coachs gives UI low marks
- The graduate-student union wants to see more equitable salaries and a tuition remission.

By Par Dewey

The UI received a dismal grade of two in a "grad school" held by CoilUR last weekend. The graduate-student union held the presentation to demonstrate for better salaries, health care, child care and tuition remission.

The union also presented research showing that graduate teaching and research assistants are currently responsible for the most of the teaching.

The president of Coils, Dr. Brown, had previously said that the proposed "grad school" had been removed in consultation with a union representative. The UI union's report also focused on the issue of graduate student salary, stating that graduate students are "underpaid and underpaid among the United States.

Unfortunately, the UI report received a C+.

The new study is a follow-up to a paper published in the journal Science last year that described the remarkable crystals found on Earth. "The new study reveals that these crystals are not just Earth-based, but they are also found on Mars," Bazylinski said. "This means that the magnetic crystals they contain are not just on Earth, but also on Mars." Bazylinski said.

"These findings challenge the notion that the magnetic crystals on Earth and Mars are the same," he said. "This is because the magnetic crystals on Earth and Mars are not the same." Bazylinski said.

"This study is a step towards understanding the magnetic crystals on Mars and how they might have formed," he said. "This could have implications for our understanding of the history of Mars and the potential for past microbial life on the planet." Bazylinski said.

Board decide to keep news program

By Yvonne Miller

The news program Channel One will go on the air again for high school students as a result of the school board's decision Tuesday night to continue the program for next year.

Conversations about Channel One, a commercial program offered by the Primedia Corp., had been held in the past as well. The channel is funded by advertising revenue from student-operated commercials that run between regular programming.

The channel was previously aired at Coralville Community High School but was not taken to action Tuesday.

The school's board of education decided that the budget costs, and the annual operating costs for any educational center that the Board decides to keep news program costs, and the annual operating cost of the annual operating corporation for any public forum would be a problem in Iowa.

Ted Townsend led a public forum for the Board to consider the fate of the restaurant on the corner of the Sunset Smith Foundation outside of Sunset Smith, Townsend said, and a prairie isn't profitable.

"People want to pay to see a movie," he said.

The site will be developed in whatever manner is best for the zoo and the people, said.

A new restaurant, including Eicher, shared with the Board that Iowa has its own environment and habits that need to be protected.

The majority of the funding for the project is coming from private sources, so taxpayers need not worry.

UI professors discuss the Florida case as the U.S. Supreme Court decision.

By Peter Bugg

As the Florida Supreme Court made its decision legal cause Tuesday, the U.S. Supreme Court indicated that it would go along with Governor Jeb Bush's appeal to let the state's recount provisions continue. Florida high court rejected efforts to have 25,000 additional ballots thrown out because of improper handling of them. Trustees of electors are expected to request election recount.

Meanwhile, the Florida House voted 79-4 to name a Judicial Panel, where would send the election case to the U.S. Supreme Court. The panel would have 15 days to meet, and would likely have to meet again at the end of the month because of the legal process.

The Supreme Court decisions are still uncertain, but it is likely they would follow what the Florida Supreme Court decided. The Supreme Court has the final say on the issue, and the court is expected to announce their decision soon.

Bush won by a margin of approximately 25 percent of the Florida vote. Democratic attorneys have challenged the election results, and the Florida Supreme Court has agreed to hear the case.

The Electoral College vote is still impossible to predict until the Supreme Court makes a decision. The court is expected to announce their decision soon.

Hillary's new book

And though we thought the Clinton administration was falling in on itself, apparently, it will hold together just fine, at least not because of Indecisions '92.

Fresh from her triumphant Senate campaign, Hillary Rodham Clinton plans to write a tell-all account of her land Bill's time in office. According to MSNBC, she could earn an unheard-of initial sum of $7 million for writing the book. While further discussions on depictive narrator seem gustatory, the book written by Rodham Clinton will likely sabotage the remainder of her officially stamp out media. It only takes one person to make the book "big news, but it takes a vast audience to get the book written by Rodham the details with gossipy comments. LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Republicans are not the group committing vote "theft."

I am writing in response to Bruce Ellington's editorial in the Oct. 2 issue of The Daily Iowan regarding the vote "theft."

The Republicans of trying to steal the election in Florida is ridiculous. All of the facts are considered; it's perfectly logical. The Republicans are not trying to commit this.

Then I read columns by St. Katherine Harkins of "refusing to 'tall the high side" in Pitts Beach County. The facts are the facts. The, the, the, the, the...the Republicans are not trying to commit this.

On the last day of the ballot count in Florida, two stories were running a headline that read "N Republics refused to accept hand-count of ballots because it was past the Saturday, Nov. 7 deadline." This is the day the recount was due to be completed in the state. When voters attempted to accept hand-count of ballots two hours before, on Saturday, they were met with a hard count because it was past the deadline. Voters should have a right to vote, don't you think? They have a right to have their vote counted.

The whole state of hand-counting ballots is ridiculous. It's not right. This is the reason why the people of Florida are the only people who won't have their vote counted.

Every recount is due to be completed in the state. When voters attempted to accept hand-count of ballots two hours before, on Saturday, they were met with a hard count because it was past the deadline. Voters should have a right to vote, don't you think? They have a right to have their vote counted.

Silver bells and golden melodies

From Nat King Cole to The Smashing Pumpkins, there's a holiday CD to suit everyone's musical taste.

By John H. Burns
The Daily Iowan

It's almost time to head home for the holiday season—do you know what you're listening to? Emily Mahler has compiled a list of great holiday music to choose from new favorites, to help you with this Christmas shopping.

Nat King Cole: Christmas Favorites
Nat King Cole CD: "Greatest Christmas Hits"
Every Christmas since 1944 has been a Nat King Cole Christmas. This album features such holiday classics as "Christmas Time is in the Air Again," "Mistletoe," and "North Pole." Mahler says this album is perfect for rendering jingle bells in the back of the car.

Christmas with The Chipmunks
Christmas with The Chipmunks CD: "Christmas with the Chipmunks"
This classic "Christmas song" for kids from 1956 is brought to life on CD. Although many prefer his bouncy version penned by the cradle of a viral hit, Cole's rendition of "Jingle Bells" is musical ability is evident in his rendition of "Jingle Bells." "Jingle Bells" in a Mortgage" and many other collec tions of Nat "Jingle Bells" and "The Holly and the Berries." And who could forget the children shouting "Jingle Bells" at a Christmas party? The only drawback to these rendition is that while they're cute, their irresistible energy can become exhausting after extended listening periods.

A Charlie Brown Christmas
This December is the first that the cartoon's creator, Charles Schulz, reached out to bring a Christmas album. But be warned, do not be misled by Vince Guaraldi's dapper and suave "Holly Jolly Christmas." This album is that all the proceeds are likely to benefit the academic and athletic programs administered by the University. A portion of the royalties will be donated to the academic and athletic programs of the University.

IOC banns product Armstrong Tour team used

Armstrong says he won't race in the Tour de France if the charges of drug use continue.

By Erica Dulan Associated Press

LAVIGNES, Switzerland - The product at the core of doping allegations against Lance Armstrong's team in the Tour de France was banned Tuesday by the International Olympic Committee.

Armstrong, meanwhile, said he might not defend his seven Tour wins in the 2006 Tour of Switzerland.

The IOC medical commission asked Armstrong, containing extracts of calf's blood, was banned as blood doping.

"I think we need to be very precise that the position of the medical commission is that this is a banned substance," panel Chairman Prince Alexandre de Mornay said. "This may be a list of 25 or 30 medical products. This medication as we understand it is a banned medication.

Armstrong has been at the center of controversy since October, when French judicial authorities opened a preliminary investigation into whether the U.S. Postal Service team used banned substances during the 2000 Tour. Armstrong, who came back from cancer, won the Tour for the second straight year.

Armstrong said the IOC team has repeatedly denied using banned drugs.

"This is a false link to everyone. I'll start by saying that we are completely innocent," Armstrong said on his personal Web site Tuesday. "We ran a very clean and professional team that has been singled out by our enemies. I will say that the substance is used by many, many other teams as well. Before this incident I had never heard of it, nor had my team.

Armstrong said that the drugs and products found near the team were only to treat 22-30 people on the Tour de France over three weeks.

"If something were to go wrong with any of them, be it some manner, wouldn't be responsible for their welfare. That's why we would have things like adrenaline, cortisone, scissors, stitches, etc.," Armstrong said. "And to so incorrectly call something a substitute for dope is ridiculous. I am aware everyone we use is treated by the highest medical standards.

Armstrong also indicated he might skip the 2006 Tour if the charges of drug use persist.

"I will say that if the current situation exists, then I will not ride the Tour in 2006. Period," Armstrong said. "In saying that to Wednesday or 'we're sorry' or one I really don't think the French nor another way either way fit." The Paris prosecutor's office last week launched the investigation into the U.S. Postal System after receiving an anonymous letter saying Armstrong had been treated during the Tour de France.

The IOC revealed Tuesday that it had banned the Armstrong Team's kit of drugs.

"The IOC has today banned Armstrong's team from the Tour de France," IOC President Jacques Rogge said in a statement.

The IOC ban means Armstrong's team, which has been dominated by Armstrong himself in recent years, will not be allowed to compete in the Tour de France next year.

Armstrong, who has denied any wrongdoing, said he would appeal the IOC's decision.

"We will appeal this ban of course," Armstrong said in a statement.

Despite the ban, Armstrong said he would continue to train and race in preparation for the Tour de France.

The IOC's action comes as Armstrong prepares to defend his Tour de France title for a seventh straight year.

Armstrong, who has been the face of the Tour de France for the past seven years, has denied any wrongdoing.

"We are completely innocent," Armstrong said in a statement.

"And to so incorrectly call something a substitute for dope is ridiculous. I am aware everyone we use is treated by the highest medical standards."

Armstrong also indicated he might skip the 2006 Tour if the charges of drug use persist.

"I will say that if the current situation exists, then I will not ride the Tour in 2006. Period," Armstrong said. "In saying that to Wednesday or 'we're sorry' or one I really don't think the French nor another way either way fit." The Paris prosecutor's office last week launched the investigation into the U.S. Postal System after receiving an anonymous letter saying Armstrong had been treated during the Tour de France.

Despite the IOC's action, Armstrong said he would continue to train and race in preparation for the Tour de France.

"The IOC has today banned Armstrong's team from the Tour de France," IOC President Jacques Rogge said in a statement.

McNabb is more than a runner

The second-year quarterback, had the confidence in the players around me that he has already surpassed Cunningham's team record. He has been out of the hospital for a long time and is doing well. But McNabb had taken over the Eagles' offense from the quarterback's play-by-play and showed what he could do at the pro bowl.

Track athlete goes the distance

Michelle Lahann is a true star, pure and simple. The UI nighthawk runs across the field, but instead of taking it easy in the winter, she spends up for the boys' track team. The Westfield, Iowa, native finished 11th in the Midwest Pre-Regional in September, and she is eagerly awaiting the 2000 season, competing against rivals and the secret of running long distance.

Which distance?

Lahann: Track, because I like the specialized events such as the 1,500 meter and 800 meter.

Which is the two sports different?

Lahann: Football. In football, it's more endurance-based. We work out on hills and presses at the golf course. Track is more interval-based, and we run usually run on the interior tracks. They are two different sports, but I like both.

Did you ask your coach who has run the 10,000 meters as well, how you do prepare for a distance longer than a cross country?

Lahann: I have to increase the amount of running and then do a higher number of repetitions to build more endurance.

What is the secret to running so far?

Lahann: I'm sure of a man­ gage. You have to chalgenize yourself to go faster, and you do not have to think that you can run.

Brett Favre, who is in his 15th season, five-year deal last week, is by far the best pitcher remaining on the open market and his presence should bolster the Wolf Pack's pitching depth.

The loss of Hampton to the Mets, Ramirez by the Indians and the signing of Marquis to the Rockies would have seemed like a hardship for any team, but the Giants feel no pain.

"It's a wonderful surprise," said Marquis, who signed a one-year deal with the Rockies. "I'm happy with the way it turned out. I'm still a free agent."

"I think we were in competition with the Indians," said manager Billy Beane. "If the price is right, and if the guy is the best player, we'll go for him."
