Icy roads blamed for chemical spill

■ A truck accident leaves a 7-mile stretch of I-80 closed for nearly 12 hours.

By Nick Narigon
 The Daily Iowan

Three semi-trucks collided near Interstate 80 mile-marker 234 Thursday morning, sending one man to the hospital and causing a chemical spill that backed up drivers until almost 5 p.m.

At approximately 6 a.m., truck drivers Donald Allen, 30, of Jeffersonville, Ga., Darrel Regier, 48, of Lumberton, Texas, and Keith Hawkins, 28, of San Antonio, Texas, all lost control of their semis because of icy road conditions, resulting in a destructive three-way collision, according to an accident report by the Iowa State Patrol.

Regier's tanker, which contained liquid oxygen, spilled onto the interstate, causing a seven-mile stretch of I-80 from Tiffin to Oxford to be barricaded off from traffic in both directions.

Allen was taken to UI Hospitals and Clinics, where he was listed in serious condition with a possible broken neck Thursday evening. According to the State Patrol report, his semi was totaled, and Regier's and Hawkins' trucks received major damage.

At the scene, shattered glass littered the pavement. The liquid-oxygen tanker was lying in the median on its side, missing its back wheels. Workers attached the hooks of two cranes and a tow truck to the tanker to lift it from its position. A blue Arctic Express truck bed was nothing but a mass of twisted metal, surrounded by scraps and debris. White vapor billowed up from beneath the trucks, as firefighters sprayed the road with hoses, trying to clean off the oxygen.

The catalyst for the crumpled metal and debris was the combination of ice and bends in the road, according to reports. Allen's vehicle was traveling west on I-80 when he lost control on the ice and slid into the median. Regier lost control at the same time and slid his truck into Allen's vehicle. Hawkins, who was following directly behind the two, lost control of his truck and smashed into the other two, causing the oxygen leak, the report said. One of the trucks was carrying fruit, and the other was carrying auto parts.

While liquid oxygen isn't poisonous, it could potentially fuel a fire, said UI chemistry Professor James Gloer. "It isn't really inflammable," he said, "but it is the stuff that feeds flames."

Many people who commute to Iowa City were forced to take alternative routes into town today, causing traffic jams on area highways, especially Highway 6. UI staff member and Williamsburg resident Thomas Witte said he took the back roads into Iowa City to avoid traffic. However, his one person in his family didn't have such luck.

"My mother-in-law took Highway 6, and she got held up by 18-wheelers that were blocking traffic," Witte said.

Clean-up crews including members of the Johnson County Sheriff's Office, Johnson County Ambulance Service, Tiffin and Oxford Fire Departments, Johnson County Hazardous Materials Response Team and Holiday Towing and Wrecker Co. worked until 4:50 p.m., when I-80 was opened up to one lane of traffic, to vent the liquefied oxygen.

UI alumnus gives $1 million

■ The contribution will fund three scholarships in medicine, liberal arts and football.

By Kellie Doyle
 The Daily Iowan

The UI Foundation recently received a $1 million contribution from the estate of Bill Fenton, a UI graduate and former Hawkeye football player.

Fenton's gift will fund three renewable $12,500 scholarships in three university areas: the College of Medicine, the College of Liberal Arts and the Hawkeye football team. They will be available to UI students for the 2001-02 academic year.

Fenton was a three-year letterwinner and two-time MVP as a defensive end on the Hawkeye football team from 1951-53. He maintained a 4.0 grade-point average and was a graduate of the UI College of Medicine. Fenton was also described as being a strong believer in a liberal education, both as a student and an adult.

He passed away in 1999 at age 66 after fighting prostate cancer.

Those who knew Fenton say his legacy will live on at the UI. "I think he felt like he owed a lot to the UI, and he wanted to return the favor," said William Fenton, Bill Fenton's nephew.

Now called the Bill and John Fenton Scholarship Funds, Bill Fenton also wanted to recognize his older brother, John, who died of leukemia in 1980 at age 49, in his donation. Both Bill and John

Minority students air concerns to officials

■ Coleman, Jones agree to expand Orientation and plan permanent cultural centers.

By Jesse Elliott
 The Daily Iowan

Six UI seniors met Thursday with UI President Mary Sue Coleman and Phillip Jones, the UI vice president for Student Services, to express concern over what they feel is a lack of support by the university for minority students.

Among the solutions administrators and students agreed upon were the implementation of a two-day Orientation session that would take place before a minority student's first semester and the construction of permanent cultural centers.

UI senior Acooa Lee said the purpose of the 90-minute meeting was to ask questions concerning the UI's efforts to attract and maintain a solid minority student population as well as to lend insight for future decisions by the administration.

"One of our concerns is a

Judge nullifies Gov.'s sex-bias order

■ Local homosexuals say the decision is based on purely anti-homosexual motives.

By Andrew Bixby
 The Daily Iowan

Gov. Tom Vilsack's 1999 executive order prohibiting discrimination based on sexual orientation and identity was declared invalid Thursday by an Iowa judge.

Glenn E. Pille, a Polk

County District Court judge, wrote that Vilsack's order exceeded his authority by trying to modify the protected classes, saying it was "a violation of the separation of powers provisions in the Constitution of Iowa."

The order banned employment discrimination in state government based on gender, marital status, sexual orientation and gender identity.

Sen. Steve King, R-Kiron, one of 24 plaintiffs in a lawsuit against the executive order, said the judge's decision was correct.

"This is a separation-of-powers issue," King said. "There's a lot of connotation with the word 'gender.' It's not a very specific word. The order gave protection for homosexuals and for sexual identity, and that stretches beyond any action of any governor."

As clock ticks down, courts mull vote's fate

■ The Florida Supreme Court hears Al Gore's appeal, and two state courts weigh absentee-ballot decisions.

By Ron Fournier
 Associated Press

Desperately short on time, Al Gore's lawyer pleaded with the Florida Supreme Court on Thursday to order vote recounts and revive his faltering presidential quest. Republican attorneys called George W. Bush the certified, rightful victor and said "not a single shred of evidence" suggests that any people were denied their vote.

Even as the seven justices mulled the vice president's fate, fellow Democrats said they were running low on patience.

"This is coming to an end," said Sen. Dick Durbin, D-Ill. He said a Bush presidency "looks more and more" likely.

One month after a maddeningly inconclusive Election Day, the question of who will serve as America's 43rd president still echoes throughout the nation's legislative and judicial chambers. On Thursday alone, two state judges and one federal court considered complaints about absentee ballots, and

GOP lawmakers in Florida braced for a special session today to give Bush the state's 25 electoral votes — in case the courts won't.

In the case involving absentee ballots in Seminole County, a Florida judge expressed reluctance Thursday to toss out votes as two courts neared decisions on whether to discard 25,000 absentee ballots that lawyers allege were tainted because Republicans altered election documents.

Decisions were expected as early as today in the cases from Seminole and Martin counties, which could erase George W. Bush's paper-thin lead over Al Gore. Both cases were being heard by judges in the state's capital.

Meanwhile, a third judge dismissed a lawsuit alleging Republican misconduct in absentee ballot voting in the Florida Panhandle, saying the allegations didn't justify nullifying absentee votes in Bay County. An appeal was

Feasting on latkes, tsimmes and challah

■ IMU's Lunch with the Chefs highlights traditional Hanukkah food.

By Nick Narigon
The Daily Iowan

More than 250 people lined up to celebrate the holidays with a traditional Hanukkah dinner outside the IMU Terrace Room Thursday for the Food Service's monthly feature, Lunch with the Chefs.

The full-time UI culinary chef crew began preparing the traditional Jewish meal Wednesday night and finished at 11 a.m. Thursday — just in time to open the doors to the public at 11:30. Barry Greenberg, an assistant chef at the IMU, prepared roasted chicken, potato latkes, sweet-potato tsimmes, mandel brot, suf ganiyot and challah for $6.50 a plate.

"The tsimmes is a recipe that my grandmother used to make," Greenberg said.

IMU chefs plan the calendar for the themes in the summer, then they plan the specific menu items a month in advance. They chose Hanukkah as the holiday theme this year because last year's Lunch with the Chefs' theme was Christmas.

"Next year, we'll probably do Kwanzaa," Greenberg said. Patricia Booth, an assistant retail-operations manager, was in charge of decorating the dining room.

"We have dreidels (a traditional Jewish toy) on the tables for people to play with, and we have Hanukkah music playing," Booth said.

Janet Rapp, the retail-operations manager, said Lunch with the Chefs began in 1996 because the chefs wanted to do something different and fun.

"We liked the idea of display cooking. It's the visual experience of watching the chefs preparing the meal that people like. It's fun for the staff because it is something different to look forward to," she said.

Lunch with the Chefs originated in the Terrace Room cafeteria, Rapp said, but as the dinner gained popularity, the chefs had to move out into the Main Lounge to accommodate all of the customers. They not only ran out of seats, but they also ran out of food, forcing Rapp to turn away dozens of hungry customers.

"Next time, we'll prepare for more," she said.

Herb Lukes, a UI sophomore, said he began attending Lunch with the Chefs last year because of the quality of the food.

"I don't eat a lot of fast food, and the food here is excellent," Lukes said.

Steve Hoch, an Iowa City resident, attended yesterday for his second time because he wanted to show his co-workers what a traditional Jewish meal was like.

"We came to broaden our cultural horizons," he said.

Next month, the chefs will celebrate Elvis' birthday by serving some of "The King's" favorite foods.

Recipes for selected dishes are also available for customers to take home.

Plans cooking for Burge cafeteria renovation

■ Hillcrest Marketplace's popularity prompts the UI to possibly remodel the East-Side cafeterias.

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

UI freshman Jon Powell, who lives in Stanley Residence Hall, hasn't eaten in the Burge cafeteria, which is just across the street, for a couple months.

Powell is one of many east-campus residents who make the trek for better dining options at the newly remodeled Hillcrest Marketplace.

"When I first moved in, I didn't know this was over here," Powell said after his dinner at Hillcrest Thursday. "The food's better than Burge, and it's nicer."

That won't always be the case. The UI has taken the first step in an estimated $11 million-$12 million renovation to modernize the dining service at Burge. The UI has requested permission from the state of Iowa Board of Regents to proceed with the project, which, when finished, would offer a Hillcrest Marketplace-style eating environment in Burge. The regents will likely approve the request at their meeting in West Des Moines next week.

"This is the first step we have to take," said Phillip Jones, the UI vice president for Student Services. "The remodeling could be done in three years if we move fast. If we run into difficulties, it could be sometime longer."

Possible delays could include covering the costs of the project and finding a phased-in project design that will enable food service to continue, he said. UI officials were able to completely shut down the Hillcrest dining area during construction because students could eat at nearby Quadrangle, but there isn't a place for students to eat on the east campus if Burge were to be completely shut down.

The project includes reconfiguration of the dining areas, dining lobbies and food-preparation areas. The outdated heating, ventilating and air-conditioning system will also be replaced.

The Hillcrest dining center includes Field of Greens (a salad bar), West Side Deli, Golden Harvest Home Cooking, Grand Avenue Grill, Piazza Cafe and Big Ten Bakery, as well as a daily dessert bar and a wide variety of beverages.

"It's providing the kind of options that students want," Jones said. "I've heard nothing but positive things about it."

Positive things were what UI freshman Anthony White had to say about Hillcrest. White, a Daum resident, rides the Campus to Hillcrest to eat dinner approximately four times a week.

"The food's better, it's cleaner, and there are more options," he said. UI senior Fabian Tan, a cashier at Hillcrest, has noticed the East-Siders coming over.

"We have a lot of Burge people coming over here, especially on the weekends," he said while working the dinner shift Thursday. "It's about time the UI did something about it."

Reduced bus rate for families to begin Saturday

■ Officials hope the lower fare will increase the number of riders.

By Megan L. Eckhardt
The Daily Iowan

Beginning Saturday, families in Iowa City will have a low-cost option to get around town. Iowa City Transit will offer a trial 75-cent Saturday family fare that will continue into next December.

The program will enable up to two adults and two minors, 17 years of age or younger, to ride the city buses for one fare or for a punch from one of the available passes. A child must accompany an adult to receive the one-person fare.

One free transfer to another bus to complete a trip will be given for the paid fare, which includes Coralville buses, said the city's Parking and Transit director, Joe Fowler.

Last year, the Iowa City City Council decided to implement a "family friendly plan," along with other city departments. Parking and Transit then came up with the Saturday Family Fare program.

"The City Council wanted to come up with a way for families to use the transit system on weekends," Fowler said. "This is the way that we could meet the request."

If more people use city transportation, the city will be eligible for more federal and state funding, said city Transit manager Ron Logsdon.

Because the cost to operate buses on Saturdays is fixed at $3.60 for each rider, the program is expected to cost the city the same amount of money, he said.

"I don't anticipate it to cost the city," he said. "It will enable the city to pick up extra riders, and there are still others who will ride on Saturdays."

Iowa City Mayor Ernie Lehman believes the program is a great idea because of the number of people it may attract to use city transportation each day.

"If it enhances the bus system, then it's a good thing," he said. "We're interested in promoting our transit facility."

Fowler also believes the program would encourage younger children to use the city's transportation system in the future by demonstrating the advantages of the service now.

"We have a lot of people who have transit passes that they use during the week," he said. "This will allow them and their families to use transit on Saturday. It's very good for future ridership."

If the Saturday Family Fare program is as successful as expected, the transit department will recommend that City Council continue the program, Logsdon said.

"Only time will tell (how successful it will be)," he said. "I think some people will take advantage of it."

Iowa City resident Ray Brandon, who rides city buses several times each week, said he will take advantage of Saturday Family Fare.

"My family will use it," he said. "It's cheaper and more convenient."

Office requests new Memmer lawyers

■ The two current defense attorneys in the high-profile case have a conflict of interest.

By Kellie Doyle
The Daily Iowan

Despite Judge David Remley's consent to allow Jonathon Memmer's attorneys to continue to represent the defendant in his double-homicide case, the Iowa City Public Defenders' Office moved Thursday to withdraw its counsel.

The Public Defender's Office requested that the court appoint the Cedar Rapids Public Defenders' Office as substitute counsel for the defendant. An alternative to this proposal would be a court-scheduled hearing allowing the Office of the State Public Defender to appear and address the issue of appointment of substitute counsel.

Memmer, 25, was charged on Feb. 25 with two counts of first-degree murder in the March 1999 deaths of Laura Watson-Dalton, 29, and Maria Therese Lehner, 27. The women were found beaten to death after a fire Memmer allegedly started at 427 S. Van Buren St. Apt. 4.

Cohen and Leff told the courts during a brief hearing on Nov. 29 that in order to zealously represent the defendant, it would be necessary to use secrets and confidences of the six witnesses with whom they hold a conflict of interest because they are current or former clients. However, attorneys, by law, are obligated not to release information about former clients neither during nor after their employment.

Remley responded that it is the court's duty to remain neutral. It should not suggest that the defendant waive his right to independent counsel nor that former clients of an attorney waive their rights to have their secrets and confidences remain classified information, he said.

A hearing to discuss the motion to withdraw and request for appointment of substitute counsel is scheduled for Dec. 14 at 9 a.m. For this hearing only, attorney Clemens Erdahl will step in place of Dennis Cohen and Ed Leff to represent the defendant. Cohen and Leff have represented Memmer since his arrest in March 1999.

Erdahl declined to comment Thursday.

Gas-leak explosion damages Iowa town

■ No one is seriously injured in the blast that mars every building on a single block.

By Emily Gersema
Associated Press

HUBBARD, Iowa — A natural-gas leak at a plumbing company sparked an explosion that tore through the business district of this small Iowa town Thursday, damaging every downtown business and breaking windows in nearby homes.

There were no reports of serious injuries, but insulation and papers from the businesses were thrown blocks away from site of the explosion, which happened around 11:30 a.m.

Alliant Energy crews were called to Peet's Plumbing and Heating — one of several businesses along a one-block stretch of Maple Street — for reports of natural-gas odors, utility spokesman John Ruff said.

Ruff said the utility shut off natural gas to the whole town and electricity to businesses and some homes in the immediate area after the explosion. Fewer than 900 people live in Hubbard, about 50 miles northeast of Des Moines. Temperatures in the area climbed into the high 30s by Thursday afternoon.

"We realize that it's cold and it might be an inconvenience, but it's better to make sure things are safe and a go before we turn the gas back on up there," Ruff said. He said the utility hoped to have residential natural gas back on later Thursday.

R.J. Brinkmeyer, who works with his family at Hubbard Realty, which is next door to the plumbing company, had called Alliant when he smelled natural gas.

An Alliant crew member came in with a meter, and together they went into Peet's Plumbing, Ed Peet, the owner, was at a call in another town.

The utility worker said, "Get out of here, and I walked away, and it just literally blew up," Brinkmeyer said. "It just blew up."

Brinkmeyer was thrown to the ground, got up, "and I just started running," he said.

When he was able to return, there was a refrigerator resting on the roof of the reality.

Local woman becomes district-court judge

■ The Tiffin resident is sworn in Thursday.

By Kellie Doyle
The Daily Iowan

Amanda Potterfield, 52, of Tiffin was all smiles Thursday afternoon after being sworn in as 6th Judicial District Court judge at 4 p.m. during a public ceremony at the Johnson County Courthouse.

She was chosen by Gov. Tom Vilsack on Dec. 1 to fill the position. Her oath was administered by soon-to-be retired Chief District Judge William R. Eads.

Potterfield, who has taught several classes in the UI law school, is a member of the Johnston, Potterfield and Nathanson law firm in Cedar Rapids and has been a Linn County public defender for six years. Trial, criminal defense and family law are her primary areas of interest.

"I'm just so honored," Potterfield said. "I feel like it's such an important position that I'm very honored to have been given this opportunity. It's something I've always wanted to do."

Joe Johnston, her husband, also expressed pleasure concerning his wife's accomplishment.

"I'm so proud I can't stand it," he said. "She's always wanted to be a judge, and she's always been such a great lawyer."

As a district-court judge, Potterfield has the authority to hear any case within the district court, including probate, felony criminal, adoption and juvenile cases.

Potterfield said she is eager to assume the responsibilities the position holds and will approach them to the best of her ability.

"I think it's very important to the community," she said. "I just plan to be the very best judge I can be."

In the era of dimpled chads

■ Indecision 2000 has given Americans quite a lesson in politics.

By Calvin Woodward
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The presidential impasse has given Americans a month's worth of images, symbols and additions to the vocabulary far beyond the lessons they've learned about ballot confetti and how it can bulge without falling out.

There is, for example, the Cheney Hop.

Asked how he was feeling after that mild heart attack, potential GOP vice president Dick Cheney, a serious man, answered by hopping like an Energizer Bunny.

"He's been doing jumping jacks all morning," observed George W. Bush, potential president.

Americans who have been paying attention now know about stents, the proper way to address justices, and intricacies of a 124-year-old presidential election that last gave the country such a mess.

It's been a spectacle of the mundane mixed with high drama.

O.J. Simpson, no less, commented on the yellow Ryder truck hauling Palm Beach ballots to a Tallahassee, Fla., courtroom, its highway trip broadcast to the nation like his own creeping and creepy Bronco ride into the eventual hands of the law.

Day in and day out, Americans saw Bush go in and out of buildings in Texas as his sole public act as potential president. The other potential president, Al Gore, went on TV a lot.

It's been an education. Americans have learned about Samuel J. Tilden, the obscure opponent of a little-known president, Rutherford B. Hayes, thanks to the disputed election of 1876.

"People who hadn't heard of Tilden four weeks ago now talk like they just had a beer with him," says Leo Ribuffo, a George Washington University historian.

People have learned as well about the stent, the scaffold-like device inserted to prop up an artery for Cheney. They've been reminded of the value of a quick checkup for a chest pain.

Even casual observers of the legal morass now know the proper salutation for lawyers before justices is, "May it please the court."

'Justice' for nuke plant workers

■ Clinton puts the Labor Department in charge of compensation.

By Katherine Rizzo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — People exposed to hazardous materials while working in the nation's nuclear factories moved closer Thursday to getting cash and medical care as President Clinton put the Labor Department in charge of distributing the compensation.

"While the nation can never fully repay these workers or their families, they deserve fair compensation for their sacrifices," Clinton said in a statement released with the executive order that puts the department to work on program details as soon as Congress approves a budget.

"I am pleased to take the next critical step in ensuring that these courageous individuals receive the compensation and recognition they have long deserved," he said.

One of the Clinton administration's legacies will be its reversal of 50 years of government policy by acknowledging that workers often were not given adequate protection or informed about job hazards in the nuclear bomb-making effort.

Clinton's order instructs the Labor Department to set up rules that make sure the program "minimizes the administrative burden on workers and their survivors."

The order also instructs the government to produce the information, if available, that will let experts decide whether a sick worker or the survivor of a deceased worker is eligible for benefits.

"America's weapons workers finally have justice. We are paying a debt long overdue," Energy Secretary Bill Richardson said in an interview.

"It is up to the next administration to finalize and implement this policy — comprehensively and not piecemeal."

The Labor Department has until May 31 to write the eligibility rules.

That also is the deadline for the Department of Health and Human Services to develop methods for estimating how much radiation exposure was suffered by people whose workplaces did not keep accurate dose records — a common problem at DOE sites.

Clinton shakes up air-traffic system

■ The president takes authority away from the FAA and creates an independent manager.

By Deb Riechmann
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Just weeks before he'll have to give up Air Force One and fly commercial like everyone else, President Clinton took steps on Thursday to end frustrating flight delays.

Clinton issued an executive order that shifts responsibility for the nation's air-traffic control system to an independent management unit within the Federal Aviation Administration.

Managing traffic in the crowded skies will still be done at the FAA, but the new unit, called the Air Traffic Organization, will operate separately from the agency's regulatory and enforcement arms.

"The FAA's 20-year effort to modernize its air-traffic control technology simply has not been able to keep pace with either the emergence of new technology or the growth and demand for air travel," Clinton said in making the announcement to more than 100 representatives from consumer- and passenger-rights groups, airline executives, aircraft manufacturers, congressional staff and government officials.

Flight delays have increased by more than 58 percent in the past five years, cancellations of flights by 68 percent, Clinton said. He called the rate of delays "horrendous."

Noting that he'll be flying commercially after Jan. 21, Clinton said: "I will try to wait patiently in those lines next year for Congress to do its part."

Part of the problem is outdated technology, but the core problem is the way the FAA operates, he said. The agency needs to be structured differently to manage the high-tech, high-demand operations of today's air-traffic control system, which manages 93,000 flights every day — more than one every second.

Racist demand in OR creates flap

■ A white patient in Nashville insists that no black men be in the operating room during her surgery.

By Tom Sharp
Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Surgeon Michael Petracek faced an ethical dilemma: Grant a white patient's demand to keep black men out of the operating room during open-heart surgery, or risk her refusing the potentially life-saving procedure.

Petracek wanted to make sure his patient got the care she needed, so he asked a black male technician to leave the operating room during the Oct. 9 surgery — a move he now calls "a bad mistake."

Word slowly spread through out the Catholic hospital, and complaints by employees finally made their way to the hospital's executive committee, which took no disciplinary action.

Petracek is a highly regarded surgeon best known for having developed a way to conserve blood during heart operations so that Jehovah's Witnesses, who oppose transfusions on religious grounds, could still have surgery.

He briefly spoke to two Nashville newspapers this week about his decision. He did not return a phone call Thursday to the Associated Press.

Petracek told the hospital, however, that the woman's husband did not want black men looking at his wife's nude body, hospital spokesman John Mays said Thursday. He noted that a black woman was on the surgical team without any objection.

"The husband was very overbearing and told the doctor he was pretty much their last hope," Mays said. "Basically, he was saying if Dr. Petracek did not do it, they were just going to seek any other care."

Petracek

The woman and her husband, who have not been identified, first went to Dr. John Austin at Baptist Hospital and made the same request of him in August. He said no and asked them to reconsider.

"She really did need an operation for something that was ultimately life-threatening, so I didn't want to send her away after one conversation," Austin said. "I saw her about a week later, and they were still just as adamant, so I told them I could not alter our personnel according to their racial bias."

Petracek took the opposing view.

"I was trying to find a way to get the woman the medical care she needed," he told the Tennessean.

He told the couple he would do his best to honor their request. As fate would have it, on the day of the operation, a black male perfusionist was assigned to operate the heart-lung machine. Petracek quietly asked him to leave and replaced him with a white technician.

5 Israelis injured in rash of attacks

■ A Palestinian who stabbed two Israelis in the Gaza Strip before being shot to death.

By Mark Lavie
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Palestinians wounded three Israeli motorists in a West Bank ambush Thursday, and a Palestinian worker stabbed and injured two Israelis in the Gaza Strip before being shot to death.

Also Thursday, the Islamic militant group Hamas reported on its Web site that the commander of its military wing, Mohammed Deif, had escaped from Palestinian custody, with the help of his guards. Deif is responsible for a series of suicide bombings in Israel, and the report of his escape heightened fears of new attacks.

In the West Bank, a Palestinian court sentenced a 25-year-old Palestinian laborer to death by hanging for helping Israel assassinate a Hamas bomb maker, Ibrahim Bani Odeh, who died on Nov. 23 when a car he borrowed exploded. Israeli officials have denied involvement in the death and had no immediate comment on the sentence.

Thursday marked the first time a suspected collaborator with Israel was put on trial by the Palestinian Authority. In the past, alleged informers were either killed by Palestinian activists or seized by security forces and held without trial.

The renewed violence came as Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat met with a group of Israeli peace activists — relatives of people killed in Palestinian terror attacks — in his Gaza City office.

Arafat told his visitors that "we have to work together to restore and build peace on this land for your children and our children."

The leader of the group, Yitzhak Frankenthal, whose son was killed in a Hamas attack, said Israelis and Palestinians must resume peace talks.

"We came to say: enough, enough, enough," he told Arafat.

Nearly 300 people have been killed in Israeli-Palestinian fighting since Sept. 28, the vast majority Palestinians. More than 9,000 Palestinians have been injured, according to the United Nations.

Despite goodwill gestures, such as Arafat's meeting with the peace activists, it appeared unlikely peace talks would resume soon. Both sides have said the other must meet a number of demands before talks can resume.

In Thursday's violence, Palestinians opened fire on an Israeli car near the Jewish West Bank settlement of Shavei Shomron, wounding three people.

At the Erez crossing between Gaza and Israel, a Palestinian laborer stabbed and wounded two Israelis, including one who was in serious condition. One of the Israelis opened fire and killed the assailant.

Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak said Israeli security forces would hunt down all those who try to kill Israelis.

"We will continue with intense operations to lay a hand on those who attack us," he said.

Albright arrives in Africa

■ The trip could be her last overseas venture during the Clinton administration.

By Ravi Nessman
Associated Press

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — Secretary of State Madeleine Albright arrived in Africa on Thursday for a visit to highlight flourishing democracies, urge more action against AIDS and support women's rights.

Albright plans to meet this morning with Nobel Peace laureate Archbishop Desmond Tutu and with a group of female political and business leaders. She then will fly to Pretoria to meet with President Thabo Mbeki.

She also planned to visit the prenatal and the HIV/AIDS research unit at Chris Hani Baragwanath Hospital in Soweto.

On Saturday, Albright will fly to Mauritius, the island nation she helped to get Africa's seat on the U.N. Security Council. She will complete the Africa leg of her overseas trip with a stop in Botswana, the country with the most widespread AIDS problem on the continent hit hardest by the disease.

The trip could be the last overseas venture for Albright in the Clinton administration, which will end when a new U.S. president takes office on Jan. 20.

En route, Albright added Hungary to her long itinerary of a trip that began in Cape Town and will end with the meeting of NATO foreign ministers in Brussels on Dec. 14-15.

She will visit Budapest on Dec. 12-13 and will meet with Prime Minister Viktor Orban and Foreign Minister Janos Martonyi.

Riots, tear gas at European summit in France

■ At least 20 police officers suffer minor injuries, and 45 protesters are arrested.

By Paul Ames
Associated Press

NICE, France — Hundreds of stone-throwing protesters rushed barricades around a conference center where European leaders met Thursday for a milestone summit on unity. French riot police drove them back with tear gas and stun grenades, and 45 were detained.

The clashes, which recalled similar demonstrations that have marred other high-profile international gatherings in recent months, created scenes of chaos in this Riviera resort city.

Some banks and businesses were covered in graffiti — with slogans ranging from "Long live ETA," referring to the violent Basque separatist group, to "Death to Money." Streets were littered with stones, pieces of wood, broken signs and used tear-gas canisters.

Tear gas wafted across the entrance to the mammoth, concrete building during the morning confrontation, causing French President Jacques Chirac to sneeze and Prime Minister Lionel Jospin to step away from photographers so he could blow his nose.

Chirac later harshly criticized the violence.

"We solemnly condemn these acts. They are radically opposed to the democratic traditions of all our countries," he told a news conference.

At least 20 police officers suffered minor injuries in the clashes, and 45 protesters were detained.

Although the violence was reminiscent of the chaos wrought by protesters on the Seattle meeting of the World Trade Organization last year, the thousands of demonstrators in Nice seemed to have no central command and to lack organization. Most were southern European students rather than full-time activists for their cause.

A ragtag group of several hundred Spanish anarchists, radical trade unionists, and Basque and Corsican separatists fought pitched battles with the police as they sought to break through the ring of steel encircling the Acropolis convention center.

The demonstrators made their way to within about 300 feet of the center's main entrance, where the leaders of the 15 European Union nations arrived one by one along with the heads of 13 countries due to join the bloc in the coming years ahead. But police then pushed the rioters back.

Undeterred by the violence, the EU leaders opened the three-day summit knowing that failure to surmount deep disagreements over how to share power could plunge the bloc into crisis and delay hopes of ending the continent's Cold War divisions.

The 15 leaders have until Dec. 10 to agree on the most sweeping overhaul of the union's decision-making machinery in decades.

Germany and France are split over the number of votes each will wield in deciding EU policies; Britain is determined to hold on to its power to block unwelcome legislation; smaller nations want to ensure their rights are not steamrollered by Europe's big hitters.

The EU must revamp itself before it can offer membership to the other countries, mostly former communist nations from Central and Eastern Europe that are desperate to assume their place in the continental mainstream after decades of forced exclusion under Soviet rule.

"This great process constitutes the reunification of Europe," said European Commission President Romano Prodi.

"It's our responsibility to ensure we adopt all the reforms needed ... to expand the EU and make a common European home for us all," he said at a news conference.

expected. Both presidential candidates kept a watchful eye on the trials involving Martin and Seminole counties, where Republican workers were allowed to fix flawed absentee ballot request forms sent in by party members.

"Why should I not find there was substantial compliance by the voters and accept their vote?" Leon County Circuit Judge Nikki Clark asked Democratic lawyer Gerald Richman during closing arguments in the Seminole case.

In the other case, Leon County Circuit Judge Terry P. Lewis heard final arguments and promised a decision by noon today.

Democrats are seeking to invalidate 15,000 votes in Seminole County. A similar lawsuit alleged 10,000 absentee votes in Martin County were spoiled, too.

Voter ID numbers were left off many applications through computer errors in Seminole County, and incorrect numbers were put on forms in Martin County. Florida law says ballot applications may not be mailed out without the correct identification numbers. Bush won the absentee balloting by 4,797 votes in Seminole and by 2,815 in Martin.

Richman, the lawyer seeking to disqualify the absentee ballots in Seminole, charged that county election workers who allowed Republicans to modify the applications "took a public office and turned it into an agent or an arm of one political party."

The various legal actions came amid the pressure of a Dec. 12 deadline set out in the U.S. Constitution for states to appoint electors. If Florida's legislative and judicial branches can't agree on a presidential slate by the time the Electoral College meets — Dec. 18 — a divided Congress could inherit the morass.

"Time is getting very short," Gore lawyer David Boies told Florida's high court. The seven justices, all with Democratic ties, aggressively quizzed both sides but seemed skeptical about their own authority to intervene.

The U.S. Supreme Court earlier this week set aside the Florida high-court ruling allowing some late hand recounts of ballots, sending the case back for clarification. Chastened justices wondered out loud whether the U.S. Constitution gives the Florida Legislature — rather than the court — power to settle the presidential dispute.

Court tosses out Vilsack's anti-bias order

Vilsack in July, saying the governor overstepped his constitutional authority.

Brian Gentry, the governor's legal counsel, said although Iowa Code already banned all discrimination, the governor signed the executive order against such employment discrimination rather than issuing directives to all state-agency leaders.

The executive order described a tolerant attitude expected of state directors regarding hiring decisions.

Current state code maintains that there should be no discrimination in state employment because of race, creed, color, religion, national origin, sex, age or physical or mental disability.

Some area gays say they feel Thursday's decision was motivated by homophobia and insecurity.

The lawsuit was a purely political move motivated by blatant homophobia, said Jack Pepple, a UI graduate student and co-coordinator of the Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual and Transgender Union.

Vilsack's order gave an outlet to people who were faced with discrimination in their place of employment and needed an outlet for legal recourse, he said.

"They're basically saying that we can't have the same right that others have," Pepple said. "It's just seems like really bizarre thinking to me."

A lot of people are going to perceive the decision as anti-homosexual, said Iowa City resident Lucia Page.

"I think it's pretty sad that people would go to that measure to stop an act that is anti-discrimination, and then go so far as to sue the governor over it," she said.

people who are getting salaries to keep minority students here."

The proposed Orientation session, which already exists in a slightly different form at the University of Northern Iowa, would serve to acquaint minority students with resources and facilities on campus that could ease the transition from home to school, said UI senior LaVar D. Lard.

"I was lost when I first got here. It was difficult to search out my community," said UI senior Inez Cruz. "Had I not found the Latino House, I wouldn't have gotten past my first semester here."

The students argued that the Latino Native American Cultural Center and the Afro-American Cultural Center are crucial connection points for new students because they serve not just as resource offices but homes away from home.

Jones agreed the centers are important and said a possible future project would be the construction of permanent cultural centers.

When asked why more money couldn't go to the existing centers for structural and programming improvements, Jones responded that "the money for building new structures comes from a different financial source," which is why he would be willing to look into a construction project that could be completed within the next five years, he said.

He added that when it comes to retaining minority students, the UI's first priorities are financial aid for students who demonstrate need and academic-support programs.

"I agree that academics should be a priority, but if a student can't connect with a community here on campus, all the academic support, tutoring and money in the world are not going to help," Cruz said.

Coleman said other steps the UI has taken in the last years to encourage minority enrollment and retention include heavy recruiting in the Chicago area and throughout Iowa by panels of graduated UI minority students.

Coleman and Jones promised the six students their grievances would not go unheard by UI administrators and that results would be seen soon.

Fenton received M.D. degrees from the College of Medicine, in 1954 and 1953, respectively.

As was his brother, John Fenton was an athlete at the UI, earning a letter on the Hawkeye basketball team his freshman year.

Bill Fenton's contribution is unusual compared with those the UI has received in the past because any UI student is eligible to apply for a portion of the funds, said David Dierks, a UI Foundation assistant vice president for principal gifts.

Many scholarship funds have restrictions, such as a minimum grade-point average or the need for financial aid, both of which Fenton requested not be considered when choosing the winner of his scholarships, Dierks said.

In fact, the only criterion for the scholarships is that the winner of the football scholarship be a graduate of one of the three Iowa City high schools: City High, West High or Regina. This request was made, Dierks said, probably because the Fenton brothers were graduates of City High and both went on to play Hawkeye sports.

"The scholarships today reflect a philosophy he seemed to have — that it's better to give flexible funds than to make restrictions," Dierks said.

Linda Maxson, the dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts, said she was delighted to hear about the extra funds available to the students because of Fenton's contribution.

"I think it's wonderful," she said. "It's the most generous thing an alumnus can do."

After speaking to several UI alumni concerning their appreciation to the school for their education, many of them are eager to make contributions because "they are unable to put a face or a name to the generosity," she said.

Reno opposes moratorium

■ The death penalty may be carried out in a federal case for the first time in almost four decades.

By Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Attorney General Janet Reno opposed a moratorium on carrying out the death penalty in federal cases Thursday, despite new pleas for it generated by the impending first federal execution in 37 years.

With Juan Raul Garza's execution set for Dec. 12, Reno and Justice Department aides prepared a recommendation for President Clinton on whether to grant the convicted murderer's appeal for clemency. A Justice official said that recommendation could go to the White House at any time.

Justice officials anticipated the department would suggest that

Clinton again postpone Garza's execution temporarily, pending completion of new studies Reno ordered last September into the fairness of the federal death penalty.

A previous Justice study found racial and geographic disparities in federal death sentences. Garza's lawyers cited it in his bid for clemency.

Deputy Attorney General Eric Holder has almost finished collecting data on federal cases that could have been charged as capital cases but were not, and Reno promised to quickly review any new data available. But another study by the National Institute of Justice is unlikely to be completed until after the Clinton administration leaves office.

On Thursday, the Black Leadership Forum, a consortium of 26 civil-rights organizations and leaders, appealed to Clinton for a moratorium on federal executions. Similar moratorium appeals have come in recent weeks from a citizens group including former Clinton administration officials, the American Bar Association, the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers and some members of Congress.

But Reno responded Thursday as she had in September to a proposed moratorium: "I have not seen a basis for supporting it thus far."

She added, however, that the federal death-penalty law "does not permit inappropriate discrimination based on race or ethnic background... We want to make sure, as we look at it, that race and ethnicity have not been an inappropriate factor."

The White House said Wednesday that Clinton is seeking a way to address disparities in federal death sentences that the Garza case helped raise. The department found half the sentences came from a handful of states.

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii — The sprawling naval base drew silent for one minute Thursday to mark the time 59 years ago that Japanese planes attacked the U.S. Pacific fleet and plunged the nation into World War II.

A soft mist started falling as moment of silence began at 7:55 a.m., creating a brilliant rainbow over Ford Island. It lasted until the American flag was raised five minutes later over the gleaming white USS Arizona Memorial during the Navy's annual commemorative ceremony.

"Why do we remember Pearl Harbor above and beyond all others?" asked Adm. Dennis Blair, the commander of the U.S. Pacific Command. "In part because we considered it an act of treachery."

"But did we think we defined the rules by which others act? Did we think we could never be hit at home? This was one of the great lessons of Pearl Harbor to Americans."

About 240 survivors, veterans, dignitaries, military officials and guests attended the services on the memorial, which straddles the battleship sunk in the attack, a tomb for about 1,000 of its crewmen.

The surprise attack on Pearl Harbor and other military bases on Oahu lasted two hours. The Japanese military sank or heavily damaged 21 ships, destroyed or damaged 323 aircraft, killed 2,388 people and wounded 1,178.

"It's very emotional, it truly is," said Woodrow Wilson Derby, an 82-year-old retired math teacher from San Diego who was a petty officer on the USS Nevada. "The bad memories have gone out of my mind. I'm just glad to be alive."

Douglas Phillips, who lives near Annapolis, Md., was a crewman aboard the USS Ramsay and saw the USS Utah roll over.

"We realized at that time it wasn't a drill. We just stood in awe," he said.

The service aboard the USS Arizona Memorial included prayers, 40 wreath presentations, a "missing man" formation fly-over by Hawaii Air National Guard F-15 jets, a 21-gun salute and echo taps.

On Wednesday, three Japanese pilots who flew in the attack and a dozen American survivors of the raid shook hands and embraced during a reconciliation ceremony aboard the Battleship Missouri Memorial.

Another World War II battleship — the USS Wisconsin, launched exactly two years after the Pearl Harbor attack — was towed to Norfolk, Va., for its new assignment as a floating museum.

U.S. mulls asylum for battered women

■ The Justice Department considers classifying immigrant women as a protected social group.

By Pauline Jelinek
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Women around the world who are victims of domestic violence would have an easier time getting asylum in the United States under a rule proposed Thursday.

Immigration and women's advocates who have sought the change applauded the Justice Department proposal as a groundbreaking move to recognize that women can face persecution because of their gender.

"It is a long-overdue and a great thing," immigration lawyer Michael Maggio said.

Added Bernadette Cisse, an adviser on women's issues at the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, "This is definitely encouraging... it's a step forward."

The change would bring the United States more in line with the United Kingdom, Australia, Canada and New Zealand, which have recognized the issue of battered women as a gender issue.

The public can comment on the proposal for 45 days before a final rule is published.

The Justice Department and Immigration and Naturalization Service proposal, published Thursday in the Federal Register, allows victims of domestic violence to be considered members of a "social group," one of five categories in U.S. immigration law.

Under U.S. law, asylum applicants must show they cannot go home because they face persecution on the basis of religion, race, nationality, political opinion or membership in a particular social group.

While the first four have been considered "pretty clear cut," INS spokesman Bill Strassberger said, the handling of people who belong to special groups has evolved and often is decided case-by-case.

Strassberger noted that claims by homosexuals were first recognized under the category in 1994, and those by members of clans — such as Somalis — in 1994. Claims by women facing genital mutilation were recognized in 1996.

A number of groups have sought a clarification since the 1999 case in which an immigration board denied asylum to a Guatemalan woman brutalized by her husband, a former soldier.

That case was stayed and is under review by Attorney General Janet Reno, who believes the government needs to provide better guidance on gender-based cases, according to a Justice Department statement.

Strassberger said the INS does not expect a flood of new applications if the change were approved and has not seen big increases in the other categories — such as homosexuals — since those categories were recognized.

Sending kids to the NBA ...

Not ready for prime time

It's every high-school basketball star's dream: to make it to the NBA. Now that dream might come sooner than expected.

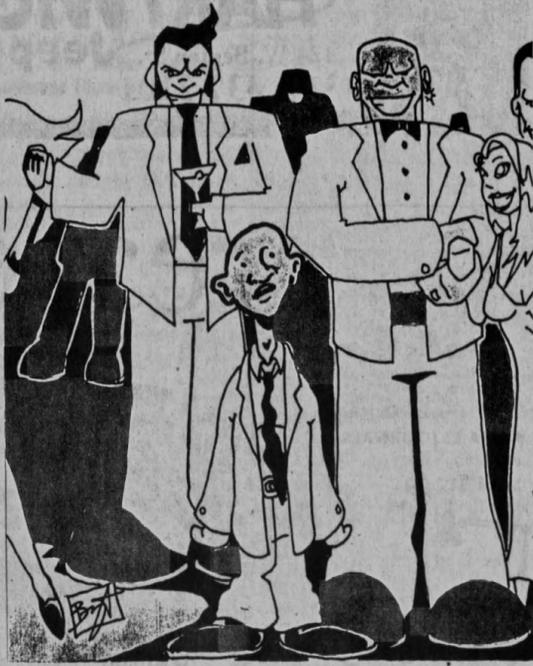

Basketball already has a minor league, the National Developmental Basketball League, that recruits players older than 20. But in a Dec. 2 article in the Iowa City Gazette, UI President Mary Sue Coleman said she thinks the minor league should consider recruiting athletes right out of high school.

The idea of recruiting 17- and 18-year-old high-school graduates to play professional basketball is a serious mistake and one that, if passed, would have many consequences for those individuals who would choose to play in the minor league. President Coleman's support of lowering the recruiting age comes from the Knight Commission on Intercollegiate Athletics, of which she is a member, which is looking into reforming problems in college athletics. By letting those players who don't want a college education go right into the pros, Coleman thinks it will allow more people who actually want an education to be admitted to college.

Whether high-school graduates have talent or not, many of them are not ready for the pressures and expectations of playing in a professional sports league, even if it is only a minor league. A high-school diploma does not prepare an 18-year-old for the physical and emotional transition into college, much less prepare a high-school graduate for entrance into a stressful, physical job such as playing in a pro league. These kids are not mature enough to jump right into the pro league. What will happen to them after they stop playing basketball? Although some players have great skill and talent for many years, not everyone can achieve this. Some players may never even make it out of the minor league. And if these players don't have a college education or degree, what will they do? President Coleman needs to rethink her support of lowering the recruiting age for the basketball minor league. These high-school players need a college education and time to mature into adults before they enter the professional league.

The final that counts

My, look how you've grown!

It seems like only 17 weeks ago that thousands of you freshmen arrived on this campus, ready to meet the real world.

I tried my best to steer you on the right course with helpful hints, such as "stop sending drunk e-mails" and "he won't call you." But my words of "wisdom" weren't a one-shot deal — now I want to impart to you the most important lesson any first-semester student can learn ...

(Even more important than "buy shower sandals.")

... Your most important final exam isn't Accelerated Rhetoric. It's not Tech and Society. It's the exam you'll get when you go home and see your relatives and friends. So get wise to the prize, and start feeding your head.

• To walk the walk, you'd better talk the talk. After investing a couple thousand bucks in your education, your folks are going to want to see the results. I've got a better idea: Show them the results they would like to see.

It's really not that hard. Pick out a couple of buzzwords from the chapter at the end of the book your professor never got to, and go nuts. Your folks will be none the wiser because they never studied it. Let's get serious here ... how many of your parents majored in "communications?"

Don't be pompous about it. Just sneak it in like it's second nature: "Mother, the taste of this ham, from start to finish, had a minuscule standard deviation. And I state that with 95 percent confidence."

Other interesting topics include plate tectonics, John Maynard Keynes, carbon and the second derivative. If you're one of the "elite" few of us who are still single after your first semester, try to put a positive spin on it. It's not that you were stuck in your room for the past month dominating your PlayStation 2 or trolling the bars for freshmen; it's that you had more pressing matters to attend to. Some of my reliable fall-backs were "I was just drowning in my homework" and "I'm so wrapped up in trying to build a better 'me' that I've got nothing left to offer someone else."

Also, given the events of the past couple of months, the election will surely come up. Just remember: You voted for Ralph Nader. All college students voted for Nader. Don't you watch the news? When you're chastised for "throwing your vote away," mumble something about the "proletariat" and/or the "system" before heading to your room and turning up Rage Against the Machine.

Among old friends, you don't need to be quite so pretentious. I've found that the most efficient topics are: "Remember that one time?" "What was that one girl's name?" and "Hey, whatever happened to that one guy?" If these don't work, try "Let's all go to that one place" or "Boy, wasn't the big game AWESOME?"

• OK, now you can walk the walk. Your behavior will be closely scrutinized, so watch your step. Among family, you should be on the lookout for trick questions. When your uncle throws a Pabst in front of your face and asks, "Wanna race?" try not to beat him too badly. Relatives will start to wonder exactly which "field house" you've been working out in. Instead, put up a good showing, but bail in the end. Chalk up your failure to "those damn bubbles."

Also, remember that your grandmother will not be quite as impressed by your tattoos and/or body piercings as were your pledge sisters. Any urges to show people how your tongue piercings "work" may receive a less-than-enthusiastic reception.

And, by the way, you don't need to put your coat on before you have dinner. You'll look foolish, so I'd recommend against it.

Among friends, relax and have a good time. Go to the old places, do the old things — except for one. Don't go back to your high school. Yes, they'll still be in class and you'll get to see old friends and teachers. But before strutting back onto your old kingdom, think back to your senior year: Do you remember the kind of adults who used to troll the halls? Do you really want to be That Guy?

Inevitably, you'll run into a bunch of kids you went to high school with. You won't remember all of their names, but that's OK because they won't remember yours, either. Smile and nod, and talk about a neutral third party you both remember, such as the Homecoming Queen or Joe Lieberman.

• In the end, be strong. You've made it through your first semester more or less intact. You learned important things, such as how to tap a keg and where to get an add/drop slip. Now sit back and enjoy the fruits of your labors.

Class dismissed.

Abstinence-based sex education ...

Sex education is under fire again, but not from the usual crowd. Citing that abstinence-based sex ed closely parallels Christian beliefs, two Cornell University scholars are calling for the replacement of abstinence-only sex ed. Many abstinence proponents consider this view ridiculous. Both sides are missing the point, however. Religious or not, it is time to realize that abstinence-based sex education is doomed to fail.

Even with all the rhetoric about ethics, morality and future repercussions, one fact remains true: Teen-agers are going to have sex — married or not. This has proven true in every society throughout history. What makes our society different is that most teen-agers are not married. Historically, because of short life spans, many teen-age girls would be getting married around the time they were becoming sexually mature. Now, however, marriage is often delayed until much later, while sexual maturity is actually being reached earlier because of dietary and environmental changes. Therefore, it is natural to assume that premarital-sex rates would be much higher than in the past. The only way to adjust for this is to educate these young adults on safe sex.

Even with all the rhetoric about ethics ... teen-agers are going to have sex, married or not.

Secondly, realistic sex education programs have been very successful in other developed countries. The Netherlands, France and Germany have all implemented national programs to educate their youth about the realities of sex, instead of just telling them that it is wrong and immoral. Consequently, their teen-pregnancy rates and HIV-infection rates are much lower than those in the United States.

There is absolutely no way to stop premarital sex from happening. Parents have been trying and failing at this for generations. However, it is possible to stop the alarming rates of teenage pregnancy and STD transmission. Instead of associating sex with shame and immorality, we should associate it with biology. Tell these kids that sex is a normal, biological activity. Normal people have sex, and there is nothing evil about it. Explain the dangers and possible repercussions, but let them know that there are alternatives to abstinence, including condoms and birth control pills. This knowledge will not hurt anyone, but ignoring it is harming the very people we are trying to protect.

A friend of the Dead is a friend of mine

■ A Grateful Dead cover band, the Schwag, will play at the Q Bar tonight.

By Shawn Sebastian
 The Daily Iowan

When the Dead come to life, one of two things is happening: Either it is the apocalypse — and we sinners should repent in the face of a wrathful God — or the Schwag, the most prominent Grateful Dead tribute band in the country, is playing in town.

For anyone who never had the opportunity to experience the Grateful Dead in concert, going to a Schwag show is the next-best thing. This isn't just any cover band. Jam-band legends such as Mike Gordon, the bassist for Phish; Devon Allman, the son of Greg Allman of the Allman Brothers; and Fred Tackett of Little Feat have all collaborated with the Schwag, lending credence to the band's immense improvisational skills and natural talent.

Earlier this week, The Daily Iowan talked to Jimmy Tebeau, the bassist and one of the lead singers of the group, about the importance of the Grateful Dead, why its music has endured and how the Schwag carries on the Dead legacy.

DI: How was Jerry Garcia and his spirit an inspiration to you and the band?

Tebeau: The energy he created with the music was amazing;

(it was) so melodic, so dynamic, happy at times, dark at times. Trying to capture that energy is tough. Many elements go into each song. Every tune is a story and a musical adventure. His willingness to take chances with the music was a big inspiration.

DI: You have devoted several years of your life to playing the music of the Grateful Dead. What do you think makes it so compelling, interesting and timeless?

Tebeau: The lyrical content of the songs is one timeless element to the music. Many of the songs the Dead played had underlying messages meaning whatever the listener wanted them to mean. The other appealing thing of the music is the number of styles that come through in one show — bluegrass, boogie, woogie, blues, heavy rock, jazz, space, drum solos, sweet ballads, scorching rock 'n' roll, vocal jams. The listener goes on a musical journey.

DI: Do you feel limited in any way by playing only the songs of a band that has stopped producing new music?

Tebeau: The Dead have so many songs that are played so many different ways. There is an infinite list of combinations. We only have approximately 200 tunes of the Dead's song list memorized. There are more than 400 tunes the Dead played regularly. We are still learning about one new song a week. Then, the way we play the songs can change from time to time. There are three different versions of "Friend of the Devil" that we play. So, no, we do not feel limited at all. It is a limitless musical environment we have chosen to put ourselves in.

DI: How do you perform your own interpretations of the music while still staying true to the spirit of the Grateful Dead?

Tebeau: We just approach the music with the same creative, inventive attitude. We use the chord changes and lyrics as a basic outline and then feed off the energy of the crowd and the other musicians. We are always paying close attention to what we are doing musically, but it is very free. Breathing new life into these songs is just a matter of not being afraid to take musical chances. We avoid the organic-jukebox syndrome. We just run with the tunes and let them unfold as the energy takes them.

DI: What kind of effect do your shows have on your audiences?

Tebeau: This music, when played correctly, has an amazing power over people. I know this music completely changed my life. It has insight into the deep joys of life and living. The lyrics and the grooves are so kind and inspiring. It is hard to put into words. It is a feeling. At a Schwag show, a person can hear, see and feel the music. Then, through the laws of entertainment, everyone is feeling this ball of joy at the same time. Then, all of sudden, everybody sings and shouts at the same time. Sort of like when you see a flock of birds all change direction at the same time going the same way.

Chris Rock quits TV show

NEW YORK (AP) — Comedian Chris Rock has pulled the plug on his late-night talk show, which mixed laughter, music and thought-provoking interviews for four years on HBO.

Rock is leaving to concentrate on his movie career.

"It's a lot of work, and there are a lot of other things he wanted to do," said Nancy Geller, the show's executive producer. "I was almost surprised every year when he said he was going to come back to do another year."

His guests have included Marion Barry, Johnnie Cochran, Sean "Puffy"

Combs, Bryant Gumbel, Don King, Kweisi Mfume, Adam Sandler and Jerry Springer.

The Rev. Al Sharpton was a three-time interview subject who scolded Rock for using profanity, only to have the comedian poke fun at his hair. Sharpton said Dec. 1 there should be "a national day of mourning" for Rock's departure.

"He provided a forum where people like me could talk to a different part of America that did not necessarily get exposure to us," Sharpton said.

"He really knew what was going on with the issues but had a way of presenting them that didn't make the audience feel he had gone too sober or serious," Sharpton said. "You would leave his show knowing things like allegations of police brutality or racism in the corporate world without turning on for that reason."

Rock's 30-minute show, which won an Emmy for writing last year, aired in 13-week seasons on Friday nights.

Madonna, Ritchie to marry this month

LONDON (AP) — Madonna and British film director Guy Ritchie plan to marry in the Scottish highlands three days before Christmas.

The Registrar's Office in Dumoch, northern Scotland, published an official proclamation Thursday of the intended marriage, as required for all Scottish weddings.

The notice read that Guy Stuart Ritchie will marry Madonna Louise Ciccone on Dec. 22. No further details were available, but the marriage was expected to be held at the Dumoch Cathedral, according to the British media.

The 42-year-old pop star and Ritchie, 32, have a 3-month-old son, Rocco. They live in London's fashionable Notting Hill neighborhood.

Madonna divorced actor Sean Penn in 1989. The singer has a daughter, Lourdes, now 3, from a relationship with personal trainer Carlos Leon.

Wrestlers looking for 26th straight

Iowa wants redemption after last week's upset loss to Oklahoma State.

By Nick Firchau
The Daily Iowan

As the Iowa wrestling team returned to Iowa City last weekend, any hopes of a second-straight undefeated season for the defending national champions were left down the long, cold road in Oklahoma City.

The Hawkeyes were left with only two certainties after the surprising 21-14 loss to the Oklahoma State Cowboys on Dec. 2. The next match should serve as a rebounding point for the rest of the season. And the next match is what Iowa wrestlers and fans look forward to every season.

"You grow up watching Iowa and Iowa State," said senior Doug Schwab. "I can remember that. People say it's all about the bragging rights for the state, but it's more than that. We're always the top couple teams in the nation, so it's like bragging rights for the nation."

"They've never beaten us since I've been here; we've got a big win streak going. We'd like to keep that going and make sure Iowa is still the dominant program in the state."

The third-ranked Hawkeyes will attempt to regain their ground among the nation's elite and defend state bragging rights tonight at Carver-Hawkeye Arena, as the Iowa State Cyclones, ranked fourth nationally, blow into town for the 63rd showdown between the two national powerhouses. The Hawkeyes have won the last 25 dual meets in the intrastate rivalry.

the Cowboys ended a streak of 21 straight wins in dual matches for the Hawkeyes, dating back to the last weeks of the 1998 season, which was also to OSU.

"I'm just looking to see how my team rebounds, and how they're going to come back," said head coach Jim Zalesky, who has boasted three wins in as many years over the Cyclones as head coach. "Sometimes you have adversity, and it's good to see how you bounce back. This team didn't lose for a while, and now it has lost. We have a lot of guys back from the team last year, and it will be good to see what they do this weekend."

"This week was intense," said junior Jody Strittmatter, who comes into the ISU matchup ranked second nationally at 125 pounds. "The coaches were concerned that we get in a good week of practice, and we worked really hard in the first few days. At the same time, they worked us on the mental aspect, like knowing exactly what we need to get done for the match."

Aside from last week's loss and the mounting implications of tonight's meet, the long-standing personal rivalries between the wrestlers involved makes the intensity

Last year's antics are not forgotten

Iowa State fans and players went a little overboard celebrating last year's win over Iowa.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

In college athletics, the term "friendly rivalry" is often used when discussing the meeting of two long-time foes.

Make no mistake about it — while the Iowa-Iowa State men's basketball showdown is certainly a rivalry, it is anything but friendly.

The series

Iowa leads 36-16.
 Iowa leads 22-4 in Iowa City.
 ISU has won 2 of last 3 in Carver-Hawkeye.
 Last time in Carver, Iowa, 74-54.
 The last time both teams were undefeated was the '93-94 season.
 ISU's Brad Davis wears #40 in tribute to former Iowa basketball player Chris Street.

After last season's 79-66 Cyclone victory in Ames, many Iowa fans and players felt the Iowa State faithful went overboard in their celebration. The image of former ISU standout Marcus Fizer standing atop the scorers table holding a sign proclaiming his coach's superiority has been burned into the memories of Iowa players ever since.

"Obviously, we don't like them, and they don't really like us," said Iowa guard Dean Oliver, a veteran of three Iowa-ISU clashes. "As far as what they did last season, that speaks for itself."

Iowa coach Steve Alford kept his contempt for the Cyclones in check during his press conference Thursday, choosing to focus more on the matchup of individual players than the two schools. Still, Alford made veiled hints at a difference between the two programs and said he hopes his players act differently should they win Saturday.

"I hope our players act and react in a way I want our program to be represented," he Obviously, we don't like them, and they really don't like us. As far as what they did last season, that speaks for itself.

— Dean Oliver,
Iowa point guard

said.

There is no doubt revenge will be on the mind of the 6-0 Hawkeyes when they face Iowa State, but Alford hopes the team uses its undefeated record and not prior ISU transgressions as motivation.

While focus has remained on the tension between the two teams, there is still a game to be played. Both teams enter the contest with perfect 6-0 records and find themselves next to each other in the national rankings. The Cyclones currently occupy the No. 25 spot in the latest AP polls, while the Hawkeyes are perched at No. 26 and poised to crack the Top 25.

Though the Cyclones have faltered at times, they have had a much easier time staying undefeated. Despite nearly losing to Division II Morningside in the season opener, Iowa State has cruised to double-digit victories against the likes of Southern University and Tennessee Tech.

One of the reasons most of its victories have been easy is that coach Larry Eustachy's team features its fair share of talented players. With Fizer gone to the NBA, preseason All-American guard Jamal Tinsley has taken over his workload. The matchup between Tinsley and Oliver will be one of many key pairings, Alford said. The other matchups the coach considers interesting will be Iowa big men Jared Reiner and Reggie

Iowa women to take pre-holiday swim

The swimmers and divers face Iowa State and Northern Illinois today at the UI Field House pool.

By Julie Matolo
The Daily Iowan

For most UI students, the last weekend before finals leaves them wondering how they can alleviate the extra stress.

For the Iowa women's swimming and diving team, its second home meet of the season will do exactly that.

Coming off an exciting win last weekend in a dual meet held at the University of Kansas, the Hawkeyes are looking forward to finishing the first semester at home this weekend. Iowa will take advantage of last week's momentum in approaching today's double-dual competition.

The Iowa State Cyclones will be coming to Iowa City more prepared than ever to take on the Hawkeyes. The Northern Illinois Huskies are the other part of the triad.

"Last week gave us a lot of confidence with the way we swam," said head coach Garland O'Keefe. "This weekend, Northern Illinois and a much-improved Iowa State team come in, and there should be some close races. We're looking forward to a good home meet to close off the first semester."

The Hawkeyes will be matched against the Cyclone's 3-0 record in dual meets. Iowa State won its last competition against Northern Iowa. Northern Illinois brings its 6-6 record from a season jam-packed with meets.

Iowa is not concerned, though, with its opponents this weekend because the main focus today is racing well, not worrying about times.

Who would be worried, though? Iowa won 10 out of 16 events last weekend in the 159-141 victory over the Kansas Jayhawks. Senior Loredana Zisu led the way for Iowa, winning every event she competed in. Allison Lyle, a junior, was a double-event winner, winning the 100- and 200-breaststroke events, while reminding the Jayhawks who is in charge by setting a Kansas pool record in the 100-breaststroke.

Other event winners contributed to the energy, including junior Melissa Loehndorf in the 1,000-freestyle, senior Stacey Wertz in the 100 freestyle, freshman Michelle Bagi in the 200-individual medley and junior Laura Maldonado in 1-meter diving.

Loehndorf has five event wins so far this season, following close behind Zisu, who has captured six event championships this fall. Iowa will bring its list of accomplishments to the pool this weekend, ready to perform.

"We want solid swims and overall wins on two counts this weekend," said O'Keefe.

Competition will be held today in the UI Field House pool beginning at 5 p.m. The Hawkeye season will continue through Winter Break as the team travels to Hawaii for 10 days to continue training and competition.

Stiles scores 39 to power SMS over Iowa

Southwest Missouri State proves to be too much for the Hawks Thursday.

By Roseanna Smith
 The Daily Iowan

Just as Iowa women's basketball head coach Lisa Bluder had predicted prior to Thursday night's matchup against No. 18 Southwest Missouri State, if the Hawkeyes didn't stop the scoring around Jackie Stiles, they would come up empty-handed.

In conjunction with Stiles' 39 points, and teammates Stephanie Busbey and Tara Mitchem scoring in double digits, the final seven minutes were key in the SMS victory, 101-87. The Bears outscored the Hawkeyes by 14 points in that span to seal the win, shooting seven of eight free throws in the closing two minutes.

Behind Iowa's three-pronged guard attack in Lindsey Meder, Leah Wagner and Cara

Consuegra, the Hawkeyes dominated nearly all of the game. Meder was back in the saddle after struggling for four points against George Washington University on Dec. 3, leading the Hawkeyes with 28 points — 21 in the second half. Meder and Consuegra each collected 16 points, and Mary Berdo rounded up 10.

Losing control by not boxing out in the final minutes of the game was the determining factor, said Iowa assistant coach Jenni Fitzgerald.

"We felt we were in control for 35 minutes of the game," she said. "We got beat on the boards in the end and definitely let them put too many points up in the second half, but we played the best game of the year offensively, and it was a hard-fought battle."

The Hawks followed closely for the first five minutes, until Consuegra crossed over for a lay-up and the tie.

In the first half, the Hawks had an answer to everything

SMS could hand out. Magner stayed hot from outside the arc, only missing one attempt for her 13 points in the first half. Closely following the Bears, shooting 69 percent from the field, the Hawks closed in with a 10-3 run in the final two minutes. With three seconds on the clock, Berdo sent a baseball pass to Meder for a wide-open lay-up and a tie at the close of the first half.

SMS head coach Cheryl Burnett took out Stiles eight minutes into the game, giving the Bears distributed scoring.

With 13 minutes remaining, the Hawkeyes had their biggest lead of the game when Meder sank a three-pointer followed by a charity toss for four points. Berdo picked up a 25-foot three-pointer capped off by Randi Peterson's basket for a powerful nine-point run.

The Hawkeyes didn't stay on top, though, as fouls pulled the Bears even at 8:37 on two free throws from Tara Mitchem.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Spike Lee teams up with NFL
 NEW YORK — The National Football League has hired movie and commercial maker Spike Lee to direct an advertising blitz aimed at boosting viewership of its upcoming playoff games.

The campaign represents the NFL's most ambitious push to promote its playoff games and comes as ratings have slipped for its regular season game telecasts.

The ads, which will debut on Dec. 17 and run at least 225 times by Jan. 14, will carry the theme "Show Me Something" and feature as many as 35 players from 15 teams.

Rodriguez interested in returning to Seattle
 SEATTLE — For now, the Seattle Mariners are still in the chase for Alex Rodriguez.

Seattle General Manager Pat Gillick and manager Lou Piniella met

Thursday in Miami with the free-agent shortstop. They said they were "attempting to determine whether or not Alex really is interested in playing for the Mariners." Gillick said.

"Now that we have ascertained his level of interest in returning, we will make organizational decisions with this in mind," Gillick said.

Lemieux's comeback stuns Penguins

■ Mario Lemieux delights Pittsburgh by becoming a player-owner.

By Alan Robinson
Associated Press

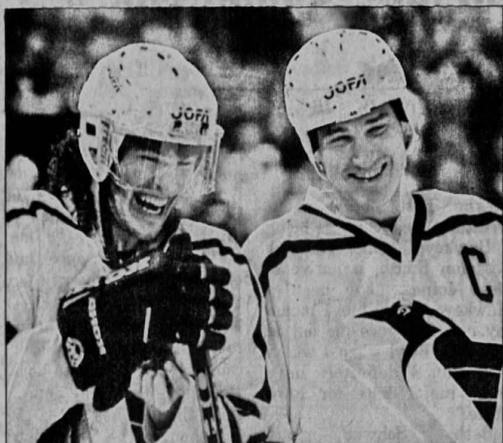

PITTSBURGH — Maybe only Mario Lemieux, already the king of comebacks, could pull this off.

Lemieux, who came back from cancer and a one-year layoff from back pain to be hockey's dominant player before retiring at age 31 in 1997, will return to the Pittsburgh Penguins in a one-of-a-kind role: player-owner.

The news of Lemieux's comeback, which the Penguins will officially announce today, sent shock waves through the Pittsburgh dressing room Thursday. It also is a huge publicity jolt for the NHL, which has struggled since the retirements of Lemieux and Wayne Gretzky to find a marketable superstar.

Lemieux's return to the ice probably won't occur until the end of the month — he needs about three weeks of hard, physical work in practice to get into game shape — but it will be hockey's equivalent to Michael Jordan leaving the owner's box and putting on a jersey again.

Super Mario, indeed.

Gene J. Puskar/Associated Press

Mario Lemieux (right) said he will come out of retirement to play for the Penguins.

"This is a day in history. It's a total shock," defenseman Bob Boughner said. "It's huge for a lot of us who have never played with Mario. I know I'm looking forward to being part of history in the making."

History will be made the first time the Hall of Famer pulls down his retired No. 66 from Mellon Arena's rafters and wears it again, if only because he will be the first in the modern era to own a major pro sports team and play for it at the same time.

Lemieux, 35, must relinquish his spot on the NHL's Board of Governors and probably will disassociate himself from most of the team's day-to-day business affairs, but can remain as owner.

The NHL board must approve such an arrangement but, given the chance to sell tickets for Lemieux's comeback tour, it's doubtful any NHL owner would seriously fight his return.

And look at it this way: What other owner could lure Lemieux out of retirement and pay him only minimum wage? Of course, no other owner could get a huge boost at the box office by putting himself in uniform, either.

"I came in today and I heard a scream from the back room," said Jaromir Jagr, who replaced Lemieux as the Penguins' leader and hockey's dominant scorer. "They were saying on the radio that Mario might come back. I think a lot of guys are really happy. Now they're going to get to play with a legend."

Jagr learned of Lemieux's planned comeback 10 days ago, but didn't tell his teammates.

"He mentioned there was a possibility he was going to come back, and I believed him," said Jagr, a teammate of Lemieux's on the Stanley Cup-winning teams in 1991 and 1992. "He said he's got a feeling this is a pretty good team, and he feels like he can help the team."

If Lemieux can play at anywhere near his previous level — and many hockey historians consider the six-time NHL scoring champion to be the most gifted player ever — he would instantly elevate the Penguins to a prime contender for the Stanley Cup.

They reached the second round of the playoffs without him the last two seasons, and are 13-10-3 and in second place in the Atlantic Division going into Saturday's game at Toronto.

"He believes with a little luck, we can do some things this year," Jagr said.

Heupel wins AP award

■ Josh Heupel's phenomenal year wins him Player of the Year honors.

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Josh Heupel's remarkable two-year stay at Oklahoma is nearly over. All he needs is one more win — over Florida State in the Orange Bowl on Jan. 3 — to make it all worthwhile.

"We've had a great year so far, but we have one game remaining," Heupel said. "Winning a national championship would be the perfect ending to a journey that no one even thought we'd be taking."

Because of Heupel's ability to produce the big play whenever it was needed, the top-ranked Sooners (12-0) swept through the season undefeated and will play for their first national title since 1985.

"There comes a time in each game when the quarterback usually has to make a play to put your team in position to win," said Chuck Long, Oklahoma's quarterbacks coach. "Josh Heupel did that."

On Thursday, Heupel won the Associated Press' College Player of the Year award in balloting by AP member newspapers, TV and radio stations.

The left-hander from Aberdeen, S.D., completed 280 of 433 passes for 3,392 yards and 20 touchdowns, and ran for six scores. In the Sooners' 27-24 win over Kansas State in the Big 12 title game Dec. 2, he overcame a season-high three interceptions with two scoring passes and a TD run.

Heupel, who spent a season at Snow Junior College in Utah before arriving at OU in 1999, received 30 of the 82 votes in the AP balloting. Florida State quarterback Chris Weinke was second with 17 votes, and TCU running back LaDainian Tomlinson was third with 9. Purdue quarterback Drew Brees was fourth with 8 votes; Virginia Tech quarterback Michael Vick was fifth with 5.

"I've always thought that honors like this are a reflection of the team," Heupel said. "I may be getting this honor, but without my teammates it wouldn't be possible."

Heupel has also won Player of the Year awards from the Walter Camp Foundation and the Sporting News, and, along with Weinke, appears to be the favorite to win the Heisman Trophy on Saturday night.

Whether it was his pinpoint passing against Texas, Kansas State and Nebraska, or crucial third-down dashes in a comeback win at Texas A&M, Heupel made plays when it counted most.

Oklahoma averaged 44 points in its first four wins against Texas-El Paso, Arkansas State, Rice and Kansas, but then came No. 11 Texas, followed by No. 2 Kansas State and No. 1 Nebraska. No problem. In those three games, Heupel was Heisman-like, completing 66 of 108 passes for 949 yards, four TDs and just one interception. The Sooners beat the Longhorns, 63-14, the Wildcats, 41-31, and the Cornhuskers, 31-14 — and worked their way up from No. 19 in the AP preseason poll to No. 1.

The going got tough against Texas A&M, Texas Tech and Oklahoma State, but Heupel, despite an ailing throwing arm, still came through.

Rams still favored against Minnesota

■ The Vikings go on the road to get home-field advantage.

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

A lot of people still believe in the St. Louis Rams, who have lost four of five and five of seven games.

Just look at the odds for their game with Minnesota on Sunday.

The Vikings, arguably the best team in the NFL right now, travel to St. Louis needing only a win to clinch home-field advantage in the NFC. Yet they are 3.5-point underdogs against the defending Super Bowl champions.

If St. Louis' offense gets back in gear after turning over the ball seven times in a 16-3 loss in Carolina last week, this could be a track meet. It was in last season's playoffs, when the Rams won 49-37.

When the Rams started 6-0, the only problem was defense — they scored more than 40 a game and allowed 32. Then Bud Carson returned as a consultant, and it began to improve as the offense declined.

The Vikings, on the other hand, have been consistent. Their only losses were outdoors, in Tampa and rainy Green Bay. Indoors, including a road game in Detroit, they're 7-0.

The law of averages favors the Rams, who clearly are better than they've been playing.

"I believe in these guys, doggone it," coach Mike Martz says. "We'll be all right, shoot."

Minnesota is already all right. VIKINGS, 52-45

Heisman race too close to call

■ Chris Weinke, Drew Brees and Josh Heupel are all in the running for college football's best.

By Richard Rosenblatt
Associated Press

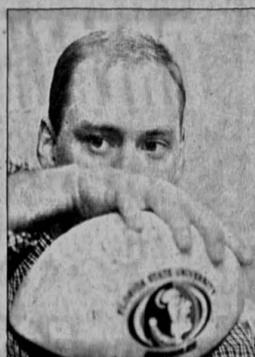

NEW YORK — When the season started, Florida State's Chris Weinke was among a handful of Heisman Trophy favorites. Oklahoma's Josh Heupel was an afterthought — at best.

On Saturday night, the two quarterbacks who led their teams to a national championship game in the Orange Bowl on Jan. 3 could end up in one of the closest Heisman races in history.

"I have no idea how it's going to come out," Florida State coach Bobby Bowden said. "You've got one who has taken his team to an undefeated season and has done everything you've got to do to get there. Then you've got the other who has played superlative football and is unique in his age."

Perfect season honors go to Heupel, who threw for 3,392 yards and 20 touchdowns in leading No. 1 Oklahoma (12-0) to the brink of its first national championship since 1985.

Weinke, at the ripe old of 28, led the nation with 4,167 yards passing and threw 33 touchdowns with 11 interceptions. After spending six years playing minor-league baseball, Weinke returned to Florida State in '97 and is trying to bring a second-straight national title to the third-ranked Seminoles.

"Both candidates are deserving," Oklahoma coach Bob Stoops said. "They're both excellent players and very valuable to the team."

Purdue quarterback Drew Brees and TCU running back LaDainian Tomlinson are the other Heisman finalists but are considered long shots based on several Heisman surveys.

Brees led the Boilermakers (8-3) to a Rose Bowl berth against Washington by throwing for 3,393 yards and 24 touchdowns; Tomlinson topped the nation in rushing with 2,158 yards — the fourth-best single-season total in I-A history — and scored 22 TDs. The Horned Frogs (10-1) play Southern Mississippi in the Mobile Alabama Bowl.

The closest Heisman voting was Bo Jackson's 45-point win over Iowa's Chuck Long in 1985; the second-tightest was Ernie Davis of Syracuse beating Bob Ferguson of Ohio State by 52 points in 1961.

Ballots from the 922 Heisman voters were due today, but by late Thursday, only 42 percent of the voters had responded, according to New York's Downtown Athletic Club, which presents the trophy to the "Outstanding Football Player of the United States."

Weinke finished his season by passing for 353 yards and three TDs in a 30-7 win over Florida on Nov. 18. Heupel closed out his season Dec. 2 by overcoming three interceptions and throwing for two TDs and running for another.

Wake Forest smothers Kansas

■ Josh Howard scores 21 points to power the Demon Deacons.

By David Droschak
Associate Press

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — Roy Williams had his share of headlines in North Carolina five months ago. His team's 31-point loss will get some more.

Wake Forest got a career-high 21 points from Josh Howard, and Craig Dawson added 20 as the 11th-ranked Demon Deacons beat No. 3 Kansas, 84-53, as the Jayhawks played without leading scorer Kenny Gregory.

"There's not a lot to say. It was just one big butt-kicking," Williams said Thursday night. "That will be a headline, I guess? I gave you (reporters) something."

One of the nation's best offenses looked lost without its star as the Jayhawks matched their fourth-worst loss in school history and second-worst under Williams.

"It was a total breakdown," Williams said.

Kansas (7-1) came in averaging 92.1 points and shooting 55.4 percent — third-best in the nation — but couldn't get its offense clicking without its senior leader in its first road game.

Gregory was off to a great year, averaging 17.9 points and 7.7 rebounds, but missed his first start of the season with a stress fracture in his right foot.

"Kenny Gregory not playing was a surprise to us," Wake Forest coach Dave Odom said. "But I am not going to take anything away from my team and say if he had played we might not have won. Nobody will ever know that. But we can all say without argument the game would have been played differently."

The Demon Deacons (7-0), shooting 68 percent in the second half, won their 12th straight dating to last season and are off to their best start since Tim Duncan's senior season of 1996-97.

"I don't know how we could play any better this time of year, yet that's the thing I have to challenge my team to do," Odom said.

The Jayhawks failed to start 8-0 under Williams for the fifth time in his 13 seasons, shooting a season-low 38 percent and turning it over 20 times without Gregory in the lineup.

"We've got to make some decisions in the next couple of days if we're going to be tough enough or if we're just going to be a bunch of pansies," Williams said.

of the season's other matches fall short.

"The best thing about wrestling Iowa State is being a Hawkeye," said sophomore Jessman Smith, a native of Des Moines. "I've been a Hawkeye all my life. I mean, my parents drove me out to the Rose Bowl when I was a year old. I definitely have some major hate for Iowa State."

Both Schwab and Strittmatter said they hope the crowd intensity at Carver-Hawkeye will match the intensity they have seen in Ames in the past and that of the crowd in Oklahoma City.

"We're always looking to fill the place," said Schwab, the nation's top wrestler at 141 pounds. "We're hoping the crowd is fired up, and we want to give them something to get excited about. We're hoping the crowd really gets on the Iowa State guys, so when we get a guy on his back and the crowd really gets into it, we can go from there and just focus on steamrolling."

While the Hawkeyes will have the advantage in the lower weight classes, the Cyclones should even things up after T.J. Williams' match at 157 pounds. Of the five heaviest weight classes, the Cyclones will have four highly ranked wrestlers hit the mats, including top-ranked senior Joe Heskett at 165 pounds and junior two-time defending national champion Cael Sanderson at 184 pounds. Sanderson is undefeated in his third season as a Cyclone.

"This is a great opportunity," said Smith, who will face Sanderson. "Nobody's ever beaten him before. But he has to lose sometime, and I think I could be the person to do it. Hopefully, it's Friday night. I think the time has come."

Although the meet may come down to either bonus points in decisive victories or a crucial swing match such as senior Gabe McMahan's match at 174 pounds, Zalesky said he's not concerned at which weight class the meet would begin.

"You always like to start out with a guy that's going to set the tone, if you could," he said. "If you can have one of your better guys start out, I think it really helps to get some momentum. Momentum could play key in this meet, and if you start on the right track, then it puts a lot of pressure on the other team. But it's always important to start the meet the right way and end the meet the right way."

TRACK BRIEFS

Iowa teams host intrasquad meets

Men's track

At the Iowa men's intrasquad Jeremy Allen, Jim Costello and Luke Nessa had spectacular performances. Allen had a shot put throw of 60-8, which would have qualified him for the NCAA Indoor meet had it taken place during a regular competition. Allen was an Indoor All-American last year.

Costello led Iowa in the weight throw, with a toss of 64-7. Nessa was Iowa's top high jumper with a leap of 6-feet-7. Tim Dodge was Iowa's top 60-meter runner. Adam Thomas won the 800-meter run for the Hawkeyes.

Arno van der Westhuizen placed second in the weight throw with a toss of 61-2. Sean Moeller placed took first place in the 3,000 meters. He was followed by Shaun Allen.

Iowa opens its season by hosting the Hawkeye Open. The event takes place on Jan. 13 in the UI Recreation Building.

Women's track

The Iowa women's track team had encouraging performances at its intrasquad meet. Sophomore Jisell Providence placed first in the 300-meter dash with a time of 42.22. Fellow sophomore Sarah Arens finished first in the 3,000-meter run. Atalie Barber, a freshman, took first in both the 600-meter dash and the 4x400-meter relay. Julie Gallery won the high jump.

Mandy Beck took first in the shot put for Iowa. She was followed by Kara Hinz, who also won the weight throw.

The Iowa women also opens up their first competition at the Hawkeye Open in the Recreation Building on Jan. 13.

Evans against ISU's leading scorer Martin Rancik and Paul Shirley, as well as Luke Recker squaring off against Kantrail Horton.

"The matchups will be fun to watch," Alford said. "But this may come down to bench vs. bench."

Both Jake Sullivan and Tyray Peterson are averaging double digits in scoring off the bench to give the Cyclones six players with more than 10 points per contest. Iowa's reserves will factor into the match as well, with Brody Boyd, Ryan Hogan and Courtney Scott all looking to provide relief to the starting lineup.

Former Iowa star Jess Settles agrees with Alford. Settles, who is in town preparing to do television work for Saturday's game, is a veteran of six battles with the Cyclones and said the difference in the game usually comes down to one of the lesser-known players on a team's roster, such as Scott.

"The key matchups tend not to pan out in a series like this," Settles said. "It's always someone off the bench who beats you."

With a high-scoring team such as the Cyclones coming to town, Alford knows for the Hawkeyes to win they must match Iowa State's level of intensity and play tenacious defense. Iowa State's offense presents his defense its toughest challenge to date because of its explosive nature, the Iowa coach said.

As for intensity, the coach hopes Evans will wear off on some of his teammates.

"Reggie just brings his black-and-gold hard hat every day," Alford said. "That's what has got to be contagious."

There is no doubt whether the rivalry has intensified between the two schools in recent years, but win or lose, Alford said he knows which team is the best in the state.

"I don't think I've ever looked at my program as not being the No. 1 program in the state," he said.

Gwynn to remain a Padre

■ Tony Gwynn will play again in San Diego, while David Cone leaves New York.

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

Elaine Thompson/Associated Press
Tony Gwynn re-signed with the Padres, ensuring he will play in 20th season in San Diego.

NEW YORK — Tony Gwynn stayed with the San Diego Padres and David Cone left the New York Yankees as dozens of free agents made decisions on their futures before Thursday's midnight EST deadline.

Gwynn, who has spent 19 seasons with the Padres and won eight NL batting titles, agreed to a $2 million, one-year contract that gives him the chance to earn $3.7 million more in performance bonuses.

"I wanted an opportunity to play my whole career here," Gwynn said. "When you think about all the options that you have, that was foremost in my mind. I'm glad that it worked out."

"Ultimately, the thing that kept me here was the fact that I'm happy here," he said. "I really like it here. I'm really comfortable here."

Said Padres general manager Kevin Towers: "It's good to have this behind us."

"From a baseball standpoint, if Tony's as healthy as he says he is right now, our ballclub will be a much better ballclub with him in the middle of our lineup rest of his career, but sometimes circumstances change in ways you cannot quite foresee."

Players offered arbitration can negotiate with their former teams through Jan. 8 and have until Dec. 19 to accept or reject the offers. Players refused arbitration can't re-sign until May 1.

Atlanta refused arbitration with first baseman Andres Galarraga, and the Chicago Cubs refused it with first baseman Mark Grace, who is expected to sign today with Arizona.

Detroit offered arbitration to outfielder Juan Gonzalez, the New York Mets offered it to pitchers Mike Hampton, Rick Reed and Bobby J. Jones, and the Cleveland Indians offered it to outfielder Manny Ramirez, catcher Sandy Alomar and first baseman David Segui.

The White Sox offered it to catcher Charles Johnson and designated hitter Harold Baines.

Many teams were waiting until just before midnight to make their decisions public.

Several teams decided to re-sign with their teams before the deadline, including Seattle outfielder Jay Buhner ($1.85 million), Yankees infielder Luis Sojo ($500,000) and Yankees right-hander Dwight Gooden (a minor league contract that would pay him $500,000 if he makes the team).

once again. He's going to be out there everyday unless he says he can't," he said.

Gwynn has a career .338 average, 3,108 hits and eight NL batting titles.

Cone, coming off a 4-14 season, could have stayed with the World Series champions for about $500,000 guaranteed and the chance to earn more in performance bonuses.

Because the free-agent pitcher wasn't offered salary arbitration, he is ineligible to re-sign with the Yankees until May 1.

Dot.com ads down for Bowl

■ The Super Bowl will charge higher prices for ads, despite a sluggish market.

By Skip Wollenburg
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The dot.com invasion of the Super Bowl telecast may have gone into retreat, but CBS is getting higher commercial prices anyway for the game that usually draws the biggest TV audience.

CBS says next month's Super Bowl is drawing less Internet company advertising than it did last January, when about half of the three dozen sponsors were dot-coms who gobbled up an estimated 40 percent of the ad time in a bid to make a name for themselves overnight.

On that telecast, ABC network insiders said advertisers spent a record average of $2.2 million — and reportedly as much as $3 million — for a 30-second commercial.

CBS officials said this week they have sold a little more than 80 percent of the available commercial time for the Super Bowl telecast on Jan. 28, 2001, and said only about 10 percent of the in-game ads will wind up being for dot.coms.

Despite the dot-com pull-back, Joe Abruzzese, head of ad sales for CBS, said the network has been getting $2.4 million on average for the half-minute ads it has sold so far.

But it can be hard to isolate how much a Super Bowl ad costs because CBS has been selling them in packages that include ads in the lower-rated pre- and post-game shows.

Some media buyers expect the final average will be lower, possibly matching what ABC got for the last Super Bowl. But they were impressed with the CBS' ability to command a high price despite cooler demand from Internet companies and a more sluggish ad market overall.

"There still is no event that gets as many people watching it in television, and there is no event on TV that people watch as much for the commercials as for the event itself," said Jon Mandel, the chief negotiating officer for ad buyer MediaCom.

CBS expects upward of 130 million people will watch at least some of the game and that the ratings will be twice as high as for the most popular regular TV shows. Throw in the media attention lavished on Super Bowl ads, and you have a powerful incentive for companies to pay the highest prices on TV for just a half-minute in the spotlight.

The job sites Monster.com Inc. and HotJobs.com Inc. will each be back in the 2001 Super Bowl for the third consecutive year, but CBS says viewers should expect a more traditional lineup of sponsors: Anheuser-Busch Cos., PepsiCo Inc., Visa International and FedEx Corp., along with movie studios.

Clothing maker Levi Strauss & Co. of San Francisco will appear for the first time, while MasterCard International Inc., which skipped the last Super Bowl, is returning.

Elisa Romm, the vice president of North American advertising for MasterCard, said the dot.com rush a year ago created "an unreal media environment."

Wrestling changes may draw ire

■ The Iowa state wrestling finals may be split up into two sessions.

By Chuck Schoffner
Associated Press

BOONE, Iowa — The Iowa High School Athletic Association board is being warned to expect some heat if it tinkers with the format for the state wrestling tournament.

Yet something must be done to ensure that all fans who want to see the championship matches can get in, said Bernie Saggau, the association's executive director.

"If you can solve the problem, even though you catch heck, solve the problem and take the criticism," Saggau told the board on Thursday. "I think you have to be cognizant of it, because you will be criticized."

The IHSAA's Board of Control briefly discussed Saggau's proposal to hold the championship matches in one of the three classes on Saturday afternoon instead of having all three at night.

No vote was taken, and Saggau said no action was necessary before June because any change would not take effect until 2002.

Saggau advanced his proposal once before, and nothing was done after it produced an outcry from wrestling coaches and traditionalists. He came up with the idea because demand for tickets far exceeds the seating available at Veterans Auditorium in Des Moines.

The IHSAA receives so many ticket orders that it has to send a van to the post office to collect them. As of Thursday, the association had received 19,802 requests for tickets to the Saturday night session of the 2001 tournament. Last year, it had 18,958 requests.

This is the fourth straight year that ticket requests have exceeded the number of seats.

"How long do you have to have a problem before you say, hey, it's our job to solve it?" Saggau said in an interview. "It may only have to last four years, but it's our job to do it."

If Des Moines follows through on plans to build a 16,000-seat arena, all three classes could be accommodated on Saturday night, Saggau said.

Board member Arlo Flege of Waverly said he thought demand would be strong even if the championship sessions were split because wrestling fans want to see all of the matches, regardless of who's competing.

"They're not like basketball fans who get up and leave after their game is over," Flege said. "Ninety percent will stay."

Saggau said that while he had no way of actually knowing, he felt 75 percent of those attending the afternoon session would buy tickets only for those matches and would go home afterwards.

Enjoy An Exciting Career In The World Of Automotive Sales

Chezik-Sayers Honda, Iowa's #1 Honda dealer and Iowa's newest Mitsubishi franchise is now seeking qualified individuals who feel they can provide the best in customer service as a representative for our company. This is an opportunity unlike any other in the industry for these reasons:

1. SALARY not commission.
2. 2 weeks of extensive training and continued support to insure your success.
3. State of the art facility and systems to provide your clients with the best customer service in Iowa.
- 4- Starting Salary $30k per year plus bonus and benefit package.

You must possess both excellent written and verbal communications skills, have the ability to absorb and retain large amounts of product and safety data and be self motivated to work with a minimum amount of supervision. A professional demeanor in both appearance and manner is a requirement and recognition of the value of heroic customer service is to be considered mandatory.

Chezik-Sayers is an equal opportunity employer providing a smoke-free workplace and environment. We will give priority consideration to people whose background demonstrates the ability to work with the public in a positive manner. Some college or competitive team sports are a plus. Please fax your typed resume with a brief hand written note describing what you feel are your best qualities to Sarah Kilpatrick at (319) 339-8240 or email to iowahonda@aol.com.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Contracts and agreements formed today will be a dead end. It is best to work on home-improvement projects or on making your domestic environment more family-oriented. Surprise your mate with gifts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't become angry if your mate doesn't understand your needs. You will have to spell them out clearly and persuasively. The last thing you want to do is ruffle feathers. Avoid arguing with co-workers.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may be working with some untrustworthy characters today. Don't be too eager to reveal any personal information or talk about colleagues.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can make a real difference if you spend time discovering exactly what problems face the children in your life. You can pursue your creative hobbies successfully if you get started.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Expect opposition from family members. They will not be very happy with your lack of help or the amount of time you spend elsewhere. You'd better be prepared with legitimate answers.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You will be confused about appointments if you neglect to make a note of when you are supposed to be when. Take time to help a friend with problems. Be careful traveling.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Take your responsibilities seriously. You mustn't rely on others to sort out your problems or to do your work. Getting some rest or going for a massage will do you a world of good.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You will be unable to bully others into doing things your way. Spend some time improving your own image and not trying to change somebody else. You can make financial gains. Pregnancy may be on your mind.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Don't be railroaded into spending money you don't have. It is best to do your own thing and not pay too much attention to the extravagances in which others are involved.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Expect to make a life-changing discovery. Get involved in social events that will bring you in contact with people who can motivate you creatively. You will pursue unusual interests.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Avoid confrontations. Chances are you haven't been doing your share of the work. Your thoughts have been on hobbies and educational pursuits. It's time to roll up your sleeves.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Expect to make a life-changing discovery. Get involved in social events that will bring you in contact with people who can motivate you creatively. You will pursue unusual interests.

The Ledge

By Jesse Ammerman

How to approach finals week

Try opening a few of your textbooks. You'd be surprised — some of those definitions and stuff can come in handy!

If you have any friends in the scientific community, make an effort to have yourself cloned before Monday. That way, you'll breeze through finals week while your genetic alter-ego slaves over Scantron forms.

Consume large quantities of alcohol before sitting down to type that term paper. Your professor will be impressed with your wacky, drunken musings about campaign finance reform.

Cut off contact with friends and relatives, isolate yourself in the laundry room, and do some serious studying. Or just forget about it and watch TV.

Remember: You can cut hours from your study time by obtaining a copy of the test beforehand.

Remember that time you spotted your T.A. or professor in an altered state at a downtown establishment? Casually bring that up as you hand in your test. Extortion is SO underrated.

Focus more attention on your religion, or adopt a new one. Voodoo and witchcraft almost always work well this time of year.

Hey — who said you HAD to go to these tests anyway?
