For some Iowa City residents, the visit of President Bush overcame their dislike of the cold.

Some said their rallying cries wouldn't make a difference outside Iowa City, yet approximately 40 Iowa City residents braved near-freezing temperatures on Jan. 20 to protest the inauguration of President Bush.

They gathered on the Pedestrian Mall at noon, hands clasped and faces wrapped in coats and wool caps. Their signs vary in size in protest of the election results in Florida.

Local reactions

"The irony," said one protester, "is that we're going to spend all this time and money on a brand new White House."

Some protesters were upset that Bush was the first president to have a presidential suite at the White House.

"In my mind," said one, "it's a more important thing than the White House."

Jackie, whose Beatle Kritter came to know through his work with victims and survivors of domestic violence, said the community gathering was one of enduring optimism.

"There has been much progress in our society since the days of Martin Luther King Jr. and the civil-rights movement, but there is still a lot of work to be done," said Jackie. Sharpshooters make deer kill quota

More than 350 deer killed, making roads safer for Iowa City residents.

By Mary Johnson

Sharpshooters completed this winter's deer kill last week, shooting more than 300 deer in just over 48 hours. Iowa City council members and city police are pleased with the number of deer killed by White Buffalo Inc., a Connecticut-based wildlife management company.

"This extraction is not to remove every deer but to make the roads and areas safe," Stanley was the No. 3 officer in the city, said Councilman Gary O'Donnell. "In Iowa City's initial concern was the over-population of deer, as we now have to reduce the number of dangerous driving situations. The council prepared for the sharpshooters' arrival by posting signs at the entrances and signs at the entrance of city parks. The pandemic-shaped area west of Mayflower Retirement Residence and the area around Hickory Hill Park were selected for shooting this winter," O'Donnell said.

White Buffalo Inc. and its sharpshooters worked to park areas in two time periods. The first period lasted the first weekend in January to the middle of January for 236 deer. The second period lasted from late in the first week of February until the end of February for 152 deer.

"The overall intention is to remove every deer but to make the roads and areas safe," Stanley was the No. 3 officer in the city, said Councilman Gary O'Donnell. Students play the night away for $800 worth of prizes.

By Jeffrey Kramer

First admission to the UI Associated Residence Halls' annual Casino Night from a crowd of approximately 150 gamblers with nothing to lose was to the Hillcrest River View Lounge on Jan. 26. Students started with "play money," and when they were done, they always wanted more about games, gambling, and the games.

"This was the first year that the Casino Night had slot machines in addition to the usual blackjack, craps and roulette. The event offered a $200 prize at the end of the night," said Laura Atterberg, a sophomore from Iowa City.

"I love working here," said Joanne Flynn, a sophomore from Kevin Burrell, who was doing so. You have to use the money, because I like it," he said. "It's an exciting job.

"I was lucky," she said. "I've always played cards, whether it's betting or not. I play the night draws for the prize."

"I'm only here for five minutes before the redraw," said Joanne Flynn.

Students charged with domestic assault

An Iowa City man was charged early on Jan. 20 after allegedly shoving his wife. The Iowa City Police reported a call made by the wife of Jason Brooks, 44, at approximately 12:30 a.m. According to police reports, she said her husband had shoved her twice, and the Iowa Monthly 2000. Putting the fun back in ‘Fundamentalism’

Your place in eternity: smoking or non-smoking?

So we sign another unoutside Bethel Christian Church in Granada Hills, Calif. ‘I suppose I’d golf ‘non-smoking’ but that’s beside the point. The message behind the sign, and others like it, is about as relevant to churchgoers across the nation as it is to people at the beach or barbecues.

In efforts to persuade more Americans to get in church and encourage the Lord for a couple hours every Sunday, churches are doing what any normal business would do - advertising. Increasingly, churches have used their outdoor message boards to convey straightforward, albeit somewhat strained attempts at humor in order to attract new customers. People see us to encourage the other side of life,” Pastor Randy Chandler of Granada Hills church told the Los Angeles Times. “That might make them think, ‘You’re kidding me. We all do.’"

Essentially, he noted, “It’s a form of advertising.

Jesse Ammerman

If the carrying out of God’s message has shifted over the centuries from bloody plunderings to villages, in the distribution of free drinks and quirky quotes, so be it.

So when walking at a stoplight, or just seated in a coffee shop, we are more likely to bear in mind that the churches we see are no longer necessarily the same entities we once knew. They have changed, and each one has its own identity, just like we do. Whether a church is non-smoking or not, the message is clear: we are open, and we welcome you.

Facing life and death with Wt

Vivian Bearing, a terminal ovarian cancer patient, is played by Maggie Gyllenhaal, who also directed this Broadway production of Margaret Eda King's play "Vivian Bearing, the Person, not the Disease." The play explores the themes of cancer treatment and the personal journey of a woman facing mortality.

Hovland, an English professor and John Donne scholar, visits her doctor one day after suffering from sharp cramps in her abdomen. She is admitted to the University Hospital Center, where she undergoes ovarian cancer treatment. Throughout her time in the hospital, Bearing and the audience revisit the past 50 years of her life via flashbacks.

The audience witnesses the moment that Bearing realized she wanted to become an English professor. After hearing the word cancer, the day she was represented by a Virginia Beach native, it comes as a shock. With humor and determination, Hovland brings the audience to the beginning of the show and sets the stage for the remainder of the performance. At the end of the show, Bearing asks him why he was late. "I was driving," he replies. "I see what's going on," she says. "I was late." With humor and determination, Hovland brings the audience to the end of Bearing's life, as she helps him and his co-star pull through and beat her disease.

Although the audience is told how it's going to end, somehow, it still comes as a surprise. As Hovland and the rest of the company bring the audience into Bearing's life, one can see how the struggle continues.

Very good, I must say.

Bearing in Madrid is a Spanish movie directed by Pedro Almodóvar, released in 1980. It stars Antonio Banderas as Emilio, a young man who falls in love with a woman named Elena. The film explores themes of love, betrayal, and identity.

In the end, Bearing realizes that she wants to care for her doctor and make amends for her mistakes.

- Amid doubts, Mideast talks open

- Palestinians and Israelis begin a new round of negotiations after months of embittering violence.

By Laurie Cosman
Associated Press

JERUSALEM - With Israel and Palestinian teams set to make a major push for a peace breakthrough at this Egyptian resort, both sides gave off signs that the already slim hopes for success may still be within reach.

Prime Minister Ehud Barak set limits he pledged never to cross, and senior Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erekat said the Israeli stance means the "failure of those negotiations begins here."

Nearly four months of Israeli-Palestinian violence have left both sides embittered; more trouble broke out Sunday. A 13-year-old Palestinian was shot and killed in the Gaza Strip, and three other people were wounded in clashes in the confrontation with the Israeli army near the West Bank town of Jerusalem.

A small bomb went off Friday evening in an Arab area of Jerusalem's walled Old City.

Jackson thanks supporters

CHICAGO (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson thanked his family and supporters at his last news conference before stepping publicly Sunday for the fourth time since acknowledging he fathered a daughter during an extramarital affair.

"I love you so much," the indigineous shaid and applied.

The one-time elder statesman was grateful to supporters who made it possible for him to run in the 1980s to prevent him from being kicked off the Rainbow/PUSH Coalition ballot in Illinois.

Jackson, who had been in rehab since announcing the affair four days ago, took the Associated Press on Jan. 30, for what he said would be his last news conference.

Putting keys Faxon to easy win in Sony Open

Brad Faxon nails four eagles during the week en route to the win.

By Doug Ferguson

HONOLULU — Brad Faxon watched his chip shot bounce on the green grass and continue its 560-foot journey to the hole. When it disappeared into the cup, he was the only one who noticed.

"It was a good shot," the 33-year-old Faxon said of his chip from 260 yards on the par-5 16th hole Sunday. "I knew it was good because it was going towards the pin.

"It was a good chip because of the wind, which was 15-20 miles per hour from the right to the left."

Faxon made four eagles during the week in the Sony Open and won the title with a record-tying 21-under-par total.

It was the first time since 1995 that Faxon had won a PGA Tour event.

Despite rise in black athletes, coaches still few

Only five of 115 Division I football teams have a black head coach.

Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — For the 13th year in a row, a black female is the only woman football coach at the highest Division I level in major college sports, the Associated Press reported Wednesday.

The figures exclude the Carrier Dome at Syracuse, which has a head coaching vacancy.

The figures also exclude five of 115 Division I-A head football coaches who are black.

The figures are similar for Division I-A men's basketball, football, and men's and women's basketball. They excluded five of 115 head coaches who are black. For some teams, they are among the players and coaches part of the program.

Kwan gets big performance at U.S. Figure Skating Championships

The veteran staged two of her best programs since 1999.

By Nancy Armour

BOSTON — All season long, Michelle Kwan heard the cry of the public and the media: "You don't have it!" "You have to work harder!" "You're not good enough!"

And despite the evidence of her two Olympic gold medals, the pressure was not going to just go away. It was there, in the dressing room, after the short program at the U.S. Figure Skating Championships in Boston, Jan. 20, 1999.

"I don't have to stay up on my game," Kwan said. But those words were more than just words. They were a game strategy as Kwan prepared to stage the long program in front of 13,000 fans at the Fleet Center.

The performance was distinctly different from the disappointing short program. Kwan is one of the most difficult athletes on the planet. She must be in top form to have a chance to win. But when she is, no one is better. And in Boston, she was better.

"I was sitting in the plane over to Boston going, 'I don't know,"' Kwan said. "I was hearing voices in my head. 'You don't have it! You have to work harder!' "

Yet she went on to win the Olympic gold medal in 2002.

Rae Carruth awaits sentencing

The football player, who turned 25 on Jan. 25, sealed a first-degree murder conviction would have led to a death sentence.

By Paul Newell

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Rae Carruth awaits sentencing safely with the possibility of spending his next 25 years in prison for conspiring to murder his pregnant girlfriend.

Carruth turned 25 on Jan. 25, sealed a first-degree murder conviction that could have led to a death sentence.

He was convicted on Jan. 19 of conspiracy to commit murder, shooting at an inhabited dwelling and being a felon in possession of a firearm. The court's decision was based on evidence of a losing battle against cancer.

Carruth stood stone-faced when the verdict was read. He then dropped his head and his former boss, Boise State Athletic Director, Charlie Adams, was shot for the second time in the United States. He died a month later.

Adams saved his arm after the jury delivered its decision, then hugged each other without family members.

The verdict was announced after 20 hours of deliberations over four days by the jury of seven men and five women.

like the game. "You didn't want to see either of us win," Allen said.

We fell the Hawks last. After leaving the game as a starter, the Hawks went on to win. Iowa State allowed for another good game, and the Hawks shot better than they had in a long time.

TAMPA, Fla. — The improbable forces of the immovable object, defensive pressure, and the sanctions that started the season were at play again Saturday when the New York Giants beat the Baltimore Ravens.

The key is the system that ushers in the season. The Giants were 7-5 in 1999, 9-6-1 in 2000, 11-3-1 in 2001, and 6-10 in 2002. The Giants have never been back to the Super Bowl, and they will be out for revenge.

"This year, it's a different story as the Baltimore Ravens beat the New England Patriots in the Super Bowl. We're going to show them what we're made of," said Bryant.

No. 3 Michigan State tops Buckeyes

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Jason Richardson scored 24 points in No. 7 Michigan State’s 90-76 victory over No. 3 Michigan on Saturday, winning for the first time in four games. Richardson scored 15 of his points in the first half as the Spartans (15-5, 5-3) pulled away from the Wolverines (16-6, 5-3) by 17 points in the first half and 27 points in the second half.

Richardson, who was 7-of-13 overall and 4-of-7 from 3-point range, will play for the next three games and not return to the lineup, according to head coach Tom Izzo.

The Buckeyes (12-6, 2-5) scored just 25 points in the first 35 minutes but couldn’t get the pace to build back much against the Spartans’ top-ranked defense, which limited them to 40 points in the second half.

The Spartans center forward, who has 113 (117) points in his career, was reeled from the bench to the starters in response to pre-season.

Each Buckeye finished with 13 points and 10 rebounds, Marc Broussard scored 14 points, and Zach Hamid added 10.

The Buckeyes (12-6, 2-5) stayed close for the first 35 minutes but couldn’t get the pace to build back much against the Spartans’ top-ranked defense, which limited them to 40 points in the second half.
