Still playing the waiting game

■ The Texas governor's margin is down to 229 as the two campaigns' rhetoric hardens.

By David Royce
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — George W. Bush's lead over Al Gore in crucial Florida shrank to fewer than 300 votes by unofficial count Thursday, with allegations of irregularities swirling and ballots from overseas residents still to be counted. Recount results from 66 of the state's 67 counties gave Republican Bush a lead of 229 votes out of nearly 6 million cast, according to an unofficial tally by the Associated Press. The original "final" margin had been reported at 1,784. The official count lagged behind, and Secretary of State Katherine Harris told an early evening news conference that it could be as late as Nov. 14 — a week after the election — before the state has certified ballot results from all 67 counties. She also pointed out that it would take even longer — at least until Nov. 17 — to tabulate ballots cast by Floridians overseas and postmarked by Election Day. One election board member, Agriculture Commissioner Bob Crawford, testily defended the pace of the recount. "Nobody ever said that democracy was simple or efficient," he said. "But this is democracy in action." He said anyone wanting simplicity should look to the south, to Cuba, a reference to the dictatorship of Fidel Castro. The Gore campaign criticized the ballots in use in Palm Beach County as confusing and asked for a hand count of votes cast there and in three other counties. Palm Beach County agreed to hand-count ballots in three precincts on Saturday. In the meantime, a circuit judge issued a preliminary injunction barring the canvassing commission in the county from certifying the final recount results until a hearing is held Nov. 14. That was in response to a legal challenge filed with the support of Democrats who say a poor ballot design in the county led some Gore supporters to inadvertently mark their ballots for Pat Buchanan. The court order said the ballot was designed and printed in such a way that voters were deprived of their right to freely express their will. Also, the board in Broward County was to meet this morning to discuss the request for a manual recount there. With the outcome of the presidential race in the balance, allegations on both sides became increasingly heated. Step by incredible step, the overtime struggle for the presidency is inching toward the constitutional confrontation both sides declare they do not want. But stopping short of one will become increasingly difficult should the struggle go to court as the Democrats intend. The rhetoric is hardening, by proxy now as Bush and Gore wait for the verdict the voters did not clearly deliver. The Florida recount probably won't Confusion over the ballot design has resulted in a flood of complaints and a lawsuit in Florida's heavily Democratic Palm Beach County, where more than 19,000 ballots have been disqualified.

D.C. is business as usual

■ The nation's capital was mostly quiet Thursday.

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

WASHINGTON, D.C. — While the eyes of the nation remained glued to the unfolding presidential drama, a handful of people gathered in front of the White House to protest the flawed Florida tally. Marina Eisher, a 16-year-old junior at Walt Whitman High School in Bethesda, Md., who campaigned for Vice President Al Gore during the past few months, wants the people in Florida to vote again so the right man becomes president — even if that is Texas Gov. George W. Bush. "It's the fairness issue that we're looking at," said Eisher, holding a sign that read "We want a new Florida vote. We want the correct man to win." The Bethesda teen, along with a few members of the Maryland Democratic Central Committee, made the 20-minute subway trip to the White House to demand the revote. In Palm Beach County, which is heavily Democratic and heavily Jewish, right-winger Pat Buchanan received 3,407 — and many in the county say their votes for Gore mistakenly went to the Reform Party candidate because of the confusing presidential ballot. Dana Kalish, also a junior at Walt Whitman High School and a Gore supporter, said a second vote is needed to ensure that Florida Gov. Jeb Bush — the Texas governor's brother — had no influence on the election results. Kalish said she fears that a Bush presidency would ignore gun-control laws and restrict women's right to vote. Kalish was just one of several people in Washington, D.C., who wondered who would be the next man to reside in the White House on the day that it celebrated its 200th birthday. Julie Albert, 24, of California, who was sight-seeing in Washington Thursday, said that while she voted for Al Gore, she isn't nervous about a Bush presidency. "It will change the way that some things are run," she said at the steps of the Washington Monument. "But directly, I don't think it will affect me

WASHINGTON, D.C. — One-hundred-and-ten fifth-graders and 60 parents from Hillsborough Elementary School in Hillsborough, N.C., rolled into the nation's capital Wednesday for their annual trip to Washington, D.C., and toured its sites Thursday amid a politically ambiguous and festive atmosphere as the White House celebrated its 200th anniversary. "We were watching (the election coverage) TV Wednesday night," said Tim Young. "I couldn't think of a better time to come." The historical importance of the situation was not lost on his children, he said. Young, his son, Brian, 11, and fifth-grade classmates Michael Moore, 10, and Zak Skovira, 11, ascended the 500-foot Washington Monument and toured other memorials during the day. But their attention was fixed on the White House Thursday night as the nation held its breath in

State GOP may demand Iowa recount

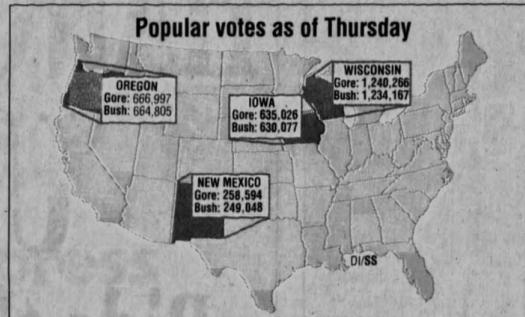

■ Al Gore won the Hawkeye state by a mere 4,949 votes.

As the nation waits to find out whom it elected president on Tuesday, Vice President Al Gore's slim victory in Iowa may also become a point of contention.

State Republican Party officials announced Thursday that they may request a voter recount after the popular vote in Iowa showed Gore beating Texas Gov. George W. Bush by fewer than 5,000 votes. Gore seized Iowa's seven electoral votes, winning with 635,026 votes to Bush's 630,077 — a difference of 4,949 votes. Cedar County was a prime example of just how tight the

■ Under the current system, a candidate can win the popular vote but lose the election.

By Jesse Elliott

With Florida's final vote tally still unknown and Vice President Al Gore appearing to have won the nation's popular vote, the race between Texas Gov. George W. Bush and Gore has called into question the validity of the Electoral College. Under the current system, it is possible for a candidate to win a plurality of the national popular vote but lose the presidency by not obtaining the necessary 270 out of 538 electoral votes. This hasn't happened since 1888, when Benjamin Harrison defeated Grover Cleveland, but it may occur this year. The number of each state's electoral votes is determined by adding the number of U.S. rep-

Remembering the skies over Germany

■ A local veteran of World War II recalls the moment 56 years ago when his life flashed in front of him.

By Anne Webbeking
The Daily Iowan

William Tucker, 77, a World War II veteran pilot, vividly remembers when his life flashed before his eyes on Oct. 7, 1944. After his P-47 plane got hit by gunfire from enemy planes over Germany, Tucker bailed out, hitting his knee on the edge of the cockpit on the way. Flying at about 18,000 feet, he fell more than 10,000 feet horrified, thinking that his parachute was never going to open. "They tell stories about that fact that if you think you're going to die, your entire life flashes before you," he said. "It's amazing how much can go through your mind in such a short period of time." Of three pilots in his squadron who were shot down, Tucker was the only one who was rescued by Allied soldiers. One died; the other was captured by German soldiers. The incident cost him part of his leg, but Tucker survived.

He earned the Silver Star for the events that had happened prior to this horrifying event. He had flown through 80 hostile enemy planes, allowing the remainder of his formation to strafe the German planes, which he had left in disarray. On Veterans Day — Saturday — the Military Affairs Association will honor him for his accomplishments in the military and also for his commitment to the community. Originally called Armistice Day, the day was created to honor veterans of World War I, which

UI among nation's leaders in online applications

■ The UI received 28 percent of its applications for the 2000-01 school year over the Web.

By Kellie Doyle
The Daily Iowan

More and more prospective freshmen and transfer students are turning to the online application form to gain admission to the UI, a trend university officials hope will eventually become the sole method of applying.

According to a recent survey of 455 schools by the National Association for College Admission Counseling, few of the nation's colleges are receiving as high a percentage of applications via the Internet as is the UI, which was ranked in the top 9 percent, said Michael Barron, the UI director of Admissions.

Of the 14,116 applications received in the fall of 2000 at the UI, 3,809 — 28 percent — came from the UI Web site, said Emil Rinderspacher, the UI senior associate director of admissions.

"It's Iowa's goal to increase that percentage," Barron said.

The Web site gives prospective students the option of either filling out the admission application and sending it online, or downloading and printing the form so they can send it by mail. Of the fall 2000 applications from the Web site, 22 percent came in electronically, Rinderspacher said. The remainder were the downloaded versions. "We think it's a great service and a more efficient way of doing business," he said.

The online form is more beneficial to students than the paper applications for several reasons, Barron said. It allows them to begin their application process and save it as they go, so they may complete it at their convenience. Also, the UI is able to contact students concerning their admission status earlier than paper forms would allow it to.

UI freshman Zarine Anklesaria said she took advantage of the download option on the Web site when she applied to the university. "It was really easy," she said. "All I had to do was click on the type of format I wanted and print it out."

For Admissions Office employees, the form saves time because it cuts back on the amount of data entry and lessens the chance of human error.

The online application form was first used in the fall of 1997 but only for undergraduate and transfer students. Nearly 6 percent of freshman applications and 12 percent of the transfer-student applications were received electronically that year. During the fall of 2000, 22 percent of the freshman applicants and 43 percent of the transfer applicants used the online form.

"We're really pleased by that," said Rinderspacher, who hopes every student will eventually be applying electronically.

Although prospective graduate and international students have not been able to apply electronically in the past, the UI is opening up this option to them within the next few weeks, Barron said.

Union wants pay raise

■ UI hospital workers are affected by a contract proposal that would take effect in July 2001.

By Mary Sedor
The Daily Iowan

Service Employees International Union-Local 199 presented its contract proposal to the state of Iowa Board of Regents Wednesday, asking for a 7 percent increase in wages.

The union represents nearly 2,000 professional and scientific health-care workers at UI Hospitals and Clinics. Voluntary negotiations for the two-year period beginning July 1, 2001, must be completed by March 15, 2001.

Kim Miller, the union's chief negotiator, said it wants to draw attention to the fact that the UIHC has had trouble retaining employees, which places patient care at risk.

"In the last two months, 148 staff members left, which is largely because the staff members who have been employed for a period of time not seeing any wage adjustments," she said.

One part of the staffing problem is the national shortage of nurses and other professional and scientific staff, Miller said. Union members believe this shortage can be relieved by staff retention, which would be influenced by the wage increase.

The union also proposed measures to reduce staff fatigue and patient-care risks by reducing the 16-hour shifts and by banning the mandatory overtime that many staff members are required to work.

The union proposes to regulate this through the creation of a Safe Staffing Committee to monitor staffing levels.

Another point the union called for was preventing the use of on-call and call-back for routine staffing and creating a weekend pay package.

"We are most anxious to deal with patient care in the next round," Miller said. "We feel these issues are important and hope the regents are on the same page with us."

Pauline Taylor, a union member and 26-year UIHC nurse, said she hopes the regents will accept the staffing issues in the proposal, which she says are permissive and don't have to be included in the regents' counter-proposal.

"Having a contract makes us feel we have more of a say in the decisions that affect our jobs and the delivery of patient care," she said.

Union members hope to have all of these issues addressed by January 2001.

Regents spokesman Joseph Flynn said the January time limit will not be possible. Under Iowa law, he said, the bargaining process will take several months, especially because the regents will not be aware of their economic capabilities until the middle of January.

"We saw the proposal for the first time, and we have not had sufficient time to appraise it," Flynn said.

He said the union's opening proposal, which traditionally lays out aspirations, has to be worked through and filtered to create a feasible agreement with the state.

"We hope to reach a voluntary agreement by the March deadline," Flynn said.

IMU redesign starts with Minnesota trip

■ A group of students and UI officials will travel to Minneapolis and Northfield seeking ideas.

By Tony Robinson
The Daily Iowan

Plans to renovate the IMU within the next five years are starting to take shape as a group of UI students and administrators travel to neighboring colleges on a quest to gain ideas.

Phillip Jones, the UI vice president for Student Services, and David Grady, the director of University Life, today will accompany five UI Student Government members to Minneapolis to tour the student unions of the University of Minnesota, which is currently being renovated, and that of St. Olaf College in Northfield, Minn., which recently completed an estimated $48 million union.

The weekend trip will provide ideas for funding and designing a renovated IMU, Grady said.

"Our students will converse with other students to discuss their experience during the renovations and how they have been affected by it," he said. UI Student Services has been mapping out changes to the IMU for roughly five years now, hoping to create a more student-centered campus environment, Jones said.

"(Viewing other student unions) is the next step in the process," he said. "It will increase student awareness of the need to improve the quality of student-life facilities."

A feasibility study of the project is being conducted by Brailsford & Dunleavy Inc., a facility-planning and project-management company that has gathered UI student ideas and concerns over the past year through surveys and organized focus groups. Students surveyed said the cost of food service, quality and variety at the IMU were the most important issues.

"I'd like to see students not in the basement so much," said UISG President Andy Stoll. "I'd like to make them the focus of the student union."

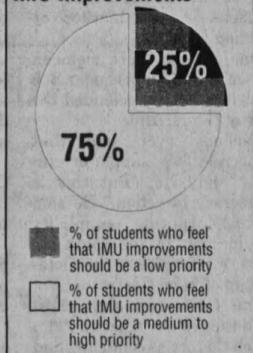

UI sophomore Jose Lechuga said the building needs a massive amount of work, especially in the dining areas.

"IMU food sucks, and the lines are too long," he said. "Renovations are long overdue."

Although funding for the additions would require students to pay an estimated $50 more in student fees per year, a 1999 survey said 52 percent of students supported extensive renovations with a $60 student fee per semester to fund the operation.

Although the majority of students said they would be willing to pay the money, Stoll said he wants the fees to be started after the renovations.

Students support IMU improvements

Source: UI Research DI/SS

"We don't want students to have to pay for something before it's even built," he said.

Funds for the project would most likely come from bonds, Stoll said.

Preliminary sketches for a redesigned IMU, which have been laid out by Student Services, consist of a few additions, but mostly gutting and reconfiguring the second floor.

Additional information about the renovations can be found at <http://www.uiowa.edu/~vpss/reports/purposeful/>.

Iowa City's blood supply is well behind what the Red Cross would like.

Blood supply is at an all-time low across the nation. In Iowa City, people walk right past blood drives without thinking twice.

Statistics supplied by the American Red Cross say that while 95 percent of people in the United States will need blood sometime in their lives, at the present time, only 5 percent of the population donates blood.

Last summer's blood supply was 37,000 pints below Iowa City's need, said Renee Uecker, the communications director for the American Red Cross.

"We want to always have a day and a half of blood supply on hand," she said. "Recently, we haven't had that."

Martha Wieland, the operations coordinator for the DeGowin Blood Clinic at UI Hospitals and Clinics, also reported a notable decline in such as the IMU, residence halls, the dental college and the Pappajohn Business Building.

Blood donors give one pint, or unit, of blood. Weiland says that on a yearly basis, UIHC needs 19,000 units of red blood cells, which translates into the need for 80 to 100 units a day.

These numbers may make it appear as though one unit of blood can't make much of a difference, but every pint of blood can be separated into platelets, plasma and red blood cells, potentially saving the lives of three patients.

Uecker said this is often the case with liver transplants, which require 20 units of red blood cells, 20 units of plasma and 10 units of platelets.

For the victim of an automobile accident, four to 40 units of blood may be necessary, while a heart surgery requires an average of six pints of red blood cells and six pints of platelets.

Anne Baker, a UI junior, said she has given blood through the American Red Cross and that she will donate again.

"I am aware of the blood-shortage problem," she said. "It is definitely serious, and if they want to increase the donors, blood drives may have to go back to giving out money."

While plasma centers pay in order to increase the amount of donations, blood banks have to be more careful because the blood is used directly in patients, Weiland said. Plasma is not as strictly regulated because it is used by drug companies for manufacturing byproducts of human blood, she said.

"We have to make sure that people give blood because they want to give blood. Their motives must be altruistic," she said. "They used to pay for blood, but that was stopped because some people would donate simply because they needed the money. When this began happening, blood centers weren't getting the best source of donors."

Although some potential donors may be deterred from giving blood, most people who are at least 17 years of age, weigh 110 pounds or more and are in good health can donate blood.

Registered nurses check each person individually for allergies, recent travel history and general health in the past to make sure their blood can be used.

Once a person is cleared to make a donation, a top priority becomes the privacy and the safety of the donor.

"When they come in, they are put behind a screened-in area, and there the tests are conducted. Everything is very confidential," Uecker said.

After a person gives blood, she said, there are always trained nurses on hand.

"All donors are observed for 15 minutes and given juice and cookies to replenish their system," Uecker said. "It is a very safe process."

Open sidewalk vault may lead to safety warning

The City Council discusses the safety issues surrounding open loading vaults.

By Natasha Lambropoulos
The Daily Iowan

In the wake of City Councilor Steven Kanner being asked to leave a downtown bar Monday afternoon for arguing that open sidewalk vaults pose a danger to pedestrians, some city councilors said they will look into sending letters to business owners about safety issues.

Kanner went into Joe's

Place, 115 Iowa Ave., Monday; upon noticing an unattended open sidewalk vault, he asked the manager to barricade the vault, he said. Kanner called the police after being ignored by the manager, he said.

"I went out of my way to make a point of it. I had other places to be, but I took the time because I had concerns about people who are disabled," said Kanner.

Joe's Place managers were unavailable for comment about the incident.

After reporting the matter to Iowa City police, Kanner brought the issue up at the Iowa City City Council work session Monday night.

Councilors briefly discussed the problem, and Kanner asked City Manager Steve Atkins to further investigate the issue.

"I would suggest sending a note to downtown businesses about the existing ordinance and a reminder about the woman who fell down a manhole two years ago," said Councilor Connie Champion.

On Sept. 24, 1998, UI rhetoric teaching assistant Priscilla McKinley, who is visually impaired, fell down a partially uncovered manhole at a construction site on the north side of the Biology Building.

According to the City Code, it is unlawful to leave open — or in an unsecured condition — any grating, vaults, vault doors, manholes or coverings of stairways or window wells or any other openings in or on public right of way.

Some councilors said they are aware that open unattended sidewalk vaults can be hazardous and they are concerned with the public's safety, but they feel people also have to be sensible and careful about where they walk.

However, Champion, the owner of Catherine's, 7 S. Dubuque St., said she has never noticed any unattended sidewalk vaults.

Iowa City resident Kerri Dole said she did not even know the vaults existed.

"I have never seen one open," she said.

Councilor Mike O'Donnell could not recall any dangerous incidents, other than McKinley's.

"I am an Iowa City native, and I can't remember any accidents involving loading vaults," he said. "This has been a way businesses have loaded and unloaded goods for a number of years."

Clinton, Arafat meet; violence persists

■ A Palestinian allegedly responsible for the deaths of three soldiers is killed by Israeli troops.

By Jamie Tarabay
Associated Press

BEIT SAHOUR, West Bank — Israeli helicopters swooped down on a pickup truck Thursday and fired rockets at a Palestinian gunman the army had been tracking for days, an attack Israel said signals a new policy that targets organizers of recent violence.

The killing of Hussein Abayat, described by Israel as the "terrorist mastermind" responsible for the deaths of three of its soldiers, came on the day President Clinton launched his latest attempt to salvage the peace process, meeting with Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat in Washington.

Two women passing by were killed in the attack in this bucolic village bordering Bethlehem, and 11 people were wounded, including another well-known Palestinian gunman.

Despite Prime Minister Ehud Barak's earlier pledges not to take pre-emptive actions — a policy he had said would destroy prospects for a return to the negotiating table — the move was a concession to army chiefs who have been eager to strike the Palestinians with greater force.

"It was a pre-emptive strike by intention," Deputy Defense Minister Ephraim Sneh told the Associated Press. "For sure it is a signal. If the game is a guerrilla war, we are the champions of the world."

More than 180 people have been killed in six weeks of clashes, the vast majority of them Palestinians. But targeting leaders raised the stakes, and the Palestinians swiftly pledged retaliation.

Hassan Asfour, a senior Palestinian negotiator known for his good relations with the Israelis, told Palestinian television he had warned them that "the long arm cannot reach out without having its fingers cut off."

Abayat was a commander in Fatah, Arafat's faction of the PLO, and a leaflet signed by the group appeared in Bethlehem on Thursday night calling Israeli army chief Lt. Gen. Shaul Mofaz a "wanted man."

Clinton was meeting with Arafat on Thursday and with Barak Nov. 12, probably his final effort to salvage a peace process he cultivated so carefully for seven years.

The president's national security adviser, Sandy Berger, declined to discuss the specifics of the incident Thursday but said: "Violence breeds violence, and we must find a way to break this cycle. It's important for people on both sides to do all they can to try to achieve that."

Mofaz predicted a rash of violence in the immediate future but said the time had come to show Israel's power.

"In the short run, this response will increase the activity of armed Fatah men in the area," he said to Israel radio. "But in the long run, everyone who wants to harm Israeli army soldiers and citizens of Israel must know that he won't be spared."

Senior Israeli military staff appeared almost eager to share details of the attack — a sign that it was intended as a warning.

"We have been watching him for quite a long time, looking for a good opportunity, whenever he is preparing some new attack," Maj. Gen. Giora Eiland, the army's operations chief, told the Associated Press.

Brown University hires Ivy League's first black president

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Ruth Simmons, a sharecropper's daughter who went on to earn a Ph.D. in Romance languages, was named president of Brown University on Thursday, becoming the first black to lead an Ivy League school.

Simmons, the 55-year-old president of Smith College, succeeds Gordon Gee, who resigned from Brown in February to become chancellor of Vanderbilt University.

Simmons grew up poor in Texas as the youngest of 12 children. Her father was a sharecropper, and her mother worked as a maid. She was educated in segregated schools, attended Dillard University in New Orleans and got her doctorate from Harvard.

New cancer treatment appears safe, promising

■ Testing provides some evidence that the drug may cut off a tumor's blood supply.

By Emma Ross
Associated Press

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands — Eagerly awaited test results on a much-publicized new cancer drug designed to stop tumors by cutting off their blood supply indicate the medication is safe and show promising signs it may help control the disease.

However, the results released Thursday suggest the drug endostatin is unlikely to be the kind of across-the-board cancer cure that many had hoped for.

The drug was tested on terminally ill cancer patients largely to assess its safety.

No dramatic recoveries have so far been seen among the 61 patients studied.

"Some patients benefited, but many did not," said one of the chief investigators, Dr. Roy Herbst, an assistant professor of medicine at the M.D. Anderson Cancer Center in Houston. "These patients were very sick. Most of their tumors are going to grow no matter what you do."

The best results were seen in a 50-year-old man with cancer in his jaw. His tumor shrank by 62 percent in eight weeks.

A tumor in the pancreas of another patient shrank by 19 percent after he had been taking the drug for a year.

In five other cases, the disease remained stable, with the tumor neither progressing nor shrinking.

Despite the lack of cures, the testing provided some evidence the drug may cut off a tumor's blood supply, as intended, offering hope the approach could work better in patients who are less desperately ill.

Blood flow through the tumors became less robust, and chemicals involved in blood-vessel creation diminished as patients were given increasingly higher doses of endostatin.

No serious side effects were noticed in any of the patients, the scientists said.

While some experts considered the test results "tremendously promising," others were cautiously optimistic.

The recent discovery that angiogenesis, or the creation of new blood vessels, is vital to a tumor's survival has been the basis for the hottest area in cancer research.

Drugs that attack the process are called angiogenesis inhibitors. Endostatin is one of dozens of such drugs, which are at varying stages of development and attack blood-vessel growth from different angles.

representatives and senators in the state. Iowa has seven because it has five representatives and two senators. The District of Columbia gets three votes, despite not being represented in Congress.

This system reflects America's status as a representative, not a direct, democracy. Writers of the Constitution feared that if the candidates were only concerned with the popular vote, they would focus their efforts in large metropolitan areas, said David Redlawsk, a UI assistant professor of political science. This would be a more efficient use of the candidates' time and resources, but it could cause them to neglect the concerns of citizens in less-densely populated regions.

"If there were no Electoral College, we wouldn't have seen the candidates here in Iowa," he said. "If we had a straight-forward popular vote system, they'd spend most of their time in New York, California and other big states."

Redlawsk noted that it is important to remember that the Electoral College was one of the many compromises in the Constitutional Convention.

UI senior Jennifer Jaehrling, a member of Students for Bush, said that even though the system makes sense, it adds to feelings of voter apathy among the American public.

"It causes some people to believe that their single vote doesn't matter after all," she said. "You would see an increase in voter turnout if the system were changed to a popular vote count."

A change to a direct democracy — where the popular vote determines the outcome of a presidential election — would require a constitutional amendment. Redlawsk said that is not likely to happen.

UI sophomore Jackie Hockett said she supports a system in which each state's electoral votes are proportional to that state's popular vote. "All states should be like Maine and Nebraska," she said. "You can't claim that an entire state is uniformly in support of one single candidate."

Maine and Nebraska are only two states that employ a proportional system.

States decide for themselves whether to use a proportional representation system, Redlawsk said.

Whatever system is used, Jaehrling said, she isn't worried about the controversy casting a shadow over the next president's governing ability.

"I am more skeptical of the electoral vote method of election as a result of this race," she said. "In the end, though, whether it is Bush or Gore who wins, I will support the outcome because that is the system we have in place."

Redlawsk proposed his own solution to stop the controversy.

"If Bush is elected, he should instruct the state electors to vote him in as president and (Sen. Joe) Lieberman in as vice president. If Gore is chosen, he should do the same with Cheney.

"It'll never happen," Redlawsk laughed. "But it would be the ultimate political maneuver — a true reach across the aisle, a sign to the American people that says 'We're not going to do things the old way.'" ended on Nov. 11, 1918. The day was officially renamed Veterans Day in 1954 in the United States, making Nov. 11 the day to honor veterans of all wars.

Tucker will be honored at a dinner reception at the Radisson Hotel, 2525 N. Dodge St., and will receive the Will J. Hayek Award, which has been given for more than 20 years. It is named for Will J. Hayek, who served in World War I and World War II.

"I'm going to be very proud," his wife, Betty Tucker, said. "Probably a little tearful."

Tucker, who also earned the Purple Heart and the Air Medal, came back to the 'States in January 1945 and finished 11 months of hospitalization for his injuries. He began classes at the UI later that year and completed his undergraduate degree and law degree in five years. He then practiced law in the area until four years ago, when he retired.

At Tucker's home in North Liberty, he has a corner dedicated to his service during the war — as, he said, almost all veteran pilots probably do. A picture of him when he was 19 in his training garb and a formal picture in his officer's uniform when he was 21 hang on the wall, and a little model plane like the one he once flew are peaceful reminders of his military career.

Tucker still remembers the exact dates and exact places of the war. He also remembers his four years, six months and 15 days of active duty in military service very vividly.

At the age of 16, Tucker joined the Iowa National Guard illegally so that he could get a dollar a week spending money.

On his 19th birthday, Tucker heard about the bombing of Pearl Harbor, which had happened the day before in Hawaii, on Dec. 7, 1941.

Tucker and seven other area veterans will also be honored at halftime of the Iowa football game against Northwestern on Saturday.

"Many vets gave their life, limb or more for their country," he said. "This is something that is lost in 15 pages of a history book."

 Jump-start your newspaper journalism career with a solid program that boasts four Pulitzer Prize winners among its alumni - the Pulliam Journalism Fellowship. The Fellowship offers myriad career opportunities; in fact, a Pulliam Fellow from our first class of 1974, Barbara Henry, now serves as president and publisher of The Indianapolis Star. Moreover, a new graduate of our year 2000 class has just been hired as a full-time staff reporter at The Indianapolis Star.
 Now entering its 28th year, the 2001 Pulliam Journalism Fellowship helps build a bridge from the classroom to the newsroom. Fellows are assigned to The Indianapolis Star or The Arizona Republic in Phoenix for 10 weeks each summer as staff reporters. We award 20 fellowships annually. The stipend is $5,775.
 Traditionally, our fellowships have been open only to graduating college seniors. In 2001, we will be expanding eligibility to include college sophomores and juniors as well as seniors pursuing a career in newspaper journalism. We will be accepting applications for our Summer 2001 program in September 2000.

Instead of debating the Electoral College ...

End political suppression

The Internet has become one of the greatest tools of all time for democracy. As a public forum for debate, the Internet is unsurpassed. Anyone can put their views out for the entire world to see for a tiny fraction of the cost of using print or televised media.

That is, unless they live in China.

On Tuesday, the Chinese government announced laws aimed at limiting the Internet's possible use as a tool for political dissent. These laws allow only state-run media organizations to set up news sites and force general portal sites to use state-generated stories and seek special permission to print foreign stories or their own material. Another set of laws regarding chat rooms and bulletin boards requires moderators to allow only approved material.

This kind of governmental totalitarianism is exactly the opposite of what the Internet represents. The Chinese government needs to realize that the Internet is not now, nor will it ever be, under its control. Any attempt to regulate free speech on the Internet is an exercise in futility and should be abandoned.

The Chinese Communist Party (CCP) is walking a perilous path. It wishes to bring the economic prosperity of Western nations to China, but it does not want all the political baggage, namely democracy and free speech. Regulating the Internet is its latest attempt at this. The CCP wants to promote the Internet's growth in order to harness its economic power, but at the same time the CCP wishes to stamp out all forms of political dissidence. Although this may be possible with traditional media, it is virtually impossible with the Internet. Trying to kill all antigovernment speech on the Internet would be at least as hard as attempting to clear it of pornography.

When it comes to controlling the Internet, the CCP will fail. With the number of Internet users rapidly increasing throughout the world, policing the online world is impossible. There is no agency in the world that has the capability to police every bulletin board, every Web page and every chat room. Hopefully, the CCP's failure will be a lesson to totalitarian regimes throughout the world: The spread of the Internet marks the end of political suppression.

Elect to obey the rules

One nation, under God, indivisible.

But from the look of it, God has one hell of a point spread to beat.

Days after the election, it seems America is no closer to cutting the issues to get to the matter at hand.

The Will of the People: Appeals to the will of the people are nothing new. In a democracy, such will is the law of the land.

But the United States is not a democracy. The United States is founded upon a federalist government, one in which states are the basic level of government. This is the reason Gore's popular-vote victory, while indicative of the national mood, will mean nothing in terms of ascension to the presidency.

A ridiculously outdated construct? Certainly. But that's the law of the land. Efforts to bend or break the law by either side may win the presidency, but it will lose the nation. America operates (nominally) under the rule of law. The same rule that delivered the right to vote to women and minorities — the rule of law that protects our speech and the sanctity of our homes — governs our national elections. The Electoral College can and should be amended away. But right now, it's all we've got.

The Ballot that Shook the World: In the end, the election came down not to Ralph Nader but to Pat Buchanan.

In Palm Beach County, Fla., over 3,000 voters indicated a choice of Buchanan on the ballot. The ballot's layout allegedly lent itself to mistakenly choosing Buchanan instead of Gore. Moreover, 19,000 ballots were invalidated for having carried the selection of multiple candidates, presumably Buchanan and Gore.

But before we jump to conclusions, let's look at the ballot designed by a Democratic official, the ballot sent to all voters two weeks prior to the election, the ballot any cognizant individual could understand. Unless we want to throw out Florida's electoral system for the sake of the elusive Moron Vote, we have no choice but to accept the ballots as submitted. Recount them, ensure their accuracy, look for fraud. Carry out the system, but don't crucify it.

Were all of those choices made on purpose? No — even Buchanan rejected that notion. But some of them were for him. How many? We don't know. We won't know. A ballot cast is a ballot set in stone. What we hold in our hearts should not be second-guessed by judges, county officials or partisan leaders.

The Calm at the Eye of the Storm: From my vantage point on a bench in Washington, D.C.'s Lafayette Park, across the street from the White House and away from the warm glow of MSNBC-FoxNews-CNN pundits, you wouldn't know that the world was watching.

Thursday was the White House's 200th birthday. In that time, it has housed 41 presidents. It has stood up to Evil Empires, nurtured its citizens through famine and depression, stood proudly at the Potomac as the armies of the South poised themselves to shatter this house divided. It was built up, burned to the ground, and raised again. But can it bear the burden of "illegitimate" presidency? A Gore presidency won by legal briefs, not ballots? A Bush presidency rejected by the popular vote but embraced by an antiquated Electoral College?

America, America, God shed His grace on thee.

Des Moines is doing its part to 'save the world' ...

Don't give up recycling programs

The slogan "reduce, reuse, recycle," may no longer be heard in Des Moines.

The Des Moines City Council is considering a proposal to switch from a curbside recycling program that picks up paper, glass, tin and plastic to a paper-only system. The city has already shifted from weekly curbside recycling to pickup every two weeks. And now it is once again cutting back by accepting only paper, newspaper and cardboard. If residents wish to recycle any other materials, they must take them to other locations or trash bins.

Passing this cutback on recycling in Des Moines sets a poor example for the rest of Iowa. Recycling has always been an important issue to residents who see it as a way to do their part to help "save the environment." Instead of cutting back on recycling programs in the state, government agencies need to support them.

It has been a state goal for many years to reduce the amount of trash taken to Iowa's landfills. While the amount of trash has been reducing in the state, recycling programs are also expensive, which is one of the reasons Des Moines is considering cutting back on them.

According to an article in the Des Moines Register, the city's curbside recycling program, Curb It, "has some of the highest participation rates of any program in the country and keeps nearly 20,000 tons of trash annually out of the landfill." However, it costs about $3 million a year.

Recycling has always been a problem financially, but isn't it worth the money to maintain the environment and to prevent further loss of land because of extending landfill space or taking even more from the land?

Curbside recycling is convenient for residents and may be the only way some people can recycle. If it weren't as easy as setting the recyclables out in the driveway, many residents might choose not to recycle.

Curbside recycling is an important basic step in the recycling process. Iowa City offers curbside recycling for paper, tin, cardboard and plastic (it excludes glass because of safety concerns). On trash pick-up days, the blue recycling bins can be seen outside many homes, showing the great amount of support there is for recycling. Des Moines needs to rethink its plan to further cut back its recycling program and realize that it is what its residents want.

The end of Election 2000 only brings more issues

Wow, that was close.

But because the dust has settled, all of us who were so worried about the end of the status quo can now rest assured. To use the vernacular, "It's all good."

Through the good graces of American political duopoly, there will still be no federal investment in the development of solar power, we can expect the federal government to steal 7.54 percent of our income for old people (who often have more money than we do), we will see anywhere from 700,000 to 800,000 people put in jail for marijuana possession every year, and our "advisers" in Columbia will continue to help the Colombian army fight the "narco-trafficking communist bad guys" (or whoever).

Oh, sure, there might be a few changes. After all, there probably is still too much competition in the banking and finance industry. And all those different media outlets really will not do. A merger here, a little more deregulation there — soon it will be the 19th century all over again!

For the rest of us, now that the sideshow has ended, we can get to work. There are two issues that come to mind: drinking/alcohol policy and Iowa City City Council elections scheduled for November 2001.

For those of us who live in Iowa City, we have noticed the City Council wants to "do something" about underage drinking and excessive or binge drinking. My initial reaction to its discussion and

"proposals" to deal with the "problem" is to ask, "What is the problem?" Councilors, police, RAs, Mary Sue Coleman and bar owners all have a different perspective on "the problem."

This is typical. Many of us are accustomed to older people, such as parents, teachers, cops and politicians, telling younger folks "there is a problem." What I find unique in this situation is that at least two councilors, Steve Kanner and Irvin Pfab, are willing to LISTEN to the views of students and others who can provide other "assessments of both the problem and potential solutions."

Both Kanner and Pfab have expressed interest in and invited my input for a discussion on "alcohol policy" and what, if anything, the City Council can and/or should do. These men are open to input from others as well: I believe they are open to considerations of ways "we" want to think about drinking, how "we" want police to interact with students and folks in bars, and other related topics. If anyone cares to help the City Council define "our" objectives and propose do-able solutions to make Iowa

City a better place — i.e., do real politics that really matter — I suggest he or she contact Pfab or Kanner at City Council Office, 410 E. Washington St., Iowa City, IA 52240.

To the second issue, there will be local elections in November 2001. Because someone can get elected to the City Council — you know, the people who make decisions on alcohol policy, parking, pass vague "disorderly house" laws, etc. — with as few as 6,000 votes, 10 to 20 student votes can really make a difference. You see, while some resumé puffers like to say that they "worked" on the campaign of either Bush or Gore, we all know that stuffing envelopes and making phone calls in Iowa did not affect the national election. (How does one sue for ballot fraud in West Palm Beach, Fla., anyway?) By contrast, here in Iowa City, through the local Green Party or Libertarian Party, a person can get to know others who care about more than holding an office for the sake of power and create a campaign. You can join up with like-minded people who have a genuine political philosophy. I hate to disappoint our newer residents, but those so-called differences between Dems and Reps at the national level evaporate when it comes to city politics — does anyone care to call paving a street a matter of "liberal" versus "conservative" principles?

I know at least one student who wants to help folks get elected to City Council and who wants to practice grassroots politics. If you want to do some real politics in this area, send a note to him at matt-blizek@uiowa.edu.

Politics surround us every day. Participate where it counts. Carpe diem.

It's always nice to know people who are in the biz. Having connections in the music world will get you places. Just ask Dennis Flemion of the Milwaukee-based band The Frogs, which will perform tonight at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St.

Add Man Planet from Minneapolis and Underground Lightbulb from Chicago to the mix, and audience members will triple their listening pleasure as each band performs a wide variety of music — with alternative and indie rock and lyrics chock full of drugs, sex and everything in between.

With pyrotechnics, crazy outfits and a color palette of last names, Man Planet promises a wild night. Band members Jefferson White, Tim Crimson, Pete Greene and Mark Cobalt all chose a color for a last name that coordinates with the color of their hair, the color of their outfit and the color of their equipment.

"[The show's] going to be a spectacle. People need to keep their eyes open," said Jim Weber, the band's manager.

Man Planet is quite a theatrical band, said Weber. The band's inspiration comes from groups such as KISS, he added.

"They're very glam, but their music stands out on its own," Weber said.

Contrasting Man Planet's catchy set will be Underground Lightbulb, made up of vocalist/guitarist Adam Fanning and drummer Ryan Young.

Fanning said the band's music is "purely rock 'n' roll because it's a dying form."

publicity photo

The Milwaukee-based band The Frogs will bring its controversial music to Gabe's tonight along with Man Planet and Underground Lightbulb. "We made fun of a lot of bands in our lyrics, which is ironic because I've met a lot of people from the groups we've talked about," said the Frogs' drummer Dennis Flemion.

The duo approaches its music with a sense of desperation, he said.

"Music is a way to deal with everything that's happening in your life," Fanning said. "I like to smash my guitar sometimes, especially after playing a song that's important to me."

Underground Lightbulb is honored to be playing with The Frogs, Fanning said, because it's one band his looks to for inspiration.

The Frogs were "outside mainstream music even before alternative music was around," said Flemion. He started the controversial band 20 years ago with his brother Jimmy Flemion. The group now has a Web site, www.thefrogs.net, which lists tour dates, song lyrics and trivia.

Many people believe The Frogs' 1989 album, It's Only Right and Natural, is one of the band's most controversial albums because of its off-the-cuff lyrics and in-your-face music. The lyrics mock famous people, which is ironic, Dennis Flemion said, because he has met many of the people they wrote about.

"I certainly wouldn't make fun of those bands today," he said.

The list of celebrities Dennis Flemion has met and worked with could prove to anyone he has led an exciting life.

He said he has met Sinead O'Connor, the members of Nirvana, Metallica's Lars Ulrich, Wendy Melvoin and Lisa Coleman of The New Power Generation, Beck and numerous other celebrities.

Dennis Flemion has also worked with Smashing Pumpkins and Eddie Vedder of Pearl Jam. He said he dressed up in a rat costume to perform on stage with Smashing Pumpkins during the European MTV Music Awards.

"I knew we had arrived when I was at a Virgin Records party and heard a song by Beck. He had sampled a bit of our music," he said.

The 'Dance' is over for Brooks

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country superstar Garth Brooks has filed for divorce after nearly 14 years of marriage.

Brooks, 38, cited irreconcilable differences with his wife, Sandy, in a complaint filed Monday. According to court papers, the couple has been separated since March 1999.

Couric tops out

NEW YORK (AP) — Fresh from NBC's election coverage, "Today" host Katie Couric has come out on top — literally.

In the December issue of Vanity Fair, the diminutive Couric is pictured sprawled across the brawny shoulders and 54-inch chest of Olympic gold medalist Rulon Gardner.

The wrestler and Couric are featured in the magazine's 2000 Hall of Fame section.

Richard Hatch, the million-dollar winner of CBS's "Survivor" is also pictured — in the buff, as he was famed for appearing on the show.

Also pictured are such stars as actress Jane Fonda, sprinter Marion Jones, golfer Tiger Woods and Harry Potter novelist J.K. Rowling.

RECOUNT

suffice, with the Gore campaign planning to wait at least until Nov. 17, the deadline for counting of overseas absentee ballots mailed back to Florida.

"We don't think we're on the edge of a constitutional crisis, and we don't intend to try and provoke a constitutional crisis," said Warren Christopher, the former secretary of State who is representing Gore in the Florida recount.

James A. Baker III, also a former secretary of State who is representing Bush, said the impasse should be settled without delay. He said it is "important that we complete this because the presidential election, of course, is on hold, and that affects the position of the United States in a number of ways, particularly internationally."

Christopher called that a self-serving myth.

"The presidency goes on until Jan. 20 in a vigorous way, and none of our allies are in any doubt as to who's in charge of the government until Jan. 20," he said. President Clinton is.

The two former diplomats were not sounding very diplomatic Thursday in the tense standoff over the 25 Florida electoral votes that will award the White House.

For the present, the uncertainty is unsettling, but no crisis. The stock market dropped sharply on Thursday, perhaps because of it, but then largely bounced back.

"We do not want delay," said William Daley, Gore's campaign chairman. "What we want, however, is democracy fulfilled."

He said that means Gore. The Republicans say it means Bush. Neither party is going to yield to anything short of decisive numbers, and getting to them will be a challenge.

Should Bush's lead in Florida vanish, the Republicans surely would raise their own challenges.

Daley said the Gore campaign already is working "in support of legal actions" in Florida focusing on what they insist was a flawed and illegal ballot in Palm Beach County that led to invalidation of the votes of about 19,000 people there. He said the confusing ballot also led many voters to punch in votes for Pat Buchanan when they were trying to vote for Gore, he and contended that cost the vice president about 2,000 votes.

anticipation of an announcement scheduled for 5 p.m. to declare whether victory belonged to Republican candidate George W. Bush or Democratic candidate Al Gore. The announcement never came.

Brian Young is a devoted George W. Bush fan, but unlike a nation that remains nearly equally divided over the fate of the presidency, he's sure of one thing: The popular vote should supersede the Electoral College.

As the North Carolina group stood outside the White House, ballots were recounted in Florida to end the state of limbo that has plunged the nation into three days of uncertainty since Tuesday's general election.

"You don't have to win the popular vote; you just have to win the electoral vote," said Brian about the presidential race. "I think you should win the popular vote."

Only a few tourists endured a slight drizzle Thursday evening to get a glimpse of the White House and speculate about the future of the presidency.

"The (White House) is great, but I wish Bill Clinton wasn't in it," Brian Young said. Among the four, there was only a lone Democrat — Skovira.

"Gore," he said. "I just like Gore."

"I hope Bush wins," Moore said as everyone but Skovira agreed.

But standing in awe before the White House Thursday evening, they managed to maintain their civility and friendship.

And like the rest of the nation, they remained steeped in uncertainty as Florida officials announced that another recount would occur Saturday.

The White House was one of the last stops for the group as they prepared for a 200-mile bus ride home.

"Stinks, doesn't it?" Brian Young asked, as they left the White House, unsure of its next occupants.

Despite their political differences, that's one thing the boys can agree on.

much. I'm not too worried about it either way."

Neither are Lucas Erwan, 27, or Christian Gaulin, 29, who were taking pictures of the White House Thursday afternoon. The two men are friends from France and came to the United States last week for vacation.

"Bush or Gore — we don't care. It's the same to us," Gaulin said.

To them, the election has been more entertaining than anything. They can't believe how long it has taken to decide which candidate will run the country.

"It's like something that would happen in Africa or the Middle East," Erwan said. "The United States is very powerful. It's very funny what's happening."

Bush supporter Jim Kelley, 40, from Toledo, Ohio, came to Washington with his wife, Patti, over the weekend for a wedding. The couple stayed to see the local reaction after the new president was elected.

Is he disappointed that D.C. is quieter than he had hoped? "Not really. I don't know if we'll ever see this again," he said. "This is bizarre."

Recount fever may hit Iowa

race was in Iowa. The county reported the closest results in the nation with Bush and Gore tied at 4,025 votes each.

Betty Ellerhoff, the Cedar County auditor, said she was surprised at the results in what is typically a strong Republican county, but, she said, the highly publicized tie could more than likely not be the final outcome.

"These are unofficial results that are subject to change," she said. "We could still have absentee ballots to count if they have the proper postmark of Nov. 6 on them."

Ellerhoff would not comment on the specific number of absentee ballots; she said they will be opened on Nov. 13 and reviewed by the Cedar County Board of Supervisors.

In order to ask for a recount, Iowa law calls for Bush to personally submit a request to each of Iowa's 99 county auditors. All requests would have to be received by 5 p.m. on Nov. 16 or 17, depending on the county.

Under normal circumstances, the person asking for a recount in Iowa must post a $1,000 bond, which is lost if the outcome of the election is not changed. A bond would not be required in this case, however, because the difference is less than 1 percent of the total vote for the office.

A reversal in the Iowa popular vote majority from Gore to Bush is unlikely if a recount would be administered, said Cary Covington, a UI associate professor of political science. But he said that if either presidential candidate has doubts about the outcome of any state, he should consider a recount.

Iowa has the opportunity to affect the election outcome only if other states such as Arizona and Wisconsin follow suit in recounting the popular vote results, he said. Oregon (with seven electoral votes) and New Mexico (five) have yet to announce their results. CNN has declared that Gore won New Mexico — as of 7:44 p.m. Thursday, Gore led Bush, 49 percent to 47 percent. Ralph Nader had 4 percent of the vote.

"Any one state by itself isn't going to do it besides Florida or California," which hold 25 and 54 electoral votes respectively, Covington said.

States primarily request voter recounts if problems arise in balloting — for example, the ballot controversy in Palm Beach County, Fla., said Arthur Miller, a UI political science professor, who added that no similar controversies have risen in Iowa.

"My feeling is that this is sort of a recount fever going on among states," he said. "Usually in the end — and we'll find out how it turns up in Florida — the person with the lead maintains the lead. It's basically a waste of time and effort."

Iowa's final popular vote count reflected previous election results, Miller said. Throughout Iowa, Republican and Democratic support is evenly dispersed and the state shifts between the two parties, he said.

In 1992 and 1996, Iowa's seven electoral votes went to Bill Clinton, a pattern repeated in the 2000 election, Miller said.

Wrestling team to hold wrestle-offs

The defending national champion Iowa wrestling team will be holding its annual wrestle-offs Saturday on the floor of Carver-Hawkeye Arena. The event, which is free and open to the public, starts at approximately 9:15 a.m.

Iowa returns national champion 133-pound Eric Juergens, along with All-Americans Doug Schwab, Jody Strittmatter, T.J. Williams and Mike Zadick. The Hawkeyes also return Gabe McMahan, Jessman Smith and Matt Anderson from last year's undefeated squad. W.I.N. Magazine picked the Hawkeyes as the pre-season No. 1 team in the country.

The Hawkeyes open their season on Friday, Nov. 24 as they compete against Luther and Loras College in Maquoketa, Iowa, which is Juergens' hometown. Iowa will host the 2001 NCAA Championships that run from March 15-17, at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Winning streak?

Iowa seniors play their last home game against surprising first-place Northwestern.

By Jeremy Schnitker
 The Daily Iowan

Back in August, this weekend's matchup with Northwestern was supposed to feature two of the worst teams in the Big Ten. Well, a lot has happened since August — for one team, at least.

Northwestern, which finished second to last in the Big Ten last year, gave its offense a facelift in the offseason and instilled a new attitude in Wildcat football. As a result, it leads the Big Ten in offense, is tied with Purdue on top of the conference and is ranked No. 12 in the country.

For Iowa, the changes have been a little more subtle. With two wins, the Hawkeyes are better than they were last year. But, they're still tied for next to last in the conference.

Northwestern has seen the quick turnaround that some coaches live for and a pass-happy, no-huddle offense that defensive coordinators lose sleep over.

When he looks at the things Northwestern has done since last year, Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz says it is not hard to see success.

"I really respect Randy Walker as a person, as a football coach," Ferentz said. "It's not hard at all. Those types of things make you feel good. To me that's what's fun about the Big Ten: to see teams climbing up the ladder. It's the land of opportunity."

Iowa could be hearing opportunity knock on its door. The Hawkeyes are coming off their second big win of the season over an upper-echelon Big Ten team, not to mention beating Penn State in its 95,000-seat stadium.

In 1999, the Hawkeyes didn't win a single conference game. This would be as good a time as any to get a win streak going because the Hawks have yet to put two

Iowa gets Athletes in Action

Five recruits who made names with offense have to play up to new standards.

By Mike Kelly
 The Daily Iowan

Whoever gets significant playing time this season on the Iowa basketball team may not be the hot shooter or the most tenacious rebounder. Steve Alford says those things are important, but the name of the game this year is defense.

The Hawkeyes will get their first shot to prove their defensive prowess tonight at 7 when Iowa takes on Athletes in Action in an exhibition game at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

For Iowa's five freshman, one of their adjustments to college basketball is on defense. All of the freshmen made names for themselves in high school with their potent offense.

"Brodie Boyd may have a great career here, but he is probably not going to do that scoring 3,000 points," Alford said. "None of (the five freshmen) got recognized for holding the guy they were guarding scoreless in high school."

Expect the Hawkeyes to back away from the full-court press, which they employed a good deal last season. Instead, Alford says, his team is focusing more on its half-court sets and spending a disproportionate amount of time in practice doing defensive drills.

However, those practices have had their share of no-shows, albeit not the kind that will get a player benched. Among the newcomers, only Courtney Scott has escaped the first three weeks of practice unscathed.

Injuries have slowed Sean Sonderleiter, Glen Worley and Boyd while a 102-degree temperature kept Jared Reiner out of practice for a few days.

One Hawkeye who has not been slowed at all in the pre-season is Reggie Evans. The junior-college transfer has worked his way into a starting role, giving the Hawkeyes a true power forward, something they lacked last season.

Alford praised Evans' work ethic, citing numerous instances in practice when Evans does not want to come out of a workout. He said the Hawkeyes have a rule that a player can rest for only two plays — Evans does not stay out even that long.

"The court is like my home," Evans said. "Sometimes, I just get mad when people try to come in for me. I'm like, 'Go get someone else.'"

Evans is stepping into the role played mostly last season by Duez Henderson. Evans outweighs Henderson by 45 pounds, so Henderson is searching for a new position.

Over the summer, Henderson said he shot a basketball constantly, and Alford says he has accepted the new challenge and stepped up his game.

"In a sense, I am almost a newcomer on the perimeter," Henderson said. "It has gone pretty smoothly, but it has been an adjustment."

The Hawkeyes take on the Hungarian National Team on Nov. 14 and open the regular season with a game against Wisconsin-Milwaukee on Nov. 19.

Men to host last home dual of year

Iowa swimmers and divers take on Purdue this weekend at the Field House pool.

By Julie Matolo
 The Daily Iowan

Almost an entire season lies ahead for the Iowa men's swimming and diving team, but already the Hawkeye senior class will compete in front of its home crowd for the last time.

The Hawkeyes will compete in their second and final home meet of the season. Iowa's seniors are looking for a win against Purdue this weekend in a meet that has snuck up on a class that has had little time to realize this is their final season of Hawkeye competition.

"Honestly, it does not feel any different because it is so early in the season," said senior Jay Glenn. "We still have plenty of practices left in the pool, so we are nowhere near being done yet."

Glenn led Iowa in its first meet of the season two weeks ago in front of the Hawkeye crowd. After Glenn won the 220-meter freestyle and senior Ales Abersek won 200-meter butterfly, Iowa could not keep up with the Wisconsin Badgers in the dual meet.

Dual meet No. 2 will take place today in the Field House Pool at 4 p.m. against Purdue. The Hawkeyes will use this weekend as a dress rehearsal for their main focus of the season, Big Ten Championships and NCAA Nationals.

"Last year, Purdue beat us at the Big Tens, so we are looking for a little revenge," said Hawkeye head coach John Davey.

"They have a little more depth than we do, but talent-wise, we are comparable. Each meet, we look toward the big picture of trying to prepare ourselves for the Big Ten Championships."

Abersek, last year's Big Ten champion in both the 100- and 200-meter butterfly, enters the season unsure if he has another remaining season as a Hawkeye. After transferring to Iowa from the University of Ljubljana in Slovenia, the possibility of one remaining year of eligibility is in question.

"I hope we win the 200-meter

Last year, Purdue beat us at the Big Tens, so we are looking for a little revenge.

Women prepare for first meet of season

Iowa will host a dual on Saturday morning.

By Julie Matolo
 The Daily Iowan

When the Iowa women's swimming and diving team began its season two weeks ago, it chose the complete opposite of easing into competition mode. The season-opening weekend brought back-to-back competition that involved three of the nation's top-ranked teams.

This weekend, the Hawkeyes are ready to make their first home appearance of the season, and they are not easing up on the challenge of taking on tough competition.

"I expect us to race well this weekend," said head coach Garland O'Keefe. "We have two dual meets under our belts, so we are expecting improvements. Everyone has things to work on, and I am looking for improvements this meet."

The Hawkeyes will host a double dual Saturday morning with a pair of Big Ten schools. Ohio State and Purdue will challenge the Hawkeyes in the Field House pool beginning at

William Penn dropping out of NCAA

OSKALOOSA, Iowa (AP) — William Penn University is dropping out of the 77-year-old Iowa Conference and dropping its membership with the NCAA, the school announced.

Mike Laird, Athletics Director, wouldn't elaborate on the reason, but said the school wants to join the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics

The NIAA allows schools to award scholarships for athletic performance but the NCAA Division III does not, he said.

William Penn President Thomas Boyd said the NIAA is appealing to the school both academically and athletically. It has higher academic standards than NCAA Division III, he said.

Indians offer Ramirez seven-year deal

CLEVELAND — Unwilling to meet Manny Ramirez's demand for $200 million over 10 years, the Cleveland Indians offered the free agent outfielder a seven-year contract worth more than $119 million.

The Indians faxed a counterproposal on Thursday averaging about $17 million, according to a baseball management source speaking on the condition he not be identified.

The source said the Indians' counteroffer was for seven years and that the per-year value was "slightly more" than the $17 million per season average the Toronto Blue Jays will pay first baseman Carlos Delgado beginning next season.

An Indians spokesman confirmed but refused to discuss its contents.

IOWA HAWKEYES

VS.

NORTHWESTERN WILDCATS

11:10 a.m. Saturday Kinnick Stadium • TV: KGAN • Radio: 96.5 FM and 800 AM

OFFENSE

Northwestern has the best offense in the Big Ten, and Iowa has the worst.

INTANGIBLES

Both teams are coming off huge wins. This is the seniors' last game at Kinnick, but Northwestern is playing for a bowl. Emotion for the future outweighs emotion for the past.

Who has the edge?

By Mike Kelly

COACHES

Randy Walker and Kirk Ferentz were in the same rookie class. In terms of wins, Walker has done far more in his second year than Ferentz has. The X-factor here is talent level, but I have to call the obvious.

SPECIAL TEAMS

Iowa has the defending Big Ten special teams Player of the Week in Nate Kaeding but Northwestern has better stats in both return categories. Tie.

DEFENSE

Both teams have poor defenses, but Northwestern is a little better against the pass than Iowa is. Actually, Northwestern is a little better against the run as well.

Cubs name new minor league coaches

CHICAGO (AP) — The Chicago Cubs on Thursday appointed former major league catcher Bruce Kimm as manager of their Triple-A team in

Des Moines. The 49-year-old Kimm, who played for Detroit, the Cubs and the Chicago White Sox, managed the club's Double-A Orlando farm team in 1995 and 1996. He also was a major-league coach for 12 years with stops in Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, San Diego, Florida and Colorado. This year, he scouted for the Rockies. Pat Listach, the AL Rookie of the Year in 1992 at Milwaukee, will be the Iowa Cubs' new hitting instructor while Jerry Reuss, who played for 22 major-league seasons, will be the pitching coach.

Dave Trembley will manage at Single-A Daytona, replacing Richie Zisk, who returns to being hitting coach. Julio Garcia is the new manager at Single-A Lansing, and Steve McFarland takes over at Single-A Boise.

Check the Hawkeyes out! Iowa Wrestle-Offs

Saturday, Nov. 11, 9 a.m. at Carver Hawkeye Arena

the march for another national championship begins

The march for another national championship begins in earnest for Coach Jim Zalesky's defending national champion University of Iowa wrestling team in December when the Hawkeyes follow a December 2 date at Oklahoma State by opening a six-match home schedule against Iowa State on Friday, December 8, in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

In January, the Hawkeyes entertain Hofstra on January 13, and Big Ten rival Wisconsin on January 28. The action heats up in February with meets scheduled February 11 against Michigan State, February 16 against Ohio State and Feb. 18 against Minnesota.

It's college wrestling at its very best. The numbers don't lie: 20 national championships, 28 Big Ten Conference championships, 235 All-Americans. If you want to watch the very best in collegiate wrestling, you come to Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

Rams not a heavy favorite against the Giants this time

■ Injuries are the reason the Giants are only a two-point underdog.

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

A few weeks ago, the St. Louis Rams probably would have been favored by a touchdown or more against the New York Giants — even in the Meadowlands.

This week, without Kurt Warner and Marshall Faulk, the Rams are just two-point favorites against a team that has an identical 7-2 record. And even two might be too much.

Consider:

- The Giants are second in the NFL against the run. The Rams, at home, gained just 31 yards on the ground in their last week to Carolina.
- The Giants have the second-best rushing offense in the NFL. The Rams are 24th against the run, meaning the Giants could control the clock.
- The swirling winds in East Rutherford, N.J., befuddle the most visiting quarterbacks — although Denver's Brian Griese threw for 327 yards against the Jets last week.
- Jason Sehorn, who was just returning to form when he broke a rib three weeks ago, should be back, shoring up a shaky New York secondary.
- The only winning team the Giants have beaten is Philadelphia (twice, by a total margin of 32 points.) On the other hand, the Rams have beaten just one team with a winning record — Denver.

With all that, the Rams are still the Giants until proven otherwise.

Still ...
GIANTS, 25-24

Oakland (minus 3) at Denver (Monday night)

Mike Shanahan has won 10 of 11 games against the team he used to coach, including a 33-24 win in Oakland on Sept. 17. He also claims Al Davis owes him money.
BRONCOS, 30-24

New York Jets (plus 6) at Indianapolis

John Abraham. He's hurt, and the Jets have no pass rush.
COLTS, 32-25

Woods says his beef with tour not about cash

■ Tiger Woods says the PGA Tour and golfers clash on a lot of issues the public does not see.

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

SOTOGRADE, Spain — Tiger Woods stood his ground Thursday in his criticism of the PGA Tour, saying his complaint is about getting control of his own marketing rights, not about more TV money.

He also refused to rule out leaving the PGA Tour if the issues aren't settled.

"A lot of guys feel this way on tour," he said on the practice green at the American Express Championship.

"We're just wanting to get our rights back, and not having these implied endorsements," Woods said. "There's a lot the public doesn't understand and doesn't know about."

Woods, whose impact on the game has been a driving force in the record level of prize money on the PGA Tour, said he would meet with Commissioner Tim Finchem "when we can all sit down," but he did not set a time.

"It's not about getting a cut of the TV revenue," Woods said. "It's about doing what's right by the players. The players and the PGA Tour have been bucking heads on a lot of issues. The public has no idea, but we do it all the time."

Finchem arrived at Valderama for meetings, but was not expected to be at the golf course until today.

Woods, who is trying to become the first player in 50 years to win 10 times in one season, added: "I'm busy this week."

When asked if he would ever leave the tour, Woods shrugged his shoulders, smiled and hummed ominously.

Ultimately, it could all lead to a power struggle between Woods and Finchem, and Woods' impact on the sport gives him a strong hand.

"He's such a powerful figure in the world of golf, you have to treat him with a bit of respect," said Chubby Chandler, the agent for European stars Lee Westwood and Darren Clarke.

Along with being the No. 1 player in the world, Woods has become the biggest star in sports. When his five-year, $100 million contract with Nike kicks in next year, his annual endorsements with 12 companies will be worth about $54 million.

One of his strongest complaints is how other companies affiliated with the PGA Tour take advantage of his image.

Mark Steinberg, his agent at IMG, cited the season-opening Mercedes Championship in Hawaii, with a field limited to PGA Tour winners. It runs a congratulatory advertisement with tournament winners every week.

"Do they have to congratulate a guy nine times?" Steinberg said.

Woods said such "implied endorsements" have occurred after just about every tournament he has ever won. He said he saw a commercial during the Canadian Open that featured him, David Duval and Vijay Singh, even though the latter two did not play that week.

"I don't know if the four says, 'Go ahead and run it,' or if they just run with it," Woods said. "We'd like to get an answer, and we deserve that."

Woods did not say he deserves more of the TV money he is largely responsible for generating.

Shortly after Woods won the Masters, the tour signed a four-year TV deal worth about $500 million. Total prize money this year was more than $160 million, nearly triple the level when Woods turned pro. The next contract, coming off Woods winning three straight majors, will be negotiated this spring.

Money has become the most sensitive issue because Woods told Golf World magazine in its Nov. 10 issue, "In a perfect world, I would be" entitled to a share.

IOWA BRIEF

Iowa volleyball

This weekend: The UI volleyball team hits the road for one of its final trips of the season. The Hawkeyes will travel to West Lafayette, Ind., to take on the Purdue Boilermakers at 7 p.m. today. On Saturday, the Hawkeyes will battle Illinois in Campaign at 7 p.m.

On Iowa: Coach Rita Buck-Crockett and her squad are treading water at the .500 mark and need a strong finish to earn an NCAA Tournament berth. The Hawkeyes are 11-11 on the season and 7-7 in the Big Ten. Postseason hopes for Iowa received a huge blow last weekend, when the Hawkeyes were swept at home by No. 11 Penn State and Indiana.

On Purdue: The Boilermakers are riding a three-match losing streak heading into tonight's action. Purdue is 11-15 on the season and a lowly 3-11 in the Big Ten. Iowa swept the Boilermakers in Iowa City earlier this season, 3-0, but winning on the road is tough in the Big Ten.

On Illinois: The Fighting Illini also fell to the Hawkeyes, 3-1, in Carver-Hawkeye Arena in their last meeting. Illinois is also 3-11 in the conference, which puts the Illini tied for last place with Purdue and Northwestern. The Illini's overall record is 12-13.

Iowa's key: The Hawkeyes have shown they can win on the road in the Big Ten this season with big wins over Indiana, Michigan, Michigan State and Northwestern. An NCAA berth is still within reach, but Iowa must finish strong to gain one, and winning on the road will be the key.

Quoting Buck-Crockett: "This loss, I hope, is going to hit home and go to the women's hearts. We need to focus on what is at hand."

wins together under Ferentz. But unfortunately, they have to rebound from last week's big win against a tough team. Northwestern showed its toughness last week in a come-from-behind win over Michigan, in which it blitzed the Wolverines for a school-record 654 yards of offense. "They're playing great ball right now. That was evident in their big win over Michigan last week," Ferentz said.

Perhaps what makes the Wildcats so tough is running back Damien Anderson. The junior poured 268 yards of rushing on the Wolverines last week, putting him second in the nation in rushing with 1,603 yards. "Their keys are (quarterback) Zak Kustok and Anderson," Ferentz said. "What a great job Anderson is doing, what a great year he's having. Anderson's a marquee player." Greeting Anderson in Kinnick will be Iowa's seniors, who are playing their last game in Iowa City. Receiver Kevin Kasper, one of those seniors, had a recommendation for those who might be betting against the Hawkeyes on Saturday. "I've got a little advice: If I were you, I'd pick Iowa," Kasper said. "We're going to play with a lot of emotion this weekend. It's our last game in Kinnick to send the seniors off. We're going to go out there with just the right emotion. It will be a lot. We'll win this game." DI Sports Editor Jeremy Schnitker can be reached at: jschnitk@blue.weeg.uiowa.edu

ley relay this weekend because we are targeting for NCAAs," he said. "This will be a good chance to have a good race in the Field House pool." One senior whose grand finale will have to wait until next year is Hawkeye diver Simon Chrisander. The All-American has decided to red-shirt during the 2000-01 season. Sophomore diver Roberto Gutierrez will lead the diving squad this season. Hawkeye seniors are looking to lead the squad into a win this weekend and post speedy times to receive the best seeds possible for next weekend. One of the toughest meets of the season, the Minnesota Invitational, takes place next weekend. For now, several individuals will draw the curtain on their home appearances, before a season ahead of travel and determination. The team is envisioning a win and, most importantly, season-best times to know they are on the road to a successful Big Ten finish. "It is always nice to be swimming in your own pool," said senior Nick Hinz. "I know what to expect, and it is a really fast pool. I am going to miss it. I would like to win my events this weekend because it is the last time at home." DI reporter Julie Matolo can be reached at: julie-matolo@uiowa.edu

Hawks looking to get team wins

WOMEN

10 a.m. The Hawks are ready for an all-out battle that they have been preparing for since their first meet of the season. "We are aiming to get team wins," said junior Melissa Loehndorf. "We have beat Ohio State in the past, but beating Purdue would be the first time in the dual situation. It is even competition, so the meet will come down to who wants it more." Loehndorf was Iowa's leader two weeks ago in the mountain-climb weekend. In the second meet of the weekend, the junior won the 500-meter and 1,000-meter freestyle events in an overall loss to Michigan State. Iowa captured three other event titles that day. Michigan and Wisconsin brought the first night of competition for the road weekend, leaving the Hawkeyes happy with their times but dissatisfied with the loss. The Hawkeyes will use their home debut as a stepping stone toward moving up in the Big Ten meet and qualifying as many individuals as possible for the NCAA Nationals. Ohio State brings a 1-2 record and a strong diving team to the Field House, and Purdue brings a 3-0 record after beating the 18th-ranked Fighting Irish of Notre Dame. "Hopefully, we can come in with a positive attitude and come out ahead of these teams," said senior Andrea Pennington. "This will be a nice confidence-booster."

Pennington is one of five seniors in a solid team that is top- and bottom-heavy. Every class will be depended on for solid contributions, and the Hawkeyes are prepared for anything after a tough season opener and two-a-day practices. Tight competition is expected, but the home advantage belongs to Iowa. "We're really looking forward to our first home contest," O'Keefe said. "With last week off from competition, we've had two good weeks to train, so we're going to be ready this weekend. We made some mistakes last time out, but we learned from them and feel good about where we are right now." DI reporter Julie Matolo can be reached at: julie-matolo@uiowa.edu

Women's cross country

This week: The Iowa women's cross-country team will travel to Waterloo for the 2000 NCAA Cross Country Regional Championships. Northern Iowa will host the event, which involves 31 teams from around the Midwest. Competition will take place Saturday beginning at 11 a.m. Last meet: Two weeks ago, the Hawkeyes returned home from Wisconsin after a disappointing 11th-place finish at the Big Ten Championships. No. 3-ranked Wisconsin was crowned Big Ten Champion. Sarah Arens was Iowa's top finisher, placing 27th overall with a time of 18:10.

Last year: The 1999 Regional Championships left the Hawkeyes smiling after a seventh-place finish in the 25-team meet. Illinois hosted the meet, and Kansas State brought home the title. Iowa was led by Anne Ruffcorn, who placed 18th, and Arens finished 20th with a time of 17:50.

Iowa's key: The Hawkeyes have been led by sophomore Arens in every meet this season. She will be Iowa's best chance for an individual qualifier to NCAA Nationals. Iowa's schedule: One meet remains on the team's schedule — Nov. 20. The NCAA Nationals will be held in Ames. Iowa's chance to qualify for Nationals depends on its performance this weekend. — by Julie Matolo

Men's cross country

This week: The Iowa men's

ISU wrestlers tired of being 2nd

■ The Cyclones begin the season eyeing Iowa for the national title.

By Chuck Schoffner
Associated Press

AMES — Iowa State's wrestling team will have plenty to fuel its fire during the long, cold winter ahead. One look at the standings from last season's NCAA meet is enough.

Iowa won the title with 116 points. Iowa State, which had led going into the final day, was second, just 6½ points behind.

In Joe Heskett's view, it might as well have been 600 points. "Being so close is the hardest thing," Heskett said at the Cyclones' media day Thursday. "That means nothing. That doesn't make me happy, it doesn't make me extremely proud. It just doesn't."

The Cyclones should get a chance to make amends because they have the talent for another run at the title, starting with junior Cael Sanderson, a two-time NCAA champion at 184 pounds who's 79-0 in his career and twice has been named the outstanding wrestler at the NCAA meet.

Heskett (165) and Zach Thompson (197) both finished second at the national meet, and teammates Cole Sanderson (157), Billy Maldonado (149) and Matt Azevedo (133) were NCAA qualifiers. "We've got some talented individuals up and down the lineup," coach Bobby Douglas said. "But where we're inexperienced, we're very inexperienced."

That would be at 125 and 141, where Iowa State has no experience at all. Redshirt freshman Zach Roberson, a four-time state champion in Kansas, will wrestle at 141. Freshmen Jacob Moore and Matt Sanchez and sophomore Sirish Neal are competing at 125.

"I don't like to rely on freshmen, unless they're like Sanderson and Heskett," Douglas said. "I hope these guys are like that."

Roberson appears to have that potential. He went 153-0 in high school with 109 pins and was rated the nation's No. 1 recruit at 125 by Amateur Wrestling News.

"He's a talented individual, but again, he's a freshman," Douglas said. "It'll take a year, two years for him to really get rolling. I think he's going to be a great wrestler, but it's going to take some time."

Junior Mark Knauer and senior Perry Parks don't have that kind of time. The Cyclones need help from them right now.

Knauer, 11-5 last season, replaces All-American Trent Hynek at heavyweight. Parks, who was injured part of the season and finished 7-10, is the starter at 174.

"If Perry performs well, we will have a very successful team," Douglas said. Iowa State has been chasing Iowa throughout Douglas' eight seasons as coach and still hasn't caught the Hawkeyes. The Cyclones haven't defeated Iowa in a dual meet during his tenure and have yet to win the national championship. Douglas is eager to take up the chase again. "Our goal is to win the national title and we started from our first day of practice planting the seed," he said.

cross-country team will travel to Waterloo this weekend to compete in the 2000 NCAA Midwest Cross Country Regional Championships. Competition will begin at 12:15 p.m. Saturday on the University of Northern Iowa's course. The meet will include teams from around the Midwest.

Last week: The Hawkeyes returned home from Wisconsin with an eighth-place finish at the Big Ten Championships. Paul Sarris was Iowa's top finisher with a 27th-place finish (25:06). Shaun Allen ran a career-best time of 25:10, good for 32nd.

Missing Hawkeye: One of Iowa's top runners, NCAA All-Regional selection Nick Nordheim, is sitting out the season because of a foot injury. Nordheim, a senior, finished 18th (31:36) at last year's regional meet.

Quoting coach Larry Wiecek: "We had our best meet of the season at the Big Ten Championships. We are totally healthy and look forward to an outstanding regional meet. We expect to go in and compete with the top teams in the region."

Season schedule: One meet remains on the cross-country schedule: The NCAA National meet will be held in Ames on Nov. 22. Qualification depends on the results of this weekend's regional championships. — by Julie Matolo

SPORTS BRIEF

Strawberry to stay in jail for another week

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Darryl Strawberry was jailed for at least another week by a judge who warned him Thursday to resume his treatment for colon cancer "or you are history."

Judge Florence Foster also told the New York Yankees slugger that he would get no more chances to end his repeated drug use and his next violation would land him in prison.

"If you can't make it on the outside, I'll find a place where you can get treatment on the inside," she warned.

Before a courtroom crowd that included former teammate Dwight Gooden, the judge ordered Strawberry to resume chemotherapy — treatments he halted last month when he said he had lost the will to live. "You have got to get the therapy or you are history," Foster said. Prosecutors wanted to send Strawberry to prison, but Foster refused.

She sentenced him to 30 days. With time served and other credit received under Hillsborough County jail rules, Strawberry could be free in about 10 days, although an exact date was not set at the hearing.

After he is freed, Strawberry will be outfitted with an electronic monitor that will alert his probation officer if he again leaves a drug treatment center.

Strawberry said he felt the impact of his first prolonged time behind bars and was ready to sober up.

"I can't run from myself any more," Strawberry said. "I've got to take responsibility for myself in recovery."

Strawberry told Foster the time he's already spent in jail has taught him a lesson.

HELP WANTED
University of Iowa Hygienic Laboratory, Des Moines Emissions Inventory Specialist
The University of Iowa Hygienic Laboratory, (Iowa's Environmental and Public Health Laboratory) under contract with the Iowa Department of Natural Resources (IDNR), has an opening in the Des Moines Laboratory for an Emissions Inventory Specialist. The purpose of the position is to review air emission inventories for completeness and accuracy. The individual will perform complex calculations, run emission estimation software, maintain program database and provide assistance to facilities completing the emissions inventory. The position requires some travel.
Applicants should have a Bachelor's degree in a physical or natural science, or an equivalent combination of education and experience. Must have a valid driver's license. Prefer applicants with a strong chemistry and mathematical background, good communication skills, and Windows based computer operations experience. Some environmental program or air quality experience desirable. The annual salary will be commensurate with education and experience. The University of Iowa offers an excellent fringe benefits package.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Become involved in social events that require intelligence and action. You can enhance your reputation to work if you help others meet their deadlines.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Disharmony with family members is likely. You will have a real thirst for knowledge. Busy yourself with educational courses that will bring enjoyment as well as new connections.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You can ask a close friend for an opinion regarding a personal problem. Difficulties in your personal life may get a bit out of hand if you are experiencing financial setbacks.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don't spend money on luxury items or your family. You will prefer the company of friends over family. Travel will be in your best interests. You need a change.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You will be confused if you try to force issues with your partner. Opportunities to learn will be to your advantage. Don't allow family members or lovers to hold you back.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be careful not to spoil children. You may want to blow your stack if things don't go as you planned. Finances will stabilize only through budgeting and tightening the purse strings.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Romantic opportunities will evolve if you join intellectual organizations. Before making changes to your living quarters, be sure everyone is in agreement.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Problems concerning older family members may put you in a precarious position. Property investments will pay off if you put money into improving the premises.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get into a travel mood. You will find exotic countries enticing. Try to deal with emotional issues, and you will see how much better your personal relationship will be.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Difficulties will surface if you try to solidify an agreement with someone you live with. Don't make unnecessary changes. It is best to hold your position and wait to see what happens.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your romantic relationship will settle down if you are willing to compromise. You can make verbal agreements as long as they don't have anything to do with money.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You will feel a bit tired if you've been burning the candle at both ends. Take the time to relax and rejuvenate. Don't rely on others to pay for you. If you don't have the cash, don't go.

How to settle the election once and for all

- A quick round of rock, paper, scissors.
- Force Bush and Gore to wrestle some Florida alligators and we'll really see who's "fit for the presidency."
- Force Bush and Gore to wrestle Dick Cheney.
- Announce that the entire election will have to be a "do-over."
- What the heck — just give it to Pat Buchanan.
- Take it to court — "The People's Court."
- Settle things with a decisive Yajtzee tournament.
- Make the candidates share an island with some conniving 20-somethings and a TV crew. Whoever holds out the longest wins.
- Engage the candidates and their running mates in a synchronized diving competition.
- Do what any other nation would do and resort to high crimes, misdemeanors and rock-throwing in the streets.
- There's just one round left, folks. The swimsuit competition.

With contract, Ferentz has table set to succeed

I've said all along that I think Ferentz can succeed at Iowa. Now with this contract signed, he's been given the support to do so.

The athletics director and the university support him. Ferentz's contract is a five-year deal that pays $585,000 per year and could reach up to $900,000 if he reaches certain incentives based on graduation rates and his team's on-field performance. Not only did the university offer him a contract, it gave him a one-year extension.

While some are wondering why a guy who has only won three games in two seasons is getting a contract, I believe it should've happened and needed to happen as soon as possible.

The possibility of other coaches using Ferentz not having a contract as a way to deter recruits from coming to Iowa is just one of the things this guy and his staff don't need. They have a hard enough time telling kids in Florida to come to Iowa to play for a losing team.

this team and its coaching staff.

Sure, some fans have given up on the Hawkeyes. But hey, at least we bring in more fans than Iowa State.

Most importantly, Ferentz's players support him. Despite their lack of success on the field, they haven't lost faith in Iowa's program. In fact, they keep working harder for Ferentz, despite their losing ways. Last week's win at Penn State is an example of this team not giving up.

The stage is set for Ferentz to succeed. Whether he'll do so, and in what time frame, I really don't know. But I will say this: A coach with a signed contract is better than a coach without a signed contract.

When it comes to recruiting, this can only help. When it comes to having his players keep faith in him, the extension lets them know their coach is going to be coaching them for the rest of their careers.

Heck, Ferentz is 1-0 so far with a signed contract this year. It's a good thing it happened, and it's an even better thing it happened before the season was over.

THE SENIORS

THIS WEEK IN THE BIG TEN

From bowl to bottom, from Hayden to Kirk

■ This year's seniors have seen lots of change.

By Jeremy Schnitker and Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

A group of players who started off their Iowa careers with bowl games and a coach with the most noticeable Texas drawl in Iowa — the Iowa seniors — will be playing its last game in the confines of Kinnick Stadium on Saturday.

The Hawkeye graduating class of 2000 has been through a lot as Iowa football players. They've seen the coach that recruited them, Hayden Fry, retire in December 1998. They saw current Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz hired weeks later.

They started their careers with the hopes that this team would be reaching the heights it did during the '80s. Iowa went to three consecutive bowl games from 1994-1997, and many around the country thought Iowa was re-emerging as one of the premier teams of the Big Ten.

Things didn't work out that way, though. In Fry's last year, the team endured a 3-8 season, one of the worst in his tenure. In Ferentz's first year, 1999, the team won only one game and placed last in up. Despite lower fan turnout at games and all the other negative things this program has had to deal with these past three years, they have always given their best, Ferentz said. "What a great group," he said. "Whether you are talking about the guys who are more visible or the guys like Robbert to Rickards — he hasn't really played a snap of regular defense. It was unbelievable just because, in my opinion, we talked about how we haven't really done anything since we got here. We never really won a game we weren't supposed to win. We never really won a big game on the road. We played in one bowl game and didn't perform well. If nothing else, we might have made our small mark, I guess.

— Jason Baker, Iowa senior

It's fair to say that Scott Mullen has had a pretty tough go this year. However, as heartbroken as he is, I'm impressed by the way he carries himself. "It's a real first-class group of guys."

Here they are:

A.J. Blazek: The junior-college transfer has only been a Hawkeye for two years, but has made quite an impact on this team in that short time. Blazek has been the only offensive lineman to start every game at the same position this year. In 1999, he started five times and finished the season with Academic All-Big Ten team honors. Blazek has helped pave the way for running back Ladell Betts to tally 857 yards last year and 857 so far this year.

Kevin Kasper: Kasper will leave the 2000 class as the most decorated senior. He set both Iowa's single-season receptions record and career receptions record. So far this year, Kasper has 72 catches for 858 yards, putting him atop the Big Ten rankings and ninth in the country. Kasper has 146 career receptions, ranking him among former Iowa stars Ronnie Harmon and Danan Hughes. In 1999, Kasper was named honorable mention to the All-Big Ten team and also was an Academic All-Big Ten selection.

Big Ten's top teams will run away from the pack

Jeremy Schnitker
The Big Ten has been wild and wacky all year, but it won't be this week. The good teams in the conference are starting to separate themselves from the rest of the pack as Michigan and Ohio State solidify themselves as two of the top four Big Ten teams, along with Purdue and Northwestern. This week, teams will be fighting for conference standings and bowl invitations.

On defense, the Buckeyes are equally as fast as they are on offense. You don't run against Ohio State. Illinois will find that out the hard way, Ohio State 35, Illinois 21

Wisconsin at Indiana
From what I've seen this year, the Badgers just aren't all that good. Their offense moves the ball at will one week, then struggles against Iowa the next. Their defense isn't all that good, either. Indiana's defense is worse than Wisconsin's, but it has the "El" factor. The Hoosiers have shown that it doesn't matter how bad their defense is — with Antwaan Randle El at quarterback, they're almost always in the game. Indiana's defense will play respectably against the Badgers, and Indiana's offense will sparkle. Indiana wins in a thriller. Indiana 24, Wisconsin 21

Penn State at Michigan
I learned two things last weekend: Penn State isn't that good, and Michigan isn't, either. But Penn State is worse than Michigan. Superior talent and an offense that put up over 50 points and over 500 yards last week will pummel a Penn State team that just can't seem to put everything together. Michigan's hopes for a BCS bid are out the window, along with a possible conference championship, but the Wolverines could still earn a spot in the Citrus Bowl. Anthony Thomas doesn't drop the ball in open field once, and Drew Henson puts together a second consecutive solid performance. The Wolverines win big. Michigan 35, Penn State 14

Purdue at Michigan State
Ah, the best team in the Big Ten versus the worst team in the Big Ten. A blowout? Not so fast. Purdue will win, but not before it gets a scare from Michigan State, who coincidentally has the best passing defense in the Big Ten. Purdue has the best passing offense and the best quarterback in Heisman hopeful Drew Brees. This one will be close for a half, then the pride and heart of the Boilermakers will come out in the fourth quarter — as they do in seemingly every game — and they'll win by two touchdowns. Purdue 28, Michigan State 14

Bonus Pick: Oklahoma at Texas A&M
People across the county say they aren't totally sold on this Oklahoma team. Well, they're stupid. Any time a team beats Nebraska, Texas and Kansas State in a row, by a lot of points, is a darn good football team in my mind. This game is just a step on the stairway that is Oklahoma's run for the national title, which I think it will win. Josh Huelgel does his thing, and so those around him. Sorry Aggies, you're not that good this year. Oklahoma 31, A&M 21

Hawkeyes lose six seniors on defensive side

being tested at the offensive line for a short stint of his Iowa career, Trippeer has established himself as a solid tight end in his senior year. He is third in the team in receptions with 13 for 122 yards.

Henry Pollio: After scoring a touchdown against Northern Iowa in his freshman year, 1997, Pollio did not see much playing time again in his career. He did not see any game action during 1999, and after starting one game this year, he has played behind freshmen Jonathan Babineaux and Jeremy Allen.

Scott Mullen: At times last year, it looked like Mullen would be Iowa's starter for the remainder of his career. After a record-setting game against Indiana, in which he threw 60 passes and combined for 473 total yards, many thought Mullen would be the quarterback of 2000. But, after Iowa started out the season 0-4 under Mullen, Ferentz turned to freshman Jon Beutjer. Since then, Mullen has been listed as third-team quarterback. Mullen was considered an early season candidate for the Davey O'Brien award for the nation's top college quarterback.

Ryan Barton: Barton has been a quiet, yet consistent, performer for Iowa's offense over the past three seasons. His sophomore year, he had 16 catches for 310 yards. During his junior year, he caught 17 passes for 233 yards. So far during his senior campaign, he has 15 receptions for 212 yards and one touchdown. 1999 Barton was named to the 1999 All-Big Ten Academic team.

Hugo Herrera: After joining the Hawkeyes in 1999, Herrera did not see any game action during that season. Herrera has not had a single rush or reception this year, nor has he made a single tackle.

Jason Baker: Baker was called upon immediately to handle punting duties his freshman season and earned Special Teams MVP in the 1997 Sun Bowl. His progress has been evident throughout the years, culminating in his performance Nov. 4 against Penn State, averaging slightly more than 50 yards on five punts, trapping the Nittany Lions inside the 20-yard line twice. He hates statistics and rarely looks at them, but he's recorded four of the longest eight punts in Iowa history, including punts of 79, 76, 74 and 69 yards.

Greg McLaughlin: Joining the team as a walk-on from Waterloo, McLaughlin has seen little action in his four years at Iowa. He received his most playing time in 1997, his freshman season, where he handled the kickoff duties for the Hawkeyes. After playing sparingly his sophomore and junior years, he was listed as first-team kicker after the 2000 spring game. However the emergence of freshman Nate Kaeding has forced McLaughlin into the backup role once again.

Anthony Herron: Two tackles, including a quarterback sack in the 1997 Sun Bowl ended Herron's first year as a Hawkeye, one of four true freshmen to play that season under Hayden Fry. He has not missed one game since — playing in 33 straight. In 1999, he emerged a mainstay, finishing with 65 tackles, 39 of which were solo stops and four of which were quarterback sacks. Herron has enjoyed comparable success in 2000. With two games remaining, he has 53 tackles, four for loss and three sacks.

Derrick Davison: Davison came to Iowa from North Dakota College of Science for his junior and senior season. In 1999 he played in 10 games and started the first five games of the season, recording 42 tackles, including three for a loss and one sack. This year Davison, originally from Cincinnati, Ohio, again started the first five games for Iowa before being replaced in the starting lineup by sophomore Fred Barr. Davison has recorded 42 tackles, two pass breakups and one forced fumble this season.

LaVar Woods: Like Herron, Woods has been a mainstay on Iowa's defense for the last three seasons, playing in all 11 games as a sophomore, starting all 11 as a junior and every game in 2000 at outside linebacker. In 1999 he recorded 54 tackles, including 23 solo tackles a one quarterback sack. This season he has amassed a team-high 58 tackles and a team-high nine tackles for loss.

Ryan Hansen: A native of Iowa City and graduate of West High School, Hansen was brought to Iowa as a quarterback prospect originally. He has since moved to defensive back and emerged as the Hawkeyes starting free safety. This season he has 60 tackles, eight pass breakups and recovered two fumbles. In addition, he leads the team with three interceptions. He will be most remembered for his interception Nov. 4 against Penn State in double overtime. He snared a Rashard Casey tipped pass to secure the Hawkeyes 26-23 win in State College, Pa.

Roberto Rickards: Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz has utilized Rickards solely on special teams during, being named special team's game captain three times. Fans may remember Rickards most for his assisted block he threw on a Michigan State player enabling Kahlil Hill to return a kickoff for a touchdown as Iowa went on to win the game 21-16. Rickards has recorded nine tackles and blocked one kick this season.

Cameron Smith: Smith, a defensive back from Mt. Sac Junior College in Walnut, Calif., saw all his action last year in the final four games of the season and recorded five tackles against Ohio State. Smith's finest Iowa performance came in the 2000 spring game, when he had a 38-yard interception return for a touchdown.

NORTHWESTERN

Hawks face a new and improved Northwestern team

Northwestern won't overlook Iowa after last week's win vs. Michigan.

By Nick Firchau
The Daily Iowan

As if the memory of the heart-stopping 54-51 upset victory over Michigan last weekend isn't still fumbling around in the minds of Northwestern football fans across the country, the Wildcat faithful will soon have a chance to watch the amazing final moments on their television sets one more time.

ESPN Classic recently announced that the Nov. 4 Big Ten barnburner will be broadcast as part of its "Instant Classic" series on Nov. 15 at 8 p.m.

But Wildcats head coach Randy Walker isn't likely to be tuning in. He has other things, such as needing a few more wins to secure a shot at a major bowl, on his mind.

"I tell everybody that I woke up Sunday morning at about five, and I wasn't thinking about Michigan," said Walker, who in his second season as head coach at Northwestern has put the Wildcats back in the thick of the Big Ten race. "I had Iowa on my mind. In this league, you come off a big win, and you look right down the barrel of another tough one."

This weekend, the 12th-ranked Wildcats will be staring down the barrel at an Iowa team that may just now be figuring out how to fire its guns. The Hawkeyes (2-8 overall, 2-4 Big Ten) are coming off their second victory of the season last weekend in a 26-23 double-overtime win at Penn State. The Hawkeyes lost a surprisingly tight 13-7 game at home against Wisconsin on Oct. 28, and the two straight solid performances from an Iowa team that is supposedly one of the conference's worst squads has Walker concerned about this weekend's game at Kinnick Stadium.

"They're getting better and better, and I think they're playing their best football right now, culminating with a great win this week," he said. "I've always said that there's not a lot of difference between the teams in any conference, let alone certainly the Big Ten. I believe Iowa's real close to being right there. They have a couple things go the right way, and they're in the middle of a championship picture as well. We know we're going to have to play our best football to have a chance to win this week."

That's not to say that Walker wasn't proud of his team last weekend, scoring on an 11-yard touchdown pass with 20 seconds left to win arguably the best college football game so far this season and the Big Ten's highest-scoring game in history.

The victory put the resurgent Wildcats at a surprising 7-2 overall, with a 5-1 record in the Big Ten, and bumped them up nine spots in the Associated Press poll. They currently share the Big Ten lead with ninth-ranked Purdue, but the Boilermakers hold the edge in a tiebreaker following the Boilermakers' 48-21 victory over Northwestern on Oct. 14.

The Wildcats, who last season posted only a 3-8 overall record, including a 23-21 win over Iowa in Evanston, have been able to do a lot of positive things on a consistent basis this season. Their offense is the third-most potent in the nation behind Florida State's and Nebraska's, averaging just over 486 yards per game. The Wildcats also rank ninth nationally in scoring offense, with an average of 38.4 points per game.

The Wildcats' weakness may be their defense, which has been less than stellar in the team's seven wins. Opponents are averaging 419.3 yards of total offense against the Cats, which ranks Northwestern's defense ninth in the Big Ten in front of only Iowa and Indiana. In the win last weekend, Northwestern gave up 535 total yards of offense to Michigan, including 199 rushing yards to running back Anthony Thomas.

Chris Oliver and the Hawks will try to avenge last year's 23-21 loss at Northwestern.

JASON GUSTIN: MALE CHEERLEADER

UI male cheerleader shakes off stereotypes

■ One Iowa student can't imagine what life would be like if he weren't a cheerleader.

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

The things guys will do to get girls.

Jason Gustin got his start in cheerleading to situate himself closer to another team member.

"In high school, I cheered just to chase after a girl," he said.

Now, five years later and thousands of miles away, Gustin can't imagine what his college years at Iowa would be like without cheerleading. A staple of his week over the past four years, cheerleading has brought him close friendships and wonderful memories.

However, not everyone has such a positive view of cheerleading. The sport remains an activity that garners little respect and constantly invokes stereotypes.

Gustin is aware of the jokes. They do not concern him, he said. Occasionally there is a cheap shot or someone makes fun of him, but to Gustin, it's not a big deal.

"There are some random guy jokes, but mostly they are made in jest," he said. "Anyway, I just tell them I get to lift a girl up over my head on a regular basis."

With an athletic background, Gustin said he had little difficulty joining the Iowa squad and quickly became close friends with several team members. Over the past four years, he said, cheerleading has become a major part of his life.

"You meet a lot of people through it," he said. "There were seven of us who came in at about the same time, and we did everything together. Even after four years, we've separated a little but remain pretty close."

J.J. Hynes/The Daily Iowan
Justin Gustin, an Iowa cheerleader, practices on Sunday.

Six home football Saturdays a year barely scratch the surface of the events the 18 varsity and 16 junior-varsity cheerleaders must attend. Cheerleaders must attend women's basketball and volleyball games for which sometimes only a few hundred fans attend. There are wrestling matches that are awkward to cheer at. There are road trips to exotic locations such as State College, Pa., or East Lansing, Mich.

Then there are public-relations functions: an MCI corporate barbecue, a Hy-Vee employee picnic, judging high-school competitions at City High and a smattering of alumni events, I-Club functions, hospital visits and 6 a.m. wake-up calls for three-hour drives to small towns in Iowa to represent the university. Gustin has done them all.

All this means an extra time commitment for the cheerleaders without even including practice time. On weekdays from 4 to 6 p.m., the UI Field House gym looks like it could be that of any junior high school. The gym is transformed into a din of yelling, tumbling and sweat. Among the old wooden bleachers and hard floors, cheerleaders tumble on the mats and fly through the air doing backflips. In one corner, six cheerleaders gather to form a pyramid. The guys wince as their partners stand on their shoulders. Practice ends with a brief meeting, and the cheerleaders gather around in a huddle with arms together, yelling "Hawkeyes."

Gustin's days of cheerleading are numbered now because he will enter the army after graduation. But, he said, he won't miss cheerleading because his time is completed.

"I've done a lot," he said. "I have a lot of good memories, so I'm not really sad it will be over. I'm just happy I've been through all this."

As for that high-school girl, she got married three weeks ago, but not to Gustin.

"Well, that didn't work out, I guess," Gustin said with a smile.

Then again, maybe it did.

UI senior Greg Vass' own film company developed a making movie.

By Jesse The De

UI senior Greg Vass' own film company developed a making movie. Vass' pastisri movies began when he and Mike Kromm, who lives in Tallahassee, Fla., were together with Vass' home-video production company. They soon developed a web site to produce a weekly show for their high school Rockford, Ill. Vass' debut show, "The Debut," began asking for their birthday party inspiration. From there, Vass' own film company developed a making movie.
