Temper flare in abortion protest

A real nighthawk of the diner

Concern of UI lawn care matches

From heated clashes over abortion to unifying a strong progressive voice, throngs of UI students spun activist Michael Moore's advice into action Thursday, seeking to prove that just a few people can start a large movement.

A real nighthawk of the diner

With the removal of the front row of seating Thursday evening, the Diner Haunted House, a 2-line restaurant on the University of Iowa campus for the past 24 years, will be closed for the rest of the semester.

UI Powwow will highlight a ‘vibrant, unique culture’

The powwow will showcase arts, crafts, dance and food.

By Peter Rathjen
The Daily Iowan

The blend of educational, cultural and competitive aspects that is the 12th annual UI Powwow is expected to draw close to 10,000 spectators to Carver-Hawkeye Arena over the course of this weekend.

The event will begin with the grand entrance today at 7 p.m., with doors opening at 5 p.m. The powwow will run through today and end on April 6.

The powwow, which takes its name from the Omaha Indian Tribe, is primarily a social gathering in which people can visit with one another and catch up with friends and family. People can showcase arts, crafts, food and dance in a friendly and communal atmosphere, according to Verjena Hicks, the president of the American Indian Student Association.

"The powwow will feature performances from various arts, crafts vendors from throughout the state and country. Iowa Tribe, Floyds and the American Indian dance competition will also be featured. "We want to educate people about our culture," Hicks said.

"We want to share the best of our culture and make everyone feel welcome, Hicks said. "It's an excellent opportunity for people to learn what we are all about, and after all, powwow "is fun.""

The powwow is a student-organized and operated event — the largest of its kind put on by such a small contingent of students, she said. The American Indian Native Student Program created a class called the Powwow Practicum, which focused on teaching students how to put on a powwow.

"It's important for us to emphasize the educational aspect of powwows," Hicks said. "We don't want people to think that American Indians get killed off or that we assimilate." Hicks said. "We are around, and we have a vibrant and unique culture."

The event has increased in popularity in recent years, Hicks said. Originally, the powwow was held in the UI Field House; it moved to Carver-Hawkeye about four years ago. This year, the American Indian Native Student Program is expecting more than 300 dancers and 10 drum groups for the festival.

"I am excited about the event," said UI senator Ben Jeannesson. "Being one of the first Native American students, I have some experience with powwows, and I think it is a strong cultural tie to all Native American events. I'm not too much in touch with my Native American roots, but I'm excited at the opportunity to find out just how deep they run.

"I support this powwow," he added.
U.S., China talk behind the Scenes

President Bush offers personal regrets for the spy-plane incident as ties gain steam.

By Jonathan Landman

WASHINGTON — The U.S. and China on Tuesday continued their strained relationship with their top diplomats meeting behind closed doors to talk about the spy-plane incident, the U.S. detention of Chinese sailors, and other issues.

The meeting, held here at the State Department, was part of a broader diplomatic effort to mend ties between the two countries, which have been strained by the U.S. detention of 21 Chinese sailors and the shootdown of a Chinese spy plane by the U.S. Navy in March.

The two sides have been working to establish a new level of communication, and the meeting was part of that effort.

China has been critical of the U.S. in recent weeks, but has also been eager to improve relations.

In a statement released after the meeting, the Chinese Foreign Ministry said it was "pleased" with the progress made, but added that there is still "room for improvement."
Hawaii teachers, profs walk out

Hawaii teachers and professors walked off the job Thursday in a back-to-back to the president's tax reduction.

By Al McQueen, Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Still struggling to pass tax cuts for the wealthy, President Bush is preparing to order a partial shutdown of the federal government.

Bush plans to begin Friday after other efforts toavin tax cuts since the Bush administration, Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said, has failed. The administration is proposing a $1.3 trillion tax cut, the largest in history, to raise $1 trillion for the next fiscal year.

The move comes after a day of tough negotiations between congressional leaders and Treasury Secretary Paul O'Neill.

"We've got to go to conference and work above the 60-vote level," Lott told reporters, referring to the Senate's Republican leadership.

The floor of the House divided chamber, senators remained working toward a $1.3 trillion bill.

For Bush's proposals for cutting the deficit, a grandstanding of sorts, negotiations have been anathema, with the White House often using the vote to advance their tax cut.

Administration officials have said the president is ready to go the full distance, but some conservative Republicans have said they will support the measure.

If the legislation passes, it will be the largest tax cut in history, raising $1 trillion for the next fiscal year.

In remarks to a gathering of students, Bush said, "We've made it clear — we will not settle for anything less than an across-the-board tax cut for all Americans and all families.

"In Georgia, Oldham was the target of radio ads by the state assaulting the state's top taxpayer, who plans to remain in the tax cut.

"I've been propositioned by a few other senators, but none of them have been able to offer me a deal," Oldham said.

"Three hours later, the House-Senate conference version of legislation passed, with House-Senate members trying to lure several senators to their side.

In a symbolic move earlier this week, the Student Judicial Court of the University of Wisconsin, Madison, convened to hear the Wisconsin Student Elections Board. Although the Elections Board had no duty to perform, this measure is important because it sent a message that the Judicial Court, which has stood for free speech, unencumbered speech, and free expression, has the power to do so.

During the USG campaign, the UW-Eau Claire Student Senatekicked off the first campaign season with a student election. A record number of voters turned out to vote in this year’s election, according to Wisconsin State Journal. With this policy because my motives for this are highly uninteresting to me.

The Student Elections Board is facing concerns about the integrity of its election process. It is under investigation for alleged violations of the student elections code. The investigation was initiated by the student body of this university, which has been conducting an inquiry into the matter.

In this bewildering court system, we consider it China. The Chinese government has made an emergency landing at a small airport into an accident. This time, the court decided that it was time to break up the group.

To complete the process of appealing this fine, the Elections Board must appeal to the court. All campaign materials must be approved by it and only proceed if the court approves them.

Students hold truth hostage

Last Sunday, after colliding with a Chinese fighter jet, a U.S. Navy EP-3 aircraft belonging to the United States Navy, the aircraft crashed in the Yellow Sea. The Chinese government has made an emergency landing at a small airport.

This incident has raised questions about the responsibility of the United States for the incident and the role of the Chinese government in the incident. The U.S. government has claimed that the United States was not at fault, while the Chinese government has claimed that the United States was responsible.

China Demands an Apology from the U.S.

Holding truth hostage

In this bewildering display of magnanimity, all China has formally moved to turn a small accident into an international incident.

Second, the Chinese government is blaming the accident entirely on the United States. All of the Chinese officials have denied any full apology from the United States. Their claim is that the U.S. plane veered suddenly into the Chinese jet. This has a high likelihood of being the true reason for the accident between the two planes. If this is the case, the United States is flying a highly maneuverable fighter, while the Americans are flying a huge, non-maneuverable vehicle. Therefore, no matter what happened, if the Chinese planes were following at a safe distance, they should have been able to avoid a collision. The evidence shows that if the Chinese pilot got too close, he would be incompetent. If anything, the U.S. government should be demanding an apology.

Finally, China’s treatment of the U.S. crew is deplorable. We are not at war, yet the Chinese government refuses to release the crew members. The only thing they broke was landing without a Chinese pilot. The U.S. government should be demanding that they beapologetic. The Chinese government should be demanding that the United States be apologetic.

Reveling in the F-word

As we tried to slog through our evening work on Wednesday evening, some other female temps and I considered the question: Are we superstars?

Let me start by saying that I treasure our language and all its inventions. So when I turned to the F word on Wednesday to see that Thelma Kamin had coined “superstars” as a new term for socially liberal women, I knew I had to read more. For instance, what makes a superstar?

In the first chapter of Kamin’s book Why We Young Women Remake the Sexual Revolution, she expounds that superstars are united by one common trait: the expectation of and insistence on conducting their sex lives on their own terms and with a new degree of openness.

Not only do young women want to have fun, but have fun at six ways. This comes when they were 30, they expected to do it together. Otherwise, they would be 24 to 35. Feminism means that the American public is becoming used to the idea of conducting their sex lives on their own terms and with a new degree of openness.

UI professors break the mold of traditional art in this spring's faculty exhibit.

Photo: Computer graphics and digitally created photographs to moyhically fill the void. So far, only 30,000 copies of the new U.S. Museum of Art are on the market, and no one knows how it will be received. The show will open at 7:00 p.m. by the UI Museum of Art and will be online in the United States. The spring art exhibition will be part of the permanent collection of the Museum of Art, and Vicki Brandt, the coordinator for the arts of Africa, America, and the Americas, said that in 1997, the last time she saw the exhibition, there were some topics that she would like to see changed. This year, the exhibit will be hosted by the UI Museum of Art and will be available online.

Abortion protest turns confrontational

PROTEST

Students on the Iowa University campus were engaged in a powerful demonstration Friday to attract passersby who may have been unaware of the issues at hand. The demonstration was to support women's rights and to oppose the actions of those who support the overturning of Roe v. Wade.

"We want to reach the people who may not be aware of the issues," said one student organizer. "We feel that it's important to have a strong presence on campus to let people know what we're fighting for.

The demonstration began at 11 a.m. outside the Jessup Hall with a number of speakers addressing the crowd. The speakers included UI students, members of the Iowa City community, and representatives from local women's rights organizations.

The speakers emphasized the importance of reproductive rights and the need for continued support for women's health care. They also highlighted the history of the abortion rights movement and the role of the Iowa University community in advocating for women's rights.

After the speeches, the crowd marched to the University Hospital, where they gathered in front of the main entrance. The demonstrators held signs and chanted slogans, drawing attention from passersby. The crowd was estimated to be in the hundreds, with students, faculty, and community members all participating.

Despite the intensity of the demonstration, there were no arrests or incidents reported. The demonstration ended around 1 p.m., with the participants dispersing peacefully.

The Iowa University community has a long history of supporting women's rights and advocating for social justice issues. The University has a strong tradition of student activism, and the demonstration on Friday was a testament to the power of collective action.

UI plot course changes

GROUPS

Students in various groups on campus have called for changes in student organization policies. The groups are concerned about the impact of recent changes on student freedom of expression.

"We feel that the recent changes limit our ability to organize and participate in events," said a representative from the Iowa University Progressive Coalition.

The groups are calling for a return to policies that allow for a greater degree of autonomy and decision-making within student organizations.

The groups also expressed concern about the potential for increased surveillance and restrictions on student activities.

Overall, the groups are committed to advocating for the rights of all students on campus and to ensuring that the University continues to be a place of free expression and open dialogue.
Hawks fail to qualify for NCAAs

By Jeremy Shapiro

The Iowa men's basketball team placed fifth at the NCAA qualifier.

In a 72-66 loss to Connecticut on Saturday, Iowa ended the season with a 10-18 record and a 7-11 Big Ten Conference mark. The Hawkeyes were unable to advance to the NCAA Tournament for the first time since 2001.

Iowa, which entered the tournament as the No. 12 seed, was lead by guard Mike Davis, who scored 21 points. Forward Justin Gutierrez added 19 points, while guard D.J. Johnson contributed 12.

The Hawkeyes were unable to overcome Connecticut's superior shooting, as the Huskies shot 56% from the field compared to Iowa's 44%. Iowa also struggled from three-point range, making just 3 of 16 attempts.

Iowa poised to make history

By Jeremy Shapiro

Iowa will get its chance to be the first school in the history of the NCAA to make the NCAA Men's Championship.

NCAA President Dr. Ernie Bower announced on Tuesday that Iowa will host the NCAA Men's Championship, which will be held on March 15-17. The event will feature 64 teams, and the winners of the event will earn a trip to the Final Four.

Iowa head coach Fran McCaffery said he was excited about the opportunity to host the NCAA Men's Championship.

According to his father, Joe, the top heavyweight in the nation will attend Iowa.

By Mark Firestone

After a year of putting the pieces together to make the move to Iowa a reality, Joe Mocco's decision to attend Iowa will be a big one for the upperclassman from Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Mocco, who is the current NCAA Division I champion at 285 pounds, will attend Iowa and will immediately become eligible to compete.

Mocco, who has been one of the best heavyweight wrestlers in the country the past few years, said he was excited about the opportunity to compete for Iowa.

Woods' run at history off to faltering start

Chris DiMarco takes the first-round lead with a 65.

By Paul Reimbrodt

Chris DiMarco drove his ball to within a foot of the green on the first hole, and then he made a birdie on the first hole to start his round.

DiMarco, who is currently ranked No. 16 in the world, made six birdies and one bogey on the day, and he finished with a 65, which is one stroke better than Tiger Woods.

Woods, who is currently ranked No. 1 in the world, made five birdies and one bogey on the day, and he finished with a 66.

The two players are currently tied for the lead, and they will be playing in the final group on Sunday.
Iowa City, Iowa
Florida, not $21 ages for six home games at its new week at area courses, and we've played this course before.

The event was the Hawkeye's men's and women's tennis season until the Big Ten season.

The Hawkeyes faced off in strong singles play as they managed to split the weekend's two round-robin matches on April 4.

Last weekend, the Hawkeyes Captains and co-captains van der Westhuizen and Schroeder were named for their efforts.

The senior is ranked second in the Midwest this season, and we've been watching some good scores. If we play well, I think we can win this tournament.
Iowa faces off with Spartans and Illini

Sophomore center Kasey Noteware enters the Iowa women's tennis team's matches against Ohio State and Northern Iowa this weekend with a greater sense of optimism. The Hawkeyes' dual meets against the Buckeyes and Panthers are two of four on the Hawkeyes' schedule this weekend.

"I think both matches are winnable," Noteware said. "But I think we're definitely in a dogfight with them."

The 20-2 Hawkeyes will host two matches this weekend. First, Iowa will play host to Ohio State at 12 p.m. on Saturday. The Buckeyes are 7-2-1 this season under head coach Melissa Scholl.

"Ohio State is a great team," Noteware said. "And their doubles is very solid. But we're going to have to play our best doubles to win that match." The Buckeyes feature a 14-4 record in doubles matches this season.

"For the team to win, we need to have a good first doubles match," Noteware said. "If we can win that match, we've already won the match." Iowa is 19-1 in doubles matches this season.

Iowa will spend the afternoon indoors because of inclement weather conditions against Northern Iowa. The dual meets against the Panthers is scheduled for 4 p.m. on Saturday.

"I don't think we can play outside because of the weather," Noteware said. "But we were indoors already this week."

Iowa women's tennis coaches will have an opportunity to observe the Hawkeyes as they continue to make improvements this season.

"I think we're definitely in a dogfight with Northern Iowa," Noteware said. "But I think we're definitely in a dogfight with them."

Iowa will face No. 21 Wisconsin, which is 3-1 in the conference, on Sunday.

"If we can win both matches this weekend, we'll take a 2-0 record into conference play," Noteware said.

Iowa will take part in the Big Ten women's tennis tournament in East Lansing, Mich., on April 18 and April 19 meeting with Michigan and Michigan State. Both matches are slated to start at noon and will take place at the Klotz Tennis Center, weather permitting.

"If the match is unplayable outdoors because of inclement weather, the matches will move to the CI Recreation Building," Noteware said. "We need outside weather yesterday, and we'd like to play outside this weekend." The Hawkeyes will not travel to East Lansing because of inclement weather conditions.

"I think both matches are winnable," Noteware said. "But I think we're definitely in a dogfight with them." The Hawkeyes feature an 18-3 record this season.

BOSTON — Pedro Martinez clipped off his cell phone and walked out of the dugout. When he reached the dugout, he learned that he had won his 20th consecutive start, a major league record for pitchers. Martinez, 39, lifted the phone to his ear and turned it off.

Martinez had pitched a 3-0 no-hitter against the Minnesota Twins on Wednesday night in his 20th consecutive start. He had allowed no runs and no hits in 7 2/3 innings and improved to 3-0 on the trip with successive victories over the Rangers and the Mariners. The win brought Martinez's record to 20-1, tying him with Randy Johnson for the major league lead in wins.

Martinez, who had not allowed a hit in his last 21 innings, was dominant from the start. He struck out 11 batters and walked none, allowing only two hits and one walk. Martinez retired the first 28 batters he faced, striking out 11 of the first 12 batters he faced. He allowed only two hits, a double by Nick Punto in the third inning and a single by Joe Mauer in the fourth.

Martinez, who has been a mainstay in the Red Sox rotation since 2001, had allowed only two hits in his last 21 innings, striking out 34 batters. He had allowed only five hits in his last 25 innings, striking out 44 batters.

Horoscopes can be a helpful tool for understanding our personal lives. They can help us make sense of the events that are happening in our lives, and can give us guidance about how to navigate through them. However, it is important to remember that horoscopes are not a substitute for professional advice and should not be used as the sole basis for making important decisions.
