., that USDA released on Nov. 3.

Farmers are expected to receive $7.6 billion in such subsidies this year, up from $5.9 billion in 1999 and $1.8 billion in 1998.

Japan leery of U.S. bio-corn

■ U.S. will test the corn bound for Japan for the unapproved gene-altered variety of the grain.

By Philip Brasher
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Corn shipped to Japan to be used in food will be tested for the presence of StarLink grain, the gene-altered variety that slipped into the U.S. food supply without being approved for human consumption, the Agriculture Department said.

As the largest foreign buyer of U.S. corn, Japan accepted the testing plans on Nov. 3, said Tim Galvin, an administrator of USDA's Foreign Agricultural Service.

The testing will provide "assurances that it's not going to find its way into the food supply in Japan," he said.

Meanwhile, a Utah company became the third processor to recall corn products because of a positive test for StarLink. Wilson Foods said the corn tortillas it was recalling were sold in Salt Lake City, Boise, Idaho, and Montana.

Kraft and Mission Foods earlier had initiated nationwide recalls for taco shells and other corn products after testing by environmental groups found traces of the corn in their products.

StarLink, developed by Aventis CropScience, was never approved for human consumption in the United States because of questions about its potential to cause allergic reactions. It is not approved for use in any foreign country.

A consumer group said last month that it found StarLink corn in snacks sold in Japanese stores and in animal feed. The Japanese government asked USDA for assurances the corn wouldn't be in any further shipments to the country.

"It was a market that we were very anxious to continue. We wanted to be able to find a way to accommodate the Japanese concerns and keep the grain moving," said Susan Keith, the senior director of public policy for the National Corn Growers Association.

Corn bound for Japan will be tested for StarLink residue when it is loaded on barges and railcars, which will then be sealed until the grain is moved onto ships.

Japan imports approximately 16 million metric tons of corn from the United States — roughly a third of total U.S. corn exports — with about 5 million tons of that going for food use, primarily for corn starch.

SPORTS BRIEF

New AD expects to give McCarney new contract
 AMES, Iowa (AP) — Iowa State's new athletics director is ready to sign football coach Dan McCarney to a new contract.
 Bruce Van Velde, named Iowa State's AD last week, said he would visit with McCarney soon to talk about a contract. Asked if a new deal was a lock, Van Velde replied, "I would say so, yes."
 McCarney, in his sixth season at Iowa State, has one year remaining on the extension he signed in 1998. He has guided the Cyclones to a 6-3 record so far, ensuring the program of its first winning regular season since 1989 and making it eligible for a bowl.

Upset special, Iowa style

Iowa wins an overtime thriller on the road against Penn State.

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

UNIVERSITY PARK, Penn. — The football was hanging in the air. Ryan Hansen snared it, clutched it into his Iowa jersey, and fell to the Beaver Stadium grass.

The 230-minute Big Ten battle, including two overtime periods, was over in one quick interception.

Iowa 26, Penn State 23.
 More than 95,000 Penn State fans sat in shock and silence, while the men in black and gold spilled onto the field and on top of Hansen.

"I was lying on top of Ryan, and we were on the bottom of the pile," Matt Stockdale said. "I said, 'Ryan, here comes the bench. We're going to get pummeled.'"

One guy didn't join the swarm; he went toward the other side of the end zone and extended a clenched and redeeming fist towards the sky. Promptly true freshman place-kicker Nate Kaeding was embraced and raised high by his former prep and current Hawkeye coach Reese Morgan.

While Kyle McCann connected with Kahlil Hill for a first-quarter touchdown, and Ladell Betts was credited with a vital TD in the first overtime period, Kaeding recorded 14 of Iowa's 26 points, with four field goals and two point-after attempts. He made the difference.

Not only did Kaeding have a perfect day — and certainly the best of his young Iowa career — it was one of the best in the history of Hawkeye football. His four field goals tied an Iowa game

Hawks put past away

After Penn State scored a touchdown in its first overtime possession, I thought this one was over.

I thought there was no way Iowa's offense, which had moved the ball at will during the first half but struggled through most of the second, was going to put seven on the board.

No, not these Hawks. They had created a niche for almost winning but rarely actually coming through with a "W."

Iowa would lose, and this one would go down as a close one, like so many in the past. The Hawkeyes would head back to Iowa City not satisfied with the loss but at least happy that they could have won.

But then something happened — actually, a couple of things happened — that made me look like an idiot for thinking these guys would fold under the pressure.

Instead of packing up the tent, they rallied around each other. Instead of throwing a screen to Kevin Kasper, they gave a draw to Ladell Betts, and he hit the corner and scored from 11 yards out, tying the game and sending it to a second overtime.

It was on that play that this team made a statement: We don't give up, we're not scared, and we can score if we

Home not so sweet for Hawkeyes

The Iowa volleyball team loses twice, putting its postseason chances in jeopardy.

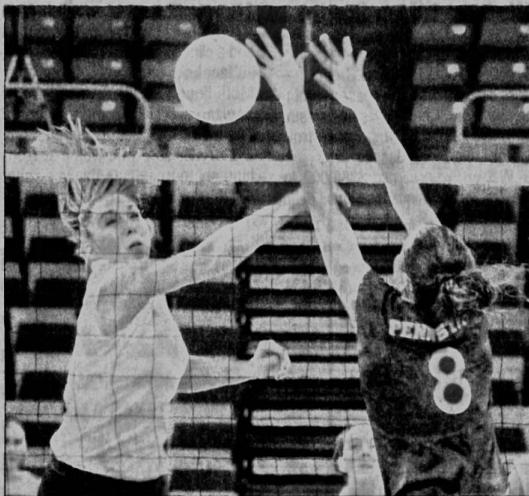

By Todd Brommelkamp
 The Daily Iowan

Enjoying home-court advantage after taking three of four matches on a critical two-week road trip, the Iowa volleyball team had every reason to be confident this weekend. Following a weekend sweep by No. 11 Penn State and Indiana, that confidence has given way to apprehension.

Iowa battled the Nittany Lions to a tough 3-2 loss on Nov. 3, and then the Hoosiers stunned the Hawkeyes with a straight-set victory on Nov. 4. The Hawkeyes are now 11-11 on the year and an even 7-7 in Big Ten play with three weeks to go in the season. After looking like an NCAA berth was a definite possibility, Iowa is now on the bubble more than ever.

"This team has to make a decision as to what we want to do with this season," said outside hitter Renee Hill.

The unranked Hawkeyes began the weekend looking like a Top-10 team as they streaked to a 6-0 lead against the Nittany Lions in game one. Behind strong hitting and blocking, Iowa held the advantage at 10-4, when the defending national champions rallied to score eight straight to take the lead before closing out the game with a kill to win, 15-13.

Iowa's Sara Meyermann spikes against Penn State defender Cara Smith Nov. 3 at Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The Hawkeyes lost to the Nittany Lions, 3-2.

Game two was a see-saw affair with the two teams tying the score six times before Penn State began to pull ahead. Iowa rode the momentum from a Katie Panhorst ace and a Sara Meyermann block to a 17-15 win.

With the Lions leading 6-0 in game three, Iowa rallied to knot the match before once again exchanging leads. Tied once more at 12, Iowa finished the game with three-straight kills to win 15-12.

Penn State sailed to a 15-8 win in game four to send the match to a deciding fifth game.

With rally scoring in effect, the teams again traded blows like two prize fighters. A kill by Fabiana De Abreu gave Iowa a 14-13 advantage, but the Hawkeyes watched helplessly as Penn State reeled off the final three points to win the game 16-14 and the match.

"When you've got the chance to put them away, you put them away," said coach Rita Buck-Crockett. "A team like this (Penn State) is not just going to roll over and die."

Iowa field hockey falls in semi-finals

The Hawkeyes are bounced from the Big Ten Tournament with a 3-1 loss to Michigan.

By Roseanna Smith
 The Daily Iowan

Natalie Dawson made an accurate statement when she said, with the UI field hockey team, you never know what's going to happen. It turned out to be true in last weekend's Big Ten Tournament, when Iowa shut out Michigan State in the quarterfinals, 2-0, on Nov. 3.

"Michigan State was a good result," head coach Tracey Griesbaum said. "We felt good because we'd lost to it earlier in the season, and the first game is always the longest, and you're most nervous going in."

Unfortunately, anything bad can happen, too. In the semifinals, No. 2 Penn State closed down Iowa dreams of another NCAA tournament appearance, dropping the Hawkeyes, 3-1.

"We felt we had a chance to win on Saturday. We weren't scared; we were ready to play," Griesbaum said. "On a team with two seniors and three returners, you don't usually expect to win, but we did. The women went into that game expecting to win."

The first half of the Nov. 4 game went back and forth offensively, with many scoring opportunities for both teams. Despite the Hawkeyes outshooting the Nittany Lions 6-4, Penn State used a goal at 11:57 from Timarie Legel to take a 1-0 halftime lead.

Much like in its Sept. 23 regular season game, Penn State fired off shots from its offense right away in the second half. The Lions picked up a pair of goals and a wider lead within a five-minute time spread. Kiley Kulina converted for a point on a penalty corner for the Lions at 27:41, followed by Legel's second goal at 22:47, putting the Lions up 3-0. Tiffany Fodera converted on a penalty corner on a setup shot from Maria Merluzzi and Lauren Edwards, but the two-point deficit was too much. Iowa kept the pressure on Penn State but couldn't break through a solid defense.

"The Penn State game was pretty upsetting," Griesbaum said. "It scored three times on six shots. We had chances early, but we couldn't put them in. If we would have been able to do that, it would've been a whole different result. The way it was, we had to scratch and claw to stay in the game."

In the Nov. 3 game, Dawson

Hawkeye upset propels OTL winner

Nicole Bailey wins the tie-breaker to take the OTL Week 10 competition.

By Jeremy Shapiro
 The Daily Iowan

It's not often the On the Line football contest gets an entry from outside of Iowa City, so it was bit of a surprise a ballot from California was entered, and amazingly enough, it nearly won.
 Felix Garcia, a resident from San Francisco, almost won a pizza and T-shirt. However, because it might be difficult for Iowa City pizza places to deliver to California, perhaps it is fitting that his entry lost out to Nicole Bailey.
 Bailey, Garcia and Amanda Cookman all finished 8-2 but Bailey won first prize because she was the only one to correctly predict Air Force's win in the tie-breaker game. She also predicted Iowa's thrilling win at Penn State and had North Carolina knocking off Pittsburgh.
 "I picked Iowa just because Penn State is not that good. It has a slower running game, so Iowa matched up well," she said.
 Garcia actually had the correct 41-27 score of the tie-breaker, but thought Army would score the 41. For the record, he did not pick his home state's team, California, to beat Oregon State.

 Jared Brostad, Ben Bessman and Josh Frahm also earned T-shirts by finishing the closest to the tie-breaker score among the nine 7-3 entries.

Louisville's surprising win over Southern Mississippi fooled all six winners — and 105 out of 119 entries overall — and prevented many of the 37 6-4 entries from getting that seventh win.
 Herky, played by Carrie MacDonald, went 7-3 for the week; she, of course, picked the Iowa game correctly. The Daily Iowan staff correctly predicted 54 percent of the games, and, with two weeks left, the race for most wins remains tight. Melinda Mawdsley and Jeremy Shapiro have 51 wins. Jeremy Schnitker has 49, and Mike Kelly has 43.
 All winners may pick up their prizes in the DI business office, Room 111, Communication Center.
 This week's ballot includes four Big Ten battles and a dangerous trip for No. 1 Oklahoma as it visits Texas A&M. Readers are encouraged to submit this week's entries to the DI office by 2:30 p.m. Thursday.

Watson takes Senior Tour Championship
MURRELLS INLET, S.C. (AP) — Tom Watson won the season-ending Senior Tour Championship, closing with a 6-under 66 for a one-stroke victory over John Jacobs.
 Watson, who earned $365,000 for his first victory since his senior debut in September 1999, had an 18-under 270 total. The five-time British Open champion had four front-nine birdies and a clinching eagle on the 14th hole.

 Jacobs shot a 68. Mike McCullough (70), Jose Maria Canizares (72) and Leonard Thompson (76) tied for third at 278.
 Larry Nelson, who won a season-high six tournaments this year, shot his third 69 to finish at 7 under and locked up the earnings title.

■ Virginia Tech and TCU both lost this weekend.

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

Virginia Tech, out. TCU, out. Oklahoma, still perfect after all these crazy weeks, stands alone as the nation's only major team without a loss. With a month to go before the final Bowl Championship Series standings decide who plays for the national title in the Orange Bowl on Jan. 3, the top-ranked Sooners are bracing for the tough road ahead. Next stop, College Station, Texas.

"College Station is a wild place from what I've heard," Oklahoma quarterback Josh Heupel said in looking ahead to next week's game at No. 23 Texas A&M. "But we've been in big-time atmospheres before, and we'll be extremely confident and prepared."

Heupel, now among the leading Heisman Trophy contenders, threw for 313 yards and three touchdowns and ran for another — in the first half — as the Sooners (8-0, 5-0 Big 12) coasted to a 56-7 win at Baylor.

After the Aggies (7-2, 5-1), OU is home to Texas Tech (6-4, 2-4) and at Oklahoma State (2-6, 0-5) before a likely rematch with No. 4 Nebraska (8-1, 5-1) in the Big 12 title game. Win out, and the Sooners will play for their first national title since 1985.

"We have the No. 1 in front of our name now," Oklahoma defensive back Roy Williams said. "We have to live up to the expectations no matter whom we're playing."

On Saturday, Virginia Tech and TCU lost for the first time this season, knocking both teams out of the national title chase.

At the Orange Bowl, Ken Dorsey threw for 283 yards and three TD passes, and No. 2 Miami dominated No. 8 Virginia Tech, 41-21. Tech's star quarterback Michael Vick, wearing a brace to protect his sprained right ankle, could barely walk in his 18 minutes of first-half play, totaling 14 yards on 19 plays with a fumble and an interception.

"This was a big game. It determined our season," Vick said. "It hurt me inside — deep inside."

The Hokies, who lost to Florida State in last year's title game at the Sugar Bowl, fell to 8-1, 6-1 in the Big East. Meanwhile, the Hurricanes (7-1, 4-0) move closer to playing for their first national title since 1991.

"We're on our way," said Santana Moss, who caught TD passes of 42 and 80 yards. "We've just got to keep on winning."

Miami, which moved up a spot in the AP poll while Virginia Tech dropped six places, has three games remaining — home to Pittsburgh (5-3, 2-2), at Syracuse (4-4, 2-2) and home to Boston College (6-3, 3-3).

TCU saw its long shot title hopes disappear on the West Coast when San Jose State stunned the Horned Frogs, 27-24, thanks to two TD passes by Marcus Arroyo. And a much-maligned defense kept LaDainian Tomlinson, the nation's leading rusher, from making big plays.

"It's a tough loss, especially when you've fought so long to attain a position like we had," TCU coach Dennis Franchione said. "We'll see what we're made of now."

TCU (7-1, 4-1 WAC) had its winning streak snapped at 12 games. Tomlinson had 155 yards and two TDs.

The Spartans (7-3, 5-1) played an inspired game and dedicated the win to Neil Parry, the walk-on whose right foot and ankle were amputated after he a serious injury three weeks ago against Texas-El Paso. Parry attended the game, and watched as his older brother, linebacker Josh Perry, led the Spartans' defense.

"He was out there with me," Josh Parry said. "We've dedicated the rest of this season to him. He's the reason we did this."

The last time the regular season ended without a perfect team was 1990, a year of co-national champions — Colorado (11-1-1) was the national champ in the Florida State quarterback Chris Weinke unloads a successful pass during the first quarter against Clemson Saturday.

AP media poll; Georgia Tech (11-0-1) was No. 1 in the UPI coaches poll (now the USA Today/ESPN coaches poll).

Even with the BCS standings in place, there remains a chance for co-champions this season. While the winner of the Orange Bowl is automatically No. 1 in the coaches poll, the AP media poll is taken after the final game with no restrictions on whom the 71-member panel can vote No. 1.

Here's how it can happen. Should the Sooners lose, the BCS title game would end up matching two teams with one loss each — say Florida State vs. Nebraska. The Seminoles could beat the Huskers in the Orange Bowl, but Miami — which beat Florida State earlier this season — could win the rest of its games and be voted No. 1 in the AP poll.

Baseball GMs doing a lot of shopping in the offseason

■ Manny Ramirez, Alex Rodriguez and Mike Hampton headline the list of free agents.

By Josh Dubow
Associated Press

AMELIA ISLAND, Fla. — Baseball's general managers played a waiting game at their annual meetings, with many of their offseason plans hinging on the status of four major free agents.

"There's a lot of shopping and a lot of talking, but not a lot of action yet," Boston general manager Dan Duquette said Sunday, echoing the sentiment

quarterbyquarter

Behind the maticulous passing of Kyle McCann, Iowa moved the ball well and scored on Iowa's second possession of the game. McCann went 9-10 in Iowa's first two series.

The Hawkeyes defense held Penn State in check during the first quarter, as Rashard Casey and the Nittany Lions put together small drives but could not get any points for their efforts.

Iowa ended out the quarter with Nate Kaeding kicking a 48-yard field goal, the longest of the year and the longest of his career.

Iowa continued to move the ball well in the second quarter, after a Kaeding field goal, this time for 49 yards, Iowa had a 13-0 lead. That was the biggest lead Iowa has had in a game all year.

Penn State still struggled moving the ball. They couldn't run and Casey's passes were often short or overthrown. However, Penn State kicker Ryan Primanti kicked a 42-yard field goal to put Penn State on the board.

McCann finished the first half 14 of 17 for 150 yards passing.

Iowa's offense slowed down, and Penn State's began to pick up during the third quarter. The Hawkeyes held scoreless, while Penn State put the game back into reach.

After neither team scored on its first two drives, the Nittany Lions scored a field goal with 3:53 left in the quarter, putting them down by only seven.

McCann's passes were accurate than had been in the first half, and Iowa's running game was held in check.

Penn State started a drive it would score off in the fourth quarter.

Only one minute into the fourth quarter Penn State scored its first touchdown of the game. Casey hit John Gilmore for a 2-yard touchdown to tie the ball game up.

Two possessions later, though, the Hawkeyes again turned to Kaeding for a field goal. This one was for 46 yards.

On Penn State's possession, it too drove and put up a field goal to make a tie.

With less than a minute left, Eric McCoo broke a big run and gave PSU a chance at a 56-yard field goal, but it missed.

of many of his colleagues.

Much of the major movement this winter depends on what Alex Rodriguez, Manny Ramirez, Mike Hampton and Mike Mussina decide to do. There are at least a dozen teams in the running for the big four free agents, and they are unwilling to spend money or fill holes with lesser players until they know where they stand in the big sweepstakes.

"Until the free-agent market plays itself out, you won't see much movement on trades," Mets general manager Steve Phillips said. "Most trade discussions are held in conjunction or secondary to the free-agent market."

The Mets have already made offers to free-agent pitchers Rick Reed and Turk Wendell and could resolve their contracts before they are free to negotiate with other teams beginning Saturday.

That's the first day teams other than Seattle can talk money with Rodriguez, the head of this year's free-agent class.

A-Rod is one of the top offensive players in the game at the mostly defensive position of shortstop. At 25, he has most of his career ahead of him.

Agent Scott Boras, expected to arrive at the meetings last Sunday night, has prepared a 50-page document detailing the qualities of his client, who hit .316 with 41 homers and 132 RBIs this season.

"When it comes to power hitters, the sluggers, the guys who can drive in 120 RBIs, MVP-type players, in this certain timeframe between 27 and 35, the longer the owners wait to lock them in, the better for the player," said Boras, who will probably make Rodriguez baseball's highest-paid player.

"Patience is a virtue for the slugger. Patience is a virus from the club's standpoint."

Boras, who cut off negotiations with Seattle before the season, also clarified remarks from Rodriguez that he won't sign with the Yankees, who already have his buddy, Derek Jeter, at shortstop.

"We think it was maybe a misunderstanding or something; he was talking about playing them in the American League championship series," Boras said. "I spent five days with him on the subject. He's hasn't dismissed any team."

Cleveland GM John Hart, one of the other major players this week, arrived Sunday and immediately huddled with his assistants as the Indians mull over a counterproposal to Ramirez's $200 million, 10-year request. They expect to respond to Ramirez's agent, Jeff Moorad, by Tuesday.

Cleveland also is pursuing a fallback plan, that could include signing a starting pitcher and a lesser outfielder to make up for Ramirez's .351 average, 38 homers and 122 RBIs in only 439 at-bats.

The Indians are interested in pitchers such as Mussina, Denny Neagle and Darren Dreifort, as well as outfielder Ellis Burks.

"This is a good place to lay the groundwork," Cleveland assistant general manager Mark Shapiro said.

The Yankees, who will be a leading contender in the Ramirez sweepstakes, decided they want to keep their current right fielder, Paul O'Neill.

The Yankees appeared willing to let O'Neill go as he struggled down the stretch because of age and injuries. But a .474 batting average in the World Series apparently changed GM Brian Cashman's mind and it looks likely that O'Neill will sign a one-year deal.

"Brian called me and said they want to bring Paul back," agent Joe Bick said. "We hope to get it done this week."

Ted Williams remains hospitalized

■ The former baseball star is in fair condition.

By Eddie Pells
Associated Press

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Ted Williams remained hospitalized in fair condition Sunday, awaiting word on whether doctors would implant a heart pacemaker.

The Boston Red Sox's Hall of Famer was hospitalized last week with congestive heart failure. He and his family declined interviews Sunday, but cardiologist Rick Kerensky, who is supervising the 82-year-old's care, said his condition hasn't changed.

"There's nothing really new," Kerensky said. "He's just resting in the hospital, waiting to hear what the doctors say."

On Saturday, Williams told the Boston Globe he was feeling "pretty good" and that he didn't think he needed the pacemaker.

"I don't know where everybody's getting the news that I'm at death's door," Williams said. "I'm not in any pain. I've got my son and my daughter here and my future in-laws. I just ate a hamburger."

He said he felt so good that he still planned to vote Tuesday.

Officials at Florida's Shands Hospital said they had been swamped by calls asking about Williams, the last major leaguer to hit .400.

In an effort to protect his privacy, however, the hospital had him listed under an alias, and wasn't giving any information, other than his condition.

At the Ted Williams Museum and Hitters Hall of Fame near Williams' home in Hernando, almost all the visitors were asking museum workers for information about Williams' condition.

With record score, Mickelson wins PGA Tour Championship

■ Mickelson's win stops another amazing Tiger Woods streak.

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

ATLANTA — Phil Mickelson found the perfect end to his season — winning the Tour Championship with a record score and stopping another amazing streak by Tiger Woods.

With no chance to win any PGA Tour awards, Mickelson gave himself quite a consolation prize Sunday. He closed with a 4-under 66 and took advantage of sloppy play by Woods for a two-stroke victory at East Lake Golf Club.

It was the first time in 20 tournaments, dating to his third tournament as a pro in 1996, that Woods had at least a share of the 54-hole lead and failed to win. And it was the second time this year Mickelson was the man responsible for stopping the streak.

In February, he came on strong down the stretch to win the Buick Invitational in San Diego and stop Woods' tour winning streak at six.

"It's a wonderful way to end the year," said Mickelson, who finished at 13-under 267 to break by one stroke the Tour Championship record set by Tom Watson in 1987.

It was a disastrous finish for Woods, who was trying to become the first player in 50 years to win at least 10 times in one season.

Poised to become the first back-to-back winner of the Tour Championship, Woods struggled off the tee and missed all the important putts he has made all year. He finished with a 69, his 11th straight round in the 60s.

Mickelson, playing in the twosome in front of Woods, took the lead with an 8-foot birdie putt on the par-5 15th, and Woods couldn't match him. Over the final three holes, he couldn't catch up.

From the fairway bunker on No. 17, Woods pulled his 9-iron left of the green into shin-high grass framing the lake. He chopped it out 45 feet past the hole and took bogey.

His last chance was to make a hole-in-one on the 239-yard closing hole. Given the year he has had, no one put it past him.

Still, that was asking too much.

"That's the way it goes when you don't have your best stuff," Woods said. "I grinded my butt off just to give myself a chance."

Mickelson earned $900,000 from the $5 million purse and won for the fourth time this year, two of those in Atlanta. Mickelson also won the Bell-South Classic in a one-hole playoff over Gary Nicklaus.

Masters champion Vijay Singh, tied with Woods at 10 under, fell behind after a bogey on the first hole and dropped out of the picture for good when he failed to make birdie on the par-5 ninth.

Singh had a 73 and finished in a tie for third at 273 with Nick Price (67) and Ernie Els (69).

The last player to come from behind in the final round to beat Woods was Ed Fiori in the Quad City Classic. Since then, Woods has proven to be one of the greatest front-runners in golf, finding a way to win or letting those around him collapse.

Fiori is known in tour circles as "Tiger Slayer." Add Mickelson to that list.

He had the advantage of playing in the group in front of Woods, staying away from the hype over a head-to-head duel and getting off to a fast start to put the pressure on Woods.

Mickelson holed a 10-foot birdie putt on the first hole and took the lead when Woods failed to save par from the bunker on No. 3. Despite missing a fair share of birdie putts, he made the turn at 31 and took a one-stroke lead into the back nine.

He played the final nine holes in even par, making two bogeys from bunkers, but he never gave back the lead.

"Playing in the group in front made a big difference," Mickelson said. "I knew if I could get off to a good start and make some birdies, you know you have a limited number of holes to catch the leader."

Mickelson missed his first green on the par-3 11th, when his tee shot leaked just enough to find the bunker and he pulled a 4-foot par putt that dropped him into a tie for the lead with Woods — but only momentarily.

Woods, who struggled with his driving throughout the final round, caught a bad break on the 10th when his ball was just outside a fairway bunker. With his feet in the sand and the ball at knee level, Woods had no choice but to chip out to the fairway, and he missed a 15-foot par putt to slip one back.

They matched birdies on the par-4 12th, and Mickelson gave up the lead alone by missing a 6-foot par putt on the 13th.

He had played the final three holes in 3 over all week, but hit every green with the tournament on the line. Just like in San Diego, it was Woods who made the mistakes in the closing holes.

It was the second time in his career that Mickelson had a four-victory season. That's normally considered a stellar year, but pales in comparison to the Year of the Tiger — nine victories, nearly $9 million in earnings, three major championships.

Woods goes to Spain next week for the World Golf Championship and one last chance to join Byron Nelson, Ben Hogan and Sam Snead as the only players to win at least 10 times on tour in one season.

Mickelson had planned to go to Valderrama, but said he would skip it if he won this week. Instead, he'll go home to Arizona and get ready for next season.

Titans pull out gritty win over Pittsburgh

Associated Press

The Tennessee Titans won their eighth straight game the hard way Sunday, ending Pittsburgh's five-game winning streak, 9-7, on Al Del Greco's 29-yard field goal with four seconds left.

The Titans improved to 8-1 for the first time in franchise history by overcoming their own mistakes. It looked like they would lose their first game since moving to Adelphia Coliseum when they hurt themselves with a season-high 14 penalties for 115 yards.

Kordell Stewart put the Steelers (5-4) up 7-6 when he found Mark Bruener for a 30-yard touchdown with 8:27 remaining. But Steve McNair connected with Derrick Mason on three separate passes, the biggest a 17-yard completion on fourth-and-8 at the Pittsburgh 42 with 2:12 remaining to set up the winning kick.

Bears 27, Colts 24

Jim Miller threw for 214 yards and a touchdown and Walt Harris returned an interception for a score as the Bears (2-7) jumped out to a 27-0 lead, then watched as Peyton Manning almost brought back the Colts (6-3).

But as Manning went back to throw on second-and-14 from his own 42 with less than two minutes to go, Roosevelt Colvin forced a fumble that Philip Daniels recovered. The ruling was reviewed, but it was upheld, and the Bears ran out the clock.

The Bears held Indianapolis, the league's second-ranked offense, to just three plays and 1:59 of possession in the first quarter. By halftime, the Colts had just 68 yards of offense on 16 plays, and Chicago led, 20-0. Harris' 35-yard interception return made it 27-0 1:18 into the third quarter before the Colts started their comeback.

Bucs 27, Falcons 14

Keyshawn Johnson caught two touchdown passes for the Buccaneers (5-4). Johnson hauled in a 5-yard scoring pass in the second quarter and a clinching 29-yarder in the fourth — doubling his TD output for the season. Last week, Johnson had six catches for a season-high 121 yards and a score in a 41-13 rout of previously unbeaten Minnesota.

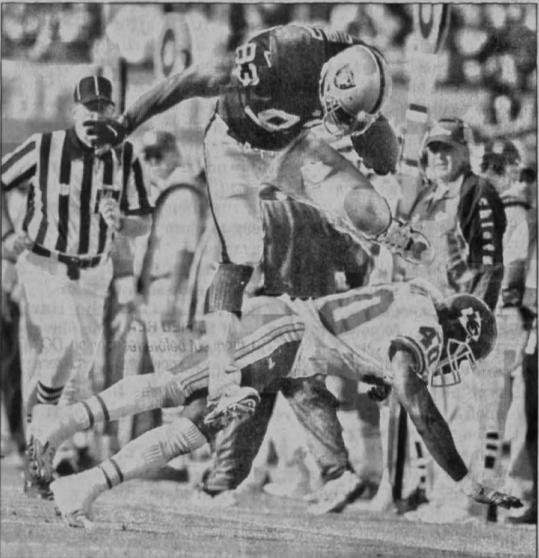

The Falcons (3-7) lost quarterback Chris Chandler to a concussion early in the second quarter. King threw for only 110 yards but had three TDs, giving him seven in the last two games after six through the first seven weeks.

Dolphins 23, Lions 8

Autry Denson returned the opening kickoff to Detroit's 46, then Lamar Smith ran for a touchdown on the first play from scrimmage to jump start the Dolphins (7-2), who led 14-0 before the Detroit offense got the ball.

The Dolphins recovered an onside kick following the score and drove for a second TD.

yards for Detroit (5-4), was knocked out of the game with a concussion. Stoney Case replaced him.

Bills 16, Patriots 13

Steve Christie, who kicked field goals in the final minute of regulation or overtime to decide three of Buffalo's four previous wins, did both for the Bills (5-4).

The Patriots (2-7) nearly squeaked out a win despite a hand injury that sidelined Drew Bledsoe for most of the game. Backup John Friesz did just enough to set up a 43-yard field goal by Adam Vinatieri that gave the Patriots a 13-10 lead with 2:03 left.

But Doug Flutie led the Bills downfield, and Christie lined a kick just over the crossbar for a tying 48-yard field goal with four seconds left in regulation. Then he kicked a 32-yarder to win it 4:32 into overtime.

Eagles 16, Cowboys 13

Donovan McNabb threw for 241 yards and a touchdown, and David Akers kicked a 32-yard field goal in overtime for the Eagles (6-4).

Randall Cunningham, playing his first game in Philadelphia since his 11-year career with the Eagles ended in 1995, was just 14-of-22 for 109 yards. He ran nine times for 22 yards, while McNabb had 58 yards rushing on five carries.

Dallas (3-6) took a 13-10 lead on a 27-yard field goal by Tim Seder with 1:51 left. A 46-yard pass interference penalty on Troy Vincent set up the score. But McNabb drove the Eagles 54 yards in 96 seconds, and Akers' 34-yard field goal tied it at 13 with 11 seconds left.

Saints 31, 49ers 15

Jeff Blake threw three touchdown passes as New Orleans (6-3) opened a 28-0 halftime lead, and New Orleans didn't punt until the fourth quarter in a 31-15 victory over San Francisco (2-8).

San Francisco, the No. 2 offense in the NFC, was stymied most of the game by the NFC's No. 1 defense. The 49ers scored 20 or more points in 12 of the previous 13 games.

Giants 24, Browns 3

Kerry Collins threw two of his three touchdown passes to Amani Toomer as the Giants (7-2) won their fourth straight. Ike Hilliard caught a 28-yard TD pass for the Giants, who are off to their best start since opening the 1990 season 10-0 en route to winning the Super Bowl.

New York coach Jim Fassel didn't want his players looking past the Browns (2-8) to their showdown at home against the St. Louis Rams next Sunday.

And the defense made sure there wouldn't be a letdown, holding Cleveland to just 41 yards rushing on 16 attempts and limiting the Browns to only a first-quarter field goal.

Ravens 27, Bengals 7

Trent Dilfer threw three touchdown passes, ending one of the longest offensive slumps in modern NFL history, as the Ravens (6-4) rolled over the team that gave up Baltimore's last touchdown six weeks ago.

Brandon Stokley caught a short pass and lunged into the end zone early in the second quarter for a 14-yard score, ending the touchdown-less drought at 21 quarters and setting off a raised-arms celebration. Cincinnati (2-7) missed tackles, blew coverages, and generally looked like the same sad-sack team that lost in Baltimore, prompting coach Bruce Coslet to quit the next day.

Cards 16, Redskins 15

The Washington Redskins dominated the game on the ground and through the air — but they managed just one touchdown.

The result was a stunning 16-15 loss to the lowly Arizona Cardinals on Sunday.

Aeneas Williams returned a fumble by Stephen Davis 103 yards for a touchdown — the second-longest fumble return in NFL history. MarTay Jenkins took the second-half kickoff 72 yards to set up Michael Pittman's 7-yard run for Arizona's other touchdown.

The difference turned out to be Washington's botched conversion kick early in the second quarter.

Raiders 49, Chiefs 31

Two former Chiefs did in their old mates again.

Rich Gannon threw for four touchdowns, two to Andre Rison, as the Oakland Raiders won their sixth straight Sunday, beating Kansas City 49-31, to open up a three-game lead in the AFC West.

There also was an aura of mystery to the game.

Sebastian Janikowski, Oakland's top draft pick, made one practice kick in the pre-game warmups then left the field surrounded by trainers. His departure was not explained by the Raiders.

Three weeks ago, Janikowski kicked a 43-year field goal with 25 seconds left to give the Raiders a 20-17 victory over the Chiefs in Kansas City, the third straight Chiefs-Raiders game decided by a field goal.

But Oakland (8-1) didn't need him for its third straight victory against the Chiefs — something Oakland hasn't done since 1982-84. Gannon completed 20-of-31 passes for 242 yards, hitting tight end Rickey Dudley for the two other scores.

Seattle 17, Chargers 15

The San Diego Chargers are still winless, and the Seattle Seahawks have a new hero.

Rookie Rian Lindell's 48-yard field goal as time expired gave the Seahawks a 17-15 victory over the frustrated Chargers on Sunday.

The Chargers dropped to 0-9, losing their second straight game on a field goal in the final seconds. Oakland's Sebastian Janikowski beat San Diego 15-13 on a field goal with 13 seconds left last Sunday night.

San Diego has lost five games by three points or fewer.

The Seahawks (3-7) ended a five-game losing streak. Their last previous victory was in San Diego on Sept. 24.

Broncos 30, Jets 23

Brian Griese looked like his old man and Terrell Davis looked like his old self. That was enough for the Denver Broncos to beat the New York Jets, 30-23, Sunday.

The comeback magic the Jets have possessed all season helped them overcome a 17-0 deficit. But they couldn't stop Denver's offense when it mattered most, and they couldn't get in from the 2 in four tries in the final minute.

Griese was coolly efficient, particularly on third downs, in passing for 327 yards and two touchdowns — both to Ed McCaffrey. Davis, returning from foot and ankle injuries that hobbled him since the season opener, rushed for 115 yards — his first 100-yard game since Denver won its second straight Super Bowl in January 1999.

Miami steps up to No. 2 in the polls

■ Miami becomes the fifth team to be No. 2 this season after its win against Virginia Tech.

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

Now it's Miami's turn at No. 2.

The Hurricanes (7-1) became the fifth team to move into the No. 2 spot in The Associated Press Top 25 on Sunday, replacing Virginia Tech after beating the Hokies 41-21, in the Orange Bowl.

Oklahoma (8-0) remained a solid No. 1 for the second week in a row after a 56-7 victory over Baylor on Saturday, while Virginia Tech (8-1) fell six places to No. 8.

Before the Hokies, the previous No. 2s were Kansas State, Nebraska and Florida State.

In addition to Miami improving one spot from last week, the five teams directly below the Hurricanes also moved up a notch — Florida State to No. 3, Nebraska to No. 4, Florida to No. 5, Oregon to No. 6 and Washington to No. 7.

Also, TCU (7-1) dropped its first game of the season — 27-24 to San Jose State — and tumbled from No. 9 to No. 18.

The Sooners, the last of the major college unbeaten, collected 70 of the 71 first-place votes and 1,774 points from the AP panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Miami had 1,684 points, while Florida State (9-1), a 54-7 winner over Clemson in Bowden Bowl II, had one first-place vote and 1,633 points.

Purdue (7-2), idle on Saturday, moved up two spots to No. 9, followed by No. 10 Oregon State, a 38-32 winner over California.

Notre Dame, also idle, moved up four places to No. 11, followed by No. 12 Northwestern, No. 13 Ohio State, No. 14 Georgia, No. 15 Mississippi State, No. 16 Kansas State, No. 17 Clemson, No. 18 TCU, No. 19 Texas and No. 20 Michigan.

Clemson, ranked No. 5 three polls ago, was No. 11 last week after a loss to Georgia Tech and fell seven more places after its loss to the Seminoles. Michigan dropped eight places after a 54-51 loss to Northwestern.

South Carolina is No. 21, followed by No. 22 Auburn, No. 23 Texas A&M, No. 24 Georgia Tech and No. 25 Southern Mississippi, which fell 12 places after a 49-28 loss to Louisville.

The state of Florida has three teams in the top five for the first time since the fourth poll of 1994, when the Gators were No. 1, the Seminoles No. 3 and the Hurricanes No. 5.

In the USA Today/ESPN coaches poll, the top five are Oklahoma, Miami, Florida State, Florida and Nebraska.

The latest Bowl Championship Series standings, which determine the teams to play in its national title game in the Orange Bowl on Jan. 3, will be released.

Oklahoma is expected to remain in first place, with Florida State, Nebraska and Miami each having a shot at second place.

SAE takes intramural flag football championship

■ Sigma Alpha Epsilon takes the crown with a 14-13 win over Tiggie Bitties.

By Nick Firchau
The Daily Iowan

In a game that seemed more like a tug-of-war match than a championship flag football game, the men's All-University title may have hinged on one fateful pull in the second half.

The Sigma Alpha Epsilon team outlasted the Tiggie Bitties, 14-13, Sunday at the Hayden Fry Football Complex to win the championship while the Bitties' "ex-factor" could only watch from the sideline.

After picking off a Brendan Ferrari pass midway through the second half, Bill Ennis-Inge went down with a pulled quadriceps on his way to what seemed like a sure touchdown that could have shifted the game's momentum.

The injury instead stalled the Bitties, as SAE's Andrew Morris picked off a Jim Walsh pass, cutting the scoring drive short. The interception would prove to be costly for the Bitties, as they failed to mount another scoring drive during the rest of the game.

"That was the game," said the Bitties' Andy Milton. "We had a lapse at the end of the first half, but our defense was holding them in the second half and not giving up anything. It's definitely unfortunate, but that was the game-winner right there."

The Bitties opened up the scoring late in the first half after both teams struggled offensively when Walsh busted through SAE's defense for a 30-yard scramble, putting the Bitties inside the five-yard line. Walsh punched it in himself and then found Ennis-Inge alone in the end zone for the one-point conversion to make it 7-0.

SAE answered on the ensuing drive with two big catches by Aaron Pickett and Morris' short touchdown pass to Addison Boughton. Pickett evened up the score with a conversion catch, and it seemed like the teams would head into halftime in a 7-7 deadlock.

After their offense stalled, the Bitties' defense had a quick lapse that would prove costly. Morris found Ferrari in the end zone with a pass from just inside midfield, and when Morris dashed in for the one-point conversion, SAE suddenly posted a 14-7 halftime lead. Walsh immediately led the Bitties back in the second half when, after Mike Widen's touchdown catch was disallowed, he found Nick Edwards for a short touchdown that closed the gap to 14-13. After the tying one-point conversion failed, Ennis-Inge came up with the interception on SAE's ensuing drive. Morris' interception deep in SAE's zone was the game's turning point.

"That was huge," said Morris, who later picked off a Walsh pass intended for Widen on the Bitties' last drive with 40 seconds remaining. "We had a tough time covering their short game, but we knew we couldn't give up anything big, and we had to play solid back there. They had some very good receivers on their team, but we played well defensively, and that was a very important want to.

This wasn't the Iowa team that used to play one half of football against a good team, then let the floodgates open. This wasn't the team that almost won against a squad that had won four in a row and had its crowd of 95,000 behind them.

This was a team that went out and made plays in tense, crucial situations in a packed house with half of central Pennsylvania cheering against them.

"We've never given up all season, and we weren't about to today," said cornerback Matt Stockdale. "We know we can play good football; it's now just a matter of performing this way on a consistent basis."

This team didn't give up, despite how easy it could have been for it to do so. The Hawks could have packed it up — heck, they could have packed it up three weeks ago — but they haven't. They've actually worked a little harder since then.

That says a lot about the make-up of this team and the guidance of their head coach. Any time you have a team still fighting tooth and nail for you, when you've only won two games out of the last 20 — there's something special going on.

While he's spent the last month in the shadow of a coach that most thought should be here but is down at Oklahoma with the No. 1 team in the country, he's quietly kept this team motivated and ready to play every week.

If the story Saturday was all about the emotion and heart of the Hawkeyes, the fact that Iowa dominated the line of scrimmage for most of the afternoon fills a couple of chapters of it.

Iowa outgained the Nittany Lions on the ground, 196-155. I can't remember the last time an Iowa team outgained its opponents on the ground.

Despite having only about half the line it started the season with, Iowa made holes that, at times, were bigger than center A.J. Blazek's smile.

Betts' touchdown run was one of them.

"It was an intense game, and I couldn't be prouder of the effort our guys gave today," coach Kirk Ferentz said. "They fought for 60-plus minutes, from the first play. That's Hawkeye football."

That is Hawkeye football, Kirk, and Saturday your team played the parts of being Hawkeyes that you remember well from coaching here in the '80s.

Ferentz's record with a signed contract: 1-0. Ferentz's record without a signed contract: 2-20. Maybe that's what they needed all along.

DI Sports Editor Jeremy Schnitker can be reached at jschnitk@blue.weeg.uiowa.edu high and were the most since Todd Romano kicked four against Tulsa in 1993.

Kaeding credited his holder, punter Jason Baker, and snapper A.J. Blazek, and as usual, he said it simply is his job to kick the ball through the uprights. He was glad to help Iowa win. Blazek gave Kaeding the credit he deserved.

"He was wide left in warm-ups. I didn't know if he was nervous or what," Blazek said. He then paused and added: "But the kid played today. I put this win on his shoulders."

Though Kaeding was clearly Iowa's individual player of the game, the entire team, both offensively and defensively, came together for more than four quarters of football.

The offense put together a spectacular first half, recording 13 points, while the defense held the Nittany Lions to one field goal. Though the offense wasn't as sharp in the second, notching only 112 yards, it was sufficient and, in overtime, ultimately put the needed points on the board.

"We've been preparing pretty well the last couple weeks," McCann said. "It was just a matter of us coming out and executing. The guys out front did a good job. The guys outside and behind me made plays. When you're executing it's a lot more fun."

After expending energy arguing shaky official calls,

Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz, with a freshly signed contract, won his first road game, and it was a game against the legendary coach Joe Paterno. The emotion his team played with on the field was seen in the coach's eyes and felt in his words when asked why his team continues to play so hard despite the now 2-8 record.

"November really spells out the character of a football team," he said.

Then the pride he feels in his team became even more evident.

"This is the home stretch. This is when it's easy to not be strong," he said, choking back tears. "Those guys gutted it up. They came in here with a good focus and the intention to win. They believe they belong out there on the field, and they backed it up."

While the Iowa defense gave up more than 434 yards in total offense, it did not matter. It knocked down passes when it had to, contained Rashard Casey when necessary, and stopped the entire offense in one quick double-overtime play. Casey broke almost every Penn State quarterbacking statistic. Stockdale wasn't concerned.

"You know he might have had the best passing game he's ever had, but we came out with the win," he said. "That's the bottom line, and that's what matters."

De Abreu's triple-doubles bright spot for Iowa the night before, there was a night-and-day difference in the team's performance on Nov. 4.

After back-to-back aces from Meyerermann to start game one, Iowa quickly began to lose control. Indiana methodically put together a rally, eventually overtaking the Hawkeyes. The Hoosiers pounded Iowa with a blistering .342 attack percentage en route to taking game one, 15-7.

Iowa traded points with Indiana to begin game two, eventually tying the score at 10. Indiana worked to put Iowa away, collecting five of the final six points in the match to take the second game 15-11.

Looking for a quick finish, the Hoosiers bolted to a 5-0 lead before Iowa began to claw its way back. Iowa took a 13-8 lead behind an ace serve from Evelena Ornelas and kills from Meyerermann and De Abreu. However, Indiana strung together seven consecutive points for the 15-13 victory and the shutout.

Highlighting the weekend for the Hawkeyes was De Abreu, who once again recorded back-to-back triple-doubles. Against Penn State, De Abreu tallied 64 assists to go along with 14 kills and 13 digs. Saturday night she dished out 26 assists along with 15 kills and 11 digs. Hill finished the Indiana match with 12 kills and 13 digs, while Meyerermann set new marks for her career best in kills and digs on Nov. 3 with 29 and 24, respectively.

The loss left both coach and players searching for answers to the collapse, but none were easily found.

"If we were (tired), it's not an excuse," said Kelli Chesnut.

"Everybody has got to learn to play and put her priorities in order," Buck-Crockett said. "We need to focus on what is at hand."

Each match now takes on added importance as Iowa still has an outside chance at making the post-season. The Hawkeyes take the road once more this weekend with matches at Purdue and Illinois.

got the game play she'd been looking forward to all week. Facing Michigan State in the first-round quarterfinals game of the Big Ten, Dawson opened up the scoring for Iowa and had a hand in the Hawkeye 2-0 shutout.

Dawson's lead was extended in the second half on a shot from Susan Gibson that was tipped in by Rebekah Heavrin with 18 minutes remaining. With only six shots on goal the Spartans tried to rally for a score in the last six minutes, but goalkeeper Saleema Rogers stayed focused, each time coming up with the save.

At the close of the season, the Hawkeyes finish with an 11-8 (3-3) record, and Griesbaum is hopeful about next year's team.

"Things look good for next year," she said. "I'm proud of the team; it's come a long way since August."

Iowa players Dawson,

Fodera and Gina Carr were named to special teams following the weekend's tournament. Dawson was a first team All-Big Ten and All-Tournament team selection, while Fodera and Carr were awarded spots on the second team All-Big Ten team.

horoscopes

Monday, November 6, 2000 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Socializing with co-workers will lead to a better working environment. Don't hesitate to mix business with pleasure. Romantic encounters may be stressful. Look into lucrative financial investments.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Self-improvement projects will be highly successful. Start that new diet, or proceed with the physical changes you've been contemplating. Don't force your will. Be a good listener.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You can make prosperous real-estate deals or go ahead with home-improvement projects. Spend time with friends or children. Do something active that will bring you self-satisfaction.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Get together with friends. Be receptive to the advances being made, and the result will be to your advantage. Travel will prove auspicious due to what you learn.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You should be able to make financial gains if you apply for a prominent position. You can form solid partnerships or unions with individuals who will benefit your cause.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Social activities will lead to love. Go ahead with the physical changes you've been contemplating. Enlist the aid of co-workers to get an important project finished.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take care of matters concerning government agencies or large institutions. Don't let those you live with interfere with your work. Neither a borrower nor a lender be.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Get out and involved. New friendships will develop. You will be in a position to make changes that will lift your spirits and bring you greater self-confidence.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't let your personal life interfere with your professional direction. You can make major gains if you talk to the right people. Make changes that will please those you live with.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You will receive help if you ask for it. Mix business with pleasure, and the result will be to your advantage.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Update your personal papers. Take care of any minor health problems. Business deals look favorable. You can increase your earning potential.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Make sure you haven't neglected the one you love. Take time for special plans that will be sure to enhance the relationship. Plan to take a trip together.

The Ledge

Campaign promises we're still waiting to hear

- Comfortable trousers for all.
- Make war, not love.
- We've got Big Tobacco on our side, fighting for you.
- Return to the glory of the Grover Cleveland days.
- Heresay can't be used in court.
- I'll arrest Bill Gates.
- Free beer on Election Day.
- Vote for me if you hate kittens.
- Stop whining and make up your mind, you moron.
- I'll corner the market of the elusive hate vote.
- Monopolies galore!
- We'll put the "con" back in Congress.
- Hey! I can drink and drive, too!
- It's better living through soft money.
- Oh, come on. Like you really care who wins.
- I'll vote my conscience if you vote yours.
- Let's get rid of that pesky church-state separation thingee.
