Iowa City fire fighters battle a blaze Thursday afternoon at 815-817 Clark St.

Two families lose all their belongings, and the buildings may be a complete loss.

By Eric Copp

Five adults, two children and two dogs escaped with minor injuries from their Iowa City homes as fire engulfs a duplex at 815-817 Clark St. Thursday. The building may be a total loss, and its residents were forced to relocate with relatives.

The blaze broke out around 1:30 p.m. while the residents of 815 Clark St. Jack Leib and his girlfriend, Joanie Payne, were home. The residents of the other duplex were also home, but their names were unavailable.

Iowa City Fire Department officials and they did not yet know what caused the fire, and it remains under investigation.

The fire was reported Thursday around 1:30 p.m. and fire crews arrived around 1:35 p.m. and kept the fire under control.

At the time of the fire, Leib was showering, and Payne was at the third-story bedroom. Payne was able to escape the fire by jumping through the third-story bedroom window and Leib escaped by way of a back stairway that was treated and released from Mercy Hospital. "I saw flames when I came out," Payne said.

India relatives in shock from quake locale say 1

India's worst earthquake in 50 years collapses buildings into the streets as relief workers begin to pull out.

By Andrew Martin

The Daily Iowan

One week after a massive earthquake in the northwestern state of Gujarat, some Iowa residents say relatives near the destruction zone are still in shock. "I don't know how much longer people can wait," said Samir Jain, a University of Iowa junior Devashis Jain's sister, who was trapped in her apartment building until late Sunday. "Promises have been made throughout India. 'Thank God we're alive,'" Jain said. "But I'm not sure I've heard anything like this from the government." Jain, who was reunited with her family Tuesday, said she and her relatives are still waiting for word on Jain's apartment, which was damaged in the earthquake.

The India Development and Relief Fund, which is working to provide relief to the earthquake victims, has collected more than $4 million, much of it from Iowa residents. "We're working as quickly as possible to meet the needs of the victims," said RDIF Executive Director Guru Dutt. "We're working with local leaders to ensure that the funds are used effectively and that the needs are met." Jain and her family are planning to return to India as soon as their apartment is made habitable.

The earthquake was the worst in the region in 50 years and killed more than 30,000 people. It also destroyed many buildings and infrastructure, leaving many families homeless. "It's a really bad situation," Jain said. "We're trying to stay positive, but it's really hard." Jain said her mother and father have been helping to provide relief to the victims, and Jain is working to coordinate efforts with other organizations.

"We're working with local leaders to ensure that the funds are used effectively and that the needs are met," Jain said. "We're planning to return to India as soon as our apartment is made habitable." Jain and her family are hoping to return to India as soon as possible to begin rebuilding their lives.

State gov't faces budget crunch

The state's revenues only grew 0.2 percent, lawmakers were expecting 3.5 percent.

By Ken Thomas

MIDIAN -- State revenues grew only 0.2 percent in January, confirming state officials' worst fears that a slowing economy may force them to pursue budget-balancing measures.

The financial area of the legislature's committee said Thursday that state revenues were 6.5 percent below the January target.

That means lawmakers will be looking to cut millions of dollars in revenues for this year's budget, passing an already tight budget even tighter.

"This is not a dire situation yet," House Speaker Brass Johnson said. "It's a very difficult situation."

Great cause, questionable tactics…
Charity at any cost?

This evening, starting at 7:30 p.m., scores of people will gather in the Pension Center to witness the opening of the Dance Marathon. This year, the organizers have set a goal of raising at least $800,000 to aid the poor. The cause is noble, the objective is admirable, the goal is high. However, there are several questions to consider:

Are the necessary means justifiable?

The dance marathon is a fund-raising event that relies on the cooperation of many people, both dancers and donors. The question is not only about the amount of money raised, but also about the methods used to achieve this goal.

The organizers have set a strict schedule for the marathon, with specific times for dancing and breaks, and have asked participants to donate at least a certain amount of money for each hour spent dancing. This approach raises questions about the ethical implications of using coercion to achieve a charitable goal.

Some might argue that these methods are necessary to ensure a large turnout and raise the required funds. However, others might believe that such tactics could undermine the integrity of the cause and discourage potential donors from participating.

In conclusion, while the Dance Marathon is a laudable endeavor, it is important to consider the methods used to achieve its goals. Are the means justifiable? Can a charitable cause justify using coercion to achieve its objectives? These questions are worth reflecting upon as we witness the opening of the marathon tonight.

The Bush administration reaches out…
Have faith in the system

Earlier this week, President Bush announced a plan to carry out an aggressive economic program designed to stimulate the economy and create jobs. The plan includes tax cuts, increased spending on infrastructure, and deregulation of certain industries.

Some critics have opposed the plan, arguing that it could lead to increased government debt and potential economic instability. However, the Bush administration maintains that the plan is necessary to ensure economic growth.

It’s important to look at the broader picture when considering this economic plan. While tax cuts and increased spending may provide temporary relief to some, they may also have long-term consequences for the overall financial health of the country.

As we continue to navigate through these challenging times, it is crucial to remain vigilant and hold our leaders accountable for their actions. We must ensure that the interests of the nation are prioritized over the interests of a few.

In conclusion, while the Bush administration’s economic plan may offer some relief, it is important to consider the long-term implications and hold our leaders accountable for the consequences of their actions.

Iowa women pummel Michigan State in road win

By garbage Mansion

The Iowa women's basketball team has no reason to remember its loss at home to No. 18 Penn State a month ago, as it went on the road to defeat the Nittany Lions, 88-71.

The Hawkeyes dug a big hole in the first half, going down 40-27 with just over 11 minutes remaining in the period. But Iowa rallied back, scoring 21 of the next 26 points to end the half, and then fought through the second half to go on and win.

Iowa's defense was key to the victory, holding Penn State to just 38% shooting from the field. The Hawkeyes, on the other hand, shot 46% from the floor and had a 16-9 advantage in rebounding.

"We really wanted to get back on track," said Iowa coach Lisa Bluder. "We were a little bit down after the loss at Penn State, but we came back here and got the job done.

"We've been on a bit of a roll lately, but we still have some work to do. We need to keep improving every day.

"I'm proud of the way our team played tonight. We worked hard in practice and it showed on the court."

Women's track

This weekend the Hawkeyes will head to Notre Dame for the Meyo Invitational on Friday at 6 p.m. at the Loftus Sports Complex. The meet will conclude with the men's division at 11:30 a.m. Saturday.

The Hawkeyes will have a full complement of athletes. While team scores will not be kept, Iowa will compete against Ohio State, Michigan State, Missouri, Minnesota, and Notre Dame.

Scheidt defended its national rank

The basketball team took a loss against Vanderbilt, Nashville, this past weekend. The Hawkeyes lost to the Commodores 50-45 in a tough match against a veteran team with a bunch of newcomers.

Iowa's keys

Iowa has struggled against its Michigan opponents. Iowa will likely depend on the lower weights again this weekend to put them within 30 points of the Michigan Wolverines. Iowa has lost only five matches this season.

Big Ten Championships

Iowa and Penn State, the Hawkeye foes that have struggled this year, will be hosting the Big Ten Championships in Evanston, Ill. Two weekends after that, Iowa will host the NCAA Tournament, from March 15-17.

Penn State

Penn State, the Hawkeye foes that have struggled this year, will be hosting the Big Ten Championships in Evanston, Ill. Two weekends after that, Iowa will host the NCAA Tournament, from March 15-17.

Heath will continue to plan

Heath has continued to plan for the upcoming season with the help of his coaches and athletes. The team has been eager to return to the court and put their skills to the test.

Grant said

Coach James Grant said, "We need to perform our best to do well. Iowa will again, without the services of senior 174-pounder Gabe McMahan, who has a repaired ACL, likely compete against Penn State this weekend. Freshman T.J. Nits has filled in for McMahan well, winning both of his matches against Northwestern and Wisconsin last weekend.

This weekend should give the Hawkeyes an opportunity to fine-tune themselves before the seasons world down. On Feb. 18, the Hawkeyes face off with top-ranked Minnesota in Minneapolis. Two weeks after that, Iowa will host the NCAA Tournament, from March 15-17.

Hawkeyes battle injuries

MEN'S GYM

The team has quit together a noticeable freshman recruitment and generate excitement for the future. The Hawkeyes would love to feed off the energy of a large Field House crowd.

Awards have been given out every week, and the free-throw line. The Blue Devils entered shooting 71 percent from the floor, the second best mark in the league.

Duke rolled a timeout after Hawkeyes free throws and the final play drawn by coach Mike Krzyzewski almost worked.

Mike Dunlap sawed the ball from the baseline and$connec$ted 3 point shot but just barely on the inside of rebound. Birdie left hit the back of the rim.

In fact, you might say a win might be a little warmer earned.

Hawks hope for attendance boost
