MLK week kicks off at UI

Meghan Bruno/The Daily Iowan

Civil Rights activist Angela Davis speaks Monday in the IMU Main Lounge. Davis spent a majority of the evening discussing death-penalty concerns.

■ A civil-rights activist criticizes the death penalty and U.S. voting disenfranchisement.

By Jesse Elliott
The Daily Iowan

Angela Davis said she feels fortunate to have only spent 16 months behind bars in the early 1970s for three federal criminal accusations she was later acquitted of. But she wants the world to know that most incarcerated persons in this country aren't that lucky.

In a Monday night lecture that kicked off the UI's Martin Luther King Jr. Human Rights Week, Davis railed against the United States prison system, the death penalty and voting disenfranchisement, among other things.

Much of Davis' talk — which drew a crowd of more than 1,000 to the IMU Main Lounge and overflow spaces — focused on the current controversy over the election of Gov. George W. Bush to the highest political office in the land.

"The situation in Florida indicates that the campaign for voting rights has not yet ended," Davis told the audience.

Two men and a woman mourn the loss of loved ones as people search for earthquake survivors in Santa Tecla San Salvador, El Salvador, Jan. 13.

Hope for earthquake survivors dwindles

■ More than 400 people were killed in the quake that hit El Salvador; 366 remain missing.

By Niko Price
Associated Press

SANTA TECLA, El Salvador — With the ground settling and time passing, rescuers said Monday that the chance of finding survivors from an earthquake that killed more than 400 people is slipping — though one man was freed after using his cell phone to call for help.

Hundreds of people remained buried beneath a mountain of rock and earth in the Las Colinas neighborhood here, some three miles west of the capital.

Residents complained that the government allowed land owners over the years to clear trees from the hillside, alleging that the lack of ground cover could leave those below vulnerable to landslides.

The Jan. 13 magnitude-7.6 quake loosened that hillside, burying the middle-class neighborhood at its base and bringing down some of the mansions above.

Although the largest number of deaths appeared to be in Las Colinas, the quake caused landslides across El Salvador, burying coffee workers and blocking roads. Numbers from official sources varied wildly.

The national emergency committee said at least 403 people were confirmed dead. But the emergency committee for the Santa Tecla region said 436 were dead here alone. The local committee said 366 remained missing — hundreds less than the figure given Jan. 13 by the Red Cross.

Hawkeyes on a roll in 2001

■ Iowa's unbeaten Big Ten record will be tested against Wisconsin tonight.

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

They've only played three games in a rigorous Big Ten conference schedule, but the Iowa men's basketball team is receiving rave reviews from local fans as well as the national media.

The Hawkeyes, sitting in first place of the Big Ten with a 3-0 conference record, busted into the top 20 in college basketball polls Monday. In the Associated Press poll, the Hawks made the biggest leap, jumping from no. 26 to no. 14. They gained eight slots in the USA Today/ESPN poll, sliding into the 16th slot.

Loyal Hawkeye fans, like UI junior Nick Steffes, who has followed the Hawks since he was a kid, are quick to defend the Hawks' reviews. Steffes said this is one of the best Iowa basketball teams he has seen at this point in the season.

"I believe that they do deserve their rankings," Steffes said, as he was playing basketball at the UI Field House Sunday night. "They have a combination of great skills ... they have good rebounding and ball handling, and good coaching."

At 14-2, the Hawkeyes have already matched the number of wins Steve Alford recorded in his first season as head coach last year. Fifteen more conference games are on the schedule, as well as any post-season tournaments the team qualifies for.

An unbeaten Big Ten record as well as the lofty national rankings will be put to the test tonight, when the Hawkeyes play at the University of Wisconsin in Madison.

Wisconsin, at 10-4, was picked by the media to finish in the top three in the Big 10 conference standings.

As criticism mounts, Ashcroft fights back

■ The attorney-general designate and Interior nominee Gale Norton face increasing scrutiny.

By Larry Margasak
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Ten of President-elect Bush's 16 Cabinet nominees facing senators this week. Attorney General-designate John Ashcroft spoke out Monday against the practice of racial profiling by police on the eve of his confirmation hearing, which is expected to focus sharply on his civil-rights record.

"I certainly would like to find a way to be absent that kind of practice," he said. "It's wrong, inappropriate. It shouldn't be done." He said Bush "is sensitive to this problem."

Ashcroft and Gale Norton, Interior secretary nominee, are meeting opposition not seen since the 1991 Clarence Thomas hearings during the administration of Bush's father.

Ashcroft, mostly silent while liberal groups have assailed his record, confronted one controversial issue — racial profiling — in a conversation with Bush officials in the presence of reporters.

Ashcroft, who will appear before the Senate Judiciary Committee beginning today, also faces questions about other hot-button issues: judicial selections for the Supreme Court and other federal court seats; his unyielding anti-abortion stance; his opposition to confirming a black Missouri judge, Ronnie White, to the federal bench; his comments praising Southern war heroes; and allegations that he improperly used state government employees in his 1984 campaign for governor of Missouri.

The hearings for all nominees will be chaired by Democrats, who control the Senate until Bush is inaugurated Saturday. The Senate is split 50-50, and after Bush becomes president, Vice President Dick Cheney can break a tie.

City Council unveils alcohol ordinance

■ Among other proposals, the measure would limit drink specials.

By Megan L. Eckhardt
The Daily Iowan

After months of discussion on how to reduce the amount of underage alcohol consumption, Iowa City councilors now have the first draft of a proposed alcohol ordinance in their hands. The council will have the opportunity to discuss and then give its initial assessment of the proposal at tonight's work session.

The ordinance, which was compiled by the city attorney's office, outlines civil penalties for establishments, limits drink specials and out-of-sight sales, expands city provisions concerning underage consumption, and changes the liquor-license application process.

The imposition of civil penalties is authorized by the state; the city has chosen to add those penalties to city ordinances, wrote City Attorney Eleanor Dilkes in a memo to the council. For the first sale of alcohol to a minor, the fine would be $500, which is established by state law. The penalties increase in a graduated system, including suspensions of liquor licenses, and eventually ending in revocation of licenses or permits.

Once an establishment makes an illegal sale, it would be given a public hearing in front of the City Council to allow it to defend its action. The public would not be allowed to comment at the meetings.

Proposed alcohol ordinance main points:

Any establishment found selling alcoholic beverages to any person underage will be fined $500 for a first offense.

Any underage person found purchasing, attempting to purchase or having alcoholic beverages in their possession commits a simple misdemeanor punished by a $100 fine.

Any person found selling to an underage person commits a simple misdemeanor and will be fined $500. It will be illegal to have "two for one" or "all you can drink" specials.

It will be illegal to sell more than one alcoholic beverage at any one time to one person.

Source: DJ research DJ/A

The ordinance also regulates drink specials and out-of-sight sales. The limitations include outlawing "two for one" and "all you can drink" specials, increasing the volume of an alcoholic beverage without increasing the price the same degree, and selling pitchers, or more than one serving of any alcoholic beverage, to one person at one time.

Memmer trial delayed

The original Feb. 5 court date for Jonathon Memmer's double-homicide trial has been pushed back to Oct. 1. The trial is currently scheduled to be held in Johnson County, but a change of venue may be requested.

The change is the result of a motion filed on Jan. 4 in which Memmer, 25, waived his right to a speedy trial and a one-year prosecution guideline established by the court.

Memmer

Memmer is charged in the slaying of Laura Watson-Dalton, 29, and Maria Therese Lehner, 27, at 427 S. Van Buren St. Apt. 4 in March 1999. The trial is now scheduled to take place more than 18 months after Memmer was charged. He was arrested on a probation violation a few days after the bodies were found and has remained in jail since.

Memmer is also accused of burglarizing the apartment in which the bodies of the women were found. The court will not take action on this charge until after the homicide trial is over.

Memmer's original attorneys, Edward Leff and Dennis Cohen of the Iowa City Public Defenders Office, withdrew from the case in December because of a potential conflict of interest. Local attorney Clemens Erdahl and Cedar Rapids attorney Mark Brown were appointed to represent Memmer on Dec. 20.

Sharpshooters 'thin' deer herd in Hickory Hill

Sharpshooters from White Buffalo Inc. have been hired by the city of Iowa City to trim down the growing population of deer in Hickory Hill Park, causing concern among local residents.

From Jan. 8-12, the park was closed from noon until 5 a.m.; the closing resumed Monday. The sharpshooting will end Friday.

UI Professor Steve Hendrix, a member of the Iowa City/Coralville Deer Management Committee, said that the deer population in Hickory Hill Park is one of the highest in Iowa City, and it needs to be controlled. "There are enough deer out there that they are causing damage," he said.

There have been two cases of people who thought the park was only closed until 5 p.m., and they were in the park during the designated closing time, creating what could have been a dangerous situation, said Corbin Sexton, the co-chairman of Friends of Hickory Hill Park.

Iowa City resident William Boos, who lives near Hickory Hill Park, said that he can hear shots from his house despite the sharpshooters' use of silencers.

The Iowa City liaison to the deer committee, Lisa Mollenhauer, said the number of deer killed so far is unavailable, but a kill count of 300-350 deer would be considered successful.

Fillmer convicted of 8 sex crimes

Iowa City resident Dominic Jason Fillmer, 28, was found guilty on Jan. 9 of eight counts of sex crimes against three of his daughter's grade-school friends. The victims, who have not been identified, were as young as 7 at the time.

The verdict found Fillmer guilty of two counts of second-degree sexual abuse, one count of lascivious acts, two counts of false imprisonment, two counts of indecent exposure and one count of dissemination of pornographic material. Each conviction carries a mandatory 25-year prison sentence; Fillmer must serve 85 percent of that term before he is eligible for parole.

Fillmer's attorney, Crystal Usher, said she will file for a new trial before his sentencing on March 9.

"He has consistently maintained that none of the alleged activities took place," she said.

Allegations against Fillmer were first made in 1997, when one of the victims told her parents Fillmer had made her touch his genitalia by disguising it as a plant. A police investigation ensued, but no charges were filed because of a lack of evidence, Usher said.

The initial victim came forward with more allegations in 2000, leading other victims to divulge their encounters with Fillmer.

The sex crimes occurred in 1997, 1999 and 2000 during sleepovers at the Fillmer house, Usher said. Fillmer's daughter, now 10, was present during at least one occasion at which her father exposed himself but testified that she never saw anything, Usher said.

Boy loses battle with rare blood disease

Ten-year-old David McElvogue, described by those who knew him as big-hearted and extraordinary, passed away Jan. 7 after battling a rare blood disease.

In 1998 at the UI Hospitals and Clinics, David, who was born with Fanconi's anemia, was accidentally treated for a fever with a strong chemotherapy drug instead of an antibiotic. In 1997, he received a bone-marrow transplant at the UIHC.

A combination of the blood disease and the mistreatment made him susceptible to many infections, which he struggled against until the day he died, said his mother, LaDawn McElvogue of Des Moines.

"He never gave up the fight," she said. "He fought clear to the end."

The McElvogue family received a $525,000 settlement from the UIHC to cover the several treatments David had to endure following the accident.

McElvogue said she feels empty and alone since his death.

"As the days go on, it's getting harder," she said. "Reality is starting to set in. It's horrible."

She also said she will always remember his compassion.

"He was always worried about everybody else," she said. "Never once did he say, 'Why me?' or 'Poor me.'"

Lark owner decides to rebuild

The Lark Supper Club in Tiffin, which was destroyed by a fire on Dec. 4, will be rebuilt as soon as possible, owner Jamal Kharbush said.

Kharbush, who has owned the restaurant since 1999 with his wife, Kris, is still waiting for his insurance company to finish the paperwork regarding his claim, and he does not yet know what amount he will receive or where he will erect a new Lark.

"Once we get the money from the insurance company, we can look into locations and figure out how we're going to proceed, but for now we just have to sit back and wait," Kharbush said.

The December blaze lasted for two hours and required 12 area fire departments to extinguish. Undamaged was the steakhouse's recipe list, which was locked in a fireproof safe.

The Lark, built as a road house in the 1940s by Dale Dahnke, was widely regarded for its food. It was once voted the best steakhouse in Iowa by Midwest Living magazine and attracted former Indiana basketball coach Bob Knight during his visits to Iowa.

Colloton retires after 42 years with UIHC

John Colloton, the UI vice president for statewide health services, retired on Dec. 29 after 42 years of service at the UI.

Although Colloton, 69, retired from working for statewide health services — a position he had held since 1993 — he left behind a legacy at the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

While Colloton headed the UIHC, from 1971-1993, approximately $500 million in building projects established the UIHC as a state-of-the-art facility. He is also credited with nearly doubling the number of patients served at the UIHC from 1978-1993, tripling the staff from 1970-1993, creating approximately 50 new services per year and starting volunteer programs that extended beyond health care.

The arrival of Medicare in 1965, which aimed to give Americans choices about where they received their health care, presented Colloton with the challenge of making the UIHC one of the top university hospitals in the country. Under his direction, the UIHC became an international presence in health care.

UI to request office-space lease

During the state of Iowa Board of Regents meeting Wednesday, the UI will request permission to enter into a lease for the use of 24,114 square feet of office space and 3,000 square feet of finished basement space in Plaza Centre One.

The building also houses Brothers Bar.

Currently, the UI rents office spaces at Brewery Square, US West and the Iowa City Public Library, said Doug True, the UI vice president for Finance.

A report given to board members said the UI Facilities Services Group will lease two floors of Plaza Centre One, he said.

The space was initially discovered by Mike Finnegan, the UI business manager, True said. Finnegan is also in charge of overseeing the deal, he said.

"He became aware of the space several months ago," True said.

The property will be acquired for $1.8 million, with financing provided by a bank loan, said Steve Parrott, the UI director of communications.

The term of the lease will be for a 15-year period beginning on March 1, he said.

The loan will be repaid semi-annually in payments of $105,000, the equivalent of $7.75 per square foot per year, Parrott said.

"It's a buyer's market, and this will save the UI a lot of money," he said.

The UI will begin to move into the space between March and the summer, True said.

"Then we'll let the other leases lapse," he said.

Schools looks to solve track-coach issue

The ongoing controversy involving City High track coach John Raffensperger and School District Superintendent Lane Plugge was put to rest on Jan. 9 by the Iowa City School Board.

The controversy began last spring, when Raffensperger let an ineligible runner compete in the Drake Relays, and it continued after Plugge disciplined the coach without consulting the board.

Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White said he thought that a closed meeting of the board held to discuss Plugge's actions was unlawful, so to fix the situation the issue was put on the agenda of the formal board meeting on Jan. 9 as a consent item. The board voted to accept the same statement that it had issued eight months ago, Plugge said.

"It's the board's hope that it met the concerns that J. Patrick White had," he said.

White has requested a tape of the meeting, Plugge said. The superintendent hopes that White's concerns were resolved.

"I'm pleased to have it behind us," Plugge said.

City plan brings Elks' complaint

The Iowa City City Council will make its first of three votes on a proposal for developing a 400-unit neighborhood south of Interstate-80 tonight during its formal council meeting.

The 82-acre plot, located adjacent to the Iowa City Elks Club golf course in a bend of the Iowa River at the end of Foster Road, was first mapped three years ago but has only recently come under criticism from Elks Club members, who filed a formal complaint at the beginning of December.

"The 1997 agreement between the city and the Elks squarely puts on the city the contractual obligation to ensure that the Elks have a safe and functional golf course," wrote Gregg Geerdes, an attorney for the Elks, in a letter to the city. "We are concerned that the development design that the City is proposing for the Peninsula violates this agreement."

Iowa City Mayor Ernie Lehman said he believes the plan will pass tonight because the Elks' complaints are unclear.

"I don't know exactly what the Elks want the city to do," he said. "I thought we had an agreement to everyone's liking."

The city and the Elks Club are working together to come to an agreement about the property, Geerdes said.

Friends lend woodworker a hand

■ A fund-raiser for area furniture maker will help rebuild his destroyed shop.

By Jeffrey Kramer
The Daily Iowan

When more than 400 area residents met to raise funds for a barn-raising on Jan. 13, it was a chance for them to give something back to Russell Karkowski, who has been an avid supporter of Iowa City programs for more than 20 years.

While organizers have yet to determine the exact amount raised, the fund-raiser will help Karkowski rebuild his furniture business, Wooden Co. of Solon, which was destroyed in a Dec. 16 fire. All the company's equipment, designs and records had been housed in a 130-year old barn.

Karkowski was unable to obtain insurance for his barn because of its age; the damages came to approximately $200,000.

The "Soup and Support Supper" at Old Brick, 26 E. Market St., was not difficult for his friends to do, said Sue Futrell, one of the event's organizers. "He's such a generous guy," she said.

Karkowski has assisted in raising funds for such local programs as United Action for Youth and the Domestic Violence Intervention Program by donating or auctioning off pieces of his furniture.

"There was a big switch in my woodworking business when I started to think of it as more of a service to people as opposed to being a woodworker making precious things," he said. "Rather, I was trying to do something where I could fulfill people's needs."

Richard Lynch, a UI pathology professor, said his house is filled with Karkowski's furniture, including a bed and coffee table.

"There is no kind of standard to any of his work," he said. "He could look at a person, the sight, environment and be very, very flexible in the work he would come up with for them — and it would come out superb."

Karkowski is continuing to work for another one of his businesses, Woodworkers, 700 S. Dubuque St. He is not sure where he will rebuild his shop, but he plans on deciding in the spring or summer. Rebuilding at the site of the fire is one possibility.

It took four fire departments and more than 60 volunteer firefighters to control the fire. Karkowski estimates that 10,000 board feet of lumber was burned.

"I don't quite see it, though, as a disaster," he said. "Losing something like that, that represents a good part of your life, is a little bit of a debt in some ways, but it's actually an unusual opportunity for a new start."

raised approximately $18,000, and Karkowski says he expects to raise an additional $10,000.

Acoustic Mayhem, the John Lake Band, Big Wooden Radio, City High String Quartet, and Lazy Boy and the Recliners provided musical entertainment for Jan. 13 fund-raiser.

After lover's quarrel, man falls, drowns

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A 19-year-old Cedar Rapids man who had argued with his sweetheart drowned after he climbed over the railing of a Carnival cruise ship, lost his grip, and fell into Tampa Bay, police said.

A U.S. Coast Guard rescue helicopter found Michael Hepner floating unconscious two miles offshore around 4 a.m. Sunday, Tampa police spokesman Joe Durkin said. Hepner was airlifted to Tampa General Hospital, where he was pronounced dead around 6:45 a.m.

Carnival Cruise Line's Sensation was returning to port from a seven-day western Caribbean cruise when Hepner got into an argument with his girlfriend, Rebecca Brown of Lowell, Ind., Durkin said.

As Hepner lowered himself over the side of the ship, Brown, 19, pleaded with him to return, but Hepner could not, Durkin said. Brown left to get help and returned with two crew members, only to find Hepner clinging to the ship with his fingertips. Before he could be rescued, he fell into the bay at about 3 a.m.

The crew stopped the ship and launched a lifeboat, Durkin said. The Coast Guard, contacted by the ship, sent a rescue boat and the helicopter, which found Hepner floating face down around four life rings, Coast Guard officials said.

UI provost finalist for president at Kentucky

■ The UI provost is one of three finalists for the president's job at the University of Kentucky.

By Ryan Foley
The Daily Iowan

The UI's chief academic officer may be named the leader of one of the nation's quickly improving research universities.

UI provost Jon Whitmore, who has been at the UI since 1996, is one of three finalists for the president's job at the University of Kentucky in Lexington. On Thursday, Whitmore will meet with UK faculty, staff and students for his final interview.

"There are two sides to this kind of interview," said Whitmore, 55. "I want to find out as much about the university as I can, and they want to find out about me. ... It will be a real opportunity both ways."

Benefits of the job

Whitmore said he found the job attractive for a number of reasons. By 2020, UK's goal is to be a top-20 research school. Approximately 31,000 students attend UK, whose total operating budget this year exceeds $1.2 billion.

"Kentucky Gov. (George) Patton has made higher education his top priority over the past few years," Whitmore said. "On top of that, the university has very successful fund-raising efforts ($600 million this year) ... Those elements were kind of what made this job particularly interesting."

On a more personal level, Whitmore's wife's parents live in West Virginia, which borders Kentucky.

UI President Mary Sue Coleman, who spent 19 years as a member of the UK faculty in the biochemistry department, nominated Whitmore for the job.

"It's an institution that's trying to get better, and (Whitmore) has a good reputation of making institutions better," Coleman said Monday. "Kentucky's had a number of good things happen to it over the past few years."

Coleman noted that the university recently built a new library and is increasing its amount of research annually.

Whitmore, who has held administrative positions at the University of Texas and the State University of New York at Buffalo, said becoming a university president is one of the only moves he could make in his career at this point.

The only other possible move, he said, would be to rejoin the teaching and research faculty in some capacity.

"(Being a provost) is a pretty common route to becoming a president," said Coleman, who also took that route.

About the candidates

UK's Board of Trustees is expected to announce its choice for president at a special meeting next Tuesday.

Whitmore's academic background is in theater history. He has a Ph.D. in dramatic arts from the University of California, Santa Barbara, has directed more than 60 performances, and has focused his research on the dramatic writings of William Saroyan.

The other two finalists are:

- Lee T. Todd Jr., the senior vice president of messaging and collaboration for the Lotus Development Corp. Todd, a faculty member at UK from 1974-1983, holds a Ph.D. in electrical engineering from Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

- Gregory Geoffroy, provost and the senior vice president for academic affairs at the University of Maryland. Geoffroy, who has a Ph.D. in chemistry, is also one of five finalists for the president's job at Iowa State University. The finalists were announced last week.

Should Whitmore be selected, Coleman said, the UI would conduct a nationwide search for his replacement.

The southwest wing of Seashore hall was demolished during Winter Break because the UI feared it might collapse under heavy snow.

Seashore Hall loses wing

■ The Seashore Hall renovation project should be completed in April.

By Kellie Doyle
The Daily Iowan

A portion of historic UI building Seashore Hall was demolished on Dec. 18 because of fears the wood trusses supporting the roof would not be sturdy enough to survive heavy amounts of snow and strong winter winds.

The southwest wing, which was built in 1899 as part of the original university hospital, was torn down just a few days after UI students began their winter vacations.

"We waited until Christmas break so there would be fewer students around. There's a lot of student traffic in that area," said Gary Nagle, a UI architect and the project manager of the renovation.

A 1999 evaluation of the 102-year-old Seashore Hall concluded that the southwest portion of the building, which faces Iowa Avenue, was experiencing some structural deficiencies because of aging and deterioration, he said.

Students and faculty of the UI art and sociology departments and the journalism school, which were once housed in the wing, were forced to relocate for safety reasons. The wing was emptied by November 1999.

Rather than completely rebuilding the southwest wing, a project that Nagle said would be too costly, the UI decided to tear the section down. A large hole in the ground now marks the former location of the wing. Plastic sheets are acting as temporary walls for the south end of the building.

After workers grade the area around the hole, a walkway leading to a new, handicapped-accessible entrance will be installed on the south end. As soon as the weather improves, the south face will be constructed to match the rest of the building as well as possible, Nagle said.

The expected completion date of the $200,000 project is mid-April, he said.

Jeff Smith, a UI journalism professor who has an office on the west end of the building said that while entering the building is more of an obstacle, he is more upset that the wing has been demolished.

"It's sad to lose a historic structure, but that part of the building was no longer functional," he said. "It had outlived its usefulness."

UI sophomore's death shocks family

■ The woman's mother said her death was caused by a blood clot.

By Vanessa Miller
The Daily Iowan

Family and friends of a UI sophomore are mourning the sudden death of a young woman who wished to devote her life to educating children.

Elizabeth Marlin, a 20-year-old English-education major, died suddenly after a blood clot moved from her leg to her lungs while at home in Keokuk.

Although autopsy reports are not completed, Marlin's mother, Patricia Marlin, said she believes her daughter's blood clot was a side effect of a birth-control medicine, Ortho Tri-Cyclen. Marlin received the pills from an Iowa City physician three months ago.

"I started reading up about the pill and found out that five out of the 10 symptoms of the pill, such as headaches, chest pains, and blood clots fit Elizabeth," Patricia Marlin said. "I was unaware of these symptoms, but when I read that I was like, 'Oh, my Gosh!'"

Elizabeth Marlin had felt ill all day on Dec. 21 and had paid a visit to a physician after blacking out. The doctor performed a complete check up but found nothing, saying she was most likely lacking iron and needed rest.

Elizabeth Marlin followed the doctor's orders and then decided to go to the late movie with her mother that evening.

After seeing What Women Want at a local theater Marlin stopped to talk with a friend in the lobby. During their conversation, Elizabeth Marlin experienced a 20-second seizure.

They immediately called an ambulance, and her daughter arrived at the hospital around midnight, Patricia Marlin said. Elizabeth Marlin continued to have seizures while the doctors took X-rays.

"I had gotten to be in the room for the whole thing, but then they asked me if I could step behind the curtain," Patricia Marlin said. "When that happened, I thought that she was going to be OK. I thought that she was just going to be checked in for the rest of the night. Then the doctors and nurses stepped out and told me that they had tried CPR for 25 minutes but they just couldn't save her. I was just shocked."

Elizabeth Marlin's boyfriend, Allen Carter, 20, also a UI student, received the news of her death on the following morning.

Carter traveled to Keokuk and spent Christmas Eve and Christmas with the Marlin family.

"The thing that I will remember most about her is just how sweet and kind she was," Carter said. "She had so many friends, and she was just unbelievably nice to everyone."

Carole Whalen, Elizabeth Marlin's former boss, said her relationship with her was not typical of most boss-employee relations.

"There is a 15-year age difference between us," Whalen said. "But when we were together, she made me feel like I was her age. She was just a great friend, and I will really miss her."

Elizabeth Marlin is survived by her mother, her father, Danny Marlin, and two brothers, Nicholas Marlin, 9, and David Marlin, 5.

"Elizabeth loved kids," Patricia Marlin said. "In the fall, when there were lots of leaves on the ground, she would always take her brothers and her cousins out to rake them into these huge piles. She was a free spirit, and she always had fun with life."

Regents bump up fees

■ Non-music majors will see the largest increase — 66.7 percent for private lessons.

By Mary Sedor
The Daily Iowan

During a telephone conference Wednesday, the state of Iowa Board of Regents is expected to approve 12 fee increases that will affect UI students during the 2001-02 school year.

The action will raise tuition-based fees and non-tuition fees for students using such services as Orientation and M.B.A. correspondence courses.

The UI also proposed three new fees, including a $40 fee for international students and scholars per semester and an additional $20 fee during the summer. The university would also like to implement a $300 early registration fee for students in the Masters of Physical Therapy program.

Students are expected to pay only the fees that apply to them, depending on their program and interests.

While most of the increases are less than 10 percent, non-music majors receiving private lessons in one course will face a 66.7 percent increase — from $90 to $150.

UI Student Government Vice President Chris Linn said the increases are not surprising.

"I don't think the increases are high because many of these fees haven't been raised in the past five years," he said. "If we felt the increase was not justified, we would do our best to dissuade the regents."

In response to the music fee, Linn said the increase will help to make the cost the same for majors and non-majors. In the past, non-majors paid less for private lessons.

"The board typically acts on certain fees in January. Several are automatically increased based on tuition, others are based on the cost of services," said Doug True, the UI vice president for Finance.

"The increase is very straightforward; there are no surprises here," he said.

State gov't posts 9.8% job growth

DES MOINES — State government had 20,246 full-time workers at the end of the last budget year, a 9.8 percent growth over six years, a new report showed Monday.

Most of the increase was driven by the state's boom in prison construction, with fully 65 percent of the new state employees working for the Department of Corrections.

Faced with a jammed and aging system, officials have approved three new prisons in recent years and the last of those is being completed in Fort Dodge. The state is beginning to pay the operational tab.

The new report comes from the state's Department of Personnel and takes a statistical look at the state work force. The state's Board of Regents institutions aren't included in the total, which would roughly double that number and make state government the largest employer in Iowa.

The Department of Personnel doesn't keep track of those Regents workers, but did point to some significant growth and looming challenges for state government. In addition to full-time workers, there are 1,809 temporary and part-time workers on state government payroll. That tally was made for the budget year that ended last summer, the report said.

Sixty percent of those workers are in three giant departments — the Department of Human Services, Department of Transportation and Corrections Department. The DHS is the largest agency, with 27 percent of all the state's workers.

UIHC appeals rights charge

■ The hospital has been accused of violating the hospital-employee union's rights.

By Peter Rugg
The Daily Iowan

The UI Hospitals and Clinics has appealed two cases that the Service Employees International Union, Local 199, had won.

Both deal with the UIHC's alleged violation of the union's rights. One case regards the distribution of union literature; the other deals with dietitian Marjorie Caruth's claim that she was discriminated against.

Caruth's complaint listed instances in which she believed the UIHC had discriminated against her for involvement in the organization of Local 199. The case was decided in Caruth's favor, and the UIHC was ordered to cease any discriminatory action and to post a public notice stating that it performed illegal acts for 45 days.

The appeal, filed on Jan. 8, states that the judge was biased against the UIHC and also requests a new evidentiary hearing to review testimony and evidence that hospital officials believe was either suppressed or unreliable.

"We felt the judge ignored a lot of information that was valuable to our case," said John Staley, the UIHC associate director.

Caruth said she believes the appeal is another example of the UIHC refusing to cooperate with the union.

"They don't seem to get the message that they have to work with us, and until they do, we're going to have problems working together," she said. "I don't think there's any way they'll win."

The UIHC is also appealing a decision regarding union complaints that its right to distribute literature had been violated. The Local 199 had only been allowed to provide union literature in the hospital cafeteria during the hours it was closed to patients and visitors. An administrative law judge ordered that the union would be allowed to provide literature without interference.

The judge's decision does not provide the necessary safeguards for patients and visitors, Staley said.

"The proposed decision doesn't specify how it should be carried out," he said. "There are a lot of people coming in and out of the hospital, and we want to make sure they can come and go unhampered."

The UIHC is also seeking a new evidentiary hearing in this case.

Although it will follow through with the appeal process if necessary, the UIHC would prefer to hold a meeting with the union to agree on a compromise, Staley said.

"We will contact the union to try to reach a settlement," he said. "We'd like to see all of this settled as amicably as possible so we can go on to more important things together."

Kim Miller, the union's executive director, said he would meet with UIHC representatives but questions what they could offer.

"The decisions suggested such basic things I can't imagine them doing anything less that would still acknowledge our rights," he said.

While the UIHC and the Local 199 still need to resolve their legal issues, Staley does not expect that there will be problems in the future.

"I think we'll be working on all fronts in a very collaborative and appropriate effort," he said.

Hilltop open after Sunday morning fire

A fire at a local bar Sunday morning caused minimal damage to the establishment but did force a tenant from his apartment.

Firefighters arrived at the Hilltop Lounge, 1100 N. Dodge St., around 9:25 a.m. after owner Linda Kuncel saw smoke in the kitchen area. The bar is not open on Sundays; Kuncel was there handling some office work.

Iowa City fire officials estimated damages to the building at $5,000, mainly in the vicinity of the kitchen. Smoke and water damage did not contribute to the damage, the officials said.

Bartender Gayle Dull said the fire originated in an old exhaust fan that no current employees knew existed. A new exhaust fan had been installed with all new wiring recently, so the fire was hard to predict.

"We are just lucky that (the owner) was here at the time and that damages were held to a minimum," she said.

Because of the two-story building's wood-framed structure, which contains open walls extending from floor to ceiling, firefighters had to cut into the walls at four locations to determine if the fire was spreading to places they could not see. One of the locations led to the bedroom of Brian Cardwell — a tenant in an apartment connected to the bar.

Dull said that Cardwell, whose apartment was on the ground floor, is expected to move back in this week. The two tenants housed on the second floor were not evacuated.

ment of minority voters lies in the concept of "civil death," she said. "This death comes in the form of physical extermination (the death penalty) and legal blockage (the denial of the civil right to vote to incarcerated persons)." "In no other country that considers itself a democracy are convicted felons who've served their sentences banished from politics for the rest of their lives," Davis said.

The University of California-Santa Cruz professor also claimed "punishment in this country has been racialized" as a result of the lack of access minority groups have to education and other social tools, citing the fact that 400,000 black men in Florida alone have suffered the "civil death" of losing the right to vote — the right King once dubbed "civil right number one."

Davis called for the abolition of the death penalty as a step toward racial equality.

Brigette Robinson, who graduated from the UI in 1995, said she liked Davis' speech, but didn't agree that capital punishment should be fully abolished.

"Certain cases need to be looked at again," Robinson said. "But there are cases where the death penalty makes sense."

Despite the often grim tone of her speech, Davis said she still sees hope for younger and older activists alike.

"The failure to clearly elect a president here has carved out a political space we should use and fill with our own demands," Davis said. "This is the best way to celebrate the legacy of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr."

Anti-integration group protests MLK Day

The National Alliance, a West Virginia-based anti-integration organization that has received criticism for distributing pro-segregation pamphlets on the UI campus, had plans to celebrate Martin Luther King Jr. Day in an unusual manner.

In a letter sent to The Daily Iowan, an alleged National Alliance member stated that an enclosed anti-King leaflet was something that "other members of the group (were) considering passing out probably for MLK Day."

The fliers, which contain a speech given by King-critic Kevin Alfred Strom, suggest that King plagiarized many of his writings and that he had communist involvement.

Although the National Alliance was unable to be reached for confirmation of its plans to pass out the anti-King literature, many Iowa City residents and students were upset by the idea of its distribution.

Iowa City resident Deborah Juarez said she felt it was too bad that groups like the National Alliance felt the need to pass out such pamphlets.

"We all have prejudices, but we can learn to control them," Juarez commented.

Juarez said she thinks that it's the National Alliance's own prerogative to pass out leaflets, but she said she thinks that people who think King should be honored will not be deterred by groups like these.

"I think when it comes down to it, those people who think Martin Luther King Jr. is important will honor him in their heart," she said.

UI freshman Bill Latham also said that the National Alliance should be allowed to hand out its literature.

"A part of free speech is also speech that you don't like comes with it," he said.

"But people won't pay attention to the literature," he said, "because they have a pretty good grip about what's right and what's not."

Dan Stalkfleet, a UI freshman, said that people might be mildly persuaded because "it's stuff people don't see on an everyday basis."

Iowa City resident Jerome Reeves also said he thought it was important that King should be honored for his accomplishments.

"I think the man did more than (all) the presidents before him," Reeves said.

EARTHQUAKE

Six other people were killed in neighboring Guatemala, and three more were feared dead.

With nearly 5,000 houses destroyed and tens of thousands more damaged in El Salvador, many people were living with relatives or in shelters.

Others who still had homes lacked basic services. Water service was cut to as many as half of the country's 6 million people, the Pan-American Health Organization said.

The World Food Program began distributing food to 13,000 people and had enough to last two weeks. Officials planned to seek more donations.

Aftershocks continued to rock the country on Monday, frightening residents and knocking more debris onto highways. Many towns were reachable only by helicopter, and little was known about damage or deaths in isolated communities.

Hawks hold strong in Big Ten conference

"Any road game in the Big Ten is difficult," said Iowa City resident George Herbert. "They've had two big road wins at Penn State and at Purdue already, so hopefully that streak can continue tonight."

Herbert, a Hawk fan as well as the manager of the IMU bookstore, said it's too early to tell whether the Hawks' success has increased the sales of UI merchandise. Most of the Hawks' early success came over Winter Break, when most students weren't in town, he said.

Continued Hawkeye success will translate to more sales of merchandise as well as savings for customers. Every Monday after Hawks' Saturday home games, the bookstore will offer a "3 for 3" promotion, meaning that for every three point basket the team hits during the game, Hawkeye apparel will be 3 percent off.

"If the success continues as the Big Ten season goes on, not only will we benefit in sales, but the whole campus will be excited," Herbert said.

UI President Mary Sue Coleman went to Hawaii to watch the team play in the Rainbow Classic over break. She said that was an important point in the young season, when the team rebounded from a loss at Kansas State to go 2-1 in the tournament and finish in third place.

Tonight's game will be broadcast on ESPN at 6 p.m.

Council takes up alcohol-regulation ordinance

Exceptions to the rule may occur, Dilkes wrote in the memo. For example, pitchers, carafes or bottles could be served to more than one person at a time during a meal. The council will have the opportunity to decide which exceptions are appropriate, Dilkes said.

The ordinance would also make it a city offense for a person under the legal age to purchase, attempt to purchase, or be in possession of any alcoholic beverage at any time. A first offense would be a simple misdemeanor punishable by up to $100. A second offense would be punishable by a fine of $200 and a suspension of the person's motor-vehicle operating privileges for less than one year. Community service work or more fines may also be included. Selling any alcoholic beverages to persons under the legal age would also fall under a simple misdemeanor with a fine of $500 for the establishment. The licensee would not be guilty of selling to a minor if the employee of a person holding a liquor license made a reasonable inquiry to determine whether the prospective purchaser was over the legal age.

The council is expected to pose questions and share opinions at tonight's meeting.

"My guess is that there will be some objections," said Iowa City Mayor Ernie Lehman. "But if there's interest in pursuing it, then we will."

There is no public hearing scheduled at this time; the council will hold one in the near future, he said.

UI Student Government President Andy Stoll said he encourages student input at public hearings in the future.

"Dialogue and communication is important to ensure that all get what they want," he said.

A week-long online student alcohol survey on ISIS is scheduled to begin Thursday. The survey will analyze student opinions about the perceived alcohol problem in Iowa City. The results will be presented at a public forum.

MTV will invade Iowa City to host auditions for 'The Real World'

■ One cast member could be a UI student.

By Anne Webbeking
The Daily Iowan

UI junior Lisa Kotara has thought about trying out for MTV's "The Real World" for years, and on Jan. 31 she hopes to get a chance — right after her morning classes.

"The Real World" auditions are expected to be in Iowa City all day on Jan. 31. Although an exact venue has not been set, Bunim-Murray Productions, the company that produces "The Real World," plans to have the auditions at a local bar, said Jason Horowitz, the show's casting coordinator.

The Union Bar, 121 E. College St., is one option that producers are looking at. Union Bar manager Jim Pohl said that he is excited about the possibility that the show might be coming. He said he plans to provide food and games while people are waiting to audition.

Pohl and other local bars will find out within days whether their bar will host the event.

Meanwhile, Kotara, who is "super-stoked" for the auditions, will be getting herself ready. She said she plans to think of all the crazy stories in her life and have them ready for the auditions.

"You just have to be yourself," Kotara said. "I plan to go to have a rational, intelligent and humorous conversation that shows who I am and not act like the screaming idiots on TRL (Total Request Live)."

UI senior Marisa Sullivan will not be trying out on Jan. 31. She is leaving for France that day, and even though she wouldn't mind being on "The Real World," she is not disappointed. She already had her opportunity with MTV when she was a finalist in MTV's second Wanna Be a VJ Contest two years ago, and she said she is moving on to bigger and better things.

"My motto is: Been there, done that," Sullivan said.

Sullivan said that the opportunity changed her life, though. Because she was in the contest, she realized her potential in the field of acting. She is now taking a break from school and after coming back from France, she plans to go to Los Angeles to pursue her acting career.

Bitter cold, snow don't worry officials

■ A record-breaking winter may melt into history without any ill-effects.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

The effects of this winter's record-breaking snowfall and bitter temperatures aren't disappearing just yet.

Iowa City has spent approximately $88,000 so far this winter on 2,000 tons of salt and 8,000 tons of sand to combat the snow, said Bud Stockman, the city's superintendent of streets. The supplies he ordered have just been sufficient, he said.

"The month of December was pretty rough," Stockman said. "I'm hoping for a mild rest of winter."

City workers have collected a 300-by-300-by-20 foot heap of snow this winter, he said. The snow is piled in a lot at 1200 S. Riverside Drive.

"I've had worse winters than this one," Stockman said.

There were few problems with the city's winter services, Iowa City resident Alfonso Orbegoso said. Depending on housemates to clear the sidewalks was less successful, he said.

"I live in a house with 10 people, and sometimes I have to shovel even though I have a bad back," Orbegoso said. "It's the same with another guy in the house. He has a bad back, too."

Temperatures in Iowa City dipped to an average of 14 degrees Fahrenheit, just half a degree from breaking the record for the city's coldest

Zach Boyden-Holmes/The Daily Iowan

An ARS Inc. truck dumps excess snow from the downtown area at a city lot on Riverside Drive, Sunday night.

December. The record was set in December 1983.

The state's average snowfall for this winter reached 27.4 inches, beating the previous mark of 20.9 inches set in 1909.

December was the second coldest December in Iowa history, with an average temperature of 10.3 degrees Fahrenheit. Twenty-five inches of snow fell in Iowa during the month, making it the snowiest month ever for the state. The previous mark — 22.2 inches — was set in February 1962.

Winter's effect on spring is difficult to predict with accuracy, say weather officials.

Snowfall in February and March will affect spring flooding the most, said state climatologist Harry Hillaker.

"The potential for flooding right now isn't that great," he said.

Low water levels in Iowa rivers prior to winter may reduce flooding come spring, said Ross Harrison, a spokesperson for the Iowa State Department of Natural Resources.

The state has experienced mild weather since early January. The warming may melt enough snow to prevent a sudden spring thaw that could result in flash flooding, Hillaker said.

"It's just not as bad as it looks," said Bob Libra, a DNR spokesperson.

The bitter December temperatures resulted in dry, fluffy snow that holds less liquid than snowfall in past years, he said.

Hillaker predicted that the state has seen most of the snowfall it will receive this winter even though 60 percent of the snow season remains.

Frigid weather ups natural-gas prices

■ Some rents may rise because of this winter's high heating costs.

By Natasha Lambropoulos
The Daily Iowan

Record low temperatures in Iowa this winter are helping to push up the cost of utility bills, which were already high because of an increase in natural-gas prices.

The cost of natural gas has doubled — and in some cases tripled — this winter, a MidAmerican Energy official said.

"It's the highest we've seen," said Terry Smith, the manager of the company's Iowa City operations. The price of natural gas went from 39 cents per therm in November 1999 to $1.05 this month.

"The bitterly cold month of December caused the prices to spike. But as use decreases, prices will decrease," he said.

One person who can't wait for that is UI sophomore Brooke Stout, who was shocked this month when the heating cost for her two-bedroom apartment doubled — from $60 to $120.

"It's been a real burden. We practically had to rob from our savings to cover it," she said.

Ted Chambers, the owner of the Chambers Agency, who has been in the property-management business since 1983, said he has never seen such an increase in natural-gas prices.

The increase could result in higher rent prices in August for tenants who do not pay individual heating costs, he said.

Chambers estimates that the natural-gas price increase, in conjunction with a boost in property taxes, will result in a $25 per bedroom raise for tenants whose heating cost is included in the rent.

The natural-gas shortage this winter is primarily because of low supply and high demand, Smith said.

"In the past, we've had warmer winter weather and milder use of gas, causing the producers of gas in Texas to slow down and, in some cases, quit drilling," he said. "Now, fewer natural-gas sources are being added to the pool, and other suppliers are being removed, causing a shortage in gas."

Natural-gas producers are in the process of drilling new wells, Smith said. However, it could take 18 to 24 months for new gas supplies to reach the market, he said.

"We hope the prices will not continue to increase, but they will remain unseasonably high," Smith said.

In order to reduce energy bills, he recommended people set thermostats at 68 degrees Fahrenheit or less — for every degree set back, 2-3 percent can be saved on heating bills. He also recommended sealing windows and insulating rooms in addition to closing off unused rooms.

WORLD BRIEF

Palestinians offer amnesty to informants

JERUSALEM (AP) — Yasser Arafat's government Monday offered amnesty to suspected collaborators with Israel — an apparent attempt to blunt international outrage over executions of informants and thwart Israel's campaign of assassinating Palestinian militants.

Despite this shadowy war fought by the two sides, peace talks were to resume today, after a day's break called by Israel over the killing of a Jewish settler by Palestinians near his greenhouse in the Gaza Strip.

In response to the slaying, Israeli troops reimposed a tight blockade on the Gaza Strip, closing the Palestinians' international airport and border crossings. Troops blocked major roads, cutting the strip into three parts.

It's impossible to understand the fear that gripped the country during the 1962 Cuban missile crisis without having lived through it. You'll often hear those who did describe huddling around the TV to watch President Kennedy address the nation or scampering under their desks at school in preparation for a nuclear attack. I recall doing similar drills in grade school, except the only thing we were practicing for was the unlikely event of a tornado, an awfully mild threat in comparison to a war.

In Thirteen Days we get a glimpse of the country's terror — news footage of nearly bare grocery store shelves and kids performing the aforementioned drills — but the movie isn't as concerned with the common man as it is with those who are responsible for protecting him.

The story is told through the eyes of Special Assistant to President Kennedy Kenneth O'Donnell (Kevin Costner), who was Robert Kennedy's roommate at Harvard and one of JFK's most trusted friends. When reconnaissance photos reveal Soviet missiles just 90 miles off the coast of Florida, the president (Bruce Greenwood) and his advisers, including Attorney General Robert Kennedy (Steven Culp), must figure out how to get them out without starting a war. As RFK suggests, "We've got a bunch of smart people; we'll just lock them in a room until they come up with something."

The "hawks" — JFK's top military advisers — want an air strike followed by a full-scale invasion of Cuba. The "doves," including U.N. Ambassador Adlai Stevenson, recommend diplomacy. Ultimately, the doves win. JFK decides to impose a naval blockade on Cuba before eventually brokering a deal with Khrushchev that involves removing some obsolete U.S. missiles from Turkey.

For better or worse, movies based on actual events are always subject to intense scrutiny. Oliver Stone's 1991 movie JFK (which also starred Costner) is still reviled by many for its loose version of the truth.

Similarly, last year's T h e Hurricane was criticized for fabricating characters and manipulating facts. A recent article in Slate concluded that while Thirteen Days doesn't get every detail correct — as if that were possible — the movie doesn't try to rewrite history, either. First, the chronology of the crisis is sound. Second, the major characters are portrayed accurately, especially the Kennedy brothers.

The choice of O'Donnell as the movie's central character is somewhat perplexing, primarily because there is very little evidence to prove that he had any direct bearing on the crisis. But all agree that O'Donnell was as close to the Kennedys as the movie suggests, and screenwriter David Self doesn't overstate his presence during crisis deliberations, presenting him more as a fly on the wall, acting as the viewer's eyes and ears.

Despite a TV-movie style presentation and a few Hallmark-card lines of dialogue ("If the sun comes up tomorrow, it is only through the will of good men," O'Donnell explains at one point), director Roger Donaldson effectively captures the tension of the crisis without trying to manipulate his audience.

The tension comes from realizing that despite all the statistics and analysis, it's really just a bunch of human beings, with their egos and ambitions, deciding the fate of the world. Wisely, Donaldson doesn't resort to flag-waving and jingoism (think Armageddon); rather, he lets the drama speak for itself. What's more dramatic than the United States and the Soviet Union slouching toward nuclear war?

Perhaps the most chilling scene in the film occurs right after the missile sites have been discovered. As scheduled, the president makes a brief public appearance in Connecticut. We glimpse JFK, with Jackie by his side, waving to the crowd as his convertible glides slowly down the road. It's an eerie reminder of what is to come just more than a year later in Dallas. And Thirteen Days reminds us of the greatness that was lost.

Moore than just hot air

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Roger Moore, Hollywood's former James Bond, didn't need any gadgets fancier than an air bag to escape harm in a real-life car crash.

Moore, 73, and his Danish girlfriend, Christina Tholstrup, were being driven to a TV studio in Göteborg on Jan. 13 when another car collided with theirs. The air bags inflated, and no one was hurt.

Sex and the author

NEW YORK (AP) — Sex keeps selling for author Candace Bushnell.

Bushnell, creator of HBO's "Sex and the City," has signed a $1 million contract with Hyperion Books to write two novels about a hot-blooded, money-loving model, according to New York magazine.

The books will be based on her Janey character in her Four Blondes collection.

Bushnell's Sex and the City was a best-selling book before it became a TV series. The book was a collection of columns she had written for the New York Observer.

Classifying couples' commitment ...

Until death do us part?

Iowa couples may soon have the option of making their marriage a "covenant marriage" if the state Legislature passes a bill introduced last week. Choosing a covenant marriage would give couples the option of making a stronger commitment to their marriage and each other than is allowed by the current law.

The bill, introduced by Rep. Phil Tyrrell, R-North English, states that those choosing a covenant marriage should undergo premarital counseling and sign a declaration avowing that their marriage is a lifetime commitment. No-fault divorce laws would not apply to the two people, who would be allowed to divorce only in extreme circumstances, such as abuse, adultery, abandonment or separation without reconciliation for two years.

Iowa's covenant-marriage bill is part of a nationwide movement aimed at reducing the high U.S. divorce rate and its negative effect on families.

The government has no business judging that a divorce is right for one couple but wrong for another.

Louisiana passed a similar bill in 1997, Arizona followed suit in 1998, and such bills were narrowly defeated in several other states.

Louisiana and Arizona's covenant-marriage laws have failed to achieve their desired effect, however. Only 1 percent of couples in Louisiana took advantage of their covenant-marriage option in the year after the bill went into effect, and only 2-3 percent of couples do so now. Such low participation has no substantial effect on the divorce rate.

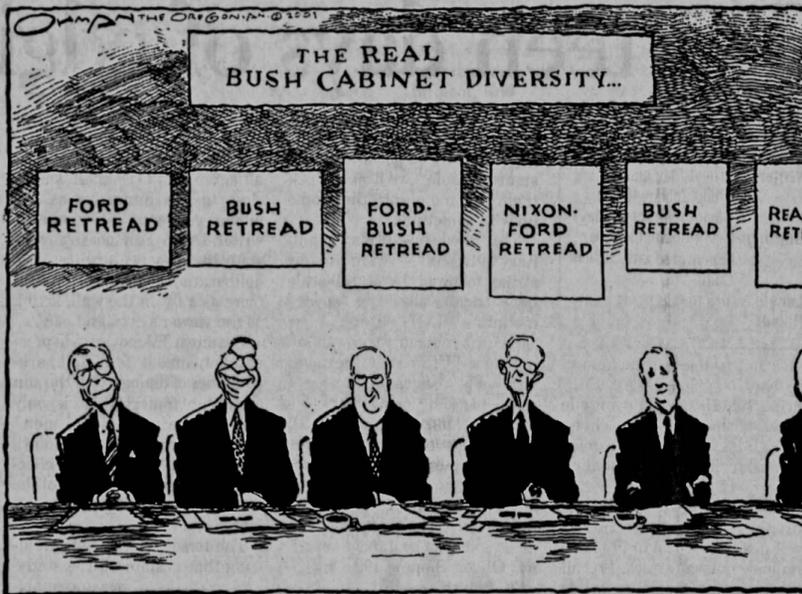

Such bills aren't only ineffective, they're unnecessary. Couples are free to make any level of commitment to their marriage and one another that they choose. They can choose to dissolve their marriage for whatever reason, or they can do the opposite and choose to stick it out, not taking advantage of a no-fault divorce. The state government's option of covenant marriage is superfluous.

It's also inappropriate for the state to categorize a married couple's level of commitment, which is by nature a highly personal topic. The government has no business judging that a divorce is right for one couple but wrong for another. Such matters as reasons for divorce should be left to couples; the government should grant marriages and divorces with no questions asked.

Increasing couples' level of marital commitment and reducing the divorce rate may be a noble cause, but it's one best left to individuals and groups other than the government. A covenant-marriage bill for these purposes would be an inappropriate and unnecessary government intrusion into couples' private lives.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Former legislator's legacy misrepresented by Doderer

After reading Minnette Doderer's comments about my grandfather in the Dec. 14 DI ("Last hurrah begins for local legislator"), I felt compelled to write. I have very different memories of my grandfather, D.C. Nolan. He was not a man who exaggerated his masculinity! On the contrary, he was always a gentleman, kind and clearly spoken. I know that he was well-respected among his colleagues in Iowa and throughout the country. I have met many of them.

I found Doderer's sarcastic remarks such as "poor dear" and "keep from crying" very insulting. Maybe, like Doderer, he wanted to do something out of the ordinary and thought his congratulations would be better served on paper. I'm sure he wasn't "crushed" after his defeat by her or anyone else.

My grandfather was an honorable man. He left behind generations of women, daughters and granddaughters who have contributed many "firsts" among women in public and private lives. He married a woman who graduated with a degree in history before most women even thought about higher education. His eldest daughter was the second woman assistant attorney general in the state of Iowa, and the list goes on and on. All of us would agree that we had his full support and encouragement. Doderer calls him "macho"; obviously, she did not know him.

Life and death are in the power of our words. What poor taste to speak of a man who has been deceased for more than 30 years!

Cloning in Iowa ...

More than meats the eye

On Jan. 8, an animal was born. However, this animal was not born in an open field or barn but in a lab in Sioux Center, Iowa. The animal was not a miracle of nature but the work of scientists.

The animal, a rare breed of ox called an Asian gaur, was cloned and gestated in the womb of a domestic cow. Noah, as the gaur was called, was created by extracting a single cell of a dead gaur. It was then implanted into a cow's egg, which had been stripped of its DNA prior to the implant to ensure that the interspecies pregnancy produced a full-bred gaur and not a mix of the two species. The cow carried Noah to term and gave birth without any complications.

Asian gaurs are an endangered species, and much of the science world was thrilled at the success of the birth. However, Noah died from common dysentery only two days after he was born. Scientists are sure that the gaur's death was not a result of cloning or gestation, but it is doubtful whether those same assurances can be made in future cases.

What once seemed like a far-off science-fiction fantasy has now become a reality

One of the motivations for the cloning of Noah, and the others like him that will undoubtedly follow, is to replenish endangered or extinct species. But it seems that scientists are overlooking one of the main reasons such animals become endangered or extinct in the first place. Gary Comstock, the director of Iowa State University's Bioethics Program, said, "If the environment changes, the newly cloned animals may lead miserable lives ... they can't live here anymore — that's why they are extinct." If animals are reintroduced into climates or environments they aren't accustomed to, the consequences could not be predicted.

Other critics worry that cloning of endangered species would belittle the efforts to conserve existing bio-diverse habitats by offering a small solution to a great problem.

What once seemed like a far-off science-fiction fantasy has now become a reality. Cloning seems very appealing scientifically and very frightening ethically. One can only hope that science can abide within the boundaries of ethics.

Glaciation meets fraudulency in the brave new White House

So here we all are, back again, just as if nothing had ever happened.

Of course, some of us never left; we stuck around for the glaciation of Iowa City. All in all, we'd have to report, it seemed to involve a fair amount of ice and snow.

Then there was some wind chill. Then, just for something different, there was some snow and ice.

It was pretty exciting for awhile. For about three weeks, we thought Minnesota had moved in, even though nobody could recall inviting it. As the snow drifts built up to Duluth proportions, people began saying, Yah, sure. And, OK, you bet. It was like living in a Coen brothers movie, only without the snappy dialogue.

But it's not really as if nothing has happened.

For one thing, minor though it might seem, Supreme Court-appointed President Shrubya is about to take office.

Yes, I know, when we last talked, it seemed as if that Florida thing was going to go on forever. You couldn't really call it an election; it was a lot more like a made-for-TV event. Kind of like "Dynasty" or "Dallas," only without the snappy dialogue.

But the Supreme Court tired of it, which is understandable, because some of those guys are getting old and they wanted a Republican (a real Republican, not an Al Gore moderate-type Republican) to name their replacements. Presto, whizzo, we have his Fraudulency about to be installed in the White House.

But, of course, that's exactly what you'd expect from a court packed with guys picked by his Shrubness' daddy and the man under whom his daddy served as vice president.

There's one good thing you can say about the outcome of — well, you can't really call it an election. Slobodan Milosevic has been known to run something closer to an election. Obviously, he's no longer in power.

There's one good thing you can say about the outcome of the selection: At least for the next four years, we won't have to worry about Al Gore-rhythms.

Of course, we don't have to worry about any other high-tech thinking in the West Wing, either.

In that vein, it's been fun to watch his Fraudulency pick his Cabinet. Especially Linda Chavez.

Oh, yeah, I know; it's just because of a technicality that's she's toast. When newly elected President Clinton's first two picks for attorney general were shot down because of a

"nanny problem," it was because they broke the law. When Chavez does something similar, it's a technicality.

Kind of like it was just a technicality that Republican absentee voters got preferential — and potentially illegal — treatment in Florida's Seminole and Martin counties.

It's a funny thing about Republicans. When an accused person has her or his conviction overturned because the police violated, say, the Miranda warning, they say it's only because of a technicality that the person got off.

But when you accuse a Republican of violating the law, you're being hyper-technical.

If you don't believe this, see the Republican reaction to the allegations of voter irregularities in Seminole and Martin counties. Not to mention the Chavez affair.

In any case, it should be a fun four years. His Shrubness needs a brain, and the guy he picked to fill that task, Stealth President Dick Cheney, believes that Attila the Hun was a pinko-liberal softy.

And the guys Cheney picked to be the inner circle of his Fraudulency's advisers are from the most part retreats from the Shrub's daddy's administration. These are the guys who took one of the most popular presidents in history — in 1991, after the Gulf War — and turned him into the kind of tuna fish that an upstart governor from Arkansas could whip in 1992.

It'll be a fun ride, this party we call the 21st century. Except, of course, for the weather.

New Year's resolutions for the average American

It's a new year, and many people have chosen to mark the occasion by declaring resolutions by which to improve their lives.

You know — lose some weight, abandon junk food, or finally start up the Paula Abdul fan club that seemed like such a solid idea in 1990.

I've never been big on New Year's resolutions, for various reasons, but I decided to shake things up a bit this time around. By making a few resolutions and sticking to them, I figure, life in 2001 could be grand. So I recently set the following minor goals for the months ahead:

1. Become a high-ranking executive of a major company.

Have you noticed the kind of lifestyle that these people lead? Mansions, yachts, catered meals, front row seats, clout with the president and other tantalizing benefits come along with these types of jobs. Yes, I think, this could be the life for me. So I'm putting this quest for economic and political supremacy on my "to do" list for 2001.

2. Change my name.
One key to success is always to adopt a new moniker. Before becoming rich and famous, you see, many people first had to get people to acknowledge them as Snoop, The Rock, or M.C. Hammer. I need to do the same. Out with "Jesse," then, and in with Enrico or Zeus. The last name, as Madonna and Prince have proven, can be done without.

3. Put out my first album.

People who go by Zeus or other exotic names are seldom seen writing rinky-dink stories for college newspapers or working as telemarketers. With a fancy new name, my most logical option will be to entertain the masses. I'll need to release a CD this year, then, in order to showcase myself. This might be tricky, because I can neither sing nor play an instrument. But I'm confident that my foray into adult contemporary listening or gangster rap will be successful.

4. Join the NBA.

I was watching a game the other night, and it occurred to me that I could have a lot of fun playing professional basketball. The mind-blowing moves, the high-flying dunks, and the entourage of homeboys and beautiful women that the players all have are definitely things that I can work with. Of course, this means learning to play basketball with some amount of skill. But, hey, I own a pair of very baggy shorts, so I figure I'm about halfway there. Now it's just a matter of learning to dribble and finding a team that's interested in paying me millions of dollars to play for it.

5. Date Tyra Banks.

One thing I've noticed about these millionaire types is that they all seem to associate with gorgeous people. As a bored, single man with blossoming careers in the NBA, the music industry and the world of business ownership, this is something I'm going to have to look into. Tyra Banks should be expecting a call from me very soon, then, I think. Hmm. I wonder if she enjoys bowling ...

6. Star in a blockbuster movie.

Much like CEOs, pro basketball players and musicians, movie stars appear to achieve fame and fortune with minimal effort. Here, you just show up on the set, pronounce some words that you've been told to say, go home, and boom — there's 10 million bucks. What's even better, if you ask Jean-Claude Van Damme or any of the Wayans brothers, is that this job requires no discernible acting talent. It's easy money, baby, and I'm going to have to get in on that this year.

7. Fly on a space shuttle.

Hey, why not? So there we have it. If I can pull off a few of these resolutions, 2001 could definitely be my year. But first, I've got to go find a decent pair of basketball shoes.

Oliver, Peterson earn Big Ten honor

Two Iowa basketball players, Dean Oliver and Randi Peterson, are being honored by the Big Ten. Oliver shares player of the week honors with Michigan State's Jason Richardson. In victories over Illinois and Purdue last week, the senior from Mason City averaged 17.5 points and 5.5 assists.

Iowa narrows search for women's administrator

Iowa assistant Athletics Director Paula Jantz is one of four finalists for the job.

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

The UI has selected four finalists position of senior women's administrator. The on-campus interviewing process will conclude today with Jane Meyer, the director of educational outreach for the NCAA in Indianapolis. She has served in this capacity since June 1999. Prior to her responsibilities with the NCAA, she was associate director of athletics and assistant professor at the University of Wisconsin, LaCrosse, from 1993-99.

In-house candidate Paula Jantz is also on the finalists' list. The current UI associate athletics director has been a part of the athletics program since 1988, serving under former women's Athletics Director Christine Grant as assistant director of women's athletics from 1988-94 before becoming associate women's athletic director in 1994.

The other two candidates under consideration are Calli Sanders and Betsy J. Mosher. Sanders is the senior associate athletics director at Montana State University. Her experience also includes a 1990-97 tenure as associate director of athletics at Alabama-Birmingham.

Mosher has been the senior associate athletics director at Arizona State since 1996. Prior to her time at ASU, she was an athletics administrator at Northwestern and a legislative assistant to the Big Ten Conference and a compliance representative for the NCAA.

"We've interviewed four candidates, and all four candidates have done a nice job and have significant experience in collegiate athletics," said UI Athletics Director Bob Bowsby. "We're not surprised that there is a high level of interest. This is a high-profile job in one of the premier conferences in the country."

The senior women's administrator position was created following Grant's retirement this summer and the subsequent merging of the men's and women's Athletics Departments.

The selected candidate will serve under Bowsby, providing leadership to both the men's and women's athletics programs.

While Bowsby said he is not on the search committee, he is involved in the interviewing process. He said the process for all four candidates included such things as a tour of the campus and meetings with him, the Athletics Board and an open session with staff and student-athletes.

He said Iowa is looking for somebody with a variety of experiences and abilities. The committee would like to have the search completed as soon as possible, but, Bowsby said, a time table would not dictate the filling of the position.

It is possible other candidates may interview. Bowsby said the priority is finding the best person for the position.

Fast out of the gate

Iowa will put its undefeated Big Ten record on the line against Wisconsin tonight.

By Todd Brommelkamp
 The Daily Iowan

It may be the first day of spring-semester classes on the UI campus, but the Iowa men's basketball team has been schooling its competition for the last several weeks.

The learning process continues for Steve Alford's No. 14 Hawkeyes tonight, when they travel to Madison to take on the No. 19 Wisconsin Badgers. Tip-off is scheduled for 6:05 at the Kohl Center, and the game will be broadcast nationally on ESPN.

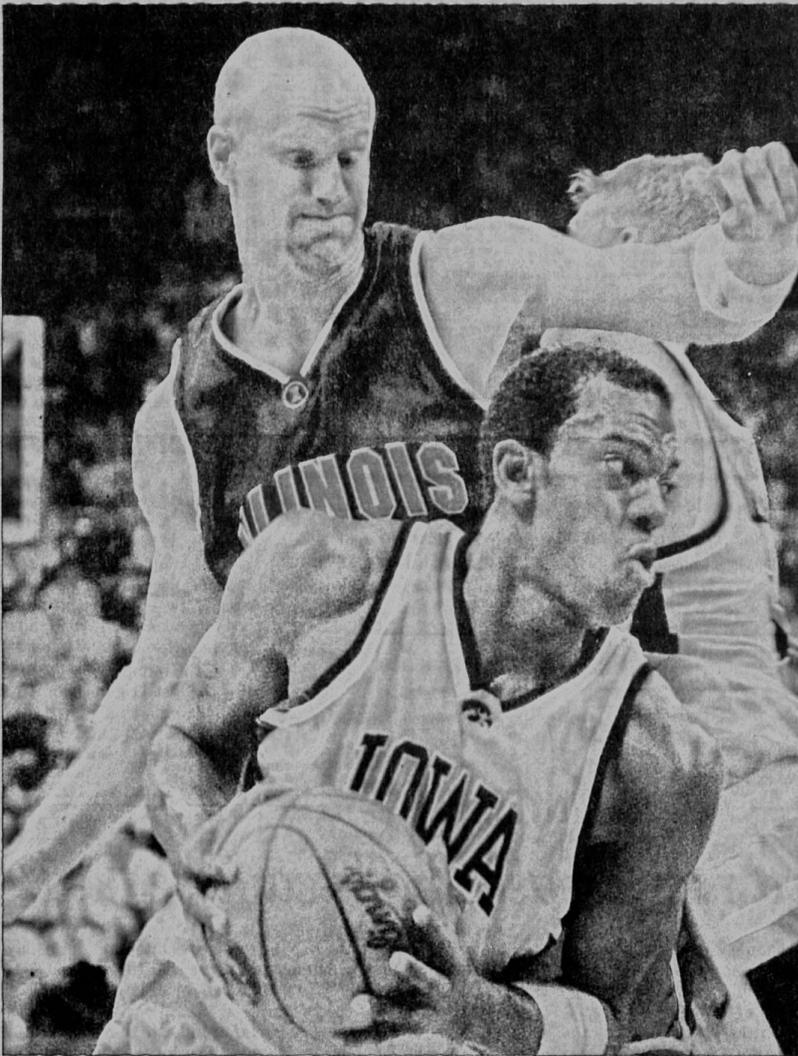

"It's going to be highly competitive," Alford said. "On any given night, anyone can compete and anyone can win."

The Badgers are living proof of Alford's statement, nearly defeating defending national champion Michigan State on the road on Jan. 13 before falling in overtime. Iowa also knows the Big Ten is wide open after knocking off No. 7 Illinois in Iowa City on Jan. 11.

Alford also knows that despite his team's lofty new ranking, tonight's opponent is no pushover. This is, after all, the same Wisconsin team that fell one game short of playing in the NCAA Championship game a year ago.

However, things are different on the Wisconsin campus since the Final Four appearance. Gone is fiery head coach Dick Bennett, who retired just a few weeks into the season. He was replaced by former

Hawkeyes hit stride with win over Badgers

The Iowa women's basketball team defeats Wisconsin to improve to 8-7 on the season.

Randi Peterson caught some of the Iowa men's basketball action recently and noticed how important rebounding was to the success of her peers.

However, the senior from Cedar Falls said she knew rebounding was a strong part of her game and just needed to get her numbers back up.

So before a Carver-Hawkeye Arena crowd of more than 5,000 Sunday, she out-hustled, out-ran and out-jumped Wisconsin players many inches taller than her, pushing the Hawkeyes to an impressive 74-68 win against the Badgers.

"Our men's team really rebounds hard, and that's just about heart and determination," Peterson said. "So, I just had my mind set out there."

Her attitude turned into her best game of the season statistically. On Sunday, she recorded season-high's in points (19), rebounds (15), assists (6), blocks (2) and steals (4). For her efforts she was also rewarded by the conference, receiving co-Big Ten Player of the Week honors Monday along with Illinois' Dawn

Vana.

Despite having a week off before Sunday's game, the Hawkeyes came out sharp, establishing a 13-7 lead nearly four minutes into the contest. Wisconsin's strong inside presence, led by junior Jessie Stomski, began cutting into Iowa's lead, and with nearly 11 minutes remaining in the first half, the Big Ten battle really began.

The Hawkeyes and Badgers traded the lead four times in a little more than 10 minutes before Iowa senior guard Cara Consuegra laid the ball in off the glass with 47 seconds left to send her team into the locker room with a 32-31 halftime advantage.

Peterson opened the second half with consecutive lay-ups, causing Wisconsin head coach Jane Albright to call a quick time-out. The Badgers responded with two easy lay-ins of their own, bringing

Hawkeyes steamroll wrestling foes

The No. 3 Iowa wrestling team outscores its opponents, 177-28, over Winter Break.

By Nick Firchau
 The Daily Iowan

The Iowa wrestling team used some new faces in place of three of the team's senior leaders on Sunday against Northwestern, but the 45-3 victory over the Wildcats was nothing unusual for the No. 3-ranked Hawkeyes in their first Big Ten dual meet of the season.

Redshirt freshmen Luke Eustice, Cliff Moore and Tyler Nixt all enjoyed victorious dual meet debuts in place of seniors Jody Strittmatter, Doug Schwab and Gabe McMahan, respectively. Strittmatter and Schwab sat out the meet in order to comply with the NCAA's regulations for matches in a season while head coach Jim Zalesky said Nixt gave McMahan a needed rest.

The NCAA limits wrestlers to 16 scheduled dates per season, and both Strittmatter's and Schwab's appearance in the Midlands Open on December 29-30 required them to sit out a meet to remain eligible.

"I thought they did really well," said Zalesky about the redshirt freshmen. "This gave them a chance to get some very good experience. Those guys have wrestled well in practice and in the room, and that translates to how they wrestle in competition. They all looked very good."

Iowa, (9-1 overall, 1-0 Big Ten) combined solid showings from Eustice, Moore and Nixt with typically strong performances from its veterans to earn the team's seventh road victory of the season. The Hawkeyes got pins from Eric Juergens, Mike Zadick, Jessman Smith and Ben Shirk and a 24-10 major decision from T.J. Williams to fuel the blowout win.

"We're wrestling well right now, we have a bunch of guys who have been picking it up since the break," said Zalesky. "Our leaders are wrestling well. Juergens, T.J., Shirk and McMahan have all been wrestling strong in the last month."

The win over the Wildcats served as the last strong showing of a successful month for the Hawkeyes, who competed in five matches over the semester break. The team ripped through a West Coast road trip with a 38-7 win at Fresno

Life minus Lewis could be bleak

■ The Ravens do not want to imagine how their season would have gone without Ray Lewis.

By David Ginsburg
Associated Press

OWINGS MILLS, Md.— The Baltimore Ravens shudder to think about it. They can't imagine what would have happened.

Ray Lewis could have missed this season, and then where would they have been? Probably not in the Super Bowl.

"Rather than being here right now," Ravens cornerback Duane Starks said, "Ray could have been sitting in a jail cell."

Instead, Lewis and his teammates spent Monday afternoon answering questions about the Ravens' improbable run to the NFL title game against the New York Giants on Jan. 28 in Tampa.

Baltimore almost certainly would not have gotten this far without their star middle linebacker, the heart and soul of the stingiest defense in NFL history over a 16-game season.

Less than a year ago, Lewis was charged in the stabbing deaths of two men outside an Atlanta nightclub after a Super Bowl party. The trial was well under way when Lewis pleaded guilty to misdemeanor obstruction of justice in exchange for his testimony against two co-defendants, who were acquitted.

Long before then, Starks and the Ravens were confident Lewis would be exonerated.

"I knew that he was innocent from the jump. Ray and I hang out all the time, and when there's trouble around, we get away," Starks said. "What they said happened, it wasn't possible for Ray to be there. I never gave it a second thought."

The justice system fulfilled the Ravens' confidence in their star player, and the rest is history. NFL history, that is.

Led by Lewis, Baltimore this season set records for fewest points (165) and yards rushing (970) allowed over a 16-game season.

Lewis and the Ravens put the trial behind them almost as soon as it ended.

"We have a deep appreciation for the loss of life. Ray takes that seriously, and we take it seriously," coach Brian Billick said at the Ravens' training facility. "We have a deep loyalty and appreciation for Ray Lewis that has been borne out."

As Billick has repeated many times, he said he wants to talk about football not Lewis' case and how it has affected his team this season.

"It's about each other now, nothing that I went through," Lewis said after the Ravens beat the Raiders in the AFC championship game. "I move on."

But Lewis and the Ravens probably will hear plenty about the topic in the days leading up to the Super Bowl, especially on media day.

Lewis has answered all those types of questions since July, and over the next two weeks he probably won't field a query that hasn't been asked before.

The Ravens, and Lewis in particular, would prefer to focus on the fact that he was the NFL defensive player of the year, was selected for the Pro Bowl for the fourth time and led the team in tackles.

"I've been blessed," he said Monday.

The Super Bowl will be a homecoming of sorts for Lewis, who grew up 20 minutes from Tampa, in Lakeland, Fla. On a national stage, he can forge a new identity for himself.

"The Super Bowl can make a guy like Ray one of the all-time best ever to play the game," Ravens tight end Shannon Sharpe said. "It will take a great guy and make him Hall of Fame. That's what a game like this can do for your career."

A murder trial can ruin a career, but Lewis appears to have avoided that fate.

"I don't even think about what happened last year, as far as Ray is concerned," defensive end Rob Burnett said. "All I'm thinking about is what he's done for us this season and the type of player, and leader, he has become."

Dilfer headed back to Tampa

■ Ravens quarterback Trent Dilfer heads back to the town that cast him out as a Buccaneer.

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

On Sept. 12, 1999, the New York Giants visited the new Raymond James Stadium in Tampa for the first time and made a dramatic impression.

They beat the Tampa Bay Buccaneers 17-13, turning a fumble and an interception by Trent Dilfer into two touchdowns.

In two weeks, the Giants face Dilfer again in the same stadium, this time with the NFL title on the line. Dilfer is now the quarterback of the Baltimore Ravens, having won 10 of his 11 starts for Baltimore after replacing Tony Banks.

A lot of people think it will be the same kind of game — the top-ranked defense (Baltimore) against No. 5 (New York) and the two top defenses against the run (Baltimore 1, New York 2).

The Giants have more offense, but the Ravens, who set an NFL record for fewest points allowed in a season, have shut down offenses better than New York's. Look at what they did to Oakland in the AFC title game on Sunday, a 16-3 Baltimore victory.

There are also all kind of connections in this game beyond Dilfer's return to Tampa, where he started for six seasons:

- The owners, Wellington Mara of the Giants and Art Modell of the Ravens, are close friends. "I'll be his friend until 6:18 p.m. two weeks from now," Modell, 75, said of Mara, 83, after Sunday's games.
- Ernie Accorsi, the Giants' general manager, began his career with the Baltimore Colts and later was general manager of the then-Cleveland Browns, the team that Modell moved to Baltimore after the 1995 season.

• The coaches, Brian Billick of the Ravens and Jim Fassel of the Giants, are close friends. Both were assistant coaches at Stanford, although a decade apart.

• The two franchises fought annually from the mid 1950s to the mid 60s for what was then the Eastern Conference title in the pre-Super Bowl era; the most storied matchup was Jim Brown of the Browns against Sam Huff, the middle linebacker for the Giants. And the Giants and Baltimore Colts, who were in the Western Conference put the NFL on the map in the 1958 championship game, the first overtime game ever played and one that's still numbered among the league's best.

The Giants got to that game by beating Cleveland, 10-7, to break a tie in the East on a 48-yard field goal through the snow by Pat Summerall.

This year's game also reflects what the NFL has become. It's the third time in a row that two new teams are meeting in the Super Bowl. The Giants were 7-9 last season, the Ravens 8-8, demonstrating how easily it is for teams to move up (and down) in the salary cap era.

"When you get this far, a lot of things have to go right," Bill-lick said before Sunday's game. "You have to avoid major injuries to major players, you have to get the right bounces, the right breaks, everything. That's why it's a shame that when there are four teams left, two have to go home."

Accorsi has the same view from another angle.

Last August, he was asked his thoughts on what Daniel Snyder and the Washington Redskins had done in the offseason, spending $100 million on the likes of Bruce Smith, Deion Sanders and Jeff George, moves that led almost everyone to concede the NFC East to them.

"Let's see how it plays out," Accorsi replied. "We think we made some pretty good moves ourselves."

Late season run propels Giants

■ The Giants say the season turned around after they beat Washington on the road.

By Tom Canavan
Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Michael Strahan knows exactly when the New York Giants became a team of destiny, and it wasn't when Jim Fassel issued his playoff guarantee on Nov. 22.

It came a little less than two weeks later, when they beat the Washington Redskins 9-7 on the road.

With the Giants starting preparations for a Super Bowl game against Baltimore in two weeks, the victory in Washington might seem to be just one of a dozen during the regular season. But the importance of that game cannot be measured by a single W.

Everything changed on Dec. 3 for the Giants, who had missed the playoffs the past two seasons.

They stopped seeing themselves as a mediocre team that couldn't beat anyone good. Not only did they win, they won under immense pressure, because a victory by the Redskins might have dropped New York into third place in the NFC East.

Instead, the Giants won and moved into first place in the division when the Philadelphia Eagles lost to Tennessee on a last-second field goal.

"We started pulling together at that point," Strahan said. "We beat the Cardinals in Arizona the week before (after the guarantee). We played a great game, but we felt the ultimate test for us was the Redskins in Washington.

"Had we lost that game on that last-second field goal, that would have set us back a couple of years. It would have been devastating."

They came close to losing, but Eddie Murray's 49-yard field goal attempt fell short in the final minute.

"We won and we found out if we stay together and play together we got a chance to win," Strahan said. "We've done that. The bigger the game, the more we come together."

That's been obvious in the playoffs. New York, which has won seven straight games, has not been challenged in beating Philadelphia 20-10 last week and crushing the Minnesota Vikings 41-0 in the NFC championship on Sunday.

Fassel, who spent nearly two hours in bed Sunday night thinking about the Super Bowl, said the thought of an NFL title was never on his mind when he guaranteed that the Giants would make the playoffs for the first time since 1997.

He felt if the team won a couple of games and picked up a little momentum, it was capable of winning the division.

"If we won our division I felt we had as good a chance as anyone," Fassel said. "I felt that way because I believed in the character of this football team. They were doing everything we asked of them and anything was possible."

Now the Giants are a game away, and they don't expect the Super Bowl to be anything like their game with the Vikings.

The Ravens allowed an NFL-record low 165 points in the regular season and 16 in three postseason games.

"It's certainly not going to be the kind of game we had yesterday," said quarterback Kerry Collins, who completed 28 of 39 passes for 381 yards and five touchdowns against the Vikings. "They will be the best defense we've faced all year."

Violence erupts at Spurs-Knicks game

■ Knicks coach Jeff Van Gundy is head-butted by Marcus Camby.

By Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Marcus Camby threw a punch at Danny Ferry, and Jeff Van Gundy got in the way. The coach got the worst of it, and Camby hung around Madison Square Garden for nearly an hour after the game looking for more.

On a bizarre afternoon when a blowout turned into a brawl, Van Gundy ended up needing 12-15 stitches to close a cut above his left eye after his head collided with Camby's late in the fourth quarter of New York's 104-82 victory over the San Antonio Spurs.

"He got the shot in that everyone of our players would like to do to me. He just got a free one," Van Gundy said afterward, his eye badly swollen and partially covered by a bandage.

Camby, who had been poked in the eye by Ferry, was ejected for throwing a punch, while Van Gundy was led bloodied

Ed Betz/Associated Press

and dazed back to the locker room for treatment.

After the game, Camby stood outside the San Antonio locker room for 10 minutes until Knicks officials — including President Dave Checketts, general manager Scott Layden, forward Larry Johnson and several security officers — persuaded him to leave. Camby then went downstairs to the area where the Spurs' bus was idling and spent another 20 minutes waiting for Ferry as team officials continued to try to calm him down.

Camby was finally persuaded to leave, and nearly a dozen security officers then escorted Ferry to the team bus.

"We were banging around the whole game," Ferry said. "I don't remember doing anything to lead to something like that."

It was a strange ending to another dominant performance by the Knicks, who got 31 points from Allan Houston, 20 from Glen Rice and 19 from Latrell Sprewell.

Winning for the ninth time in 10 games and holding their opponent below 100 points for the 31st consecutive game, the Knicks were having one of their best all-around games of the season until late in the fourth.

Camby was poked in the eye by Ferry and was being restrained by his teammates when he lunged after Ferry and threw a windmill punch.

"He poked me in the eye, bloodied me up," Camby, still emotional, told Johnson in the hallway outside San Antonio's locker room. "I wasn't going to hit him until I saw the blood in my eye."

The punch did not hit anybody, but Camby collided with Van Gundy as the coach jumped between them — much like Van Gundy did in a fight between the Knicks' Larry Johnson and the Heat's Alonzo Mourning during the 1998 playoffs.

Iowa men gymnasts stay busy over break

■ The Hawkeyes placed fourth at the Windy City Invitational.

By Laura Podolak
The Daily Iowan

While Iowa's campus was empty of the usual hustle and bustle of college students over break, the Iowa men's gymnastics team was hard at work.

The Hawkeyes opened their season at the Windy City Invitational in Chicago on Jan. 13 and proved to be solid competitors at one of the Midwest's most prestigious meets. Iowa (205.15) finished fourth behind Michigan (207.55), Illinois (207.2), and Ohio State (205.4). The Hawkeyes beat out fellow conference foes Minnesota (202.25), Michigan State (201.35) and also the host team, Illinois-Chicago (196.25).

Coincidentally, the top three teams at the Windy City Invitational were the same teams that finished ahead of Iowa at last year's Big Ten championship.

"We are about where we left off," Iowa head coach Tom Dunn said. "Which is probably pretty good, considering we lost almost half our team (to graduation)."

Dunn said the invitational is used somewhat as a pre-season conference meet because of the attendance of six Big Ten teams.

Dunn noted that he was surprised with Illinois' impressive performance, especially in the All-Around competition, where it finished first and second.

"They are a little stronger than I thought," he said. "Ohio State and Michigan are not as far ahead; we are still right in the pack."

Antonio Cesar was the biggest individual surprise from the Iowa team. The freshman out of Monterey, Mexico, exploded into the collegiate gymnastics scene, tying for first place in the high-bar competition with a score of 8.9. His score barely edged out fellow freshman Matt Metzger, who is Cesar's roommate.

Cesar also competed well on the pommel horse, where he finished third with an 8.95.

Cesar's performance was especially impressive because he was competing with a mid-foot sprain, which he has been battling for six weeks.

"We knew he was our best guy if he hit his routine," Dunn said of Cesar's high-bar performance. "But, because of his ankle injury, he hasn't been able to work full dismounts for six weeks."

Veteran gymnast Don Jackson was Iowa's top performer on floor with an 8.8, good enough for seventh place on the event. Brian Christie got fifth on the still rings, recording an 8.85.

Andy Thornton led the Hawkeyes on vault with a 9.0. He was closely followed by Metzger and Shane de Freitas, who tied for 12th with an 8.95.

Junior Andy Thornton was the Hawkeyes' best all-around performer, with a sixth-place finish in the all-around competition. Freshman Justin Leavitt was the only other Hawkeye to compete in all six events — he finished 15th.

Dunn seemed pleased with where his team is at this point in the season.

"We could have possibly, if we had trained a little harder, won this meet," he said. "We're just looking a little further ahead."

Ranked women's gymnastics team gets win

■ The Hawkeyes take the Michigan State Invitational.

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

Nationally ranked for the first time since 1991, the Iowa women's gymnastics team proved it deserves its No. 22 ranking by winning the Michigan State Invitational on Jan. 13.

Iowa put up a 193.600, which was the fifth-best score in school history, to hold off Central Michigan (193.550) and Michigan State (191.075).

The victory marked the second straight for the team following a Jan. 6 drubbing of Southeast Missouri State 192.800 to 187.385. This is the first time in recent memory the Hawkeyes have won consecutive tournaments, said head coach Mike Lorenzen.

"This is a huge confidence builder," Lorenzen said. "It was even bigger one than I anticipated. Giselle (Boniforti) said the seniors couldn't remember the last time they had won two in a row. This is definitely something to feel good about."

At Michigan State, Iowa dominated the uneven bars competition. The team's score of 48.925 was the third best in school history, falling a few points shy of the 49.025 against Illinois in 1998 when a freshman named Giselle Boniforti put up the top score. Three years later, Boniforti hasn't lost her touch, once again winning the event with a 9.875. Freshman Alexis Maday finished second, with senior Angie Hungerford placing fourth.

In her homecoming, freshman Brandy Killian won the floor exercise. The Lansing, Mich., native, performing in front of family and friends, scored a 9.850 to beat out Michele Orloski of Central Michigan.

Yet another Iowa freshman played a key role in the victory. Stephanie Gran tied for second in the All-Around with a 39.000, just points behind the champion Bethany Couturier of Central Michigan. Maday was fifth with a 38.475.

"The freshman scores speak for themselves," Lorenzen said. "Alexis and Stephanie are doing the same things teams competing for national titles are doing, and they are doing it as freshman."

The increased confidence level following the two victories and the national ranking has the team believing in itself. Lorenzen said last year that belief was sometimes missing.

"We believe we have a chance to compete with Michigan and Minnesota. Not only do we belong, we have as good a chance as anyone else to hang with those teams."

The Hawkeyes will get their chance Jan. 20, when they visit Ann Arbor to battle with No. 3 Michigan and No. 18 Minnesota.

Allen shines for men's track team

■ The junior set an Iowa record in the weight throw at the Hawkeye Open.

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

It didn't take long for Jeremy Allen to rewrite the track record books.

In his first meet of the season, Allen set an Iowa and Recreation Building record with a 65-10 $\frac{1}{2}$ weight throw to lift Iowa to two of six first-place finishes at the Hawkeye Open on Jan. 13.

Team scores were not kept at the event, but Iowa easily had the most first-place finishes.

Allen was surprised he set the record because he hadn't been concentrating on the weight throw very much lately.

"I just got it rolling, had fun out there, and things clicked," he said. "I couldn't complain with the result."

Allen also captured the shot-put title with a toss of 60 $\frac{1}{2}$, but he was quick to compliment the job his teammates did, including Jim Costello, who finished third in the weight throw with a pretty decent toss of his own at 62-2 $\frac{1}{2}$.

Junior Mike Cunningham won the 800-meter run in 1:56.16, and senior Sean Moeller took the 3,000-meter title by beating out teammate Trent Corey, who finished in second 11 seconds behind.

The Iowa 4x400-meter relay team also was victorious. Seniors Tim Dodge Scott Williamson, sophomore Liam Card and freshman Juan Coleman combined for a time of 3:17.58.

Sophomore Luke Nessa's score of 6-6 gave him the high-jump title, and many other Hawkeyes ended up in second or third place.

"I'm optimistic about this team," Allen said. "The sprinters did real well, and we have a lot of young guys doing good things out there."

The team will travel to Bloomington, Ill., for the Red Bird Open Saturday.

Hawkeye women's track runs well at home meet

■ The Iowa women earn six gold medals at the Hawkeye Open.

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's track team opened up its season in familiar surroundings on Jan. 13, earning six gold medals at the Hawkeye Open.

The event was held at the Recreation Building, where the team normally practices. It gave team members a chance to set a solid score on the home track before hitting the road for the rest of the indoor season.

"We got off to a really good start. It's very satisfying," said Kacey Childs, the field-events captain. "Everyone is now excited about a new season, and this meet got us motivated."

Team scores were not kept, but Iowa's six gold medals easily bested the other six schools. Western Illinois had the next highest amount with three.

Sophomore Jiselle Providence started the meet off by winning both the 60-meter and the 200-meter dash. Freshman Tamara Dixon was close behind, finishing fourth in the 60- and second in the 200-.

Another freshman started out her college career with a pair of medals. Atalie Barber won the 800-meter then combined with Kristin Knight, Sophia Chow and Sarah Arens to capture first in the distance medley.

Childs equaled her best performance of last season by winning the high jump. Her jump of 5-7 was a nice starting point for the season.

"Five-seven is where I wanted to start out with, but my goal is to provisionally qualify for the NCAAs. That takes a 5-9 and three-quarters, so I'm trying to build up to that," she said.

Childs, along with Arens and Sarah Steffen, has taken on additional responsibilities as captains. They work to provide motivation and keep the team together, Childs said.

The task now is to keep the team motivated as it hits the road. Starting next week with the Iowa State Open in Ames, the Hawkeyes will travel to a meet nearly every weekend before the NCAA Championships on March 9-10.

by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You can get down to business if you put your mind to it. Financial gains can be made if you don't waste time. Remember that the early bird catches the worm.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You will have to control your emotions if you wish to keep your personal life harmonious. Your tendency to be stubborn and refuse to see your mate's concerns will lead to a stalemate.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Look into moneymaking investments that will not require too much attention or time on your part. Check out ways of helping youngsters. Physical activities will be exhilarating.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your involvement in organized events will be trying if you are pressured to contribute more than you can afford. Don't let others talk you into things that you really don't want to do.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't count on any help from loved ones or roommates. Your ability to do your job well will lead to positive changes and a higher income. Personal moves will not be favorable at this time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may be tempted to take off today. Don't be afraid to talk about your personal problems with a trusted friend. You will solve your problem if you observe other people's motives.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Changes in your financial situation will be upsetting. Take some time to do things for yourself. You need time to reflect on the past as well as relationships.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Jealousy may stand in the way of a really good relationship. You must try to be compassionate and understanding when dealing with your mate. This is not the time to disagree.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be careful not to divulge information about your private life. You will be able to sign important documents and make financial gains if you keep your personal problems under control.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Take a long hard look at yourself. Don't be afraid to make changes. Your motives should be reevaluated. You may have been pointing your finger at the wrong person.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can expect problems with family members today. You will do well if you get involved in real estate or property investments. Contracts can be signed and agreements formulated.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Travel will be your best bet as long as you don't allow others to take you for granted. You will be emotional when discussing your personal life. Try to keep your true feeling to yourself.

The Ledge

By Jesse Ammerman

How to impress your professors and classmates on the first day of school

- Tell your professor that you might not be great at all that fancy book-learnin', but you're a hell of a dancer. Demonstrate a few killer moves in front of the class to prove your point.
- Wink at your teachers whenever you make eye contact. This will let them know that things are "cool" between the two of you.
- Break the ice with your classmates by asking all members of the opposite sex for their phone numbers.
- Show up to class while heavily intoxicated, and brag about your capacity for consuming alcohol. If possible, act rude and belligerent while dancing awkwardly in between chairs.
- Remember, everybody loves party favors. Don't go to class without bags of plastic whistles and cheap candy to pass out to the crowd.
- Break up the monotony of those first-day lectures by shouting such clever phrases as "Whassup!!" or "Guns 'n' Roses rocks, man!"
- After course guidelines have been discussed, let the class know what your office hours will be.
