Bush redecorates, goes to church

■ The new president welcomes friends and family to the White House on his first day on the job.

By Sandra Sobeiraj
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With the Oval Office redecorated in a snap, President Bush welcomed well-wishers to his White House Sunday. He began his first full day as president with his head bowed in prayer.

"I pray that God will place his great hand of protection on each and every one, and especially on you, Mr. President, and your family," the Rev. Franklin Graham intoned at an inaugural prayer service at Washington National Cathedral.

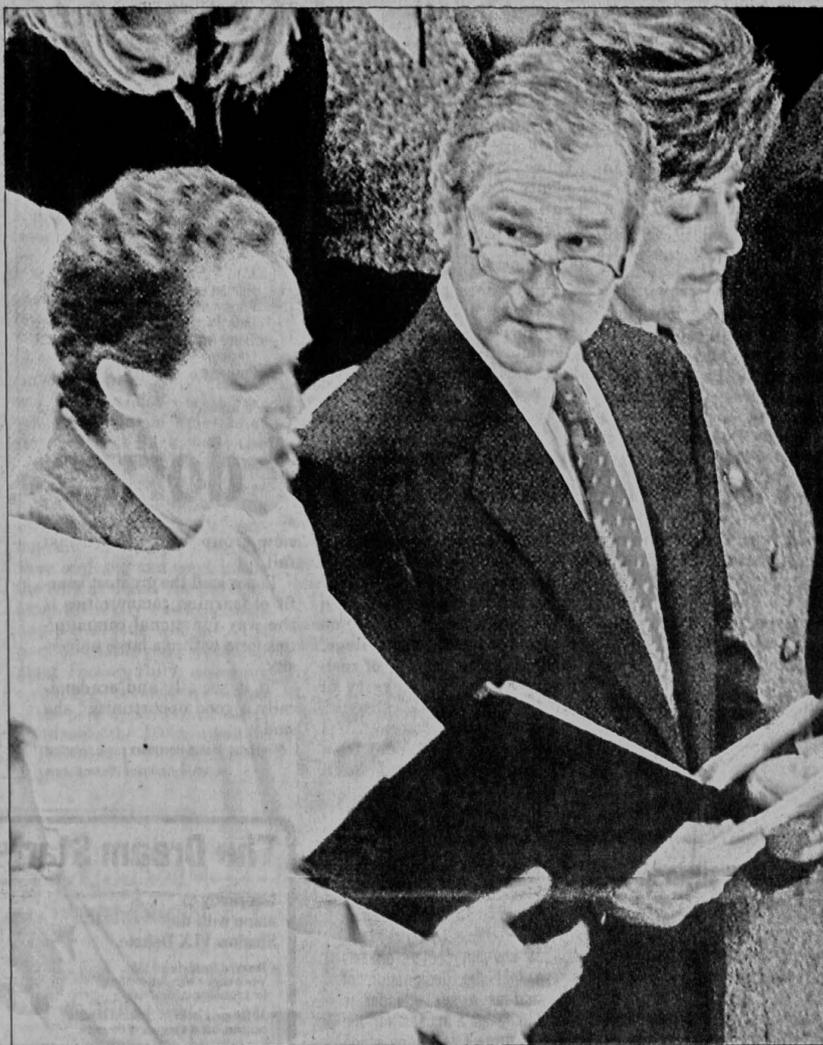

The pews were filled with members of the Bush family, friends and supporters as Graham, continuing a tradition established by his father, the Rev. Billy Graham, invoked blessings on the new government and its leaders.

The sun, which had stubbornly hid through three days of rainy inaugural festivities, made a crust of ice out of the overnight snowfall as thousands of ticket holders lined up for an unusual Sunday tour of the White House, newly restored to Republican control after eight years under President Clinton.

In the mansion's Blue Room, Bush and his family — including his parents, White House residents from 1989 to 1993 — posed for a portrait.

The Oval Office, redone with astonishing speed and a feminine touch in muted shades of peaches and cream, was a haven of polish and serenity among the mess of rolled up car-

Local reactions

"(The inauguration) was awesome. To be able to say 'President Bush,' it was a great feeling, something (UI Students for Bush) has been waiting a long time for. It was almost like Republicans were storming D.C. Everywhere you looked, you saw Republicans with big smiles. One of the things I was so happy about was that I could finally look at the White House and be proud of the person who lived there."

— UI senior Bryan Plumb, member, UI Students for Bush

"You just try to look important, and you just walk right in (the inaugural balls). They're incredible. Every new event and separate event is a new experience. You can't compare them. George Bush is our president. I never thought he wouldn't be."

— UI junior Josh Bowen, member, UI Students for Bush

"We wanted to mobilize to make a big presence at the Inauguration. It was a really good protest presence. It was highly charged at the protest. We were there to say: 'These are not going to be your four years,' that 'We're going to protest everything you try to push through.' There were an inordinate number of cowboy hats and fur coats. We were expecting the cowboy hats, but the fur coats? It was like, 'How bourgeois can you get?'"

— UI junior Mitch Day, a protester

"It was fun. I think it's what a lot of Americans would have liked to have been doing. (The protesters) were incredibly animated, chanting, dancing, kind of hopping around because it was cold and rainy. Every time a member of the police would walk by, someone would say 'Whose streets?' and a thousand people would yell back, 'Our streets!'"

— UI senior David Burnett, a protester

"What it really felt like was the Third Reich had finally arrived ... It felt like we had arrived in a police state. The majority of Americans weren't welcomed there. They frisked us. It was scary."

— Iowa City resident Gloria Williams

Some inaugurate Bush with protest

■ For some Iowa City residents, their dislike of President Bush overcame their dislike of the cold.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

Some said their rallying cries wouldn't make a difference outside Iowa City, yet approximately 40 Iowa City residents braved near-freezing temperatures on Jan. 20 to protest the inauguration of President Bush.

They huddled on the Pedestrian Mall at noon, hands gloved and faces wrapped in scarfs and wool caps. Their unified voices rose in lamentation of the election fiasco in Florida and Supreme Court ruling that led to Bush's victory over former Vice President Al Gore.

"Racist, bigots, anti-gay, Bush and Cheney, go away," the crowd chanted.

Iowa City resident Winston Barclay, the assistant director of UI Arts Center Relations, stood silent at the helm of the group carrying a U.S. flag upside down.

"I think our country is in distress today," he said. "As of this day, in my mind, we have an illegitimate government in Washington."

CLEANING OUT THE ENGLERT

Volunteer workers remove remnants of the wall that has divided the historic Englert Theater into two separate spaces since 1985. Edna Englert, 98, the great-grand niece of Englert Theatre founder William Englert, eagerly cut through a ribbon suspending a sledge hammer 15 feet from its target; the hammer's swing made the first dent in the barrier. As of early Sunday afternoon, the entire wall had come tumbling down.

"It's such a big, beautiful space," said Mollie Schlue, a spokeswoman for the Englert Civic Theater Group, a nonprofit organization devoted to restoring the building. "We're all overwhelmed."

In the future, the organization plans to repair a leaky roof, restore the theater, and make the building meet Iowa City fire code.

Cloning Noah

Summary of how Noah was created:

- 1 First, nuclei are harvested from frozen Asian guar skin cells.
- 2 Second, nuclei are injected into cow eggs that had been stripped of their DNA, creating embryos.
- 3 Third, the embryos are implanted into cows. Eight out of 32 cows became pregnant.
- 4 Last, a Sioux City cow gave birth to Noah.

Successful guar-cloning re-ignites debate

■ While some scientists say cloning could be beneficial, others question the morality of it.

By Jessi Todden
The Daily Iowan

Last week, scientists for the first time successfully cloned an animal from an extinct species — an Asian guar named Noah who died two days later. The event has lit anew the worldwide debate about whether humans should pursue cloning as well as its role in future projects, including ones at the UI.

While the UI is not currently involved in any cloning projects, that may change in the future, said Professor Roger Williamson, the director of the Gene Targeting Core Facility.

He is involved in a project that is trying to isolate and identify genes in mice — which are very similar to humans — and eventually inactivate those genes.

Williamson and UI Professor Kevin Campbell recently isolated and inactivated a gene for muscular dystrophy.

Williamson said they are thinking about cloning because it would speed up their research. They now have to go through each mouse's DNA to find the gene they need. If they had a mouse in which the gene were already identified and then cloned it, they wouldn't have to resequence its DNA to find the gene again. But they have made no plans to clone mice.

Professor Mary Mahowald of the University of Chicago Center for Clinical and Medical Ethics, who has been vocal about the ethics of cloning for the last few years, said she questions anyone interested in cloning humans or animals.

"I think in many ways those people are misguided and ignorant because a clone is not identical to the individual it

Demonstrating the power of forgiveness

■ An inter-religious service at Old Brick Church sings praise of Martin Luther King Jr.'s message.

By Jesse Elliott
The Daily Iowan

Jackie, whom Bruce Kittle came to know through his work with victims and criminals in the criminal-justice system, survived a devastating gunshot wound. Years later, she was able to confront her would-be murderer face-to-face in a four-hour conversation that concluded with hugs and forgiveness.

Themes of social interdependence, empathy and, most of all, forgiveness rang through the songs and speeches of Sunday night's Inter-Religious Celebration of the Life and Work of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. at Old Brick.

Among the 200 people at the event were presenters from the Jewish, Baha'i, Christian and Muslim faiths, among others, and musicians and singers from the Quire, Kol Shira and Disciple Strings.

The mood of the community gathering was one of cautious optimism.

"There has been much progress in our society since the days of Martin Luther King Jr. and the civil-rights movement," said Rev. Bob Dotzel, the pastor of a Lutheran campus ministry in Iowa City for 20 years. "But there is a danger of complacency. We think we are all free and easy now, but this is not so."

inmates in the criminal-justice system.

He believes passionately in the power of forgiveness because with criminals and victims alike, "the classic response of hate begets more hate, and so the cycle continues," he said.

He offered the story of Jackie, a Wisconsin woman, as an illustration of this power.

Kittle told the crowd that spreading stories such as Jackie's are a way to make social problems real and to give an opportunity to speak "to the so many who never have a chance to. "Story-telling was one of the many skills that Martin Luther King Jr. was so good at," he said.

Lindsay Park, an Iowa City resident and member of the Quire, said he believes "there's plenty of work to be done ... to change the racist attitudes ingrained in us and our institutions."

Park's statement echoed King's quote that the event was based on: "Forgiveness is not an occasional act. It is a permanent attitude."

UI to expand 'learning communities' dorms

■ At present, 400 UI students reside in living learning communities.

By Jackie Hammers
The Daily Iowan

After seeing the benefits, the UI is looking to expand on its Living Learning Community Program — residence hall floors set aside for students in specific majors.

Currently, 400 UI students live in learning-community programs on nine floors: International Crossroads Community, Quiet House, Men in Engineering, Women in Science and Engineering, Accessible Housing for Students with Disabilities, Pre-business and two Honors floors.

"There are always people you can talk to, and you feel like they care about you and want you to feel comfortable," said Kim Semsar, a resident on the Pre-business floor. Semsar, who is from St. Louis, said the floor helped her quickly find a group of friends.

In the fall, the UI plans to open a pre-health science community. It hopes to open another community in the fall of 2002, said Lola Lopes, the associate provost for undergraduate education.

The pre-health sciences community will have 86 students — 43 of each sex — on two floors of Rienow, said Karin Brunk, the leader of the pre-health science community.

Iowa State University developed learning communities in 1996 after receiving a grant to begin experimenting with the idea. There are currently 25 communities on ISU campus. Most of these, like UI's current Learning Communities, are for students with similar majors.

A new development in learning communities may include interest-based areas. Students with interests in music, movies, sports or fitness could choose to live on floors together. However, that is still years away, Lopes said.

UI junior Justin Stirn, a history major, said he would have lived in an interest-based learning community if there had been one for students with an interest in sports or history. None of the learning communities that existed when he was a freshman appealed to him.

"You want to click with certain types of people," he said.

Other schools have taken their own approaches to learning communities. Every student at the University of California, Santa Cruz, for example, is affiliated with a college, and those who live on campus stay at that college. More than 70 percent of residents at the University of Missouri, Columbia, chose living and learning communities this year, up 20 percent from last year. More than a dozen new groups were added last fall.

Lopes said the greatest benefit of learning communities is the way functional communities form within a large university.

"It is socially and academically a good opportunity," she said.

CITY BRIEF

UI student placed on sex offender list

Iowa City police, in cooperation with UI Public Safety, wishes to inform the public that a UI student and Iowa City resident is registered with the Iowa Sex Offender Registry and is considered to be at moderate risk to offend again.

Jace Thomas Johnston, 21, 924 E. Washington St., Apt. 4, was convicted of assault with intent to commit sexual abuse in 1998 in Bremer, Iowa. His victim was a 14-year-old female, according to police records. Johnston is a white male with brown hair and hazel eyes. He is 5 feet 11 inches tall, weighs 195 pounds and has a scar on his right hand.

Local law-enforcement officials stress that the designation of Johnston as a sex offender is meant only as a means for the public to protect itself. Any action taken against Johnston or his family, including vandalism to property, oral or written threat of physical harm or physical assault, could result in arrest and prosecution.

Johnston could not be reached for comment. — by Andrew Bixby

Coralville man charged with domestic assault

Coralville resident Bradley English, 39, was freed from the Johnson County Jail on Jan. 20 after posting a $10,500 bond. He had been arrested on charges stemming from his alleged two-hour standoff with Coralville police on the night of Jan. 19.

English was charged with domestic assault while displaying a dangerous weapon, child endangerment and going armed with intent, Johnson County Sheriff's Office officials said.

According to police reports, Coralville police responded to a domestic altercation at English's residence, 2265 13th St., at 10:54 p.m. on Jan. 19. English's girlfriend alleged that he struck her in the face during an argument, the police reports said. English then allegedly threatened the woman with a large kitchen knife. The reports say the woman fled the house, where she resides, with her 6-month-old child and called police from a nearby residence.

Coralville police and Sheriff's Office officials arrived on the scene and engaged in negotiations with English by telephone until 1 a.m., the reports said. English surrendered without incident.

UI Hospitals and Clinics personnel said English was treated and released from the hospital on Jan. 20. They would not elaborate on what English was treated for.

English has been in the county jail five times prior to his arrest on Jan. 19, Sheriff's Office officials said.

Coralville police are investigating the incident.

Man charged in fight

An Iowa City man was charged with disorderly conduct early Sunday morning after allegedly striking another man outside the Fieldhouse Restaurant & Bar, 111 E. College St.

According to police reports, the Iowa City police responded to the call about 1:45 a.m. Sunday and charged UI senior Ben Sels, 210 S. Clinton St. Apt. 402, for allegedly pursuing a man and repeatedly striking him. The man made several attempts to escape Sels' grasp, according to police reports.

Police charged Sels but did not take him to the Johnson County Jail Sunday. A court date will be scheduled.

Sels was unavailable for comment Sunday. Staff members of the Fieldhouse said they were unaware of the altercation and declined to comment further.

Sharpshooters make deer kill quota

More than 300 deer killed, making roads safer for Iowa City residents.

By Mary Johnson
The Daily Iowan

Sharpshooters completed this winter's deer kill last week, shooting more than 300 deer in just over 20 days.

Iowa City city councilors said they are pleased with the number of deer killed by White Buffalo, Inc., a Connecticut-based wildlife management agency.

"Our intention is not to remove every deer but to make the roads and area safe. Safety was our No. 1 concern in the plan," said Councilor Mike O'Donnell.

Iowa City's initial concern in eliminating the over-population of deer was to reduce the number of dangerous driving situations. The council prepared for the sharpshooters' arrival by posting notices in the newspapers and signs at the entrances of city parks. The peninsula-shaped area west of Mayflower Residence Hall and the area around Hickory Hill Park were selected for shooting this winter, O'Donnell said.

White Buffalo Inc. and its sharpshooters worked in park areas in two time periods: Jan. 8-12 and Jan. 15-20. The times posted for local residents to stay out of the park were from noon to 5 a.m. every day. Corbin Sexton, a member of Friends of Hickory Hill Park, said the times displayed caused some confusion for park patrons.

"The sign at the Bloomington Street entrance was clear," Sexton said. "But people were still were confused and went inside the park at night. The big challenge to the city was to actually notify everyone who uses the park to what is going on late at night. Hickory Hill is especially a challenge because the beauty of the park appeals to people at all times of the day or season."

The council had previously spent months researching and hearing from local residents on methods of stopping the overcrowding of deer in city limits. White Buffalo had been selected because of previous experience of shooting deer. The council had looked for the most humane way to reduce the problem and the wildlife agency understood, O'Donnell said.

Not everyone in Iowa City has agreed completely with the methods of the council. Florence Boos, opponent of sharpshooting, has identified the problem of overcrowding deer as one that spreads outside city limits. She feels that shooting deer does not eliminate traffic problems and using birth control for the deer could stop population growth.

"Iowa City is a relatively prosperous community, and we could manage a proper wildlife program. Deer are an invaluable resource, and we could take a more enlightened approach to reducing the deer number," Boos said.

The problem of controlling the deer population has been contained for this winter, but retaining the same deer number will prove difficult, O'Donnell said. Sharpshooting opponents want Iowa City residents to educate themselves about urban wildlife before making the decision to shoot animals.

"The problem of deer is one that every city with urban sprawl will face. Our citizens should think in broad terms of human impact in the environment. As long as Iowa City continues to grow, we'll continually run into deer habitat," said Sexton.

UI students gamble on a good time

■ Students play the night away for $800 worth of prizes.

By Jeffrey Kramer
The Daily Iowan

Free admission to the UI Associated Residence Halls' annual Casino Night drew a crowd of approximately 150 gamblers with nothing to lose to the Hillcrest River View Lounge on Jan. 20.

Students started with "play money", and they were given a certain amount of raffle tickets for prizes at the end of the night depending on how much money they turned in.

David Kafer, an associated residence hall executive, said it was no coincidence that roughly 50 more people turned out this year than did last year.

"We had good advertisement for it," he said. "Posters were up all over the place, which led people to our Web site to find out more about it."

More than 15 local businesses provided approximately $800 in prizes, including games, gift certificates and a foot spa. UI freshman Laura Atterberg won the grand prize — a DVD player. Raffle tickets for each participant were put into a drawing for the prize. "I have never won anything in my whole life, so it was neat to win something like this," Atterberg said.

This was the first year that the Casino Night had slot machines in addition to the usual blackjack, craps and roulette. The event offered bingo for the first time as well, using Valentine's Day heart-shaped candies as bingo chips.

Another big winner was UI freshman Kevin Burrell, who did some trash-talking with his buddies at the craps table all night long.

"Craps is my favorite game because I like to roll a lot of dice," he said. "It's an art doing so. You have to use the wrist right. I'm a ghetto entrepreneur, so I'm used to things like this."

Burrell, who said he might diversify and play cards next year, won a deck of UNO cards as one of his three prizes after obtaining 26 tickets throughout the night.

UI sophomore Megan Walton didn't win anything, but she intends to come back next year because she is usually lucky, she said.

"I was born lucky," she said. "I've always managed to win things, whether it's betting or winning something from radio

CITY & NATION BRIEFS

Man charged with domestic assault

An Iowa City man was charged early on Jan. 20 after allegedly choking his wife, according to police reports.

The Iowa City police responded to a call made by the wife of Jerome Brooks, 44, at approximately 12:30 a.m. According to police reports, she said her husband had strangled her in their residence, 2401 Highway 6 Apt. 1009.

The two have been married for several years and have a 4-year-old son, according to the reports.

When they arrived at the Brooks residence, police said, they saw that the woman allegedly bore red marks on her neck. Brooks was charged with domestic assault for causing injury and released from the Johnson County Jail on Jan. 20 after posting a $650 bond.

Neither Brooks nor his wife was available for comment Sunday. — by Kellie Doyle

Reagan goes home after hip surgery

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former President Ronald Reagan returned home on Jan. 20, a week after hip surgery; he will continue physical therapy sessions in the comforts of his Bel-Air home, his chief of staff said.

Reagan, 89, was released from Saint John's Health Center in Santa Monica around 2:30 p.m. and was taken for the 10-minute trip home by private ambulance with his wife, Nancy Reagan, at his side, Joanne Drake said.

Texas Gov. Rick Perry, who took over when Bush resigned as governor to become president, posed for snapshots with his family standing on Bush's new off-white oval rug, whose center presidential medallion was ringed by a border of pale melon and sage. A bowl of peach roses rested on the coffee table while just beyond the threshold, movers tripped over computer technicians and painters repeatedly shouted, "It's wet! Watch out!"

while encouraging public activism.

The significance of the rally was in empowering the people, said speaker Margaret Loose, a member of the International Socialist Organization.

"It helps increase people's confidence that the real power in this country is in the hands of the people who come out in the streets, not the politicians," she said.

The rally was sponsored by the International Socialist Organization, Iowa City Green Party, Johnson County Labor Party and AFSCME Local 12.

"This is fertile ground for activism," said rally organizer Martin Sanchez, a computer programmer for the UI College of Medicine. "We have to be out on the streets defending our rights."

Iowa City residents Renee Russell and Nate Kieso said they attended the rally to protest Bush's political views.

Amid the controversy surrounding Bush's nomination of John Ashcroft for attorney general, Russell said she was out to protect abortion rights.

"I can't stand for (Bush) to take that away from us," she said.

Kieso said his grievances with Bush were more expansive.

"Pretty much everything Bush stands for offends me," he said.

Protesters seized the spotlight toward the close of the one-hour rally, stepping up and delivering impromptu speeches themselves.

"It just goes to show that in Iowa City, despite the cold ... people care," Sanchez said.

Successful cloning raises hopes, fears was cloned from," she said. "They are biologically different, while being genetically the same."

If a human clone were to be raised in an environment different from the original human's, he or she would be a different person, she said.

While she does think it's interesting to clone an extinct animal for means of recovery, she can't help but ask the question, "Why?"

"There's a moral risk factor in cloning animals when you create embryos where some will be purposely destroyed," Mahowald said.

She said she sees very few benefits from cloning with the exception of cloning associated with therapeutic treatments.

There have been recent advances in cloning stem cells which could be used for therapeutic treatments, said Gregory Pence, a professor at the University of Alabama School of Medicine and Department of Philosophy and author of Who's Afraid of Human Cloning.

"This could help people with diseases of irreversibly damaged tissues by helping the body rejuvenate tissue," he said.

In addition to medical advancements, Pence said, human cloning would be highly beneficial to infertile couples and couples who would want to give a child the best genotype — one free of hereditary diseases.

Mahowald said the moral implications of creating a person with a predetermined set of genes should be called into question.

Although it is prohibited for U.S. government-sponsored entities to pursue human cloning, it is not against the law in the private sector. In several European countries, it is illegal to try to clone humans in both the public and private sectors.

Human embryos have been cloned, but not a complete human being, Mahowald said.

bars, targeting underage drinkers. Six officers on Jan. 18 and four officers on Jan. 19 worked in teams of two between the hours of 11 p.m. and 1:30 a.m.

The 99 underage drinkers arrested is up from the 62 underage drinkers arrested in the first weekend before the fall 2000 semester began. From 1997 through 1999, law-enforcement officers handed out 68 PAULA tickets, a number that has already been surpassed in the first month of the year 2001.

Duane Papke, the Public Safety associate director, attributed the recent increase in PAULA tickets to the bars themselves as opposed to increased enforcement.

"The department isn't doing anything new here," he said. "We simply are going out and seeing if the establishments are in compliance with the laws, and the statistics show some of them have been violating more than others."

The recent bar raids were done under the auspices of a governor's traffic Safety bureau grant, which has allowed local law-enforcement agencies to pay officers overtime in order to do bar checks for the past three years.

UI freshman Jessica Jacque said officers were specifically targeting younger-looking bar patrons. Jacque said she was sitting with friends at the Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St., without any drinks in front of them when they were approached by an officer.

"The police officer walked up to our table and said we had to take a Breathalyzer," she said. "He refused to tell me what reading I blew and gave all of us possession tickets. He had decided before he even approached us that we were all going to get tickets."

UI freshman Janet Skogsbakken, who also received a PAULA ticket over the weekend, said she doesn't see this influx of tickets as a drinking deterrent.

"The bar raids aren't going to solve any problems," she said. "People are still going to go to the bars and drink underage."

Students often view alcohol-related arrests as just another way to take money from students, Skogsbakken said. And the fines are steep: A first-time offender receives a $145 fine for PAULA, for example.

The Iowa City City Council is considering taking other measures to curb underage drinking, such as targeting drink specials and bars who serve underage drinkers.

"The council would only see turning the bars 21 as a last resort; it is something it really doesn't want to do."

'Nonpartisan' MTV ignores Bush Inauguration ...

Showing its true colors

MTV claims to be a nonpartisan network, but recent events prove otherwise. The proof: President Bush's inaugural party thrown by MTV. When did this gala occur? Answer: It didn't. MTV didn't throw Bush a victory party, as it did for Bill Clinton the past two elections. Perhaps because it isn't what it claims to be ... nonpartisan.

In 1996, MTV and Conde Nast threw Clinton a party in Washington that more than 2,000 people attended. The guest list was not only filled with political figures, it included celebrities, too. Why is it that Clinton deserved an MTV party? Maybe it had something to do with his willingness to disclose to MTV and the world in 1992 that his underwear choice is "usually briefs." Or maybe because the network just leans to the left. While Clinton talked openly with MTV about his past and underwear, Bush was refusing interviews and calling MTV a "teeny-bopper network." Clinton won the election, and MTV seemed to lean a little more to the left.

But this weekend was the time for MTV to throw the Republican president a shindig. MTV made no moves to welcome Bush. Realistically, it is impossible for a media corporation to hide its political views at all times, but MTV's recent actions — or lack thereof — demonstrate blatant bias. Bush may be a Republican who happens to always stick his foot in his mouth, but MTV could at least mask its dislike for him. Or better yet, it could stop pretending to be nonpartisan.

If MTV is not really nonpartisan, then it should not post on its Web site: "Feeling motivated? Ready to join the thousands of others across the nation working to get politicians to listen to young people? If so, click here to get connected to Youth Vote 2000, the largest nonpartisan coalition for youth in the 2000 election" (http://www.mtv.com/nav/intro_choose-orlose.html). It's obviously not true. MTV was willing to throw a party for a Democrat but not a Republican. MTV may dislike Bush, along with half of the country, but it shouldn't be so politically biased. MTV, along with the other groups that associate themselves with such things as Rock the Vote and Youth Vote 2000, should fix this controversy and state, "MTV: We are politically biased."

Putting the 'fun' back in 'Fundamentalism'

Your place in eternity: smoking or non-smoking?

So wondered a sign outside Bethlehem Lutheran Church in Granada Hills, Calif. I suppose I'd prefer "non," but that's beside the point. The aim behind this message, and others like it at churches across the United States, is actually more practical than existential.

In efforts to persuade more Americans to go to church and embrace the Lord for a couple hours every Sunday, churches are doing what any normal business would do — advertising. Increasingly, churches have used their outdoor message boards to convey eye-catching memos and strained attempts at humor in order to attract new customers.

"People see we enjoy the lighter side of life," Pastor Rowland Chandler of the Granada Hills church told the Los Angeles Times. "That might make them want to come in and see what we're all about." Essentially, he noted, "it's free advertising."

That it is, and it seems that Christian churches need it. With more than 200 religious denominations in the United States, the battle for membership has grown intense, and it's every sect for itself. Gone are the days of crusades and colonizations when the masses would, after being subdued, conveniently abide by one religion.

Things are different now, and the Crusades seem today are at the same time subtle, expansive and, as many would have it in the MTV era, more hip. Hence the proliferation of church signs with clever slogans and thought-provoking messages. It's the Thing to Do, and everybody wants to get in on the act. According to the L.A. Times, sales at the nation's leading producer of church signs have skyrocketed from $1 million per year a decade ago to $10 million last year. Business in the church-sign sector is booming.

But with a bright idea eventually comes overkill, so cute phrases such as, "Don't wait for the hearse to take you to church," or "Prayer is a merger talk with God and you. Build a bond, invest now," litter the yards of churches across the nation. Well, when presented with quotes as canny as those, how can one not convert?

Other messages, of course, have not gone over as well. "Ms. is an abbreviation for miserable," and "Thanks Mom for not aborting me," did not turn out to be huge PR successes for their respective churches. But the effort was there, though misguided.

So the trend continues, in spite of limited actual success. Amazingly enough, as one survey discovered, very few of the 40,000 Christians questioned actually mentioned a yard sign as their reason for attending a new church. "Most unchurched people aren't walking through life asking, 'Which church can I attend?'" Charles Arn of Church Growth Inc. somberly told the L.A. Times. Those pesky other religions and belief systems continue to stand in the way of success, but Christians remain resolute.

When not carried out on church lawns, the conversion battle is fought on the streets and, in some cases, in the air. On a flight to Los Angeles over break, I had the good fortune of sitting next to a counselor for a Christian group. He could quickly tell that I was among the "unchurched," despite my desperate attempts to conceal this fact.

With this discovery, naturally, came the offer for me to delight in Christianity and welcome Jesus into my life. After a while, the fellow bought me a Heineken and mentioned solemnly that Jesus, in the spirit of sharing, would have done the same. I agreed, and quickly drank the beer for religious purposes.

At a moment such as this, it becomes obvious that the face of organized religion has changed over the years. If the carrying out of God's message has shifted over the centuries from bloody plunderings of villages to the distribution of free drinks and quirky quotes, so be it.

While waiting at a stoplight, then, or sipping on a brew, some of us just might have the chance to ponder which section of eternity one desires to spend time in. It all depends, really: Which one is closest to the bathroom?

McVeigh could have won a medal

Timothy McVeigh was recently sentenced to die. While his crime may warrant the death penalty, the crime was morally comparable to government actions that triggered McVeigh's attack.

McVeigh was motivated by the U.S. government's attack on the Branch Davidians in Waco, Texas. He targeted the federal building that had issued the orders for Waco and attacked on the anniversary of the government's final annihilation of the Branch Davidians.

McVeigh's attack unfortunately killed people who were not involved in the Waco raid. That was deplorable. Equally deplorable was the federal government's siege on the Branch Davidian communal home. There, the federal government used military weapons and tactics in a 100-man assault.

In the process, the feds pumped enough CS tear gas to render unprotected children essentially catatonic. The federal government gave orders to fire CS grenades at any movement in the home. Though the home was filled with inflammable CS, federal agents fired incendiary devices into the home. When a fire erupted, fire engines were not allowed to approach the home. The CS burned and created plumes of cyanide.

When the rubble was examined, children's bodies were found showing that they had been gassed by cyanide. Their small, charred bodies were wretched into bizarre positions; the cyanide had induced muscle contractions violent enough to break the children's spines.

More than two-thirds of those inside the home were innocent women and children. The government acted without regard to the lives of these innocents. It was a minor improvement over the behavior of the ATF just months earlier at Ruby Ridge. There, the federal government shot Randy Weaver's son in the back. A sniper shot Weaver's unarmed wife as she held their baby. No one could seriously suggest that either of these were reasonable search-and-seizures authorized by the Constitution. A jury found that the few surviving Branch Davidians were not guilty of murdering federal agents because they had acted in self-defense. Like McVeigh, government agents violated the law.

Timothy McVeigh responded to this treachery in the way that the U.S. government would respond. If a rogue nation slaughtered dozens of innocent American citizens, how would the U.S. government react? It would bomb the hell out of the other country. Many innocent people would die as American bombs blew up foreign government buildings. How many children and innocent bystanders were killed in Serbia or Iraq when our air raids demolished scores of buildings? Are their lives less valuable than the Oklahomans killed by McVeigh?

The only difference is that instead of being sentenced to die, American pilots, as well as ATF agents at Waco and Ruby Ridge, were given medals of honor.

James Johnson is a DI editorial writer.

An examination of what is and what is not sexy in music videos.

Facing life & death with W;t

Nine actors, three hospital beds, two wooden chairs and one desk are all that are needed to portray the sharp contrast, yet chilling similarity, between life and death in W;t, Riverside Theatre's fifth production of its 2000-01 season.

Vivian Bearing (Jody Hovland), an English professor and John Donne scholar, visits her doctor one day after suffering sharp cramps in her abdomen. She is referred to Dr. Harvey Kelekian (Matt James) and diagnosed with metastatic ovarian cancer, a treacherous and incurable disease.

THEATER REVIEW

By Leanna Brundrett

Bearing is admitted to the University Hospital Comprehensive Cancer Center, where she undergoes experimental-drug therapy. During her time in the hospital, Bearing, and the audience, relive the past 50 years of her life via flashbacks.

The audience witnesses the moment that 5-year-old Bearing realized she wanted to become an English professor after learning the word soporific, the day she was reprimanded by her college English professor (Maggie Conroy) for using the wrong version of Donne's "Holy Sonnet 6", and the day Bearing wished she would have been a little more understanding of one of her English-literature students.

Hovland blurs the lines of reality between herself and Bearing many times during the 90-minute play. She possesses the ability to convince the audience that her character's struggles are really her own. For example, in a scene in which Hovland lies on her hospital bed shivering feverishly in reaction to the drugs, she plays the part so well that she leaves the audience debating whether Hovland suffers from ovarian cancer in real life.

Throughout Bearing's journey, the audience is introduced to other characters, including nurse Susie Monahan (Sandra DeLuca). DeLuca's warm and highly lovable attitude shows she would rather care for Vivian Bearing the person, not Vivian Bearing the experimental-drug research specimen.

This stands in contrast to the rest of the staff at the hospital, including four resident hospital students, Kelekian and his fellow doctor, Jason Posner (Robert Wray). They portray the "stereotypical" side of a hospital — where the emphasis is treating infections, administering the proper dosage of medicine and treating diseases (but not necessarily the people with the disease).

Posner does show compassion though, particularly when Bearing asks him why he wants to work with cancer patients and if he ever misses them once they have passed away. Posner confesses his true feelings to Bearing, who happens to be his former teacher.

Although the audience is told at the beginning of the show how it's going to end, somehow the ending still comes as a surprise. As Hovland and the rest of the company bring the audience into Bearing's life, one can't help but root for her to pull through and beat her disease. As a result, when she finally dies, it comes as a shock. With humor and determination, Hovland brings Margaret Edson's Pulitzer-Prize winning script to life on Riverside's stage.

Gladiator, Almost Famous win at Globes

■ Traffic and Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon were also big winners.

By Anthony Breznican
Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — The Roman arena epic Gladiator was named best dramatic motion picture at Sunday's Golden Globes, while Almost Famous, Cameron Crowe's fictionalized story about his experiences as a teen-age rock journalist in the '70s, won best comedy film.

Julia Roberts won best drama movie actress for Erin Brockovich, and Tom Hanks won best dramatic actor for Cast Away.

No one film dominated the night's awards. Gladiator, a bloody recreation of ancient battles in Rome's Coliseum, came away with two, including one for music.

Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon, Almost Famous and Traffic also won two each. So if the Golden Globes hold true as an indicator of how the Academy Awards will go in March, the field is wide open.

"For a few anxious minutes I didn't think I'd get to take this baby home," director Ridley Scott said after the final presentation.

Roberts said of the real-life lawyer's aide whose battle over water pollution inspired her film: "Erin Brockovich, the real gal, is awesome and should be a lesson that we are all powerful individuals who can make a difference in the world."

Hanks, naming two other stars honored earlier in the Golden Globe ceremony, said: "I watched Al Pacino movies, and I wanted to be an actor — that went hand-in-hand with listening to Bob Dylan songs."

George Clooney won best actor in a comedy film for O Brother, Where Art Thou?, and Renee Zellweger of Nurse Betty won best comedy film actress at the Golden Globes Sunday night.

Clooney, who played an escaped chain-gang prisoner in the Depression-era South, denied Jim Carrey a third consecutive win in the category.

"I think when you list the names of the actors in this category that you've got to figure I'm going to win this," Clooney deadpanned.

Amid doubts, Mideast talks open

■ Palestinians and Israelis begin a new round of negotiations after months of embittering violence.

By Laurie Copans
Associated Press

TABA, Egypt — With Israeli and Palestinian teams set to make a major push for a peace breakthrough at this Egyptian resort, both sides gave off signals Sunday that dampened the already slim hopes for success.

In Israel, Prime Minister Ehud Barak set lines he pledged never to cross, and senior Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erekat said the Israeli stance meant the "failure of these negotiations before they begin."

Nearly four months of Israeli-Palestinian violence have left both sides embittered; more trouble broke out Sunday. A 14-year-old Palestinian was shot and killed in the Gaza Strip, and three more Palestinians were wounded in the confrontation with the Israeli army near the Karni crossing between Gaza and Israel, said Shifa hospital in Gaza.

A small bomb went off Sunday evening in an Arab area of Jerusalem's walled Old City, close to a Jewish neighborhood. There were no injuries, police said.

Still, Israeli and Palestinian negotiators said they were ready for intensive talks that could last for up to 10 days. For the embattled Barak, the negotiations may be a last chance to revive his flagging re-election campaign.

Barak trails in the polls by approximately 20 percentage points heading into a Feb. 6 election for prime minister. Many analysts believe a peace agreement is his only real hope of catching his rival, the hawkish Ariel Sharon.

"I promise ... to end the occupation and the rule over another people," Barak said on army radio.

Sharon said he did not view the Taba talks as legitimate and said he would only accept a peace accord that is approved by the Israeli Parliament, in which Barak has just minority support, said spokeswoman Odelia Lazar-Carmon.

Even within Barak's camp, there was criticism of the timing of the negotiations. "I do not think that holding talks two weeks before the elections is proper," said veteran lawmaker Uzi Baram of Barak's Labor Party.

Eyal Warshavsky/Associated Press
Israeli right-wing demonstrators hold signs against the peace process during a demonstration in Jerusalem Sunday.

The talks "are good for Israel, and everything that's good for Israel must be done," countered Israeli negotiator Yossi Sarid, the head of the dovish Meretz party.

Barak himself said he was holding firm on key issues that led to breakdowns in previous peace talks — sovereignty over Jerusalem's most contested religious site and the fate of some 4 million Palestinian refugees and their descendants.

NATION BRIEF

Jackson thanks supporters

CHICAGO (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson thanked his family and supporters for standing by him as he spoke publicly Sunday for the first time since acknowledging he fathered a daughter during an extramarital affair.

But Jackson, speaking briefly to worshippers who packed Salem

Baptist Church, saved his most personal comments for his wife, Jackie.

"After 38 years, and five children later — Jackie, we're still here," Jackson said. "I love you so much." The congregation stood and applauded.

The civil-rights leader said he was grateful to supporters who made it clear that they want him to return to the helm of the Rainbow/PUSH Coalition as soon as possible, and he indicated he is ready to resume his work.

"Yesterday, the winds shifted, so it's a new stage in our challenge," Jackson said, referring to President Bush's inauguration.

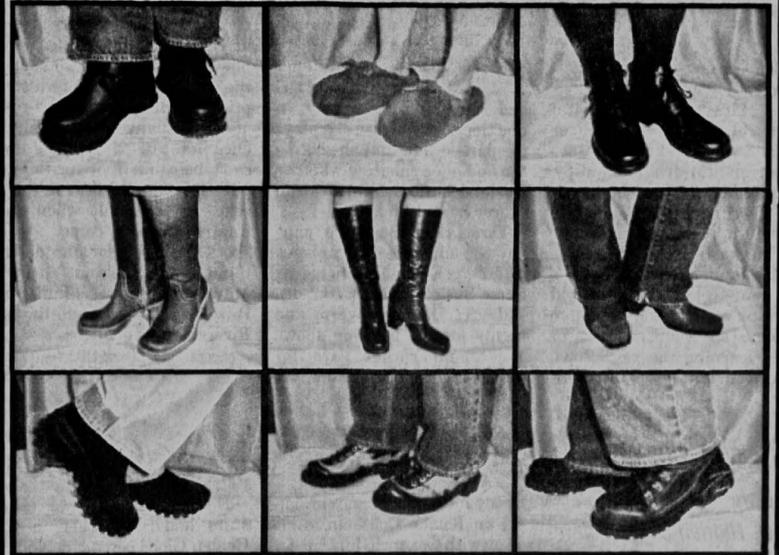

Jackson, who had been in seclusion since acknowledging the affair four days ago, told the Associated Press on Jan. 20 that he would return to the civil-rights stage next week.

Huge crowd sees Iowa pull upset

Iowa beats a ranked team for the first time in three years on a day honoring Chirstine Grant.

By Roseanna Smith
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's basketball team gave a season-high crowd of 11,000 something to scream about on Sunday.

Iowa cruised to a 79-64 win over No. 16 ranked Penn State, saying thank you in its own way to former women's Athletics Director Christine Grant.

"We're excited we can do this for Dr. Grant," head coach Lisa Bluder said. "It's a special day for her, and we knew we could do our part to make it a great game and to give the University of Iowa a win."

In the first half, fastbreak steals and second shots off rebounds came fluidly for the Hawkeyes. Iowa scored first and began building a lead with back-to-back steals from Leah Magner and Randi Peterson.

Penn State's Lisa Shepherd narrowed the Iowa lead to 8-6 when she sunk a 3-point goal at 15:33. Freshman forward Jenni Lillis responded with a jumper in the paint before an Iowa timeout.

Nittany Lion freshman and Big Ten leading scorer Kelly Mazzante threatened at 14:11 when she sunk a 3-pointer and momentarily took the lead, 11-10 away from the Hawkeyes.

Iowa leading scorer Lindsey Meder, hit a long jumper that sent the Hawkeyes into a 15-point run and 15-point lead they wouldn't look back on. This was made possible in part by fantastic Iowa defense said Bluder.

"I thought Penn State looked a little shocked at how good of defense we played in the first half," she said. "The 15-point run was crucial in this game. I thought the players were having fun playing defense and kind of inspired them to play better defensively."

Point guard Cara Consuegra agreed.

"I don't think I've seen that kind of defensive intensity on our team for a long time," Consuegra said. "When you play great defense, the offense comes that much easier."

And the offense continued to flow as the Hawkeyes received bench support from Jerica Watson, Beatrice Bullock and

Mary Berdo shoots against Penn State Sunday during Iowa's 79-64 upset win over Penn State. Nick Tremmel/The Daily Iowan

Late rally not enough to save Hawkeyes

After trailing the entire game, Iowa misses a last-second shot that would have given it a win.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's basketball team always seems to find a way to win. Almost always, anyway.

Players, coaches and fans watched helplessly on Jan. 20 as a last-second shot by Dean Oliver couldn't find the basket while the woeful Michigan Wolverines stormed the court following a 70-69 upset victory over the No. 14 Hawkeyes at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

The loss, Iowa's first at home this season and second straight, drops the Hawkeyes' record to 14-4, 3-2 in the Big Ten. After vaulting to the No. 14 spot in the national polls, Iowa appears to be headed out of the top 15 just as quickly.

"It would have been a shame if that (shot) went in," said Iowa coach Steve Alford. "(Michigan) worked harder, did a great job, and deserved to win this game."

Michigan coach Brian Ellerbe, on the hot seat for a lackluster start to the Big Ten season, concurred with Alford while calling the atmosphere at Carver "awesome." Ellerbe, clad in suspenders and a blue pin-striped suit, was both ecstatic and exhausted follow-

Hawkeyes face must-win game

Following Iowa's loss to Michigan on Jan. 20, Steve Alford called out his players for not being well-enough prepared. He said they were doing the same things other college students do, playing Playstation and watching "College Hoops Tonight" instead of being in the gym late at night working on their game.

The coach said that if the NCAA allowed it, the team would have practiced late into the night following the loss.

The question now becomes, will Alford's motivational tactic of lambasting his players in the media jump-start an Iowa team that has been plagued by poor shooting in two losses since a 3-0 Big Ten start catapulted his team to a No. 14 ranking nationally?

Up next for Iowa is a road game against an underrated

Upper weights for Iowa tumble in National Duals

The Iowa wrestling team places third at the National Duals.

By Nick Firchau
The Daily Iowan

Mark Feb. 18 on your calendar. That's the day the Iowa wrestling team will have a chance at revenge against the Minnesota Golden Gophers, who handed the second-ranked Hawkeyes their second dual meet loss of the season on Jan. 20 in the semifinals of the N.W.C.A. National Wrestling Duals in University Park, Pa.

The third-ranked Gophers used major decisions and a pin in the upper weights to earn the 20-17 win over Iowa (11-2, 2-1 in the Big Ten). The Hawkeyes rebounded Sunday with consolation-bracket wins over Oklahoma and Iowa State to finish third in the meet.

The Cyclones forfeited three matches to the Hawkeyes Sunday, as the Hawkeyes defeated fourth-ranked Iowa State for the second time this season, 26-21. The victory was fueled by major decisions from top-ranked Hawkeyes Doug Schwab and Eric Juergens. Lineup regulars Ben Shirk and Gabe McMahon did not compete against Iowa State.

Iowa forfeited two matches in the upper weights against the sixth-ranked Sooners Sunday, but its strength in the lower weights proved to be too much for Oklahoma, as the Hawks earned a 23-18 victory. T.J. Williams and Juergens both recorded major decisions against the Sooners, while Schwab got a second-period pin to remain undefeated on the season.

In the loss to Minnesota, the Hawkeyes once again flexed their strength in the lower weights, but their lack of productivity in the upper weights proved to be their downfall for the second time this season. Minnesota's Damion Hahn earned a major decision over Iowa's Jessman Smith at 184 pounds, while Owen Elzen pinned Ryan Fulsass in the 197-pound match.

Heavyweight Josh Liddle, who stepped into the lineup in place of Randy Fulsass last month, lost a 12-4 major decision to Garrett Lowney.

Iowa earned the semifinal berth after defeating Edinboro 35-14 in the first round and outlasting Big Ten foe and seventh-ranked Michigan, 20-18, in the quarterfinals. The Hawkeyes, who will travel to Ann Arbor on Feb. 2, got pins from Strittmatter and Schwab and major decisions from Juergens and Williams to counter the Wolverines' five victories at 165 pounds and up.

Schwab, Williams, Strittmatter and Juergens all recorded five victories over the weekend, including two pins for Strittmatter. Mike Zadick went 3-2 for Iowa while 174-pound McMahon went 1-2. Ryan Fulsass was winless in four matches, and Liddle went winless in three showings.

Putting keys Faxon to easy win in Sony Open

■ Brad Faxon nails four eagles during the week en route to the win.

By Doug Ferguson
 Associated Press

HONOLULU — Brad Faxon watched his chip shot bounce on the second green and continue its 90-foot journey to the hole. When it disappeared into the cup, he turned his visor sideways and reveled in his good fortune.

The way Faxon was putting, luck was the last thing he needed. The improbable birdie only summed up his week in the Sony Open.

"Everything went as planned, went as expected, and sometimes even better," Faxon said after keeping his distance from Tom Lehman and Ernie Els and completing a wire-to-wire victory Sunday.

Faxon made two 30-foot birdie putts to keep momentum on his side, and finished in style with his fourth eagle in as many days. That gave him a 5-under 65, matching the lowest 72-hole score at Waialae Country Club.

"He had a three-shot lead and shot 65," Lehman said. "That gets the job done. He answered everything I had to give."

Faxon finished at 20-under 260, which tied the record score at Waialae Country Club.

John Huston had a 260 in 1998 when the course played as a par 72.

Lehman got within one stroke after six holes, was even par on the back nine and finished four strokes back after a 67. Els had a 68 and was another stroke back, his third straight week in contention without a victory to show for it.

It was the eighth career victory for Faxon, and the $720,000 check was the largest in his 17-year career. And this victory came with some perks.

Faxon, who faced getting shut out of the Masters for the second straight year, should get enough points to move into the top 50 in the world ranking. All he has to do now is stay there for the next six weeks.

"I have some big goals," he said. "I've got to get back into the top 50 to get into the Masters. I want to play in all the majors and make the Ryder Cup team. To do that, I have to play well all year long and win a few times."

His second victory since July — he won the B.C. Open after failing to qualify for the British Open — also gets him into the U.S. Open. He also moved up to No. 8 in the Ryder Cup standings.

Lehman has seen enough of Faxon's short game, having also lost to him in the third round of the Match Play Championship three weeks ago.

West Virginia player spits on ND cheerleader

■ After receiving a technical foul, Chris Moss gives a cheerleader an unexpected shower.

Associated Press

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — West Virginia center Chris Moss spit on a female Notre Dame cheerleader and had to be pulled off the court by coaches after fouling out Sunday in a 78-61 loss to the Irish.

"I've coached 38 years, and that's never happened," West Virginia's Gale Catlett said. "But it will be corrected."

The coach said it was too early to say what action he might take against Moss.

Moss was given a technical foul in the first half for kicking Jere Macura in the face when the Notre Dame forward was on the floor. Moss fouled out with 8:56 left to play when he got another technical for pushing Troy Murphy between free throws.

When teammate Tim Lyles tried to pull him off the court, Moss swung hard to knock his hand away.

Official Jim Burr restrained Moss from getting closer to official Ken Clark, who called the foul. Catlett also tried to pull away Moss and was pushed.

Moss was finally pulled from the floor by Catlett and his assistants. Assistant coach Lester Rowley tried to escort Moss off the floor in front of the student section as fans taunted Moss.

Moss turned to the crowd and spit, hitting a cheerleader. It was not clear whether Moss intended to hit her.

Catlett said Moss has been frustrated because at 6-foot-8 he is playing out of position at center. The coach also said Moss has some personal problems, including a mother who is ill.

Catlett said he asked Moss to calm down before he fouled out.

"He was claiming all day he was getting shoved and pushed around and the officials weren't calling it," he said. "He just got frustrated and lost his cool."

In the first 10 minutes, Moss was called for two fouls. Catlett said he warned Moss not to pick up his third foul, but he was called for a charge with 1:31 left in the half and given a technical for striking Macura.

Despite rise in black athletes, coaches still few

■ Only five of 115 Division I football teams have black head coaches.

Associated Press

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Even with blacks making up more than half the nation's NCAA Division I-A football players, only five of its 115 head football coaches are black.

Some of those waiting for a chance to lead are asking why.

"I have the right background," said Michigan assistant coach Fred Jackson. "I know I can coach the game. I'll keep trying until, maybe, something happens, because I'm somebody who wants to do this."

Jackson, 50, has been a big-college football coach for 22 years, including the last nine seasons at Michigan. He is an acclaimed recruiter and has had his current position since the Wolverines' national championship season in 1997.

In 2000, Jackson was a finalist for the Broyles Award given to the nation's top assistant coach. He also is one of a growing number of frustrated blacks working to become Division I-A head coaches.

Jackson said he has pursued five head coaching jobs, including the recent Virginia opening for which he interviewed last month.

Michigan State's Bobby Williams, Stanford's Tyrone Willingham, San Jose State's Fitz Hill, New Mexico State's Tony Samuel and Louisiana-Lafayette's Jerry Baldwin are the only blacks among Division I-A's 115 head coaches.

With blacks making up 50.5 percent of all Division I-A football players, that bothers Jackson and others like him.

"What's the deal?" he asked. "More than half the players are black. For some reason, you can play it, but you can't coach it. That ticks you off. You just assume that you have not been the person that they need. ... You, in your heart, know some of the reasons why, but you can't let your heart prevent you from trying to go after your goal."

The first black Division I head coach was Willie Jeffries at Wichita State in 1979.

Of the 1,870 Division I-A assistant coaches, 381 are black, according to the NCAA.

The figures are similar for other college sports. Northeastern University's Center for the Study of Sport in Society found in 1998 that 5.8 percent of the NCAA Division I men's head coaching positions were held by blacks. The figures exclude historically black schools.

Bob Minnix, a Florida State associate athletics director and president of the Black Coaches Association, is intent on giving minority coaches a chance.

The 13-year-old association has a database containing more than 300 names of coaches with college-football coaching qualifications, available to anyone. The NCAA also announced it will open a minority job bank on the Internet this year to assist schools looking for coaches and athletic administrators.

Minnix's organization plans to initiate a minority-hiring report card this year to survey schools' practices.

"Being mad is not going to solve it," Minnix told the Detroit News for a story Sunday. "I'm not here to say you should automatically hire a minority coach. I've got to be more than just a shouter. I want programs to make black coaches part of the process, and give them an opportunity to interview. That is not happening now."

Billy Harris, 52, is defensive coordinator at Eastern Michigan. He had the same job at Stanford and also coached at Michigan.

Harris said he has soured on finding a head coaching position after attempts in the mid-1990s for Ohio and Akron jobs proved futile.

"I applied for (those) jobs and got, 'Return to sender,'" Harris said. "I couldn't get an interview. I had Bo (Schembechler) call, I had Mo (Gary Moeller) call, and I didn't even get a return call," he said, referring to two former Wolverines head coaches.

"After that, I decided I wanted to find a coordinator's job and ride it out," Harris said.

Williams, 42, had spent 10 years at Michigan State as an assistant when he was named to replace Nick Saban as head coach at the end of 1999. It was a popular move among the players and assistant coaches.

"I feel like I'm carrying the banner for a lot of coaches," he said at the time.

Rae Carruth awaits sentencing

■ The football player could get 25 years in jail.

By Paul Nowell
Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Rae Carruth awaits sentencing today, with the possibility of spending his next 25 years in prison for conspiring to murder his pregnant girlfriend.

The former NFL player, who turned 27 on Jan. 20, escaped a first-degree murder conviction that could have led to a death sentence.

He was convicted on Jan. 19 of conspiracy to commit murder, shooting into an occupied vehicle, and using an instrument, in this case a gun, with the intent to destroy an unborn child.

Defense lawyer David Rudolf plans to ask Judge Charles Lamm to vacate the conspiracy and other convictions because they are inconsistent with the murder acquittal.

"I haven't given up, and Rae hasn't given up," Rudolf said after the verdict was announced.

Carruth stood stone-faced when the verdict was read. On the other side of the courtroom, a smile appeared on the tear-stained face of Sandra Adams, whose pregnant daughter, Cherica Adams, was shot four times Nov. 16, 1999. She died a month later.

Adams raised her arms after the jury delivered its decision, then hugged other sobbing family members.

The verdict came after about 20 hours of deliberations over four days by the jury of seven men and five women.

Kwan gets big performance at U.S. Figure Skating Championships

■ The veteran staged two of her best programs since 1998.

By Nancy Armour
Associated Press

BOSTON — All season long, Michelle Kwan heard the sniping and the griping.

Her jumps were no more difficult than they were a few years ago. She was too cautious, skating with too much reserve, lacking that pure joy that made her performances so magical.

She was, dare we say it, beatable.

Well take that, naysayers! Kwan answered her critics with her fifth title at the U.S. Figure Skating Championships, staging her two best programs since the 1998 Olympic trials.

"It doesn't get easier. It gets harder and harder," she said Jan. 20. "You have to stay on top of your game."

Kwan certainly was. Her short program was magnificent, filled with a power, beauty and grace no one in the world can match, and it earned her seven perfect 6.0s.

Her free skate may not have had the same breathtaking energy, but it was vintage Kwan. She even tossed in a triple toe loop in the closing seconds to make up for the combination she botched earlier.

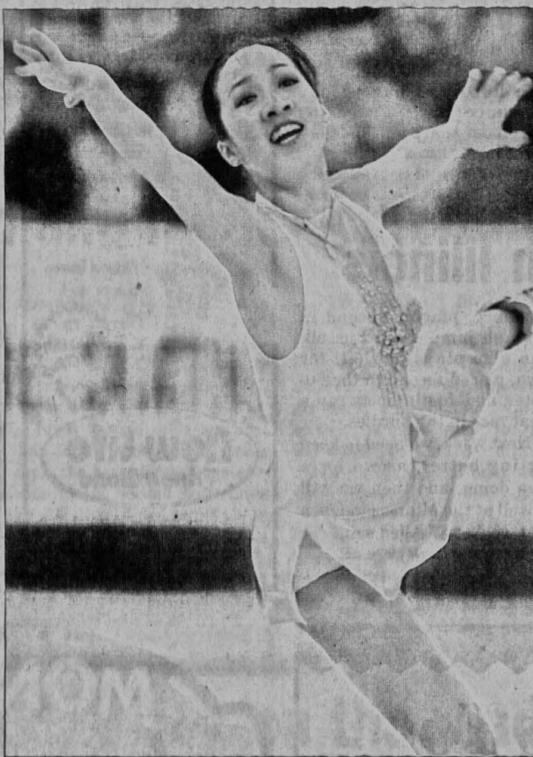

The program earned her two more perfect marks.

With five U.S. titles, Kwan now has as many as such Olympic gold medalists as Peggy Fleming and Tenley Albright. This was her fourth straight, the first woman to accomplish such a feat since Linda Fratianne in 1980.

"To be in the same category as Tenley Albright, I still can't believe it," Kwan said, choking up. "It's pretty amazing."

Kwan knows she still has room to improve with the Salt Lake City Olympics only a year away. All she has to do is look at the other two skaters on the medals podium.

is a 15-year-old on the rise. Though she lacks Kwan's polish, she gets closer every year and has the technical edge to be a real threat.

Angela Nikodinov seems finally to be living up to her potential, skating the two best programs of her career to finish third. Portraying "Sleeping Beauty" in the free skate, her presentation was world class, and she landed six triple jumps, though none in combination.

"People, particularly the media, they like to see a rivalry, they want to see a challenge. It makes a good story," said Frank Carroll, Kwan's long-time coach. "There will always be someone to challenge Michelle. I don't think she takes it for granted she's going to be No. 1."

That challenge is not only good for Kwan, it's good for the United States. Kwan, Hughes and Nikodinov will be a formidable trio at the world championships if they duplicate their performances at nationals.

Throw in Jennifer Kirk, Amber Corwin and 12-year-old mighty mite Beatrisa Liang — not to mention Naomi Nari Nam and Sasha Cohen, who withdrew because of injuries — and the United States is shaping up quite nicely for Salt Lake City.

"The depth in our women's field in the United States is quite extraordinary," said Robin Wagner, Hughes' coach. "We had two incredible nights of skating. I think there's still more to come."

Hawkeyes continue successful season

Iowa places second at the Michigan Invitational.

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

In perhaps what is quickly becoming the most successful season in Iowa women's gymnastics history, the Hawkeyes knocked off a top-10 opponent, and freshmen Alexis Maday outscored a U.S. Olympian. Iowa recorded a second-place finish on Jan. 19 at the Michigan Invitational. Iowa's score of 194.1 was good enough to defeat No. 9 Minnesota, which had 193.675, for the first victory over the Gophers for this year's senior class. No. 11 Michigan won the invitational with a score of 196.200. "This was a major stepping stone and should motivate us further," said senior Angie Hungerford. "This shows beating a Big Ten team is possible, and we will be in the hunt in conference meets." Maday won the all-around with a personal best 39.25, beating Elise Ray of Michigan, who competed for the 2000 U.S. Olympic team. Maday knew Ray during their junior-club days, which perhaps made the first-place finish a little sweeter. "It's a really good feeling to get the All-Around title. It was nice to see her again, but it was a good feeling to win the title," Maday said. Her teammates were also impressed with her performance. "Alexis was outstanding," Hungerford said. "That was the meet of her life. She blew everyone away." Maday said the meet was a big success despite not getting the win over Michigan. The Hawkeyes moved to 4-1 on the year and put up the third-highest score in school history. Iowa started on the balance beam, where coach Mike Lorenzen said his team had the best performance of the year. Maday captured third, while freshman Stephanie Gran took fourth place. Next up, the Hawkeyes moved to the floor exercise, where juniors Michele Ford and Corynne Cooper opened with solid 9.65 and 9.7 routines. Freshman Brandy Killian put up a 9.825, and then Maday dazzled the crowd with a 9.9. "The floor is my favorite event because I get to show off for the crowd," she said. "My floor routine is Michael Jackson songs, and the team gets into it, clapping and screaming. I get to smile and have fun." The Hawkeyes also excelled on the uneven bars. Their score of 48.95 was one-tenth short of the school record. Minnesota will get a chance to avenge the defeat when Iowa visits on Jan. 27. Beating the Gophers in Minneapolis will be a tough challenge, Maday said. "They will have the home-team advantage. However, we bond together, we've got what it takes to win it," she said.

IOWA MEN'S SWIMMING

Iowa loses tough swimming dual in Minnesota

Jay Glenn wins the 100-yard freestyle.

By Julie Matolo
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's swimming and diving team faced the tough reality of Gopher territory this weekend after coming up short a dual meet on the road. Though the Hawkeyes were impressed with their times in the dual competition, Iowa was not fast enough to surpass Minnesota's score of 175-112 in the Gopher pool. Iowa left Minneapolis happy with successful individual finishes and reminded themselves that they are on the right track for Big Ten conference meet. "The team had good fast times for this part of the season," said head coach John Davey. "We swam faster than last year at this time." The Hawkeyes surprised the crowd with a win in the 200 medley relay event in 1:31.40 and two individual event winners. Senior Jay Glenn won the 100-yard freestyle event in 46.12. Junior Marco Milenkovic made his first appearance this season by winning the 400-yard individual medley event. "We had great performances this weekend," said Davey. "The most impressive performance was by Chris Brunson who swam lifetime bests in the 100 and 200-yard breast events." Brunson, a sophomore, swam the 100-yard breast stroke in 2:04.97 and swam the 200-yard breast in 57.10. Senior Ales Abersek, the defending Big Ten champion in both the 100-yard and the 200-yard butterfly events, finished second in his strong events in 50.12 and 1:51.00, respectively. "I am happy with how things went," said Davey. "We had good swims for getting back from our training camp. The team had good swims and is right on track. We are looking forward to our next dual meet." Next week the Hawkeyes will travel to Evanston, Ill., for a two day, double-dual competition against Northwestern University and Ohio State University. IOWA WOMEN'S SWIMMING

Hawkeyes get strong individual performances

Melissa Loehndorf wins two events for the Hawkeyes.

By Julie Matolo
The Daily Iowan

The University of Minnesota women's swimming and diving team reminded Iowa this weekend who the defending Big Ten champion is. The Golden Gophers won their home meet, 187-112. The Hawkeyes left the Gophers with their own set of reminders as they captured a handful of impressive individual wins in the Jan. 20 dual competition.

Melissa Loehndorf, who has been resting a shoulder injury for more than a month, returned in style as she won the 1,000-yard free event in 10:11.05. The junior had continued success when she slid her hand to the wall first in a close finish in the 200-butterfly (2:04.58). She added a second-place finish in the 500-free event (5:00.87) to her list of accomplishments late in the meet. "I think we swam well today against tough competition," said head coach Garland O'Keefe. "I am especially pleased with the way we swam coming off a tough training trip." Allison Lyle stole a double victory in winning both breast-stroke events. The junior won the 100-breaststroke in 1:04.76 and the 200-breaststroke in 2:18.42, each of which broke the record for dual competitions between the two schools. Iowa brought home a third champion and many other impressive finishes. Senior Stacey Wertz claimed the 100-yard free event in 52.57, closely followed by sophomore Erin Strub's second-place finish in 52.72. Strub also brought home second-place finish in the 50-free (24.49). Michelle Bagi, a freshman, contributed a second-place finish in the 200-yard individual medley (2:12.02), while diver

Laura Maldonado landed in second in the three-meter diving (266.33). "This meet was very interesting," O'Keefe said. "I used this meet as a gauge to see where we are relative to Big Tens." Two more meets will take place before the Hawkeyes head to Big Tens. Next week, the University of Missouri will come to Iowa City. "We need to work on our speed," O'Keefe said. "We train hard and have good endurance, but we need to work on our sharpness and get after it in our races." DI reporter Julie Matolo can be reached at: julie-matolo@uiowa.edu

Hawkeye men have successful meet in Illinois

Jeremy Allen has another huge day for Iowa over the weekend.

By Julie Matolo
The Daily Iowan

One week ago, Jeremy Allen began the indoor track-and-field season by breaking the UI record in the weight throw and earning an automatic qualification to NCAA Nationals. Allen and the Hawkeyes knew they were on a roll when they dominated their home meet. On Jan. 20, the senior decided he'd experience winning again, just in a different event. Allen broke the UI school record and earned an automatic qualification to NCAA meet by adding a foot and a half to his personal best in the shot put (62-10 1/2), to win the event. Though team scores were not compiled, the Hawkeyes dominated the 10-team Red Bird Open in Normal, Ill. "This meet was even better than the last meet," Allen said. "This was the next step. Our freshmen are stepping up and doing better each week. Our upperclassman are performing well, too." Iowa senior Tim Dodge won both the 200-meter and the 400-meter. Jim Costello, also a senior, won the weight throw. Iowa's 4x400 team also brought home a win. Scott Faber won the pole vault while posting a personal-best performance. Luke Nessa also contributed an impressive performance, placing second in the high jump. Fred Russell, who also plays football for Iowa, placed second in the 60-meter, and Justin Poots ran a great race in the hurdles. "Next week, we need to keep getting better, as we have been doing, and then we will do well at the Minnesota Open next weekend," Allen said. Women's track team shows improvement Iowa places second in the distance medley at the Iowa State Open.

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

Improvement was the key word for the Iowa women's track team over the weekend at the Iowa State Open. Although the Hawkeyes did not finish first in any events, improvement was evident in lower times and better scores. "Ninety percent of the team improved from the previous week," said head coach James Grant. "We spoke after the meet about trying to improve each week as the goal." Nearly 500 athletes from 44 schools competed, but team scores were not kept. The distance medley relay team knocked 22 seconds off its previous score on its way to a second-place finish. The team of sophomores Sarah Arens, Ericka Roberts, Kristin Knight and freshman Atalie Barber finished less than 11 seconds behind first-place Nebraska. Iowa's other relay team also turned in a solid performance as Knight, Barber and sophomores Lacey Adams-Brown and Sarah Steffen combined for fourth place in the 4x400 meter. Steffen also set a personal record in her season debut in the 60-meter hurdles, 8.80, good enough for fourth place. Her previous best score was an 8.87 during the Minnesota Classic in 2000. "Steffen got off to an excellent start even though she might not have been ready cause of injuries," Grant said. "I had to find something for her to do, and because I already had two people running the 600-m, I told her to go ahead with the hurdles." Senior Julie Gallery tied for fifth in the high jump, with a 5-5 1/2 foot jump. Grant said she just missed a 5-7 1/2 attempt. Grant also noted the improvement in sophomore Michelle Lahann, who finished ninth in the 5,000-meter run. Iowa will travel to Minneapolis to compete in the Minnesota Classic Saturday. SPORTS BRIEF

Hingis advances Australian Open

MELBOURNE, Australia — Top-seeded Martina Hingis notched another impressive win earlier today in the Australian Open, beating Rita Grande 6-0, 6-3, in the fourth round. Hingis has lost 12 games in four matches. She's seeking her sixth Grand Slam title and her first since the 1999 Australian Open. Hingis advanced to a possible quarterfinal matchup against No. 6 Serena Williams, who was to play Daja Bedanova later today. Hingis beat Williams en route to the Sydney title earlier this month. "I'm playing well, so I have the chance to beat anybody out there," Hingis said. In men's play, 15th-seeded Arnaud Clement won in straight sets for the fourth match in a row, beating Greg Rusedski, 6-3, 6-2, 7-5. Rusedski, who upset No. 1 Gustavo Kuerten in the second round, smacked 19 aces to one for Clement but still lost serve five times.

Michigan's fast start key to win over Iowa ing the game.

"You didn't want to see either team fall," he said.
Yet fall the Hawkeyes did. After entering the game as heavy favorites over the now 8-8 Wolverines, Iowa allowed Michigan to jump to a 10-0 lead and never drew the score closer than the final margin of defeat. While the Wolverines mounted a double-digit lead, Iowa desperately searched for answers. The Hawkeyes hit on only 21 percent of their shots from the field in the first half, including 1-10 from 3-point range. The game's leading scorer with 30 points, Michigan's LaVell Blanchard, finished the first half with eight baskets, two more than the entire Iowa squad.
The final 20 minutes would be a different story as the Hawkeyes once again proved they are a second-half team. Even when facing a deficit such as they did on Jan. 20, victory was not out of reach. Iowa has won nail-biting victories over Missouri, Tulsa and Detroit this season, and for awhile, it appeared as if Michigan may be headed for that list.
But the comeback was slow. It took the Hawkeyes nearly 10 minutes to carve into Michigan's lead. With just under 11 minutes in the game, a free throw from Ryan Hogan began a 7-0 run to pull Iowa within eight, 54-46. A 3 from the Wolverines' Bernard Robinson Jr. quickly pushed the lead to double-digits once more as Iowa stumbled toward the finish line.

As Reggie Evans threw down a thundering dunk and Luke Recker hit a basket with under six minutes remaining, it appeared as if Iowa had finally found its footing before two quick Michigan baskets again quelled the charge.
With just a minute and a half remaining and the Hawkeye faithful streaming for the exits, Robinson extended the Wolverines' lead to 69-59.
Then it happened.
Dean Oliver sunk a pair of free throws, 69-61. He then hit a long shot that was ruled a 3 after review by the officials to make the score 69-64. Evans took a feed from Hogan for two points and sank a free throw after being fouled, 69-67. The exiting fans now circled the upper reaches of the arena, no longer sure of the Hawkeyes' demise. Michigan's Avery Queen hit a free throw, upping the margin to 70-67 before Recker knocked down a jumper, pulling Iowa within one with roughly 20 seconds to go. A shot by Leon Jones missed its mark, and with 10 seconds remaining, it appeared as though Iowa would once again rise from the ashes to claim victory.
Oliver drove to the basket and dished the ball to Evans, whose shot was off the mark. The ball was tipped, tipped again, and fell back into the hands of Oliver. Angled to the left of the hoop, his shot rimmed out at the final buzzer.

Brett Roseman/The Daily Iowan
Michigan's tough defense gave the Wolverines a 12-point halftime lead against Iowa Jan. 20.

Among few bright spots for the Hawkeyes was yet another double-double for Evans, who finished with 22 points and 10 rebounds.
Iowa had abundant chances for victory as Michigan dug a big hole for itself with foul trouble. Iowa went to the line 32 times but only connected on

22. Despite its many opportunities, Alford made it clear that he would not have welcomed the victory had his team come out on top.
"I have no interest in a team winning when it only plays five minutes," he said.

Hawkeyes can't press too hard for wins

Minnesota team that came back to beat Indiana in overtime over the weekend. I can almost guarantee Iowa will not come out flat. Dean Oliver and the rest of the Hawkeyes know this game has turned into a must-win, and they will do all they can to ensure a victory.
Which can be both good and bad.
If Alford's motivational tactics backfire, it will not be because Iowa did not try hard — it will be because the Hawks are pressing too much and forcing shots, something that can happen when a team loses two games in a row.

I have trouble believing complacency and video games are the sole reasons for the Hawkeyes' recent skid. Injured knees and overconfidence may have a part in the problem.
Luke Recker does not appear to be 100 percent, still hurting from a knee injury suffered a month ago. He is doing what he can to play on the injured knee, but no amount of guts can compensate for injuries that affect the fundamental skills of the game, such as jumping.
Granted, Recker did have 18 points against Michigan, but he shot only six for 14 from the field. In the second half against Wisconsin last week, Recker was not the offensive force he usually is.

When Recker is not 100 percent, it is up to Iowa's other weapons to come through. Other guards — Ryan Hogan and Brody Boyd, for instance — have to come off the bench and contribute quality minutes if the Hawkeyes are going to be successful.
Iowa also ran into teams that came into the games against the Hawkeyes in dire need of a win. Wisconsin had lost two straight games before facing the Hawks, and Michigan acted like it was going to the Final Four after beating Iowa.

No one said the Big Ten season was going to be easy, even though the buzz in this town a week ago indicated the Hawkeyes were well on their way to a championship. Reality set back in after two frustrating losses.
Losing to Michigan at home hurts because in order to win the title, teams should win every game at home and try to steal a little more than half on the road.
The Hawkeyes face a must-win, but what they must not do is over-exert themselves, because trying too hard will only lead to more losses.

Mary Berdo.
Berdo brought the crowd to its feet with 1:15 remaining with a 25-foot 3-point goal in preparation for Consuegra's steal and score leading into an Iowa halftime advantage, 42-28.
Peterson pulled down 10 of Iowa's 25 rebounds at the half. Of the 25, 18 rebounds were collected on defense.
Bluder thought Iowa's rebounding was outstanding against Penn State, which leads the Big Ten with an average 44 rebounds per game. The Hawkeyes outrebounded the Lions 44-30.

Iowa traded points back-and-forth with Penn State from the first Hawkeye possession in the second half. Lillis scored nine of her 11 points in the second half. She hit a layup at 16:48 on the putback from a short 3-point attempt from Magner, advancing the Hawkeyes lead to 20, 54-34.

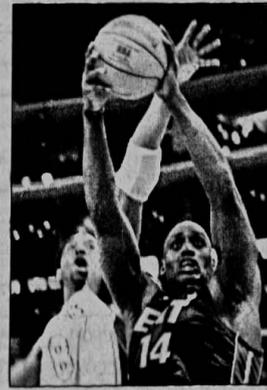

Consuegra and Mader led the point scoring for the Hawkeyes with 18 each. Peterson notched in double doubles, scoring 16 points and grabbing 16 rebounds. Lillis added 11 for the fourth Hawkeye in double digits, making a balance Bluder was happy to see.
"It makes us so much more difficult to defend," she said. "People cannot just concentrate on our backcourt anymore, which is making us a better team."

Consuegra's performance drew praise from Penn State coach Rene Portland, who called her the best point guard in the league. She also praised Mader's shooting.
"If I were a little kid sitting in the Iowa stands, I'd just want to shoot the ball like her."
Iowa, now 9-8 (4-3 Big Ten) takes to the road, to play Northwestern Thursday at 7 p.m.

Miami captures win on the road against LA

Associated Press
LOS ANGELES — Eddie Jones had 26 points and eight rebounds against his former team, and Anthony Mason scored 19 of his 23 points in the second half Sunday as the Miami Heat beat the Los Angeles Lakers, 103-92.
The Lakers, playing without starting forward Horace Grant, sidelined because of back spasms, lost for just the fourth time in 15 games despite 34 points and eight rebounds by Kobe Bryant and 31 points and eight rebounds by Shaquille O'Neal. Bryant fouled out with 1:04 to play.
Tim Hardaway had 22 points and eight assists and Brian Grant added 14 points for the Heat, who entered the game last in the NBA in rebounding but won the battle of the boards 44-39.
T'wolves 96, Grizzlies 94

Neil Jacobs/Associated Press
Miami's Anthony Mason shoots as Los Angeles' Kobe Bryant, left, defends Sunday.

Grizzlies, however, he's been the right option twice this season.
Ellis hit a 3-pointer with 45 seconds left to lift the Timberwolves to a 96-94 victory over the Grizzlies on Sunday.
Jazz 109, Suns 98
SALT LAKE CITY — No, Jason Kidd wasn't in the Phoenix lineup. Just the same, the Utah Jazz didn't fool themselves into thinking the Suns would be softer without him.
Karl Malone scored 30 points, and Greg Ostertag had a season-high 15 to lead the surging Jazz to a 109-98 victory Sunday over the Suns, who began a six-game road trip without Kidd.
The All-Star and U.S. Olympic team standout is mending his family life after being accused last week of hitting his wife at their suburban Phoenix home. Kidd won't be back until the end of the month.
Raptors 110, 76ers 106
PHILADELPHIA — Allen Iverson wound up with the bigger total.

Vince Carter walked away with the win.
Carter scored 39 points and the Toronto Raptors overcame Iverson's 51 points and two big deficits to rally past the Philadelphia 76ers 110-106 in overtime.
"That was fun, the kind of game you want to be in," Carter said. "Of course, it's always better if you win."
Iverson returned to the lineup after missing Jan. 19 win against New Jersey because of a bruised left knee. He shot 20-for-40 and scored all 10 of the Sixers' points in overtime.
Pacers 87, Knicks 74
NEW YORK — Reggie Miller says the New York-Indiana rivalry is dead. Given the lack of passion displayed by the Knicks on Sunday, they seemed to agree.
Jalen Rose shot 10-for-14 from the field and scored 24 points, and the Indiana Pacers showed they, too, can play some dominating defense in an 87-74 victory over New York.

Salary cap main reason for parity

■ The Ravens and Giants both went from .500 seasons to the Super Bowl within a year.

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — It's the immovable force vs. the immovable force, defensive powers that started the season as long shots. Yet this Super Bowl between the New York Giants and the Baltimore Ravens is hardly unlikely.
The key is the system that benefited both teams.
The Giants were 7-9 in 1999, 14-4 this season. The Ravens went from 8-8 to 15-4. Last year's contestants were the St. Louis Rams, who improved from 4-12 to 16-3, and the Tennessee Titans, who went from 8-8 to 16-4.
"No, I hardly expected this," says Ernie Accorsi, the Giants' general manager. "I thought we'd contend for a playoff spot. But this is the salary cap."
"There's nothing left of the old system. There's very little distance between the good teams and the average ones. A break one way or the other, and you're up or down."
So, look at this game as a classic defensive struggle, fit for the 1930s, when scoreless ties or finals of 3-0 were not so rare.
The Ravens set a record this season for fewest points allowed, 165 in 16 games, while yielding the fewest yards rushing in the NFL and second-fewest overall. The Giants were second against the run and fifth overall on defense.

two players whose marvelous seasons contrast with troubled pasts.
Lewis' troubles were far more serious: a charge of double murder lodged against him in the stabbing of two men outside an Atlanta night club following last year's Super Bowl. He eventually pleaded guilty to obstruction of justice and received probation from the courts and a $250,000 fine from the NFL.
Lewis said that gave him incentive for this season, when he was voted NFL Defensive Player of the Year, a middle linebacker whose style of play was in the Dick Butkus-Ray Nitschke mold.
"After I fought for my life in Atlanta, everyone said, 'He might not be the same again. He might not get 100 tackles. Ray Lewis will never be the player he was.' Well, they were absolutely correct," Lewis said. "I'm not the same player. I'm better."
While Ravens coach Brian Billick calls the charges "a non-issue," Lewis faces another test on media day Tuesday. Then, surrounded by hundreds of interrogators, he will be bombarded by questions about the Atlanta case. Even for an athlete who has been well coached and dealing with a far less incendiary topic, these mass-interview sessions can be troubling.
Collins, the Giants' quarterback, fed the Carolina Panthers to the NFC championship game in 1996, the second year in the NFL for both player and team. But his career spiraled downward—a trip fueled by alcohol.
He was accused of making a racist remark to a teammate, asked out of Carolina in 1998, and was photographed walking down a New Orleans street puffing on a cigar after being released from jail on a drunk-driving charge.
After being released by the Panthers, he spent a half-season in New Orleans, then signed with the Giants at the beginning of the 1999 season for $16.9 million over four years.

The Ravens set a record this season for fewest points allowed, 165 in 16 games, while yielding the fewest yards rushing in the NFL and second-fewest overall. The Giants were second against the run and fifth overall on defense.
The Giants arrived in Tampa on Sunday afternoon.
"We were about to land, and Jesse Armstead kicked the back of my seat and said, 'Do you believe we're at the Super Bowl,' defensive end Michael Strahan said.
If defense is the overall theme, give the early part of Super Bowl week to Ray Lewis of the Ravens and Kerry Collins of the Giants,

No. 3 Michigan State tops Buckeyes

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Jason Richardson scored 24 points as No. 3 Michigan State beat Ohio State 71-56, Sunday to extend the nation's longest home winning streak to 40 games.

Michigan State (15-1 overall, 4-1 Big Ten) will play its next three games and five of its next six on the road.

Richardson showed, once again, that he's more than just a high-flying player who makes spectacular dunks.

He was 9-of-13 overall and 4-of-5 beyond the 3-point line. In the last four games, Richardson is 13-of-22 beyond the arc.

The Buckeyes (12-6, 3-3) stayed close for the first 25 minutes but couldn't keep the game in doubt for much longer against Michigan State's superior depth and talent, even without Andre Hutson.

The Spartan's senior forward, who has started 113 of 121 games in his career, was relegated to the bench as he continues to recover from pneumonia.

Zach Randolph helped make up for the loss with 14 points and 10 rebounds. Adam Ballinger, who replaced Hutson in the starting lineup, scored 10 points. Charlie Bell added 10.

Ohio State's Brian Brown scored 14 points. Boban Savovic had 13 and Ken Johnson added 12 points.

The four ties over the first several minutes of the game suggested how competitive the first half would be.

I THOUGHT YOU WERE GOING TO THE GROCERY STORE?
I WAS...

BUT GWEN WAS ALREADY GOING, SO I GAVE HER A LIST AND SOME MONEY.

YOU IDIOT! SHE BUYS SOY AND TOFU. SHE'S INSANE! YOU PUT OUR GROCERIES IN THE HANDS OF A MANIAC!

YOU GUYS ARE IN LUCK, I GOT YOU THE LAST PACK OF TREE BARK TOILET PAPER.
YOU ARE SO DEAD

horoscopes

Monday, January 22, 2001 by Eugenia Last

- ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get into self-improvement projects that will take your mind off your troubles. Necessary changes in your home environment may not be welcome, but they will be favorable in the long run.
- TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Someone you least expect may try to lead you in the wrong direction. Investment opportunities will be favorable as long as you go it alone and don't partake in joint ventures.
- GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Rest and relaxation will be necessary. Watch your diet and your tendency to overindulge. Don't break promises that you made to children, or difficulties will surely erupt.
- CANCER (June 21-July 22): You will be ready to argue with anyone and everyone. Someone you care about may not be completely honest with you. Control your temper if you wish to avoid separation.
- LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your reputation may be affected if you get involved in secret love affairs. There is a good chance that someone is just toying with your emotions. Don't wear your heart on your sleeve.
- VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't be too demanding or negative with youngsters. You tend to want the best for everyone you love. Your desires may lead to isolation or retaliation.
- LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Direct your mind to areas that will bring you closer to advancement. Greater self-esteem will result from your accomplishments. Don't waste your time trying to deal with erratic individuals.
- SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Pursue competitive outdoor activities that will be sure to bring you the stimulation you require. You will be able to motivate others in a positive manner that will bring favorable results.
- SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Stay away from those risky financial ventures that you find so tempting. Don't make major decisions too quickly. Your need to exaggerate will get you into trouble.
- CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can expect those you live with to have their own ideas about how they want things done around the house. Don't argue; just work in your own space and avoid getting into heated debates.
- AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Don't make statements unless you have all the pertinent information on hand. You may be questioned and made to look foolish if you haven't done your research.
- PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Don't let your temper get out of hand. Someone may try to draw you into an argument. Use your compassionate manner to ease the tension and turn the situation around.
