2 civilians at sub's controls in collision

■ The Navy confirms that the two were at watch stations "under very close supervision."

By Jean Christensen
Associated Press

HONOLULU — Two civilian guests were seated at controls of the USS Greeneville on Feb. 9 when the submarine surfaced and sank a Japanese fishing vessel off the Hawaiian coast, a Navy spokesman said Tuesday.

"There were two civilians at two separate watch stations under the very close supervision of a qualified watchstander," said Lt. Cmdr. Conrad Chun, a Pacific Fleet spokesman.

He declined to identify which stations were involved, but said they could include the helm, sonar or the ballast control. The Navy has refused to identify who was aboard, but Chun said the 16 civilians included business leaders.

A Defense official in Washington said one of the civilians was at the helm. However, there is no indication the civilian played any role in the collision, said the official, who is familiar with the investigation and spoke only on the condition of anonymity.

A Pentagon spokesman,

Rear Adm. Craig Quigley, said no information about the circumstances at the time of the accident would be released until the Navy has completed its investigation.

The Pentagon said it has not given up searching for nine people missing from the Japanese vessel, a 190-foot ship owned by Uwajima Fisheries High School in Southwest Japan. Twenty-six people were rescued at sea an hour after the Ehime Maru was rammed by the 360-foot submarine and sank in 1,800 feet of water.

The Greeneville was conducting a drill in which the submarine dives to about 400 feet and then makes a rapid ascent — known as an "emergency main ballast blow."

The sub commander usually ensures that nothing is in the way before rocketing to the surface, but the Greeneville somehow failed to detect the presence of the fishing vessel.

The Navy takes civilians aboard its ships and submarines as a means of promoting its service, educating civilians about the Navy and to accommodate journalist's requests.

Chun said it was routine for civilians to be allowed at the controls under close supervision.

■ From dancing to Captain Condom, UI students will celebrate the day of love.

By Peter Boylan
The Daily Iowan

Since Captain Condom was conceived 24 years ago at the University of California, Berkeley, his birthday — Valentine's Day — has become known as National Condom Day.

To celebrate the day, Captain Condom and the Rubber Band are expected to convene on the Pedestrian Mall from noon to 2 p.m. today. The band plans to hand out free condoms and safe-sex fliers. The event is sponsored by the Iowa Center for AIDS Resources and Education. In addition to Captain Condom's downtown appearance, the I-Care Community Center, 321 First St., has planned an open house from 4-6 p.m.

"There will be an educational seminar and free handouts," said Kristin Temple, a volunteer at I-Care. "Plus, there will be all the free condoms you can shake a stick at."

For Valentine's Day traditionalists, Eicher Florist, 130 E. Washington St., is selling a dozen flowers and a dozen long-stem roses arranged in a vase for $39.95. The Brewery, 521 S. Gilbert St., has a four-course Valentine's Day Dinner for Two at $70 per couple. The meal includes an appetizer, salad, dessert and bottle of champagne.

"We get a good balance of college kids and local residents," said Heather Hyatt, the manager of the Brewery. "We've

UISG questions tenure fairness at UI

■ The group wants a review of the process after a black assistant UI professor was denied tenure.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

The UI Student Government passed a resolution to review an assistant UI professor's tenure denial during its Tuesday night meeting.

Michaeline Crichlow of the African-American World Studies Program, who is black, was denied tenure earlier this month because of a vote cast against her by Linda Maxson, the dean of the UI College of Liberal Arts, said UI graduate student and UISG Senator Jackie Comito. Maxson was not in attendance Tuesday night.

UISG Senator Jon Wolseth, a UI graduate student who submitted the proposal, pleaded with the UISG to be expeditious in making a decision, saying the tenure process was biased against minority faculty members.

Three black faculty members have been denied tenure in the past five years, he said. The most recent controversial case was that of Obiagele Lake, a former assistant UI professor of anthropology who accused the UI of racism in the fall of 1999 after being denied tenure.

Comito, also a member of the UI Diversity Committee, said she will present the UISG's decision and support of Crichlow at the committee's meeting Friday. That committee advises the UI administration on campus diversity issues.

"What we're asking is she that be treated fairly," Comito said.

The resolution demands the

Grad Senate asks for UI apology on doctoral fees

■ Graduate student senators want to soften the blow of a $342 fee increase for post-comp doctoral students.

By Mary Sedor
The Daily Iowan

The UI Graduate Student Senate approved a resolution Tuesday asking for an apology from the UI administration for withholding information about an almost 490 percent increase in the fee for post-comp doctoral students.

The resolution, written by Senate Vice President Jeffrey Charis-Carlson, calls for the Graduate College to notify the Senate of fee increases of more than 10 percent in the future. It also asks the university to "grandfather" the fee — meaning that it would not affect current post-comp students.

Post-comp doctoral students — graduate students who have passed their comprehensive exams but have not completed their dissertations — working on the UI campus will pay a continuous registration fee of $412 for using UI resources during the next school year. Post-comp students not working on campus will pay $70, the same amount on-campus post-comp students paid this year.

Post-comp students are not registered for any classes; they are completing their dissertations, and many are instructors in a number of departments. They were caught off guard when they were notified of the fee increase last week, which was approved in December by the state of Iowa Board of

Valentine for Coralville: New Pioneer opens today

■ The Coralville New Pioneer Co-op will feature an all-organic salad bar and a juice bar.

By Nick Narigon
The Daily Iowan

After several setbacks because of construction delays, the New Pioneer Co-op in Coralville is expected to open its doors to the public today as a special Valentine's Day present to its customers.

The new facility, located at 1101 Second St., is nearly twice the size of the Iowa City branch, 22 N. Van Buren St. It was built because of a huge increase in demand, said marketing manager Jennifer Masada.

"We've seen enormous growth in our downtown store," she said. "We had a lot of customers, a lot of traffic and long lines."

The New Pioneer Co-op is a retail outlet grocery store that provides locally grown food, as well as pre-packaged organic food from all over the country.

Construction on the Coralville store began in October 1999. The opening had been slated for the winter of 2000, but because of unspecified construction delays, the Co-op moved its grand opening to today at noon.

"The delays were related to the fact that we took a four-plex theater and turned it into a full-

Group lobbies for smoke-free restaurants

■ Clean Air for Everyone pushes the Coralville City Council to make restaurants, not bars, smoke-free.

By Jessi Todden
The Daily Iowan

Approximately 20 Iowa City junior-high students, parents and teachers assembled Tuesday for a brief rally before marching to a Coralville City Council meeting to support a smoke-free restaurant ordinance.

The rally, which lasted approximately 15 minutes, was held at Terrapin Coffee Brewery, 110 Fifth St., Coralville, a smoke-free coffee shop.

Clean Air for Everyone, the organization that sponsored the rally, consists of health-care professionals, children, and concerned local citizens whose goal is educating the public about what they perceive as the dangers of second-hand smoke, said group member Dan Ramsey, who is also a prevention specialist at MECCA, a substance-abuse center located in Coralville.

The largest study of second-hand smoke ever done, the World Health Organization report of 1998, reported no connection between disease and second-hand smoke.

The clean-air group has submitted a proposed ordinance to the Coralville

City Council that, if passed, would make restaurants completely smoke-free, he said.

"(Restaurants) that want to go smoke-free but haven't are worried about an uneven playing field," Ramsey said. "But how can you measure dollars vs. health?"

"What we have found is

Zach Boyden-Holmes/The Daily Iowan

Prevention specialist Dan Ramsey speaks to a group of seventh- and eighth-graders from Northwest Junior High School about smoking Tuesday night at the Terrapin Coffee Brewery in Coralville.

that restaurants that have gone smoke-free actually make more money."

Ramsey said the group is not pushing for bars to be smoke-free, just restaurants.

Councilor Henry Herwig said that although no one on the Coralville City Council smokes, that won't be a factor in the council's decision-making process.

"It depends on how the ordinance is written as to whether we'll approve it," he said. "Anytime you could infringe on people's rights with an ordinance, we take it seriously."

Herwig said the council will also consider how the ordinance would be enforced.

The clean-air group is sponsoring junior-high student groups at both local schools. The group provides students with training and assistance in organizing rallies and activities geared toward tobacco prevention and control, said Eileen Fisher, the chairwoman for the Johnson County Tobacco Free Coalition.

In October of 2000, members of the anti-smoking group went before the Iowa City Council to urge it to pass an ordinance banning smoking in restaurants. The council put smoking on the back burner to focus on alcohol, however.

The group recently conducted a poll that asked 400 residents if they would be in favor of an ordinance preventing restaurants from allowing guests to smoke, said Fisher. Sixty-eight percent of those polled were in favor of such an ordinance, she said.

UISG passes groups' funding, with little discord

■ Most of the allocations cause little fuss, though some groups did not receive the funding they requested.

By Pam Dewey
The Daily Iowan

The UI Student Government gave its final approval for the funding of priority-one student groups and supplemental funding for all other groups in fiscal year 2002 Monday.

Only the general manager for Student Video Productions, Dave Underhill, said he had been displeased with next year's proposed allocations. Underhill said none of his employees' salaries had been funded.

After he told the UISG why he thought those salaries deserved to be funded, UISG added $5,040 in funds for the group.

The preliminary budget recommendations for priority-one groups were released on Feb. 1. After all but one of the groups appealed the preliminary budget to the Student Assembly Budgeting and Auditing Committee, it made final recommendations that it presented to the UISG Monday.

Priority-one group representatives from the Rape Victim Advocacy Program and the Tenant-Landlord Association attended the meeting to thank the student government for its allocations.

Keri Althoff, the coordinator of the Tenant-Landlord Association, said her group appreciates the amount of funding it received. The money would be used to make another booklet that lists apartments for students, she said.

"The money is being put to good use, I assure you," Althoff said.

"I think the (budget committee) has done an incredible job allocating," said Sean Robbins, the UISG financial officer.

UISG also approved supplemental money for all UISG-funded groups with only minor changes from the budget committee's recommendations.

Supplemental funding is given out periodically during the year to student groups that need additional funds.

Andy Budish, the executive director of RiverFest, requested an additional $8,000 be added to his supplemental funding for a concert the group plans to host in conjunction with SCOPE. RiverFest's request was denied.

The only change in supplemental funding went to the American Society of Dentistry for Children, which was allocated $823 in supplemental funds.

U.S. at fault in recent intifada

■ The editor of a socialist periodical says the United States focuses on oil, not the Palestinians.

By Kathryn Anderson
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa International Socialist Organization sponsored a talk and open discussion about the new Palestinian intifada at the IMU Tuesday night.

Featured speaker Ahmed Shawki, the editor of the International Socialist Review, focused his speech on U.S. involvement in the Palestinian conflict and on the implications of the recent election of Israeli Prime Minister-elect Ariel Sharon.

He also spoke about the new intifada — the struggle between Palestinians and Israelis. The organizer of the discussion, Michael Rack, said the main purpose was to "raise awareness about the issue and get activists together to discuss and organize around the issue."

Without the United States, there would be no Arab/Israeli conflict, Shawki told the crowd of UI students and area residents. He said that it is often forgotten that the United States has a dominant role in the conflict. "What's mainly wrong with the picture is the idea that there are embattled minorities in the Middle East in which the U.S. is an observer attempting to solve problems with conflicting groups," Shawki said.

Shawki said he believes that despite its major role in the Palestinian intifada, the U.S. is still not concerned about the people of the Middle East but rather with the region's money and oil.

UI junior Mitch Day, a member of the International Socialist Organization, said the most important knowledge he gained from the meeting was the effect of U.S. involvement. He said he has always perceived that the U.S. is waiting for the peace process to begin between Israel and Palestine, but in fact it is the United States that is stopping peace from happening.

"I'd like to see more meetings like this where people are actually discussing the conflict," he said. "People have a slanted view of what Palestinians are like, but if they would come to meetings like this, they would understand the real meaning of the struggle."

While some may feel removed from the conflict, or feel that there is nothing that they can do, Rack stressed the importance of organizing within the United States.

"We can do a lot," he said. "By organizing here, we can have an impact. I've seen exciting things happening lately. There is a lot we can do to build solidarity with the Palestinians."

Overcrowding focus of meeting

■ The School Board may consider changing its registration policy to keep student numbers down.

By Peter Rugg
The Daily Iowan

Several parents of children attending Lucas Elementary School addressed the Iowa City School Board Tuesday about their concerns that second- and fourth-grade classrooms face severe overcrowding.

Board member Peter Wallace said overcrowded classrooms have become a district-wide problem, and the board plans to examine the issue of class size and do its best to find a solution.

But Iowa City resident Laurie Klumie said she felt the board was moving too slowly to effectively solve the problem.

"It seems that everyone keeps saying that her or his hands are tied because of policy," she said. "I don't want my children's education to be a casualty of this process."

Iowa City's school registration policy is based on a family's proximity to the school. Board members and parents both speculate that the increase in enrollment at Lucas is because new families are moving into the area.

Board member Nicholas Johnson suggested that the policy be changed so that parents would register with the School District, which would then assign the children to a school. Each school would then have an arbitrary cap on its enrollment limit to avoid overcrowding.

"A good deal of school districts, such as Davenport, have tried this method before, and it seems to be working very well for them," he said.

The board also reviewed a proposal to change the boundaries between Grant Wood Elementary School, 1930

Lakeside Drive, and Twain Elementary School, 1355 DeForest Ave. The change would move a number of children from Grant Wood to Twain to avoid overcrowding.

According to the proposal, current Grant Wood students would continue to attend the school, while children in the newly designated area not attending Grant Wood would be assigned to Twain.

Grant Wood's enrollment is 10 students away from its capacity of 506 students. Two proposed housing sites in Grant Wood's attendance area have worried school officials that enrollment would rise above capacity.

Twain's enrollment is 65 students under capacity, and its enrollment area borders Grant Wood's on three sides.

Arafat holds key to peace, Israeli official says

■ A Jerusalem native says the Palestinian leader will have to lead, not be led by, his people.

By Kellie Doyle
The Daily Iowan

The keys to resolving the 120-year dispute between the Israelis and Palestinians are the people and more leadership on the part of Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat, said David Roet, the deputy consul general of the Israeli Midwest Consulate General.

Roet spoke Tuesday night at the Aliber/Hillel Jewish Student Center, 122 E. Market St., about the Middle East peace process.

"It's not up to the Israeli spokesperson or Israelis, it's up to you, too," he told local students and residents. "I urge you all to be ambassadors of your conscience."

Born in Jerusalem, Roet played a significant role in the re-establishment of the Israeli Embassy in Seoul, South Korea, where he served as deputy chief of the mission prior to assuming his current position. He also completed three years as a counselor in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs' South East Asia Division, when he worked to strengthen relations between Israel and Southeast Asia's Moslem countries.

The Palestinians alleged lack of leadership was one issue Roet addressed, questioning whether Arafat would ever step up and guide his people to peace. He said Arafat is afraid to compromise, in fear that he will be assassinated.

"That is an example of a leader being led, not a leader leading," Roet said.

He also discussed Ariel Sharon's recent election victory over Ehud Barak.

"What is important is not who, but will they lead Israel to peace," he said. "Sharon will bring peace — that was his platform."

"I'm trying to be optimistic, although we've seen an escalation in violence in the last week. It's not a good sign," Roet said. "The first thing we need to do is end violence."

UI graduate student Jon Rose attended the lecture and said he is uncertain whether the conflict will conclude any time soon. "You never know what will happen," he said. "But I don't see any government in the future offering as much as Barak did."

CITY BRIEF

Extension cords, hair dryer cause of blaze

The Iowa City Fire Department has determined the cause of a Feb. 10 fire at 1023 Highland Ave. Two hair dryers plugged into two extension cords were responsible for the blaze, according to Iowa City Fire Marshal Roger Jensen. The hair dryers had been left on to defrost the windows of a car parked on the street in front of the home, Battalion Chief Elmer Brenneman said. The fire began in the front living room, where the combination of hair dryers and extension cords overloaded an electrical outlet, Jensen said. The estimated damage to the home is $50,000.

The renter of the home, Robert Rogers, used the hair dryers to warm up his car and defrost the windows before work, Brenneman said. He would usually plug it in one to two hours before he used his car. In this instance, however, the extension cord was plugged in at the wrong time and left to run for an extended period of time, Brenneman said. The circuit didn't break as it was supposed to, and the outlet became overloaded.

Passers-by Marty and Leanne Jacobs saw flames shooting from the front windows of the house. They called 911 just after 8 p.m. and alerted the house's occupants. Rogers and his six children escaped before rescue teams arrived. Two children were treated for injuries.

Extension cords are intended for portable, temporary use, Jensen said. Hair dryers are also meant for a specific use. The misuse of such items can be very dangerous, he said.

2 civilians at controls in sub-boat accident

CIVILIANS

"The guy's right over their shoulder," he said. "The guy's right there."

He would not say whether such situations are normal when a submarine is conducting an emergency drill. Another Navy spokesman, Cmdr. Greg Smith, said any civilian at a control position would have a qualified helmsman beside her or him in case something went wrong.

The National Transportation Safety Board also is investigating.

Safety board member John Hammerschmidt, who is leading the investigation here, said he only learned civilians were involved from news reports after investigators toured the sub Tuesday.

The news angered one of the crewmen of the sunken vessel.

"A civilian wouldn't know what to do (at the controls)," said Ryoichi Miya, the first mate of the Ehime Maru.

service store," said Coralville Co-op store manager Ben Nauman. A movie theater previously occupied the new store's space.

Nauman said the new store will have a larger emphasis on fresh foods and other perishable items, as well as an all-organic salad bar and a juice bar, which the Iowa City store does not offer.

The new store was built in the Coralville City Center Square to serve the Co-op's growing demand from customers in Coralville, he said.

"We expanded into the Coralville area at the heart of City Center Square because of the great neighbors," Nauman said. "Our customers find the other businesses appealing."

The demand in the Iowa City area for organically grown food has increased enough to warrant a second Co-op, said UI sophomore Alex Kimble.

"The whole thing with genetically engineered food has lots of people worried, and (demand for) organic food is growing," he said.

UI sophomore Grant Jackson, a vegetarian, said he has shopped at the Iowa City Co-op before and he agrees that there was reason to build a second store.

"We've got more than two Hy-Vees, so I think there's room for another organic store," he said.

The Hy-Vee stores in the Iowa City/Coralville area have also responded to the increase in demand for organically grown food, said Coralville Hy-Vee store manager Jared Pelle.

"We are increasing our supply of organic food because there are quite a few customers requesting it," he said.

Tenure process unfair to minorities, some say

UI fully disclose the tenure process to ensure that it is fair, impartial and equitable.

Three of Crichlow's students spoke on her behalf Tuesday night, championing her as an asset for the UI.

"As I stand here and shiver in the white environment, Dr. Crichlow provides a soothing environment," said UI graduate student India Dennis-Mahmood. "We're just trying to understand ... based on her merits ... why this university wants to make her position contingent. It's almost appalling."

Crichlow has worked on two publications each year since her arrival at the UI in 1995 and is an "exemplary" instructor, said UI graduate student Maria Beatriz Rodriguez-Feo.

Crichlow has 15 publications to her name — more than the requirement for tenure status — and is the only full-time professor in the African-American World Studies Program aside from the program's chairman, Wolseth said.

According to statistics Wolseth, Comito and UI Graduate Student Senator

Larissa Faulkner presented to the UISG Tuesday, the number of black tenure-track faculty dropped from 34 in 1995 to 31 in 2000. Minorities currently make up 13 percent of all tenure-track faculty. Women make up 26 percent.

The numbers are taken straight from the UI, Comito said.

"(The process) deserves observation and explanation," she said.

A separate resolution critical of the statistics was passed, stating that the UI "is questionably committed to mentoring, nurturing and supporting the minority and female faculty in general and African-American faculty specifically ..."

In other UISG action, the group passed resolutions to support the creation of an advisory committee for recycling and to promote diversity at the UI.

The UISG postponed action on a proposal that urged the Iowa City City Council to continue operating the Downtown Free Shuttle free of charge. The city has recommended charging 25 cents for the service.

only got a few reservations left."

Linn Street Cafe, 121 N. Linn St., is having a five-course "chef's secret" dinner for two. The meal, which does not include drinks, will be priced at $90 per couple.

"The chef's not telling anyone about the menu," said Niki Smith, a Linn Street Cafe bartender. "We'll have a lot of Iowa City couples in here; it's less of a college crowd."

For jazz fans and cash-strapped students, the IMU Main Ballroom will hold the "Got Love? Valentine's Day Dance" today at 8 p.m. The event will feature Chicago Jazz vocalist Jackie Allen and bassist Hans Sturm. They will be accompanied by the UI Johnson County Landmark Band as well as the UI Jazz Lab Band. Tickets are $3 for students and $5 for the general public.

While some may get carried away with the Valentine's holiday, Jennifer Zeman, a 25-year-old Coralville resident who has been married for a year, said she would rather not get flowers today. She said a romantic dinner at home and a movie will suffice for her, adding that she would rather receive flowers when she's not expecting them.

"Everyday should be Valentine's Day," Zeman said. "You should show your spouse or significant other that her or his love means something everyday, rather than just on a national holiday."

UI graduate student Sonia Rey-Montejo, a native of Spain, said she will most likely be studying this Valentine's Day. "Valentine's Day here is so commercialized," she said. "In España, the day is celebrated, but in a different way. It's much more personal."

For those in search of the creative Valentine's Day alternative, or for those simply seeking companionship on the loneliest day of the year, the ladies of Dolls Inc., 1008 E. Second Ave., Coralville, will begin performing at 4 p.m. today.

"This is the place to be," said bartender Dean Dirksen. "I recommend bringing your date here on Valentine's Day."

Grads displeased about increased doctoral fees

FEES

Regents.

"I apologize for this coming up at a time when you didn't have a chance to air it," said Sandra Barkan, an assistant dean of the Graduate College. "There was never an attempt to hide this from students."

Although students do not have any means of reversing the decision to add the new fee, the senators are considering a number of proposals to soften the blow.

"It is important that we take a stand on what we feel the Graduate College should do about the fees because we act as advocates for the students," said Kyle Gassiot, the president of the Graduate Student Senate.

The reason for the change is to correct an oversight, Barkan said. She said that a few years ago, the regents implemented the $70 fee for students off-campus, while on-campus post-comp students were to pay for 0-2 hours of tuition. However, auditors for the regents discovered that the UI was charging all post-comp students only $70, she said. "This created some problems, and we were told to bring ourselves into line," she said.

Coinciding with the implementation of the fee hike this fall, on-campus post-comp students will be able to register for one class without any additional fee. The continual registration fee will go back to graduate students in the form of professional development, fellowships and travel funds. Those students who pass their exams by July 1 will have one year without the new fee.

"We are giving you guys a bargain," Barkan said. "I know it doesn't seem that way, but it does continue to be an inexpensive education."

Graduate Student Senator Laura Frey Law said that while she in no way wants the increase, she is able to see some benefits.

"We've been given a gift for years, and now the gift is being taken away," she said. "Yes, it is frustrating, but I have been at other universities, and we are lucky."

Prof talks about World Bank

■ The World Bank functions just as any other bank does, a political science professor says.

Joel Barkan, a UI political science professor and resident consultant at the Governance Division of the Africa Bureau at the World Bank, speaks Tuesday afternoon in Iowa City at the Congregational Church.

emphasis from developing infrastructure in poor countries to imposing guidelines — structural adjustment programs — for those countries to follow. For instance, the countries are often required to develop economic policies of market capitalism, which has drawn criticism from some political groups.

"The World Bank found out over time that (the infrastructure) programs instituted were poor," Barkan said. "There need to be conditions placed on them that fit the globalization process."

Third World countries are perfect examples of ones that should increase their global trade in order for their economies to prosper, he said.

"It's not globalization that's the problem; it's not enough globalization," Barkan said.

UI sophomore Holly Heusinkveld said she learned about how the World Bank operates from his speech.

"By going through the history of the World Bank, he set up how the system works well," she said.

"I'm not sure if the conditions the World Bank is imposing on countries is right, but it's a problem that the social-welfare programs are still incurring debt," Heusinkveld said.

The speech was sponsored by the Iowa City Foreign Relations Council.

Health-care union workers rally

■ UIHC workers address retention and overtime concerns.

By Tony Robinson
The Daily Iowan

Local union members called for a contract from the UIHC that addresses retention and overtime at a protest held on the steps of the IMU late Tuesday.

The rally, organized by the Service Employees International Union, Local 199, coincided with a meeting that took place between union negotiators and UIHC officials in the Pappajohn Business Building.

Despite the light rain, approximately 50 representatives of local community, religious, labor and campus organizations gathered with banners, signs and noise-makers. Six speakers addressed the crowd about problems with the administration's current proposal.

"Providing quality health care is impossible without providing a quality working environment," COGS member Robert Russell told the crowd.

Russell said he supports the UIHC union because his group is fighting for similar interests. Other organizations represented at the rally were the American Federation of State, County, and Municipal Employees, American Federation of Teachers and Iowa Federation of Labor.

Local 199 President Cathy Singer said 440 registered nurses and health-care professionals left their positions at the UIHC last year. This 24 percent turnover, she said, is the result of two important factors: excessive overtime demands and a stagnating pay scale.

"We want the university hospital to be a nice place to receive health care and also a nice place to work," Singer said. "It's been that way for a long time, but recently, we have seen that change."

After speakers energized the supporters with speeches, the group marched to the Pappajohn Business Building, where they were joined by the nine negotiators representing Local 199.

Led by Singer, the crowd began chanting several phrases including "UIHC, we demand dignity" and "16 hours way too long, forcing overtime is wrong."

Local 199 member and negotiator Pauline Taylor said she was pleased that the rally produced such a large crowd. The 26-year UIHC veteran said the occasion showed solidarity among members, but there are still many issues to be dealt with.

"We are very frustrated, but throughout the entire bargaining process we have no choice but to remain optimistic that an agreement will be met," Taylor said.

Formal collective bargaining between the two parties has taken place for more than three months. The deadline for an agreement is Feb. 23. If no agreement can be reached by that date, the contract will go to an arbitrator, who will write the final draft. The contract must be presented to the state by March 15.

"We are not business people just looking to make an extra buck. All we want is to provide our patients with the best health care possible," Singer said.

UIHC officials were unavailable for comment.

WELCOME TO THE VIEWPOINTS — NOT 'VIEWPOINT' — SECTION

In defense of the Marketplace of Ideas

Entrenched officers have been quick to crash their powers down upon unfriendly commentators. (Justice William O. Douglas, Branzburg v. Hayes, 1972)

Last week, I ran a guest opinion penned by Vada Manager, director of Global Issues for Nike. (Guest Opinion, Feb. 7). It came days after a Metro piece on Nike and the UI. It was the latest installment of coverage of SAS, the FLA, the WRC and the rest of the labor-rights debate that has carried forth at the UI for the past year.

But the publication of that single opinion has unleashed a remarkable stream of objections — the vast majority questioning my decision to publish on the grounds of the speaker's affiliation, not the speaker's veracity.

"You've been duped," I was told, "into running some cleverly constructed PR."

Silly me. I thought I was just promoting the discussion of an important issue.

Since I started editing the Viewpoints section in June, I have printed opinions that have supported a woman's legal right to abort a pregnancy, increased regulation of industry and a wide array of other ideas with which I vigorously disagree.

I proudly assist in the publication of propaganda promoting agendas I oppose because I hold one value above all others: The most invaluable character of our republic is that the search for Truth, in the public forum, is subservient to neither establishments nor dogma.

I am not afraid to see intellectual opponents voice their opinions, because I have arrived at my conclusions after considerable examination, and so have many of those with whom I disagree. Rather than shying away from the debate, we freely embrace it. Let the best mind win.

But some would prefer that I take my marching orders and keep my mouth shut. They would prefer that I restrict the debate along artificial boundaries suitable to their causes.

They will be sorely disappointed.

One writer critical of the placement of the opinion classified the Nike piece as profit-oriented and cited that as a reason to refuse the opinion.

That's rather convenient philosophy: We oppose a corporation. Our words are "advocacy." Their words are "advertisements." Let us speak. Shut them up.

And War is Peace, Freedom is Slavery, Ignorance is Strength. At least Orwell crafted entertaining characters.

This is not a matter of whether employees of corporations have a legal right to speak under the First Amendment — Viewpoints is not a government actor. We don't have a legal obligation to print or to reject material. We continue to accept material of all persuasions because the ongoing exchange of ideas is, in this writer's opinion, magnificent in and of itself.

We run as much as we can, given spatial constraints.

Should we disregard a speaker because of profit motives? No. He is simply furthering his own interest. All published opinions are, by nature, biased — owing to profit motives, personal preferences, or otherwise. I trust you, the DI's readers, to be capable of discerning the truth. You are not intellectual slaves to Nike. You do not need me to spoon-feed you the opinions that I find most appealing. You are not morons.

I wholeheartedly welcome any effort to prove Manager wrong. I'll paste the rebuttal to the page myself, as I did with the excellent letter Sherene Judeh wrote in response to him ("Examine Nike's record," Feb. 12). But to decline to pursue that action, to only attack Manager's affiliation, is a public disservice.

If, for the sake of argument, Manager was completely accurate in what he said, does his affiliation with Nike, in and of itself, make him any less correct? Only in the eyes of those who refuse to think critically about the piece, those who refuse to allow the public to hear the argument.

I don't call Viewpoints "Fair and Balanced," only to push a right-wing agenda. I don't "Rock the Vote" under nonpartisan pretenses, yet refuse to give the same coverage to a GOP president as that which was given to a Democrat media darling last time around. I welcome writers of all viewpoints to have their turn, because I respect the intellectual capabilities of you, the readers, to critically examine their opinions.

Those opposed to Nike would do well to prove it wrong. Criticize Manager's facts and logic. I will gladly consider such submissions for publication. But complaints as to my decision to promote a free and open debate are a lackluster alternative.

To those who rely on power structures to silence their opposition, I declare this: May the Marketplace of Ideas survive and thrive! Go peddle private censorship to someone more adept at kowtowing to particular agendas. It's just not in my repertoire, and it won't be in Viewpoints' repertoire as long as I paste the page together.

Let speed yield to safety

Users of Iowa's highways who like to drive fast will be disappointed by the Iowa Department of Transportation's opposition to any increase in the speed limit on Iowa's interstates and four-lane divided highways.

A new report issued by the Iowa Safety Management System's Task Force on speed limits provided further evidence that an increase would be detrimental to the safety of Iowa motorists.

The release of this report and its findings prove that raising the speed limit in Iowa above 65 mph is not a smart decision, for both safety and other reasons. The report is a compilation of data gathered in Iowa and other neighboring states regarding the effects of changing speed limits on travel

The report is proof that higher speed limits in Iowa would threaten the safety of Iowa's citizens.

First, the study found that Iowa's increase from 55 mph to 65 mph has produced a higher frequency of fatal crashes, and more severe injuries were reported in those accidents. Also, neighboring states that increased the speed limit above 65 mph recently have seen an increase from 3.3 percent to 18.2 percent in traffic fatalities. Those states that haven't increased speed have seen a decrease in fatalities.

Besides a safety concern, keeping the speed limit at 65 mph also increases the life of a car. Driving at higher speeds reduces the life of the tires, engine and body of a car. Fuel economy goes down as speed increases. For every 1 mph the speed increases, there will be a 2.2 percent increase in fuel consumption. With concern over high gas prices in the state of Iowa, this factor alone should be a disadvantage in considering raising the speed limit.

The report is proof that higher speed limits in Iowa would threaten the safety of Iowa's citizens. While some may want the convenience of driving a few miles per hour faster on the highway, in reality, they will only get to their destination a few minutes earlier than if they were driving slower, and may save their life by driving slower.

Don't stifle kids' creativity

A life without Legos? Unimaginable.

Perhaps, but this doesn't mean that Legos will be around forever. It simply means that once the simple toys of yesterday are gone, so, too, may be our ability to imagine. If parents aren't careful when choosing their children's toys, such a reality may come sooner than we think.

Experts in childhood education say that new electronic and interactive toys — those annoying dolls and action figures that flash their lights and berate passers-by with quickly outdated catch phrases — generally foster less creativity and imagination in our children than do more traditional ones. Despite marketers' claims, the new generation of play-things don't so much make learning fun as they do instill a tendency toward passivity.

Toy-makers have stampeded toward more electronic and interactive toys in the last few years. This race has occurred in response to a phenomenon toy industry insiders have dubbed "age compression" — the tendency for children with ever-increasing technological prowess to discard traditional toys at ever-younger ages.

Evidence of this phenomenon can be seen in the movement of "target ages" for numerous toys. Fisher-Price's Little People are now aimed at 1-year-olds, rather than 2-year-olds, and the company's Rescue Heroes action figures, originally targeted at elementary students, are now directed toward 3-year-olds. As Neil Friedman, the company's president, says, "Kids are being educated faster, and therefore they move to more adult things at young ages. You have kids who would have been playing with toys at age 8 in the past, now playing with that toy at age 5."

There are numerous problems with this trend. First, electronic toys are much more expensive than their plain counterparts. As they increase in numbers, these toys place a greater financial demand on parents. In 1998, Fisher-Price had electronic components in 20 percent of its offerings; this year's line of toys is 80 percent electronic.

More importantly, learning experts maintain that when children forsake simple toys — such as building blocks and modeling clay — for more advanced toys meant for older children, they miss out on opportunities to foster creativity and imagination. Sherry Turkle, a professor of the sociology of science at M.I.T., says that by simply pushing a button and waiting for a response, children are prevented from producing their own worlds — from using their imaginations.

Buzz Lightyear to the rescue? It's hard to imagine, and getting harder every day.

Abandon destructive "War on Drugs"

Taxpayers must cry out against the "War on Drugs." We are all paying too high a price to build expensive prisons being filled by mostly non-violent drug offenders. Our money is not being used wisely. These unfortunate souls are not being rehabilitated; they are being given up on. Our faith in the possibilities of humanity is fading.

Everyone on this planet Earth must know that this "War on Drugs" will NEVER be won. Today's prohibition is only providing us with casualties and prisoners of war ... at taxpayers' expense!

Hawkeye basketball cartoon was tasteless

I was appalled by Bill Penisten's "Get Real" editorial cartoon of Feb. 8, which depicted Iowa's "Big 10 Champion Hopes" slipping out of the grasp of Ryan Hogan. Not only does your artwork leave a lot to be desired, but so does your tact. Apparently, you're inferring that a 22-year old who was put into a situation that he has never been in before is solely responsible for ending our chances at a title. If I recall correctly, basketball is a team sport and the OSU loss was no exception. GET REAL — the Big Ten season is far from over and the title hopes are still clearly within our grasp!

Local residents to testify in D.C.

■ A proposal in the Senate would make student-loan payments tax deductible.

By Danielle Plogmann
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa teacher and a UI student are scheduled to testify before the Senate Finance Committee in Washington, D.C., today in an attempt to make education more affordable.

Tom Carter, a West Liberty high-school teacher, and Kimberly Sheppard, a UI dental student, will each go before the committee during a hearing organized by Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa. The hearing is designed to give senators an opportunity to explore a bill that aims to change the tax code so that education is more affordable. Highlights of the bill include proposals to make interest on student-loan payments tax deductible and to provide a tax reduction for teachers who incur out-of-pocket expenses.

Carter will be part of a five-person panel expected to testify about those expenses. States are already facing a shortage of teachers because of low pay, and out-of-pocket expenses only add to that shortage, Carter said from Washington Tuesday.

Sheppard's testimony is expected to focus on the need to make the interest on student-loan payments tax deductible.

After learning on Feb. 10 that he would take part in the hearing, Carter polled his fellow faculty. He asked them about the greatest single out-of-pocket purchase they had made, and how much of their yearly salary was spent on school expenses. He said that of the 30 respondents, the expenditures ranged from $100 to $1,500. Each faculty member spent an average of $400 annually.

Greg Guinn, West Liberty High School's athletics director, spent more than $500 of his own money on a new air conditioner, Carter said. Guinn had requested that the school buy the new unit to protect newly installed computers from overheating and to benefit the students. Carter said Guinn purchased the unit himself after the administration denied his request but that Guinn had not complained about having to do so.

"Teachers don't complain. They just do it because they love the kids," Carter said.

The proposed education tax incentives are a way for the federal government to recognize and reward the work that teachers do, Carter said, adding that he hopes such incentives will encourage more people to enter the profession.

"I really think Congress needs to address the issue that one-third of Iowa's teachers will retire in the next 10 years," Carter said. "Seventeen percent of new teachers quit in the first year because of low pay as well as (out-of-pocket expenses)."

A lack of incoming teachers is only complicating the situation, Carter said.

Carter was selected for the program through an acquaintance of his student teacher. He said he will give a five-minute speech to 10 senators, who will review the bill during this initial phase. The bill also includes a proposal to secure the tax-free status of employer-provided educational assistance. If the bill passes, the tax-free status would also be applied to graduate education.

2nd earthquake stuns El Salvador

■ A temblor kills at least 127 a month after 844 died in a massive quake.

By Luis Romero
Associated Press

SAN VICENTE, El Salvador — A powerful earthquake shook El Salvador Tuesday, toppling hundreds of buildings and killing at least 127 people in a country still mourning more than 800 who died in an even stronger quake exactly one month ago.

The quake flattened much of the heart of San Vicente, 35 miles east of San Salvador, and damaged most of the homes and buildings in four surrounding towns.

At least 127 people were killed and more than 1,200 were injured, said Salvadoran Red Cross spokesman Carlos Lopez. He said there were numerous reports of landslides that could add to the death toll.

The earthquake, which struck at 8:25 a.m., was centered halfway between San Vicente and San Salvador. The U.S. Geological Survey measured its magnitude at 6.6, a strong quake but not as devastating as the 7.6 magnitude temblor that killed at least 844 people last month.

"It is true that this is another blow for El Salvador, but I call for tranquility. We have to be calm," President Francisco Flores told the Associated Press during a helicopter tour to assess the damage.

"There are dead here, and very many people have lost their houses," the president said during a stop in San Vicente. He said the brunt of the damage was in a corridor between Ilopango, just east of San Salvador, and San Vicente.

Flores said he was told the quake damaged or destroyed hundreds of houses in the provinces of San Vicente, La Paz and Cuscatlan. Lopez said at least 71 people were killed in Cuscatlan alone.

At least 12 adults and three children were killed in San Vicente, the regional army commander Col. Juan Armando Reyes, told Flores. He said half its houses were damaged, along with 90 percent of the houses in the nearby towns of San Cayetano, Guadalupe, Verapaz and Textistepeque.

Man accused in alleged sexual-abuse case

An unidentified 41-year-old Iowa City man is under investigation by the Iowa City police and Johnson County Department of Human Services for allegations of sexual abuse involving his 16-year-old daughter.

According to police records, the girl told her probation officer her father had been sexually abusing her for the past three years. The probation officer then notified the Department of Human Services and a complaint was filed with police Monday, said Iowa City police Sgt. Mike Brotherton.

The complaint alleges that the girl's father put his hands down her pants, Brotherton said.

The girl and her father have since been separated, Brotherton said.

"Safety's not an issue at this point," he said. "Everyone's taken care of."

Brotherton could not confirm whether there were other children in the household.

Convictions of sexual assault against a child generally carry prison terms of 10-25 years, he said. Convictions of lascivious acts — sexual touching above the clothing — is a class D felony with prison terms of five years, he said.

The case is under investigation by the Iowa City police and Johnson County Department of Human Services.

Evans trial pushed back

The trial date for a North Liberty man accused of heading an alleged $300,000 theft ring in November 1999 has been pushed back to May 21.

The original Feb. 19 date was delayed so the accused, Ronald Evans, 51, would have adequate time to receive a mental-health evaluation. The evaluation will determine if Evans was suffering from a mental illness at the time of his alleged crimes and whether he can use his psychological state as a defense.

According to court records: Evans is charged with robbing an elderly Coralville woman of her checks and credit card in October 1999 and using the money to purchase more than $300,000 in merchandise. He was allegedly aided by an Iowa City mother-daughter duo, who fled with him to Mexico following the alleged crimes.

Authorities found the three in Mexico in November 1999 while attempting to sell the merchandise.

Swinging into Valentine spirit

Several UI groups are teaming up to sponsor an alcohol-free Valentine's Day Dance at the IMU.

By Karen Schmiedeskamp
 The Daily Iowan

Tonight, those with a soft spot for romance, dancing and live music can prepare to swing into love at the second annual "Got Love? Valentine's Day Dance" in the IMU.

The dance will last from 8-11 p.m. in the Main Ballroom, and the Johnson County Landmark and UI Jazz Lab Band will provide the music. They will be joined by special guests from Chicago, bassist Hans Sturm and jazz-vocalist Jackie Allen. Free swing-dance lessons will be offered an hour before the dance begins.

"Swing and big-band music has recently had a resurgence in popularity," said Dianne Handler, the director of Arts Share, one of the sponsors of the dance. "It's a particularly appealing event for Valentine's Day, as the music evokes a bygone era of romance and sophistication."

The event started as a Valentine's activity for the residence halls several years ago, said Julie Phye, the event coordinator and director of the Stepping Up Program. It began as a small dance that took place during the Associated Residence Halls-sponsored "Romance and Responsibility" week.

Last year, the residence halls teamed up with the Stepping Up Program, Arts Share and the School of Music to increase the size of the dance and make it an activity that anyone could participate in, not just students in the residence halls, Phye said.

Sturm is a Chicago-based acoustic bass player. He has taught at Ball State University in Indiana for more than seven years and has a doctorate in music performance. He will be featured on several tunes with Johnson County Landmark and Jazz Lab Band, including "Angel Eyes" and "Subterranean."

Allen is a vocal jazz performer and educator also from Chicago. She has released four albums and has received glowing reviews from the Los Angeles Times as well as the Chicago Tribune for her unique style.

"It is exciting to have Jackie Allen sing with the band," Handler said. "This is a chance to see a nationally known and up-and-coming vocalist."

Allen said she chose the songs she will perform tonight with the audience in mind.

"It would be hard to get away without performing the Valentine's Day anthem, "My Funny Valentine," she said. She will also perform standards such as "They Very Thought of You" and "Teach Me a Song"

Beginning at 7 p.m., Kathy Burnett, a graduate student in the UI dance department, will teach basic swing steps, under-arm turns, partnering steps and other fairly simple moves.

"It's all real high-energy stuff, but even a beginner can do it," she said.

The dance is an all-ages community event, although the primary audience is college students. Tickets are $5 for the general public, $3 dollars for students with IDs, and are available at the University Box Office in the IMU. This event offers an alcohol-free alternative to students and the public. Free beverages and deserts will be provided, Handler said.

"It's definitely an opportunity for those who want to get dressed up, though," Phye said. "With the band and the glitz of it all, they'll feel right at home." There is no dress code, however. Comfortable clothes are recommended. Those who prefer not to dance are also encouraged to attend, Handler said.

Hawkeyes looking to contain UM's Blanchard

Expect to see several freshmen playing for the Hawkeyes against Michigan tonight.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

Cortney Scott warned his Iowa teammates that his cousin had the ability to light them up the last time the Hawkeyes met the Michigan Wolverines. Maybe this time they will heed his advice a little better.

Scott's cousin, LaVell Blanchard, torched Iowa's defense for 30 points en route to helping the Wolverines upset the Hawkeyes, 70-69, on Jan. 20 in Carver-Hawkeye Arena. Tonight, the two teams meet in Ann Arbor in what many are describing as a must-win game for Iowa.

"We've seen the tape (of the Jan. 20 game) several times, including twice after the game," Scott said. "We've got to contain him."

Keying the defense on Blanchard may help to quell some of Iowa's current problems. His 30 points in the last meeting were 12 more than his season average of 18. It's no question that Blanchard will get his share of points; it's just a matter of holding him to his average, Iowa coach Steve Alford said.

Slowing Blanchard and taming the rest of the Wolverines are just two of the many things on Iowa's "to do" list for this evening's game. First, however, the Hawkeyes must figure out their own internal problems.

Alford has hinted throughout the week that there may be major lineup changes coming for tonight's game. Iowa's starting five may have as many as three new faces when the two teams tip off. Glen Worley is said to have an upper hand on veteran Duez Henderson at the starting forward position, and Scott may replace the struggling Jared Reiner at center. Brody Boyd has also been rumored to be in the mix if Ryan Hogan does not step up his game.

"If we have to go real young, we'll go real young," Alford said.

Feelings among the team's veterans are pretty much the same, with Dean Oliver leading the charge. The senior would like for his last season in an Iowa uniform to be a memorable one, and the promise of a month ago seems to be slipping.

"The last two games, things haven't been working," Oliver said. "We have to win at Michigan."

Much has changed since the teams last met nearly a month ago. Michigan has started to right its ship with several wins, and Iowa has started to slide down the slippery slope of the Big Ten's second half. The Wolverines have improved to 9-13 and 3-8 in the Big Ten, while the Hawkeyes have fallen to 17-6 overall, with a conference record of 6-4.

"They (the Wolverines) continue to search and find themselves," Alford said. "They play better at home than on the road, and they beat us here."

Alford said he hopes a few lineup changes here and there will be able to get the Hawkeyes back on track, but he said an attitude adjustment may be what the doctor ordered.

"We've done some bellyaching and griping at each other in practice," he said. "It's time to tuck our shirt tails out a bit and let the game flow."

CORTNEY SCOTT

Brett Roseman/The Daily Iowan

Iowa freshman Cortney Scott goes for a steal against Iowa State's Tyrar Pearson on Dec. 9, in Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

With his monstrous dunks and genuine personality, Cortney Scott is a Hawkeye

Crowd pleaser

Cortney Scott returns to his home state for tonight's road game against Michigan.

By Megan Manfull
The Daily Iowan

When Cortney Scott is on the hardwood, he owns the crowd.

He played a mere 16 minutes against Minnesota at Carver-Hawkeye Arena on Jan. 13, but put the crowd on its feet twice. Once, he connected on an alley-oop, tightened his fists and pumped them at the floor. The Gophers called a time-out, and Iowa fans immediately jumped to their feet. They were cheering for Scott, and he knew he would never tire of that sound.

His 6-6, 245-pound frame and boundless energy has won over the Iowa fans. His work ethic has won over the coaches. Now Steve Alford is labeling the 18-year-old from Jackson, Mich., the "spark plug" of the Hawkeyes' highly touted freshman class.

"When I first saw him, he immediately reminded me of Charles Barkley," Iowa assistant coach Rich Walker said. "He is so light on his feet for a man that size. I was just mesmerized. He has great hands, and he was just agile. I was just like, 'Oh, my God.'"

That initial impression came in the summer of 1998. Walker's son, Joseph, was on Scott's Michigan AAU team. In the first three games of the tournament, Scott averaged about 48 points per game. Joseph Walker averaged around 12 assists simply by passing to him.

Joseph Walker called his father to tell him about Scott. Trusting his son's highly developed basketball instincts, coach Walker hopped on a plane to Las Vegas.

"I'll never forget when I met coach Walker — sophomore year, Vegas," Scott said. "I scored 50-some points, and after the game he came up to me and was like, 'Oh, man.' Then he turned and started getting on Joe Walker, his own son, about not passing me the ball more. I will never forget that."

Scott laughed as the Iowa

"The coolest thing I ever saw Cortney do was at the ABCD basketball camp last year. There was a 7-6 center, and Cortney dunked over him. That was pretty cool."

— Joseph Walker, Iowa freshman and friend of Scott's

"Cortney's an even better person than he is athlete. He's got a marvelous heart. I try to look into other peoples' hearts. And that's really hard. Some people can fool you. They have larceny in their hearts, instead of love. I always felt good about Cortney. He's a star."

— Rich Walker, Iowa assistant basketball coach

Maday is Iowa's She-Ra

The star freshman gymnast is turning heads as a Hawkeye.

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

When asked if she could switch places with anyone for a day, Alexis Maday, Iowa's freshman gymnast sensation, picked She-Ra.

Yes, She-Ra, the cartoon legend princess of power that came to fame in the early 1980s to battle evil.

"I want superhuman powers, but just for one day to experiment with," Maday said with a laugh. "Plus, you would get to hang out with He-Man."

It's hard to argue with that logic. Who wouldn't like to spend a day with the Master of the Universe? But, in a way, perhaps her answer is appropriate. You see, when Maday steps on the gymnastic mat, it's almost as if she has those superhuman powers already.

With a victory over U.S. Olympian Elise Ray, a slew of 9.9's to her credit, and an amazing repertoire of difficult moves, Maday has lead the resurgent GymHawks to a No. 19 ranking, an 8-3 record and perhaps a spot in the NCAA tournament.

While the freshman first started gymnastics at age 5, her first sports love was actually horseback riding. She did both growing up and dreamed she would some day appear in the Olympics in both events. However, there soon came a time when she had to choose which sport to concentrate on.

"It was a long, agonizing choice," she said. "I've always had a love for horses, but in the end I made gymnastics my ultimate goal."

Horses aren't the only animal the Frederick, Md., native loves.

"Cows are my absolute favorite animal. I would keep a cow in my dorm room if I could," she said.

While basketball players idolize Jordan, and young hockey players pretend to be Gretzky, Maday admired Kim Zmeskal growing up.

"I was sad she left after the 1992 Olympics," Maday said. "She was my idol. My gymnast friends and I didn't like Shannon Miller at all."

XFL game times have been X-tremely slow shows of the year with movie and singing star Jennifer Lopez as host. Instead, the ratings were deflated by the late start.

 The unpleasant irony for NBC, co-owner of the XFL with the World Wrestling Federation, is that NBC Sports President Dick Ebersol used to produce "Saturday Night Live."
 "Dick Ebersol totally understands and empathizes probably better than anybody with the importance of 'SNL' getting on at 11:30," NBC Entertainment President Jeff Zucker said. "To the degree that he can assure us and Lorne that he'll be off on time, he's done that."
 Ebersol wasn't talking Tuesday, but his spokeswoman, Cameron Blanchard, said the XFL will cut its pregame introductions by at least five minutes, shorten the halftime breaks and try to keep the clock moving.

 For example, the time clock will start when the ball is placed on the line of scrimmage following incomplete passes and changes of possession, instead of waiting until the ball is snapped.
 The first Saturday night XFL telecast ran 23 minutes long. Since there was a repeat "Saturday Night Live" on that week, nobody seemed to mind.
 But this past week's game between the Los Angeles Xtreme and Chicago Enforcers was delayed because of a power outage and a serious injury that caused a 14-minute stoppage of play. In addition, the game went into double overtime.
 Zucker stopped short of saying NBC will cut away from XFL games in the future if they run over their allotted time.

 "This was a string of unbelievable things that I don't think can be repeated ever again," he said. "We're not going to pull the plug on an overtime situation, but I don't think we'll be in that situation again."
 Michaels was not available for comment on Tuesday. There were reports he was so angry on Saturday he briefly considered ordering a repeat "SNL" episode aired. The actors actually began the show on time, and it was aired via tape delay across the country.
 The XFL audience dropped from 13.9 million its first week to 6.5 million last week, according to Nielsen Media Research.

Gretzky close to closing Phoenix deal
 PHOENIX (AP)—Wayne Gretzky is a day away from returning to the NHL, this time as an owner.
 Gretzky and partner Steve Eilman, a Phoenix developer, were expected to close on the purchase of the Phoenix Coyotes on today and finally take control of the team.
 The purchase has been in the works for 13 months, and the price could reach $91 million with adjustments after Gretzky's group originally agreed to buy the team from Richard Burke for $87 million. The closing would come a day before the third deadline arrives.
 The new owners will take over four weeks before the March 13 trading deadline, an important period when they must decide whether to trade either Keith Tkachuk or Jeremy Roenick, the scoring leaders whose combined salaries make up one-third of the team's $39 million payroll.

Snyder allows Gilbert to return to team
 COLUMBIA, Mo. — Missouri guard Clarence Gilbert was allowed to return to the team Tuesday after having been suspended indefinitely by coach Quin Snyder.
 Gilbert, the fourth-leading scorer in the Big 12 with a 17-point average, was reinstated after two days of meetings with Snyder. He missed just one game.

 "I'm very pleased with how Clarence handled himself during this period," Snyder said Tuesday night. "He's demonstrated to me that he's ready to be the player his team needs, and we certainly welcome him back. He was excited to rejoin his teammates, and I know they were eager to get him back."

Comedy Night
 Bryan Cork
 Brian entered the comedy scene in early 1994. Having been a professional actor for the last 12 years, he thought it might be a good idea to get into a more steady line of work. Sometimes Brian is an idiot. But let's face it, the life of Brian is well-suited for stand up comedy. He was, for instance, married to and divorced from a demon. He is only partially scared. Stranger yet, Brian wears Spandex for a living, doing appearances as the one and only Amazing Spider-Man. Bryan has been kicked, bitten and vomited on by children of all ages, and he's only set fire to a small handful. All of these experiences combined have just about prepared him for the comedy club scene.

Mike Dambra
 If you're a comedy fan, and you haven't seen Mike Dambra, you're in for a treat. Mike has been involved in the comedy scene for over 13 years now. In 1987 and 1997 he claimed the "Funniest Person in Rochester" title. That, in turn, earned him two television news stories in 1988, and more in 1989, 1995, & 1996. Next thing he knew, he was traveling all over the U.S. and Canada making people laugh. He has opened for the likes of Adam Sandler and Rosie O'Donnell, and earns rave reviews cross the continent.

SCOTT

assistant raved. He loved the attention, and he loved exciting the crowd much the same way Barkley did during his successful career.

On the court, Scott physically resembles the wide-bodied and hard-nosed Barkley. He is shooting 50 percent from the field, while averaging nine minutes per game. His minutes will most likely increase now that Luke Recker is out for the season. With time, so will his stat line of three points and 2.3 rebounds per game.

Off the court, Scott completely sheds the brash Barkley persona. When he talks, he's soft-spoken but direct. He'll take off his coat and put down his bag so there is nothing to weigh him down or distract him. When others interrupt, he apologizes for them.

Scott is more than honored to be compared with Barkley. A childish grin crosses his face at the thought.

His size is where the connection to Barkley ends, though. Scott's voice doesn't rise again until he talks about his "little brother." Unlike Barkley, Scott is not against being a role model. He has no biological brothers, but 15-year-old Danté Adams is as close as they come.

Scott talks about his plans to return to Lansing Waverly High School to see Adams attend his prom. He also brags about Adams' fall election to the Homecoming Court. When Scott was at Waverly, he used to wake Adams at 6 a.m. every day to workout before school.

"He came up to me once after a game with his mom and said he liked how I played," Scott said. "His father wasn't around too much, and so we started hanging out. I took on that kind of role for him."

Scott still doesn't understand why Adams put up with those early morning workouts. He said he would have slept in if their roles were reversed. But Scott, motivated by a looming Big Ten scholarship, hardly missed a morning workout.

"When Alford was here on his visit, he told Cortney that he could either walk around school bragging about getting a Big Ten scholarship or he could do something about it," said Phil Odum, Scott's coach at Waverly. "Coach Alford also said, 'You need to lose some weight because at Iowa you're going to be needing to guard quick forwards.'"

"I mentioned that I was an early riser, and Cortney asked me if I could be there at 6:30 a.m. tomorrow. I thought he'd be like a whole lot of kids and after three days or so the newness would wear off. But he came into my room every day after school and said, 'So you'll be there in the morning?'"

The weight problem worried everyone but Scott. Walker and Alford wanted to see him 30 pounds lighter. Scott's father pushed him away from the dinner table, bought him a gym membership, and made him attend every day.

Scott said he was too hard-headed to listen to anyone in Michigan. He moved to Iowa City in June, brought with him the weight and the burden that no one thought he could play at Iowa as a freshman. The media, along with his friends at Waverly, figured he'd redshirt. He shed those doubts quickly.

"I didn't know if he could play at that level right away," Odum said. "And I didn't know if he was the type of athlete that would be happy paying his dues. He used to play in the shadow of Marcus Taylor (who signed with Michigan State) in high school. That wasn't always easy on him. I'm one person that was trying to talk him into redshirting."

Odum's opinion quickly changed when he saw Scott shed all 30 pounds. Subsequently, he purchased a $1,300 satellite dish so he could catch all of Iowa's games.

Now, Scott is looking forward to tonight, when two buses will depart from his old high school and head to Ann Arbor to watch the Hawkeyes and Wolverines.

"I'm excited for that trip. Nobody thought that I could come in and play, nobody," Scott said. "The atmosphere back there was all about Marcus Taylor. I felt my job back then was to excite the crowd. That's kind of where this all started."

Freshman gymnast happy with decision to attend Iowa

Miller went on to Olympic glory, and Maday began racking up medal after medal of her own in club competitions. The awards are too numerous to mention, but perhaps the one that is most telling was her selection to 1997 U.S. national team at age 14. She traveled to Belgium, took second, and won $800 for the federation.

When it came time to pick a college, all the gymnastics heavyweights came calling. She visited Georgia, Penn State, West Virginia, Nebraska and Florida. But, after she had arthroscopic surgery on her ankle in high school, the colleges seemed less interested.

"I was always the next one on the list," she said. "If this girl didn't commit, the scholarship was mine."

It came down to Arizona vs. Iowa. The Wildcats and Hawkeyes both offered scholarships, and Iowa coach Mike Lorenzen desperately wanted Maday as the cornerstone of his rebuilding job. She chose to visit Iowa because of its higher attendance figures than Arizona. After one visit, she fell in love with the place, thinking the other gymnasts were nice and the coaches were awesome.

"I'm so happy with my decision," she said, almost beaming with joy. "I love it here."

Iowa is preparing for No. 14 Ohio State at Carver-Hawkeye Arena Saturday night. A program two years removed from a debacle that saw players suspended and their head coach resign has suddenly set every school record imaginable and has a chance at an NCAA bid. Maday, along with fellow freshmen Stephanie Gran and Brandy Killian, has been a major reason things have turned around so fast.

Maday will be nervous Saturday night. She still gets nervous right before every performance.

"I'm OK marching on and through the National Anthem and warm-up period, but right when it's time to start, I get nervous, quiet and withdrawn," she said. "My teammates will try to keep me laughing and smiling, but I get these butterflies in my stomach, and I can't sit still. The butterflies are the worst."

Much to the delight of her coaches and teammates, Maday is here at Iowa doing amazing things on the gymnastics mat instead of spending her days riding horses.

In fact, she might even be the GymHawks own princess of power.

Hawks to face rival Drake Bulldogs

■ Drake will be competing for the first time this year.

By Nick Firchau
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's tennis team will hit prime time for the first and only time this season tonight, as they square off with intrastate rival Drake at 6 p.m. in the UI Recreation Building.

The Hawkeyes (2-1) will be facing their third opponent in five days, following last weekend's road trip to Michigan and Indiana. The Hawkeyes split the two road meets by beating Western Michigan on Feb. 10, while falling to Notre Dame Feb. 11.

Coach Steve Houghton expects this year's matchup with the Bulldogs, who will be competing in their first meet of the season, to be like the majority of those he has seen in the last ten years — tough.

"It's always a hard fought meet with Drake," said Houghton. "It's been that way for the last eight to 10 years: Everytime we play, it's close and it comes out something like 4-3. We beat them at their place last year and they lost a few guys but have replaced them this season. They're a good, solid team."

Houghton compared the Bulldogs with a team better than Western Michigan but certainly not as good as No. 30 Notre Dame. The Hawkeyes outlasted WMU 5-2 and were shut out by the Fighting Irish, 7-0.

Because of the rapid fire of matches this week for the team, Houghton said, there wouldn't be any substantial changes in the lineup because there has only been one practice since the Notre Dame loss.

"It is a little more difficult to play a couple matches so close together during the week," said sophomore Pete Rose. "But we had a day off on Monday after we got back and we rested up. Hopefully that should help us."

"But we'll have to come out and play aggressively if we want to win." Houghton and the Hawkeyes are hoping that the lack of practice between matches won't affect the team's play as they face off with a Bulldog team that has been nationally ranked for the last two years, Houghton said.

"It will be high pitched, and it's one that the guys get up for," he said. "Iowa State used to be the in-state rival, but they recently dropped their tennis program. Now Drake has sort of taken their place."

horoscopes

Wednesday, February 14, 2001 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may feel limited due to your responsibilities. Don't spend more than you can afford on entertainment or luxury items. You must stick to your budget.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You need to spend time with your partner. Trips, social events or just an evening alone would be appropriate. Look into joining organizations that will bring you in contact with prestigious people.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You can accomplish a lot if you present your ideas to superiors. You need to feel confident about yourself and your work. Don't let anyone criticize you unwarrantably. Stick up for your beliefs and your ideals.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You will finally be able to get your hobbies off the ground. Get children involved if they show an interest. You need to do more together as a family. You can make favorable changes to your residence. Consider a games room.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You will have problems with the women in your household. Try to be patient and don't be insensitive to their moods. Avoid creating melodramas.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Relatives will give you some sound advice if you are willing to share your troubles with them. Things will not be as bad as you first thought.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You will be taken advantage of if you don't pay close attention to your investments. Don't let anyone talk you into lending money or your belongings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You will be emotional, which could lead to problems in dealing with your mate. Don't let jealousy come between you and the one you love.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You will have to stay out of other people's private affairs even if they do try to involve you. Don't reveal your secrets, and you won't have any reason to worry. You will have problems with authority figures if you bend the rules.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You need to get out and mingle. You must look to those you trust for sound advice about your personal situation. You will have trouble justifying spending money.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Don't let someone lead you down the garden path. You must dig deep if you want to find out the whole truth. You can accomplish the most if you concentrate on your career.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You need to find time to do some reading. The knowledge you pick up will be important in the future. Look into new philosophies that appear to be more suited to your needs.

SPORTS BRIEF

Yankees look to be No. 1 again

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — When the Yankees open spring training Wednesday, it could be the beginning of the end of an era. Paul O'Neill says this will be his last season. Tino Martinez and Scott Brosius are in the final years of their contracts, as is manager Joe Torre. Still, there is another championship to be won, always the focus on the Yankees. Last October, they became just the fourth team to win three straight World Series titles. "I want to look back when I'm all done and say I played at the beginning of this spurt and played all the way through it," O'Neill said. "With the core of people coming back, this is still the team that won the championships. A couple years down the road, it might not be the same team anymore." Only two teams put together longer streaks: the Yankees of 1936-39 and the Yankees of 1949-53. The run for No. 4 — and the fifth in six seasons — begins Wednesday when pitchers and catchers report. Many of the Yankees have been in Florida for weeks, working out at New York's minor league complex.

Happy Valentine's Day

From the SFU sauna to Sierra Trail,
From Kitsilano to Coralville we hail,
From Melissa to Drew, some Chicago time, too,
I'm glad you're my Valentine 'cause I love you!

Anthony -
The love we share
is magnificent and pure.
Kelly

To Linda,
Since February 14,
1969 I have been your valentine and you have been mine. As our adventure continues, so does our love grow. Now in Chapter 32, the adventure continues
that of me and you.
From Dennis

My dearest Nick,
I love you.
