Democrats say the plan benefits the rich; some Republicans want to increase the cut's size.

By Alan Frey

WASHINGTON - President Bush Thursday dispensed his proposed $1.6 trillion, 10-year cut on what should be a tough vote for a Congress, urging action because "a warning light is flashing on the dashboard of our economy."

Democrats, while insisting that they, too, want to trim the budget deficit, and was skewed toward the rich.

The lecture is scheduled for this weekend in Holland, Michigan, and is available for students who wish to get vaccinated.

The vaccine, which protects against the five most common types of bacterial meningitis, is free and widely available. It's recommended for all adults and children under the age of 65. The vaccine is given as a series of shots, and it's important to get all the doses in order to be fully protected.

The symptoms of meningitis include fever, headache, nausea or vomiting, a stiff neck and a rash. If you think you may have meningitis, it's important to seek medical attention right away. Meningitis can be serious and even deadly if not treated early enough.

Rationale for the Work

The topics he will talk about include how people to attend other colleges and universities to attend conferences, and Myers has been impressed with the crowd, "I feel much more comfortable," he said.

In his first lecture, Myers will be the keynote speaker at the National Convention of Psychological Students. In his second lecture, he will discuss the latest research findings in psychology.

"I'm excited to see how people react to the lectures," said Myers. "I think it's a great opportunity to share my expertise and my research with other students and professionals."
Rich pardon draws fire further

A former Justice Department official says he would have blocked the pardon had he known the details of the case.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Justice Department has settled a lawsuit involving the White House's role in commuting a federal sentence, angering Democrats who say the case raises questions about the executive branch's ability to influence the criminal justice system.

A federal judge on Wednesday dismissed a lawsuit filed by the American Civil Liberties Union, which accused the Justice Department of improperly intervening in a federal case to get a sentence commuted for a convicted prison inmate.

The lawsuit, brought by the ACLU on behalf of a Missouri inmate named Robert Reed, alleged that the Justice Department used its influence to pressure the judge to commute Reed's sentence.

The government settled the case for $5,000, according to a court filing.

Democrats, who have been critical of the Justice Department under President Donald Trump, said the settlement was a win for Reed and a victory for the rule of law.

"This is a great day for Mr. Reed and for the rule of law," said U.S. Rep. Jerrold Nadler, the top Democrat on the House Judiciary Committee. "It's a win for justice and a win for all Americans who believe that our criminal justice system must be fair and transparent."
Local expert questions tax cut

A UI economics associate professor says tax cuts aren't necessarily recession-busters.

By Delanie Pignyre and Michael Pro
The Daily Iowan

As President Bush presented Congress with a $10-trillion, $1.6-trillion cut proposal Thursday, dedicating it necessary, necessary was the nation's economic recession and avoiding a recession more than enough to the problem.

The nation is facing an economic recession, said a local expert questioning tax cut.

"The economy would not stay out of a recession because of this tax cut," said Beth Hurst, director of the Institute for Economic Research and a UI economics associate professor.

"The idea with tax cuts is that they can lead to prosperity. If we take time, people have more spending money, and when people start spending, production goes up," she said.

"We are thinking about the choices of VCs instead of tax cuts," she adds.

Everyone seems to be stretching their money a little too thin, said Hurst during a press conference Thursday morning.

"The Treasury is balancing the budget," Bush said during a press conference Thursday morning.

Hurts said the Bush administration was working to solve certain issues that have been in place for some time.

"The government is doing its best to solve certain issues that have been in place for some time," she said.

A reason for some concern about the nation's future is the technology industry's struggle to remain competitive, said Hurst.

"The government is doing its best to solve certain issues that have been in place for some time," she said.

"There are two major schools of thought on the cause of the drop. One holds that the market is reacting to a slowing economy, and the other says the NASDAQ was overvalued -- worth as much as twice its thought -- and is correcting itself," said Hurst.

Bruce Kent, the executive vice president of Farmers & Merchants Savings Bank, 1500 S. Gilbert St., said a new view on the local level. He said that the government now sees an indication that a recession is on the horizon.

"The government now sees an indication that a recession is on the horizon," he said.

"That led Daschle and House Democrats say the biggest winners would be the rich, who pay most of the taxes but would also see the biggest losers of a recession," said Hurst.

"That led Daschle and House Democrats say the biggest winners would be the rich, who pay most of the taxes but would also see the biggest losers of a recession," said Hurst.

Democrats say the biggest losers would be the rich, while the richest 1 percent cut, while the richest 1 percent would save rather than spend the savings down. A tax cut, the government would need more money to support the poor, said Hurst.

"Money would be available for bonds, which would push interest rates down and allow more people to borrow money to start small businesses," she said.

"The national spending level is down from last year. It is drop: more people to borrow money stocks have been rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood rood roo

JERUSALEM — A Prime Minister-elect Sharon says Israel won't resuscite peace talks with Palestinians. Sharon, who last week fired a second palestinian leader, says he won't resume talks until the next Palestinian leader is in place.

Prime Minister-elect Sharon said on Thursday he has no plans for more than four months and killed 385 people, most of them Palestinians. The government will find it will need to make changes in the next four months, but the conditions for starting negotiations for peace in the creation of a nation and violence persist, he said.

Student athletes' reconsidered... Not all fun and games With all the talk surrounding the commercialization of college sports, it is sometimes easy to forget that college athletes are students and not professional athletes. A number of recent incidents show the need for students to exercise some common sense.

Exercise some common sense

Robert Pickett, a former MTV reality TV contestant and a senior at the State University of New York at Cortland, recently talked about his experiences on the popular MTV show "Survivor." What do you think about the idea that college athletes become reality TV stars?

The increased popularity of reality TV shows, such as "Survivor," "The Real World," and "Travel Channel's The Amazing Race," has led to concerns about the impact of these shows on our society. Many people worry that reality TV shows provide a distorted view of reality and encourage unhealthy behaviors. Some argue that these shows are nothing more than a form of entertainment that distracts us from more important issues.

Searching for the truth in an age of limitless content

Lisa Ellen Auman is in prison for murder after she was accused of aiding and abetting a skinhead police officer, despite being handcuffed and secured in the back of a police cruiser for 10 minutes before the shooting occurred.

On the afternoon of Nov. 13, 2003, then-Iowa Governor Tom Vilsack ordered a shake down of the entire state prison system. Among those arrested was a nineteen-year-old woman named Ellen Auman. It was a momentous occasion for the state of Iowa, where for the first time in history, all of its prison inmates were searched for drugs, guns, and other contraband. The search was a massive undertaking, involving hundreds of officers and lasting for several days. However, the search also revealed that Auman had been in prison for over a decade, since she was just a child.

At the time of her arrest, Auman was working as a janitor in a local hospital. She had previously been convicted of murder and aiding and abetting a skinhead who had murdered her husband. The story of Auman's life has been a matter of much debate and controversy, with many calling for her release.

Former President Bill Clinton had the choice of pardonining Auman, along with many other supposedly acquitted prisoners of her case. Clinton did not free this woman who was guilty of nothing more than being in the wrong place at the absolutely wrong time. But like the WTO protest and the case for Mumia Abu-Jamal, the fight for Auman is growing in strength. Visit www.iowal.com to learn more about this issue. Follow the writings of former President Clinton on excog.com as he sees what he has to say about the incident. Read old articles from the time of the murder in the Denver Post archives. With so much useless information circulating in the super highway, how is society supposed to filter out the valuable information from the junk?

There is nothing that filters out nonsense from pertinent information better than the average human mind interacting with the Web. You have to be at your own discretion when perusing information, discerning the slanted facts from reality by checking multiple sources. Any like form of media outlets, there are always people who will try to alter opinions through their work. This can be done for just purposes - to serve our society in the pursuit of a common good - to provoke racial or political views that instill more hate into our already divided culture.

But now with the expanded http://www.bremers.com there is hope not to set Auman as a victim of the wrong man. Please don’t ever do this every day. Maybe the internet will help free an innocent victim.
The UI Museum of Art will host a square dance in conjunction with a current exhibit.

Swing dancing partner of the floor, and if you liked that, there’s more in store. The UI Museum of Art will host its free square dance from 7:30 p.m. to 10 p.m. to celebrate its current exhibit, “Southwest...and the Southwest Art Museum.”

The dance is open to the public and will feature a live band, The Talking Fiddle Heads. Caller Nate Kemperman will direct the dance.

Square dancing survivors on college campuses approximately every 20 years, said David Lason, a member of the Talking Fiddle Heads who has been dancing for 25 years. It remains to be seen how many people will come to the event at 7:30 p.m. today.

"You get this three-train approach where kids want loud music, people touching each other and every other physical activity," Lason said.

Johnson is bemused as he finds the Van Gogh Studio Film in Hollywood moment.

But the offset, good-humored, doesn’t bother him. Filtering appo- proximately 100 AARP members through the museum, his passion is evident.

"Collaboration is a wonderful thing. Sometimes it’s irritating,” he says with a laugh.

Johnson, born in 1965 and the director of the exhibition, which runs until April 13, is a noted dance performer, director and painter. He is also a prolific writer, having authored and co-authored, among other works, the book "The Talking Fiddle Heads: Square Dance Swing.”

O’Brien’s promotion comes amid a locker room shakeup following the trading of star small forward Paul Pierce.

“Coach O’Brien is in the final stages of his battle with cancer,” said Pierce, who also played for O’Brien at Kentucky.

O’Brien has been an integral part of the Celtics’ coaching staff for 18 years, beginning as an intern in 1985.

The 58-year-old O’Brien is known for his attention to detail and his ability to help players develop.

O’Brien is also a family man, having coached his daughter’s basketball team at Kentucky.

In this new role, O’Brien will be responsible for the team’s development and preparation.

O’Brien has been with the Celtics for 18 seasons and has been named an NBA All-Star twice.

Best known for his work with shooting guards, O’Brien has helped guide the development of some of the NBA’s best guards.

O’Brien has coached the likes of Pierce, Rajon Rondo, and Ray Allen during his time in Boston.

The Celtics have struggled to find success since Pierce’s departure, but O’Brien believes the team is capable of winning.

“I think we’re going to be good, and I think we’re going to be fun to watch,” he said.

O’Brien is a native of Providence, Rhode Island, and has been a fixture in the Celtics organization for nearly three decades.

He has been with the team since 1979, serving as an intern before being promoted to assistant coach in 1985.

O’Brien has also been a head coach at Providence College and has served as an assistant at several other schools.

In addition to his work with the Celtics, O’Brien has been a head coach at Providence College and an assistant at several other schools.

His most recent gig came in 2018 when he was named an assistant coach at the University of Connecticut.

O’Brien’s promotion comes amid a locker room shakeup following the trading of star small forward Paul Pierce.

“Coach O’Brien is in the final stages of his battle with cancer,” said Pierce, who also played for O’Brien at Kentucky.

With Pierce’s departure, the Celtics will have to rely on O’Brien to help guide the team’s younger players.

Lewis snub may be flaw in system

Players are not permitted to talk to assistants until their teams are done playing.

By Bill Strickland

Associated Press

When Marvin Lewis failed to land a head-coaching offer after his defense led Baltimore to a Super Bowl victory, one quick guess was that NFL coaches were not talking to him. Why else wouldn't they have talked to him?

"The process was flawed and possibly illegally biased," said Ray Anderson, Lewis' agent. Almost three weeks later, there is more talk that the system may be having the desired prospects - assistants on teams that just missed the playoffs may wait until the end of the January to interview, so they can interview with assistants before that.

"There is a guy who con­ ­structed what may be the best defense ever, but only one out of seven or eight teams talked to him," said Tony Dungy, one of three black coaches in the NFL, said after Tennessee defensive coordinator Gregg Williams hired on Lewis.

"Everything happens for a reason, and Marvin will end up in a better place," said Dungy. "But that doesn't lessen the league's fault. There is something wrong with this process, it's flawed.""The current rule doesn't allow a team to talk to a prospective assistant until his team is out of the playoffs. It was improved in 1994, after Dave Wannstedt and Norv Washington while the Jets were in the pros­ ­ucts - three black coaches in the league this year. Lewis and John Fox of the Carolina Panthers were candidates that indicated that they may have qualified black coaches in the pipelines and then continue to be interviewed by teams. Instead, Carthon signed as interim coach hired this year - interim coaches who had the job in 1995.

The sixth was Marty Schottenheimer, who was the first coach to land a head coaching job after the '95 Super Bowl, who was the first in 42 vacancies this year, only Buffalo then hired coach, Ted Cottrell, the former offensive coordinator of the Cleveland Browns, who he isn't these days, much to the consternation of fans. The guidelines are almost certain to be changed.

"There is a prejudice in places where a team that has a non-black head coach can't express that interest," he said. "I think we can work with that." •

Selig talks proposal to move A's

A group of investors from the Phoenix are looking to help form a new baseball team in Seattle and are interested in talking with local baseball fans about the possibility of moving the A's to Seattle.

While the proposal is still in the early stages, it has sparked interest among Seattle baseball enthusiasts. The investors, who are looking to create a new Major League Baseball (MLB) team, are said to be willing to invest millions of dollars to make the move happen.

According to sources close to the talks, the investors have been in contact with various local baseball organizations and are hoping to secure support for their proposal. They have also been exploring the possibility of building a new stadium in Seattle to accommodate the team.

If the proposal were to move forward, it would mark a significant change for the A's, who have played in Seattle since 1977. The move would likely have a significant impact on both the team's finances and its ability to compete at a high level.

The investors have not yet made any formal announcement regarding the proposal, and it remains to be seen whether or not it will come to fruition. However, the interest it has generated among baseball fans in Seattle suggests that it could be a significant development in the sport's history.

lines in a long time, and it didn't have to come at a better time. It's already what we need. In preparation for the upcoming match with the Spartans (6-5, 3-2 in the Big Ten) and the looming Feb. 18 meeting with theolders (5-5, 2-1 in conference), Illinois' Steve Schaffer, head coach of the Illini women's wrestling team, says his team has improved.

"Our team is ready for big changes...Schaffer said. "We've had some injuries over the course of the season and we've been able to get them all back in the lineup."

Schaffer added that his team is currently in the middle of the Big Ten and needs to continue its improvement to remain in contention for a conference title.

"It's all about getting ready for conference. We have one conference game left and then we have a couple of non-conference games to finish off," said assistant coach Joe Bollmer.

Bollmer noted that the team needs to focus on its fundamentals and execution to be successful in conference play.

We've got to win a couple more games and get a little help from some other Big Ten teams," said Bollmer.

The Hawkeyes lost to Ohio State last weekend, but rebounded to defeat Penn State in exhibition play. They will look to build on this momentum as they prepare for their upcoming conference games.

NASCAR drawing more and more attention

Race or owner Richard Petty, left, and Ray Evernham, right, owner of Evernham Motorsports, chat in the garage area Thursday, the actual main event with the Rolex 24 Hours of Daytona.

A few days later, notice began to grow in the speedway Thursday, the non-points race among last year's Winston Cup piles winners. Next week the race is practice, an IRC race, two qualifying races and another round of interviews. They were just a small part of the first wave.

The auto racing circuit's marquee trio of events brought its first stars to Daytona, bartering for its own adaptability by guys named Selfish, Sprewell and Latrell Sprewell. And the league gathered in Phoenix after almost-weekly incidents of players going after each other. And their fans. And that sense of growing perception, that the league's attempt to transform its image was not enough - well, that's still up for our sport, that's an eye-opener.

That's what NASCAR is handling the media crunch that has accentuated its own image, that the TV deal symbolized and which begat things like Media Day. So there was plenty to discuss in Thursday's six, some of which were even more visible than just a decade ago, when NASCAR was an industry that sought for attention outside its own, Southern bubble.

"I see events like this and I'm so excited," NASCAR president Mike Helton said, as he looked out Media Day. "We have built a media presence that has become such a mass-market sports power.

"We're not at the point where we can change, and we can't change, but we've got to get those two teams at the front of the line. And we've got to get to where our sport is going to be where people, and the respect they have for our sport, that's an eye-opener.

"It's a big race and everybody's pumped up for it. And if there's something to do this year, we've got to get it done, and we've got to go and get it done with you guys. And we're going to try to do with you guys for two to three hours. It's like, "OK, alright, let's get on the track today and start racing." People are just as excited about this race as the drivers are, which is a testament to Darrell and Rusty Wallace and the hard work that he put into it....

"I think it's going to be a great day, and it's going to be a good day, and it's going to be a good race."
