Klenske/Rossi takes heated UISG vote

Despite, or because of, the slate's well-publicized problems, Klenske/Rossi comes out victorious.

By Mike McWilliams and Nick Narigon
The Daily Iowan

After a heated and controversial campaign, Nick Klenske won the UI Student Government presidential election Tuesday night, garnering more than 32 percent of the votes.

Melissa Lettiere, the chairwoman of the Student Elections Board, announced the results around 8:45 p.m. in the IMU Ohio State Room. She said the Klenske/Rossi gathered 1,363 of the 4,198 confirmed votes.

Like the campaign, the results did not come without controversy.

"I don't totally agree with how the election was run," Lettiere said. "I don't agree with how the Student Elections Board was undermined, and I can pretty much certify that no candidate will win out of sympathy for breaking all the rules next year."

The board had fined Klenske's ticket for not submitting campaign material for pre-approval. The Student Judicial Committee reversed one of the board's rulings Monday. Marquez Brown, the campaign manager for the Paulsen/Lyons ticket, said he saw Klenske/Rossi posters in ITCs Monday — a violation of campaign rules.

"I saw at least 10 to 15 posters in the ITCs," he said. "I hope the Elections Board listens to the complaints and disqualifies them."

Klenske said the controversy involving his ticket — especially his fight for freedom of speech — improved his chances for victory.

"We weren't just going to act like we didn't know the rules," he said. "We just came out and said 'We're right, they're

On Sunday, March 7, 1965, approximately 600 marchers tried to cross the Edmund Pettus Bridge that leads out of Selma, Ala. The group was headed to Montgomery, Ala., the early provisional capital of the Confederacy.

The day would become a defining moment in the civil-rights movement.

UI studies workplace violence

In a groundbreaking report, UI scientists say 2 million people a year are victims of workplace violence.

By Kathryn Anderson
The Daily Iowan

Some 2 million workers annually in the United States are victims of workplace violence, costing employers billions of dollars, according to a report UI researchers released Tuesday.

"Workplace Violence: A Report to the Nation," which was released at a congressional briefing in Washington, D.C., calls for major research funding to better understand what causes and how to prevent such violence. The university's Injury Prevention Research Center produced the report.

John Lundell, the deputy director of the injury center, said the report is important because it addresses a problem that is often overlooked.

"Workplace violence ... goes very much unrecognized other than the high-profile mass killings. Yet, it occurs at a frightening rate," he said.

An incident that took place at the university a decade ago makes the findings of the report even more relevant to UI students and staff. In 1991, Gang Lu, a doctoral student, killed four people in Van Allen Hall and one in Jessup Hall after another student received an academic award he was seeking. Another victim was wounded; she remains partially paralyzed.

"Nobody has taken the lead like the UI to put together strategies and recommendations on what needs to be done," Lundell said.

The report identifies four types of workplace violence: criminal intent, which usually involves a theft from a business; customer/client, in which a customer attacks an employee; worker-on-worker; and personal relationship, which often refers to domestic violence that carries over into the working environment.

The Bureau of Labor reported 645 homicides in the United States in 1999, the report says. Among all workers, homicide is the third-leading cause of fatal occupational injuries and the second-leading cause of fatal occupational injuries for

Teen-age shooter angry with everyone

Police say the teen-ager accused in the latest school shooting was firing randomly.

By Ben Fox
Associated Press

SANTEE, Calif. — The 15-year-old accused of killing two fellow high-school students was an "angry young man," but he apparently lashed out at no particular target, investigators said Tuesday.

Charles Andrew "Andy" Williams seemingly shot at random. He has expressed no remorse for Monday's shootings at Santana High School, Lt. Jerry Lewis said.

"We don't know if he was mad at the school, mad at students, mad at life, mad at home," Lewis said. "He was an angry young man."

Williams was a new kid in a large school, a child of divorced parents living with his father, a skinny freshman whose skateboard had been stolen — twice.

Over the weekend, friends say, Williams talked so much about taking a gun to school that they frisked him before class Monday. But he was known for pranks, and friends wrote off his comments as one of his frequent jokes.

The father of one friend even called Williams at home over the weekend to ask if there was anything to his talk of bringing a gun to school. He decided there wasn't.

No one seemed to believe the clean-cut kid, who was frequently teased, was capable of perpetrating the nation's latest high-school blood bath.

The disbelief remained a day after the shooting, which left 13 others injured.

One victim, Barry Gibson, 18, said he was more perplexed than angry.

"I have no hatred because I don't know him," said Gibson,

A prominent UI law professor and his wife, a UI administrator, officially announced Tuesday they will leave for Seattle and the University of Washington. W.H. "Joe" Knight Jr. and Susan Mask, an assistant to the UI president and the director of the Office of Affirmative Action, are leaving because Knight has accepted a position as the Knight has taught at the UI College of Law since 1983, and he served as a vice provost from 1997-00. Mask has held her current position since 1989.

Leaving Iowa City and the university is a bittersweet experience, Mask said.

Memories flood Cross Park during memorial

■ Tears and prayers fill a ceremony remembering Kurtus Miller's death one year ago Tuesday.

By Anne Huyck
The Daily Iowan

Matt Miller stood in front of 50 friends and family members and encouraged them to take candles home, to light them, and think about their loved ones as well as his loved one, Kurtus Miller, who died one year ago Tuesday.

Everyone from former co-workers to Iowa City police officers investigating Kurtus Miller's death attended the vigil, held across the street from 845 Cross Park Ave., the apartment in which Kurtus Miller was killed.

Kurtus Miller, who was 20 at the time of his death, died in an apartment fire that officials have declared to be arson. He died of smoke and soot inhalation and thermal injuries, a state medical examiner's report determined. Police are still investigating the arson-homicide, but they have declined to name any suspects and have not made any arrests.

As tears welled up in many of the eyes of the gatherers, they listened to the song "Entertaining Angels" by the Newsboys — a Christian rock group that Kurtus Miller and his family had seen in concert many times together — before sharing memories of their friend, family member, son, brother and husband.

Matt Miller ended the short ceremony by reading a prayer for his son and reminding everyone that Kurtus Miller was there with them and that they needed to "always keep him with us."

"We miss him a lot," said Kurtus Miller's sister Christena, 17, tears in her eyes as she left the ceremony. "And this would be a lot easier if they caught whoever did this, and we had the final piece."

Later, as family members gathered at the Hy-Vee deli where Kurtus Miller had worked at the time of his death, Matt Miller reflected on the words he had shared with family and friends earlier in the evening.

"We were concerned with the wind," he said of his family's decision to not hold a candlelight vigil but to encourage people to burn their candles and pray at home. "It was 'improv,' but I think people will do it."

The Millers plan to put their candle in a special place in their New London, Iowa, home.

"We will probably light it a few times on special days so Kurtus will be with us," Matt Miller said, adding that Kurtus Miller was looking over the family and was part of the inspiration behind telling people to take the candles home.

A minister at the New London Methodist Church, Matt Miller said his family would have been lost without faith in God.

"It was not time to lose our only son; he was only 20 years old," he said. "All of our hopes and dreams. He was the legal guardian of his sisters. The only way to process our agony, pain and grief is with help from God. He alone helped us get on."

Wearing his son's orange Tampa Bay Buccaneers hat, his black leather jacket and his favorite tennis shoes, Matt Miller said no one who knew him would ever forget Kurtus Miller and that his son was always with his loved ones.

Zach Boyden-Holmes/The Daily Iowan
Laura and Christena Miller, wife and sister of fire victim Kurtus Miller hold each other during a memorial service on the one-year anniversary of his death.

The family is healing but desires closure in the still-unsolved case, he said.

"It is our prayer that no other parent would experience this worst nightmare," he said, glancing at his son's watch that he now wears.

The time on his watch said 7:30 p.m. — in two hours it would be exactly a year from the time the fire that killed his son was intentionally set. In four hours, it would be one year from the moment the Millers received a call from the Johnson County medical examiner telling them about their son's death.

Matt Miller said he, his wife Carol, their three daughters and their "fourth daughter" — Kurtus Miller's widow, Laura Miller, 21 — would gather for a private ceremony later that night to coincide with the time when their beloved son, brother and husband was taken from them.

"All the family will remember him, shed a few tears, and thank God for Kurtus, then go on by God's grace," he said. "We need to thank God for the opportunity to be able to love because he who loved us first."

Filled with tears at the vigil remembering her husband, Laura Miller was able to sit and talk with friends at Hy-Vee. Barely touching the food on her plate, even the fried chicken that had been Kurtus Miller's favorite, she said the past year has been hard for her.

Since her husband's death, she has transferred to Iowa State University and begun studying business finance in hopes of becoming a stock broker someday.

"But I've learned not to plan too much," she said. "Because sometimes you have an idea of what you want and ... things you don't expect ..."

Like her father-in-law and the rest of her extended family, she said she wants Iowa City residents to remember her husband's death and come forward if they have any information.

"Do unto others as you would have them do unto you," she said. "Whoever did this wasn't thinking what would happen. If they had been aware how this would affect everyone ..."

CITY & NATION BRIEFS

I.C. woman allegedly assaults friend in fun center

An Iowa City woman allegedly attacked a teen-age friend twice Tuesday afternoon — once allegedly during a game of laser tag.

Malanda Lynn Netser, 19, 2401 Lakeside Drive No. 3006, faces a charge of assault causing injury.

A 15-year-old female reported to police Tuesday afternoon that Netser allegedly elbowed her in the ear and punched her in the face during a game of laser tag at Planet X Family Fun Center, 115 Highway 1 W.

According to police records, the teen-ager had spent the previous night at the Netser's residence. After the two returned to the house together from Planet X so that the teen-ager could obtain her belongings, Netser allegedly struck the teen's right cheek with her fist.

The teen suffered minor bruises, abrasions and lacerations to her face as a result of the alleged assault, according to police reports.

Former UI student allegedly assaults girlfriend

An Iowa City man faces several charges after allegedly assaulting his girlfriend and threatening to kill her with a knife.

Lewis Manning Wasson, 25, 423 Highway 1 W., has been charged with domestic abuse and assault while displaying a dangerous weapon, domestic abuse and assault causing injury and obstruction of emergency communications.

According to police reports, Iowa City police responded to a report of abuse at Wasson's residence on March 1 at 5:05 a.m. The police are not releasing the name of the alleged victim, who had lived with Wasson for more than two years, police reports show.

Following an oral dispute, Wasson went to the kitchen and allegedly returned with a knife, threatening to kill his girlfriend. Wasson then allegedly headbutted and punched the victim in her eye, leaving bruises and redness on her face.

Following the incident, the woman reportedly tried to contact the authorities, but Wasson allegedly took the batteries out of the cordless telephone and cut the wires with the knife.

By the time police officers arrived, Wasson had fled the scene. After issuing a warrant, officers returned and were granted entry by the woman. Police then apprehended Wasson, who was allegedly hiding in a closet, the police reports say.

Wasson left the UI on May 5, 2000.

I.C. man on sex offender list

Iowa City police are informing the public that a sex offender is living in the area. Kenneth C. Williams, 50, resides at 1029 1/2 S. Riverside Drive No. 1. He is a white male with brown eyes and blue hair. He is 6-foot-2 and weighs 165 pounds.

Williams has tattoos on both arms. He has scars on his abdomen and wears prescription glasses.

Williams' registration with the Iowa Sex Offender Registry is a result of a 1995 third-degree sexual abuse conviction that occurred in Johnson County. His victim was a 13-year-old male. He is considered at high risk to offend again.

Police would like to remind the public that this notification is to serve only as a means for the public to protect itself. Any action taken against Williams, including vandalism to property, oral or written threat of physical harm, or physical assault against Williams or his family can result in arrest and prosecution.

Supreme Court blocks execution for borderline retarded man

POTOSI, Mo. (AP) —The U.S. Supreme Court Tuesday blocked the execution of a borderline mentally retarded man shortly after it had reinstated his execution order.

The court issued the second ruling to allow it time to review the case.

Antonio Richardson, 26, had been scheduled to be put to death by injection early Wednesday at the Potosi Correctional Center for his role in the 1991 rapes and deaths of the Kerry sisters — Robin, 19, and Julie, 20. The young women were pushed off an abandoned Mississippi River bridge in north St. Louis.

I.C. man accused of sexually abusing his roommate

■ The man is currently being held in the Johnson County Jail.

By Tony Robinson
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City man has been charged after allegedly sexually abusing his female roommate — an acquaintance of more than 10 years — last September.

Curtis Anthony Williams, 35, was arrested Thursday for the alleged Sept. 9 incident in his home at 612 E. Court St. No. 1. He faces third-degree sexual-abuse charges.

The woman, whose name has not been released, told Iowa City police that each member of the apartment had her or his own room. According to police reports, she said Williams allegedly entered her bedroom at 3 a.m., and she awoke with Williams trying to put his penis in her vagina.

The victim, who was on medication at the time of the alleged incident and had recently undergone surgery, told officers that she had never had an intimate relationship with Williams, even though he had made attempts, the reports said.

The victim did not file an initial report with police until Dec. 27, 2000, more than three months after the alleged incident. Sara Baderstadt, the head of the Rape Victim Advocacy Program's volunteer programs, said this behavior is not at all uncommon, because of the severity of the situation and also because the woman was acquainted with the alleged aggressor.

"In 80 to 85 percent of sexual assaults, the perpetrator is someone the victim knows, making the decision to turn in an attacker that much harder," Baderstadt said.

Iowa City police Sgt. Doug Hart said the two main ways of collecting evidence in sexual-abuse cases are the victim's statement and testimony.

"There are other ways to ascertain if a crime took place or not, and different techniques are applied depending on the certain circumstances of the case," he said.

If convicted of the class C felony, Williams could face up to 10 years in prison and a $10,000 fine. The severity of the charge and penalty depend on age of the victim, age of the perpetrator and nature of the abuse involved. If convicted, he would also be ordered to register with the county sheriff as part of a statewide sex-offender registry.

Williams is being held in the Johnson County Jail, with bail set at $15,000.

Judge hands down Napster rules

■ Once the recording industry gives Napster a list of songs, it has 72 hours to remove them.

By Ron Harris
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — A federal judge Tuesday laid down the law to Napster, saying that once the recording industry comes up with a list of copyrighted songs it wants removed from the music-swapping service, Napster will have 72 hours to comply.

The order effectively gives the recording industry control over the immediate fate of the Internet music service that lets computer users download popular songs for free.

Napster is fighting to stay online and retain its popularity while promising to shift over to a subscription-based service that charges listeners and pays royalties to artists. For that, it needs the cooperation of the music labels that sued Napster for copyright infringement.

Napster, which has struggled with little success in the past few days to screen out some songs already identified by record labels, declined to comment on the ruling by U.S. District Judge Marilyn Hall Patel.

"If Napster complies with what this injunction says, it will be to our satisfaction," said Howard King, an attorney for heavy metal band Metallica and rapper-producer Dr. Dre in their $10 million lawsuits against Napster. "It's technologically 'do-able.' The question is, is Napster going to go to the necessary steps to do it?"

Courts' Klenske decision stuns some

■ A student court ruling throws out one of two fines levied against the Klenske/Rossi ticket.

By Jesse Elliott
The Daily Iowan

When the Student Judicial Court ruled late Monday night to throw out one of two controversial campaign fines imposed on the Klenske/Rossi ticket by the Student Elections Board, more than a few parties closest to the fray were temporarily taken aback.

The Elections Board imposed the fine on March 1 for the slate's alleged failure to have campaign material sent out on various UI student group listservs pre-approved by board members.

Klenske's ticket — led in the hearing by graduate student Kristen Gast — asserted that by disallowing such e-mail material, the Elections Board was denying the student groups their right to freedom of speech.

The main argument of the Elections Board was that all members of the ticket signed a bond at the beginning of the campaign that in essence stated they would abide by all election rules, including the necessity to have all materials that could be construed as campaign-related approved, said board member Steve Goodall.

But the Klenske slate asserted that the Elections Board did not have jurisdiction over a right guaranteed by the First Amendment.

"I signed a bond to run for president, not to give up my constitutional rights," Nick Klenske said.

Goodall said the board questioned the sudden concern with rules that all tickets had a chance to look over and ask questions about before the campaign began. The board also expressed concern that the ticket's rule violations may have been publicity stunts used to garner headlines in The Daily Iowan.

At this point, the question is whether the court's ruling will lead to a revision of the election rules.

Goodall said the Elections Board may be open to reformulating the rules as a result of the court's decision.

"We're going to sit down after the campaign is over — while this is still fresh in our minds — and try to address the issues everyone is concerned with," he said.

Klenske is also optimistic about the possibility of revising the election rules.

"(The Elections Board) said last year it would change the rules every year in response to election events," he said. "Obviously, the court thinks this one is in violation of the U.S. Constitution, so I would hope the board would take that into consideration."

But for now, the parties will forego further action until the court's official opinion on the hearing is released sometime after Spring Break.

Woman indicted in Bush debate case

■ An employee of the media company the Bush campaign used faces 15 years and a fine.

By Karen Gullo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In connection with the release of a Bush debate tape to Vice President Al Gore's campaign, a federal grand jury Tuesday indicted a former employee of a media company that handled ads for President Bush's campaign.

Juanita Yvette Lozano of Austin, Texas, was charged with mail fraud, false statements to the FBI and perjury. If convicted, she faces 15 years in prison and a $750,000 fine. The indictment was handed down by a federal grand jury in Texas.

Lozano worked for Maverick Media, an Austin company that handled Bush's political ads.

The indictment alleged that she secretly copied more than 120 pages of debate-preparation documents and a 60-minute videotape of a debate-preparation session with Bush and his advisers and sent it to the Gore campaign under a different name.

She lied to FBI agents investigating the matter and testified falsely before the grand jury, the indictment said.

Attempts to reach Lozano in Austin were not immediately successful, and her attorney, Christopher Gunter, was not immediately available, his office said.

Lozano sent the package to former Rep. Tom Downey, who was helping Gore prepare for debates, with a note bearing the name "Amy Smith," the indictment alleged.

It quoted the note as saying: "I will call you soon to find out what other materials can be useful to the VP."

Downey turned the package over to the FBI, which began an investigation.

The FBI obtained a videotape from a surveillance camera at the post office where the package was mailed. The tape showed Lozano mailing a package at a time that corresponded to when the debate package was mailed, law-enforcement officials have said.

At the time, Lozano said she was mailing a pair of khakis back to the Gap for her boss, Mark McKinnon, a top Bush adviser.

wrong, and the courts ruled pretty much in our favor, and that backed us up."

Vice presidential candidate Chris Loftus said he is proud of the Carlson/Loftus ticket because it was the only ticket that did not have a complaint filed against it and because it spent the least amount of money.

"The rules were read. We understood them, and we followed them," he said. "I wish Klenske and Rossi the best of luck."

Once the election is over, it is over, said vice presidential candidate Sara Stephenson of the Adams/Stephenson ticket.

"I don't want to be the petty person just because she lost," she said. "I feel like Al Gore in Florida."

The campaign experience was positive for presidential candidate Megan Adams even though she lost.

"I'm really happy with the turnout this year," she said. "And we all worked together to make this a success."

Quinn O'Keefe, the co-chief justice of the Student Judicial Court, echoed Adams' message.

"I think it was great that there were 4,000 votes," she said. "All the candidates did a wonderful job getting everyone to vote."

Only 2,705 votes were cast in the 2000 election.

The main issue for the next president will be state funding and tuition issues, said outgoing UISG President Andy Stoll.

"We need to work with the new administration to get out a strong, clear message to legislators," he said. "They need to make sure they can mobilize the student body."

Klenske said his first item of business, following Spring Break, would be to implement his recycling plan and to start delegating jobs for his cabinet members to focus on.

women.

One of the major problems with workplace violence is that data are limited, making it hard to determine what works and what doesn't work when attempting to prevent it, the report says. Fatal injuries are relatively easy to track, but there is much less information available on non-fatal injuries and the economic impact on businesses. Very little of the existing research has utilized scientific methods, according to the report.

James Merchant, the dean of the UI College of Public Health, said that at this time, "the greatest need is for research."

Currently, no national legislation or any federal regulations are specifically aimed at the prevention of workplace violence. A few states have passed legislation or enacted regulations that attempt to reduce workplace violence in specific areas, but the effectiveness of these measures has yet to be fully evaluated, the report says.

National support is important in preventing workplace violence. Lundell said Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, and Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, who were present at the briefing, support the existing research as well as further investigation.

"This report clearly proves that workplace violence is an escalating problem that can affect every community in America," Harkin said in a statement. "We must build on the strength of this report and continue our work to understand just what factors contribute to workplace violence and how we can prevent it."

The report is the result of a workshop held in April 2000 in Washington, D.C. Funded by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the workshop brought together representatives from industry, labor, academia and government to address the problem.

Knight jumps to Washington law school

KNIGHT

"It is hard to make the decision to go — to leave a comfortable place like this," she said. "But at the same time, I am excited."

Mask said she is looking at a couple different opportunities in Seattle and is looking forward to the new possibilities.

Knight said he hopes to improve and expand the reputation of the Washington law school, which is one of the top 25 in the country.

But ending his career at the UI is a very tumultuous experience, leaving him with conflicting emotions, he said.

"I am excited about the possibility of leading a major law school ... but it is saddening to think I am leaving a place that is very much my home," Knight said. "Also, it is incredibly frightening. The people who say they don't have doubts and fears are misleading, and I don't want to mislead people."

Doug True, the UI vice president for finance, said he came to the university roughly the same time as Mask and their careers have often coincided since.

"We're lucky to have to be in a position where people like Susan are so outstanding that it is going to be hard to replace her," he said.

UI law school Dean William Hines said Knight's absence will leave the law school short-handed next fall because the time to hire a permanent replacement has passed. The college will soon begin looking for temporary solutions for covering Knight's courses, he said.

"It's a major loss for our department," Hines said.

UI President Mary Sue Coleman said she found out about Mask's leaving Monday, so the university hasn't had a chance to start looking for a replacement yet.

"They are both tremendous university citizens," Coleman said. "Even though I regret terribly them having to go — I think (Knight) will make a wonderful dean."

Although it's not certain when Knight and Mask will leave Iowa City, Knight said, he thinks it will be sometime this summer.

"I just want to thank the entire university community for the incredible support and encouragement," Knight said. "Iowa City is a place I will always be able to call home."

who was shot in the back of his left thigh when he ran to help a friend. "I don't know what was in his mind."

Williams is expected to be arraigned today as an adult on charges that include murder and assault with a deadly weapon. Dressed in a baggy jail-issue jumpsuit that draped past his ankles, the teen stared at the ground as he was led into juvenile hall Monday by sheriff's deputies.

Bryan Zuckor, 14, and 17-year-old Randy Gordon were killed; 11 other students and two adults — a special-education student teacher and a campus-security worker — were wounded. Several have been released from area hospitals.

School officials said Santana High would reopen today for students to discuss Monday's shooting. A crew cleaned up the scene Tuesday and patched bullet holes.

Also Tuesday, Sharon Davis, the wife of Gov. Gray Davis and a 1972 Santana High graduate, visited Santee and talked with community leaders and students. "I couldn't believe it was Santana, the school I attended, because we all look back on our high-school years as idyllic," she said.

The boy allegedly shot two people in a restroom, then walked into a quad, and fired randomly, Lewis said. He stopped to reload as many as four times, getting off 30 or more shots, Lewis said.

"The information we have from the evidence and the witnesses (is) the suspect was firing randomly at anybody who was going by," Lewis said. "Any student who was going by he was shooting at."

"It was total chaos. People were trying to take cover," said student John Schardt, 17, who was in a nearby classroom when the shooting started. He said the shooter had a smile on his face.

"Pop, pop, pop, and everyone started ducking," recalled student Nika Ocen-Odode.

The FBI, which has analyzed 18 school shootings, has developed guidelines that could help authorities assess whether someone is a threat. But the agency found there's no real profile of characteristics that explains such behavior, spokeswoman Jan Caldwell said.

"We've seen these kids come from very good homes where they have two loving parents," Caldwell said. "There really is no menu for this."

Authorities said the gun used in the shooting, an eight-shot, .22-caliber long rifle revolver, belonged to his father, who told investigators he kept it in a locked cabinet.

When Williams surrendered, the gun was fully loaded with eight rounds, its hammer cocked, investigators said. He came to school with as many as 40 rounds.

The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms is tracing the serial number on the handgun, said Randy Jones, an assistant U.S. attorney in San Diego.

Gratefully knocking on Dead's door

Dark Star Orchestra keeps on truckin' with its Iowa City debut.

By Becca Suttive
The Daily Iowan

On Aug. 9, 1995, Jerry Garcia died. To many, it was the day the music died. But not so for keyboardist Scott Larned. Little more than two years after Garcia's death, Larned and five other musicians embarked on an experiment. What started out as a four-gig trial run in Chicago has since blossomed into a full-speed, coast-to-coast touring troupe.

Setting itself apart from an ever-growing slew of Grateful Dead cover bands, Dark Star Orchestra is forging a new path in a homage that has been transformed into an art.

"The terms cover band/tribute band implies something that leaves a bad taste in my mouth," Larned said. "Certainly, we are a cover band, but we're so much different from others in that definition. A little bit different of a beast."

Dark Star Orchestra's originality lies in its approach to covering the Dead. Rather than simply playing various songs, the band recreates actual Grateful Dead shows by adhering strictly to original set lists.

"We just do it the way it was back then," Larned said. The "back then" part is where it gets complicated. In 30 years' worth of material and some 3,000 live performances, the Dead never played the same set twice. Furthermore, the members' takes on originals as well as covers changed as the years and tours flew by. Dark Star narrows its focus by going for the era from which the set list comes.

"We go for the way the band sounded in a particular year," Larned said. "We do play the set list, but note for note? We don't try that."

Furthering its characterizations of band members, Dark Star employs equipment and stage set-ups following what the Dead used. To create their own mystery, the group members never announce what performance they will reincarnate. On more than one occasion, Dark Star has conjured up memories for listeners who were actually there when the Dead did the original performance.

For Mary Fredrekson, a co-owner of Pizza on Dubuque, 5 S. Dubuque St., the possibility of hearing a familiar set is not so remote. Fredrekson spent 10 years following the Dead on tour, five of which she spent as a vendor selling homemade pizzas with then-husband Al Risk. After witnessing upwards of 150 shows (at one she went into labor), Fredrekson said she has no expectations for Dark Star's Iowa City debut to be anything other than a good time.

"The idea can be there, but I don't think the whole Grateful Dead scene can or should be duplicated," she said. "It's just not the same."

Fittingly, the group takes its name from a Dead song. "Dark Star," which Larned describes as "one of the more important songs from the old days," contains little more than two verses, but it was known by Deadheads as a wild, improvisational jam that could last anywhere from 15 to 30 minutes — a jam that Larned feels is at the heart of what the Grateful Dead meant.

"(The Grateful Dead) was an extension of the beat philosophy: taking risks, expressing freedom, doing things differently," he said. "Dark Star is the epitome of the beatnik philosophy."

Don't expect to hear string symphonies from Dark Star Orchestra. The "orchestra" part of the band's names is a disclaimer of sorts.

"An orchestra recreates someone else's music; that's the extent of what we're doing," Larned said.

For most Deadheads, it wasn't just about the music, though. The Grateful Dead created amazing music, but as much as the music created a concert atmosphere of love and understanding, it was that atmosphere that in turn fueled the music. "It was about dancing, being yourself, as free as you want to be," said Derek Perez, of local jam band Clean Livin', which occasionally performs Dead covers. "It's interesting that one band can replicate another's concert exactly and get that big of a following."

CNN co-founder offers 'kiss & tell'

Reese Schonfeld reflects on CNN's history in his new book.

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press

NEW YORK — In exile from the network he put on the air, Reese Schonfeld observes CNN from a distance, and disappears.

His grievances are many: the widely reported management shake-ups and programming fiascos; the 400 layoffs in recent weeks, including such marquee names as Jim Moret, Greg LaMotte and Flip Spiceland; the lack of clear direction as CNN is upstaged by flashier archrivals Fox News Channel and MSNBC — to which CNN scrambles to react.

Owner Time Warner's merger with AOL has only stoked Schonfeld's concerns for CNN, which, in this colossal new corporate puzzle, becomes a smaller-than-ever piece. Meanwhile, Schonfeld's fellow CNN mastermind, Ted Turner, has also been dethroned. He lives on, in his own words, as "a figurehead."

Maybe CNN is just going through a necessary, even useful, transition.

But the growing public perception is that after years of winning the game it invented, CNN has dropped the ball. Now, with cruelly propitious timing, a new book by Schonfeld lands in stores to argue the same point.

In Me and Ted Against the World: The Unauthorized Story of the Founding of CNN (Harper Collins), this TV news barnstormer offers an entertaining, sharply personal account of how, fueled by Turner's money and grandiosity, he got CNN off the ground on June 1, 1980, and less than two years later started Headline News. He also tells how it's gone wrong since his abrupt departure soon after that.

Engaging in what he calls "anti-revisionism," Schonfeld aims to reclaim his rightful place in the CNN saga, from which, in the company's official history, he has long been excluded.

Me and Ted means to set the record straight.

"You hear about how bad CNN was in the beginning," bristles Schonfeld. "The fact is, CNN was at its best, and the ratings were at their best, from the first of the year of '82 until I was fired."

(Yes, but in 1982, CNN was available in just 11 million households and the average cable box offered only a handful of channels; today it's in 78 million homes, with dozens of other channels vying for the viewer's time.)

On CNN, Schonfeld pioneered TV news on the fly.

In Atlanta's open-view newsroom (his innovation), he championed rough, not slick, spontaneous, not processed. "Fluid news," he called it and still cherishes CNN fan Frank Zappa's term: "randomonium."

Today he finds CNN too formatted, polished, predictable, bland. "The theory behind CNN was: Who knows what's gonna happen next?"

What happened next for Schonfeld was termination. In May 1982, he and Turner clashed over renewing the contract of a talk-show host. The host stayed. Schonfeld was asked to leave.

His story doesn't end with his firing, which happens on page 291 of a 389-page book that even spills onto a Web site where CNN updates are posted.

Since leaving CNN, Schonfeld has stayed busy in start-up projects that included Long Island's News 12, the nation's first local all-news network, and the Food Network, which he started in November 1993, then left two years later.

"It had a full hour of food news every day," he recalls. "I have tried never to give up news entirely. When you're stuck on the outside, and nobody's gonna hire you, how can you get back into the news without starting your own version?"

He is full of more such plans. But he makes no bones about it: There will never be another CNN. "It's the only thing I wanted to do."

And what of the 19 years since CNN was taken from him? Painful?

"For 19 years I've ignored that question, and I'm not going to answer it now," says Schonfeld. He grins defiantly. "There's no point in looking too deep."

Schonfeld wrote book about CNN

Michael Jackson unveils children's charity

OXFORD, England (AP) — Throngs of Michael Jackson fans shouted their welcome as the pop star arrived at Oxford University's famous debating chamber Tuesday night to speak about his new children's charity.

Jackson launched children's charity

Jackson, garbed in a black suit with a white-bordered tunic top, hobbled up to the Oxford Union building on crutches, two hours and 45 minutes later than scheduled. Organizers said he had problems with his foot, which he broke in a fall last week at his California ranch.

The star was flanked by spoon-bending psychic Uri Geller and Rabbi Shmuley Boteach, who runs the charity — Heal the Kids — with Jackson.

The enthusiasm of the fans was undimmed by the long wait. Their cheers built to a crescendo as Jackson made his way to the building's entrance.

ARTS BRIEF

Jackson was taking the podium at the university's venerable debating venue, where visiting speakers have included Mother Theresa, Richard Nixon, Robert Kennedy and O.J. Simpson.

In a copy of his speech, released in advance, the singer said the current generation of children had forgotten how to be children.

He called this "a universal calamity, a global catastrophe."

He made reference to his own loveless childhood while launching a charity whose goal is "to recreate the parent-child bond, renew its promise, and light the way forward for all the beautiful children who are destined one day to walk this Earth."

Discussing his childhood as professional singer, he said: "What I really wanted was a dad. I wanted a father who showed me love, and my father never did that."

He unveiled a children's "universal bill of rights," including the "right to be loved without having to earn it," and the "right to be read a bedtime story without having to compete with the evening news."

The Iowa House considers anti-choice measure ...

An insult to women

On March 1, the Iowa House Human Resources Committee voted to send a bill to the floor that would implement a 24-hour waiting period for women wanting an abortion, as well as require abortion providers to supply those women with specific information.

This information includes facts about medical assistance, the father's child-support responsibilities, adoption, and "objective, nonjudgmental" information about the development stages of the fetus. Requiring doctors to provide all patients seeking abortions with this information insults the intelligence of Iowa's women.

The bill, as it is now written, assumes that any woman who decides to have an abortion must have done so solely because she did not consider any of her other options. It ignores the fact that a woman may make a completely informed decision to terminate her pregnancy, instead sending her off with a few pamphlets in the hope that she'll change her mind by morning.

"They may not be fully informed about what they are doing," Rep. Betty De Boef, R-New Sharon, told the Gazette. De Boef, who voted for the bill, admits to being scared and uninformed when she considered abortion 26 years ago, but she is extrapolating her own experiences to all Iowa women. Abortion may have not been the right decision for her, but she and the rest of the state legislators have no right to conclude that every woman who considers abortion is as uninformed as De Boef was two decades ago.

The information-distribution section of the bill completely disregards the agonizing decision-making process that every woman choosing abortion must go through. Anyone making that decision is likely to seek out and thoroughly consider all options simply because of the complex nature of the issue. To assume that any woman has not considered all of her options before making her choice is a shockingly presumptive generalization. It suggests that women choosing abortion have made the wrong choice, when only the woman who makes that choice can judge whether it is right or wrong for her.

Iowa's legislators must trust the women to make decisions about the morals of abortion for themselves. They should strip the waiting period bill of its condescending information distribution requirements and stop assuming that all women who choose abortion are making an uninformed decision.

The XFL hits a new low

The XFL should stand for Xtra Flawed Logic. Yet, fittingly, the name "XFL" is not an acronym, but an empty label for a hollow spectacle. The league is merely a tawdry, shallow mess lacking in both style and substance, and its executives may soon add idiocy to the mix.

Somehow, XFL executives reason that insufficient talent, not the degradation of football and women, accounts for the league's dismal reputation. To fix dwindling fan support, the XFL may aim to broaden the talent pool by recruiting high-school players unable to meet academic standards for college admission. Drafting players from high schools only eradicates whatever remains of the XFL's dignity.

According to the New York Times, the NFL requires players to be at least three years out of high school. If the XFL accepts such young, unprepared players, the league will not only augment its reputation for bad taste but also exploit a vulnerable group, something that the NFL refuses to do. At 18 years of age, no football player is equipped, whether in terms of maturity or physical development, to handle the transition to professional football. In sports such as baseball, hockey and basketball, sheer body mass plays a smaller role. Older football players carry more muscular bulk and hit with strength not found on high-school fields. Also, the majority of older players have likely moved out of their parents' homes. Furthermore, players unable to meet even the most merciful collegiate academic standards need help assessing their priorities. High schools aim to teach students and prepare them to contribute to society, not to marginalize academics in favor of building body mass and attracting profit-minded recruiters.

The XFL is not alone in its misjudgment. Professional hockey, baseball and basketball eagerly scout and enlist players straight from high schools. Offering roster spots as incentive for high-school players to ignore studies works against societal efforts to help students care about scholastics. Managers must require students to wait before entering professional sports leagues. To reward athletes who invest all of their energy into sports instead of academics is a pathetic, dishonorable practice. Concussions, egos, and shiny gold necklaces hardly substitute for a college degree.

Blame it on the Nest

Where does one lay the blame for the train wreck that was this men's basketball season? A lack of talent and ambition? Senioritis? No — It's the Hawks Nest's fault.

But this has not all been in vain. This 30-odd-game nightmare has taught me an invaluable lesson.

(Actually, it taught me a number of lessons, including "winning isn't everything" and "just because you couldn't play your way out of a three-sided wet paper bag doesn't mean you can't have a premium Hillcrest dinner," but that's neither here nor there.)

No, the important lesson I learned from Basketball 2001 was that "there's always someone else to blame." Namely, the Hawks Nest — my brother, Dan, especially.

Some would blame this year's lousy basketball performance on injuries or just a lack of ability relative to the opponents. But those people know nothing about basketball, or about life in general.

Hawks Nest members, it's time that you face the music for all the damage you've caused at the UI:

My academic apathy. For the last week, I've done all I can to avoid schoolwork. I watched

Cruel Intentions 2 three times. I watched that "All Your Base Belongs to Us" Web site for seven hours. I should be motivated with a bang, but this second half is going the way of a

Zach Boyden-Holmes/Daily Iowan
Coach Alford's wardrobe — another of the Hawks Nest's failings.

Purdue game, and you're going to screw it up again if you don't "get back in the game" or "show some school spirit." Before my Business Policy presentation, please.

Binge drinking. Week in and week out, students flock to local bars and drink four, sometimes five drinks in a night, just to escape their personal sorrows — much of which they derive, no doubt, from a lack of support from the Nest. Where were you last week, when the kids hit the bars? You sat there and watched your fellow Hawks fall apart, ringing up bar tabs like Badgers ringing up second-half jump shots. Come on, you could at least wave your arms or something. Or are you too "cool" for that?

The weather. The last several days, the temperature has dropped well below 60 degrees. Thanks for nothing, Hawks Nest. If you were real Hawkeyes, you'd get up off your butts, start clapping, cheering, and put Mother Nature back in "the zone." You can make all the excuses you want — "Oh, Adam, we don't retain control over forces of nature," or "It's physically impossible to affect climate changes through repeated choruses of 'Deeee-fense'" — but ask yourself, would Duke's fans let fluctuations in temperature just happen? No. They'd raise the roof.

I won't even start with the tuition increases or Steely Dan Grammys. But don't think that the UI community will stand for it any longer.

We don't want your kind around here. A basketball team needs your support. Without an arena full of fans, what could a basketball team ever do?

Well, besides win the Big Ten women's championship?

Who needs Berkeley when Dave Zollo takes the stage?

I admit it. I'm a Dave Zollo groupie.

He's a local musician, and he haunts such locales as the Mill, the Sanctuary and the Green Room and others with his rock and blues riffs and vocals. Everything from the way Zollo's bass guitarist keeps a lit cigarette between his guitar strings while he's playing to the way Zollo and Bo Ramsey own the stage together makes a Zollo show among the best entertainment Iowa City has to offer.

Just as Zollo's riffs are the perfect combination of blues and rock, the crowds at his shows are the perfect hybrid combination of college students and locals. Most of the time in downtown Iowa City, weekend hangouts are segregated. As students flock to such places as the Union, the Column and One-Eyed Jakes, locals are more likely to be found at George's and the Deadwood. But when Dave's playing, the Mill and the Green Room become a melting pot for both facets of Iowa City's dichotomous population. I'm not saying that Dave's the Messiah or that he can bring about world peace with his mellow yet jivin' rock riffs, but in Iowa City, just saying "Dave" implies Zollo as much as Matthews.

Local musicians such as Zollo and the people you meet here make Iowa City a true college town. Allen Ginsberg, that never work-a-day-in-his-life beatnik, said — and I'm paraphrasing — "Iowa City is the only worthwhile place to stop between Chicago and California."

It's true. The University of Iowa is no University of California, but as college towns go, Iowa City makes a good comparison with the king of all college towns, Berkeley, Calif.

About the only thing Berkeley has that Iowa City lacks is head shops to no end. As Bradley Nowell said, "Laughter, it's free anytime, just call me." There's a street in Berkeley called Telegraph where laughter is in abundance on every street corner and the blocks in-between all carry its distinctively pungent odor. I'm glad Iowa City's not as much like Amsterdam. But then again, California is more like Europe than America with San Francisco's streetcars and Berkeley's sweet scents.

And there's a lot Iowa City has that Berkeley doesn't. You have to love America with San Francisco's streetcars and Berkeley's sweet scents.

When Dave Zollo's playing, the Mill and the Green Room become a melting pot for both facets of Iowa City.

■ The vice president will not cut back on his workload after undergoing an angioplasty.

By Christopher Newton
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Vice President Dick Cheney was released from the hospital Tuesday, a day after undergoing a surgical procedure to repair a damaged artery.

The vice president walked out of George Washington University Hospital, shook hands with his doctors, and was driven away. "Good," he said in response to a reporter's shouted question about how he felt.

Cheney was up about 7 a.m. and was "antsy" to leave, said senior aide Mary Matalin. Three sets of cardiac enzyme tests showed no damage to Cheney's heart muscle, and "multiple EKGs have been unchanged," she said.

Speaking to reporters, President Bush said he last talked with the vice president Monday night, and Cheney told him he felt great. Asked if Cheney should cut back on his duties, the president said no, because "he is needed. This country needs his wisdom and judgment."

Bush said there is no question that Cheney is fit to continue serving as vice president. "Thanks for asking. I don't think that he needs to cut back on his work," he said in a brief question-and-answer session.

He said Cheney is the kind of person who "listens to his body" and takes care of himself when he is not feeling 100 percent.

Cheney will rest at home and likely will return to work later this week, said White House spokesman Ari Fleischer.

"No restrictions have been placed on his work," Fleischer said. He said Bush had not spoken with Cheney about his work schedule, but the president "expects him to follow his doctor's orders."

The procedure Cheney underwent Monday was prompted by "a common complication" of his prior heart procedure, not a progression of heart disease, Matalin said.

Cheney should be able to continue in his job unimpeded by his latest heart problems, doctors say, shrugging off any suggestion that he should curtail travel or his intense workload.

But Cheney also was given some tough news after he had an angioplasty to unclog a coronary artery Monday. Even if he sticks to his no-beef diet and rigorous workout regimen, there is a fair chance he will be back in the hospital facing the same trouble soon, his physicians said.

"Well, it's possible for the narrowing to come back, and I think I quoted around 40 percent," Dr. Jonathan Reiner, who performed the surgery at George Washington University, told a news conference.

"There are studies that may show, you know, a little bit higher than that. If the narrowing is going to come back, usually it comes back within the first six months."

Cheney, who has had four heart attacks, underwent the angioplasty after he experienced a series of subtle pains in his chest. Doctors said their best evidence indicated that Cheney, 60, had not suffered another heart attack.

The artery, which had been opened during surgery at the same hospital in November, had partially reclosed, Reiner said. The culprit was scar tissue building up in the same channel doctors had opened previously.

Monday night Cheney was groggy and sedated, but Reiner said he should be back at work this week. When asked whether Cheney could face travel restrictions, or any restrictions at all, Reiner said, "no."

"There is a very high likelihood he can finish out his term in his fully vigorous capacity," Reiner said. Cheney quickly resumed a full schedule after the November operation.

Bush called the vice president to wish him well, White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said. "During their five-minute phone call, the vice president told the president that he was feeling fine and looked forward to returning to work."

In this latest incident, Cheney checked himself into George Washington University Hospital, about six blocks west of the White House, after feeling chest pain briefly on two occasions Monday. He also had felt chest discomfort on March 3 after stepping off an exercise machine, and on Sunday, after taking a walk.

■ The new prime minister faces the daunting tasks of restoring security and working for peace.

By Greg Myre
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Ariel Sharon is set to become Israel's prime minister today as the head of a broad-based government that will face the urgent task of restoring security to an anxious country rocked by five months of violence with the Palestinians.

A month after his election victory, Sharon will present his unity government to Parliament today. It could include more than 80 members of the 120-seat Knesset, said Ruby Rivlin, a member of Sharon's Likud Party.

With peace talks on hold and Islamic militants threatening more bombings, the 73-year old Sharon faces tough decisions on how to deal with the Palestinian uprising, which has claimed the lives of more than 420, the vast majority of whom were Palestinians.

If he imposes even tougher security measures, he could inflame the confrontation. But if he fails to quell the violence, he could lose the support of Israelis and his coalition partners.

"We will make every effort to achieve (peace), but the reality around us reminds us that the struggle for the land of Israel is not over," Sharon said Tuesday. "Our neighbors have recognized our military might but have not yet recognized our right to the country."

Palestinian militants have threatened to welcome Sharon with an onslaught of bombings. Four Israelis and a Palestinian suicide bomber have been killed in blasts over the past week.

The militant Islamic group Hamas claimed responsibility Tuesday for the weekend suicide bombing that claimed the lives of three Israelis. A Hamas spokesman in Beirut said the military wing of the Islamic movement, called Izzedin al-Kassam, was behind the blast Sunday in the coastal city of Netanya.

After a month of negotiations, Sharon's Likud Party and the coalition partners handed in papers Tuesday sealing their agreement to form a unity government.

Sharon needs only a simple majority — and is expected to get it with ease — when he formally presents his government for approval today. The coalition includes right-wing religious parties that oppose any concessions to the Palestinians as well as the Labor Party, which has led the drive for a peace deal.

The broad coalition, which could prove unwieldy, has several aims: to give Israel a sense of unity at a time of crisis, to soften Sharon's hard-line image and to make his government less susceptible to collapse in the fractious Parliament.

Outgoing Prime Minister Ehud Barak won a landslide victory less than two years ago. But his coalition fell apart last summer amid disputes over his proposals for a Palestinian state in most of the West Bank and Gaza Strip and part of Jerusalem.

Peace talks with the Palestinians broke off shortly before Israel's Feb. 6 vote, and Sharon has said negotiations will not resume until the violence ends. Even optimists do not expect a quick resumption of talks.

The Palestinian leadership has been relatively quiet this week, its offices closed for the Muslim holiday of Eid al-Adha.

However, Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat has said resistance will continue, and the Palestinians believe any negotiations should resume where they left off.

Sharon has suggested he would offer the Palestinians no territory beyond what they now control, an area that includes most of Gaza and a little more than 40 percent of the West Bank.

Sharon "will turn to Mr. Arafat and ask him whether he is ready to negotiate seriously," said Rivlin, the incoming communications minister. "Negotiations can only be held once they stop every terror act. Arafat must understand that no one can get away with hitting Israel."

Sharon's government will also include doves such as Shimon Peres, the designated foreign minister who advocates keeping open channels of communication with the Palestinians even during heavy fighting.

The fighting, which broke out after Sharon visited Jerusalem's most hotly disputed religious site last September, has claimed 423 lives, including 347 Palestinians, 57 Israeli Jews and 19 others.

EU closes livestock markets for two weeks

■ Europe moves to stop the spread of the British foot-and-mouth disease.

By Paul Ames
Associated Press

BRUSSELS, Belgium — European Union veterinary experts Tuesday ordered all livestock markets closed for two weeks in the 15-nation bloc in an effort to contain foot-and-mouth disease.

The EU panel said livestock transport would be allowed between farms and direct to slaughterhouses but all markets and assembly points for cattle, pigs and sheep would be banned.

The panel also extended until March 27 a ban on all exports of meat, livestock and milk products from Britain and said the tires of vehicles arriving from Britain in other EU nations must be disinfected.

The measures will come into force once they are formally adopted by the European Commission, a decision that will come in the next few days, said Gregor Kreuzhuber, an agriculture spokesman for the EU head office.

Although no confirmed cases have been found outside Britain, the restrictions reflect widespread fears that the livestock virus could jump the English Channel and spread through herds in mainland Europe.

They were approved despite Britain's message to the meeting that the outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease may be close to peaking.

"The information he gave was rather reassuring," said European Commission spokesman Thorsten Muench of a briefing by Britain's representative on the panel. "The

Karen Murray/Associated Press

One of the first deliveries of cattle to be processed at a slaughterhouse in Britain since the outbreak of foot-and-mouth disease arrived at Inverurie in northeastern Scotland Monday.

(British) authorities expect a peak today, tomorrow or through this week."

However, several EU nations were pushing for tougher action. Italy had demanded a complete ban on all livestock movement across borders within the EU. The panel of veterinary experts did not go that far and said the measures the EU has taken so far had "avoided the spread of the disease" outside Britain.

Despite inaccuracies, Census to use raw data

■ Dems and civil-rights groups call for second tally adjusted for the several million Americans missed.

By Genaro C. Armas
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration declared that the "actual" head count from the 2000 Census would be the official population numbers for congressional redistricting, despite estimates showing that 3.3 million people, mostly minorities, were missed.

Commerce Secretary Don Evans agreed Tuesday with a Census Bureau recommendation that the initial, raw count provided the most nearly accurate snapshot of America. Democrats and civil-rights groups had called for the use of a second, separate population tally statistically adjusted to protect against the undercount.

But supporters of adjustment had expected Evans' decision following the bureau's recommendation last week. It may quiet — but not end — a long political dispute between Democrats and Republicans over whether, and how, to count missed Americans.

All sides agree the dispute would arise anew in the courts. Evans called the initial figures the most accurate census in the history of the nation.

The first numbers — for New Jersey and Virginia — are expected to be released today; all states must have their redistricting data by April 1.

The numbers will be used by state lawmakers to redraw congressional district boundaries to reflect population shifts, as is required every 10 years.

States will be able to use the figures to remap state and local legislative districts as well. Also, the numbers could be used to redistribute over $185 billion in federal money given each year to states.

Not adjusting would disenfranchise the millions overlooked, Democrats said. Democrats and civil-rights groups wanted an adjustment using statistical sampling to protect against traditional undercounts of minorities, the poor and children.

New twist in muddled Internet-adoption of twins

■ The father of twins adopted on the 'Net felt that giving up his daughters would be best.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The biological father of twin girls whose adoption over the Internet has created an international uproar said Monday that he had consented to giving up the children because he thought it would be best for them.

Aaron Wecker told CBS News' "The Early Show" that he had left it up to his estranged wife, Tranda Wecker, to arrange the transfer and didn't meet any of the other parties involved in the case.

A California couple say they tried to adopt the girls through an Internet adoption broker but lost them to a British couple who paid more. The girls are now in the custody of British authorities. The California and British couples, along with both Aaron and Tranda Wecker separately, are vying for the twins in various courts.

Aaron Wecker acknowledged he had supported having the girls put up for adoption after their birth in June.

"Tranda and I were separated," Wecker said. "We already have a girl that we're raising separated. I thought at the time that was best for the girls to join a family that is together."

Richard and Vickie Allen of Highland, Calif., say they began the process of adopting the babies when they paid a $6,000 fee to the Internet adoption broker, Tina Johnson. But later, Alan and Judith Kilshaw of Wales gave $12,000 to Johnson and adopted the children in Arkansas. The Kilshaws argue that the Arkansas adoption should stand.

Tranda Wecker has said she regretted giving up the girls and wants them back.

In the CBS interview, Aaron Wecker said he can take care of the girls because "I have a steady job, I have a house, a lot of room, a very nice, rural setting. I'd just like my girls back home with me. That's — I think that's the best for them." He acknowledged he had had a drug problem but said it was over, adding, "A lot of people have a lot of problems."

GymHawks crack Top 10 for the first time

Welcome to the Top 10, GymHawks. In a season of firsts, Iowa can add its first Top-10 ranking ever to the list. The GymHawks (11-3) rose from No. 14 to No. 10 Monday, following their victory at Illinois on March 3, in which they set a school-record score of 196.675. The ranking is especially significant because the top 12 schools receive the No. 1 and 2 seeds at the NCAA regionals next month. Iowa jumped ahead of rival Iowa State (No. 11) and Big Ten foe Penn State (No. 12). Only Michigan (No. 8) has a better ranking in the Big Ten than Iowa.

Iowa's Beatrice Bullock goes up for a shot during Iowa's Big Ten finals game against Purdue on March 4. Bullock came off the bench to power the Hawkeyes last weekend.

Bench key to Big Ten win

Jerica Watson and Beatrice Bullock stepped up in place of starters to lift Iowa to victory.

Sunday's 75-70 victory over No. 1-seeded Purdue gave the Iowa women's basketball team a glittering Big Ten Tournament trophy to add to its collection, but the weekend's success will be measured for more in gained confidence than numbers. While the regular season demonstrated that Iowa had consistent senior and starter leadership, coach Lisa Bluder said, the Hawkeyes needed a strong bench to sustain the team through the weekend. Luckily, in Grand Rapids, Mich., they found what they were looking for. In the second round, early fouls sent Randi Peterson to the bench and Beatrice Bullock in against Indiana. Soon thereafter, Bullock took control both on offense and defense. "From the beginning, I've been a little timid on defense, but Randi said she knows how strong I am and how I can get to the basket," Bullock said. Peterson's advice hit home on March 2 for Bullock, as she scored 12 points and grabbed three rebounds, but more than anything, she found confidence on the floor. "I was just so excited going into the tournament," Bullock said. "I wanted to let it all out on the court. I knew they were going to call for me, and I wanted to be there — to step in and fill Randi's shoes as best as I could." Her performance drew praise from Bluder. "I thought Beatrice Bullock played tremendous minutes tonight," she said. "We would not have won this game probably 10 games ago, maybe five, with Randi Peterson sitting in that type of situation." In the Iowa semifinal game against Illinois, the Hawkeyes relied on bench

Jackson, an ideal student-athlete

As a sophomore last season, Don Jackson swamped the competition, taking home the honor of national champion on the pommel horse. This season, although the men's gymnastics team lost six notable seniors, the currently seventh-ranked Hawkeyes have tried to continue their streak as a perennial powerhouse in collegiate gymnastics.

Jackson, in his familiar Field House surroundings and practice togs, took time to talk to DI reporter Laura Podolak about his prior success, his projections for this year's team, and some personal details.

DI: Do you feel that, because of your success last season, especially on pommel horse, people expect too much from you, and how do you react to this pressure?

Jackson: This year, I haven't had the greatest season on pommel horse; I've been kind of disappointed with my performance so far. So it is tough for me to look at the rankings, or to hear my scores and know that they are not up to the level that I know I am able to accomplish. But going into a meet, I don't feel any additional pressure, it's just after it's done, and I'm like, "Oh, I could have done so much better."

DI: What secret talent do you have, or what special talent do you wish you had?

Jackson: I would like to fly — gymnastics would be a lot easier then. But that's not really an attainable goal.

DI: What is the biggest compliment someone has ever given you?

Jackson: One that kind of sticks out in my mind is Todd Strada (All-American gymnast who graduated from UI last year), after Winter Cup this year, sent me an e-mail. There wasn't one specific thing in there, but it was just the way he was talking about me. It showed how proud he was of me for winning winter nationals, because it was against some of the U.S.A. gymnastics team.

DI: Some people use the term student-athlete with a negative connotation. How do you react to this, especially because you carry a 3.8 grade point average and your team won the national academic championship? Do you feel this stereotype is directed more toward the major sports such as football and basketball?

with Don Jackson

Jackson: I don't think that the stereotype really applies to any of the sports, but most of the people on campus will apply that mostly to the major sports. When I hear something like that, it is easy for me to blow it off, because our team, until this last semester, had the highest team GPA (of any men's team).

DI: Who beat you?
 Jackson: The tennis team. It was not a good semester for anyone. Last year, we had the highest team GPA ever at the UI. Our team has a tradition of doing really well academically as well as athletically.

DI: Do you feel that your team's success is pushed to the back burner by the larger media-attracting sports? And how do you feel

Weaver resigns as UNI coach

Northern Iowa was 7-24 this season.

Associated Press

CEDAR FALLS — Sam Weaver, whose tenure was marked by frequent player turnover, has resigned after three losing seasons as men's basketball coach at Northern Iowa. Northern Iowa, 7-24 this season and last in the Missouri Valley Conference, was 30-57 under Weaver. His best record was 14-15 last season. Weaver resigned after meeting with Athletics Director Rick Hartzell on Monday night. The school announced his decision Tuesday. "Rick wanted to make a change, and I understood that," Weaver said. "It's hard to survive the kind of season we had, and three-straight losing seasons have been hard on everybody." "We had a good stay here. We had great support despite the fact we had some poor seasons," Hartzell said. Assistant coach Ron Smith would run the program until a new coach is hired. Assistants Tom Bardal and Johnny Brown will have their contracts honored through June

30. "Over the last three weeks, we tried to take a careful look at all aspects of the men's basketball program and then make a decision on which direction the program should go in terms of our coach," Hartzell said. "Sam determined it was in his best interest personally and professionally to resign his position." Weaver began the season thinking he had a chance to turn things around. But Robbie Sieverding, the leading scorer last season, went down with a knee injury in the first game, and the eight transfers Weaver brought in did not help as much as expected. One of them, Booker Warren, left the team for 10 games during the middle of the season. "It just came down to the fact that we didn't win enough games," Weaver said. "We had our reasons as to why, but at this point in time, the things we need to concentrate on are the things to the benefit of the program." Hartzell said he was concerned about a steady stream of players who left before completing their eligibility, some during the season. He cited declining attendance and the ability to raise money for a new arena as other concerns. "Community support for the program had waned significantly," Hartzell said. "We're trying to get an arena built, and it's impossible to do that without strong, widespread community support." Weaver had been an assistant at Iowa State before moving to Northern Iowa and spent three seasons as head coach at Alcorn State. He had one season remaining on his original four-year contract, which paid him a base salary of $105,000 annually. "I feel for coach Weaver," guard Andy Woodley said. "He's a great guy. On an individual level, he gave me an opportunity to live my dream. No other coach in the country wanted to give me the opportunity to play at the Division I level. That's something I'll never forget."

Paper photo requests anger fans and family

The Orlando Sentinel has requested pictures of Dale Earnhardt's autopsy.

By Mike Schneider
 Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — The Orlando Sentinel's request for the autopsy photos of Dale Earnhardt has brought a torrent of angry calls and e-mails from race fans and prompted an effort by lawmakers to prevent the release of such pictures in future cases. In the past two days, Sentinel Editor Tim Franklin has taken about 3,000 of the almost 7,000 e-mails and calls. "Some of the e-mails have been quite ugly, but I understand it's an emotional issue," Franklin said. "While we feel sorry for the Earnhardt family and what they're going through, there's a big issue here about NASCAR safety, and we're simply trying to provide more information about how Dale Earnhardt died." Franklin has said repeatedly the newspaper has no intention of publishing the photos but wants to view them so that a head trauma expert can make an independent determination of the cause of death. The Sentinel ran a series last month that showed three NASCAR drivers who died last Phoenix has traded its goalie and hired a new general manager.

By Joel Eskovitz

PHOENIX — Not even a month has passed in the Wayne Gretzky era, yet the Phoenix Coyotes have already fired and hired a general manager and traded the team's holdout goalie.

On Monday night, Phoenix sent goaltender Nikolai Khabibulin and defenseman Stan Neckar to the Tampa Bay Lightning for defenseman Paul Mara, forwards Mike Johnson and Ruslan Zainullin and a second-round draft choice.

The first major player move made on the watch of managing partner Gretzky may just have been a way to unload one of the two All-Star goalies in Phoenix.

But speculation also remains that this could be the beginning of a number of deals the team will make to reduce its payroll before next Tuesday's NHL trading deadline.

Coyotes GM Cliff Fletcher said Tuesday he will "absolutely" make additional moves but hedged as to whether they would occur before the deadline. He has spoken with several general managers concerning Phoenix captain Jeremy Roenick and leading scorer Keith Tkachuk, both of whom Fletcher believes will still be members of the Coyotes on Wednesday night.

"We're looking at it with an open mind," he said of the possibility of trading Tkachuk. Fletcher said the offer would have to be perfect to let go of a player who's on pace to score 40 goals for the fourth straight season.

"I don't know if that deal's there. If not, he's a very good hockey player and we're happy to have him."

Fletcher was more definitive about the immediate future of Roenick, who becomes an unrestricted free agent at the end of the season and has been negotiating with the Coyotes.

"You know nothing's going to happen before the trading deadline," Fletcher said from a GMs meeting in La Quinta, Calif. "There's no situation here where we would say: 'If you don't sign before the trading deadline, we're trading you.' That's not an issue."

Trading Roenick and Tkachuk has been mentioned as a way to offset a financial burden incurred by the new owners. Principal owner Steve Ellman said the Coyotes will lose $20 million by year's end while playing in an arena with many limited-view seats. He also went through a series of deadline extensions to secure the $90 million needed for last month's purchase.

Tkachuk commands $8.3 million this season, but Gretzky said last month he wants him to stay.

"I hope to build a team around Keith Tkachuk," he said. "I've said that from Day 1."

Gretzky also made a commitment last year to keep Khabibulin, the second-winningest goalie in franchise history. But with Khabibulin's high salary demands and the stellar play of Sean Burke — who has almost single-handedly kept Phoenix in the playoff hunt — the five-year starting netminder became expendable.

OSU investigating Cooper's expenses

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Ohio State University and the Franklin County prosecutor's office are investigating possible misspending on the travel expense reports of former Buckeyes' football coach John Cooper, officials said.

"I can confirm that we have been reviewing (Cooper's) more recent expense reports," Lee Tashjian, vice president of university relations, said Tuesday night.

Tashjian declined to specify the amount of money involved, but said the matter was turned over to Franklin County Prosecutor Ron O'Brien because it was more than $500.

"Under Ohio law, once an irregularity of the kind that surfaced here has been identified, no matter how large or small, we are required to bring it to the attention of the appropriate prosecutor," Tashjian said.

"In all fairness to coach Cooper, there might be an explanation for these irregularities. We certainly hope there are."

No charges have been filed.

Messages seeking comment were left Tuesday night at the homes of O'Brien and Cooper, and at the Cleveland office of Cooper's attorney, Neil Cornrich.

Belle saga moving toward conclusion

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — The Baltimore Orioles have been waiting patiently for Albert Belle to tell them when he can play.

At this point, however, it appears more likely that Belle will tell them he can't play anymore.

"We're much further down that road than we were two days ago, much farther down that road,"

Orioles manager Mike Hargrove said Tuesday after Belle missed a fifth straight exhibition game because of a degenerative right hip.

The injury has left the outfielder with a nasty limp and the feeling that his baseball playing days are done. Belle, who told USA Today on Monday that he needs a "miracle" to return, refused comment Tuesday.

There wasn't much to say, given that his condition has not changed.

"Nothing new, nothing different," Hargrove said. "I talked to Albert this morning and he said it's the same as it has been."

Jones may be out for several weeks

MIAMI — Long accustomed to playing short-handed, the Miami Heat are confident they can cope with the loss of guard Eddie Jones.

victory over Detroit and will likely be sidelined several weeks. Coach Pat Riley said he's optimistic Jones can return before the end of the regular season April 18.

"It's disappointing for us and for him," Riley said Tuesday. "But we will keep on."

Despite the season-long absence of All-Star center Alonzo Mourning with a kidney ailment, the Heat are 37-24 and just one game behind last year's pace, when they won their fourth consecutive Atlantic Division title.

Jones came to Miami last August in a nine-player trade with Charlotte that had Heat fans speculating about a possible NBA title. Mourning's ailment was discovered two months later and, with Jones now joining him on the bench, the Heat may struggle to hang onto their third-place spot in the Eastern Conference.

Pitino to meet with Louisville

■ The former Celtics coach could take over for Denny Crum.

By Chris Duncan
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Louisville Athletics Director Tom Jurich doesn't care if Rick Pitino coached at rival Kentucky or failed to turn around the Boston Celtics.

He's the only man Jurich wants to replace Hall of Fame coach Denny Crum.

Jurich and Pitino will meet in Florida this weekend about the job vacated when Crum retired on March 2.

"What I've tried to focus on is who would be the best fit, and who would do the best job and who I would enjoy working with," Jurich said at a news conference Tuesday. "I feel at this point, Coach Pitino is really who I want to focus on. I want to go down and spend as much time as I possibly can selling the amenities of this program."

"It's a program I feel is one of the top five jobs in America and I want the opportunity to tell him."

Pitino said earlier in the day on ESPN Radio that he was interested in the Louisville job. He took over a Kentucky program strapped with NCAA probation in 1989 and turned it into an NCAA champion seven years later. He left the program after the following season to run the Celtics but resigned in January after 3½ unsuccessful seasons.

Pitino's disappointing stint with the Celtics doesn't faze Jurich.

"He had a bump in the road in Boston, but I don't compare an NBA job to this job," Jurich said.

John Sommers II/Associated Press

Louisville Athletics Director Tom Jurich addresses members of the media on his intention to talk with Rick Pitino about becoming the next head coach at Louisville, Tuesday.

Pitino's ties to the Kentucky program are a bonus, Jurich said.

"He's a very well-known man in this state, a man of very high stature," Jurich said.

Crum coached Louisville to two NCAA championships in 30 seasons, but his program has declined in recent years. The Cardinals were twice hit with NCAA probation in the early 1990s and have gone just 62-61 the past four seasons.

"This program definitely needs a shot in the arm, and we're going to need somebody of the caliber of Coach Pitino to come in here," Jurich said.

Speculation about Pitino began almost immediately after Crum retired, setting off a flurry of wildly different Internet and broadcast reports.

Jurich said he called the news conference Tuesday to set the record straight.

"I wanted to squelch those rumors," Jurich said. "My twin daughters and his children are not enrolled in the same school; he hasn't bought a farm near here; he has not stayed at my house. The thing that surprised me most was that golf game we had three weeks ago at Valhalla when it was 42-below."

Jurich said he did not try to contact Pitino until Sunday, when he called Brent Rice, a Lexington attorney and a mutual friend. Jurich said Tuesday he and Pitino haven't spoken at all.

"I expressed to Brent that I would like the opportunity to sit down with Rick, and Rick has obliged. I want to make sure he and I are a good match," Jurich said.

Pitino said on the radio interview that he wants to coach again next season.

"Any job that's open I will sit down and listen to someone that had interest in me," Pitino said. "(The Louisville job) is something I would be interested in. How interested, I'm not sure at this point in time."

Pitino removed his name from consideration for the UNLV job on Sunday night. Earlier, he backed out as a candidate for the Rhode Island job.

Mazeroski elected into Hall

■ The second baseman retired from baseball in 1972.

By Fred Goodall
Associated Press

TAMPA, Fla. — Bill Mazeroski, the slick-fielding second baseman best remembered for hitting one of baseball's most famous home runs, has a new moniker: Hall of Famer.

The former Pittsburgh Pirates star was elected for induction Tuesday by the Veterans Committee, which also picked Negro leagues player Hilton Smith while bypassing Dick Williams, Gil Hodges, Dom DiMaggio and Marvin Miller for at least another year.

Mazeroski, who retired in 1972 after 17 major league seasons, came within one vote of being selected by the panel last winter. He was in the Pirates spring training clubhouse in Bradenton when he learned the news and made the 45-minute drive to Tampa for the announcement.

"I really don't know what to say. I never ever expected to be here," he said before slipping on a Hall of Fame jersey and cap.

"You dream of a lot of things. You want to be in the big leagues. You want to make the All-Star game. You want to be in a World Series. You want to do all those things. But you never dream of this. It's pretty exciting. I just hope I can live up to it."

The selection was announced by an ecstatic Joe Brown, a member of the Veterans Committee and a former Pirates general manager who called Mazeroski the finest second baseman he's ever seen.

Mazeroski, 64, was only .260 career hitter. But he was a seven-time All-Star and won eight Gold Gloves for the Pirates, taking part in a record 1,706 double plays at second base.

"I've seen second basemen all the way back to the early 30s, and defensively, I know of no who's his equal. I don't know anything they could do as well as he could do with the glove," Brown said.

"With the bat, he was underrated. He drove in a lot of big runs for our club. I don't think the quality of your performance is entirely based upon how much you hit. But when you hit, and Bill drove in a lot of big runs for us in late innings."

None of Mazeroski's hits were bigger than the ninth-inning homer at Forbes Field that won Game 7 of the 1960 World Series for the Pirates against the Yankees. While it made him an instant hero in Pittsburgh, he said there is a whole generation of New Yorkers who will never forgive him.

"I really don't think of it unless somebody talks about it, and hardly a day goes by when somebody doesn't talk about it," Mazeroski said. "The New York people are still mad at me ... There's a whole group of people who grew up going to the ballpark with their dads, and they haven't forgotten."

Induction ceremonies will be held Aug. 5 at Cooperstown, N.Y. Kirby Puckett and Dave Winfield were elected in January by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

The Vets were allowed to pick up to four new Hall of Famers, one from each of four categories: former major leaguers, Negro leaguers, 19th century players and personnel, plus a composite of managers, umpires, executives and Negro leaguers.

In 1992, Mazeroski's last year on the BBWAA ballot, he was listed on 182 of 430 ballots, 42.3 percent. A player needed 323 votes for election that year.

The results of Tuesday's balloting were not released. With the veterans panel down to 14 members because of Ted Williams' recent open-heart surgery, it took 11 votes — 75 percent — for election.

help from Jerica Watson — who immediately stepped up on defense for a big block. In the second half, Watson capitalized on a steal from Lindsey Meder for a fastbreak lay-up before scoring another basket from eight feet.

"I thought Jerica Watson played some critical minutes for us and did some great things, not only on the offensive end but defensively," Bluder said.

During the second half, starter Leah Magner left the game with an ankle sprain but came in and sank a clutch 3, putting Iowa ahead for good. Magner's injury put Mary Berdo back into the lineup shooting free throws.

During the tournament, Berdo didn't connect with any of her infamous long 3-pointers, but, Bluder said, it was only a matter of time.

"It's going to fall pretty soon and watch out when it does" she said. "It's just when you least expect it that Mary's going to step up and start nailing them for us."

Leah Magner helped save the day during the championship round Sunday. Up all night on March 3 rehabilitating her ankle, and advised to play sparse minutes if at all, Berdo started for Magner. When Lindsey Meder was hit with early foul trouble, Magner never missed a beat and entered the lineup.

"She's just a tough player," guard Cara Consuegra said. "She does so much for us, not just scoring wise, but for our whole mentality."

year suffered fractures at the base of the skull.

"He's the fourth driver in nine months to die," Franklin said. "This isn't a fight that we seek or asked for, but we believe that there are big issues at stake here as far as NASCAR safety. There's also a big principle at stake, access to state records."

Fans also have sent more than 12,000 e-mails to Gov. Jeb Bush and state lawmakers, asking them to intervene. Three Republican lawmakers are drafting legislation that would prohibit the release of any autopsy photographs. Such photos would be treated as private medical records.

Earnhardt was killed in a crash Feb. 18 at the Daytona 500. The race car driver's widow, Teresa, sued Volusia County four days later to stop release of the medical examiner's photos. The next day, an Orlando Sentinel reporter made a public-records request for the pictures.

Judge Joseph Will issued a temporary injunction against the photos' release, saying they have no "bona fide newsworthiness" and could cause the family "additional anguish and grief." A hearing is set for Thursday.

NASCAR fan Cheryl Mundy of Mocksville, N.C., wrote a letter to Bush warning him that there are "a lot more NASCAR fans in the Southeast than there are Republicans." Mundy also said she and several hundred other people plan to start a boycott of Sentinel advertisers.

"When Dale Earnhardt fans spread their wings in Florida, they ain't seen nothing yet," said Mundy, 51, who runs a contracting business.

Lynn Cummings of Orlando has canceled her subscription to the Sentinel, in part because of the newspaper's decision to seek the photos over the objections of Earnhardt's widow.

"It's sensationalizing Dale Earnhardt's death," she said.

about the lack of recognition — does it bother you?

Jackson: It does to a point; it is hard when the past two years we've been really successful, and we don't get as much attention. I don't know, it is just kind of shocking that we aren't being recognized as much as I think we deserve to.

DI: What is the happiest you have ever been?

Jackson: Two times that are easy to pick out are winning Big Tens my freshman year and nationals last year (each time Jackson won the pommel horse). I remember last year before I did my set in finals, I was coming out of the locker room, and as I walked past the home crowd, they just started cheering. That was just a great feeling.

DI: How about the saddest time?

Jackson: That is hard to pinpoint because a lot of times I get more upset or worried than sad. But, I graduated from Columbine High School and when I first heard about (the shooting that) happened there, my sister was in school, so before I found out what happened to her, I was worried and kind of freaked out by what was going on.

DI: What part of Colorado do you miss the most?

Jackson: I did love being in the mountains. Whenever

I go home, I love hiking and camping, just spending time up there.

DI: What do you project for yourself and your teammates for the rest of the season?

Jackson: Our team doesn't have a lot of difficulty on all the events, but as long as we can go out there and hit our routines, then we should be able to go out and compete with the top teams. Individually, I haven't done a routine this season that I am proud of yet. My goal is of course to go back and win another championship, but it is not going to be a walk in the park.

UConn tops No. 1 Notre Dame

STORRS, Conn. (AP) — Sue Bird hit a fadeaway jumper at the buzzer to lift No. 2 Connecticut to a 78-76 victory over No. 1 Notre Dame Tuesday night and give the Huskies their 10th Big East tournament championship.

Bird raced down court with the inbounds pass with 5.1 seconds left after Ruth Riley made the second of her two free throws after missing the first. Bird drove down the left side of the lane and fired the winner.

It was sweet redemption for the junior point guard, who lost her dribble out of bounds with 38 seconds and UConn up, 76-75. The Irish worked the ball inside to the 6-foot-5 Riley, who was fouled by Kelly Schumacher.

It was the eighth straight tournament title for the Huskies (28-2), who avenged a Jan. 15 loss to the Irish (28-2). Notre Dame has been to the title game four times since joining the conference six years ago and has lost each time to UConn.

Super Bowl champ Ravens sign QB Grbac

■ The former Chief agreed to a five-year, $30 million deal with Baltimore.

By Marty Niland
Associated Press

BALTIMORE — Free-agent quarterback Elvis Grbac agreed to terms of a five-year, $30 million contract with the Baltimore Ravens on Tuesday.

Grbac's agent, Jim Steiner, said the deal includes an $11 million signing bonus.

Grbac, 31, will come to Baltimore Thursday to sign the contract, take a physical, and meet the media, Ravens spokesman Bob Eller said.

Steiner said the Ravens' Super Bowl championship last season was the determining factor for Grbac.

"Winning is the only thing on his agenda — playing in a Super Bowl and winning a Super Bowl," Steiner said.

The Ravens were the only team negotiating with the former Kansas City quarterback after Cincinnati dropped out of the bidding Monday.

Grbac, who threw for 28 touchdowns and 4,169 yards with the Chiefs last season and earned a spot in the Pro Bowl, was one of two highly sought free-agent quarterbacks, along with Brad Johnson.

Johnson signed a five-year, $28 million deal with Tampa Bay Monday.

Grbac initiated the talks with Baltimore by visiting the Ravens on March 2 and meeting with coach Brian Billick.

"He felt real good," Steiner said. "He had a great meeting with Brian Billick."

Grbac's signing means the Ravens will not keep Trent Dilfer, who won his final 11 starts with Baltimore, including a 34-7 Super Bowl victory over the New York Giants.

"I think he will give us that punch we need offensively to get back to the Super Bowl," Billick told WBAL-TV.

Dilfer could sign with the Bengals, who would sign with Baltimore castoff Scott Mitchell as their starting quarterback last season.

Cincinnati indicated that Dilfer is among its choices for a quarterback to challenge Akili Smith. The others are Gus Frerotte and Jon Kitna.
