Fla. court weighs vote's fate

Lawyers for Al Gore and George W. Bush make their pitches before the state Supreme Court.

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

A transfixed nation turned its eyes to Florida's Supreme Court, where lawyers for Al Gore and George W. Bush battled Monday over whether the marathon election should continue. Weary recount workers pecked through ballots in three Democratic-leaning counties, wondering if their labor would be for naught.

After 13 days of suspended political animation, lawsuits and countersuits, "chads" and "pregnant chads," the presidential election may come down to this: Seven justices, all appointed by Democratic governors, will decide if the GOP secretary of State can certify Bush's minuscule lead without accepting votes counted by hand.

The state Supreme Court justices seemed anxious to find a way out of the state's presidential election jam that would let disputed manual recounts continue — as long as the delay wouldn't jeopardize the state in the Electoral College vote.

Bush's official lead stands at 930 votes. Gore picked up 166 votes in manual recounts conducted by 9 p.m. CST Monday, which if counted would reduce Bush's margin to 764. Gore advisers were frustrated by their relatively small gains and worried they would not overtake Bush; Bush's forces cried foul in the county where the vice president gained the most ground.

The historic Supreme Court hearing opened with a court marshal bellowing, "God save

I.C. gets ready to gobble up Thanksgiving

Events include a "World Party" and a free turkey dinner.

By Jessi Todden
The Daily Iowan

While most UI students will rush home to be with their families for Thanksgiving, a few local churches and businesses will open their doors to students and others who remain in town.

Serendipity, 702 S. Gilbert St., will host a "World Party" for all UI international students Saturday, said owner Ben Richards.

The party will have a potluck of various international cuisine and will feature a foreign film along with performance art from around the world, he said.

"Although we plan to do this the last Saturday of every month, this weekend will be our first," Richards said. "This weekend will be a broader interpretation of Thanksgiving."

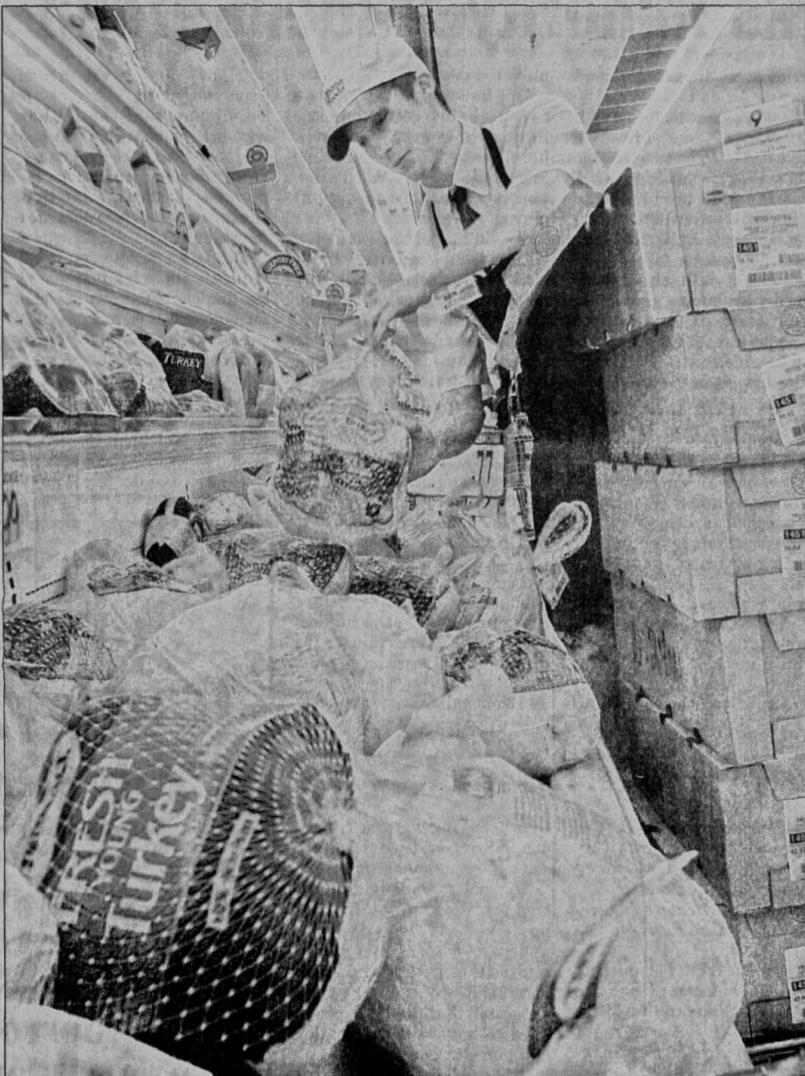

In addition, Serendipity will tentatively be open on Thursday from 6 p.m. to midnight, he said.

Veronika Mikhailova, one of the organizers for Saturday's festivities and an international student from Russia, is planning to bring the Russian movie Burnt By the Sun and one of her favorite Russian dishes.

"I'm really looking forward to Saturday because it's going to allow me a chance to meet other international students, which doesn't usually happen," she said.

The event will give those who can't go home for the holiday a place to go, Mikhailova said.

One of the largest local Thanksgiving dinners will be at the Bethany Baptist Church, 3001 Muscatine Ave. More than 100 volunteers will host an estimated 400 to 500 people at the church for its annual dinner noon until 5:30 p.m. Thursday, said volunteer Glendora Nattress.

UI sophomore Ben Schrempf, an employee in the the seafood and meat department at the Waterfront Drive Hy-Vee, fills up the cool rack with frozen turkeys Monday evening in preparation for the holiday rush. "It's been pretty busy, and it's just going to get worse," he said.

"We're going to serve turkey, of course, dressing, potatoes, rolls, pie and a vegetable," she said. "Anybody who doesn't have a place to go on Thursday is welcome to a free meal."

The church has posted fliers

all over campus in order to encourage students who aren't going home to join them, Nattress said.

Anyone who finishes eating and wants to volunteer to help out would be more than welcome, she added.

At UI, Harkin talks $'s for education

The senator wants Congress to pass the largest percentage increase in history for higher education.

By Jesse Elliott
The Daily Iowan

U.S. Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, kicked off a two-day tour of Iowa's public universities Monday with a visit to the UI, spending the afternoon meeting with university students, faculty and administration.

During his visit, Harkin vowed to fight for higher education when Congress reconvenes on Dec. 5., hitting especially hard on the fiscal year 2001 Senate spending bill, which would contain the largest percentage increase for higher education — nearly 21 percent, or $43 billion — in the country's history.

The fiscal year 2001 bill would significantly increase various types of student financial aid in Iowa and throughout the nation if passed.

Perhaps the largest effect of the proposed bill on Iowa students would be that it raises the maximum federal Pell Grant, capped at $3,300 this year, to $3,800 — a 15 percent increase. The UI has 2,776 students who receive $5.76 million in Pell Grants, an average of $2,075 in the 2000-01 school year, according to UI financial-aid officials.

Harkin, who is key member of the Senate appropriations subcommittee for spending on education, health and labor programs, told The Daily Iowan he believes the bill has a chance of passing, despite its being previously defeated in the Congress.

"It will be hard, but there's a good chance we'll be able to push this one through," he said. "We have strong support of the bill on both sides of the aisle, because the need for higher education assistance is becoming a national issue."

UI Student Government President Andy Stoll, who met briefly with Harkin and other UISG officials in a small gathering at the end of the day, echoed the senator's sentiment that tuition increases are a large problem in states other than just Iowa.

"North Carolina and Kansas, for example, had double the rate of Iowa's tuition increase this year," Stoll said.

No 'eye in the sky' on Iowa interstates

Many people are fooled by devices that allow some truckers to bypass weigh stations.

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

No need to beware, local drivers: The large camera look-alikes on top of aluminum mast arms that extend across Iowa and Illinois highways near some weigh stations are not tracking your speed.

In fact, they aren't even cameras. They are antennae used in a new technology that permits some truckers to forego stopping at mandatory weigh stations.

The antennae, part of a program called PrePass, have fooled many Iowa drivers, said Mike Winfrey, the director of the Iowa Department of Transportation's Motor Vehicle Enforcement office. The antennae were installed at five sites in Iowa earlier this year, he said.

"When they were first installing them, we had people calling us and calling radio and news shows wondering what they were," Winfrey said Monday. "Everybody thought they were cameras checking their speeds — that they were radars. But they're not."

The five Iowa sites are: westbound on I-80 in Cedar County, northbound I-35 in Clarke County, eastbound I-80 in Dallas County, westbound on I-80 in Jasper County and southbound on I-35 in Worth County.

Bombing of school bus rocks Gaza, Israel

In retaliation, Israeli helicopters and boats pound Gaza City with rockets.

KFAR DAROM, Gaza Strip — Palestinians launched a bomb attack against a school bus Monday, killing two Israelis and wounding nine, and Israel retaliated with its most punishing air strike in nearly two months of fighting. Helicopters and boats bar-raged the offices of Palestinian security forces in Gaza City with dozens of rockets.

The bus bombing in the Gaza Strip and the Israeli response dashed hopes that Israelis and Palestinians might be moving toward a truce and a resumption of peace talks. The fighting has left some 240 people dead since Sept. 28, mostly Palestinians.

City, county quarrel over proposed commercial strip

Johnson County is requesting an additional 57 acres along I-80 and the Hoover highway.

By Megan L. Eckhardt
The Daily Iowan

As Johnson County pushes for more commercial development at the intersection of Interstate 80 and Herbert Hoover Highway, the Iowa City City Council voiced its disapproval at its work session Monday night.

County officials are calling for an additional 57 acres south of Herbert Hoover Highway to be added to the 178 acres that was in the city's original Fringe Area Agreement with the county, which details a partnership use of the area just outside the city limits.

Councilors will vote on the county's request during tonight's council meeting.

R.J. Moore, the Johnson County assistant planning and zoning administrator, said in a memo to the council that "it is the (Johnson County Board of Supervisors') desire to have the city take another look at the proposed agreement." County officials are requesting the extra land because of the number of advantages the area has, which include existing water and wastewater systems and the ability to handle high traffic because of its location off of a major paved intersection.

Councilor Dee Vanderhoef, who opposes with the proposal, was concerned about the amount of land designated for commercial development and about adding another commercial entrance to the city.

"I don't want to create another entrance to the city with a commercial strip," she said. "This is a residential area, and to create another commercial strip is inappropriate."

Councilor Connie Champion opposes the agreement because of the amount of commercial area already available to the county and the location of the development.

"It's too close to the city limits and residential areas," she said. "It should be in city limits so it can receive city utilities. I think (county administrators) are being greedy."

Mayor Ernie Lehman said

he agrees that there is enough land set aside for commercial development, even though he said the city's plan doesn't allot an enormous amount. He said he also supports the original agreement that the city staff created.

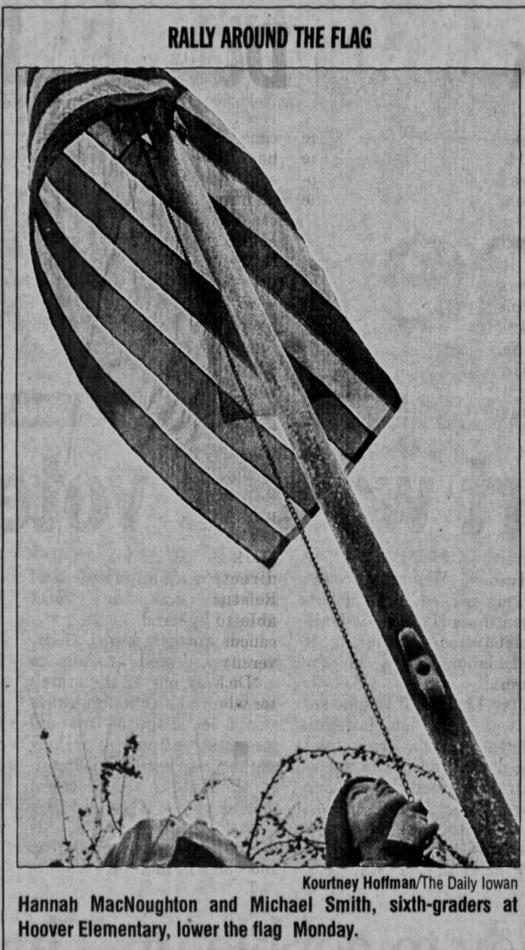

"At some point, you have to draw the line for commercial-area development," he said. "I support the city staff's recommendation."

Jeff Davidson, the city's assistant planning and zoning director, said some of the supervisors expressed an interest in exchanging 80 acres north of the interstate for the additional acres the county is requesting, but no formal statement has been made.

If that were the case, Champion said, she would still oppose the arrangement.

If the agreement is approved by the council, the development will take place. If the council defeats the proposal, it will be deferred until the council and Iowa City Planning and Zoning Commission can convene.

UI lack of support irks minority student group

A group of seniors say they speak from experience, and it's time the university listened.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

All they want is a few hours with UI President Mary Sue Coleman.

They say they're passionate, tired and unhappy with the UI's lack of support for minority students on campus.

Ten UI seniors, all Latino and black students graduating this December, say it's time they tell the university what it's doing wrong in its effort to retain minority students. They're asking for a few hours of Coleman's time to discuss minority issues in private — without other students or faculty present.

Four members of the group met at the IMU Monday night to mull over issues they plan to discuss with Coleman. Among the complaints was a lack of UI financial and moral support for minority programs and events and renovation of the Afro-American Cultural Center, 303 Melrose Ave, and the Latino Native American Cultural Center, 308 Melrose Ave.

"(The Latino Native American Cultural Center) helped me so much getting used to this campus," said UI senior Inez Cruz. "I worked there. I studied there. We cooked there. It was the one place I could go where there were people who looked like me. The Latino house has zero funding."

The students also complained of poor coverage of minority issues in The Daily Iowan, which is independent of the UI. Both the DI and UI were accused of not covering or promoting positive aspects of the minority community.

Personnel in Coleman's office last week directed the group to speak with Phillip Jones, the UI vice president for Student Services; it will arrange a meeting with Coleman as soon as possible, said UI senior Acooa Lee.

"We don't want to speak with Dean Jones," Lee said. "We don't want to come to a fireside chat. We don't want to go to her house. We want her to come to our house. I believe we have a right to meet with her whether or not she wants to."

Coleman said the group should present its agenda to Jones, who will then contact her about a meeting or attending a fireside chat.

"I've always said I'm open to meetings," she said, adding that she was unaware the group had contacted her office. "I would like to think we have many communities for students on campus. We always like to consider ideas. We don't always necessarily accept all the ideas we hear."

The group, composed of friends who met as freshmen, say they've witnessed several peers plunge into depression because of the UI's lack of a minority community, drop out, or transfer to a more diverse university.

"We had a big class, and we can probably count, on two hands, how many are still here," said UI senior Mamie Moore. "It seems like the university doesn't care about minority students."

Gerald Stone, the director of UI Counseling Service, said he could not assess how severe mood disorders or adjustment problems were for minority students compared with white students, but he conceded that minority students from more diverse areas may have greater difficulty adjusting to the UI environment.

Minority student groups are undertaking initiatives and sponsoring programs for which the UI should be responsible to retain minority students once they have been recruited, Moore said.

Cruz said the Latino center has 14 members, the highest ever, and they are running the center and organizing events without help from the UI. "Eventually, students burn out," she said. "They're tired of doing everything."

Coleman said the UI has good programs, such as Special Support Services Programs, and student organizations for minority students, but that there is always room for improvement.

The UI's effort to retain all students includes increasing the number of Courses in Common offered, theme floors such as women in engineering in residence halls, freshman seminars and a new program starting next semester that will track and assist students on academic probation.

Citizens protest nonviolent crime arrests

A local anti-new jail group hopes the county will find new ways to deal with jail overcrowding.

By Pam Dewey
The Daily Iowan

Johnson County voters may have rejected the proposal for a new county jail, 66-44 percent, in the Nov. 7 election, but members of the activist group Citizens for Alternatives to the New Jail continue to oppose some of the ways in which local police officers do business. During an open forum at the Iowa City Public Library Monday night, approximately 20 area citizens gathered to discuss possible alternatives to combat the overcrowding at the Johnson County Jail.

"The goal isn't to arrest people — the goal is to solve the community problem," committee member John Robertson told the meeting.

One of the main solutions that the group would like to see is fewer people going to jail for such nonviolent offenses as public intoxication and possession of marijuana, said committee member Jeff Cox.

Julie Goodlaxson, also a member of the group, said research from such organizations as the American Civil Liberties Union shows that more than 50 percent of the prison population is jailed for nonviolent offenses.

"We need to stop Iowa City from sending so many young people to jail," Cox said.

Some of the group's suggestions for cutting down on the number of arrests for nonviolent crimes included putting a public restroom on the downtown Pedestrian Mall, running buses later at night and providing other late-night activities for the community.

By providing a restroom on the Ped Mall, people wouldn't be forced to search for such facilities, which is one of the current causes of many public-intoxication arrests, Robertson said.

Robertson also said the solutions would cost much less than transporting prisoners to other jails and would "help solve the community problem."

Alternative late-night activities for students is another positive way to help curb underage drinking and public-intoxication arrests, said group member Carol deProse. She suggested that the IMU, which used to have a bowling alley and games, provide some late-night alternatives.

Ultimately, the group would like to see UI President Mary Sue Coleman, as well as the public, give more attention to the issue of arrests for public intoxication and other nonviolent crimes, Cox said.

Myers takes top Dem House post

■ The long-time Coralville representative will become the next minority whip.

By Anne Webbeking
The Daily Iowan

Rep. Dick Myers, D-Coralville, will be the most powerful Democrat in the Iowa House when he takes his new position as minority leader on Jan. 8, 2000 — the first day of the new session.

Myers, who represents parts of Iowa City, Coralville and North Liberty, was chosen unanimously on Nov. 11 by the other Democrats in the House to lead them into the new year.

With more than 31 years of experience in elected offices, Myers has worked at four levels of government — city, county, state and federal. He has previously been the mayor of Coralville and a member of the Johnson County Board of Supervisors. In January, he will begin his fifth term in the Iowa House, where he will represent the 44 Democrats in the 100-member House.

As minority leader, Myers said, he plans to look at such issues as children's health insurance, alternative sentencing and education. He also said he plans to support better pay for both K-12 and university educators.

"I'm very interested in the regents' agenda," Myers said. "The UI wasn't treated well in the last session. We've got a lot of work to do in that area."

Even though the Republicans have the majority, as they have had since 1992, Myers said the House members will all have to work with the each other and with Gov. Tom Vilsack in order to get measures passed.

"We have to be able to find common ground on these issues," he said. "We need to work with the governor. He needs to work with us."

The UI's state lobbyist, Mark Braun, the UI associate director of Governmental Relations, said Myers will be able to lead the Democratic caucus and represent the university well.

"Dick is a very good legislator who has the ability to cross party lines," Braun said. "He's very well-acquainted with the university and what's going on here. I think he'll be able to help us articulate our message well."

Newly elected Rep. Vicki Lensing, D-Iowa City, one of the Democrats who helped elect Myers minority leader, thinks he will do a good job. He is very energetic, and he looks at both sides, she said. "He'll be terrific. He's definitely an advocate, and he likes to get things done," Lensing said. "It will be nice for our area to have him there."

UI profs to map human-eye genes

■ The researchers have received a $3.3 million grant from the National Eye Institute.

By Peter Rugg
The Daily Iowan

UI Health Care researchers, in collaboration with a member of the UI College of Engineering, have received a $3.3 million, two-year contract from the National Eye Institute to study the genetic makeup of the human eye.

The eye institute is one of the National Institutes of Health, an agency of the Public Health Service. The eye institute conducts and supports research to prevent and treat vision disorders and eye diseases.

The money will fund the project "Gene Discovery in the Visual System," which is designed to identify the 30,000 different genes located in various regions of the human eye. The UI team wants to use the information to develop a resource for finding genes that cause age-related blindness and other genetic problems.

"This is the most common cause of blindness in developing countries," said Val Sheffield, a UI professor of pediatrics and member of the research team. "Around 20 percent of the population has these genes that can cause blindness in old age."

The principal researcher, M. Bento Soares, a UI associate professor of pediatrics, feels the research is a milestone in genetics.

"With this information, a doctor treating an eye disease can easily map out genes in the eyes' chromosomal region, making it much simpler to identify which genes are active and which are good candidates for genetic eye disease," he said.

The UI is running three other related gene projects that deal with mapping the genes and anatomy of rats, mice and cancer tissue. Soares credits discoveries in these projects for making the team's work possible.

"There is a component in the rat genetic study using up-to-date methods that make it very simple to identify genes," he said.

In addition to the medical researchers, Thomas Casavant, a UI professor of electrical and computer engineering, has been enlisted to design a database and Web page to help examine the data.

Casavant, who has been involved in gene research for several years, is optimistic that the team will be able to map out all of the eye's genes.

"We should be able to find everything in two years," he said. "And this will be important information because I don't think there's ever been a study that tried to do this before."

Having an easily accessible database is one of the study's top priorities Soares said.

"The idea is to generate a lot of data and to make them available to the community as soon as possible," he said. "So that everyone working on these kind of genetic problems will benefit."

In addition to Sheffield, Soares and Casavant, Professors Edwin Stone and Gregory Hageman of the ophthalmology department will contribute to the research.

Study: Overhaul child protection

■ Among other recommendations, Iowa needs to cut its social workers' caseloads.

By Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — An outside study of the state's child-protection system calls for sharply cutting social workers' caseloads and a major increase in training for people who are likely to be the first to spot potential abuse.

The study found that supervision of vulnerable youngsters is "a weak underbelly of Iowa's child-protection system and requires immediate attention."

"No matter how talented and concerned the current supervisors might be, they simply cannot keep up with the volume of work," the study said.

It pointed to guidelines that would limit social workers to as few as 12 active cases a month and limit supervisors to watching over five social workers. In some parts of the state, the study noted, social workers have more than 100 active cases.

"It is unrealistic to believe that circumstances will change and that their current workload will decrease," the study said. It contained no cost estimate for deeply reducing caseload levels.

The study of the Iowa's child-protection system was sparked by the January death of toddler Shelby Duis, who died after what authorities said was months or weeks of abuse.

The child's mother, Heidi Watkins, was acquitted of murder but convicted of child endangerment. Watkins' live-in boyfriend, Jesse Wendelsdorf, was acquitted of murder and sexual-abuse charges.

The case sparked a public outcry for changes in the state's child-protection system, which is administered by the Department of Human Services. The agency retained a consultant to study the system and recommend changes. The draft report by the Colorado-based American Humane Association was released Monday and included a series of recommendations without condemning the state's system.

"There are many challenges, but not that many that would indicate that the system is at the point of collapse," the study said.

"This remediation will require additional resources, greater collaboration with other systems such as substance abuse and medical and a significant level of support for the legislative and executive branches of state government," it said.

The study did argue that the increased public attention given to children's issues was making it more likely that the problems could be addressed.

"This report should be the call to action for all of Iowa's citizens to understand and assess the activities and outcomes of the child-welfare system on an ongoing basis," the report said.

Vilsack sees bean trade explosion

■ The governor says Iowa can lead the way in selling soybeans to Japan.

By Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Gov. Tom Vilsack predicted Monday that sales of organic soybeans to Japan will "explode," increasing up to 50 percent, largely because of the state's effort in labeling the product.

"The Iowa standard we hope will be the basis for a national standard," Vilsack said. "The Japanese are deeply concerned about that."

Vilsack spoke at a news conference after returning from a trade mission to Japan, a trip on which he was accompanied by several grain companies and officials of the Iowa Soybean Association.

As in many other parts of the world, the Japanese have concerns about genetically modified crops, and they are putting in place a labeling requirement, due in April, alerting consumers to what they are buying.

Vilsack said one advantage Iowa companies have is a strong labeling requirement and strict standards for handling grain to ensure that organic grain isn't mingled with modified grain.

That gives Iowa grain an inside track in the booming Japanese market, an edge that's boosted by cementing relationships with businesses and officials in that country, he argued.

"Building those relationships is extremely important if we want to continue to successfully sell Iowa products," Vilsack said. "The organic soybean market is beginning to explode in Japan, and because we're establishing these relationships, Iowa companies will reap the benefits."

He argued that the demand for organic soybeans could grow by 50 percent over the next year and demand for non-biotech conventionally grown soybeans could increase by as much as 20 percent. "It was a valuable opportunity to educate Japanese consumers about the high quality of Iowa products," Vilsack said. "We stressed our ability to provide the new, organic varieties of soybeans, as well as the non-biotech conventionally grown soybeans the Japanese market has been requesting."

In the end, Peruvian 'emperor' had no clothes

■ Alberto Fujimori's rule brought peace to Peru — but at the price of authoritarian rule.

By Monte Hayes
Associated Press

LIMA, Peru — Alberto Fujimori came into the presidency as a political outsider and quickly became known as "The Emperor" for his authoritarian style. He helped end the economic chaos of the 1980s and defeated leftist insurgencies, offering hope to Peruvians.

After weeks of scandal, Fujimori resigned Monday, in a letter sent to Congress while on a visit to his ancestral homeland, Japan. Fujimori arrived there on Nov. 17 after leaving Peru unexpectedly in the midst of a deepening political crisis.

"His exit from Lima had all the characteristics of a furtive escape from justice," said Mario Vargas Llosa, the Peruvian novelist defeated by Fujimori in 1990 elections, speaking in a radio interview from Madrid.

When Fujimori took power, he faced a country many Peruvians feared had become ungovernable. Leftist rebels rattled the capital with nightly car bombs. Electricity was rationed. Foreign investors had fled the country. Prices jumped daily. Basic food items were in short supply.

Fujimori put an end to the economic chaos and defeated the leftist insurgencies. But with time, Fujimori's goal seemed to be power itself, at any cost.

And the same Peruvians who once saw Fujimori as a savior celebrated his ignominious exit from power.

"After my 2-year-old granddaughter, Fujimori's resignation is the greatest gift God has given me," said Lucia Canales, 45, who joined hundreds of protesters in front of the Government Palace to celebrate Monday.

"Fujimori didn't keep his 1990 campaign slogan of Honesty, Jobs and Technology. He left us with corruption, unemployment and poverty," Canales said.

Fujimori acknowledged in an interview after his tainted re-election in May to a third, five-year term that his government was an "imperfect democracy."

"I have a particular governing style that puts great emphasis on efficiency," he said.

Efficiency, for Fujimori, translated into a disregard for the checks and balances of democracy.

Fujimori seized dictatorial powers in April 1992, dissolving the opposition-controlled Congress and closing the courts — moves supported by a majority of Peruvians, who were fed up with weak and ineffective governments. A new Constitution was written, and a new Congress elected, dominated by his supporters.

France, U.S. discuss emissions

■ Jacques Chirac accused the U.S. of evading greenhouse-gas reduction.

By Emma Ross
Associated Press

THE HAGUE, Netherlands — France and the United States clashed Monday at the U.N. climate conference on how to reduce emissions of greenhouse gases warming the atmosphere.

French President Jacques Chirac began the conference's second and final week by implying that the United States was trying to get out of its promised reductions under the 1997 Kyoto protocol.

The United States favors what it calls a flexible approach, using market-based mechanisms that would allow it to meet its targets by trading emission credits with less-industrialized nations. It also wants freedom to use carbon-absorbing forest and farmland toward the reduction targets.

"No country can elude its share of the collective effort," the French president said. "Flexibility mechanisms ...

should definitely not be seen as a means of escape."

"It is in the Americans, in the first place, that we place our hopes of effectively limiting greenhouse-gas emissions on a global scale," Chirac said.

He called on the United States — the world's biggest polluter, producing one-quarter of the globe's emissions — to "cast aside its doubts and hesitations" and adopt measures to cut emissions.

Sen. Larry Craig, a Republican from Idaho who was sent to observe the negotiations, said Chirac's speech was uncalled for.

"Pointing fingers, as happened today, does not contribute to a solution," Craig told a news conference. "The president's speech was very unproductive."

China moves to improve rights standards

■ A U.N. official says an agreement reached with China is a "milestone" for human rights.

By John Leicester
Associated Press

BEIJING — China agreed Monday to accept U.N. help to move it toward complying with international human-rights treaties, a decision hailed as a milestone by the U.N.'s human-rights chief.

Under the agreement, human-rights workshops will be arranged with government officials, judges, prosecutors, lawyers, police and prison officials, and teachers involved in human-rights education will get training.

Other programs include holding academic seminars on human rights, translating key U.N. human-rights documents, boosting human-rights studies at Chinese universities and reviewing China's use of forced-labor camps.

Mary Robinson, the U.N. high commissioner for human rights, who signed the memorandum with Chinese Vice Foreign Minister Wang Guangya, hailed it as "a milestone for China" that will focus on reforms Beijing must make to comply with human-rights treaties it has signed but not yet ratified.

But Robinson also expressed concern about "lack of progress" for freedoms of expression, assembly and religion in China. She said she raised individual rights cases with Chinese officials, including that of a Muslim businesswoman serving an eight-year prison term for sending newspapers to her activist husband abroad.

She also discussed China's crackdown on the Falun Gong spiritual movement and its rule over Tibet and "pressed hard" but did not win Chinese agreement for an unfettered visit by a U.N. monitor on torture.

Robinson said criticism of Chinese abuses must be combined with work on helping China toward ratifying two key rights pacts it has signed.

"There's a huge mountain of work to be done — there's no getting away from that — but how else do you embed a culture of human rights in the largest population in the world?" she said.

Love bounces, with an occasional thud

Film: Bounce
Director: Don Ross
Writer: Don Ross
Starring: Ben Affleck and Gwyneth Paltrow
Length: 105 Minutes

Before seeing Bounce, I had absolutely no clue what the title meant. About three-quarters of the way through the movie, Gwyneth Paltrow filled me in. And roughly 15 minutes after the film ended, I found yet another meaning.

Though the film tells us that to deal with loss is to "bounce," it may as well refer to how the film is executed. Don Ross' second directorial effort, the follow-up to 1998's The Opposite of Sex, oscillates between satisfying and frustrating. Ross again demonstrates the wit and attitude that made his first feature so enjoyable, but occasionally he allows careless direction and the demands of Hollywood to disrupt the viewer's state of satisfaction.

Bounce begins in fine fashion, as Ross pulls off the difficult task of making plot exposition engaging. While waiting in an airport bar for a delayed departure, advertising agent Buddy Amaral (Affleck) chats with two strangers, one a writer named Greg (Tony Goldwyn) from Los Angeles, the other a striking woman named Mimi (Natasha Henstridge), who works in "organ development." Buddy, seeing a chance to make every-one's night (especially his) a little better, gives his L.A.-bound ticket to Greg and bunks with Mimi for the night. The entire three-way exchange is subtly written and directed by Ross, as Buddy, Greg and Mimi's discussions of David Crosby and the meaning of the word "dooryard" cleverly flesh out the previously unknown characters.

But fate steps in and reveals that the night only ended well for Buddy and Mimi. Greg's plane goes down over Kansas, leaving Buddy to cope with a mountain of guilt. He first turns to alcohol, which lands him in a treatment center for six months. Upon release, he decides to get closer to the source of his problem and pays a visit to Greg's widow, Abby (Paltrow). The situation becomes even more complex when the two fall in love, with Abby still in the dark about Buddy's relation to her husband.

Shortly after Buddy and Abby meet, Ross stages another sit-down-and-talk sequence. This time the topic of discussion is Abby's two-puffs-and-done cigarette technique. She explains that she doesn't really smoke. She's just addicted to the nicotine-laced gum that smokers chew to quit smoking, so she's smoking to quit chewing.

Finally, Affleck and Paltrow share the screen together. A star-powered pairing can be a tricky thing for a director to negotiate, but Ross finds time to please both the Affleck and Paltrow fans with timely lip-locks and "who thinks of that?" humor that will appeal to fans of The Opposite of Sex.

Ross does romance pretty well, too. Buddy and Abby's first kiss says fear and passion all at once, which are not easy emotions to mix.

So if all that good stuff is the bounce, here's the rebound. First, the color of Abby's hair. Are we not supposed to notice that when she walks in the door to Buddy's apartment it's sandy blonde, and when she leaves late that evening, it's suddenly deep auburn? This transformation happens repeatedly and breaks the romantic spell every time you wonder where it came from.

Also, does every single object in the movie have to have a brand name shamelessly emblazoned on it? McDonald's, Evian, Old Navy, Sony, Court TV and CNN all pop up with labels blaring. The Los Angeles Dodgers even manage to work their way into the plot. And then there's my favorite: an amazing Diet Coke can that magically faces label-out no matter what angle it is shot from.

But despite these intrusions, Bounce remains a competently executed and enjoyable film. Ross gets a charming performance from Paltrow, who makes us simultaneously smile and wince as the frazzled widow who

Combs' Thanksgiving dinner for 30,000

ATLANTA (AP) — Sean "Puffy" Combs has taken up the torch of late civil-rights leader Hosea Williams, feeding the homeless for the holidays.

Combs pledged Sunday to pay for this year's charity Thanksgiving dinner, an annual tradition founded by Williams in 1970. Some 30,000 people are expected Thursday.

"It's a crazy thing to have your stomach growling and not knowing you're about to eat," Combs said. "I feed the hungry in New York every year for the holidays, and I've seen hands-on what this does for the people. It's something we need to all come out and support, even if it's just a dollar."

President Clinton travels to Vietnam ...

Push progress carefully

Last week, President Clinton became the first U.S. president to visit Vietnam since 1969. The president and his family spent three days speaking with Vietnamese leaders, delivering speeches to students and visiting sites where the search continues for the remains of Americans killed during the Vietnam War.

Clinton's visit, which was designed to improve the trade relationship between the United States and Vietnam, will hopefully prove to be an exercise in deepening understanding of Vietnam for both President Clinton and the nation as a whole.

That's all his visit should be for now, though. Although it appears from Clinton's warm reception from the people of Hanoi that anti-American feelings are waning in Vietnam, and that the country is slowly moving toward a less repressive economy, the United States and Vietnam still have far too many differences for us to hope for anything more than increased mutual understanding and respect.

These are deep wounds that will take many more years to heal completely.

Some, however, have encouraged Clinton to push an American agenda of democracy and the free market. On Nov. 16, the New York Times' editorial board portrayed Clinton's visit to Vietnam as "an excellent opportunity to press for a faster pace of change" in Vietnam.

Although 60 percent of all Vietnamese are too young to remember the Vietnam War, Americans should remember that the same war that killed 58,000 American soldiers took the lives of 3 million Vietnamese. Many villagers still search for the remains of the estimated 300,000 missing Vietnamese soldiers as well as the approximately 1,500 missing Americans. These are deep wounds that will take many more years to heal completely.

The United States must be careful not to re-open these old wounds in our efforts to improve our relationship with Vietnam. In order to gain the trust of Vietnam's old-style communist government, we must maintain respect for the country and avoid the kind of American arrogance that contributed to the disastrous results of the Vietnam War.

Clinton should be commended for his groundbreaking trip to Vietnam, and whomever becomes our next president should continue his work to improve the country's relationship with the United States. The next generation of American leaders must proceed cautiously, however, never forgetting the legacy of the Vietnam War.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

UI should not have stopped Hawk fans from celebrating their victory

Two thumbs down to whoever was responsible for telling the Kinnick Stadium announcer to "respectfully request" that fans refrain from running onto the field after Iowa's great upset win over Northwestern on Nov. 11. Along with the rest of the black-and-gold faithful, I have been a Hawkeye fan my entire quarter-century-long life, and I have stuck with the Hawkeyes through these past three losing seasons. As a season ticketholder, I make the 300-mile trek from Sioux City to Iowa City on football Saturdays. I do it because I love the Iowa Hawkeyes. Now, when my beloved Hawkeyes are about to upset the No. 12 team in the country, some ivory tower university official tells us, the faithful fans who bleed black and gold, that we cannot run onto the field and celebrate with the young men who never lost heart? I "respectfully" thumb my nose at that notion.

My father and I stormed onto that field on Nov. 11 (reminiscent of last month's Michigan State win), along with 10,000 others, and congratulated our Iowa Hawkeyes, and we did so proudly. I have never been more proud of a team that I am of coach Kirk Ferentz and this year's football team. Their perseverance paid off, and they have given the Hawkeye faithful a glimmer of hope for the future. Hawkeye fans across Iowa, across the Midwest and across the country have longed for the time when we can run onto the field and congratulate the players after big wins. Right now, every win is big — for confidence-building, for recruiting and for fan support.

Note to the UI: Never ever tell a win-starved Kinnick Stadium crowd not to run onto the field and congratulate their heroes after pulling off an improbable upset win.

If the end of this season is any indication of the direction in which coach Ferentz is moving this team, "We ain't seen nothin' yet!"

Singing the song lines through the Electoral desert

Strange times we live in, was all the driver had to say.

It's a old song line by a friend of mine. In the song, the narrator and his horse, Joe, are riding in the cab of a stranger's pick-up truck. They are hitchhiking across America.

This is Election 2000: Like in a dream, a guy in an old Ford pick-up rides through a pale landscape with a mysterious narrator and a horse sitting beside him.

If only Sigmund Freud were alive to explicate our dreams. He'd probably tell us we all have a deep-seeded fear of train tunnels. Or Empire State Buildings.

If only Election 2000 were that simple, a people dream. If only both candidates didn't resemble vacuum-cleaner salesmen on late-night cable.

Of course, if nature truly abhorred a vacuum, this country's presidential race would have been sucked over the event horizon several months ago, about the time Al Gore started reciting, from memory, each statistic that the 30-odd-year history of Medicare had ever produced and George W. Shrub began smirking as if he could not only pronounce the word "arithmetic" but persuade people he could use it in a sentence, too.

And now, of course, we're all still waiting to find out how a banana republic called Florida voted, if that's what it was that Florida did.

As it turns out, we should have sent Jimmy Carter to Florida on Election Day. That's what we do to other places in the world where we think the vote might be marred by what we politely call "irregularities."

Who would have thought, only a short month ago — say, when the World Series was still subwaying along — that something called "chads" would decide who our next president would be. I always thought "chads" was the name for those gaggles of fraternity boys roaming the streets at night, ever vigilant for the spore of a kegger.

And who would have thought that Shrub campaigner Katherine Harris would be in charge of the Florida vote? As Palm Beach Post columnist George McEvoy puts it, she has not always been exactly fastidious about campaign laws.

For instance, according to McEvoy, her 1994 campaign for the Florida Senate included a fund-raising scandal involving a $30,000 illegal contribution (later returned by her campaign) from Riscorp Inc., an insurance company. Five people were indicted; one went to federal prison. Once in the Florida Senate, McEvoy writes, she sponsored legislation that would have benefited Riscorp. According to the St. Petersburg Times, at least one measure she pushed was written by a Riscorp lobbyist.

In her defense, Harris denies ever helping Riscorp and points to a bill she sponsored to exempt a hospital from anti-trust laws, which Riscorp opposed. There might be a catch, however. According to the Sarasota Herald Tribune, she was dating the CEO of the hospital at the time. Harris denies that that had anything to do with anything legislative.

Since she became Florida's secretary of State, the Palm Beach Post reports, Harris has spent at least $100,000 in public money globe-trotting. McEvoy and various national news organizations, including the New York Times, have speculated that she's trying to demonstrate her worldliness in order to snare an ambassadorship in a Shrub administration.

Of course, I don't believe that any of that has the slightest thing to do with her attempt to stop counting votes in Florida. Only a cynical person would think that. Probably what we need right now are some more song lines. Song lines are, after all, the manner in which the Australian Aborigines found their way through the desert. They sang their way across.

Where have you gone, Joe DiMaggio? A nation turns its lonely eyes to you springs to mind, but it's probably too obvious.

And also, the brilliant movie from which the Paul Simon song comes, The Graduate, doesn't truly fit either the Shrub or Gore. Neither one, though they're both exactly the right age to, would understand the film.

Both his Shrubness and his Goreness would have been the uncle who enthusiastically tells Dustin Hoffman that the future is:

Plastics.

No wonder the American people couldn't make up their minds between the two.

The best song line about this election doesn't actually come from a song, but rather a book — Blue Highways, by William Least-Heat Moon, in an exchange somewhere in the backwoods between the author, who was on the road, and rural North Carolinian Thurmond Watts:

— Where you headed from here? Watts says.
— I don't know.
— Can't get lost then.
Beau Elliot is a DI columnist.

these United States," and the justices got right down to business — peppering lawyers with questions of law in a case riddled with political landmines.

Chief Justice Charles Wells pressed both sides about how long the state might wait to certify its election results without jeopardizing its 25-vote stake in the Dec. 18 roll call of the Electoral College. His questions sketched a scenario in which recounts might continue, perhaps into December.

"Tell me when Florida's electoral vote would be in jeopardy," Wells said again and again. "Why wouldn't it be in this unique circumstance a better thing to do to wait" to certify vote totals.

Justice Barbara Pariente asked whether selective recounts were unfair to voters who live in counties where the ballots were tabulated only once — a point that Bush has made in his legal filings.

Gore lawyer David Boies

said "there is going to have to be a lot of judgment applied by the court" to set uniform standards for approving ballots by hand, but he asked the court to do just that. GOP attorneys had their turn, which they used to suggest that Democrats were twisting Florida's law for political purposes.

"Federal law will not allow this court or the Florida Legislature to change the rules of the election after the election has taken place," Bush lawyer Michael Carvin said.

Harkin visits UI to push education plans

The UISG officials and Harkin also discussed the senator's earmarking $1 million in the bill, which would be allocated to Iowa university graduates who teach in the state. These graduates would have their student loans fully forgiven if they taught in Iowa for at least five years after college.

A recent study by the UI Educational Placement Office showed that 50 percent of UI graduates in the education field are lost to jobs in other states in their first three years after graduation.

UISG Executive Board member Sara Stephenson said she felt Harkin's commitment to higher education is commendable, citing his "involvement in getting Pell Grants and federal direct loans set up."

Harkin's packed itinerary also included lunch with UI staff and officials, a presentation of the Woodrow W. Morris Distinguished Friends of Nursing Award at the College of Medicine and tours of the pharmacy robotics lab, an anesthesia surgery simulator and the UI radiology facilities.

UISG Vice President Chris Linn said Harkin's visits to the sites served as an important reminder that "the UI is producing not just good students but good resources and services to the community."

On the senator's agenda today will be similar visits to Iowa State University and the University of Northern Iowa.

The St. Paul Lutheran Chapel and University Center, 404 E Jefferson St., will host a Thanksgiving service Wednesday beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Pastor Bill Eckhardt remains optimistic about turnout but admits that because the congregation is largely made up of students,

there will be a lot of "empty seats."

"We direct ourselves toward the UI community, and, although we will be small, we'll be dedicated," he said.

And for students who just want to stay in on Thanksgiving or who accidentally burn their turkeys, Papa John's Pizza in Coralville will be delivering pizza and breadsticks from 4 p.m. to 9 p.m.

All business will be routed to the Coralville location to cut down on the number of people that have to work Thursday, especially because the workload wouldn't call for both stores to be open, said employee Brian Heyderman.

Here's how the PrePass system works:

- Truckers who are part of a company that participates in the program register their vehicles with the DOT.

- It installs a windshield transponder that is programmed with the vehicle's identification and road-compliance information.

- The antennae read the signals given off by the transponders, which are then read on a computer by a DOT motor-vehicle enforcement officer. This lets the drivers bypass the weigh stations.

The program is funded and maintained by participating trucking companies, such as Wal-Mart and Werner Enterprises. More than 5,000 carriers and 151,000 trucks in the United States take part in the program, which is being used in 18 states. Business owners like the PrePass program because it saves time in transportation, Winfrey said.

School-bus attack kills 2 Israelis

Palestinian Authority understand that it will not achieve anything with violence," Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak said Monday night.

He blamed the bus bombing — in which five of the nine wounded were children — on the Tanzim militia, which is connected to Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat's political movement, Fatah.

Palestinian officials said 62 people were injured in the Israeli bombardments, approximately half of them civilians.

Israeli helicopters unleashed an hour-long rocket barrage at nightfall, targeting Fatah and Palestinian security offices, including police headquarters and a building not far from the office where Arafat was working at the time.

The air strike cut electricity, plunging Gaza City into darkness, and rockets hit several nearby refugee camps, witnesses said. At least 22 of the wounded were from Shati camp, doctors said. Israel said missile boats off the Gaza coast in the Mediterranean joined the attack.

Many of the offices targeted were under the control of Mohammed Dahlan, the head of the Preventive Security Service, who Israeli television said was suspected in the bus attack.

After the Israeli assault, Dahlan was defiant. He told Associated Press Television News the Palestinians will confront Israel until "Palestinian national rights are achieved."

Arafat's aides denounced the bus attack. "We had nothing to do with this incident. We reject any kind of violence," said Arafat adviser Nabil Aburdeneh.

The White House called for "clear and unambiguous" condemnations of the bus attack and urged the Palestinians to arrest the bombers.

"It's important that there be a clear condemnation of the attack," national security spokesman P.J. Crowley said. "As long as the violence continues, we have great concern that this could spiral out of control."

It's ladies' night

By Nick Tremmel
The Daily Iowan

They're talented, they're colorful, and they're drag queens, captivating crowds in the Iowa City and Cedar Rapids area with their outrageous costumes and energetic dance moves. Every Wednesday night at Club Basix in Cedar Rapids and Friday night at the Alley Cat in Iowa City, local men don wigs and makeup to entertain audiences with their self-choreographed routines.

*Malaika never forgets to look her best,
and she's quick to remember
the new 641 area code.*

Brought to you by your Iowa telecommunications companies. This map is designed for general reference only. Exceptions to the area code boundaries apply.

Due to increasing demand for new telephone numbers and area codes throughout the U.S., the 515 area code is being split into two area codes: 515 and the new 641. As of Sunday, December 3rd, you must dial the area code when placing a call between the 515 and 641 area codes. So if your number falls within the new 641 area code, don't forget to remind the people who call you.

There are no changes for local calling areas, 911, and long-distance calls. Seven-digit telephone numbers will not change. But anyone with speed calling, modems, faxes, or other preprogrammed equipment will need to reprogram all 1+ numbers that are affected. Cellular phones must be reprogrammed by your cellular service provider. Also, please make sure your business phone system can accommodate the new area code by calling our "test" line at no charge: 1-641-421-0030. If you have trouble placing a call to the 641 area code, contact your equipment provider.

Ferentz credits stars, seniors for perseverance

Jerry Hynes/The Daily Iowan Iowa's Jon Beutjer shakes the hand of Ryan Barton Nov. 18.

■ After an 0-6 start, Iowa won three of its final six games in 2000.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

After Iowa's loss to Minnesota on Nov. 18, coach Kirk Ferentz perhaps best summed up this season to reporters: "Who the heck would've dreamt we would have beat three Big Ten teams
six weeks ago?"

Few people thought Ferentz' Hawkeyes would win that many conference games this year, especially against the teams they beat. Michigan State beat Florida in the Citrus Bowl last year, and

beating Penn State in Happy Valley is never something to be sad about. Northwestern was a team that, back in August,
many thought Iowa should beat, but that was before the spectacular season the Wildcats had.

With a 3-9 record, most people probably won't remember this season as a remarkable one; however, the Hawkeyes did accomplish feats not recently accomplished by Iowa teams.

Iowa beat two ranked teams,
Michigan State and Northwestern. The last time Iowa beat a ranked team was in 1997 — it's been even longer since Iowa beat two ranked teams in the same season. The Hawkeyes had a running back

go over 1,000 yards in rushing and a receiver go over 1,000 yards in receiving for the first time in school history.

Ladell Betts ran for 1,090
yards this season, and Kevin Kasper had 1,010 yards receiving.

Ferentz lauded both players' seasons.

"It's been tough sledding for Ladell, I, and the coaching staff, have a tremendous amount of respect for him, just because of the way he handles himself," Ferentz said. "What do you say about Kevin? He just does it every week. He's a fighter, a scrapper, a very productive player."

What was equally remarkable as any single thing Iowa accomplished this year was the way the team improved as the season went on. After starting with losses to Western Michigan and Iowa State, questions surfaced about whether this team would win

any game this year.

Some questioned if the team
was really getting any better.
That Iowa won two of its last four games shows improvement. The two losses the Hawks had were by a combined nine points to Wisconsin and Minnesota, two teams that will be playing in bowl games
in the next month.

Senior punter Jason Baker said the team never gave up down the stretch.

"We were put into a position

Quick turnaround for Iowa

■ Two days after its first game, Iowa will try not to let the dogs out when it takes on Drake tonight.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

Coming off a less-than-impressive victory against Wisconsin-Milwaukee Sunday night, the Iowa men's basketball team will travel to Des Moines this evening to begin its quest for the mythical
state championship.

Steve Alford and his 1-0 Hawkeyes will take to the floor of the sold-out Knapp Center at 7:05 to battle the Drake Bulldogs, the first of three intrastate rivalry games
this season.

The situation is not an ideal one to be in, Alford said. Just two days after playing a very close game, the Hawkeyes will play in a hostile environment against another challenging opponent. Perhaps the most difficult aspect will be the difference in preparation, Alford said. The contest will be Drake's season opener.

"The toughest part is knowing Drake was sitting at home
watching this game," he said
following Sunday's 83-79 victory over UW-Milwaukee.

Casual observers may write the game off as another non-conference victory for Iowa,
but they may have short-term memories. Last season, Iowa battled Drake for an 83-76

Bluder hopes team puts loss in the past

■ Iowa coach Lisa Bluder hopes her squad can improve on its 23 percent shooting percentage.

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

Lisa Bluder said, thank goodness for Monday.
Following a dismal showing on Nov. 18, in which her Iowa women's basketball team shot a mere 23 percent from the field in a 66-42 loss to Utah, there is no time to dwell on the poor performance because Iowa State is coming to town.

The Cyclones are ranked as high as 10th nationally and are coming to Carver-Hawkeye Arena with two dominating exhibition victories behind them and a promising 2000 season ahead.

"This will be a great test of character of how we bounce back and practice to get ready to play Iowa State," Bluder said. "We are playing a very strong team and one of the highest-ranked teams on our

Brett Roseman/The Daily Iowan

Iowa's Leah Manger fights for the ball with Marquette's Ebony Williams in the second half of the Hawkeyes' victory over the Golden Eagles, Nov. 17.

This is a team we respect a lot. They have good height, good shooting, good balance and good tournament experience."

The Cyclones are looking to take a step beyond their 1999 trip to the Elite Eight in the NCAA Tournament, and they are shooting for their fourth-

straight win over the Hawkeyes, including a 79-69 victory last year in Ames. The return of junior center Angie Welle and senior guard
Megan Taylor provides Iowa State with a talented and experienced inside-outside combination.

At 6-foot-4, Welle presents a match-up challenge for Iowa's post players. Against the Hawkeyes last year, Welle notched a double-double, scoring a game-high 21 points and pulling down 11 rebounds.

"It will be a challenge,"
starting center Randi Peterson said. "She's bigger than me, stronger than me and taller than me. It's not something I'm not used to. I just have to trust my teammates to be there on the weak side."

Despite Welle's ability to dominate down low, the Cyclones have turned to their perimeter shooting through the pre-season exhibitions, shooting almost half their shots from three-point range.

Hawks set for last home test

■ Iowa's final home game is a challenging one against No. 8 Minnesota Wednesday.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

After four seasons in an Iowa volleyball uniform, in which she saw a coaching change and a drastic turnaround in the team's performance, Katie Panhorst will set foot on the floor of Carver-Hawkeye Arena for the final time Wednesday afternoon.

The Hawkeyes will play host to the No. 8 Minnesota Golden Gophers in a 1 p.m. tilt. The final home match was originally scheduled to begin at 7 p.m.
but was bumped up to accommodate the Iowa-Iowa State women's basketball game. The match will serve as senior day,
as both Panhorst and first-year transfer Fabiana De Abreu will be honored.

"It's sad," Panhorst said following Iowa's 3-1 victory over Michigan on Nov. 18. "I don't even want to think about it yet."

Her final home match in Iowa City isn't the only thing
Panhorst or her teammates have on their minds. With two matches remaining this season, the 13-13 Hawkeyes have a chance, albeit a small one,
of making the NCAA tournament.

"I'm going to hold out until the end," coach Rita Buck-Crockett said this weekend on possible post-season plans.

For the Hawkeyes to receive an NCAA invitation, the most desirable scenario would be that they win their final two matches. After Wednesday,
Iowa will travel to Ohio State
Friday for its final Big Ten match. With two victories, Iowa would finish 15-13 and could finish as high as fourth in the conference.

In order to increase the chances of post-season competition, Iowa must first bring the Gophers to their knees.
Minnesota has remained in the Top 10 throughout the season and defeated Iowa, 3-0, in convincing fashion in Minneapolis
earlier this season.

While team members are hoping to continue playing beyond Saturday, team members say they don't feel any extra pressure on them to perform above their capabilities.

"If anything it's easier right now," said outside hitter Jamie Lansing. "Our chemistry is awesome right now."

FSU jumps to No. 2

■ The Seminoles are in a position to play for the national championship.

Florida State jumped ahead of Miami into second place in the Bowl Championship Series
standings, moving the Seminoles a giant step closer to playing in a national title game in the Orange Bowl.

The Seminoles (11-1), who completed their season with a 30-7 victory over then-No. 4 Florida on Saturday night, have a 51-point lead over Miami (9-1)
but were well behind first-place
Oklahoma in the standings

McEnroe quits Davis Cup

■ Tennis legend John McEnroe says he is not happy with performance as captain.

By Bob Greene
Associated Press

NEW YORK — As Davis Cup captain, John McEnroe's biggest problem was that he didn't have someone like John McEnroe as a player.

For lack of such a player, one of the best in the world who would put Davis Cup, first among his priorities, McEnroe has called it quits after 14 months at the helm of the U.S. team.

"John feels so passionate about Davis Cup and he is a perfectionist," U.S. Tennis Association President Judy Levering said Monday. "He's disappointed with himself."

But Levering cautioned that McEnroe's resignation was not just the lack of having America's top players ready to play every Davis Cup series.

"He's upset with the format of Davis Cup and feels it keeps the U.S. from doing as well as it could," she said. "It was a combination of things that led to it."

McEnroe told Levering of his decision over lunch in New York early last week, before he left for Frankfurt, Germany, where he played in a senior tournament.

"We weren't prepared to make a statement then," Levering said. "We didn't want the perception to be he and I were at odds, so we decided to make a joint announcement."

"We pretty much had the announcement on Saturday. I asked to delay it until after the Chase Championships. I didn't think it was right to make the announcement at someone else's event."

The Chase Championships, the season-ending tournament of the WTA Tour, was completed on Sunday, with Martina Hingis defeating Monica Seles in a close match.

McEnroe declined comment after beating Henri Leconte 6-1, 6-3 in the final of the seniors tour event in Frankfurt Monday. Before the USTA announcement was made, he refused to comment when contacted at his hotel room by the Associated Press.

The resignation of McEnroe, one of the greatest players in Davis Cup history, comes nearly four months after the U.S. team was swept by Spain in the semifinals. He said he was "extremely frustrated with the difficulties of the scheduling and format of the competition."

He also was troubled because two of the world's top players, Pete Sampras and Andre Agassi, were unwilling to fully commit to Davis Cup play.

"I was privileged to have been selected and honored to have served as captain," McEnroe said. "Unfortunately, for a variety of reasons I was disappointed that I was unable to have a great impact as captain of the team."

Levering appointed McEnroe captain on Sept. 8, 1999, to pump life into an event that does not get nearly as much attention in the United States as it does around the world.

He immediately received a call from Agassi, who said he wanted to be on the team. After much pleading, McEnroe also got Sampras to come aboard.

POINTCOUNTERPOINT

Will Iowa go to a bowl game in 2001?

With a weak non-conference schedule and a roster that has almost everybody coming back, the Iowa Hawkeyes have a very good chance of going to a bowl game next year.

Replacing Kansas State and Nebraska with Miami of Ohio and Kent State, and playing an Iowa State team that loses a lot of seniors, Iowa could be 3-0 starting conference play. That's half way to the six wins needed for a bowl game.

On offense, Iowa's line has everybody but A.J. Blazek returning. Ladell Betts is back after a 1,000-yard season, along with offensive players Kahli Hill, Chris Oliver, Jeremy Allen and quarterbacks Jon Beutjer and Kyle McCann.

On defense, Iowa loses only three starters. Bob Sanders and Benny Sapp will be better. The linebacker spot will be deep with Roger Meyer, Mike Dolezal, Fred Barr and Kevin Worthy returning. Nate Kaeding is back after a solid season of place kicking.

Not only does Iowa have strong players returning, but it will likely have a solid recruiting class coming in, with many players that could possibly have an early impact much like this year's freshmen did. Iowa already has four commitments from recruits, and the state of Iowa has one of the best crops it has had in years. Throw whatever recruits Iowa gets in the with the returning guys, and they'll be better.

Put the Hawks in a conference that has no team with lots of talent coming back next year, and a bowl game looks more than just possible — it's very likely.

— by Jeremy Schnitker

Even though the non-conference schedule is less than menacing, the Hawkeyes will have a rough time going to a bowl game in 2001.

Sneaking up on teams in the Big Ten can go a long way toward improving a team's image — just ask Northwestern. But the results the following year can be disastrous — just ask Illinois.

By the time Iowa's 2000 season ended, the Hawkeyes proved they were not the same team that was a weekly cakewalk for the rest of the conference. Big wins over Northwestern and Michigan State (both teams rated in the Top 25 when they played Iowa) put the Hawkeyes back on the radar of teams to look out for. That is why they may not be spending Christmas somewhere warm next season.

Big Ten opponents are going to take the Hawkeyes more seriously next season and that could jeopardize its chances for a bowl game. Teams will take more care in pre-game preparation, and when teams come to Iowa City, they will know they have a battle on their hands, much like going to Wisconsin or Penn State.

Even though Ladell Betts and most of the offensive line will be back, the loss of Kevin Kasper will hurt the Hawkeyes more than people think. The leading receiver in school history may be playing on Sundays or for Vince McMahon, and there is no one dependable enough to take his place in Iowa City.

The Hawks could go bowling, but it is far less than a sure thing.

Pistons sign Joe Smith away from Minnesota

■ After Joe Smith's contract with Minnesota was voided, the forward signs with Detroit.

By Gerald Miller
Associated Press

DETROIT — Joe Smith, declared a free agent in the NBA's biggest salary-cap case, signed with the Pistons Monday to help Detroit rebound from the departure of Grant Hill.

Smith agreed to a $2.25 million deal with Detroit for the rest of the season. Had he resigned with the Minnesota Timberwolves, he would have been able to make a maximum of $611,000. "We are very excited to have Joe Smith choose the Pistons," general manager Joe Dumars said in a statement. "We are committed to building this team the right way, and to have Smith select Detroit as his home is an endorsement of that."

Signing Smith, who has averaged a career 14.5 points per game, is a step toward rebuilding the team after Hill's departure as a free agent to Orlando. Last season with the Timberwolves, Smith averaged

Selig to testify on baseball disparity

(AP) — The disparity between baseball's large- and small-market teams has become a federal issue. A Senate subcommittee summoned Commissioner Bud Selig to testify in Washington today on baseball's economic problems. "My concern is that baseball is not moving fast enough to deal with this," said Ohio Republican Mike DeWine, chairman of the antitrust and competition subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

"There really are the haves and the have-nots today," DeWine said. "There are literally fans in the spring who have a hard time coming up with scenarios in which their team makes the playoffs."

Union head Donald Fehr was invited to the hearing but will miss it because of a family commitment. Broadcaster Bob Costas is scheduled to testify, along with two members of the owners' latest economic study committee: former Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell and commentator George Will.

Indians hope Burks can power gap

CLEVELAND — The Cleveland Indians finally found a right fielder willing to accept their millions. Ellis Burks became the first high-profile free agent hitter to go elsewhere this offseason, signing a $20 million, three-year deal Monday with the Indians, who began filling the void left by the departure of Manny Ramirez.

Burks decided to sign with the Indians during the weekend after narrowing his choice to Cleveland and the Texas Rangers.

By signing Burks, the Indians may have ended any possibility of re-signing Ramirez, who rejected the club's $119 million, seven-year offer and is still on the market.

"I don't think this helps. We would have to be creative," Indians general manager said on the prospect reopening negotiations with Ramirez.

Rae Carruth goes on trial in slaying

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Former NFL wideout Rae Carruth went on trial on murder charges Monday, with a prosecutor accusing him of having his pregnant girlfriend killed because she wouldn't get an abortion.

"He wanted her to have an abortion, but she was adamant in her refusal. She wanted to have that baby," Gentry Caudill told the jury.

A defense attorney blamed the shooting on a friend of Carruth's who was angry because Carruth would not provide money to buy marijuana.

Prosecutors are seeking the death penalty for Carruth, 26, who played for the Carolina Panthers.

A's trade Stairs to Cubs for pitcher

OAKLAND, Calif. — Right fielder Matt Stairs, who hit 122 homers during 4½ seasons with the Oakland Athletics, was traded Monday to the Chicago Cubs for right-handed pitcher Eric Ireland.

Stairs had consecutive 100-RBI seasons in 1998 and 1999 and hit a career-high 38 home runs in 1999. He slumped to a .227 average with 21 home runs and 81 RBIs this past season.

Des Moines to get arenafootball2 team

DES MOINES — A new edition of the Iowa Barnstormers will be back in town in the spring, but this time, it's a minor league version.

Jim Foster, the franchise's major owner, announced Monday that he will start an arenafootball2 team by April.

Foster's decision comes less than a month after Iowa's only Arena Football League franchise was sold to Charles Wang, co-owner of the New York Islanders of the National Hockey League, and moved to Long Island.

The sale of the franchise came after a 6-year effort to attract enough fans in a market as small as Des Moines.

North Carolina fires football coach

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — North Carolina football coach Carl Torbush, who almost lost his job last year, was fired Monday after a 6-5 season.

Torbush was criticized this season when the Tar Heels had a four-game losing streak, but the team came back to win its last three games, including a 59-21 victory over Duke on Saturday. The other victories came against Pittsburgh and Maryland.

"The university has made a decision to change the leadership of this football program," Torbush said in a statement. "The decision for a change was in no way mine. And while I respect their right to make a change, I deeply hurt for the players, staff, families and friends of this program who have devoted their hearts and souls to building a team of winners in every aspect of life."

Sosa says talks ongoing with Cubs

LONDON — In the British capital to give a baseball exhibition on Monday at the Oval cricket ground, Sammy Sosa said his agent still is negotiating with the Cubs on a contract extension.

"I think Chicago is going to come through," he said. "If they don't sign me, definitely I'm going to move. Right now we're talking, and let's see what happens. I think it's going to happen."

Sosa, who led the majors last season with 50 home runs, said the market was on the upswing and he expected some team to meet his salary demand, reported at $100 million for a six-year deal.

Citrus picks Michigan

ANN ARBOR — Lloyd Carr is still smiling.

Michigan's coach was thrilled to beat Ohio State, 38-26, Saturday on the road to clinch a share of the Big Ten title.

"The fact that we were down 9-0 then came back is a tremendous tribute to the way our players responded," Carr said. "I'm proud of the way they responded throughout the season to the difficult times. They didn't hang their heads, they kept working."

Carr continued to sport a grin on Monday when the Citrus Bowl extended an invitation for the No. 16 Wolverines (8-3 overall, 6-2 Big Ten) to play in its New Year's Day game in Orlando, Fla., against a Southeastern Conference team to be determined.

Last-place Canadiens fire coach, GM

MONTREAL — The Montreal Canadiens, hockey's greatest franchise now mired in last place, fired their coach and general manager Monday.

Coach Alain Vigneault was replaced by Michel Therrien, and general manager Rejean Houle was replaced by Andre Savard.

"As a result of our very poor results, we came to the conclusion that we needed to move quickly and somewhat radically with respect to our hockey administration," Canadiens president Pierre Boivin told a news conference.

In other moves in the shake-up, former captain Guy Carbonneau was appointed assistant coach while scout Martin Madden was made the assistant GM.

Northwestern to play in Alamo Bowl

EVANSTON, Ill. — Northwestern will play in the Alamo Bowl on Dec. 30 in San Antonio.

"We're thrilled," NU coach Randy Walker said.

The Wildcats (8-3 overall, 6-2 Big Ten) will play a team from the Big 12 conference. The leading contenders are Texas, Texas A&M and Kansas State.

Alstott out 6-8 weeks with knee sprain

TAMPA, Fla. — All-Pro fullback Mike Alstott probably will miss the rest of the regular season after spraining his left knee in Tampa Bay's 13-10 loss to the Chicago Bears on Sunday.

"It doesn't sound like it's going to require any surgery," coach Tony Dungy said Monday. "It's just going to be a matter of resting up and letting it heal."

The Bucs described Alstott's injury as a third-degree sprain of the medial collateral ligament and said he is expected to be sidelined six to eight weeks. The knee will be placed in a cast for 10 days, then the 260-pound fullback will have to wear a brace for one to three weeks before beginning rehabilitation.

Bluder said exhibition games aren't really the end-all measurement of a team and expects Welle to be more involved Wednesday night.

"Without a doubt, I think they are going to go inside against us," Bluder said. "When you have Angie Welle for a weapon, why would you not use it?"

In addition to preparing for the Cyclones' balanced offensive attack, Iowa will also have to devise a way to attack Iowa State's zone defense. The Hawkeyes have not faced a zone this year, and Bluder said a big key will be her players' ability to improve their passing game and be patient in finding a good shot.

Senior guard Cara Consuegra said the team's patience rests mainly with her and how she handles herself on the court. She said the team was overanxious and forced shots against Utah — a habit from last season.

"That was kind of a nightmare for us," she said. "It just felt like the harder we tried, the worse it got. I'll take a lot of responsibility for that as the point guard. It's still hard for me learning the new offense, but if I can get myself to relax, play my game, and have trust in my teammates and what we're trying to accomplish with this offense, it will help a lot."

This is Consuegra's final go around against Iowa State. She may be from Maryland, but she understands the rivalry and has yet to beat the Cyclones.

"They'll be a challenge, as they are every year," she said. "But again, I don't think we can't compete with them. It's just a matter of us going out and playing within ourselves. This rivalry is huge. I learned that from being on this campus for two weeks."

Iowa will take Thanksgiving Day off and return to the court Friday to prepare for the Hawkeye Challenge. Western Illinois, American and University of Nevada-Reno will travel to Iowa City for the tournament. Iowa will open with Western Illinois Saturday at 1 p.m.

Hawkeyes hoping for tougher mindset against Drake victory, which took two overtimes in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The Bulldogs hope to challenge for the Missouri Valley Conference title this season under coach Kurt Kanaskie after finishing from dismal 4-14 in the conference last season. Senior guard Lamont Evans brings experience to a Bulldog lineup, which features seven newcomers and is rated as one of Drake's best recruiting classes ever.

While the Hawkeyes also bring a young and relatively inexperienced lineup to Des Moines, players who have experienced the rivalry before know the game will be both fun and challenging.

The setting will be something the young Hawkeyes must quickly adapt to. Drake tends to play well at home; it defeated Iowa State, 48-44, in its season opener last year. The Cyclones eventually went on to become an Elite-8 team.

The Knapp Center seats 10,000 people and has long been sold out for tonight's game. The crowded confines will offer a vast difference from cavernous Carver.

"It's going to be loud," junior Duez Henderson said. "That place will almost be like a cracker box."

Luke Recker, who will be getting his first taste of the intrastate rivalry, knows the importance of symbolic games such as the Iowa-Drake matchup.

"It's a rivalry. We're going to be ready to play, and so are they," he said.

Fans disappointed by Iowa's showing early against UW-Milwaukee Sunday should look for improvement in the area of mental toughness. The Hawkeyes trailed the entire first half against the Panthers, something Alford said needs to be corrected from the beginning against Drake.

"We need to go in with a much tougher mindset," he said. "This will be a very tough contest."

were we could pour the groundwork," he said. "We're not going to be the group that keeps the rewards for this. Indirectly we will, but that's probably the most important thing we're going to give next year's team."

Senior center A.J. Blazek said Iowa did a lot of positive things this year. When he looks in the future, he wishes he would be here to see everything come together.

"I'm going to take a lot away from this season," he said. "This is the first time we've had a 1,000-yard receiver and 1,000-yard rusher. It was real emotional after the game, but after about a half an hour, I got happy.

"Because we came in and played well. These guys have so much to look forward to, I'm just upset that I won't be here next year to go to a bowl with them."

Ferentz's record at Iowa is now 4-19, after winning just one game last year. However, since signing his contract on Nov. 2, the coach is 2-1.

The second-year coach has said all along that he was pleased with the effort his team has given him and his staff all year.

"Our players have fought and stayed mentally tough this year," Ferentz said.

He also wanted his seniors recognized for what they've done for the program, not only this year, but in their past years.

"I just want to pay tribute to our seniors — what a great group of guys they have been," Ferentz said. "Great effort, great leadership they've shown our younger players. They're gonna be in our thoughts for a long, long time. I know everyone on the staff is very appreciative for what they've done for us this year."

Miami could still be champs despite BCS

BCS STANDINGS

beat Florida State earlier this season, also won convincingly, defeating unranked Syracuse, 26-0. But the eight computer rankings used in the standings to determine who plays in a title game were more impressed with the Seminoles' win.

"This is the way it is. I either make it, or I don't," Florida State coach Bobby Bowden said.

For three weeks, Oklahoma, Miami and Florida State have been ranked 1-2-3 in The Associated Press media poll and USA Today/ESPN coaches' poll.

If Miami fails to get into the BCS title game, the Hurricanes can still become national champions in the AP media poll, in which sports writers and broadcasters vote independently of the BCS. The coaches' poll would automatically crown the winner of the Orange Bowl.

Though he'd be disappointed if the Hurricanes didn't play in the Orange Bowl on Jan. 3, Miami coach Butch Davis said: "We beat the No. 1 and No. 2 teams (at the time) and two or three others who are bowl eligible. If we end up going 11-1, we'll have beaten someone very good in a BCS game. And you never know how they (writers) can vote."

If Oklahoma (10-0) wins its final two games, against Oklahoma State on Saturday and Kansas State in the Big 12 title game on Dec. 2, Miami would have little chance to overtake Florida State in the final BCS standings Dec. 3. Miami closes its season on Saturday against Boston College.

"On its own, it doesn't look like there's anything Miami can do to pass Florida State, maybe," said Jerry Palm of Chicago, who operates a Web site that closely monitors the BCS standings.

Buckeyes headed for game in Tampa again

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Even though it finished fourth in the Big Ten, Ohio State grabbed the third-best bowl available on Monday when it bypassed Northwestern to snap up a berth in the Outback Bowl. "It's hard to figure out," Ohio State coach John Cooper said. He added that he said he was excited to be taking a team to the bowl in Tampa even though he has lost in both appearances there.

horoscopes

Tuesday, November 21, 2000 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Mix business with pleasure for best results. You will appreciate some competition from colleagues and clients, so organize a contest requiring skill and endurance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Disappointment regarding your residence will cause disruptions in your plans. Make sure you take care of the needs of those you're responsible for. Private affairs may be all-consuming.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Idle time will lead to disagreements with those at home. Renovation or redecorating projects could turn out well if you are willing to work with one another.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You should listen to sound advice concerning your present emotional situation. You may find that career changes are being forced on you. Acceptance will be the key.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You will be highly creative in your work. Clients will appreciate your uniqueness even if your boss is too rigid to grasp your point of view. Your charm and intellect will win you points.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Discord will be manifest. Your preoccupation with emotional concerns may cause you to be self-centered. Pull yourself together. People around you rely on your stability and wisdom.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Property investments will pay off. You can make positive changes at home. You will impress others with your sound ideas. Don't hesitate to ask for favors. Go after your goals.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Look to those with more experience and knowledge for answers. You can make romantic connections. Be positive that your potential mate is completely clear of past ties.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You will work much better on your own today. Frustration will mount if you have to wait for someone to complete her or his work in order to finish yours. Don't expect favors from others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Be creative. You will be happiest while working with your hands or when dealing with children. If you don't already have a hobby, today is an excellent day to start one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Opportunities to make financial gains or sign contracts is apparent. You may want to become serious about your personal relationship. You must make decisions regarding your future together.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Expect discord with your emotional partner if you have been too wrapped up in your business dealings. You may want to take time to explain your situation. Promise to make it up to her or him.

a Happy Thanksgiving!

The Ledge

By Jesse Ammerman

Ways to entertain guests at Thanksgiving dinner

- Remind your relatives that gravy isn't just a topping — it's also a crisp, refreshing drink!
- Forget the turkey, and opt for fast food instead. Your guests will love it!
- Launch into a rendition of Ted Nugent's "Wango Tango" as soon as dinner is served. Encourage others to join in.
- See how much pumpkin pie you and your guests can put in your aunt's hair before she notices.
- Forge a close bond with the turkey. Act horrified when it is cooked, carved and eaten.
- When asked, insist that what you're most thankful for is the re-emergence of '70s pop music sensation David Cassidy.
- Try to incorporate dance segments every 10 minutes to keep guests entertained.
- Make sure your grandmother participates in these dance segments.
- Remember: There are many, many items you can stuff a turkey with.
- Compliment your guests on their appearances. Mention that some of them look just like the turkey.
- Forbid plates and silverware from the dinner table. Inform your guests that "today, it's an all-out, bare knuckles free-for-all."
