Gore, Bush mobilize for crucial battle

As a manual recount labors on, the fight shifts to the Florida Supreme Court.

By Ron Fournier
 Associated Press

George W. Bush and Al Gore marshaled their legal forces Sunday for a climactic state Supreme Court showdown, with GOP lawyers saying it would be unjust "to keep the state and the nation on hold" during interminable recounts. Democrats said the truth can't be rushed, as jangled nerves and protests punctuated another painstaking day of South Florida vote counting.

With the long-count presidential election stretching into a third agonizing week, the court strategy of both camps reached critical mass: Republicans hope to stop manual recounts that threaten Bush's 930-vote lead out of the 6 million cast in make-or-break Florida; Democratic Gore wants the work to grind away, under rules most favorable to him, though his aides fretted Sunday over how little progress they've made in the slow-moving recounts.

The candidates kept a low profile as their lawyers prepared for a momentous Supreme Court hearing today. Each went for a jog and to church.

Calling these "extraordinary times," Bush's lawyers argued in court papers that Republican Secretary of State Katherine Harris has the authority to certify election results without accepting hand counts. They also said allowing the recounts to continue in scattered Democratic-leaning counties would violate the constitutional rights of voters elsewhere.

"The selective manual recounts authorize county boards to engage in arbitrary and unequal counting of votes, and result in the disparate treatment of Florida voters

Half of ed majors leave Iowa

Some students say the state's relatively low teacher's salaries may be factor.

By Pam Dewey
 The Daily Iowan

In a presentation to the state of Iowa Board of Regents on Nov. 15, UI President Mary Sue Coleman shared recent data collected by the UI Educational Placement Office that show 50 percent of UI education majors stay in Iowa after graduation.

UI senior Alison Putney, an education major, said she thinks that it's a combination of few jobs and low pay that causes half of all education majors to leave Iowa.

Putney, herself an Iowa City native, will leave Iowa next semester to do her student teaching in Chicago. She also plans to get a teaching job in Illinois because "they pay a lot better." In fact in a state-by-state comparison, Illinois is ranked ninth with an average teacher's salary at $45,286.

Iowa, on the other hand, is ranked 32nd nationally in the amount schools pay their teachers, with an average salary of $35,007. New Jersey, ranked first in teacher's salaries, pays an average of $51,692, according to the American Federation of Teachers.

UI senior Amber Austin, also an education major, agreed that Iowa's low pay is the main reason people decide to leave the state.

However, she isn't planning on leaving Iowa immediately after graduation. She plans to stay, at least briefly, until she decides where she really wants to go.

"I am not in a big hurry," Austin said.

But are other state's higher teachers' salaries a result of a higher cost of living? The answer is yes and no. Chicago does have a higher cost of living than any city in Iowa, but the cost of living isn't high enough to require that teachers be paid as high as Illinois's average teacher's salary. According to a cost-of-living analysis done by Datamasters.com, $35,007 (average Iowa teacher's salary) in Iowa would be equal to almost $40,000 in Chicago, which is still below Illinois's average teacher's salary of $45,286.

However, because the state ultimately controls teacher's pay, Putney said, it shouldn't be UI's responsibility to keep students from leaving Iowa — it should be the state's.

"(The UI does) a good job helping us find jobs," she

As some hold out, more UI profs go high tech

The UI is giving its teachers opportunities to become acquainted with the latest technologies.

By Mary Sedor
 The Daily Iowan

All UI English professor Archibald Coolidge needs to conduct his class is a desk and his book.

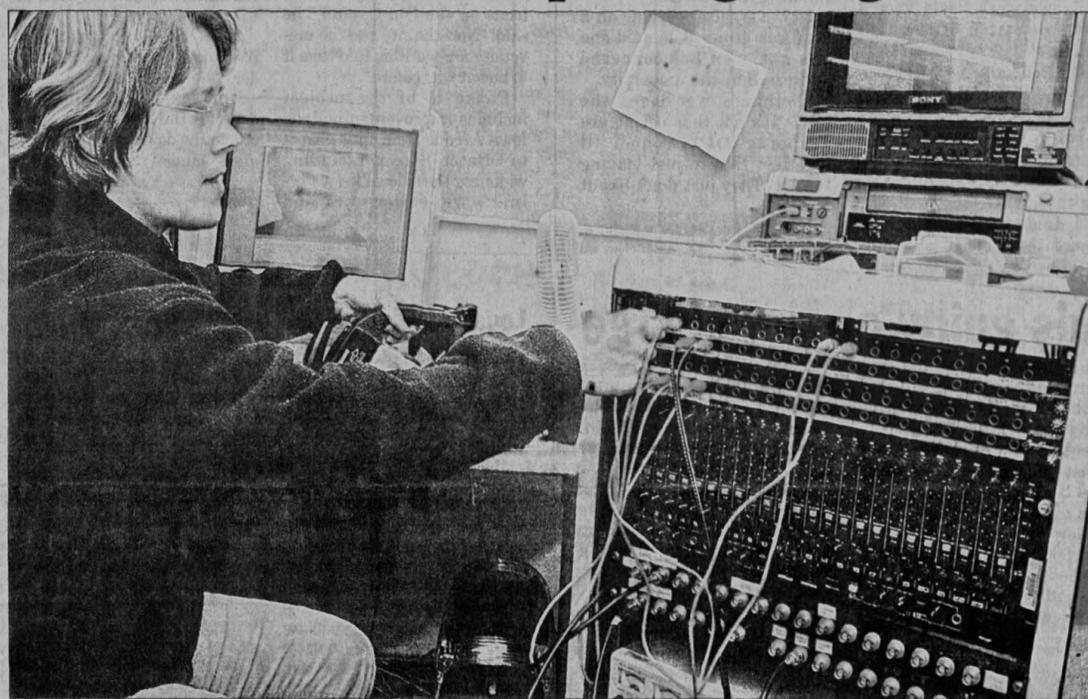

Coolidge said he sees little need for technology in his classroom because he feels the methods he has been using for years are effective and students have not voiced any differences of opinion.

"I depend on the written word and discussion in class," he said. "In other words, technology has to do with e-mail and my research rather than having to do with teaching."

A stark contrast to Coolidge is Timothy O'Conner, a UI adjunct assistant professor of business who finds time to create Power Point presentations for every period of the class he teaches. He believes that using technology is beneficial for his students.

"Using technology when teaching an English class and discussing literature might not be as important as it is for business students, who will need to know how to give these types of presentations in the future," O'Conner said.

While educational technology equipment costs an average of $70,000 to equip a single UI auditorium, the decision to use the equipment in a course is entirely up to the faculty member. While many faculty members incorporate technology into their teaching, others chose not to use the equipment — or don't know how.

Each year UI Space, Planning and Utilization spends more than $300,000 to add, upgrade, or maintain technology in the classrooms, said Patricia Boutelle, the department's director. A portion of this money comes from student computing fees, she said.

Of the 200 general-assignment classrooms, 172 have a data connection or have access to the Internet via Ethernet. Also, 79 classrooms have fixed video equipment, which includes a data/video projector, a Macintosh G3 or G4 computer with a CD-ROM and Zip drive, a VHS VCR, a Video Presenter and an audio cassette player.

The cost of installing this type of equipment ranges from $15,000 to $30,000 for a small- or medium-sized classroom to $300,000 for a large auditorium, Boutelle said.

So far, there is no way to show which technologies in the classroom are getting used most frequently, she said. However, the number of faculty members requesting technology in their classrooms is increasing.

Departments are able to request specific rooms for their faculty members. Space, Planning and Utilization tries to honor those requests to ensure that the equipment will be used.

UI buildings plan to test recycling program

The UI will place recycling bins for aluminum and plastic in a few buildings.

By Ryan Foley
 The Daily Iowan

The UI Environmental Coalition will team up with the UI Facilities Services Group to implement a pilot program for recycling aluminum and plastic in a few UI academic buildings next semester.

The goal is to see what methods of recycling are most effective before eventually implementing a recycling system for all of the UI's academic buildings.

UI Environmental Coalition members will draft a final plan for the program over Winter Break and hope it will take off at the beginning of second semester, coalition spokesman Nick Klenske said Sunday.

Klenske, a UI junior from Dubuque, said recycling bins,

Fujimori stuns Peru with resignation

The Peruvian president, who is in Japan, says he will step down within 48 hours.

By Monte Hayes
 Associated Press

LIMA, Peru — In a stunning development, President Alberto Fujimori, whose 10-year authoritarian rule has crumbled in recent months over corruption scandals, said in Tokyo earlier today that he would resign within 48 hours.

Fujimori issued a brief written statement confirming announcements made hours earlier in Peru by his prime minister and his second vice president.

His announcement ended the 10-year reign of one of Latin America's most controversial leaders. In his early years he gained renown for his defeat of leftist insurgencies and for economic reforms that tamed inflation, which topped 7,000 percent in 1990. But in recent years, his popularity plummeted as he sought to hold onto power at any price.

Second Vice President Ricardo Marquez said Fujimori, who has been in his ancestral homeland Japan since Nov. 17, had asked him to step in as president until special elections are held in April and a new leader takes office in July.

The statement issued by Fujimori said he made the decision taking into account that opposition lawmakers

UI minority retention criticized

Some minority students say the UI's words aren't supported by its actions.

By Chao Xiong
 The Daily Iowan

Some UI students are saying the university's rhetoric about minority retention efforts don't agree with its actions, noting that it stopped repainting the Afro-American Cultural Center half-way through the job to paint the office of UI President Mary Sue Coleman last month.

The center, 303 Melrose Ave., was forced to turn away students who had reserved the house for meetings to the Latino Native American Cultural Center, 308 Melrose Ave., because of paint fumes, said UI freshman Tiffany Mabins, who works at the Afro-American Cultural Center.

"I didn't agree with that at all," she said. "I just feel like we were low on the list of priorities. Just like her office is used, our house is used."

The UI's actions towards the center represents its overall attitude towards retaining minority students once they have been recruited, said UI senior Acooa Lee.

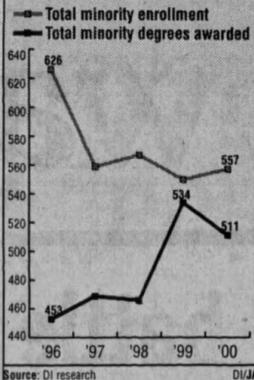

"I think a lot of the times minority students are recruited, and once they are here, there's nothing done to keep them," she said.

The painter returned a week after his leave to complete the job, but the incident still has some upset.

"To me, it shows what a priority it is — it isn't," Lee said. "Freshmen and sophomores say when they came to Orientation, they were first brought

Minority Graduation Rates

Over the past five years, the gap between enrollment and degrees awarded has narrowed.

to the Afro House, but it's neglected."

According to a report released by the board office of the state of Iowa Board of Regents, the UI experienced a decrease of 89 minority students between the 1999 and 2000 academic years.

The same report shows that Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa experienced an increase in minority student enrollment by 45 and 80 students respectively.

"I'm disappointed in the numbers that were presented to us last week," said Regent Beverly Smith of the UI's decrease.

Joe Coulter, the UI associate provost for diversity, told the regents the UI's minority enrollment decrease was caused by an increase in minority graduation rates, Smith said.

"I don't know if I'm convinced that's true," she said.

"You hate to see a decrease anytime, and that's what has happened."

Comparing the total minority enrollment rate with minority graduation rates in the regents' report is difficult because the enrollment numbers include professional, graduate and transfer students, whereas the graduation numbers only pertain to students who enrolled as undergraduate freshmen, Coulter said.

"I've always been aggravated that the regents don't publish the (total) graduation numbers," he said. "Those rates are only calculated on the highest-risk group."

Professional and graduate students complete their programs at a much higher rate, Coulter said, maintaining that the UI has experienced a high minority graduation rate.

Coleman said she is always willing to meet with students who have concerns about the UI, and she encouraged such students to attend her monthly fireside chats to express their views.

"I'm pretty proud of the support system we have across the board," she said of the UI's minority-retention efforts. "I've been very pleased with our progress. We can always do better."

However, after serving on a UI focus group, Lee said she has not seen her concerns addressed by the university.

"Nothing's ever done," she said. "It's not that people are dropping out of school all together, they're just leaving the UI. They just don't like it here."

City ready to finish Iowa Ave. project

The City Council will discuss the plans for the final phase of the streetscape project.

By Megan L. Eckhardt
 The Daily Iowan

With the last phase of downtown improvements underway, the Iowa City City Council will hear public opinions and discuss final plans and an estimate cost for phase II of the Iowa Avenue Streetscape project at its Tuesday meeting.

Currently, the city engineer estimates the cost of the project at $2.5 million, with $1.5 million of the cost to be contributed by the UI.

The UI has been involved in a partnership with the city for two years, planning for the design of the project and contributing to the cost because of its interest in making the avenue a more attractive focus for the Pentacrest, UI campus planner Larry Wilson said.

"It was originally built to focus on the Old Capitol," he said. "Now the city and the university are working to return it to how it was before."

Phase II of the project includes improvements along Iowa Avenue from Linn Street to Clinton Street, including widening the sidewalks, waterline work, sewer work and adding street furniture and lighting that match the rest of the downtown area.

Construction will begin in May 2001; it is expected to be completed by the start of the fall 2001 semester, Mayor Ernie Lehman said.

While 130 parking spaces from center of the street will be unavailable beginning this summer, motorists will have access to the Clocktower Place, the new parking ramp located on Iowa Avenue, which will open before May.

"If the parking facility is not finished, we were told it will be complete enough to occupy the displaced cars," Lehman said.

"The council would not take this parking if there was not a place to put the cars."

The city will post advertisements for project bids after the council approves the resolution. The city and any other government unit is required by law to accept the lowest responsible bid, said Lehman, who expects a large number of contractors to be interested in the project.

"It's a big enough project that it should attract many bidders," he said.

The same contractor has done all the streetscape projects in the downtown Iowa City area, Lehman said.

Local man faces abuse charges

An Iowa City man was arrested on Nov. 17 for allegedly committing domestic abuse with a dangerous weapon.

Francisco Torres, 31, 203 Myrtle Ave. Apt. 205, allegedly engaged in an argument with his girlfriend at their apartment and during the course of the argument threatened her with both a box cutter and steak knife, the woman told police.

Torres allegedly claimed he thought they were playing until his girlfriend bit him on the shoulder as they "wrestled" on the bed, according to court records. "We like to wrestle," Torres told police, according to court records.

The alleged victim eventually fled the scene and contacted police. Torres had bite marks on his shoulder, according to court records.

Torres remained in the Johnson County Jail Sunday on a $5,000 bond.

Claiborne pleads guilty on pot charge

The ex-dental student's plea does not affect charges of threatening UI dental students and faculty.

By Kellie Doyle
 The Daily Iowan

Former UI dental student Tarsha Claiborne has decided to plead guilty to a drug charge she received last April — shortly after she was accused of threatening UI dental students and faculty, her attorney Leon Spies said on Nov. 17.

The plea does not cover the six counts of third-degree harassment and charges of criminal trespassing, hate crime and threats in violation of individual rights, according to court documents.

Her drug charge, possession of marijuana, stems from a police search of her apartment just after she was accused of the threat crimes, according to court records.

Claiborne, 24, who is originally from Baton Rouge, La., allegedly admitted to sending racist e-mails to faculty members and students of the College of Dentistry, threatening to blow up the Dental Building and leaving a dish of ramen noodles alleged to represent brains on the doorstep of a third-year minority dental student, according to court records.

Last summer, Claiborne filed a written plea of not guilty in response to her threatening e-mail charges. Also, her attorneys, Spies and Alfredo Parish, decided to use a diminished-responsibility defense in her trial as an attempt to show that she lacked the mental capacity to think about the nature of her actions. Diminished-responsibility defense differs from insanity defense because the latter is used when the defendant is considered to be incapable of distinguishing from right and wrong due to a mental illness.

Claiborne's trial date to settle the threat charges is scheduled for March 5, 2001.

Iowa high court reprimands Boeke

■ The ex-prosecutor was reproached for a relationship with a Johnson County judge.

By Kellie Doyle
The Daily Iowan

Former Assistant Johnson County Attorney Angela Boeke was reprimanded by the Iowa Supreme Court Board of Professional Ethics and Conduct as a result of her relationship with District Associate Judge Stephen C. Gerard II between the months of October and December 1999.

The relationship was discovered last December by Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White, who said he had made some observations that led him to believe it was true. Gerard presided over many of Boeke's 100-150 cases throughout 1999, which caused some to question whether he was biased in any of his judicial decisions.

Gerard was unavailable for comment Sunday, but he has previously told The Daily Iowan that he denied the accusation and said he bases his decisions on cases on the facts, not on who tells him the facts.

Boeke, 35, was issued a reprimand on Nov. 10, which also marked her last day in the county attorney's office; her resignation became effective on that date. The ethics board stated in the reprimand that by keeping the relationship secret, Boeke had "compromised the integrity of both your work and the court itself." The board also found Boeke "engaged in conduct prejudicial to the administration of justice (and) conduct adversely reflecting on your fitness to practice law."

Boeke, who was unavailable for comment Sunday, was given 30 days to oppose the reprimand but chose not to. If she had opposed it, the board's grievance commission would have scheduled a hearing.

Because it was left unopposed, the reprimand was made public on Nov. 10. Public reprimands stay in court records but do not bring forth further penalty.

Gerard, 50, who retained his judgeship on Election Day, awaits possible disciplinary action from the state Judicial Qualifications Commission.

Ex-halfway house head charged

■ Authorities say Stephen Ray Korb posed as a teen-age girl to receive child porn.

Associated Press

BURLINGTON — The former manager of Burlington's halfway house has been accused of posing as a teen-age girl on the Internet to get sexually oriented pictures.

Stephen Ray Korb, 53, Des Moines, is charged with eight counts of sexual exploitation of a minor in connection with electronic images authorities say they found on his computer. He also was charged with trading and possessing child pornography.

Korb has been in training to work at Orchard Place, a Des Moines facility for troubled teens. He was suspended from Orchard Place immediately after the arrest.

He managed the Burlington Residential Facility from 1992 to 1999, although he last worked at the facility as a residential officer before leaving last year.

Curt Campbell, the director of the 8th Judicial District correctional services office, said he couldn't comment on Korb's departure.

Police in Corpus Christi, Texas, discovered Korb's name last summer during the investigation of another man. Their information triggered Des Moines authorities to begin investigating two weeks ago.

None of the alleged crimes involving Korb occurred at Orchard Place, authorities said, and there are no allegations he took any of the photographs.

Police say Korb used the identity of a young girl when he went online so other men would be more likely to trade photos with him.

Carolyn Hejmanek, the Orchard Place director of behavior health services, said Korb was training to become a counselor at the facility. She said no record was found when Korb's background was checked.

Iowa workers pay more for insurance

■ Firms in Iowa are contributing less for health insurance than the national average.

Associated Press

DES MOINES — Iowa workers pay more than the national average toward health insurance, a new survey says.

Iowa employers pay slightly lower health-insurance premiums than the national average, yet their employees are contributing more toward the cost, said the survey conducted by Des Moines consultant David P. Lind & Associates.

Iowa employers were billed an average of $494 for family policies, compared with a national average of $202 for all types of plans.

Iowa employers were billed an average of $494 for family policies, compared with a national average of $529. The company used a spring 2000 survey by the Kaiser Family Foundation as a source for national statistics.

The Lind survey includes responses from 499 companies out of the 2,009 companies contacted.

Employees of the responding Iowa firms are contributing almost $39 per month toward the monthly premiums for single policies and approximately $180 for family coverage. The Kaiser survey showed the national average employee contribution was $35 for single coverage and $145 for family policies.

"We're noticing that the employee contribution levels are going up on a dollar basis but not as greatly as the premium is going up," said David Lind, the president of Lind & Associates.

Employers are balking on passing all of the costs to their employees because of the tight labor market.

Employee contributions toward HMOs increased from $31 to $37 for single coverage and $155 to $175 for families.

Preferred provider organization plans showed a 7 percent increase to $191 monthly for single policies. Premiums for family coverage increased 9 percent to $500. Employee contributions remained virtually the same at $35 for single coverage and $180 for family policies.

The average monthly premium for employers who offer traditional indemnity plans was $222 for single coverage, up 23 percent from 1999. The family premium was $586, up about 20 percent. Employee contributions were $33 for a single employee and $195 for family coverage.

Many employers are examining their pharmaceutical costs to see if they can attain savings.

The firm's survey showed that many employers are encouraging workers to use generic drugs by requiring lower co-payments for those drugs.

Stock ploy targets Maytag shares

■ A Canadian company is trying to buy up shares at less-than-market value.

Associated Press

NEWTON, Iowa — It's been a tough few weeks for Newton-based appliance manufacturer Maytag. Earnings are way down, the chief executive has quit, and now a Canadian company is trying to buy up more than 3 percent of the company's stock from shareholders at a very cheap price.

TRC Corp. has offered shareholders $25.50 a share, even though Maytag stock closed on Nov. 17 at $29.25.

Such offers — called mini-tenders — are legal but are viewed cautiously by the U.S.

Securities and Exchange Commission. The SEC notes that mini-tender offers fall below a 5 percent trigger, after which the agency's rules provide important protections for shareholders.

Doug West, a vice president at the A.G. Edwards & Sons Inc. office in Urbandale, said mini-tender offers are aimed at unwary investors who don't understand the offer or don't keep track of stock prices.

West said many companies and shareholders are targets.

TRC President Lorne Albaum has said the offer was priced to attract shareholders who hold odd lots of stock, which usually means blocks of fewer than 100 shares.

Odd-lot holders would get more if they accept the offer than they would if they sold in the marketplace because they wouldn't have to pay a commission, Albaum said.

"That's ridiculous," West said.

In a common type of mini-tender offer, experts say, a buyer purchases shares from shareholders at below-market value and then resells the stock on the open market for a profit.

Jim Powell, a Maytag spokesman, said Maytag learned of the proposal from a shareholder and has advised shareholders to reject the offer.

Based on TRC papers, Maytag said, shareholders who have already tendered shares can withdraw by 4 p.m. Wednesday.

Italian firm's opening worries some

■ Existing workers might be replaced by those making lower wages, some people say.

Associated Press

BURLINGTON — A subsidiary of an Italian manufacturer plans to open a production plant in Burlington.

The creation of 20 jobs next year and up to 50 by 2002 is good news for Southeast Iowa, but the nature of the jobs has some people concerned that existing workers could be displaced by those working for lower wages.

Borghini USA, a subsidiary of the Italian-based the Borghini

Group, has purchased an 83,000-square-foot building for nearly $1.6 million. The plant will make metal tubing with zinc plating for use in hydraulic systems — the type of materials currently made in a Case-New Holland factory for the company's backhoes and dozers.

Borghini has no direct relationship with Case Corp. other than being a supplier, said Tim Frank, the communications director of Case-New Holland.

Frank said his company has a global strategy for buying more products from other companies who can make them cheaper than in-house workers can.

"Borghini is a qualified supplier that happen to see the business," he said of the company's locating in Iowa. "It's not our strategy to piggy-back suppliers in the community to reduce the hourly wage of our employees."

Borghini promises in an agreement with a local economic-development group that workers will receive at least $10.60, which is 85 percent of the average hourly wage in Des Moines County.

Plant manager Steve Van Zant said a new person hired at Case is paid approximately $11 an hour through five years, when that wage raises roughly to the average Case-worker wage of $20 an hour.

based solely on where within the state they happen to reside," Bush argued.

In a separate brief, Harris tried to distance herself from both Bush and Gore, even as Democrats pointed to her GOP presidential campaigning as a sign of bias. All seven Supreme Court justices were appointed by Democratic governors.

"It is clear, that for the Democrats and the Republicans, the object is to win, and that is understandable," Harris' brief said. "The stakes are very high."

In its paper reply, the Gore team asked the court to set a generous standard for officials to "ascertain the electorate's will" when ballots were punched in the disputed presidential election. They said local election officials in close cases can "determine the voter's intent" by closely examining the ballot.

Twelve days after America voted, the weekend tally of overseas absentee ballots lengthened Bush's tiny 300-vote lead to a still-minuscule 930.

With recounts under way in two Democratic-leaning counties and a third set to begin, Gore had a net gain of 93 votes, which, if allowed, would cut Bush's lead to 837. On Sunday, both sides objected to county vote-counting procedures.

Gore narrowly won the national popular vote and holds a slight edge over Bush in the all-important Electoral College tally, though neither man can reach the required total of 270 electoral votes without Florida's 25.

The Texas governor spent the day with his family in Austin, Texas. In church, the pastor said, "We continue our prayers for the political process in this country and for those most closely governed by it. May your patience be their patience."

Gore canceled plans to attend a long-scheduled conference in Tennessee, the home state that deserted him for Bush on Election Day. Approximately 100 pro-Bush protesters packed the sidewalks across from his official residence in Washington, shouting, "We want Bush!"

The identity of America's 43rd president rests with the courts and in the ballot-counting rooms of Palm Beach, Broward and Miami-Dade counties, where more than 1.5 million ballots were cast, a majority from Democrats.

"It seems to be that they're doing everything they can to stop the recounting of votes because they're slightly ahead and they fear that after the recounting they won't be," said Democratic vice presidential candidate Joseph Lieberman, who conducted a rare tour of all five major news shows Sunday.

had won control of Congress last week. He did not elaborate, but a motion was before Congress to declare Fujimori's presidency vacant on constitutional grounds of "moral incapacity."

"What I know is that he does not want to be an obstacle to the process of democratization so that the next elections can be absolutely transparent for the Peruvian people," Prime Minister Federico Salas told radio station Radioprogramas.

Fujimori refused to meet with a crowd of reporters who had gathered at his Tokyo hotel. A Peruvian Embassy official, who refused to give his name, handed out a brief statement in Spanish confirming that the president would resign.

"President Alberto Fujimori confirmed ... that he is resigning as president," the statement said. "In the course of 48 hours, he is going to formalize the decision with the newly elected president of the Congress."

Marquez said Sunday night that the Government Palace told him that Fujimori planned to send his resignation by e-mail today.

"We are all indignant with this attitude of the president. I urge him to return to the country. He has a moral obligation to the nation and must assume it," Marquez said at a news conference earlier Sunday.

Fujimori's ministers said they had decided to resign but would continue on until it was clear who was taking over the government. In a written statement, the ministers expressed their "indignation" that Fujimori's announcement was "made outside the country in the context of a grave crisis and uncertainty about his return." Peru's military high command said in a statement that it would respect any changes in the government now that Fujimori has resigned, as long as those changes respected the Constitution.

What's important for Peru is that the transition to the April 8 elections proceeds smoothly and peacefully.

High tech moving into classrooms

TECHNOLOGY

For example, if a faculty member is using a Video Presenter frequently, he or she is more than likely going to be placed in a room that has fixed equipment. However, Boutelle said, her office still places faculty who only use an overhead projector in rooms that have fixed equipment.

The teachers who don't know how to use the equipment can train with Space, Planning and Utilization or take classes to learn about the benefits of technology in the classroom. Academic Technology, a department within the UI Information Technology Services, provides assistance through training, consulting and access for faculty who use technology in instruction.

Academic Technology provides workshops on Web-based skills, digital images and Power Point presentations that teach faculty the skills they need to incorporate technology into their class, said the department's co-leader, Molly Langstaff. The workshops always fill up quickly, she said.

"Our numbers are growing, but we've only been around a few years," Langstaff said. "We're still getting the word out."

Faculty members are able to learn the technology at Studio 107 — South Lindquist Center Room 107 — a multi-media development studio for faculty to use the equipment and resources.

After taking a technology workshop, UI mathematics Professor Philip Kutzko said he will add Power Point demonstrations in his Calculus and Matrix Algebra for Business to his usual overhead projector presentations.

Kutzko thinks adding technology to his course is important to keep up with the times. However, he is hesitant because he feels the quality of a lecture must remain uniform, especially in a mathematics course.

"You can't experiment on the kids; you have to introduce technology slowly so you don't create anxiety," he said. "That's why I've taken my time."

Even though not all teachers use technology in their classrooms, they should still have resources available to improve their teaching, said Tom Rocklin, the director of the UI Center for Teaching. Because of the variations faculty are asked to conquer, it is important to give them freedom to use the technology as they see fit, he said.

"Like any other tool, the benefits of using technology in the classroom depends on the goals the teacher is trying to accomplish and how it is used," Rocklin said.

Power Point and viewing Web sites in classrooms are among the two major categories in which teachers use the equipment. For example just as a blackboard can be used poorly, so can Power Point, he said.

Rocklin feels computers and projectors in classrooms are beneficial for students because they open possibilities for teaching and allow teachers to provide examples in a new way.

"Teachers have the professional responsibility to be aware of and consider technology in their courses," he said. "Ultimately, it is their decision whether these tools will improve learning."

added. The UI director of Educational Placement, Rebecca Anthony, stressed that her office does encourage students to stay in Iowa but added that ultimately she just wants to find students jobs.

"Our goal is to find them a job that matches their needs and requirements," she said.

One way the educational placement office helps students find jobs is through a job fair it holds each year. It includes a majority of schools from Iowa, as well as schools from out-of-state.

Anthony was also involved in developing a Web site that allows Iowa schools to post any openings they have, at no cost. The Web site, www.iowaeducationjobs.com, also provides the user with an online application form that can be turned in to any of the employers on the site.

Coleman said she thinks that as the number of teaching jobs increase, so will the number of UI graduates that stay in Iowa.

Anthony said job openings for teachers are on the rise in Iowa. By 2003, approximately 33 percent of the teaching staff in Iowa will be eligible to retire or will be retiring, Anthony said.

Several committees have also been formed to help combat low teacher's salaries in Iowa, said Anthony, adding it was now basically up to the Legislature to decide.

"We hope to see an increase next year," she said.

UI plans new recycling probably the English-Philosophy Building, Schaeffer Hall and Phillips Hall.

Such recycling receptacles are already available in a few buildings, such as the IMU and Pappajohn Business Building, but not in the vast majority of them.

The UI already does a good job of recycling paper on campus, Klenske said, so the pilot program will focus on recycling aluminum and plastic — primarily beverage containers. Volunteers from the UI Environmental Coalition will collect and separate the bins, he said.

The UI Facilities Services Group has agreed to help buy the bins and place them in locations that will not violate the buildings' fire codes, Klenske said. Facilities administrators and coalition members had a meeting to discuss the program on Nov. 16.

"The meeting was really positive and enthusiastic," Klenske said. "We didn't know what to expect. We had heard from some other groups that it might be tough to deal with."

The UI Student Government tried a similar pilot program for recycling in academic buildings in the spring of 1999, UISG President Andy Stoll said Sunday. The program appeared to go pretty well, he said, but the recycling ended after three weeks.

The UISG will work with the Environmental Coalition to ask the UI administration to create an advisory committee on recycling made up of students, faculty and staff, Stoll said.

"That's how (recycling initiatives) will get accomplished — if everyone is asking for a change," he said. "Recycling is something that has been put on the backburner ... It's important that it is brought back into the spotlight."

The coalition plans to give UI President Mary Sue Coleman a petition of 1,000 signatures at the end of the semester from students who support the group's ambitions in order to persuade her to create the advisory committee, Klenske said.

The environment group hopes to work with the Associated Residence Halls to try out improved recycling programs in the dorms, he said. Currently, the UI has no universal policy on recycling in the dorms.

Memphis jail told to clean up its act

■ The Shelby County Jail is notorious for its violence.

By Woody Baird
Associated Press

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Larry Graham doesn't look like a guy who's easily pushed around: He's big, muscular and imposing.

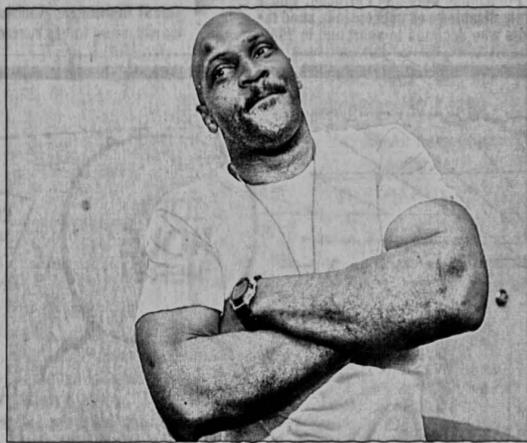

But physical stature didn't help when he landed in Shelby County Jail. He was beaten unconscious in April, he says, for refusing to take part in gladiator-style fights staged by gang members for their own amusement.

"You just don't buck them. There ain't nothing you can do, and ain't nobody going to help you," said Graham, who is 5-foot-11 and 220 pounds. "I just wanted to do my time and get out."

With more than 2,600 inmates, the Memphis jail — built in 1981 to house half that many prisoners — is Tennessee's largest and most notorious.

Critics call it a violent place in which prisoners accused of relatively minor offenses are caged with hardened criminals, and power and control come not from jailers but from street gangs such as the Gangster Disciples and the Vice Lords.

Debates over conditions at the downtown lockup have gone on for years, but they moved to

John L. Focht/Associated Press

Larry Graham says he was beaten in a Memphis jail for refusing to take part in gladiator-style fights staged by gang members.

the front burner during court hearings this fall, when current and former inmates described barbaric conditions in excruciating detail.

"It's cruel and unusual punishment just to be in that jail," said Robert Hutton, a lawyer who wants the county held in contempt of court for not making the jail safer under a 1997 federal court order. The county argues it is doing all it can and says a resolution remains elusive.

U.S. District Judge Jon McCalla isn't convinced, and in October he even threatened to throw the sheriff himself in the jail.

"I can't fix the jail," McCalla told Sheriff A.C. Gilles and county Mayor Jim Rout. "But I can make you want to fix it."

The legal fight has gone on since 1996, when Hutton sued on behalf of an inmate who says he was gang-raped by other prisoners.

U.S. District Judge Jerome Turner ordered the county in 1997 to separate potentially violent inmates from nonviolent ones and to provide better supervision by guards. McCalla took over the case early this year after Turner died of cancer.

One former inmate who was held on a drunken-driving charge testified that his leg was broken in two places when another prisoner in a crowded holding cell attacked him and stole a ring.

Other witnesses described gladiator-type contests called "Thunderdome" in which non-gang inmates were forced to fight. If they refused, they were beaten or left hog-tied for long periods.

Graham, 40, said he paid heavily for his refusal to become a gladiator. He said members held him around the neck from behind with a rope made of bed sheets while others beat him senseless with plastic soft drink containers filled with water. After the beating, the attackers took his bloody clothes and washed him off in a shower.

"I kept hoping to see a guard or something," Graham told McCalla. "But I never did."

Finally, other inmates managed to flag down a guard, and Graham was taken to the hospital. Later, he was placed in protective custody until he pleaded guilty to the cocaine dealing charge that sent him to jail. He's now serving a three-year sentence at a prison outside Memphis.

1,700 arrested in training center

■ Thousands protest the Army's School of the Americas, which trains Latin American soldiers.

By Elliott Minor
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ga. — Police arrested 1,700 protesters who had marched into Fort Benning Sunday demanding the closing of the Army's School of the Americas, a training center for Latin American soldiers.

Approximately twice that number, including actor Martin Sheen, had entered the west-central Georgia post, chanting and carrying cardboard coffins and crosses, while others continued the protest outside the gates.

The demonstrations have been spearheaded for 11 years by Roy Bourgeois, a Catholic priest who served in Bolivia. He blames the school for human-rights abuses committed by some of the school's former students. Army officials termed the charge absurd.

"I'd characterize it as false and as propaganda," Maj. Gen. John LeMoyné, the post commander, said at a news conference Sunday. "Roy's thesis is based on emotion and falsehood."

Wearing plastic parkas, many of the protesters shivered in near-freezing temperatures and occasional rain as they marched to a point where they were halted by military and civilian police.

Police officials estimated that 6,500 people gathered outside the gate for the protest, approximately half the number that appeared last year. The group School of Americas Watch organizes the demonstrations each year near the anniversary of the Nov. 16, 1989, killings in El Salvador of six Jesuit priests. A United Nations panel found 19 Salvadoran officers involved in the slayings had been trained at the school, the group said.

Some electors say scrap Electoral College

■ The nation's electors are split along party lines about the 200-year-old institution.

By Robert Tanner
Associated Press

More than a third of this year's Democratic presidential electors say they want to re-examine or scrap the Electoral College, which takes the final vote on the next person in the White House, while fewer than 1 in 10 Republicans think the nation should even consider tinkering with the system, an Associated Press survey found.

The partisan breakdown is not surprising, given that the Democratic candidate, Al Gore, may lose the presidency while winning the popular vote. Republican George W. Bush, if declared the victor in Florida, would win the crucial electoral vote.

AP interviewed 342 electors, or nearly two-thirds of the 538-member Electoral College.

"It's silly," said Gore elector Lana Boldi, a political coordinator for United Auto Workers in Michigan. "We're 200 years or more past when we really need that safeguard. I think the average voter is intelligent enough to cast a popular vote."

"It's a well thought-out system. I believe it's just as valid today as it's ever been," said Bush elector W.R. Timken Jr. of Ohio, a manufacturing executive who was also an elector for Bush's father in 1988. "If it was pure popular vote, the election would be all about the biggest cities and biggest states, and the rest of the country would be forgotten."

A downtown drinking summit ...

A step in the right direction

On a cold November night in Iowa City, citizens of the community gathered at the Fieldhouse Restaurant & Bar with a purpose. On Nov. 15, Students for Local Politics hosted a forum to discuss the city's alleged drinking problem. UI students, Iowa City residents, several police officers and one city councilor brought their ideas, questions and suggestions to the table during the open discussion.

Several methods were suggested to aid both underage and binge drinking in Iowa City's downtown, as well as at house parties around the city. However, there seemed to be two very distinct sides.

Generally, authority figures such as police officers and city councilors believe that the answer lies in refining bar operations. This includes everything from limiting drink specials to imposing greater fines on establishments that sell alcohol to minors.

It was essential that the forum be held in a student-friendly environment.

Representatives of students contest that a greater abundance of alternatives to drinking in the downtown area would divert a large portion of underage drinkers. Often, students feel they have no other option for nightly entertainment than one of Iowa City's many bars. Many suggestions were offered to increase nighttime options, including improvements on the IMU, UI sponsored events and more incentive for businesses for downtown development.

At first, it seems ironic that a forum on underage and binge drinking was held at a bar. However, the location was undoubtedly the result of wise planning. In order to get a higher attendance from UI students, it was essential that the forum be held in a student-friendly environment, as opposed to the City Hall or police station.

Despite differing views on the ultimate solution to combating Iowa City's drinking problem, the first, and perhaps most important step has been made. Only in bringing together UI students and administrators with city officials will this or any problem be resolved in a reasonable way.

GUEST OPINION

A lesson in bar self-defense

I don't have any brothers. I was raised in a family with four girls, so I have no clue what makes guys do the things they do. For example, I'm puzzled how some guys get the idea that groping women at the bars is standard behavior. It's absolutely repulsive, not to mention illegal.

Don't think I am excusing my own sex. We are guilty sometimes, too — but, by comparison, much less often.

I almost feel sorry for the guys that think it's all right to grab my backside in the bar, because I don't let them off easy. The last fella that got grabby also got grabbed — by the bouncers, as they tossed his butt out the door and onto the sidewalk. I know this grabbing phenomenon happens to lots of women, so for those of you who don't know what to do, here's your plan of attack. It's actually kind of fun, and it goes like this:

1. Locate the culprit. This is easy — it's usually the only one who won't make eye contact. The guilty party usually hides his eyes and looks down, at his beer or around the room.

2. Walk up to him and tap his shoulder. Usually the guy will turn around and say, "What?" because he knows he's about to get railed, and thinks that maybe he can scare you off by being a jerk. Don't fall for it.

3. Calmly ask Mr. Grabby "Did I say you could touch me?" and watch him squirm while he tries to think of an acceptable answer. Of course, the only one that is satisfactory is a heartfelt apology. This is rare, so don't expect it.

4. Whatever the reply is, let Jack Handey know that in the future, he is not to touch you without your expressed consent beforehand. Now, turn and walk away.

If you say the previous part loudly enough, you can occasionally walk away to the sounds of clapping and cheers. Believe me, it happens. This should do the trick. But I know from experience that some very dense guys mistake anger for a come-on (hard to believe, but it's true ... there are some seriously idiotic guys around here) and grab again at the first opportunity. In that case, this is how you finish the job:

5. Look at Mr. Repeat Grabber very carefully. Make a mental note of what he is wearing and what he looks like. Find the nearest bouncer and point out the guilty party. Then watch as he's snatched away from his friends and planted firmly on the sidewalk outside.

I'm sure some people think I'm overreacting. But it happens so often, I'm beginning to wonder where all the good guys are, the ones whose mothers taught them that the female body is not their personal property to peruse at their leisure. Grabbing, pinching, attempting to rip women's pants off and other forms of general harassment are really not OK. Ladies, remember that no matter what you're wearing, you are not public property. Respect yourself, and don't let anyone disrespect you.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Desperate times call for desperate measures in this political crisis

Given the problem with the butterfly ballot in Palm Beach County, Fla., I believe the only fair solution is a revote. However, simply allowing the results of a revote to stand without some stipulations could open up new cans of worms. What if significantly more, or fewer, or different voters turn out the second time? What if those who voted the first time for Nader or Buchanan or anyone else, switch their votes to Gore or Bush?

What about this as a solution? Stipulate ahead of time the following: 1) No more total votes will be allotted to the complete slate of candidates than were cast during the first vote. 2) Candidates other than Bush and Gore will be allotted the same number of votes they received from the first vote. 3) To determine Bush and Gore's revote totals, multiply the percentage of votes each receive during the revote by the combined total they received in the first vote.

Make sense? Or too contrived and convoluted? If the latter, why shouldn't we use a bizarre solution to resolve a bizarre situation?

Charles F. Darley
Iowa City resident

Election 2000: A means to an end

As the Bush and Gore camps sift through the aftermath left behind by the elections, I'm sure that you've all been eagerly absorbing the latest updates from Florida. Or not.

Yes, it's quite a beauty this thing turned out to be. We have Marc Ricicot, the Republican governor of Montana, demanding, "What in the name of God is going on here?" Then there's Chris Lehane, a Gore spokesman, accusing Republicans this weekend of injecting "raw, crass partisan politics" into the situation.

Ahhh ... there's nothing quite like some raw, crass partisan politics to brighten up a November afternoon. But let's face it, this election needs to be resolved one of these days, and the sooner that day comes, the better. And the solution does not have to be as messy as it has been predicted to be.

Al Gore can bring a quick, clean and respectable end to the electoral feud by conceding the race at some point this week. Granted, this is not an easy thing for the guy to do — especially when he has won the nation's popular vote and had arguably won the support of more Floridians than did Bush. But it would be the honorable way out and — for Democrats — the strategically preferable choice.

By stepping aside and assuming the moral high ground in this situation, Gore can lay the groundwork for Democratic control of all three branches of the government by 2004. Historically, the president's opposing party gains congressional seats during mid-term elections, which would mean that if Bush takes office this year, Democrats will take control of the House and Senate in 2002.

Gore, meanwhile, will essentially have a rain check for the presidency in 2004, should he run again. Voters will remember four years from now that it was Gore who brought about a peaceful and expedient solution to this election and displayed dignity and self-sacrifice in the meantime. By moving out of the way now, in addition, Gore can avoid the criticism and general disenchantment that will be associated for the next four years with this election's "winner."

Bush, instead, will earn the asterisk beside his name in the annals of history and will be held responsible for the reign of incompetence and gloom that will mark his presidency.

The American public, 52 percent of which voted against Bush, will not be pleased when the economy goes astray, unemployment levels rise and quality health care becomes more difficult to obtain. As was the case with his father, any downturns in the general well-being of most Americans will be attributed to the Bush, deservedly or not.

So it is up to Gore to solve this problem before lawyers, courts and Florida state officials do it themselves. It is difficult to tell how much more legal wrangling the public will stand for, and the longer it all drags out, the more it makes one wonder how this mess was established in the first place.

It is only fitting that things should turn out in such a manner, however. We have a virtual tie for the presidency not because the two major candidates were that impressive but because neither could inspire more than 48 percent of the public to follow their lead for the next four years.

"Democracy," H.L. Mencken wrote in the 1920s, "is that system of government under which the people, having millions to choose from, including thousands who are handsome and many who are wise, pick out a Coolidge to be head of the state. It is as if a hungry man, set before a banquet prepared by master cooks and covering a table an acre in area, should turn his back upon the feast and stay his stomach by catching and eating flies."

Such is the case in 2000, with the apparent election of Bush (or Gore). Certainly, we could have done much better. As unusual and frustrating as the outcome of this election appears, it is clear that — under some karmic law of retribution — this is precisely what the nation deserves.

A Palestinian throws back a tear gas canister during minor clashes in the West Bank town of Ramallah Sunday. The violence in the region has declined in recent days, but it has not ended.

Arafat, Barak both look to restore calm

As the violence in the Mideast declines, both leaders try to restrain their followers.

By Greg Myre
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — After seven weeks of Mideast bloodshed, Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak and Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat aren't on speaking terms, but both are speaking of restraint.

Barak said Sunday that Israel didn't want to escalate the conflict and therefore was not planning to retaliate for the shooting death of an Israeli soldier. Palestinian leaders said they were working to implement Arafat's recent call for an end to shooting from territory under his control.

Two Palestinians were killed, and nine were injured in three separate clashes Sunday. A 14-year-old Palestinian boy was killed and six Palestinians injured in a brief clash in the Gaza Strip, doctors said. And a 22-year-old Palestinian was killed and two injured in a gunfight with an Israeli army position outside Nablus in the northern West Bank, a doctor in a Nablus hospital said.

In a third incident, also in the West Bank, approximately three Palestinians opened fire on an Israeli bus near the Jewish settlement of Alfei Menashe, but nobody on the bus was hurt. Israeli soldiers who were nearby returned fire, but the army was not sure whether any of the Palestinians was hit. A Palestinian with a gunshot wound in his abdomen was brought shortly afterward to a hospital at the nearby city of Qalqilya, a hospital official said.

In the Jordanian capital, Amman, an Israeli diplomat suffered minor wounds in a shooting attack.

But overall, violence has ebbed. In the past few days, most casualties have come from brief outbursts of shooting, rather than the large-scale, sustained clashes that characterized much of the conflict that has claimed more than 230 lives, most of them Palestinian.

Previous lulls have lasted only briefly, followed by renewed spasms of unrest. Still, both sides said Sunday there were hopeful signs that calm could be restored.

Israeli army chief Lt. Gen. Shaul Mofaz said the Palestinians have not issued a cease-fire order, but the Palestinian leadership was "on the road to reducing its (hostile) activities."

The Palestinians said Sunday that their security forces were acting on Arafat's call for restraint, which was issued on Nov. 17. The Palestinian leader ordered an end to shooting from Palestinian-controlled territory, though he did not refer to land under Israeli security.

Leaders face tough task at climate confab

Negotiators from around the world prepare for a battle over curbing greenhouse gases.

By Anthony Deutsch
Associated Press

THE HAGUE, Netherlands — After a week of preliminary talks, key international leaders began arriving Sunday to bargain over the toughest aspects of curbing emissions that are changing the Earth's climate.

Some 2,000 lower-level officials did what they could to prepare the ground for the final week of negotiations among environment ministers or cabinet-rank officers from at least 150 countries, but they failed to resolve differences over how best to protect the planet.

U.S. officials said Sunday that they felt their efforts to find common ground and be flexible had not been returned by their European counterparts.

The United States has been singled out for criticism for what environmentalists and some governments call its effort to wriggle out of commitments to reduce greenhouse gas emissions.

"What we want is a way that makes it work without penalizing the economies of the world and our economy," said Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho.

Craig and Sen. Chuck Hagel, R-Nebraska, were sent by Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott to observe the negotiations by the Clinton administration. An eight-member team from the House of Representatives is expected to arrive soon.

If the conference ends in agreement, any treaty enforcing a new global code of behavior on emissions would require ratification by most of the industrial countries. Without a U.S. endorsement, it would be difficult for such a treaty to come into force.

The U.S. Senate already has passed a resolution making its ratification conditional on assurances that the U.S. competitiveness on world markets will not be harmed.

A select group of leading policy makers held informal closed-door talks in The Hague ahead of a ceremony today marking the start of the critical second phase of the conference.

The politicians are working toward a comprehensive plan to reduce the Earth's output of heat-trapping gasses from businesses, farms and automobiles, without bloating national budgets or hampering the global economy.

The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, a board of 2,000 leading scientists, projects that in the coming 100 years there will be more rainfall, a temperature increase of up to 10.8 degrees Fahrenheit and a sea-level rise of up to 30 inches.

On Nov. 18, thousands of activists from around the world erected a sandbag dike around the Dutch conference venue, symbolizing the threat of melting ice caps and harsher seasons.

An agreement reached in 1997 in Kyoto, Japan, called for a worldwide reduction of carbon-based gas emissions by an average 5.2 percent below 1990 levels. The target date for the reductions was 2012. Europe is committed to cutting emissions by 8 percent, Japan 6 percent and the United States 7 percent.

On Nov. 16, the European Union rejected a proposal from the United States that would enable it to meet half its Kyoto target without reducing emissions. As part of a wide-ranging package of free-market proposals, the United States wants to be able to trade carbon-emission credits and purchase foreign "sinks."

Despite the confrontation between the United States and the EU, the first week of talks was not entirely without progress.

An important advance came from a number of leading U.S. agricultural groups that pledged to be part of a climate-change solution if the government helps them to adopt new, expensive farming techniques.

Farms can substantially reduce atmospheric carbon levels if, instead of tilling the soil, they coat the land with emission-trapping resins.

"There are reasons for adopting no-till farming techniques, but it's not a cost-free enterprise," said John McClelland of the National Corn Growers Association. "We want to be a part of the solution, not just part of the problem."

Indian drug trafficker beheaded in Saudi Arabia

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (AP) — An Indian convicted of drug trafficking was beheaded in Saudi Arabia Sunday, the Interior Ministry said.

Koya Karo had been found guilty of smuggling an unspecified quantity of heroin into the kingdom; he was beheaded in the city of Dammam on Saudi Arabia's eastern coast, the ministry said in a statement.

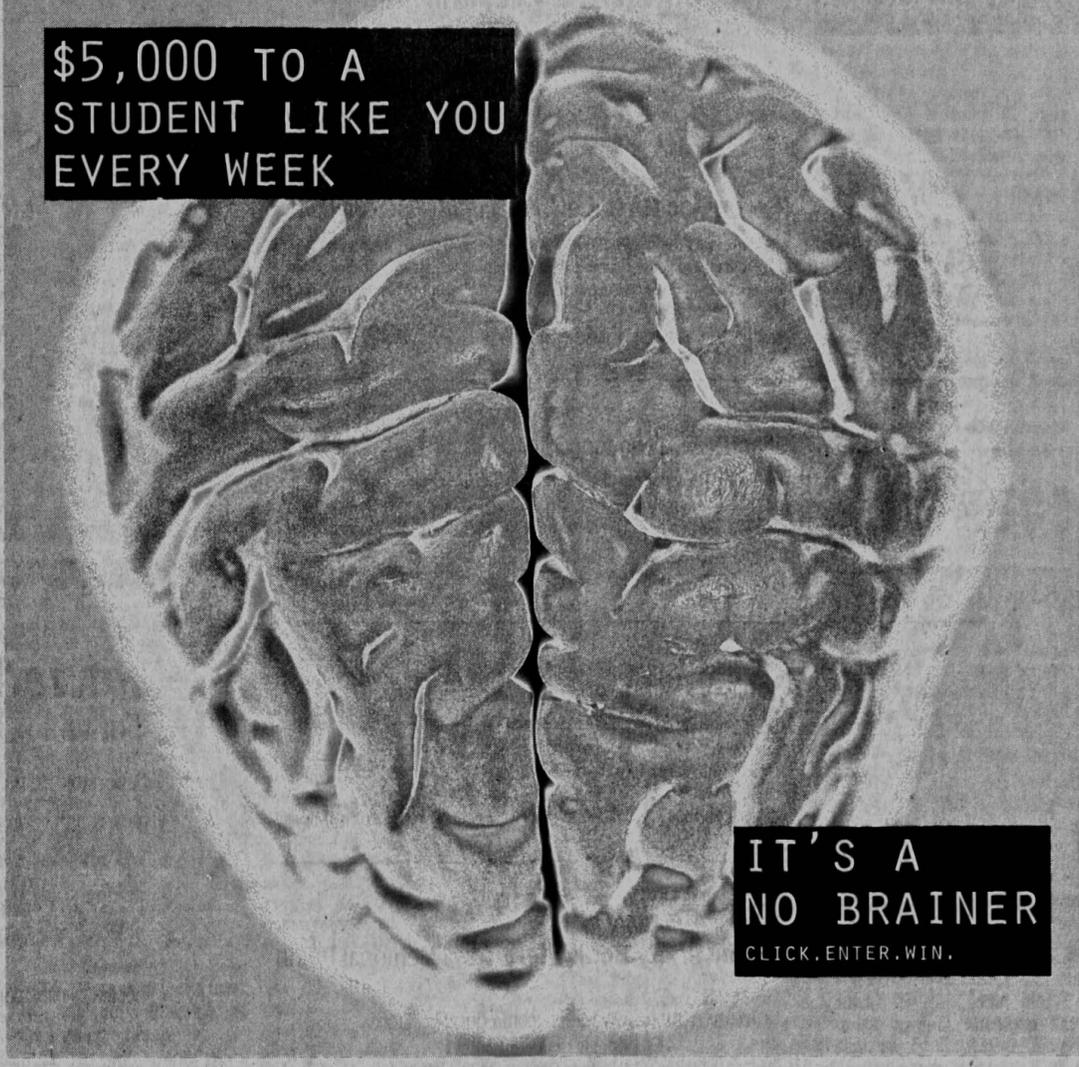

Sunday's beheading brings the number of executions in Saudi Arabia this year to at least 124. At least 99 people were beheaded last year. The record number of beheadings in one year in Saudi Arabia was 191 in 1995.

Saudi Arabia follows a strict interpretation of Islamic law that prescribes the death sentence for murder, rape, drug trafficking and armed robbery. Human-rights organizations maintain that Saudi Arabia often fails to give defendants fair trials and point out that Islam calls for limiting the use of capital punishment.

Saudi officials criticize such human-rights allegations as anti-Islam campaigns.

Q: Who was the first person to get a star on the "walk of fame?"

"Dixie Chicks: On the Fly"

The Dixie Chicks are fun, starting with their name, inspired by Little Feat's classic song "Dixie Chicken." To boot, the trio takes the concert stage dressed to kill — then treats the audience to top-notch musicianship and strong vocals.

How Howard stole the Grinch

The Grinch (Jim Carrey) confronts Cindy Lou Who at his mountain retreat in Ron Howard's How the Grinch Stole Christmas.

The great thing about children's tales is that they present a world of innocence — a world in which good and bad are clearly measured out in black and white. Dr. Seuss' classic short story How the Grinch Stole Christmas followed this format to perfection: The residents of Whoville, led by the earnest Cindy Lou Who, represent the good; the loathsome Grinch, who hates Christmas and plots to ruin it for the Whos, represents the bad. In the end, of course, good prevails. Why does the Grinch hate Christmas so much? Who cares? He just does. It's this simplicity that makes it all work.

FILM REVIEW
By Adam Kempenaar

So why does director Ron Howard muck it all up by trying to explain the Grinch's loathsome behavior in his big-screen, live-action adaptation? In this version, which stars Jim Carrey as the Grinch, the precocious Cindy Lou (Taylor Momsen) decides to do some research into the Grinch's past. What she uncovers is a sad tale of a younger Grinch who was teased by his Whoville peers for being green and hairy and who failed to win the affections of the lovely Martha May Whovier (Christine Baranski). Paging Dr. Freud ...

This leads to the Grinch's self-imposed banishment to Mt. Crumpit, where he lives out his lonely existence, despising the Whos for their wretched optimism and incessant happiness.

My biggest reaction to Grinch is that ... well, I didn't have much of a reaction at all. It's not a particularly moving film, at least not in any real emotional way. I doubt whether it will even put most viewers in the Christmas spirit.

Furthermore, it's not very funny, save for a few instances that will probably make more sense to the adults in the audience than the kids. One such scene is when the Grinch, having been invited by Cindy Lou to attend the Christmas Who-bilation, checks his daily planner to find that he is scheduled to "jazzercise," "wrestle with self-loathing," and have "dinner with me."

Ultimately, there is only one reason to see this movie — Jim Carrey. The set design, costumes and makeup will all probably win Oscars, but without Carrey's uncanny comedic abilities, Grinch would be just another patronizing Christmas movie. His voice — a bizarre hybrid of James Cagney and Richard Nixon — borders on the obnoxious, but the energy and pure delight he brings to his performance are infectious.

She's still searching for intelligent life

■ Lily Tomlin is back on Broadway with an updated version of her classic comic hit.

By Michael Kuchwara
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Fifteen years later, Lily Tomlin is still searching — and the laughs have not diminished.

In her 1985 one-woman show, The Search for Signs of Intelligent Life in the Universe, Tomlin took on her own worries and those of the world as she tried to make sense of what it all means.

"I worry that yesterday's culture shock is today's reality check," she says in the opening monologue of her comic meditation, which has been brought back to Broadway's Booth Theatre for a 10-week run. "No matter how cynical you become, it's never enough to keep up."

Keeping up seems to be the evening's theme, no matter which of Jane Wagner's 13 characters Tomlin is playing. Wagner's writing, slightly updated for this latest edition, is amazing — dense, funny and astonishingly prophetic. What she has come up with is a series of playlets, pieces that are woven together so tightly that by the end of the show, everyone in them seems to be interconnected.

Search, though, is held together by one of Wagner's more memorable creations, a crazy bag lady named Trudy, who, wearing an umbrella hat, travels the streets of Manhattan with her shopping cart. "For some reason, muggers steer clear of people wearing umbrella hats," Trudy says.

Not that Tomlin wears an umbrella hat on stage. Dressed simply in a fluid black blouse and pants, she suggests whatever props she needs — and it works. The performer is not only a verbal comedian but a physical one as well. Watch as Tomlin takes on Chrissy, out of a job but forever looking, as she delivers an entire monologue on self-esteem while doing aerobics. The woman doesn't even sweat.

Tomlin can skewer the upper crust, too. There's Kate, the coiffure-challenged socialite, who's bored with her wealthy but aimless life. "I am sick of being the victim of trends I reflect but don't even understand," she complains. Much of Act 2 deals with Lynn, an enlightened, New Age woman, who eventually marries Bob, a supersensitive and aware kind of guy. He must be. He wears T-shirts that proclaim things like "Whales Save Us."

Close encounters of the villainous kind

NEW YORK (AP) — Glenn Close enjoyed camping it up as villain Cruella De Vil in Disney's 102 Dalmations.

But she notes, with a hint of anger, that wicked characters in children's stories tend to be female. "Because of some huge kind of collective fear, is why," she says in Sunday's New York Daily News. "It's deep in the human psyche."

"The children in these stories are forced to contend with a wicked stepmother or a wicked witch — and Cruella is in that great tradition of witches who scare children and from whom they must escape," she said.

Close has also played the villainess in more grown-up films, such as Fatal Attraction and Dangerous Liaisons.

"Hollywood also loves roles in which women deteriorate in front of our very eyes and end up either in the gutter or dead," she said.

Ramming home the truth

LAS VEGAS (AP) — After watching homemade robots destroy each other in noisy battle, "Tonight Show" host Jay Leno came up with a strategy.

"We just kind of keep ramming the other guy," he said on Nov. 18 at Comedy Central's "Battlebots" competition.

It worked. Leno's "Chin-Killa" robot easily defeated "Ginsu," a combination of saw blades on wheels.

Approximately 140 robots entered the competition, which has become somewhat of a phenomenon for robot creators and the show's fans. The robots, classified by weight, fight inside a Plexiglas-enclosed ring until one is destroyed or badly damaged.

Football graduation rates down

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The graduation rate for football players at the nation's major colleges dropped from 51 percent to 48 percent, the lowest since 1985, according to the latest NCAA study.
But overall, the graduation rate for all Division I athletes remained at 58 percent, the same as the last survey by the NCAA a year ago.
"We're concerned about the decline in rates among football players," NCAA President Cedric Dempsey said in the report released Monday. "There's been a slow, steady decline for a number of years. We need to start looking at what some of the reasons might be for this decline."
The data were for the athletes who entered college in 1993. The overall graduation rate of 58 percent remained 2 percent higher than the rate for the general student population.

Hawkeyes suffer emotional loss in season finale

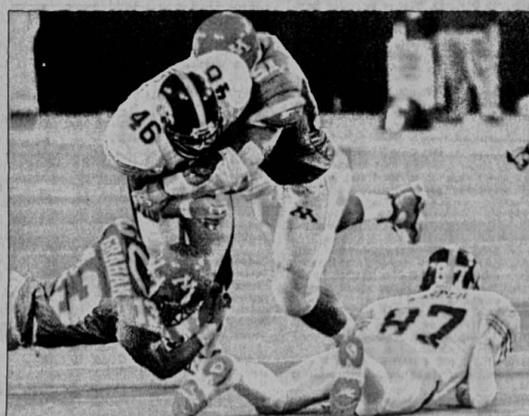

■ The Iowa football team squanders a 12-point fourth quarter lead in the battle for Floyd.

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

MINNEAPOLIS — A.J. Blazek sat hunched over. His hands cradled his head like a football. He was crying because his Iowa football days were done.
"I thought we had the win all the way until the end," he said. "It's tough. The last two weeks or so that Tigerhawk has started to mean a little more to me. I'm done. I might never put a helmet on again. That's the tough part."
Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz realizes the 27-24 loss to Minnesota on Nov. 18 will burn inside a little bit longer, but he thanked his seniors, saying their leadership and hard work were instrumental to Iowa's small successes this season and will be passed through the ranks as the underclassmen continue to develop. He praised the effort given by his entire roster through a 3-9 season.

"I don't want anybody hanging their heads," Ferentz said. "A lot of the guys came in looking at the ground. All we've asked these guys from day one is to fight and give great effort, and they've done that. We didn't play well enough in the final analysis to get the win, but the entire staff is very, very proud of the effort our players played with. This month is when a team shows character and shows attitude. I think our guys have passed that test with flying colors."

The one test that seemed to stump Iowa for most of the season was stopping the big play. The last several weeks the Hawkeyes were able to contain the offenses of Wisconsin, Penn State and Northwestern and subsequently came away with two victories. However, Iowa fell victim to its nemesis again on Nov. 18, as two Travis Cole passes seized the win for Minnesota and handed Iowa a bitter defeat in its season finale.

Hawkeyes barely win season opener

■ Luke Recker lead Iowa in scoring, putting up 17 points in his debut.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

Following Iowa's 83-79 victory over Wisconsin-Milwaukee Sunday evening, coach Steve Alford explained that you have got to be able to roll with the punches. He was talking about his need for a new clipboard after breaking one during a heated tirade in the first half, but he very well could have been summing up his team's performance.
The Hawkeyes overcame the hot shooting Panthers and early foul trouble to earn their first victory of the season in front of a sold-out Carver-Hawkeye Arena.
"This team will win a lot of games," Alford said of the Panthers. "This was not an ideal opener for us."
The Panthers poured in bucket after bucket in the first half, opening up a double-digit lead on a 3-pointer by Jason Frederick to go ahead 24-13. Prior to that basket, during a television time out, an enraged Alford berated his team and in the process shattered his clipboard. His method of motivation took root, as Iowa slowly climbed back into the game.
A lay in by Glen Worley and a medium-range jumper by Duez Henderson brought Iowa to within one at 38-37, but the Panthers held onto a slim five-point lead heading to the locker room, 47-42.

The Panthers drilled seven three-point attempts in the first half, often times catching the Hawkeyes off guard or after Iowa appeared to have gained momentum.

The half ended with both Worley and Reggie Evans with three personal fouls and Luke Recker with two as both teams struggled to adjust to new, tighter officiating this season.

"Coach got on us, and that was that," Evans said of Alford's half-time talk.

Whatever was said in the locker room during the break lit a fire under the Hawkeyes, as they responded by opening the second half with a 14-5 run. Under the veteran leadership of guards Dean Oliver and Recker, Iowa pulled ahead of the Panthers. Recker put the Hawkeyes up to stay with a lay-up to make the score 48-47, and he quickly added a 3-pointer to open the game up.
Things tightened down the stretch as the Panthers remained within striking distance. After Recker hit a clutch jumper in the final minute, Chad Angeli answered with a basket of his own to bring UW-Milwaukee within two. With his team clinging to an 81-79 lead, Oliver calmly stepped to the line after being fouled and drained his only two free-throw attempts of the night to seal the victory.
"(Alford's) players won this game," UW-M coach Bo Ryan said following the loss. "We didn't do what we were supposed to do."
Though he was not pleased with his overall performance, Recker said the only thing that mattered to him was the team's victory. Despite being unhappy, Recker still managed to lead Iowa with 17 points.

Hawks split in Bluder's debut

■ Iowa topples Marquette before falling to Utah in Lisa Bluder's first two games.

By Roseanna Smith
The Daily Iowan

Iowa's come-from-behind, 70-57 victory over Marquette on Nov. 17 in the women's basketball season opener was a game to remember forever, said Hawk coach Lisa Bluder. Sunday's heartbreaking loss to Utah was one they would rather forget.
In the second game of the season, Iowa's offense didn't click, as frustrating shot after shot came back to the floor. Iowa matched Utah basket-for-basket the first four minutes. From there, Iowa fell to a deficit from which it was unable to recover, losing 66-42.
"It was pretty disappointing the way our offense went today," Bluder said. "I felt like we were very stagnant with the 3-point line in the first half. Despite the low Hawkeye-scoring, Utah was only able to grab one offensive rebound.

Led by Kristina Anderson's 10 points in the first half, the Utes took the lead, 31-12, with five minutes remaining. Looking for a rally, Jerica Watson connected for eight points to narrow the Utah lead to 35-22 before the half.
Boxing out was a concern following the Marquette game but was something in the first half of the Utah that came together for the team's new offense, Bluder said.
"We did a good job making the adjustment in the first half. Unfortunately, in the second half, we didn't maintain it," she said.
However, for the Hawkeyes, points came few and far between in the second half. Utah played close defense on shooters, not allowing any easy shots and forcing 21 total turnovers.

After a rough match on Nov. 17 that saw her tally only two kills and hit -.429 on the attack in Iowa's 3-0 loss to Michigan State, Renee Hill said she went shopping to forget about her poor performance.
After Nov. 18, Iowa volleyball coach Rita Buck-Crockett may consider turning the freshman loose with an American Express card more often.
"She had to understand it's no big deal," Buck-Crockett said. "It was good to see her come back and play a very good match."

Hawkeyes shouldn't be down about Saturday's game

thebottomline

Iowa owned Minnesota for three and a half quarters, leading 24-12 starting the fourth quarter, but Minnesota's passing attack caught its rhythm and scored two touchdowns in a row to give the Golden Gophers the victory.

GAME ANALYSIS

As the Iowa players filed out of their locker room Saturday after the game, their heads were pointed straight down. They weren't smiling, they weren't cracking jokes, they weren't talking about how glad they were the season was over and they could now go out on Thursdays — they were just plain distraught.

I know losing stinks, especially when it's the last game of the year. But these guys had no reason being down about the way they played Saturday.

For three quarters, they dominated Minnesota. In some areas, they played the best they had all year.

Take for example the running game and Ladell Betts. Iowa racked up 187 yards rushing, the most it has all season. Betts ripped off a 65-yard touchdown run en route to a 154-yard game on 18 carries. That was against a Minnesota defense that boasts two of the best defensive linemen in the conference, John Schlecht and Karon Riley.

Iowa's rushing defense played a solid game. It held Minnesota to 155 yards on the ground and contained 1,000-yard rusher Tellis Redmon to 103 on 26 carries.

With a 24-12 lead in the fourth quarter, it looked like Floyd of Rosedale was going to be back in Iowa City. Then the Gophers realized that a bowl berth was at stake, and they kicked into gear.

Minnesota turned to its passing attack, and as this year has gone, this is where Iowa's youth showed.

Ron Johnson, a possible All-Big Ten receiver, had a miraculous reception in the end zone to put Minnesota within five. Freshman cornerback Benny Sapp put himself in the best position he could, but a taller Johnson leaped over him for the grab. Johnson may have got that one, but there were many times that Sapp won. At half-time, Sapp had held Johnson to two catches for 28 yards.

On Minnesota's next possession, it sent Jermaine Mays on a deep pattern, splitting Iowa's coverage and burning sophomore Derek Pagel, who was playing for an injured Bob Sanders. As Mays sprinted 81 yards downfield for the go-ahead score, it was painfully evident that Iowa's defensive backfield still has a ways to go.

Sure, Saturday's loss was tough, and the Hawks didn't close up the game like they should have. However, they were playing a team that is talented (the Gophers smothered Illinois and beat Ohio State at Ohio State) and had a bowl game on the line. It's tough playing a team at home, with its biggest crowd of the year ready to watch it go to a bowl game. It's safe to say that maybe Minnesota had a little more to play for than the Hawkeyes on Saturday.

The Hawkeyes showed that there is little difference between them and a team that is going to a bowl game this year. That's encouraging.

A win would have helped recruiting. A win may have been good for team morale heading into the off-season. But this loss will stick in the Hawks' heads all summer long when they're running wind sprints and waking up in the morning to lift.

This version of the Hawkeyes has already made a statement: They've shown they can play ball. Now it's time for them to get even better.

Maybe next year they'll be the team playing for a bowl game on the last game of the year. Maybe.

■ The race to see which Florida school will play for the national championship will be the second close race in the Sunshine State.

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Bobby Bowden has been down this national championship trail before.

The Florida State coach knows all he can do now is sit back on his comfy couch, watch the season play out over the next two weeks, and wait for a computer to give him the final answer to: Who will play for the Bowl Championship Series' national title in the Orange Bowl on Jan. 3?

"I think we've done everything we can do," Bowden said Sunday morning, hours after his third-ranked Seminoles closed their regular season with a 30-7 victory over Florida, which dropped from No. 4 to No. 7 in the new AP poll. "From what I've seen of the computer, a win over No. 4 is bigger than a win over unranked. If it doesn't work out, it just doesn't work out."

When the latest BCS standings are released today, expect Oklahoma (10-0) to remain in first place and Florida State (11-1) to jump Miami (9-1) and move into second place. The top two teams in the final BCS standings Dec. 3 play in the Orange Bowl.

The Hurricanes, who beat the Seminoles, 27-24, on Oct. 7, also won convincingly Saturday, 26-0, at Syracuse. If Miami somehow remains second in the BCS standings, then beats Boston College, Florida State becomes a long shot to reach the title game. Unless, of course, Oklahoma loses to either Oklahoma State next week or to Kansas State in the Big 12 title game Dec. 2.

"They say we had to win by 20, and we did that tonight," Miami coach Butch Davis said. "I would be disappointed if we didn't stay second, especially with the tough stretch we've had. Every team we've played has had a winning record."

In the AP media poll and the

Dave Martin/Associated Press

Florida State University players Abdul Howard and Gennaro Jackson celebrate after beating Florida 30-7 at Doak Campbell Stadium in Tallahassee, Fla. Saturday.

coaches poll, the top three teams are the Oklahoma, Miami and Florida State.

As college football fans are quickly learning, though, the BCS standings are about more than just winning — and lobbying. It's whom you beat and by how much.

So far, the computer has been good to Bowden.

"I'm hoping nobody gets in there and twists that thing around," Bowden kidded.

Two years ago, the Seminoles completed their season with one loss and Bowden and his players watched in amazement as unbeaten Kansas State and UCLA were beaten on the final day to put Florida State in the title game against unbeaten Tennessee.

The wait is on again. Should Oklahoma lose, a Florida State-Miami rematch looms in the title game. Losses by Miami and Oklahoma could force Rose Bowl-bound Washington to change plans. The Huskies, who defeated Miami 34-29 earlier this season, should move as high as fourth in the new BCS standings.

Even Bowden says Washington has a claim on the title game.

"They beat Miami and haven't lost since," Bowden said. "They've got just as good a claim as Miami has. Both of them have a better claim than we have if you let humans decide. But I hope that computer makes a mistake. I hope it's dumb enough to pick us."

Four of the six automatic berths to the four BCS games — Orange, Fiesta, Sugar, Rose — have been decided: Florida State (ACC), Miami (Big East), Purdue (Big Ten) and Washington (Pac-10). The Big 12 and SEC champions also receive automatic spots.

Among BCS game hopefuls as at-large teams are Notre Dame, Oregon State and Virginia Tech. One spot will go to No. 11 Notre Dame (8-2) if the Irish can beat USC next Saturday; the other appears to be a tossup between the Hokies (9-1) and Beavers (10-1). Virginia Tech plays Virginia next weekend.

While the computer digests the latest set of numbers, some definite progress was made at the conclusion of Rivalry Week, with several conference titles and bowl bids decided.

The Rose Bowl is set — for now, anyway: No. 14 Purdue (8-3) vs. No. 4 Washington (10-1).

Drew Brees threw for one TD and ran for another as Purdue beat Indiana, 41-13, to win the Old Oaken Bucket and clinch its first trip to Pasadena in 34 years. The Boilermakers share the Big Ten title with Michigan and Northwestern but go to the Rose Bowl based on victories over the Wolverines and Wildcats. The Huskies, as Pac-10 co-champs, are Rose-bound for the first time since 1993 after a 51-3 victory over Washington State in the Apple Cup coupled with Oregon State's 23-13 win over Oregon in the Civil War. The Huskies, Ducks and Beavers tied for the league crown, but Washington won the head-to-head tiebreaker with Oregon State and the non-conference tiebreaker with Oregon.

The Southeastern Conference title game is set: No. 7 Florida (9-2, 7-1) vs. No. 17 Auburn (9-2, 6-2) at the Georgia Dome on Dec. 2.

The Gators clinched the SEC East two weeks ago with their win over South Carolina; the Tigers secured their spot as West winners with a 9-0 win at Alabama in the Iron Bowl, coupled with Arkansas' 17-10 overtime win over No. 23 Mississippi State. The SEC champion likely will play in the Sugar Bowl.

The Big 12 title game is official: No. 1 Oklahoma (10-0, 7-0) vs. No. 8 Kansas State (10-2, 6-2) on Dec. 2 at Arrowhead Stadium.

The Sooners clinched the South Division with a 27-13 win over Texas Tech, a game in which Josh Heupel threw for a season-low 248 yards and had two interceptions. "We have to get better," OU coach Bob Stoops said.

Among other teams set for bowl games:

- Boise State (9-2) earned the Big West Conference's automatic berth in the Humanitarian Bowl with a 66-24 victory over Idaho.
- Clemson (8-3), a 16-14 winner over South Carolina, already had accepted a spot in the Gator Bowl.
- Colorado State (9-2), Western Athletic Conference champs, will play Conference USA winner Louisville (9-2) in the Liberty Bowl. The Cardinals clinched their spot with a 32-13 win over Houston.
- Minnesota (6-5), 27-24 winners over Iowa, appears set to play in the Mironpc.com Bowl.
- TCU (9-1), with LaDainian Tomlinson running for 305 yards and three TDs in a 47-14 win over Texas-El Paso, is set for the Mobile Alabama Bowl.

quarterbyquarter

In the first quarter, it looked like this one was going to be a defensive struggle. In Iowa's first two drives, it only picked up one first down each, and was forced to punt. On Minnesota's first drive, they also punted. It wasn't until Minnesota's second drive that it got something together. Behind the running of Tellis Redmon, Minnesota drove down the field picking up consistent runs of five yards. After being stopped at the 12-yard line, they sent Dan Nystrom to kick a 29-yard field goal, which helped to put the Gophers up 3-0.

On Iowa's ensuing drive, Kyle McCann threw an pass that was picked off by Minnesota's Maurice White at the 25-yard line.

With good field position, the Gophers failed to get a first down and sent Nystrom in to kick a 25-yard field goal. Nystrom's kick was wide right. Minnesota did not score, and Iowa got the ball back at the 20-yard line.

After getting the ball back from Minnesota's missed kick, the Hawkeyes started to piece together a drive.

McCann hit Kahili Hill for a nifty 25-yard pass. Minnesota had a roughing the passer penalty to give Iowa all the way down to the Minnesota 10-yard line. Minnesota had a personal foul call a few plays later putting Iowa at the 21-yard line. Five plays later McCann hit Chris Oliver in the end zone for a five-yard touchdown pass.

On Minnesota's next possession, the Gophers drove down to the Iowa 1-yard line, and Nystrom booted through a 27-yard field goal, putting Minnesota within one-point range.

The Hawkeyes weren't done scoring for the half. McCann hit Oliver deep for a 36-yard pass to put Iowa at its 42-yard line. After a personal foul call on Minnesota, Iowa moved the ball to the 13-yard line. Nate Kaeding came out and kicked a 30-yard field goal putting Iowa up 10-6.

On Iowa's first possession of the second half, Ladell Betts busted through the middle and out-ran Minnesota defenders for a 65-yard touchdown run, his longest of the year. That run put Betts over the 1,000-yard mark for the season and gave Iowa a commanding 17-6 lead.

After both teams went 3-and-out on their next two possessions, Minnesota started to put a drive together. A 57-yard pass from Cole to Johnson put the ball in Iowa territory. Seven plays later, Cole hit Johnson in the corner of the end zone. At first, referees said the pass was not complete, but after discussion, the refs called the reception a touchdown putting Minnesota ahead within five points. Johnson had bobbled the pass, but tucked it in just before he went out of bounds.

On Iowa's next possession, it punted. On Minnesota's next possession, it also punted, ending the quarter at 17-12, with Iowa ahead.

Iowa punted on its first possession of the third quarter, but Tellis Redmon fumbled the reception and Tim Dodge recovered the ball on the Minnesota 11-yard line. It took Ladell Betts only three runs before he took the ball in from five-yards out.

Momentum was heading towards Iowa, but the Gophers did not give in. They put together an 82-yard drive that ended with Johnson making a miraculous touchdown reception leaping over Benny Sapp to reach the end zone. That touchdown was on fourth down and 14 for the Golden Gophers.

On Iowa's next possession, the Hawkeyes went 3-and-out and were forced to punt.

Minnesota recovered the punt on the 19-yard line. On the first play, Cole went up top to hit Mays, who had passed Matt Stockdale and Derek Pagel in Iowa's backfield, for an 81-yard touchdown pass to give Minnesota the victory.

Bears upset Buccaneers; key players hurt for Tampa Bay

CHICAGO (AP)— The Tampa Bay Bucs were left out in the cold again.

Paul Edinger kicked a go-ahead, 48-yard field goal with 10:02 left, and fellow rookie Brian Urlacher stopped a late drive with an interception Sunday as the Chicago Bears beat the Bucs, 13-10, to end a six-game losing streak to Tampa Bay.

The loss left Tampa Bay 0-18 when the temperature at kickoff is less than 40 degrees. Sunday's game began at 37 degrees with a wind chill of 16 from a gusty 24 mph wind.

Led by Urlacher, the Bears defense kept the Bucs in check. Chicago's lone touchdown came on a 38-yard interception return by Tony Parrish in the final minute of the second quarter that gave Chicago a 10-3 halftime lead.

It was the Bears' first touchdown in 16 quarters against the Bucs, who won an earlier meeting this season 41-0.

Bills 21, Chiefs 17

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Doug Flutie's fans don't have much to say now.

Bob Johnson, making a controversial start after his popular backup guided Buffalo to three wins in a row, threw two touchdown passes and got the go-ahead score on a Flutie-like scramble Sunday, lifting the Bills to a 21-17 victory over Kansas City.

Johnson, pressured out of the pocket, scrambled left on third-and-12 and jumped to the end-zone pylon. Officials first ruled that Marcus Patton shoved him out of bounds on the one. But the Bills asked for a review and got the call reversed, making it 21-17 with 2:58 left.

Wide receiver Eric Moulds, who caught eight passes for 67 yards and a touchdown, was put in for defense and batted away Elvis Grbac's pass into the end zone as time expired.

Raiders 31, Saints 22

NEW ORLEANS — The New Orleans Saints coped with the loss of Ricky Williams and even the loss of Jeff Blake. They couldn't cope with Rich Gannon.

Gannon shook off five sacks and steady pressure to engineer three scoring drives and Oakland's 31-22 victory over the Saints on Sunday.

Although Oakland had only 295 yards, the Raiders (9-2) converted 60 percent of their third downs and held the ball for almost four minutes longer than the Saints. Working against the No. 3 defense in the NFL, Gannon completed 14 of 21 passes for 168 yards and two touchdowns. Gannon had been sacked just 18 times in the first 10 games, but was dropped by the Saints five times for a loss of 34 yards.

Patriots 16, Bengals 13

FOXBORO, Mass. — The New England Patriots figured out how to keep a lead: Play the Cincinnati Bengals and score with too little time left to lose it.

Adam Vinatieri's 22-yard field goal with 3 seconds to go, his third of the game, gave the Patriots a 16-13 victory over Cincinnati in their second straight game against a 2-8 team.

New England (3-8), which lost, 19-11, to Cleveland a week earlier, squandered two leads Sunday before Neil Rackers' 45-yard field goal gave Cincinnati a 13-10 lead midway through the third quarter.

Vikings 31, Panthers 17

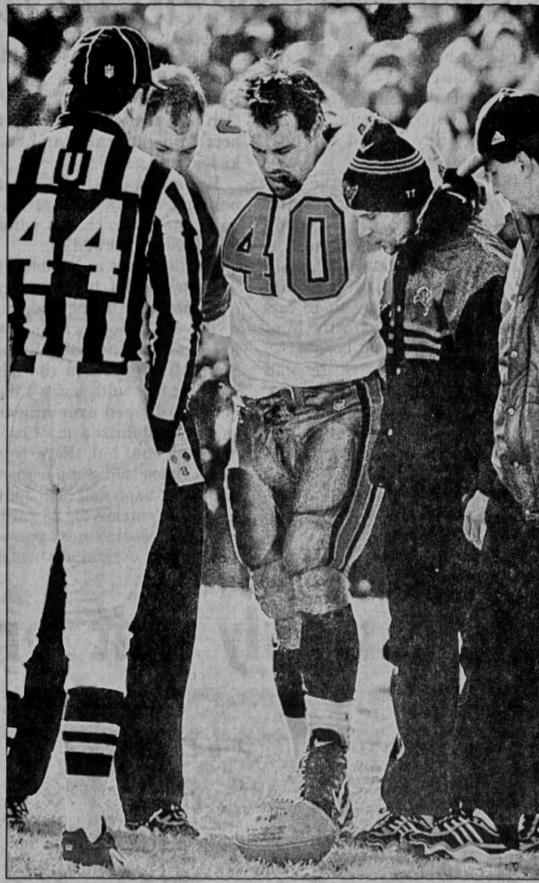

MINNEAPOLIS — The high-scoring Minnesota Vikings struck again from every direction in a 31-17 victory over the Carolina Panthers.

Daunte Culpepper threw for a career-high 357 yards Sunday, completing 22 of 29 passes. Robert Smith scored by rushing and receiving and gained a total of 173 yards. For the seventh time, both Randy Moss and Cris Carter gained more than 100 yards receiving in the same game.

Moss caught five passes for 106 yards, with a 36-yard TD catch in the first quarter. He became the second NFL receiver to break the 1,000-yard barrier in each of his first three seasons. John Jefferson gained more than 1,000 yards during the 1978-80 seasons. Moss has 58 catches for 1,026 yards.

Lions 31, Giants 21

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The Detroit Lions are not only winning under new coach Gary Moeller, they're looking like a team capable of making a run in the NFL playoffs. Charlie Batch tied his career best with three touchdown passes, the Lions' defense forced four turnovers and their special teams set up two scores as Detroit embarrassed the New York Giants, 31-21, Sunday.

The win was the second straight for the Lions (7-4) since Moeller took over after an emotionally drained Bobby Ross retired unexpectedly two weeks ago.

Packers 26, Colts 24

GREEN BAY, Wis. — A gimpy Brett Favre sustained two impressive seasons, the Philadelphia Eagles have gone from worst to first. Donovan McNabb passed for 217 yards, threw one touchdown pass and ran for another as the Eagles beat the Arizona Cardinals, 34-9, Sunday to move into first place in the NFC East.

Philadelphia (8-4) is one-half game ahead of the New York Giants (7-4), who lost to the Detroit Lions 31-21.

McNabb completed 25-of-34 and Darnell Autry ran for 59 yards, including a touchdown, to back a dominating performance by the Eagles' defense.

Ravens 27, Cowboys 0

BALTIMORE — Jamal Lewis became the latest running back to enjoy a career day at the expense of the woeful Dallas Cowboys, who also discovered Sunday just how tough it is to score on the Baltimore Ravens.

Lewis ran for a career-best 187 yards, second most in Ravens history, and Baltimore posted its fourth shutout of the season, 27-0. It was the third straight win for Baltimore, whose four shutouts are the most in one season since the Pittsburgh Steelers got five in 1976.

Trent Dilfer threw two touchdown passes for the Ravens (8-4), who showed no letdown following last week's emotional 24-23 upset of the defending AFC champion Tennessee Titans.

Titans 24, Browns 10

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The Tennessee Titans got a reminder Sunday of what they shouldn't do if they want to repeat as AFC champions: make turnovers.

Eddie George rushed for 134 yards and scored a career-high three touchdowns as the Titans survived seven turnovers in pulling out a 24-10 victory over the Cleveland Browns.

The Titans (9-2) wanted an easy game after their last two were decided by a total of three points. But Steve McNair was intercepted three times and fumbled twice after being sacked. Tennessee, with only 16 turnovers through the first 10 games, gave the ball to the Browns (3-9) on seven of its first nine possessions.

The saving grace? George, as usual — and the Browns, who have the NFL's worst offense.

Jets 20, Dolphins 3

MIAMI — This time against the New York Jets, the Miami Dolphins never had a lead to blow.

With both offenses hampered by injuries, the rematch of last month's Monday night Jets-Dolphins thriller was less than riveting, but New York again came away with the win Sunday, 20-3.

Dolphins quarterback Jay Fiedler left the game after one play with a pinched nerve in his neck, and replacement Damon Huard threw three interceptions. Miami running back Lamar Smith (hamstring) and New York running back Curtis Martin (sprained back) also went to the sidelines, and both offenses sputtered for most of the game.

49ers 16, Falcons 6

SAN FRANCISCO — Believe it or not, the San Francisco 49ers are winning with defense.

Rookie cornerback Jason Webster returned an interception 70 yards for the game's only touchdown as the 49ers' rapidly improving young defenders dominated Atlanta and beat the Falcons, 16-6, Sunday.

Charlie Garner had 135 total yards, and Wade Richey emerged from a lengthy slump to kick three field goals, but the 49ers struggled to move the ball and had 85 yards in penalties.

Broncos 38, Chargers 37

DENVER — Who needs Brian Griese and Terrell Davis — or John Elway, for that matter?

With AFC passing leader Griese sidelined by a separated throwing shoulder and Davis out with a leg injury, Gus Frerotte threw five touchdown passes, leading the Denver Broncos to a come-from-behind 38-37 victory over winless San Diego on Sunday.

In a rally that would have done Elway proud, Frerotte brought the Broncos (7-4) back from a 34-17 deficit late in the third quarter and a 37-24 deficit with seven minutes left.

He threw touchdown passes to Rod Smith, Desmond Clark and Ed McCaffrey — all in the fourth quarter — the final one a 5-yarder to McCaffrey with 1:33 left.

Pepper overcomes one last ailment to win

■ Dottie Pepper's injury filled year ends with a LPGA Championship win.

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Dottie Pepper already had to overcome back and wrist injuries this year, so one last obstacle in the season-ending Arch Wireless Championship should have come as no surprise.

It wasn't the treacherous wind or the pressure from an intense duel with Annika Sorenstam. Rather, it was some bad oysters Pepper ate the night before that caused her to bend over and clutch her stomach as she lined up a birdie putt on the 11th hole.

One of the grittiest players on the LPGA Tour, Pepper made the 12-footer to take the lead and never looked back Sunday, finishing off a frustrating season in style.

"I had nothing left," Pepper said after her three-stroke victory over Rachel Hetherington. "That was as hard-fought a day as you can have to get something you really want."

In warm, blustery winds that turned the final round into survival, Pepper took only 14 putts on the back nine and didn't have a three-putt all week. She closed with a 1-under 71 to win for the first time in 20 months.

"That's exactly where you want to be, and it's fun," she said of the back nine, where she fought off Sorenstam and then held off a late challenge by Hetherington. "Granted, you have a stomach ache by the time it all ends, but the relief kicks in quickly."

Sorenstam, who struck the ball better than anyone all week, bogeyed four of the first five holes on the back nine and disappeared from contention. The last bogey was a three-putt from 20 feet on No. 14, causing her to look skyward in bewilderment.

"I'm going to go home and putt and putt and putt," said Sorenstam, who had a 76 and finished in a tie for third at 283 with Leta Lindley.

Pepper holed a 12-foot birdie putt on the par-3 15th for a three-stroke lead, the largest by anyone all week on a difficult Legends Course at LPGA International. She finished at 9-under 279 and won $215,000.

"It was a tough day," Pepper said. "When you've missed as much of the year as I have, you get in the hunt and think,

"What am I doing?" She remembered well, coming from behind for the eighth time in 17 career victories.

Karrie Webb failed to become the LPGA's first $2 million player, closing with a 74. That didn't take away from a phenomenal season — seven victories, two majors, another Vare Trophy for lowest scoring average and her second straight player-of-the-year award.

"I had such a great year last year," she said. "I thought it would be a tough task to back up last year with a better year again."

The 25-year-old Australian also earned enough points for the Hall of Fame, and now she needs only to put in 10 years as an LPGA member for induction.

Pepper will stick around today to watch her good friend, Juli Inkster, get inducted into the Hall of Fame. Now, maybe Pepper can think about joining her. Her 17th career victory leaves her six points short of qualifying.

"I can't wait for January," Pepper said. "I'm pretty motivated."

She was plenty motivated Sunday, especially paired in the final group with Sorenstam, a rival from the Solheim Cup won last month by Europe.

What appeared to be match play, however, quickly dissolved as Pepper made every big putt, and Sorenstam slowly fell too far behind. But Pepper had one last challenger.

Hetherington was five strokes back at the turn and seemingly out of the picture until she rattled off three straight birdies — two from 20 feet and then a 7-iron into 4 feet on the 13th.

Her momentum ended, however, with a three-putt bogey from 30 feet on No. 16.

"The way Dottie is playing, I really had to hit some good shots coming in and make birdies," Hetherington said. "She played better than me. She played well all week."

Pepper made another critical 3-foot par putt on the 14th and could not avoid the electronic scoreboard facing her as she walked to the 15th tee, showing her with a one-stroke lead over Hetherington.

She let the wind carry her 6-iron into 12 feet and clenched her fist when the putt fell for birdie.

It was the perfect way to end a troubling year and a difficult day.

Pepper had to pull out of the U.S. Open with back problems, and managed to play only one tournament before the Solheim Cup.

Maryland fires football coach

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Maryland fired football coach Ron Vanderlinden Sunday, one day after the team ended its fourth straight losing season.

Maryland's 35-22 home loss to Georgia Tech capped a 5-6 season, eliminated the team from bowl contention, and ran Vanderlinden's career record with the Terps to 15-29.

"A change of leadership was determined to be necessary in order for the Maryland football program to reach its potential," Athletics Director Deborah Yow said.

Vanderlinden said that despite his poor record, he was confident the program he built would improve next year.

Iowa women's swimming earns 4th place

Iowa finished as cloe behind third place Kansas.

By Julie Matolo
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa swimming and diving team finished fourth this weekend after three days of tough competition in Minnesota Gopher territory. The Minnesota Invitational brought a meet similar in format to Big Tens and a win for the host team, which accumulated 944.5 points.

Iowa's total was 610, a finish close behind third-place finisher, Kansas, which ended up with 643 points. A pair of Big Ten teams took the top places, with Wisconsin (837.5) finishing behind Minnesota.

The Hawkeyes enjoyed victory last weekend, bringing home three event champions after the long competition. Two Iowa swimmers and one diver earned their top-spot finishes.

Senior Loredana Zisu won in the 200-backstroke with a time of 2:03.10. Zisu also accomplished second-place finishes in the 100-back (57.68) and the 100-butterfly (57.41).

Melissa Loehndorf, a junior, touched the wall first in the 200-butterfly with a time of 2:04.50. She also added a second-place finish in the 1,650-freestyle event and a third-place finish in the 500-freestyle event.

Iowa had a strong showing in the longer distance, freestyle relay events, placing second in the 800- and 400-freestyle relays.

Diver Laura Maldonado took the top spot in the platform diving with a score of 367.50, while Iowa's Sara Wolchko finished fourth in the three-meter event.

Allison Lyle and Stacey Wertz also had strong showings with second-place finishes in the 100-breaststroke and the 100-freestyle, respectively. Lyle also had a third-place finish in the 200-breaststroke.

managed to play more aggressively while staying out of trouble. Ryan said Iowa's pounding of the glass, especially on the offensive end of the court, buried his team.

While Recker and Oliver deserve much of the credit for the victory, newcomers Evans and Cortney Scott also helped the team to the win. Both were big factors in Iowa's rebounding edge. Evans made his presence felt on both the offensive and defensive ends, scoring 16 points and bringing in 12 rebounds, while Scott scored 7 points in 18 minutes of play and contributed 8 rebounds, several of them crucial.

Alford pointed to the team's depth, rebounding and shooting as three key elements in the victory. Those three things, he said, were lacking in last year's team and were addressed in off-season recruiting.

The Hawkeyes will rest up today before traveling to Des Moines to face intrastate rival Drake Tuesday night at the Knapp Center.

Iowa men crown two individual champions

Ales Abersek and Jay Glenn won for Iowa.

By Julie Matolo
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's swimming and diving team crowned two double champions this weekend in the meet of the season that previews Big Ten Championships. Two senior Hawkeyes who are returning Big Ten Champions enjoyed glory last weekend.

Seniors Ales Abersek and Jay Glenn led the Hawkeyes in the three-day meet in Minneapolis. The Minnesota Invitational left the Hawkeyes with many solid performances in what is probably the toughest meet of the fall portion of the season.

Day two of competition brought the crowning of Abersek after he won the 100-butterfly event in 49.12 seconds. One event later, Glenn won the 200-freestyle event, touching the wall in a time of 1:38.92.

The senior duo returned the next day to each grab another win. Abersek won the 200-butterfly with a final time of 1:47.69. Glenn captured the 100-freestyle event with a time of 45.45.

Iowa brought home a fifth-place finish in the 10-team competition, while the host team won the competition with 997 points. Wisconsin landed in second with 689 points. The Hawkeyes tallied 482.

Gutierrez finished in second place in the platform event, with 447.75 points. Gutierrez also placed fifth in the one-meter diving event.

The Hawkeyes performed well in the 400-medley relay, taking second in a time of 3:20.76.

In two weeks, the Hawkeyes will travel to Auburn, Ala., for the U.S. Open meet. The competition will take place Nov. 30- Dec. 2.

with only two matches remaining.

After struggling with her setting chores and hitting problems the night before, an up-beat and fiery Hill came within one kill of scoring a triple-double on the weekend as she finished with 29 assists, 17 digs and 9 kills.

For all Hill's work, the Nov. 18 victory was a total team effort. With setters Larissa Lopes and Laura Pike out with injuries, Hill stepped in to set while Fabiana De Abreu focused on hitting. The big-swinging Brazilian recorded her seventh triple-double (18 kills, 22 assists and 17 digs), while Jamie Lansing and Sara Meyermann reached double-digits in kills, and Katie Panhorst turned in a solid performance as well.

"We needed to polish some things after last night," Buck-Crockett said. "Slowly, slowly, we're getting our legs back."

Down 3-0 in game one, an ace by Kelli Chesnut gave Iowa the spark it needed to pull ahead of the Wolverines. A block by Meyermann gave Iowa a 15-8 victory in the first game and momentum to carry into the second game.

After trailing 5-1, Iowa pulled off five straight points to reel even. After trading points, the Hawkeyes pulled ahead for good as Panhorst blocked a return of Caroline Vowels' serve for a 15-12 winner.

Michigan cruised to a stunning 15-2 win in game three before the powerful Hawkeyes put the match away with a strong fourth game. Iowa again won 15-12, capitalizing on several kills by De Abreu and Michigan's attack errors.

"We came out with more vengeance," Lansing said. "We knew this win was crucial."

The victory became crucial after Michigan State stunned Iowa with a 3-0 win on Nov. 17. The Spartans overcame an early Iowa lead in game one to knot things up at 9 before scoring six of the game's final seven points for the 15-10 win.

Iowa responded by playing an emotional second match as it overcame a Spartan lead four times. With the game tied at 16, the Spartans scored the final two points for an 18-16 win. The comeback appeared to drain Iowa, as the Hawkeyes only scored three times in the third game to lose, 15-3.

The loss was just a matter of the team's inexperience at several key positions, Buck-Crockett said.

"We had some players who weren't their normal selves tonight," she said. "You can't expect (the freshmen) to go out and kick butt every night."

Iowa will play its final home match of the season Wednesday afternoon at 1 p.m., when it hosts No. 8 Minnesota at Carver-Hawkeye Arena for senior day.

Hawkeyes hope loss serves as motivation field goal in the Humphrey Metrodome, but they wouldn't lead again until the 6:13 mark in the fourth quarter.

In between, it looked as if Iowa was ready to grab control of the game. At the outset of the second quarter, with the aid of two Minnesota personal fouls, the Hawkeyes marched 80 yards down the field, and junior quarterback Kyle McCann topped the drive off with a touchdown pass to junior Chris Oliver. The Hawks went into the locker room up 10-6 at the half.

Minnesota went into their locker room amid a shower of boos. The Hawkeyes promptly picked up where they left off and scored on their first possession of the third quarter — a three-play drive highlighted by junior Ladell Betts' 65-yard touchdown run. The native of Blue Springs, Mo., rushed for 154 yards on the afternoon, his second-highest output ever at Iowa. The touchdown put Iowa up 17-6, and the Metrodome grew loud with cheers from the thousands of Hawkeye fans who filled the upper tier and large sections of the lower deck. Those cheers quickly turned to complaints after a late third-quarter referee's decision. One official ruled that Minnesota wide receiver Ron Johnson bobbled the ball as he fell out of the right corner of the end zone. However, after a brief official's meeting, the call was overruled, and Iowa's lead shrank to 17-12.

"I didn't know they did that kind of stuff in college football," junior Matt Stockdale said. "It looked like he bobbled the ball, and then he caught it. I don't know. It's just frustrating."

However Iowa fans were back on their feet once again in the opening minutes of the final quarter after junior Tim Dodge recovered a Tellis Redmon fumble on Iowa's own 10-yard line. The Hawkeyes went up 24-12 three plays later following Betts' second touchdown run of the day. The clock read 12:28. Iowa never scored again.

Playing for a 6-5 record and an almost certain bowl invitation, the Golden Gophers had to win and executed as a team fighting for its post-season life.

The first score came off a fourth-and-14 Cole pass to the Johnson, who simply used his 6-foot-3 height to out jump the 5-foot-10 Benny Sapp. Sapp said he couldn't have been in better position, and when he jumped up his back hit Johnson's chest, stopping his momentum, allowing the taller Johnson to catch the ball. Minnesota's final score and game-winning touchdown came on one 81-yard perfect Cole spiral to Jermaine Mays. The Golden Gophers converted their two-point attempt and the scoreboard read 27-24 in favor of Minnesota. It became the final score six minutes later.

"We are a big-play team," Cole said. "We thrive off big plays that change the momentum of the game. (Saturday) our big plays won the game for us."

Sapp said Johnson's catch over him will be in his mind as he prepares for next year. Stockdale also said this loss will only serve to motivate.

"Guys are frustrated because honestly I think we gave them this game. Just a couple plays, and that's the difference," he said. "I think we need to take this loss and run with it, because this is the kind of feeling the young guys have to feed off for next year. This is the worst feeling in the world."

Hawkeyes looking ahead to Iowa State game

Iowa's offense made one unsuccessful stab after another at narrowing the growing Utah lead. With seven minutes remaining in play, the Ute's lead peaked, 60-30.

Lindsey Meder collected 12 points, followed by Leah Magnier's 10. Despite the loss, she was optimistic following the game.

"I think you're going to take some strides and sometimes fall back, but we're going to learn from our mistakes and take those into practice," she said.

Frustration turned into elation during the Marquette game when the Hawkeyes battled out from under a first-half deficit. Overcoming a 13-point Eagles' half-time lead, Iowa pulled together in the second half for the victory. "I'm thrilled," Bluder said. "I'm so excited we were able to start the season with a win. It sets the tone for us. It shows what we can accomplish and shows we can battle back."

Iowa senior Mary Berdo buried a 3-point shot with 2:47 remaining in the first to close the Marquette lead to 30-24 before half-time.

A more united Iowa team stepped onto the court in the second half. Berdo closed the deficit for good at 8:24, hitting two from the line, tying the score at 47. Cara Consuegra went a perfect 3-3 in free throws and gave the Hawkeyes their first lead of the game with 7:45 remaining.

From then on, there was no stopping, as Meder put in four field goals, two 3-point shots and a free throw. A strong Iowa defense overpowered Marquette's attempts to catch up, and Consuegra sealed the game, adding two free throws for a victory.

"Last year, we would come back and run out of gas," Consuegra said. "We could never get over the hump, but today we did. I think it says a lot for our team and our attitude; it shows that we're going out there to win some games."

Meder led the Hawkeye scoring with 18 points on seven 3-point goals; she was 3-4 from the arc. She finished the game six 3-points shy of breaking Nadine Domond's school record of 118. Randi Peterson collected 14 points, putting away 6-8 free throws and pulling down 13 rebounds.

Bluder was pleased with the scoring distribution, having three players in double digits.

"We're getting more balanced scoring," she said. "That's what we want to see — it's going to make us harder to defend." With a 1-1 overall record, Iowa will play Iowa State Wednesday at 7 p.m. and then host the Hawkeye Classic over the weekend. Despite this weekend's results, Magnier said the team is already looking ahead.

"This game is over. It ended already, and we need to be ready for Iowa State," she said. "We won't have any chance if we're worrying about what happened today."

Iowa has the advantages of home court and two games of experience over the Cyclones, who open on the road Wednesday. Bluder said the Hawkeyes will have to battle against a height advantage inside and the new look of a zone defense.

SPORTS BRIEF

Maryland fires Vanderlinden

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Maryland fired football coach Ron Vanderlinden on Sunday, one day after the team ended its fourth straight losing season under his direction.

Maryland's 35-22 home loss to Georgia Tech on Saturday capped a 5-6 season, eliminated the team from bowl contention, and ran Vanderlinden's career record with the Terrapins to 15-29.

Maryland Athletic Director Deborah Yow said it was the most difficult decision she's faced in her 24 years in intercollegiate athletics.

She said she told Vanderlinden of his dismissal in a meeting Sunday she described as very "cordial."

"If I thought the program could have taken the next big step with the current staff, I would have supported him," she said. "It was more of a real belief that the change was warranted, and in that sense, coach Vanderlinden and I disagreed."

Vanderlinden said in a statement that despite his poor record, he was confident the program he built would improve next year.

"I know that a solid foundation has been laid, and I'm sorry that I won't be here to be part of the future success," he said.

horoscopes

Monday, November 20, 2000 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may have some difficulties with co-workers or bosses. You should stick to your own job and not ask for help. Self-improvement projects will be quite successful if started today.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Children may be on your mind. If your children are older, you may want to make plans to visit or do things with them. If you haven't had any yet, you may want to think about it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Leave your domestic problems at home. You won't be able to make changes that will suit everyone. It is best to work on your own interests until times get better.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Talk to a close friend about a personal matter. You have been confused lately and need to get an objective point of view. Try to be completely honest when describing the situation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Moneymaking opportunities are apparent. Be creative when dealing with your personal financial budget. You can stretch your money further than you thought possible.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You have to spend more time with your partner if you don't want to end up alone. Although you have managed to get your way in the past, the situation no longer looks cut-and-dried.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You have been doing too much, and it's time to sit back for a moment. You will probably find it impossible to do nothing, but you can relax by doing things you enjoy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Relationships will surface through connections made at work. Those you meet will think you stable, loyal and honest. It looks like the beginning of new and lasting friendships.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Join new clubs or do things that will bring you in contact with new friends. Relationships can be developed, and partnerships can be formed. Be receptive toward others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You will meet compatible mates. Don't take the chance of ruining your present relationship for the wrong reason. Get involved in activities that will bring you added knowledge.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can make extra cash if you invest in new domestic products. Your partner won't want you involved in risky ventures. Don't jeopardize family finances; put your own cash on the line.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You're in the mood for love. You and your partner are ready to start talking about getting serious and making future plans. Starting a family may be on your mind.
