City Council unveils alcohol ordinance

By Steve Anelli

The ordinance, which was compiled by the city attorney’s office, outlined civil penalties for establishments, heavy drinking specials and out-of-state sales, appreciable precincts ensuring consumer protection, and changes the liquor license issuance process.

The inspection of civil penalties is allowed by the state’s cashier to allow the city to alter these policies in any state. The city’s current alcohol ordinance in a law in a state in a number of states that have not yet been sold, but after Bush becomes president, Vice President Dick Cheney can break a tie.

"Certainly would like to find a way to abate that kind of problem," he said. "It's wrong, inappropriate. It shouldn't be done." He said Bush "is sensitive to this problem."

The ordinance also regulates drink specials and out-of-state sales. The limitations include outlining "five for five" and "all you can drink" specials, increasing the volume of an alcoholic beverage without increasing the price the same amount, or offering discounts for bottle purchases, or offering any such alcoholic beverage, to one person at one time.

Proposed alcohol ordinance main points:

- Any person found to be in possession of an alcoholic beverage shall be subject to a fine of $100 or a $500 fine, whichever is greater.
- The city councilor shall give written notice to any person at any time.

A fund-raiser for area furniture maker will help rebuild his destroyed shop.

By Jeffrey Kramer
The Daily Iowan

When more than 400 area residents met to donate for a barn-raising on Jan. 13, it was a chance for them to give something back to Rusty Karkowski, who has been a stalwart supporter of Iowa City programs for more than 30 years. While organizers have yet to determine the amount of the funds raised, they hope the project will help rebuild the barn destroyed by fire last summer at Karkowski's furniture, designs and operating budget shop. On his own, Karkowski was unable to obtain insurance for his barn because of its age; the damages amounted to approximately $200,000. "The elements were wind, snow and percolated water," he said.

The $200,000 goal, set at the old Brick, 285 Market St., was not difficult for his friends to do, said Sue Futrell, one of the event's organizers. "It's such a generous guy," she said. "We thought it would be easy." Karkowski is continuing to make pieces of his furniture. And it would come out for any of his teachers to buy and be very, very flexible in the work he do. It's an institution that's trying to get better, and (Whitmore's academic) president's job at the University of Kentucky in Lexington, where he obtained insurance for his barn.

"He's such a generous guy," she said. "I don't quite see it, though, as an opportunity for a new start." Whitmore's academic back- ground is in the area of chemistry, in which he holds a Ph.D. in the study of proteins. While he has been active in the dramatic writings of Iowa's State University, the president's job at the University of Kentucky in Lexington, where he has been active in the dramatic writings of Iowa State University, is the job that he says he would like to apply for.

UI sophomore's death shocks family

The southwest wing of Seashore Hall was demolished during Winter Break because the UI feared it might collapse under heavy snow.

Seashore Hall loses wing

The Southall Hall renovation project should be completed in April.

A portion of historic UI building Seashore Hall was demolished on Dec. 18 because of fears the wood structure supporting the roof would not be sturdy enough to survive heavy amounts of snow and strong winter winds.

The southwest wing, which was built in 1909 as part of the original university hospital, was torn down just a few days after the weather began its winter vacation.

"We weren't afraid that Christmas break to be so furious this area," said Gary Nagle, a UI architect, and the project manager of the renovation.

STATE BRIEF

The UI also proposed three new fees, including a $40 fee for international students and scholars per semester, and an additional $35 fee during the summer. The university would also like to implement a $350 early registration fee for students in the Masters of Physical Therapy program.

Students are expected to pay tuition that will apply to them, depending on their programs and interests.

While most of the increases are less than 10 percent, some majors receiving private lessons in one course will have a 66.7 percent increase— from $90 to $150.

UI Student Government Vice President Christian Livengood says the increases are not surprising.

"I don't think the increases are high because many of these fees haven't been raised in the past five years," he said. "If we felt the increase wasn't justified, we would go right to disband the fees.

In response to the music fee, Linn said the increase will help to make the cost the same for majors and non-majors. In the past, non-majors paid less for non-music, he said.

"This board typically acts on certain lines in January. Sometimes, they are automatically increased based on tuition, others are based on the cost of services," said Doug True, the UI vice president for Finance.

The increase is very straightforward, there are no ambiguous lines," he said.

UI representative Mary Sedor can be reached at mary-sedor@uiowa.edu.

The hospital has been accused of violating the hospital-employee union's rights.

By Peter Rugg
The Daily Iowan

The UI Hospitals and Clinics has expanded two cases that the union has filed in the last 18 months, according to Local 199 at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics, or UIHC, Union Organizer Kim Miller.

Caruth said she believes the appeal is another example of the UIHC refusing to communicate with the union.

"They don't seem to get the message that they have to work with us, and until they do, we're going to have problems working together," she said. "I don't think there's any way they won't."...in the hospital's literature and communications.

"The UIHC is also appealing a decision regarding union training classes," Caruth said. "The hospital has a training program for all of its benefits and the union wanted to provide the necessary safeguards for patients and visitors, but the hospital said no."...the UIHC's literature is hospital policy.

"The administrative law judge ordered that the union would be allowed to provide literature and we're going to appeal that," Caruth said.

"We think we'll be working on at least two issues together," she said.

Although it will follow through with the appeal process if necessary, the UIHC would prefer to hold a meeting with the union on a compromise, Caruth said.

"We will contact the union to try to reach a settlement," she said.

The effects of this winter’s record-breaking snowfall and bitter temperatures aren’t done yet. The Iowa City has spent approximately $548,000 on the labor of 2,000 tons of salt and 12,000 tons of sand to control the snow, and Bud Jackson, the city’s superintendant of streets, said the supplies used have just been restocked.

"The month of December was the coldest on record," Jackson said. "I’m hoping for a mild rested season." City workers have collected a 200-250 ton stock of sand and loose snow this winter, he said. The snow is put at a lot at 250 E. Riverside Drive. ‘I’ve had worse winters than this one,” Jackson said. There were few problems with that storage area, he said. The City councilman Alfonso Ortegon said. Depending on housing costs to clear the sidwalks was less expensive. ‘It’s live in a house with 10 people having to do the shoveling. We have to do it or throw away the snow. It’s the same with another guy in the neighborhood,” he said. Jackson said.

Temperatures in Iowa City dipped to a low of 2.4 degrees Fahrenheit, just half a degree from freezing, the record for the city’s coldest December. The record was set in December 1961. The state’s average snowfall for this winter reached 37.4 inches, breaking the previous mark of 25.6 inches set in 1999. December was the second coldest, December in Iowa his war, with an average temperature of 13.5 degrees Fahrenheit. The coldest winter of record will in Iowa during the month of January. The previous mark - 22.5 inches - was set in February 1962. Winter’s effect on spring is difficult to predict with accuracy, he added. Snowfall in February and March will affect spring flooding, particularly in the Kinnick area, he added. Hillaker predicted the state has even more of this snowfall it will receive this winter even though 40 percent of the snow season remains. I love water levels in Iowa rivers prior to winter may reduce flooding during spring,” he said. Hillaker said, a spokesperson for the Iowa State Department of Natural Resources.

"We have experienced mild winter snowfall since early January. The warming may melt enough snow to present a sudden spring snow that could result in flash flooding, Hillak- er said. ‘It’s just not as bad as it looks,” said Bob Licha, a ION spokesperson.

This winter December temperature is not as bad as last year. Only snow that has been melted this winter has a lower ground. Hillaker said.

The difference in this winter will make this winter even though 40 percent of the snow season remains. I love water levels in Iowa rivers prior to winter may reduce flooding during spring,” he said. Hillaker said, a spokesperson for the Iowa State Department of Natural Resources.

Iowa couples may soon have the option of making their marriage a "covenant marriage" if the state legislature passes a bill introduced last week. Choosing a covenant marriage would give the couple the option of making a stronger commitment in their marriage and each "other than is allowed by the current law.

The bill, introduced by Rep. Phil Tilton, R-North English, states that choosing a covenant marriage would allow the couple to pre-negotiate counseling and a specific declaration of what their marriage is to "life-time commitment," and that both parties would not be allowed to divorce except in very limited circumstances, such as abuse, abandonment, or separation for a minimum of two years.

In a joint venture to reduce the high U.S. divorce rate and its negative effect on families, the state legislature introduced an "inter-racial marriage" bill last week.

The bill provides for the state to recognize marriages between individuals of different races. The bill would also allow for the establishment of a "marriage certificate" to be issued to couples who marry of different races.

In that vein, it's been an eventful year in Iowa, with one thing leading to another. Kind of like when you don't believe this, see this week's edition of Latino.

If you've met many of us, you know that we have a diversity of perspectives and that we are proud of them. What has once seemed like a faraway, science-fiction fantasy has now become a reality and a source of great excitement. The cloning of endangered species, and much of the animal world, was the eye of the Daily Iowan for the past year.

It's a funny thing about the American people: we can't seem to get enough of the latest news. We love to hear about the latest advancements in science, medicine, and technology. And we love to hear about the latest controversies in politics, society, and culture. It's like a never-ending news cycle.

But there are also many things that we can do to improve our lives. We can use our knowledge and skills to make a positive impact on the world. We can use our voice to speak out for what we believe in. We can use our resources to help those in need.

Some of us are lucky enough to have a job we love, and we work hard to make a living and contribute to society. Others of us may not be so lucky, and we may struggle to make ends meet. But no matter what our situation, we all have the power to make a difference.

The Daily Iowan is grateful to all of our readers for their support and commitment to our mission. We are committed to providing you with the news and information you need to make informed decisions and take action in your community.

We welcome your feedback and suggestions for how we can continue to improve our coverage of the news. Please feel free to contact us at news@dailyiowan.com with your comments and ideas.

New Year’s resolutions for the average American

It’s a new year, and many people have chosen to mark the occasion by declaring resolutions which by how to improve their lives.

You know… lose some weight, abandon junk food, or throw off smoking. But probably the resolution most discussed by most people is the one about losing weight, abandon junk food, or throw off smoking.

About 3 in 4 adults have made a resolution to lose weight in the past year. For many, New Year’s resolutions are seen as a way to improve their life and their health. However, only about 9% of people who make New Year’s resolutions are successful in achieving them.

But why are New Year’s resolutions so popular? Why do so many people make them, and why are they often so unsuccessful in achieving them? There are a few reasons why New Year’s resolutions are so popular:

1. It’s a new year, and people want to start fresh and make changes to their lives.
2. New Year’s resolutions are often seen as a way to improve one’s health and well-being.
3. New Year’s resolutions can be a way to set goals and motivate oneself to achieve them.

On the other hand, why are New Year’s resolutions so unsuccessful in achieving them? There are a few reasons why New Year’s resolutions are often unsuccessful:

1. Resolutions are often too vague or too difficult to achieve.
2. Resolutions often lack a specific plan or strategy for achieving them.
3. Resolutions can be overwhelming and discouraging if they are not broken down into smaller, more manageable goals.

So, what can you do to make your New Year’s resolutions more successful? Here are a few tips:

1. Set specific, measurable goals.
2. Break your goals into smaller, achievable steps.
3. Get support from friends or family.
4. Reward yourself for achieving your goals.

Remember, the key to success is not in having a resolution, but in sticking to it. So, if you make a New Year’s resolution this year, make sure you have a plan for achieving it and a supportive network to help you along the way.

ON THE AIR

Main Event
The Big Ten sport: wrestling, Iowa vs. Ohio State, 6 p.m., ESPN.
The Big Ten women's basketball game: Michigan vs. Purdue, 6 p.m., ESPN.
The Hawkeyes have done everything they can to be considered one of the best six teams in the country, but I’ve been looking at it that this team will not get higher in the rankings.

With a young team, the Big Ten schedule will be grueling. Especially on the road, where upcoming meets have proved uniformly to the Hawkeyes, who just twice on the away from Iowa City this year.

The Hawkeyes will need to go to play at Illinois, Michigan State and Minnesota, but they’re tough home games against Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan.

This love story is going to be good, but they won’t finish the season a top-5 team. They’ve hit their peak now, and with such a young team, and a difficult schedule ahead of them, the Hawkeyes stay in the top 15 to prove to be a short one.

I’m not saying the Iowa basketball team will fall farther than an iceberg in hell. As usual, I’m not one of their fans. The Hawkeyes have shown signs that indicate they can back up those NCAA Tourney, and the parity as evident in one.

So for this season, Iowa has shown an excellent job of teaming. They’ve worked hard, been consistent. We have the only team to upset Iowa and although some wins have not been pretty, they still have some wins. Detroit Mercy, Penn State, Ohio, the list of close Hawkeyes will not end on. But this team is learning how to win while still maintaining the style of having eight new faces in the lineup.

Along with close wins, is giving young shooters to play in Reag. Boro, Luke Becker and others. Having a multitude of weapons will make the Hawkeyes difficult to prepare for. Iowa with one star player may be able to reach 15 wins by the middle of December, but once the conference season begins to fall, some dimensional teams tend to fold.

The big three will continue to get wins while Iowa’s bench gets more and more effective. Nearly every player on Iowa’s roster has some of the bench to play a key role at least once this season. Their starting and stars are three reasons why Iowa is not done winning yet.

Notre Dame's women's basketball team peaked?

With the most of their Big Ten schedule ahead of them, this Iowa men's basketball team must experience more rough times ahead of them.

There are no newsletters or Iowa men's basketball teams to melt down faster than an iceberg in hell.

The Hawkeyes are due to melt down faster than an iceberg in hell. But they have not been who we thought they were. Iowa men's basketball teams of late only solidifies my claim.

Standing alone with the Big Ten two weeks into conference play may be tough, but as far as I'm concerned, I believe that the Iowa basketball team is due to melt down faster than an iceberg in hell.

I am not one of their fans. The Hawkeyes have shown signs that indicate they can back up those NCAA Tourney, and the parity as evident in one.

SPORTS

SUPER BOWL XXXI

By Dave Goldberg

The game was filled with excitement from start to finish. New England tried to put the Giants away early, but New York’s defense held up. In the second quarter, the Giants took the lead with a field goal, 10-0.

The third quarter was a nail-biter, with both teams exchanging scores. The Giants led 21-13, but the Patriots came back to tie the game at 21-all. In the fourth quarter, the Giants scored a touchdown and a field goal to take a 34-13 lead.

In the end, the Giants held on for the victory, 37-26. The game was highlighted by a spectacular catch by Giants tight end Mark Ingram, who caught a 29-yard pass in the end zone.

The Giants’ victory was a historic one, as they became the first team to win four Super Bowls in six years. The win was a sweet revenge for the Giants, who lost to New England in the Super Bowl the previous season.

The Giants’ win also marked the end of an era. After the game, New England head coach Bill Parcells announced that he would be leaving the team to become the head coach of the New York Jets.

The game was a memorable one for Giants fans, and it will go down in history as one of the greatest Super Bowls ever played.
