Car accidents rock Iowa roads

Winter rips into Iowa again with a snow and ice storm.

By Danielle Plogmann and Chao Xiong, The Daily Iowan

Fresh snow and freezing rain contributed to 16 minor accidents locally as well as more than 20 accidents on Iowa highways and interstates Sunday, including one fatal accident near West Branch.

Felipe De Avila, 42, and daughter Lisa, 7, of Cicero, Ill., were killed Sunday afternoon on Interstate 80 near the 255 mile marker.

According to a State Patrol report, the De Avila family's vehicle had previously slid into a ditch. While the family was being assisted by Trooper Jeff Benson of Muscatine, the driver of a freight liner semi tractor hit the two victims as they stood to the side of the road.

The trailer came to rest on top of the trooper's car, pinning Benson and the two victims underneath the patrol car. The father was pushed out of the way and received only minor injuries. The mother and daughter were pronounced dead at the scene.

Benson was taken to UI Hospitals and Clinics, where he was listed in serious condition late Sunday.

Iowa City police reported that of the 16 minor car accidents that occurred in Iowa City between 2 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. Sunday, no injuries were reported.

Many of Sunday's accidents occurred at intersections in town, said police Lt. Dan Sellers.

Icon to stay alive despite rumors, eds say

Staff members and readers want the alternative weekly to continue publishing.

By Megan L. Eckhardt, The Daily Iowan

Though rumors have been circulating concerning the demise of the Iowa City-Cedar Rapids alternative weekly newspaper Icon, two employees say the paper will continue to publish.

Icon is primarily owned by Indianapolis-based Yesse! Communications Inc., which has put the paper up for sale because of losses in profit. Talks are underway with a contributor in the Iowa City-Cedar Rapids area to assume financial responsibility for the 80 percent of Icon that Yesse! owns, said Yesse! Communications CEO Craig Hitchcock.

Mike Breazeale, an Icon photographer, said despite rumors, the paper would continue publishing in the future, but it will not be publishing this week because of staff uncertainty.

"We heard we were closing, and then we heard we were not. Everyone thought it was closing, so everyone left," he said. "Last I was told was to work on future assignments."

Icon production manager Beth Oxler agreed that the official word was the newspaper would continue publishing.

"It's business as usual," she said.

But one Icon editor, Steve Horowitz, the Arts and Entertainment editor, said the paper may cease publishing if the unnamed investor doesn't agree to take over funding today. Though Icon receives revenue from advertising sales, without the aid from the investors, the paper cannot afford to pay its staff, Horowitz said.

"It's about a 90 percent chance (that the paper will go under)," he said. "They're still trying to find funding. We should know by 5 p.m. (today)."

Implementing a fee for the free newspaper was not a consideration because of the standard Icon follows, Hitchcock said.

"It doesn't really fit the model of an alternative paper to charge," he said.

The four other alternative newspapers Yesse! owns will not be affected, and the com-

From quitting 'real life' to running for City Council

What a difference a semester can make. The first time The Daily Iowan profiled five diverse members of the UI community for the "You are here" series, one was an energetic freshman joining a fraternity, another was starting her first post-graduation job as a nurse and another was a graduate student studying and teaching physics and astronomy.

Now, five months later, that freshman is dealing with being kicked out of his fraternity. The nurse has decided to go back to graduate school and the graduate student quit school and is considering a bid for the Iowa City City Council.

Trading in 'real life' for school After spending five months in the real world as a nurse at the UI Hospitals and Clinics, Amy Valesh, 24, is ready to turn in her paycheck and freedom to return to textbooks and papers.

In December, Valesh was accepted by the master's of science program in the UI College of Nursing. While she has not decided on a specific track to take, possible options include a nurse practitioner and anesthesia nursing.

Although she enjoys her job at the UIHC — taking care of critically ill patients during the night shift in the surgical intensive-care unit — Valesh said school is her main priority.

"In my current job, I've learned a lot, and I wouldn't mind doing it for another year. But I want to get school over with," she said.

Valesh graduated from the UI in May 2000 with a B.S. in nursing.

When she started in the nursing program as an undergraduate, Valesh had goals set for herself. One of those goals was returning to graduate school.

Most students in the master's program have had a few years of work experience before returning to school. Valesh, who has only worked for about five months, said she's not discouraged.

"In a way, I know I don't have as much experience as I could, but it would be harder to go back to school if I waited longer," she said.

While most UI students were attending their second week of classes, Valesh was attending her first class.

Each master's student in nursing has to take courses in leadership, nursing science and inquiry, "informatics," and health policy. Valesh began one of the four core classes for the master's program, "informatics," a computer-oriented course.

Her first day of school was not marked with nerves or long lines at the bookstore. Instead, she said, she was perfectly calm.

Going back to school is different as a graduate student because this time, she is attending school because she wants to, not because it's expected of her, Valesh said.

"It was weird — I used to get into this whole mental state before school, but this time it

At UI junior Mike Katznelson's residence Sunday afternoon, chips, beer and good friends came together for the biggest sporting event of the year.

To UI junior Justin Colmer — a die-hard Giants fan who was transfixed by the television — the game meant a little bit more.

When your team is in the big game, it's like you're in heaven, he said.

"Man, it feels great to be this good. I love the Giants and all New York teams," he said.

Seconds after Colmer expressed his affection for his team, Baltimore Ravens receiver Brandon Stokley burned Giants D-back Jason Sehorn for the first touchdown of the game. Cheers and jeers filled the room. Culver was livid. His team fell behind — a gap it would never make up.

Just because their teams aren't in the big game didn't mean UI students couldn't get into the spirit of things.

"I'm a Bears fan, but I'm also a football fan," UI junior Michael Matousek said. "I love to watch the games and cheer for individual players. I cheer for the Bears' conference (NFC) over the AFC."

Matousek, like Katznelson, preferred the comforts of his own home over watching the game at a local bar.

"With weather as bad as it is, I would just as soon stay here and save some cash," he said, noting that his couch is a lot more comfortable than a bar stool.

There is one bar seat, however, that surpassed

Police bust 36 in alcohol sting

Local law-enforcement officials continue their crackdown on underage drinking.

By Peter Rugg
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City police again joined forces with UI Public Safety for a series of bar raids on Jan. 25, charging 36 people with possession of alcohol under the legal age.

In similar raids during the weekend of Jan. 19, police issued a total of 99 PAULA tickets.

"Generally, we like to hit harder the first few weeks of the school year so we can get our message across," said police Sgt. Kevin Heick. "Then we'll become more sporadic and infrequent in our raids."

The raids were done with the assistance of the governor's Traffic Safety Bureau Grant, which provides local law-enforcement agencies with funds to pay officers overtime for the bar checks. The grant has been available for the past three years.

UI freshman Craig Kaufman, who was among those who received a ticket over the weekend, doesn't think it is right for police to ticket people who aren't drawing attention to themselves.

"We all know it's illegal to drink, but as long as you're being responsible, you should be left alone," he said. "But I guess they (police) have to make their money somehow."

The penalty for possession of alcohol under the legal age is a $100 fine, plus $45 for court costs.

While local bars have received criticism for the number of underage drinkers that are being served, police understand that bars can't control everything, said Erron Halen, the general manager of the Sports Column.

"Officers seem to realize how difficult it is to control all the underage customers we have," he said. "Our staff is under strict orders to card everyone. But if someone legal buys drinks for his underage friends, it's harder to catch."

To help regulate underage drinking, the Iowa City

City Council is considering an alcohol ordinance that would impose heavy fines on businesses caught providing alcohol to minors as well as increasing fines for possession.

Halen said he supports new alcohol ordinances, but he doubts their effectiveness.

"I would have no problem if we had to make our bar 21 and start turning people away," he said. "But until the

Alleged attack injures bar patron

A Coralville man was charged with assault causing injury on Jan. 26 at Gabe's, 330 E. Washington St., after allegedly cutting a man on the back of his head, according to court reports.

The man who was allegedly attacked needed medical attention, the reports said.

The man stated that he was using the restroom in the club about 1:30 a.m. when Raymond Parrish, 36, allegedly entered and said something to him that he did not hear, according to court reports. Parrish then allegedly struck the victim in the back of the head with an unidentified object, which cut open his head, the reports said.

During their struggle, the victim also suffered a scratched eye, according to the report. He received five staples to repair the injury on his head, the reports said.

Gabe's employees who worked Jan. 26 were not available for comment.

Parrish, who was unavailable for comment Sunday, was released from the Johnson County Jail after posting a $1,000 bond.

Officer injured in arrest

A routine arrest left an Iowa City police officer with a minor injury and a downtown business with a broken window on Jan. 26.

The officer, whose identity was not released, observed an altercation in the 100 block of East Washington Street about 1:30 a.m., according to court reports. As he was exiting his squad car, he saw an Iowa City man strike another man in the face. The officer made contact with the suspect, later identified as James Joyce, a former UI student, and told him to place his hands behind his back as he pulled him away from the fight, the reports said.

While the officer placed Joyce, 19, in front of a store's window, he continued to confront the victim and his friends orally, the reports said. As the officer attempted to handcuff him, Joyce turned toward the officer in refusal. After the officer made his request a second time, Joyce refused again. The officer then physically turned Joyce's body, at which time the officer unintentionally broke the store window and received a laceration on his right hand.

Joyce, 831 E. College St., was unavailable for comment Sunday. He was charged with interference and causing injury. He was released from the Johnson County Jail on Jan. 26. Joyce withdrew from the UI in December 2000.

India quake instills fear in some UI students

Students from India will begin to collect relief money for earthquake victims.

By Pam Dewey
The Daily Iowan

An earthquake that struck the Indian state of Gujarat on Jan. 26 — the worst tremor to strike India in 50 years — has some UI students worried about the conditions of people in the region.

The quake measured 7.9 on the Richter scale, destroying cities and tumbling buildings for more than 1,200 miles.

Some official estimates suggest that the death toll could reach as high as 13,000, because many people are still buried in the rubble.

On Sunday, an aftershock with a 5.9 magnitude struck; its epicenter was approximately 12 miles from the Jan. 26 epicenter.

The epicenter of the 7.9 quake was Bhuj, a city of approximately 150,000 people. More than 1,500 bodies have been discovered there so far.

In response to the disaster, the UI Indian Student Association will begin collecting money to be sent to the victims.

"I was deeply saddened," said Soheli Merchant, the vice president of the group and a UI graduate student. "We've decided to have a helping hand. We are going to try to collect funds from all sources."

The association has already started organizing a way to collect funds for the earthquake's victims, he said. It will start gathering money in about two or three days.

India Development and Relief Fund and a part-time UI student, said his group is also trying to collect funds. The national group will donate all of the funds collected to the cause.

"I'm trying to do as much as I can to raise money (for the victims)," he said.

More than half of the houses in Bhuj were reduced to rubble, while the rest of the houses were at least slightly damaged, leaving many people homeless and frightened.

Many panicked residents of Bhuj fled in cars and on foot with their belongings in tow after the Jan. 26 destruction.

"We have been walking since morning. We are fleeing for our lives," said Harjivan Vyas, 37, a factory worker in Bhuj. "There is no drinking water, no food. All houses are destroyed."

Some of the casualties of the earthquake included 350 children who were participating in a parade for Republic Day when the quake hit. The children were marching through a Kutch street when several houses toppled over on them.

Three people were pulled out of the wreckage alive on Jan. 27 by a unit of soldiers. Even though their conditions remain unknown, the rescued — two men and a girl — were the first victims of the earthquake to be pulled out alive by rescue workers.

Word spread quickly to some UI students who have families in India.

Preeti Deshpande, the communications secretary of the UI Indian Student Association and also a UI graduate student, said that although none of her family in India lives in the area of the earthquake, they still feel the effects of the quake.

"It's affecting the whole country," she said.

Deshpande added that the entire Indian community in Iowa City is concerned and talking about the aftereffects of the earthquake.

"We are all worried," she said.

2 killed in collision with school bus

■ Eight Northwest Junior High students and a teacher also sustained minor injuries.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

Two people were killed and one was left in serious condition after the vehicle in which they were traveling on Jan. 26 collided nearly head-on with a charter bus full of seventh-graders from Northwest Junior High, 1507 Eighth St., Coralville, en route to Sundown Mountain ski resort in Dubuque.

According to police records, Jeffrey Galle, 21, and Jennifer Schiltz, 21, both of Dubuque, received fatal injuries in the accident when the driver of their car lost control on snow-covered U.S. Highway 151 just north of Monticello. The vehicle crossed the center line, striking the charter bus and splitting in two. Terri Schiltz, 39, also of Dubuque, remained in serious condition at Mercy Hospital in Dubuque, hospital representatives said.

Police said they have not determined who was driving the vehicle or whether anyone in the car was wearing seat belts at the time.

Northwest Junior High teacher Dan Griffith, bus driver John Tillis and approximately 45 students were aboard the charter bus when the accident occurred. The bus, trying to avoid a collision, swerved off the roadway and over an embankment before coming to rest in a cornfield. It was one of eight buses the school was using for the trip.

Police records show that eight students and Griffith were transported to Mercy Hospital in Dubuque, where they were treated for minor injuries and released.

The injuries included minor bumps, bruises and bloody noses, said Northwest Principal Bryce Hansen. Griffith, who was sitting near the front of the bus, suffered broken ribs and a bruised and wrenched knee, Hansen said.

"I just feel very fortunate that none of our students were injured, but at the same time, I am very saddened about the loss of lives," he said.

The seven other charter buses transporting students to Sundown Mountain continued with their journey, while the students involved in the accident returned to Coralville. The exact cause of the accident is under investigation.

NATION BRIEF

Grassley takes over finance committee

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a Senate split evenly between Republicans and Democrats, two veteran senators from rural states who bring a practical rather than partisan approach to politics will control major pieces of President Bush's agenda, from tax cuts to Medicare prescription drugs.

Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, has replaced defeated Sen. William Roth of Delaware for chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, thanks to Vice President Dick Cheney's tie-breaking vote, which gives Republicans a 51-50 edge.

The panel's senior Democrat is Sen. Max Baucus of Montana, who takes over for retired Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan of New York.

In recent interviews, Grassley and Baucus were optimistic about their ability to work together but were under no illusions that achieving compromise would be easy.

"The Democrats wanted power-sharing. They've got power-sharing," Grassley said. "If they want to share responsibility, we'll get something done. The degree to which there's gridlock, they're going to have to share that burden."

Added Baucus: "If we really do want to work together, we will work together."

Bush advocates funding for religious groups

■ Critics say giving money to religious institutions violates the First Amendment

By Scott Lindlaw
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — After starting his presidency with a focus on the safe topic of education, President Bush this week ventures into more treacherous waters: He is promoting his proposal to turn certain government services over to religious institutions and pushing the GOP plan to provide prescription drugs to senior citizens.

Both initiatives are sure to spark intense debate as Bush opens his second week in the White House.

The president today was to establish a White House office that would distribute billions of dollars to religious groups and charities over the next 10 years. Bush wants to let such groups compete for taxpayer money to provide after-school programs, prison ministries and drug treatment.

To build support, he will meet throughout the week with leaders of spiritual and charitable groups, and he planned to attend the National Prayer Breakfast Thursday.

Critics say that shifting government money to churches, synagogues and mosques so they can expand charitable work raises church-state separation questions. Even some churches are wary of government money that might come with strings attached.

Also today, Bush was to meet with top aides to discuss a long-range national energy policy. Aides said the power crisis in California was certain to be at the center of the discussion among Bush, Vice President Cheney, Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill, Commerce Secretary Don Evans and Energy Secretary Spencer Abraham.

Bush has said the California crunch is a state problem, but by participating publicly in the meeting, he signaled that it is moving up on his agenda.

Police apprehend man with knife

Iowa City police officers were called to the Hy-Vee Food Store, 1720 Waterfront Drive, at 4:25 p.m. Sunday after an unidentified man was seen standing near the store with a knife, police Sgt. Kevin Heick said.

When officers arrived on the scene, Heick said, they found a man holding a knife in a way that made the officers believe he would cause harm to himself. He appeared to have already caused harm to his body, Heick said.

The officers tried to persuade the man to put down the knife, but he refused. To remove the weapon from his possession, they fired "bean sock" rounds, which hit the skin but don't usually penetrate it, Heick said.

Shots hit the man and the knife, and the knife was knocked out of his hand, Heick said.

The man has yet not been identified. He was taken to UI Hospitals and Clinics for assessment and evaluation. Hy-Vee store management refused to comment.

Salt Lake snatches back Jell-O title from Des Moines

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Salt Lake City has earned back the title of No. 1 in Jell-O consumption per capita, taking back the slippery "championship" from Des Moines.

And the state Senate is considering a resolution to declare the jiggy dessert the official snack of Utah.

The measure, sponsored by Sen. Leonard Blackham, R-Moroni, would declare Feb. 4-10 "Jell-O Week," to be celebrated annually.

"I chose Jell-O because of what it stands for: wholesomeness and family values," Blackham said. "This is fun in the right sense of recognizing something that's a vehicle for some important values."

The resolution also cites the popularity of the 2002 Winter Olympic green gelatin pin and the state's long and storied history of eating lots and lots of Jell-O.

On Jan. 31, Jell-O spokesman Bill Cosby will make an appearance at a joint session of the House and Senate. At that session, the state will make Cosby an honorary citizen. And Jell-O will have a display — and hand out samples — in the Capitol Rotunda.

Stock Exchange: No more fractions

■ The New York Stock Exchange will trade its stocks in decimals only beginning today.

By Lisa Singhania
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Fractions are no longer welcome on the New York Stock Exchange.

Beginning today, the exchange will trade all its stocks in decimals, the last step in a government-mandated move that has been planned for three years.

Nearly 3,400 stocks that until now have been traded in halves, quarters, eighths and sixteenths are due to be switched when trading begins today. Exchange officials aren't too nervous — they've had some practice, with 159 issues already trading in decimals as part of a pilot program that began last summer.

"The decimal capability is already embedded in the exchange systems," said Bob Britz, the NYSE executive vice president of market operations, technology and market data.

The same change is scheduled for today on the smaller American Stock Exchange, which also launched a pilot program last summer. An estimated 1,500 stocks and options will be affected there.

But the switch-over won't involve all U.S. stocks, at least not yet. The NASDAQ, home to more than 4,600 companies, including Intel and Microsoft, plans to start converting its trading to decimals in March and finish by April 9, the deadline set by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The SEC ordered the shift to decimalization on the theory it would make stock prices easier for investors to understand and potentially open stock bidding and selling to more competition.

Fractions had been used to trade stocks for more than 200 years, a legacy of Spanish traders, whose currency was in increments of eighths.

For most individual investors, the adjustment to the new system should be minimal. Most newspaper tables, including those distributed by the Associated Press, converted to decimals last summer, and many brokerages have spent months preparing their customers for the change.

Fugitive may face civil penalties

■ Former President Clinton's pardon of financier Marc Rich has become a flashpoint.

By Ron Kampeas
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A lawyer for Marc Rich, the fugitive financier whose pardon has clouded President Clinton's exit from office, said Sunday his client is ready to return to face possible civil penalties on charges he did not pay millions in taxes.

Rich, indicted in 1983 by a federal grand jury on evading more than $48 million in income taxes, has been living in Switzerland. He is the ex-husband of Denise Rich, a major financial contributor to the Democratic Party.

Marc Rich's lawyer, former Clinton administration White House counsel Jack Quinn, said Rich would not invoke statute of limitation allowances that could frustrate government efforts to force him to face civil action.

"He will and should face any assertions that he owes civil penalties," Quinn said on NBC's "Meet The Press."

Quinn said it was his understanding that Marc Rich and his business partner Pincus Green, also pardoned by Clinton, would return to the United States.

Quinn emphasized that Marc Rich would continue to maintain his innocence. He contends the transactions in question were carried out by Swiss companies associated with Rich and were not subject to the tax laws of the time.

Marc Rich was indicted in Manhattan federal court in 1983, shortly after he fled the country, on charges of tax fraud and illegally buying oil from Iran during the 1979 hostage crisis.

President Clinton's pardon of Marc Rich, among 176 pardons and clemencies he issued on Jan. 20, his last day in office, has led to allegations that it was tied to Denise Rich's political contributions, including those to the New York Senate campaign of Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Quinn and Denise Rich have strongly denied this.

New York City Mayor Rudolph Giuliani, who as federal prosecutor had pursued Marc Rich in the early 1980s, said he supported the congressional investigation announced last week by Rep. Dan Burton, R-Ind., the chairman of the House Government Reform Committee.

"You have on the one side, a fugitive for many, many years, one of the top six fugitives of the Justice Department ... on the other side a lot of unanswered questions about over a million dollars in campaign contributions," Giuliani said on NBC.

Denise Rich has contributed more than $1 million to Democrats since 1993, including contributions to Rodham Clinton.

The mayor, who canceled a routine meeting with the senator last week in order to signal his anger with the pardon, said he was especially outraged that Marc Rich was never even tried before receiving the pardon.

But that is not without precedent: In 1992, former President Bush ended his term in office by pardoning, before trial, six Reagan administration officials indicted in the Iran-Contra affair, including former Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

Dartmouth professors found dead

■ Susanne and Half Zantop's bodies were found at their home on Jan. 27.

By J.M. Hirsch and Holly Ramer
Associated Press

HANOVER, N.H. — The safe, close-knit feel of Dartmouth College was shattered Sunday by the suspicious deaths of two popular, long-time professors, a couple described as the pillars of the Ivy League school's faculty.

Susanne and Half Zantop had welcomed so many guests into their home "they practically seemed to run a hotel," said colleague Bruce Duncan.

The couple's latest guests arrived at their home on Jan. 27 only to find their hosts' bodies.

Police were close-mouthed, saying little more at a brief news conference early Sunday than that the deaths were suspicious.

Investigators stationed outside the couple's home four miles east of the campus stopped passing cars to question drivers during the night. However, officers told at least one neighbor there was no cause for alarm.

Guest Roxanne Verona and a companion found the bodies about 6:30 p.m., but police had told them not to talk to reporters about the discovery.

"They are wonderful people," the instructor of French and Italian said of the Zantops, then corrected herself: "They were wonderful people. They were special — intellectually, humanly, everything."

Susanne Zantop, 55, was a professor of German and the chairwoman of Dartmouth's German Studies Department. Her 62-year-old husband taught earth sciences. They had been instructors at Dartmouth for at least 25 years, said Edward Berger, the dean of faculty for arts and sciences.

"Everybody feels they were their best friends, because they were friends to everyone," said Susannah Heschel, the chairwoman of the school's Jewish Studies Department. "Their home was the center for so many of us."

Heschel said that when she and her husband first came to Dartmouth three years ago, the Zantops were among the first to welcome them.

"As soon as we arrived here, they invited us over constantly, they included us in everything," she said, her voice cracking. "Everyone is so shocked because their home was so open to all of us. It just radiated their warmth and for this to happen in their home ..."

Many of the college's nearly 5,600 students learned of the deaths in a campus-wide email from the staff of the student newspaper, The Dartmouth.

"I couldn't breathe," Kinohi Nishikawa, a senior at the college and a research assistant in the German Studies Department, said of his reaction to the e-mail.

During the holidays, Nishikawa had visited a friend in Germany and bumped into the Zantops, who were both born in Germany, coming out of a theater.

"She was so nice," he said. "She welcomed us to Berlin."

Second semester setbacks

For UI freshman William Holscher, the new semester has brought about many changes and challenges.

So far, the biggest hurdle for Holscher is his suspension from his fraternity. During the first week of classes this semester, he said, he was told that one of his fraternity brothers had called a meeting about him and that he was voted out of his fraternity. The news came as a shock to Holscher.

"It's been hard. I still think of all the guys in my fraternity as my brothers," he said. "I don't know what to think or what I am going to do."

Although he has run into some of his fraternity brothers when he is out, he said, he does not talk to them much because it is awkward.

Later that same week, Holscher said he received his eighth residence-hall violation of the school year for having alcohol in his room. He said he now has to be on his best behavior and has several community-service hours to fulfill.

"I don't know why I always get in trouble. It's not like I go out looking for it," Holscher said.

In addition to his recent setbacks, the semester is going to be a trying one in terms of academics, Holscher said. He made it through his first semester of college narrowly keeping his grade-point average high enough to be eligible to apply for the business school.

This semester, Holscher said, he is taking more credits than last semester, and he thinks his classes will be harder and require more work.

Although he does not have a plan of attack for studying this semester, Holscher said, he intends to study more.

"I've made it through so far with my GPA, but I know I have to be very cautious," he said.

With all that has happened to him in the first two weeks he has been back, Holscher said, he is glad to be back in Iowa City with his friends and is determined to make the most of his situation.

"I'm kicked out of my fraternity. I'm on the verge of being kicked out of the dorms. But, hopefully I can use this (to better myself)," he said.

'Senioritis' setting in UI senior Elliot Royer is trying to skate through the last semester of his senior year taking the bare minimum.

He's only taking 12 hours of class — including Volleyball and Relaxation Techniques. His graduation application isn't filled out yet, and he doesn't even know when it's due. He still hasn't done much homework, and he doesn't want to, either. He's got "senioritis."

"My goal is to just get through, have a lot of fun, and not fail any of my classes," Royer said. "I'll definitely do my share of going out and having fun."

Although he may be the typical procrastinating senior who's not concerned with getting good grades or attending class, Royer has already set goals and made plans for his future. He says he's more than ready to get started — after a little vacation.

He and his girlfriend, UI senior Nora Clemons, plan to have "one last hurrah" during their final summer of freedom — renting an apartment in Europe for the summer is on the agenda.

Then, it's Royer's debut in the "real world." He will probably live in Rochester, N.Y., or near Chicago — wherever Clemons decides to go to medical school. Royer is planning to get a job as a paramedic in the city they end up residing in.

He will no longer call his parents' house in Kansas City home. Royer realized during Winter Break that it would probably be the last significant amount of time he would spend at the home he has known for the majority of his life.

"It's kind of an odd feeling — this is my last time doing this," Royer said.

Getting into local government

After ditching his goal of receiving a master's degree from the UI in physics and his aspirations of becoming a novelist, Brian Davis' newest ambition lies in politics.

Davis' recent departure from the UI graduate program is causing him to address some of his concerns about the city, including the recent drinking proposal, the downtown atmosphere and city spending, by running for the Iowa City City Council while also looking for a job and slowly falling into debt.

Currently, Davis is seeking support from the Iowa City Green Party and Students for Local Politics, but the campaign doesn't officially begin until June 1, the same date Davis will have to start paying off his student loans.

The campaign includes gathering 150 signatures from local residents and students. Davis is hopeful about his chances.

"I'm optimistic because I do want to work and serve the community," he said. "I've always wanted to be political. Now I have the time and energy again to get back into it."

Davis also believes getting more voices heard by the city government is important.

"I'm going to stay in Iowa City," he said. "I really like it, but the government can be changed in a lot of ways."

Davis is also suffering from the strain of finding a job to pay for each week's meals and for the debt that he accumulated during six years of college.

"I'm going to have to kill myself or leave the country when I have to start paying off my loans," he said. "But I don't have enough money for a plane ticket or a gun."

Right now, Davis is donating his plasma for $40 a week to pay for his "cheap way of living," but he would like to find a meaningful job, such as the volunteer work he did while an undergraduate.

"I would really like to do something that helps people," he said. "But I can't find anything meaningful that I'm qualified for."

Playing 'mom' for a fellow countrywoman

UI junior Toni Neykova welcomed a familiar face to the UI women's tennis team this semester — a friend and former teammate from her home country, Bulgaria.

Deni Alexandrova, a 19-year-old UI freshman, recently made the same dramatic move Neykova did in January 1999, departing from her native land to the United States this past month. Now, she is surrounded with the same uncomfortable adjustments Neykova had to conquer two years ago.

"I miss my parents and friends a lot. It's so far away," Alexandrova said. "But Toni was my best friend, and I think we're going to stay best friends here. She's a very joyful woman."

Neykova returned from a relaxing and fun Winter Break in Plovdiv, Bulgaria, to take on the role of "mom" for the start of the spring semester.

Recalling the many difficulties she encountered within her first few months at the UI, she said she felt obligated to help her friend familiarize herself with the new area and culture.

"I help her with everything," Neykova said. "I've been getting up early to help her find her classes, and we went shopping at the mall to buy her pillows and other stuff she needs."

Neykova also introduced

Alexandrova to many of her friends as well as the women on the tennis team to make her feel more at home.

Neykova and Alexandrova, who is from Sofia, Bulgaria, were doubles partners for about two years and are former Bulgarian national doubles champions. UI women's coach Paul Wardlaw recruited Alexandrova after Neykova told him of her friend's ability. The duo will not continue its doubles partnership, however, as Wardlaw feels Neykova is playing well with her current partner.

Alexandrova is attending the UI on a full scholarship, as is Neykova, and she has made a great addition to the team, Neykova said. She said she is also thrilled to finally have someone nearby who she has so much in common with.

"I'm happy to have someone around to speak Bulgarian with," she said. "I can tell jokes and somebody will understand me."

The shadow of his style

Film: Shadow of the Vampire
Director: E. Elias Merhige
Writer: Steven Katz
Starring: John Malkovich and Willem Dafoe
Length: 93 minutes
Rated: R

There is a wonderful scene in the documentary Hearts of Darkness, which chronicles the tumultuous making of Apocalypse Now, in which director Francis Ford Coppola is shouting into a telephone. His star, Martin Sheen, has just had a mild heart attack, and Coppola is afraid that word of this might leak back to Hollywood and his producers. "If Marty dies, I want to hear everything is OK... until I say Marty is dead," Coppola yells.

I couldn't help but think of this scene as I watched E. Elias Merhige's entrancing, if somewhat uneven, new film, Shadow of the Vampire. It presents a fictionalized account of the making of F.W. Murnau's silent horror classic, Nosferatu. Shadow cleverly suggests that the actor Murnau chose to portray the vampire Count Orlock — Max Schreck — is actually a vampire. And like Coppola, Murnau is determined to complete his movie, even if it means sacrificing (literally) his leading lady and a few crew members along the way.

Screenwriter Steven Katz explains the inspiration for Shadow's peculiar plot on the film's Web page: "About 10 years ago, I became very interested in Nosferatu. I especially liked the fact that the film looks incredibly realistic — to the point that you almost think you are watching an old documentary about a vampire. I then got the idea of what would happen if the actor who played the vampire in the film was really a vampire."

Murnau persuades his crew that Schreck is a highly trained method actor who will appear only in character. As a result, of course, all of his scenes must be filmed at night. In exchange for Schreck's "acting" skills, Murnau offers him the neck of the film's leading lady. Unfortunately, Schreck can't wait for filming to end before biting his first crew member, which is just the first of many problems that develop on Murnau's set.

Shadow is a darkly funny and often insightful meditation on the creative process, thanks primarily to the skill of its stars. John Malkovich finds just the right balance of artistic genius and obsession as Murnau, while Willem Dafoe is intensely creepy as Schreck. It's difficult to imagine anyone else playing either part. In fact, I began to wonder whether Dafoe "became" Count Orlock during filming, much like the film suggests about Schreck.

The cinematography and art direction are also remarkable, as Merhige seamlessly cuts between the color of the "real world" and the black-and-white film stock of Murnau's film.

If Shadow fumbles at all, it's in the editing of the story, which is somewhat disjointed. The movie sometimes feels like a col-

The Wedding Planner honeymoons with box office

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Moviegoers liked Jennifer Lopez as The Wedding Planner, making the romantic comedy No. 1 at the box office, as studios challenged Sunday's Super Bowl, drawing more filmgoers this year than last.

Despite the allure of football's main event, studios reported a strong showing over the weekend, grossing an estimated $76 million, an industry analyst said.

"Last year was a lot weaker than this year. The lineup of women's films in the marketplace serving as counter-programming to the Super Bowl was really effective," said Paul Dergarabedian, the president of Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc.

Ticket sales were estimated for Jan. 26 through Sunday at North American theaters, according to Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc.

Gigs weekend Music Reviews

Hello Dave
The Q Bar, Jan. 28
Hello Dave wants you to have a good time. That may seem true of every band, but rarely does a group of performers pay so much attention to how the audience is doing. Last weekend at the Q Bar, Hello Dave dropped by to check up on an old friend.

In recent years, Hello Dave has become a staple of the Iowa City live-music scene. On Jan. 28, band members Mike Himebaugh, Mike McGohan, Allen Wetzel and Brian Resendiz seemed utterly at home on the Q Bar stage, a venue that pushes capacity every time the Chicago roots-rock act performs.

Hello Dave's latest appearance was no different, as its loyal following turned out in full force for a set list that featured crowd favorites from its breakthrough album West, as well as a healthy dose of tunes from its latest effort, the live album Wicked Revelry. Vocalist Himebaugh was his usual charming self, grinning through the funky "Candy," the gospel-tinged "Golden" and "Saturmilia," the first single from Wicked Revelry.

The scene at the Q could best be described as a joyful, energetic reunion between a hard-working band and its equally hard-working fans. It was as much of a sing-along as a concert, and the guys on stage wouldn't have had it any other way.

Teddy Morgan and the Pistolas
Green Room Jan. 25
Teddy Morgan and the Pistolas kicked up some serious dust at the Green Room on Jan. 25. Promoting its most recent studio-album, Lost Love and Highways, which was produced by local ax man Bo Ramsey, the Austin-based three-piece roared through two crowd-pleasing sets.

Combining country, rock, blues and a hint of swing, the group was driven by Morgan's hypnotic style of guitar playing. At times sweet and sultry, at others maddening in sheer speed, Morgan never let the crowd get too comfortable with one riff. Barely pausing for breath, Morgan and the Pistolas took the stage alongside father-figure Bo Ramsey for the second set. The members of the group seemed to glow in the presence of their producer and friend.

The band did a few covers, including Elvis Costello's "Peace, Love and Understanding" and Bob Dylan's "Just Like Tom Thumb's Blues," but Morgan and the Pistolas' originals were in no way lacking. Lyrics displayed road-weary themes of sleeping in truck stops and small towns in the middle of nowhere, along with the usual cowboy topics of Cadillac and lost love. The evening reached a high when local folkster-turned-rocker Greg Brown melted the mike for a few songs. Bassist Jon Penner and drummer Chris Munter didn't miss a beat, but it was unmistakably Morgan's driving force on guitar and vocals that makes the band what it is.

The Mountain Goats, Making Hey and Why Make Clocks
Gabe's, Jan. 25
Why Make Clocks, a group from Central Iowa, opened with a slow set of quality songs featuring vague lyrics. Making Hey followed with rock. The group includes a woman on accordion and displayed great showmanship in the performance, although the music itself was not engaging.

The Mountain Goats consists of John Darnielle and his acoustic guitar. He played a set of short, energetic and emotional songs. Darnielle's unassuming stage presence complemented the poetry of his lyrics, while the energy with which he played his guitar provided contrast. Although most songs were too short, it might have been difficult to maintain such ferocity for longer periods. Darnielle eventually broke a guitar string with his hand, but serendipitously, the break occurred during the second song of his encore. The Mountain Goats played with a cross-eyed charm and warmth that cannot be captured on a recording but only be experienced live.

US Maple, Liberty Leg and Island Women
Gabe's, Jan. 26
The local band Island Women opened and drew the largest crowd of the night at Gabe's on Jan. 26. Liberty Leg followed with a polished set across a nice range of tempo. The lead vocalist's powerful voice has strength and depth similar to Jim Morrison's, which gave the group a Doors-like sound.

Headliner US Maple played a set of relatively inaccessible songs. Most of the songs lacked traditional structure. Volume waxed and waned, occasionally to the point when a song "stopped" and resumed. The only real structure in many songs was provided by the drummer. The lead vocals were unintelligible and not featured prominently in the sound mix. Lead singer Al Johnson had a charismatic stage presence and provided a great deal of visual interest through his erratic behavior. By the end of the set, the audience had dwindled, but those who remained were pleased with the experience.

The left's attack on Bush nominees ...

Don't rewrite history

President Bush's chosen secretary of Interior — Gale Norton — and attorney general — John Ashcroft — have faced uphill battles in their attempts to become members of Bush's cabinet. Particularly interesting is that the criticisms often overlap on the issue of the Confederacy and the Civil War, despite the ideological gulf between the two.

John Ashcroft
Attorney General nominee

We should praise the Confederacy for these things, while we rightly criticize it for having defended slavery.

ties. For this, they have been labeled racists who defend slavery. But this kind of hysterical criticism fails to consider that the Civil War was a complex conflict. It was not a mere armed referendum on the morality of slavery.

For this reason, Norton points out that slavery amounted to "bad facts" in using the Confederacy as an example to consider the morality of secession and state's rights. Of course, slavery is a wretched violation of basic human rights that should never have existed; but the Confederacy stood for smaller government, government close to the people, and the right of the people to declare independence and free trade. We should praise the Confederacy for these things, while we rightly criticize it for having defended slavery. This is what Norton and Ashcroft were doing when they made positive comments about the Confederacy. By being honest about the good things that may coexist with bad things, they elevated the often hysterical debate over the Civil War.

Gale Norton
Secretary of the Interior nominee

Of course many liberals will still be enraged about the defense of state's rights and the right to be free from the federal government. But liberals who are so enraged fail to see how often the federal government violates civil liberties and liberal principles that the states try to protect. Consider just a few examples:

Vermont permits civil unions among homosexuals but is essentially overruled by the federal Defense of Marriage Act. California allows medicinal marijuana, but jackbooted DEA thugs still crack down on peaceful pot smokers who use medicinal marijuana. The federal government is one of the largest polluters in the country, often acting in violation of state environmental and nuisance laws.

Norton and Ashcroft were courageous in their defense of the good things about the Confederacy. It is unfortunate that hysteria over the bad things fails to let us see that.

Get Real

by Bill Penisten

Al Gore's got a brand new bag

So Al Gore has found a new job. Well, that's fantastic.

These days, it's encouraging to see that a bitter presidential election defeat coupled with a humiliating rejection by the U.S. Supreme Court is no hindrance to one's career objectives. It appears that the former vice president will waste little time stepping into his new routine as a lecturer at three universities. Middle Tennessee State, Fisk University and Columbia students will soon have the pleasure of listening to Al's enchanting lyrical wordplay as he speaks about such thrilling topics as "community building" and the relationship between the news media and public policy. Good times will be had by all.

What's more, the New York Times reported that Gore is in the midst of writing a book with Tipper about families. I believe the tentative title is Come On, Dudes, Quit Staring At Our Daughters. It should be a blockbuster. But Gore has sworn off politics for the time being as he focuses on other worthwhile endeavors. "The only decision I've made about politics," he told the Times, "is not to make a decision until I've had more time for reflection and rest." By "reflection and rest," of course, Gore means commuting between three universities in New York and Tennessee, putting together a book and explaining to 20-year-olds the fine arts of public policy and community building. After the election debacle, it was either going to be that or a trip to Cancun.

But it is clear that the Artist Formerly Known as the Vice President does not plan to spend too much time in the education business. No, that's for career academics and 20-year-old binge drinkers, not for important world figures such as himself. The teaching gig is just something he can do for a while to pass the time, like watching Jerry Springer or playing solitaire on the computer. Gore, from all appearances, fully intends to drift from job to job while waiting for one of those cool high-level political positions, such as president, to open up.

So I thought I'd help him out a bit. With the help of an Internet temp agency, I was able to track down several part-time administrative positions in the Nashville area that seem to be right up Gore's alley. For instance:

• Receptionist/Secretary — "Small firm looking for a great 'first impression' for the front office; must have a strong work history and multi-tasking capabilities; must have experience answering phones." Now this is perfect. I'm clueless as to what "multi-tasking capabilities" are, but I'm sure Gore has them. He'll be pulling in $10.75 an hour there, too. Can't argue with that.

• Accounts-payable clerk — "Dynamic position open for a numbers-driven person (that's you, Al!). This person must possess the drive and determination to get the job done!" Hmm ... drive and determination. Sort of like the drive it takes to prolong the final results of a presidential election until, after five tedious weeks, the Supreme Court has to settle the thing itself for the first time in American history. Yes, I think this employer would be impressed with Al's resumé.

• Restaurant manager — "If the company you're working for is keeping you from realizing your potential in management, consider joining a company that will challenge you and recognize your efforts ... join an expanding high volume, casual-dining concept ... customer-service skills, seafood background a plus." Well, Gore's seafood background might not be up to snuff, but his customer-service skills are out-of-sight. A brief career in restaurant management just might be in the cards for the ex-senator and vice president.

Gore's options include, but are certainly not limited to, these job openings. Temp jobs, with the economy as it is, are like socks — there are a couple out there for everybody. It's all about finding something interesting to do, paying the bills, and running for governor of an exotic state when the time is right. All of that can wait, though, Al — I think Springer's on.

White House vandalism

Protect the People's house

Taking all the "W's" off the keyboards in the White House was funny. Cutting phone cords and computer lines, leaving obscene phone calls, stealing china and installing computer viruses was a little too much. Definitely not funny considering who might pay the price.

President Bush's officials have attributed the recent rash of pranks to Clinton's aides as they left the White House. Now, Americans wonder if taxpayers should really be paying the bill. If these accusations of vandalism are true, then the people who did the damage should pay the tab, not the taxpayers.

Both groups involved are acting like ill-behaved junior-high-school boys. Bush is concerned about being a "gentleman" and is not taking action against the last president and his aides. Perhaps he is keeping his lips sealed to protect the name of the presidency. Whatever his reasons for not doing anything are, they are ridiculous nonetheless. The possibility of Bush being considered a gentleman disappeared a long time ago when he referred to a reporter as a "jackass." He should stop worrying about tarnishing his already-dirtied reputation. The public wants him to step up and protect our money from being wasted on damages caused by another group. We don't want to pay for someone else's immature behavior.

If these accusations of vandalism are true, then the people who did the damage should pay the tab.

Discovering vandalism upon the arrival of a new president at the White House is nothing new; Bush/Quayle bumper stickers were plastered on desk and doors when President Clinton won his first election. Pranks are nothing new. But this time, the line has been crossed, and financial responsibility needs to be taken. This no longer appears to be good, clean fun. It is expensive chaos.

If these reports of damages are accurate, then Bush would be wise to do something about it. Taxpayers have already been stuck with Bush; we don't need a bill on top of that.

Iowa City slides down the slippery slope of January said state climatologist Harry Hillaker.

The recent snowfall contains approximately 20-25 percent more moisture than December's snow, he said. A greasy film forms over the roadways because warmer temperatures melt the snow and prevent it from freezing.

"The colder it is, the easier it is to drive," Hillaker said.

At 5 p.m., UI junior John Montgomery said driving conditions in the city were normal.

"The slow people seem to screw everybody else up more than the weather," he said.

Montgomery said his girlfriend was traveling from Des Moines to Iowa City. When he talked to her, she said many cars were in the interstate ditches, some on their sides with drivers still in them, he said.

According to the National Weather Service in the Quad Cities, Iowa City received approximately 2 inches of snow as of Sunday afternoon.

Precipitation began early on Jan. 26 after a respite from December's record-shattering snowfall.

John White, owner of Whitey's Towing and Starting Service, 1123 N. Dodge St., said calls began pouring into his office on the evening of Jan. 26.

The 10-15 calls he serviced were for cars that had careened into ditches, White said. As of Sunday afternoon, he said, he had received approximately eight calls, an unusual amount.

"There are plenty more cars in the ditch all of a sudden," White said. "I was out there myself, and it was pretty treacherous."

Iowa City resident Monica Koch said most drivers are being cautious.

"I was surprised to see the cars coming down Dubuque Street so slowly," she said.

Nearly all of Iowa was enshrouded under an ice storm or winter storm warning Sunday, as freezing rain replaced snow in the eastern part of the state toward nightfall. The ice-storm warning that went into effect for Eastern and Central Iowa Sunday afternoon will continue throughout today, said Donna Dubberke, a forecaster for the National Weather Service in the Quad Cities.

"It's a fairly large ice storm," she said. "People should just stay home. It doesn't matter what type of vehicle you have. You simply can't drive in it."

One-quarter inch of freezing rain is expected — enough to endanger Iowa City residents by snapping tree limbs and power lines, Dubberke said.

Hillaker said Iowans should expect "quite a lot more snow" between now and March.

"We're probably dealing with this for quite a bit longer," he said.

pany will focus on building them up, Hitchcock said. Meanwhile, Yesse! said in a press release that other investors should look to continue Icon's tradition.

"The paper has a solid niche of 40,000 readers in Iowa City and Cedar Rapids upon which others could build," he said in a release last week.

Icon co-founder Aaron Wolfe said he hopes the newspaper is able to find another investor. Originally started as a project for the UI master's professional program in the School of Journalism and Mass Communication, the newspaper began regular publication in April 1993. It was funded by advertisements, and the staff was not paid in the early days of production.

In order to advance the paper, Wolfe said, he sold 80 percent of Icon's stock in May 1998 to then-named NewVoice Communications, which became Yesse! Communications Inc.

"We were at a point where we were making a good effort, but we needed increased funding to pay people more," he said.

While he continues to hold stock in the Icon, Wolfe stopped working for the paper in 1999. He said it was mostly an enjoyable experience.

"I was working 60 to 70 hours a week, so my enthusiasm wore off, and I wanted to have a little more time for myself," he said. "It was a lot of fun and a lot of work, too. I would hope they are able to find another investor — but it sounds like they need to find someone rather quickly, and that's hard to do."

UI graduate student Scott Morgan, a CD reviewer for Icon, said he received a phone call on Jan. 27 from his editor, who told him "don't even bother" writing his reviews, which were due Sunday.

Icon columnist Laura Crossett said she heard rumors about the paper going under and wrote an e-mail to her editor asking if the paper wanted a column for this week's issue. She had not heard back as of Sunday.

Dan Coffey, an Icon columnist, said he has not heard anything about the publishing ordeal, but he would be very disappointed if the newspaper went under.

"There would be no alternative voice," he said. "Icon had people that were opinionated, silly and took risks. If that goes under, then there would be none of that."

Robert White, the night supervisor at the Hamburg Inn No. 2, 214 N. Linn St., which received the "Best Hamburger" award from the Icon in its "Best of I.C. and C.R." editions for the past few years, said he believed that if the Icon were to discontinue publishing, it would affect the community.

"I think a lot of people around town read it," he said. "I think it would affect restaurants, because they write a lot about that."

Matousek's couch. UI freshman Brian Blocker enjoyed the game from his inflatable throne at the Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St. He was one of four winners of the Sports Column's "Bar Olympics," which consisted of shooting mini-basketballs, throwing mini-footballs and even a "Who Wants to be a Millionaire" spoof. He won an "all you can eat and drink special" during the Super Bowl and sat in front of the big screen television for the game.

"It's all about atmosphere," he said. "There is no better place to watch the Super Bowl. I'll be right here next year when the Bears win it."

Sports Column manager Robbie Uchida said promotions such as the VIP chair bring out the fans.

"As long as the customer is legal, we work with local distributors, who give out free beer deals, and we add the games like the football toss that allow people to try to win," he said.

Still others watched the game for no reason other than the hoopla that surrounds it.

"I really have no interest in football," UI senior Kelli Benn said. "I just want to hang out with my friends and soak up the atmosphere. Plus, I want to see what commercials will be played."

Historically, the Super Bowl dominates the ratings, and as a result it has become renowned as the biggest advertising event of the year.

And then there was the half-time show, starring 'N Sync and Aerosmith and accompanied by Britney Spears, Mary J. Blige and Nelly. The extended half-time show has become a huge media event in itself.

"There's nothing more important in the sports world than the Super Bowl," Colmer said. But he will have to wait at least another year. His Giants ended up losing, 34-7, to the Baltimore Ravens.

IOWA BRIEFS

Two football recruits commit

IOWA CITY (AP) — Iowa has received verbal commitments from two defensive players. Kahari Stewart, a defensive end from Detroit, and Ed Hinkel, a defensive back from Erie, Pa., made their decisions to play for the Hawkeyes on Jan. 25.

Hinkel, who also played quarterback and wide receiver at Cathedral High School, said Iowa coaches told him he would play free safety as well as run back punts and kickoffs.

The 6-foot-6, 225-pound Stewart, who played at Finney High School, also played wide receiver, averaging 18 yards per catch during the past two seasons. Defensively, he had 62 tackles and 10 sacks last season.

Baltimore wins in Super Bowl blowout

■ The Ravens defense lives up to its hype and shuts down the Giants en route to a 34-7 win.

By Eddie Pells
 Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — The Baltimore Ravens brought brutal efficiency, unbending defense and a dose of explosive excitement to the Super Bowl, putting their own distinctive stamp on America's great football celebration.

The Ravens made the New York Giants look helpless Sunday, defeating them 34-7 to bring pro football's championship back to Baltimore for the first time since 1971.

Ravens linebacker Ray Lewis, the game's Most Valuable Player, and his defense became part of Super Bowl lore by not allowing a touchdown. The seven points New York scored came on a kickoff return — when Lewis' defensive unit was not on the field.

"This is the best defense ever," Ravens defensive lineman Tony Siragusa boldly proclaimed.

The Ravens engineered on a stunning turnaround from two weeks ago, when the Giants looked every bit like winning Super Bowl material in a 41-0 rout over the Minnesota Vikings.

Baltimore chased Giants quarterback Kerry Collins all over the field and forced him into four interceptions.

The next great debate is whether Siragusa is right, and Baltimore really is the best defense ever to play the game. The Ravens allowed an NFL record-low 165 points this season and only 23 over four playoff games.

"I'm biased, but who cares," Baltimore coach Brian Billick said. "Someone tell me they're not. I'll argue with it."

New York's only high point came in the third quarter when Ron Dixon returned a kickoff 97 yards for a touchdown and New York's only points. That cut the deficit to 17-7, but a mere 18 seconds later, Jermaine Lewis answered with his own score, and the Giants were stuck with the same 17-point hole.

"The emotional flip-flop must have been devastating for them," Billick said.

The victory was redemption for 75-year-old owner Art

Recker gets revenge on Hoosiers

■ The Iowa junior poured in 27 points against his old teammates.

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

Luke Recker said he couldn't lie: It felt good to beat Indiana.

"This is a very special win for me," he said. "I took a lot of heat and criticism when I decided to leave Indiana University, and that hurt."

"My family lives there. My friends live there. That's my home state, and if we would have lost this one, I don't think I would have been able to show my face in that state again."

With his 27-point performance in Iowa's 71-66 win over the Hoosiers on Jan. 27, Recker solidified his marked status in the land of candy-striped warm-up pants.

After leaving Indiana two years ago and subsequently transferring his way back into the Big Ten at Iowa, the story began to unfold. Recker vs. his former teammates and coach — a plot so appealing that national television wanted to tell it. When Indiana fired Bob Knight in September some felt part of the excitement would be lost.

However, the game did not disappoint those looking for the anticipated emotion, but it was the Hoosiers (12-9, 3-4), not the Hawkeyes (16-4, 5-2)

Hawks need to do homework early

As the famous philosopher Forrest Gump once said, "You never know what you're gonna get." He could have been referring to the Iowa men's basketball team rather than a box of chocolates.

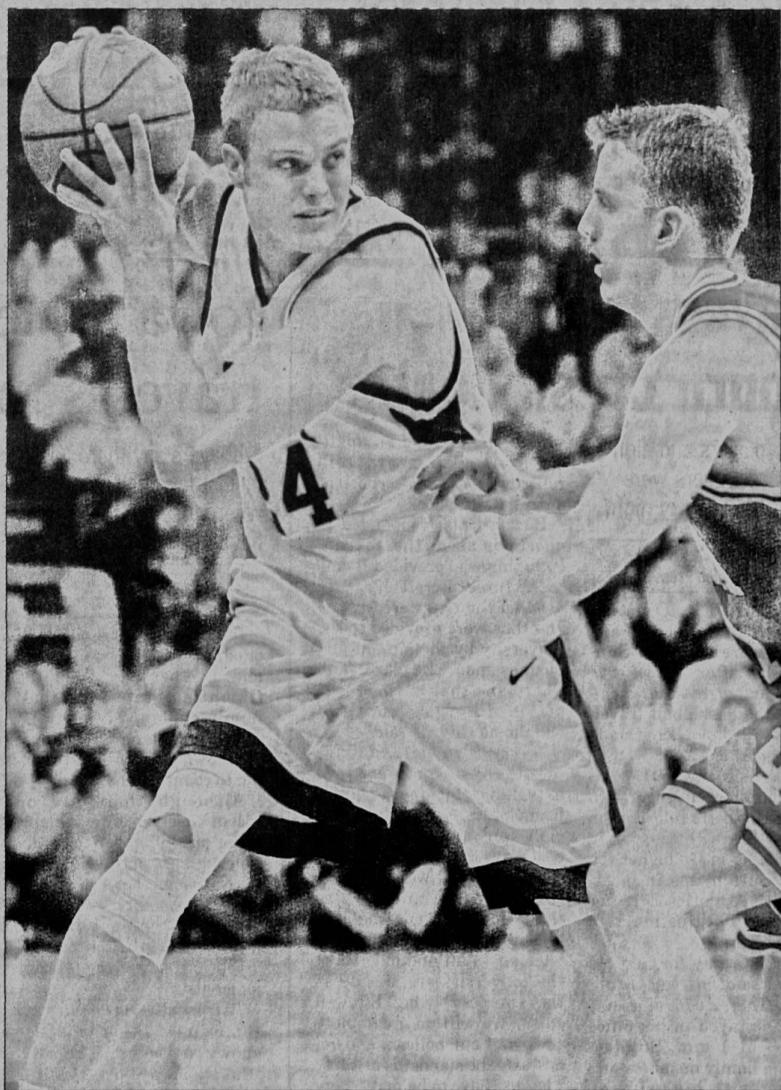

It's a different breed of animal, this Iowa team. The Hawks either play like a rabid pack of wolves or a de-clawed house cat with a name like Muffin or Fluffy, or, as has been the case lately, a gut-wrenching combination of the two.

The first half of the Jan. 27 game against Indiana just gave you that feeling you get when you know you've had one too many drinks. That was at halftime, before Iowa pulled things together and everything was warm and fuzzy once again in Hawkeye country. Too close for anyone's comfort, Steve Alford included.

Following the game, Alford said the team was thinking too much. It was pondering at the beginning of the game and remembering the disaster of last week's game against Michigan, when the

Hawkeyes get big Big Ten wins

With strong performances by their lower weights, the Iowa wrestling team completed a typical mid-season Big Ten weekend by pounding on weaker conference foes.

The third-ranked Hawkeyes dismantled Purdue on the road on Jan. 26, 32-16, then administered a 31-13 thumping of Wisconsin in front of 3,478 fans in Carver-Hawkeye Arena

Sunday afternoon. Eric Juergens, Doug Schwab, Mike Zadick and Jody Strittmatter powered the Hawkeyes through the weekend by dominating each of their opponents. All four wrestlers picked up technical falls in both of their matches this weekend and, coach Jim Zalesky said, showed they are at top form.

"Those guys are wrestling real well," he said. "They've met every challenge they've had so far, ever since Christmas break. Those guys have been the leaders of this team, and as long as you have your leaders going well, the other guys will look at them and pick it up a little bit."

Along with Iowa's lower weights performing well, the Hawkeyes finally got a win at 197-pounds. Freshman Ryan Fulsas ended Iowa's win drought at that weight and heavyweight by picking up a decision over Wisconsin's Joe Terrill, 7-5. Iowa hadn't won a match at either 197 or heavyweight since the Hofstra meet on Jan. 13.

"It felt good out there," Fulsas said. "In the past I've been there, but let up in a cou-

Players and coaches mourn crash deaths

■ Two players and eight other passengers were killed late Saturday night.

By Owen Canfield
Associated Press

STILLWATER, Okla. — Oklahoma State coaches and players were secluded Sunday, a day after two reserve players and eight other members of the basketball traveling party died in a plane crash in Colorado.

It was unlikely that coach Eddie Sutton would meet with the media, Sports Information Director Steve Buzzard said at a briefing in Gallagher-Iba Arena. Sutton was in meetings with Athletics Director Terry Don Phillips much of the morning.

"This is a day for, uh ...," Buzzard said, his voice trailing off. "There's a lot of pain."

Sutton stayed in his office until after 1 a.m. Sunday, notifying family members and meeting with his grieving players.

"It was tough on him," said Tom Dirato, OSU's director of radio and television, who was with Sutton most of Saturday night. "There's none of us who could imagine what it would be like getting on the phone and calling a father, a mother, an uncle or just people that you know and say, 'What you heard is correct, he didn't survive.'"

"It took a toll on him."

Reserve players Dan Lawson and Nate Fleming died when the Beechcraft King Air 200 went down in a field about 40 miles east of Denver. The crash also killed the team's play-by-play announcer, its sports information director, a radio engineer, two managers, the team's administrative assistant and the two pilots.

Officials scheduled a memorial service for 3 p.m. Wednesday at Gallagher-Iba Arena as a "special time of prayer and

Hawks doubles teams destroy Blue Demons

Iowa coach Paul Wardlaw said this year Iowa could put together its best doubles teams ever.

By Nick Firchau
The Daily Iowan

The highly rated Hawkeye women's tennis team took to the courts at the UI Recreation Building on Jan. 27 and left a depleted DePaul squad in its wake by losing only one match en route to a 6-1 season-opening triumph.

Iowa won all three of its doubles matches, including a 8-0 victory for the doubles team of junior Toni Neykova and freshman Jody Scheldt over DePaul's Laura Taylor and Kadi Hilpus. The team of Neykova and Scheldt is currently ranked 23rd in the nation.

"This year, we'll have our best doubles teams ever," said Iowa coach Paul Wardlaw. "We'll see how things pan out during the season with the lineups, but we will have three very good teams. Two of the three doubles teams that played this weekend had never played together before, and I was pleased with the way they played."

Neykova also had a victorious season debut as the Hawkeyes' top singles player with a 6-1, 7-5 win over Taylor. The Hawkeyes' only loss of the meet came at the No. 2 singles spot, where freshman Deni Alexandrova lost her first match in a Hawkeyes uniform to DePaul's Szilvia Kelemen, 6-3, 6-4.

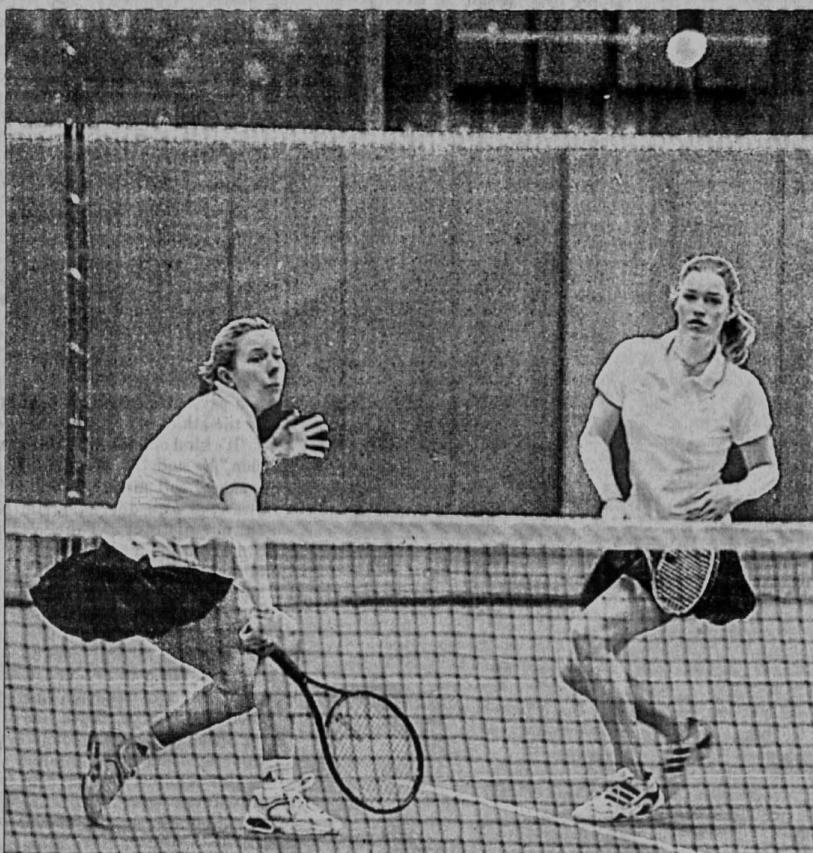

Despite the win, Wardlaw said he thinks his team should perform better as the season continues.

"We hit the ball well, but I wasn't overly impressed with the way we played," he said. "But we had four freshmen playing their first collegiate match, and they all did very well. And I thought DePaul played one of the better matches it has played against us in the past few years."

The team overcame newcomer nerves in two other matches, where freshmen Pascale Veraverbeke and Jennifer Hodgman each grabbed wins in dual meet matches with Iowa at the No. 3 and No. 6 singles spots, respectively.

"I think a lot of people were a little nervous," Scheldt said. "It's easier to play doubles because you have someone else out there, but obviously, some people were nervous because it's the first dual match."

IOWA TENNIS

Iowa's Toni Neykova returns a shot Saturday against DePaul while playing doubles with teammate Jody Scheldt. The Iowa duo wins 8-0.

Senior Erica Johnson, who won her match at the No. 4 singles spot, as well her doubles match while paired with Veraverbeke at the No. 2 spot, said the win was an expected solid start to the season.

"We learned some of the things that we will need to improve on," she said. "DePaul gave us a good chance to see where we are right now and to show us what we need to work on to take the team to another level. We know that to become one of those top 15 teams that we will play against, we're going to have to step things up a little." Iowa will attempt to win its second meet of the season when it travels to Nashville to play Vanderbilt and Middle Tennessee State on Feb. 3 and 4.

No. 17 Cyclones breeze by Aggies

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Jake Sullivan led a balanced scoring attack with 14 points and Iowa State hit 21 of 25 free throws as the 17th-ranked Cyclones rolled to a 72-53 victory over Texas A&M on Sunday.

The Cyclones (17-3, 5-2 Big 12) controlled the game from the start, hitting their first 11 free throws against the undersized Aggies (6-13, 0-7), who lost their seventh-straight game and dropped to 0-5 against Iowa State.

Cleveland returns to Iowa with strong outing

Iowa's top singles player returns after taking the fall semester off.

By Nick Firchau
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's tennis team dropped only one set in six singles matches and dominated three doubles matches Sunday on its way to dismantling visiting Northern Illinois, 7-0, in the Hawks' first meet of the spring season.

Senior Tyler Cleveland made his return to the Hawkeyes after skipping the fall semester to play in ATP Tour satellite tournaments, and he dominated the Huskies' top player, Raymond van Wasbeek, 6-4, 6-3. Cleveland, who held a strong edge throughout Sunday's match, begins the season as the No. 15 singles player in the nation.

Hawk coach Steve Houghton got solid play in all six singles matches, including a 6-4, 6-1 victory for sophomore Stuart Waters, who stepped into the No. 2 singles spot for the injured senior Jake Wilson. Waters and Cleveland teamed up for the Hawkeyes' No. 1 doubles team and posted a 8-1 victory over Northern Illinois' Juan Bariga and Brent Sitarski.

"I was very pleased with the way we played, especially the doubles," Houghton said. "We expected to win, but not necessarily 7-0. Stuart played very well today at the No. 2 spot, and Rose got a big win coming from down one set."

In arguably the meet's best match, Iowa sophomore Pete Rose gathered quick momentum and rallied after losing the first set, 6-2, to overpower the Huskies' Jon Perlman in the final two sets to a win, 2-6, 6-0, 6-2.

"Everyone came out very confident," said Waters, who leads the Hawkeyes with four wins early in the season. "We did a lot of the little things right, and that's what coach stresses in practice. The doubles teams all played very technically sound, and we were really focused going into the meet."

Sophomore Hunter Skogman also posted a big win for the Hawkeyes at the No. 3 spot, 6-3, 6-2, over Sitarski. Houghton also praised the play of freshman David Freijd, who won his first collegiate match at Iowa, 6-3, 6-0, over Ryan Schnack.

"I don't really have any complaints today," Houghton said. "But I think these guys know that the level of play after today is going to go up a few notches. Western Michigan is a good team, and Notre Dame is excellent."

The Hawkeyes' will next travel to Kalamazoo, Mich., on Feb. 10 to meet up with Western Michigan.

WOMEN'S INDOOR TRACK & FIELD

Inconsistency slows Hawks

Gina Shannon finishes second in the pole vault to help keep Hawks in the top half of the competition.

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

Top three performances by Tamara Dixon, Gina Shannon and Sarah Steffen helped lead the Iowa women's track team to a fourth-place finish at the Minnesota Classic on Jan. 27.

In its first scored meet of the season, Iowa put up 39.5 points to beat out five other schools. However, the Hawkeyes finished well below Brigham Young University, which compiled 156 points to win the classic.

Coach James Grant said inconsistency prevented a higher finish.

"We were shooting for the top two, but fourth out of nine is not bad," he said. "Basically, we were inconsistent in terms of performance. In some cases, we didn't improve as much as we should have."

Dixon, a freshman, finished third in the 200-meter dash with a time of 25.50. The Kingston, Jamaica, native also took seventh in the 60-meter dash. Sophomore Nicole Charles, competing for the first time this season, placed third in the 400-meter dash. Shannon's pole vault score of 10-0 was good enough for second place while sophomore Steffen took third in the 60-meter hurdles with a personal best time of 8.74. This is the second consecutive week Steffen has lowered her best time; she hit 8.80 last week at Iowa State.

The high jump continues to be a strong point for the team as well. Seniors Kacey Childs and Julie Gallery provide the Hawkeyes with an experienced and talented duo. Childs finished third with a jump of 5-7, and Gallery nabbed fifth with a 5-5 jump.

"We have two athletes who can jump really well," Grant said. "Childs and Gallery have the potential to jump in the 5-9 or 5-10 range, and hopefully, they can reach it when it really counts, at the conference meet."

Iowa will travel to South Bend, Ind., for the Notre Dame Invitational Saturday. Grant says he looks for his team to be more consistent.

"It's hard in any sport to keep the consistency up. They are aware the consistency was not as good, and they know they need to work a little harder while competing," he said.

MEN'S GYMNASTICS

Led by Christie, Hawks tame rings

Iowa senior Brian Christie put together the best ring performance of his career to help lead the No. 6 Hawks to its first conference victory.

By Laura Podolak
The Daily Iowan

A loud roar erupted from the gut of the crowd as Iowa gymnast Brian Christie slowly lowered himself into the iron cross on the still rings.

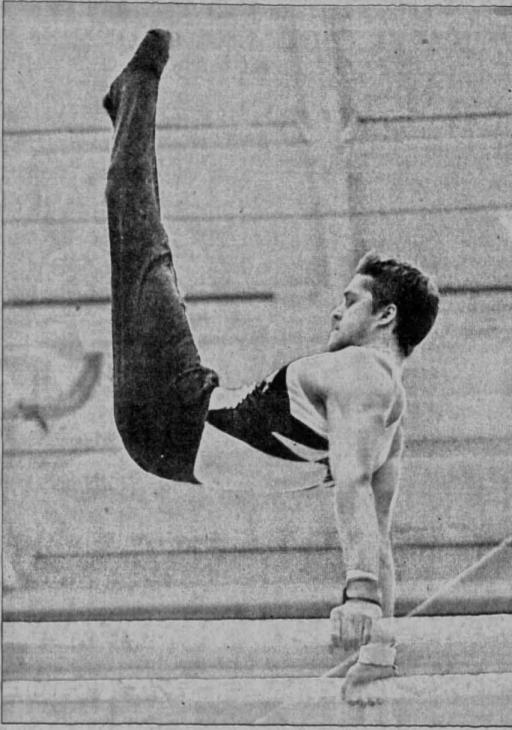

In the iron cross, a crowd favorite, a gymnast puts himself in a cross-shaped position between the two rings. With arms held parallel to the ground, his muscles flex and shake as he battles gravity to hold himself stationary. The position takes astounding strength and concentration to execute. Christie, a senior, did it to perfection — and his score proved it.

Christie's 9.375 was not only enough to win the event, but he beat the next best score by almost half of a point.

"(Christie) has never practiced like that, never that well," Iowa coach Tom Dunn said following sixth-ranked Iowa's meet against No. 9 Minnesota on Jan. 27. "He looked great. It's an awesome score."

Comparing it with last week's best marks, Christie's score would have placed him third in the country.

Christie wasn't the only highlight on rings. The Hawkeyes swept the top three places in the event, with senior Kevin Agnew placing second (8.925) and junior Shane de Freitas in third (8.850). The Hawkeyes finished the event with 33.825 points, more than a point higher than the Gophers.

Iowa also received solid routines from freshman Antonio Cesar, who won the horizontal bar and placed second in the parallel bars and the pommel horse. Junior Don Jackson placed third on the pommel horse and second on the floor exercise. The Hawkeyes gave the Golden Gophers its second loss of the regular season and lifted Iowa to a 1-0 start in the conference.

The only pothole slowing down Iowa's plowing of Minnesota was the vault.

The Hawkeyes flipped, flopped and fell on its backside more often than landing on its feet. Minnesota ran away with the event, but it was the only event the Gophers would capture from the claws of the Hawkeyes.

Iowa's best in the event was (Christie) has never practiced like that, never that well. He looked great. It's an awesome score.

— Tom Dunn, Iowa coach

Matt Metzger in fifth with a 9.0.

Dunn attributed the lousy showing on vault to the lack of a psychological adjustment by the athletes.

"It's kind of a coaching decision," he said. "We practice on a raised soft mat to prolong our legs and decrease the chance of injury. Then we come into the meet and have to land on hard mats. It's an adjustment."

Overall, Dunn was happy with the way his team progressed from its first meet on Jan. 13. He pointed out the performance of freshmen Eric Block as notable. Block had big shoes to fill as the temporary replacement for injured junior Andy Thornton, the Hawkeyes' best all-around performer.

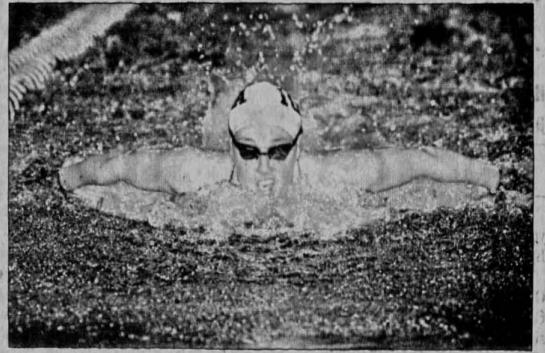

"Obviously, we have room for improvement," Dunn said. "But I am pleased for our first dual meet."

Going into the competition, the Hawkeyes were ranked sixth in the country in team scoring, with a 205.150. They improved on that score by more than four points, recording a 209.325. Compared with last week's national ranking, that score would situate Iowa fourth in the country.

The Hawkeyes resume competition against No. 3 Oklahoma Saturday at 7 p.m. in the North Gym of the UI Field House.

Mizzou proves to be no match for Iowa

Iowa defends its waters Saturday with a 65-point win over Missouri.

By Julie Matolo
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's swimming and diving team knew it had the opportunity to win its senior dual meet on Jan. 26. With six seniors performing their final swim in the UI Field House pool, and comparable competition from the University of Missouri, Iowa showed no hesitation in taking advantage of its situation.

The Hawkeyes dominated the meet from start to finish, winning 13 of the 16 events, with a 187-112 finish overall. After winning the first event, the 400-medley relay, by three seconds, Iowa kept the momentum rolling.

"Everyone stepped it up tonight and raced well," said senior and co-captain Stacey Wertz. "We did not think we would win by that much. We thought it would come down to who wanted it more, and obviously, we wanted it more."

Wertz was one of two Hawkeyes to win a pair of events and help in two relay wins. The senior touched the wall first in both the 50- and 100-yard freestyle in 23.91 and 51.77 seconds, respectively. Erin Strub, a sophomore, was the second-place finisher in both events. Wertz, along with Allison Lyle, also made contributions to the 400-yard medley relay and the 200-yard freestyle.

Lyle, a junior co-captain, added a first-place finish to her win list in the 100-yard breaststroke in 1:04.20 and in the 200-yard breaststroke in 2:18.52.

"A lot of it was adrenaline," she said. "We went out and raced for the seniors and tried to do well for them. We followed good swim after good swim."

Junior Melissa Loehndorf stole the show with wins in three individual events. The five-minute mark in the 500-yard freestyle was broken for the third time this season, as she won the event in 4:59.71. Loehndorf showed sprinter speed by winning the 200-yard freestyle in 1:52.07. A win in the 400-yard individual medley event late in the meet completed Loehndorf's day. The junior found herself ahead of where she wanted to be for this point in the season.

"Every person on the team had amazing swims, and I am really proud of the team," she said. "Everyone pulled together and stood behind each other."

Senior Loredana Zisu made her final home meet memorable by breaking her own Field House pool record in the 200-yard backstroke in 2:01.72. She was also a part of the winning 400-medley relay team.

Another senior to shine this weekend was diver Sara Wolchko, with solid performances good for second-place finishes in both the 1-meter (256.13) and the 3-meter (268.35).

"These women swam with a lot of heart and pride, and I could not be more proud of them," said coach Garland O'Keefe.

Two newcomers contributed three wins for the Hawkeyes; freshman Christie Hooper won the 1,000-yard freestyle (10:20.91) and the 200-yard butterfly (2:07.07), while freshman Katie Wise placed first in the 100-yard butterfly (57.82).

On Saturday, the Hawkeyes will travel to University Park, Pa., to take on Penn State in their final meet before the Big Ten Championships.

Costello breaks teammate Allen's record

With another weekend of strong performances, coach Larry Wieczorek is hopeful for next month's Big Ten Championships.

By Julie Matolo
The Daily Iowan

Breaking school records seems to be a common theme for the Iowa men's track and field team so far this season. For the third weekend in a row, the Hawkeyes have completed a meet with at least one school record broken and one NCAA provisional qualifying score.

The Hawkeyes finished the Minnesota Open on Jan. 27 in Minneapolis with Jim Costello provisionally qualifying for the NCAA Indoor Championships in the weight throw with his winning toss of 66-0". The senior set a school record in the event, breaking the mark that teammate Jeremy Allen set two weeks ago in Iowa City.

"We had a lot of good performances this weekend," said coach Larry Wieczorek.

"Costello was the highlight performance of the meet, making the all-time high list for Iowa."

Record-breaking times continued for the Hawkeyes, as the Iowa 4x400-meter relay squad of seniors Tim Dodge and Scott Williamson and sophomores Liam Card and Russ Peterson broke the Minnesota Field House and Minnesota Open record with a winning time of 3:12.81. Dodge saw continued success after winning the 200-meters with a season-best time of 21.69 and a third-place finish in the 60-meter (6.88).

Allen was also crowned a champion after winning the shot put with a throw of 59-1". The senior came up with a second-place finish in the weight throw with a distance of 64-2".

After the third meet of the indoor season, the Hawkeyes have produced many all-time top 10 finishes for Iowa. While Wieczorek believes there is still work to be done, he sees the potential for a successful season.

"This time of year, we have had great highlights each weekend," he said. "If we can now put the pieces together, put all the highlights together and put all the events together in the rest of the season, we will do well at Big Tens."

Iowa will host Western Michigan and Truman State in the Iowa Men's Triangle meet in Iowa City on Feb. 3 in the Iowa Recreation Building. Competition will begin at 11 a.m.; admission is free.

WOMEN'S GYMNASTICS

Final event costs Iowa road win

Poor performances on the balance beam end Iowa's hopes of upsetting Minnesota again.

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

One week after the Iowa women's gymnastic team's first victory over Minnesota in six years, the Gophers refused to let it happen again.

No. 15 Minnesota came back in the final event to upend No. 22 Iowa 194.825 to 193.12 on Jan. 27 in Minneapolis.

Iowa had the lead after three of the four events but struggled on the balance beam with two falls and a number of wobbles. The season-low score of 47.225 spelled disaster, as Minnesota was able to pull ahead and avenge its Jan. 19 loss to Iowa at the Michigan Invitational. The Hawkeyes dropped to 4-2, 2-2 in the Big Ten.

"I'm not real sure what happened with the beam," said junior Michele Ford. "The first person fell, and perhaps that made everyone more nervous. We got it together a little at the end, but the beam is hard to finish on because of all the pressure on that event."

Iowa coach Mike Lorenzen also said the beam is a difficult apparatus to finish with. He said the team warmed up well but looked a little shaken after the fall and experienced "mental fatigue" down the stretch.

There were highlights recorded in the meet, as the GymHawks set a school record on the vault. The 48.775 now stands as the top score in the record books, shoving the 48.650 set in 1996 into second. The record was kindled by three great routines by the Hawkeyes' freshmen stand-outs. Alexis Maday won the event with a 9.850, Stephanie Gran finished third (9.775), and Brandy Killian tied for fourth (9.750).

"With one or two exceptions, everyone had her best vault performance of the year,"

Lorenzen said.

Overall, Maday just missed another all-around title. The Gophers Mary Anne Kelly took first by less than one-tenth of a point. In addition to her vault title, Maday finished first in the uneven bars and tied for second on the floor exercise.

Lorenzen was disappointed the GymHawks could not pull out the victory. He said this team handled adversity better than last year's club, but still not at the level he had hoped.

Iowa will return Friday for its first home meet in almost a month. Arch rival No. 13 Iowa State will invade the UI Field House to battle for state bragging rights.

Lorenzen hopes a huge crowd will turn out, saying this is the first time in many years Iowa has a reasonable shot at defeating the Cyclones. Iowa State won two duals against Iowa last year. The meet is scheduled to start at 7 p.m.

Litke: Pray this isn't the start of a trend

■ This Super Bowl was pretty ugly from the start.

By Jim Litke
Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — Talk about your dysfunctional Super Bowl.

The week began with Giants quarterback Kerry Collins delivering a confessional about how alcohol had ruined his life. Next up was Ravens linebacker Ray Lewis refusing to answer questions about his involvement in a double murder that took place in the wee hours after last year's Super Bowl.

On the eve of his sport's showcase event, NFL Commissioner Paul Tagliabue was called on the carpet one more time to answer questions about whether he was presiding over a league careening dangerously out of control.

Then came the game itself. In a Super Bowl as noncompetitive as any of the clunkers the Buffalo Bills took part in, Baltimore beat an over-matched and unprepared New York side, 34-7, Sunday.

The only suspense that remained after the Ravens spotted their brutal defense a 10-0 halftime lead was how long Tagliabue would make Baltimore owner Art Modell cool his heels before handing over the Vince Lombardi trophy.

Not very long, it turned out, considering that just five years ago Tagliabue scolded the carpetbagging owner for fleeing with his team from Cleveland to Baltimore and causing a "deep psychological jolt for every fan of the NFL."

Next up, though, was a scene that should make that jolt run a whole lot deeper: Lewis being named most valuable player of the game he dragged through the mud and a courtroom for the better part of a year.

"The man upstairs tells you, 'I'll never take you through hell without taking you to triumph,'" Lewis said.

Some triumph it was.

Take out a 36-second span late in the third quarter — when Baltimore's Duane Starks returned an interception for a score, followed by dueling kickoff returns for touchdowns by the Giants'

Ron Dixon (97 yards) and the Ravens' Jermaine Lewis (84) — and this game made the humiliations suffered by New England, Buffalo (twice) and Denver look good.

The two teams combined to break the Super Bowl record for 15 punts — with four minutes left in the third quarter. They combined for 393 yards total offense — a dozen more than Collins passed for two weeks ago in a 41-0 pounding of the Minnesota Vikings in the NFC championship.

There is no questioning the quality of the Ravens' defense. It set records for the fewest points allowed and went through the playoffs yielding only three points against Denver, 10 against Tennessee and three against that opened the contest in strong form.

Davis: Iowa did a great job on defense

IOWA-INDIANA

Poor Iowa defense, coupled with great offensive execution, allowed Indiana to establish as much as a 19-point lead in the first half. The Hoosier post presence of Kirk Haston and Jared Jeffries combined for 20 points and 15 rebounds in the first 20 minutes of the game. Haston recorded a first-half double-double.

Recker was the only Hawkeye in double digits with ten. Reggie Evans, normally on pace for his own double-double, notched just one point and three rebounds with four turnovers.

Iowa coach Steve Alford said he posted a message to Evans on the board, comparing Haston's statistics to those of Evans.

"Reggie takes that as a challenge, and usually he takes challenges very well," Alford said.

Judging by the opening minutes of the second half, Evans was not the only Hawkeye compelled by Alford's words.

Iowa came out of the locker room with increased defensive pressure, looking to push up the tempo. A relatively young, inexperienced Indiana team rushed their shots and turned the ball over, allowing the Hawkeyes, led by Recker, to cut a 15-point halftime deficit to four in less than four minutes.

The Hoosiers were dealt another blow when Dane Fife —

Recker's designated defender — picked up his third and fourth foul around the 17-minute mark.

"Getting into foul trouble killed us," Fife said. "We had trouble adjusting to the way they called the game. We couldn't play Indiana defense. It's hard to stop somebody on the bench."

Iowa and Indiana traded the lead before Ryan Hogan completed a three-point play pushing the Hawkeyes ahead for good with just over ten minutes remaining.

After allowing Indiana a free pass to the glass on both ends of the court in the first half, Iowa defenders contained Haston and Jeffries. The two each hit one second-half basket and pulled down just three rebounds.

"Defensively they did a great job of taking the ball out of their hands," Davis said. "I figured we would at least have the lead by the ten-minute mark."

With five seconds left in the game and Iowa up by five, Recker stepped to the line knowing that his new team would reign victorious and missed. He said perhaps he brought too much emotion to the game and it showed toward the end.

He still managed to find some satisfaction in the win, and more importantly, in the way his new team played.

"He can fit in anywhere," Fife, his former roommate at IU said. "He found his new home."

Modell says MVP Ray Lewis is a man's man

state of Maryland, this belongs to you," Modell said.

Except for the brief third-quarter flurry, this was not the most entertaining football, especially for the casual fan who might watch the Super Bowl and no other game each year.

Both the Ravens and Giants came in as defensive-minded, plodding teams, whose most notable players were a recovering alcoholic and a linebacker who stood trial for murder.

Both spent the week explaining their styles — not as entertainers, but as purveyors of great defense and grind-it-out football.

"It was having fun," Ray Lewis said, countering the theory that defense is boring. "We heard it all year. We knew when we came out to play what we had to do."

This game didn't live up to some of the title games of the recent past. Last season, the St. Louis Rams made a tackle on the 1-yard line on the final play to preserve a 23-16 win over the Tennessee Titans. In 1998, John Elway and the Denver Broncos got their first title with a heartstopping 31-24 victory over Green Bay.

The most interesting stuff may have come before the game.

Woven through the week of buildup were tales of retribution and atonement, bold statements and second chances — in short, it was the NFL at its best and worst.

Headlining the drama was the story of Lewis, who was outside an Atlanta night club after last year's Super Bowl when two people were stabbed to death.

Lewis was charged with murder, but eventually pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of obstructing justice. He has dealt with these questions all season and this was his chance, on the grand stage, to apologize to the victims' families or show some remorse for what happened.

"Ray's a man's man," Modell said. "He was mishandled. He was innocent. He's taken a bad rap, and he responded on the field, which is the place he knows best."

ple of positions and got beat. If I keep working, the wins will start adding up."

In addition to Josh Liddle's two losses at heavyweight, the Hawkeyes also faltered at 165-pounds against Wisconsin. Iowa's Ben Shirk was pinned by top-ranked Badger Don Pritzlaff. Jessman Smith was major decided at 184-pounds by Wisconsin's Ralph DeNisco.

Zalesky said Smith, who was ranked sixth in the nation coming into this weekend, needs to wrestle smarter.

"He was in the match, but he was shooting in on takedowns and just dropping his head. He was getting beat by guys just cutting the corners," Zalesky said.

Tyler Nixt and T.J. Williams

also chipped in encouraging performances. Nixt, a 174-pound freshman who is wrestling for an injured Gabe McMahan, won both of his matches this weekend. Williams, Iowa's top-ranked 157-pound senior, pinned Wisconsin's Nate Erdman in 2:07. Williams did not wrestle against Purdue because of lingering pain from a wisdom tooth he had pulled earlier in the week.

The Hawkeyes, who are now at 15-2 and 4-1 in the Big Ten, will face Michigan Friday and Penn State on Feb. 4. Zalesky said McMahan, who injured his ribs in early January, will not be ready next weekend, but should be ready after that.

"I don't know if he'll be back next week; it's kind of day-by-day," he said. "We'll have to see how fast he heals up."

Late starts will begin to catch up with Hawkeyes

Wolverines streaked to a 10-0 lead before eventually squeaking past Iowa by one. Then once things started to turn around, the Hawkeyes began to think about their triumph against Minnesota.

What Iowa needs to do is start showing up in the first half. Digging a hole and coming back for a win against a team such as Indiana is fine, but Hawkeye fans shouldn't always count on it. If Iowa lets Michigan State open a slight lead when the teams meet in three weeks in East Lansing, you may as well get up to get the chips and salsa.

In many ways, Iowa's first-half performances are like skipping lectures and then showing up to take your first test. You may get by with it once, but sooner or later, the test will be filled with the professor's interesting anecdotes you missed out on, and the only way you could get the correct answer was if you had shown up on a regular basis. Not that I'm speaking from personal experience.

The Hawkeyes shot 36 percent from the floor in the first half, compared with Indiana's 47 percent. The Hoosiers pulled down twice as many rebounds as Iowa. The points in the paint went heavily to Indiana as well. It was enough to make any Hawkeye fan watching at home seriously consider watching some fascinating public television.

As Alford so astutely put it, if it weren't for Brody Boyd and Ryan Hogan, Iowa may have been down by 25. That's what makes this team special; there are always a few players who pick up the slack until everyone else gets the ball rolling. Dean Oliver goes scoreless in the first half, and Hogan has eight points. Luke Recker goes 3-7 from the field, and Boyd hits a long 3 for a momentum boost.

In the end, the only thing that matters in college basketball is the final score, and once again the Hawkeyes managed to prevail on that end. Who really knows if things could be different, but at 5-2 in the Big Ten, a basket here and there in the first half against Michigan and Wisconsin, and Iowa could be looking at a perfect conference record.

With two more home games before hitting the road once more, now is the perfect time for Iowa to figure out what is causing its early woes. As I've discovered, doing your work early really pays off down the road, be it on a final exam or during the NCAA tournament.

Two football players plead guilty

Maurice Brown and Fred Barr, both Iowa football players, pleaded guilty to simple assault which they were charged for on July 1, 2000.

Calcavecchia romps to Phoenix Open title

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. — Mark Calcavecchia's day started early with a five-shot lead and an 8-iron he couldn't wait to hit. It ended 28 holes later with a spot in the PGA Tour record book and the Phoenix Open trophy secure in his grasp.

Calcavecchia birdied four of the last five holes Sunday to win the Phoenix Open with a 28-under-par 256, breaking a record held for 46 years by Mike Souchak for lowest 72-hole score.

Calcavecchia also set a record for most birdies in 72 holes, making 32 of them over four days on the par-71

TPC of Scottsdale course to win by eight shots over Rocco Mediate.

He did it on a day when neither Tiger Woods nor anyone in the rest of the field was much of a threat. Calcavecchia returned from Saturday's suspended third round to hit an 8-iron close for birdie on the ninth hole en route to a 64, then turned around and shot a 67 in the final 18 holes.

The only suspense remaining in the final round was whether Calcavecchia would break the record for lowest score set by Souchak in the 1955 Texas Open. By the time he ran off four straight birdies beginning on the 14th hole to secure the mark, much of the huge crowd had already left for home to watch the Super Bowl.

"It's been a long time. At least it seems like it's been a long time," said Calcavecchia, whose last win came in the 1998 Honda Classic.

Calcavecchia, who took command of the tournament with a second round 60, had to play 28 holes Sunday after the third round was suspended because of lightning and hail with Calcavecchia in the ninth fairway waiting to hit his second shot.

SPORTS BRIEFS

New York tops the Lakers, 91-81

NEW YORK (AP) — Shaquille O'Neal never left the locker room, and the rest of the Lakers never really showed up, either. With O'Neal a last-minute scratch because of a foot injury, the New York Knicks attacked the basket and ran the fastbreak much more than usual Sunday as they defeated the Lakers 91-81.

Allan Houston scored 33 points and Latrell Sprewell added 28 for the Knicks, who snapped a three-game losing streak and improved to 11-5 against teams from the Western Conference. The Knicks took the lead for good midway through the first, closed the quarter with a 15-2 run to open a 33-19 lead and stayed comfortably ahead the rest of the way despite playing short-handed themselves as Marcus Camby (suspension) and Kurt Thomas (sprained ankle) also sat out. O'Neal was sidelined with a sore arch on his right foot, an injury that flared up Friday.

HELP WANTED
Emissions Specialist
Air Quality Bureau / Merit Resources Position
Merit Resources, Inc. is seeking to fill a full time position in the Emissions Inventory Unit at the Department of Natural Resources, Air Quality Bureau. The Emissions Inventory Unit collects emissions from other sources of air pollution such as commercial businesses, residential activities such as household chemical use, gasoline stations, and vehicle exhaust and biogenic (natural) sources.
Salary Range: $1,160.40 - $1,750.40 biweekly
Minimum Qualifications:
Graduation from an accredited four year college or university with major course work in physical or natural science. Preference will be given to candidates with a strong chemistry and math background, good communication skills, and experience with Windows based computer software.
Examples of Job Duties:
Review emission inventories submitted by facilities consisting of technical emissions data for completeness and accuracy; Provide assistance to facilities completing the emission inventory in the form of phone calls, workshops, and on-site visits; Maintain program database with information submitted by facilities; Run emission estimation software developed by EPA; Conduct research and participate in the development of methods and techniques used to estimate emissions from area sources (non-point sources of air pollution); Prepare written reports on area sources including tables, charts, or graphs to explain and summarize emissions; Duties will include some travel within the state and out-of-state training.
For more information about this position, contact Brian Hutchins, Lead Worker, Emissions Inventory Unit, at (515) 281-4918 or brian.hutchins@dnr.state.ia.us. To apply for this position, submit a letter of interest, resume, and transcript to: Brian Hutchins, Air Quality Bureau, 7900 Hickman Rd., Suite 1, Urbandale, IA 50222.
Applications will be accepted through February 7, 2001.

horoscopes

Monday, January 29, 2001 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Ask for favors, as long as you don't require help with legal matters. Take time to connect with people who will appreciate your talents. Look into making some extra cash. Flirting with strangers will upset your mate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your lover will cost you financially if you allow it. You will have to learn to say no if you don't want to end up broke and alone. You are losing respect by giving in all the time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You just can't keep your mind on your work. You should be looking into foreign cultures or philosophies that can broaden your horizons about life, love and happiness.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can expect to have problems with your lover. Do not allow yourself to be taken advantage of when you are confused about the relationship. Ask point-blank where you stand.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Romantic opportunities will be plentiful. However, you must be careful you don't pick someone who is more interested in what you have than in who you are.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): It's a good time to make career changes. Interviews will go very well. Your warmth and genuine character will win you points. You can use your unusual ideas to show your versatility.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You will do well in speculative money matters. Spend some time with children and don't forget to keep in shape. You have the energy to juggle a wide variety of activities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Avoid romantic interaction with colleagues. Redecorating will cost more than you want to spend. Emotional uncertainties will make communication with your spouse difficult.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Projects that involve telemarketing or mail order should be of interest to you. Look into the possibilities of starting your own small business. A relative may back your idea.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't let older relatives or siblings put demands on you. Do what you can, but don't feel guilty if you can't do it all. Your need to collect things will cause grief.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Romantic encounters will develop through social events or fitness programs. You will be able to make profits through investments. Popularity will be yours if you move into the limelight.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your anger may lead you in the wrong direction. Don't jump to conclusions. Think twice before you retaliate. You are not likely to get along with co-workers or impress your boss today.

The Ledge

By Jesse Ammerman

Signs that you had a rough weekend

- You were in Ames.
- You got to meet and hang out with tons of new people — in jail.
- Your body, defying all laws of medicine, has acquired a hangover as a permanent condition.
- You're pretty sure that those bruises and welts on your body didn't come from horseback riding ...
- Your apartment is littered with enough recyclable bottles to pay your rent.
- You're not sure what happened, but you're definitely getting some strange looks now because of it.
- Your friend missed your "guy-urinating-on-a-bar-window" impression, but that cop got a pretty good look.
- Things were going great with that hot guy you met — until the part where you vomited on his shoes.
- Your "rent" money was misdirected and spent entirely on alcohol, pizza and Funyons.
- You know that girl you went home with the other night? Well, dude, that wasn't exactly a girl.
- Your big weekend of Boozin' n' Brawlin' didn't turn out to be as cool as you thought it would.
- That huge Super Bowl bash you had planned turned out to be you, your TV and a can of Pringles.
