State Republicans target work-study

The program, which benefits 2,000 students, stands to lose almost one-third of its funding.

By Andrew Bixby
The Daily Iowan

A proposal by Republican state legislators to completely eliminate state funding for the work-study program would have adverse effects on hundreds of UI students, UI

President Mary Sue Coleman said Thursday. Under the proposal, the UI would lose $600,000 in state funds that go toward work-study for the next academic year. In all, the state's public universities would lose

$2.7 million. Almost 600 UI students are supported by state funds in the current program, a form of need-based financial aid. The program pays for 65 percent of the workers' wages, which can be used at the student's discretion. In addition, money earned from the program does not affect a student's ability to receive future need-based financial aid.

GOP irks regents with micromanaged cuts

State legislators are recommending specific budget cuts in the state's public universities.

By Andrew Bixby
The Daily Iowan

Members of the board that governs the state's three universities say they're annoyed that Republican state legislators are telling them how to make budget cuts.

Gov. Tom Vilsack originally recommended an $18.8 million cut in the UI's general budget but allowed the university to make its own decisions on reducing funds.

The GOP suggested $15.3 million in cuts to the General Education Fund but took it upon itself to propose individual cuts in programs. For instance, Republicans want to cut $2 million from the UI Hospitals and Clinics, eliminate the $285,000 Agriculture Safety and Health Program, and cut funds from approximately 10 other programs.

Late-night radio DJs lead a life of banter and tunes, lead-ins and drop segues.

By Jesse Elliott
The Daily Iowan

The reds are the good stuff. Blues are halfway good, but not quite good enough to be red. Greens are the old stuff, past orange, last year and earlier. Within greens there are yellows and purples, purples are the greens that don't get played enough, and yellows have been played too often.

Somewhere in the middle of this color-coded musical mess, Zach Hamilton and Cory Ingle man the mixing board at KRUI from 4 a.m. until sunrise every Tuesday morning, carefully — and at times not so carefully — crafting their three-hour show for the three guys in a dorm room who they are positive listen religiously.

The life of a late-night radio DJ is a life of musical and verbal banter, on and off the air. For Ingle and Hamilton, who work at the student-run KRUI, 89.7 FM, it is a life of lingo and a labor of love.

Police on lookout for alleged sex offender

Authorities are searching for a "dangerous" Coralville man who has been seen on the UI campus.

By Tony Robinson
The Daily Iowan

An alleged sex offender accused of several sex-related crimes in Iowa City and Coralville in the past week has local law-enforcement agencies on a manhunt.

UI Public Safety has a warrant out for the arrest of Antonio Terrell Foster, 29, of Coralville for assault causing injury in connection with an alleged incident at the UI Field House on April 10. Coralville police want him for an April 12 incident in which he allegedly sexually assaulted a housekeeper at Motel 6, 810 First Ave., Coralville.

Foster

All residence hall and Field House staff have been notified about Foster, who seems to be a regular in the area, said Chuck Green, the university's assistant vice president for Public Safety. Coralville police say they've received a report that Foster was seen with a knife taped to his leg under his clothes, so he is considered dangerous, Green said.

Several reports of attempted sexual assaults have been filed in connection with alleged incidents at the UI Field House recently, all yielding similar descriptions of a black male, he said.

"We previously had a problem with a 'peeker' in the ladies' rest room of the UI Field House, and now that we

Students get the skinny on diet pills

Although not approved by the FDA, dietary supplements are becoming increasingly popular.

By Sara Faiwell
The Daily Iowan

After running from Chicago's Shedd Aquarium to get to his car last summer, a UI freshman realized he couldn't stop panting from the three minutes of exercise.

That's when 18-year-old John Palenske knew he had to lose weight.

To combat his weight problem, he followed a trend and started taking a dietary supplement called Xenadrine.

"I want to lose weight to be healthy," he said.

While students say they are pleased with results, experts say they are becoming increasingly worried about diet pills.

Although the sales show that the pills are more popular than ever, experts say people need to know that they are not all safe, especially because they haven't been approved by the Food and Drug Administration.

By law, the companies that manufacture the pills are responsible for making sure the products are safe and are tested before put onto the market. The individual companies are not required to record or investigate any reports of injuries or illnesses caused by their product to the FDA.

A recent study by the Department of Health and Human Services inspector general's office urges manufacturers to report any negative health effects caused by their products to the FDA. The FDA now only relies on voluntary reports.

"Happy with results"
Palenske didn't step on a scale until approximately a week ago. That's when he discovered he had lost 40 pounds and went down two notches on his belt.

"I am happy with these results, but I know it's terrible for you," he said. "This pill just basically makes it easy for you to starve yourself because it makes you feel so stuffed all the time."

Palenske began the school year by working out regularly, hoping to lose some weight. When that plan didn't work, he decided approximately two months ago to start on the pills.

"The first week I couldn't even eat at all," he said. "It totally does suppress your appetite."

Retailer's perspective
Brandon Schrock, a GNC sales associate, said Xenadrine is a pill that basically speeds up a person's metabolism, providing energy to lose weight.

Earth Day anniversary nears

Earth Day activities include tree planting, prairie restoration and litter parades.

By Nick Narigon
The Daily Iowan

This year Iowa City residents are pulling out the clippers and shovels in preparation for the 32nd celebration of Earth Day.

This year's events span the whole weekend, said UI Student Government President Nick Klenske, because the annual celebration, which has been held on April 22 since 1970, needs to be celebrated for more than one day. The UISG and UI administration are dedicated to environmental issues affecting the university, he said.

A campus-wide recycling project should be in the supplemental stage by next year, Klenske said, and he is working with Goodwill to have a van available on campus on move-out day so students can donate products to charity instead of throwing them away.

"It's important to show what the UI and UISG are doing," he said. "Individual students should take the time to help the environment."

The UI Environmental Coalition plans to hold the Second Annual Kids Fest at College Green Park today from 9:30-11:30 a.m., Klenske said. Approximately 50 students from Willowwind School will attend the event, which is expected to include a litter parade, in which the kids march through the park collecting trash.

Saturday morning, the Johnson County Conservation Board has a slate of environmental activities planned at F.W. Kent Park, three miles west of Tiffin on Highway 6, said Kristen Goldsmith, a naturalist with the board.

At 9 a.m., volunteers will meet at the Conservation Education Center patio to plant a mix of 37 trees and shrubs as part of the Million More by 2004 Grant Program. At 10 a.m., participants will meet at the operations building to restore the Valley View West Prairie. People interested in these volunteer opportunities are required to pre-register by contacting the conservation board office at 319-645-2315.

"We want people to become more involved in environmental activities," Goldsmith said.

An Earth Day celebration party is scheduled for Saturday from 7 p.m. to midnight at Serendipity Lifestyle Emporium, 702 S. Gilbert St., hosted by the Johnson County Green Party and the UI Campus Greens. The event will feature several speak-

Council mulls renewing police board

Most city councilors seem to believe that the board should continue.

By Mike McWilliams
The Daily Iowan

A majority of the Iowa City City Councilors expressed interest in renewing the Police Citizens Review Board Thursday.

The board, formed as a watchdog on police conduct after an Iowa City officer fatally shot artist Eric Shaw in 1996, would be disbanded on Aug. 1 unless the council votes to continue its existence.

During its existence, the board has reviewed several complaints of police misconduct and made recommendations to city officials. It costs local taxpayers roughly $50,000 a year to fund.

The council said it will continue to discuss the future of the board and what its role should be at upcoming work sessions. The board reviews allegations of police misconduct and helps the city and community evaluate police conduct.

Councilor Ross Wilburn said the board provides him with some comfort.

"It just seems important to me to have some type of vehicle in place that's ready to go and has some type of response, reaction and education available," he said.

Mayor Ernie Lehman said the board serves a valuable function for the community but he does not think the board is the appropriate organization to assess community standards for the police.

"I think the [board] should be available to the council, the city manager or the police chief to perform tasks when requested to do them," he said.

Other than that, Lehman said, the board should hear complaints from citizens. When complaints demonstrate that there are flaws in the system, the board should look at flaws and make recommendations to the council.

"The big question is, Will the [board] continue? I feel the answer is yes," Lehman said.

Councilor Steven Kanner said the board should interact more with the community to determine what issues need to be addressed and subsequently make recommendations to the council.

"I would like to get input from a stronger, more assertive review board that makes recommendations about issues affecting the community," he said.

Councilor Dee Vanderhoef said she isn't sure whether she wants the board to continue. She would like to see ad hoc committees take the duties of some standing boards, such as the police board.

"I have a problem personally with the cost of doing business, which conservatively I would say averages out to $50,000 per year," she said. "The input that I get from a number of people in the community is that it's expensive."

Board Chairman John Watson said it should continue because it encourages citizen confidence in the police department and improves performance of the police department. He also praised its role as an independent review of the department's policies and practices.

"We're not claiming that because we did this or we did that, improvement has taken place," he said. "But I think that we've existed has encouraged the department to do a better job of self-monitoring its conduct."

ers discussing a variety of environmental issues, including former City Councilor Jim Throgmorton, said Meg White, the fund-raising coordinator for the county Green Party. White herself will speak about loggers in South Africa who hunt chimpanzees and gorillas and have the potential to wipe out the species within 50 years.

Musical groups and two DJs are scheduled to play during the celebration, she said, and an auction will be held, including gift certificates to holistic health providers and local restaurants. The proceeds will be utilized to fund a campaign for a Green Party candidate in the 2002 gubernatorial election, White said.

At 1 p.m. on April 22, UI Professor Doug Jones and volunteers will be at the Finkbine Prairie Restoration to clear away evasive plants. A massive amount — 99.9 percent — of Iowa's prairie has been replaced by corn and beans, Jones said.

"The tall-grass ecosystem of Iowa is more thoroughly destroyed than the rain forest or the Pacific redwoods," he said.

The meeting place for the restoration will be at the midway point of the bicycle trail between Hawkins Drive and Mormon Trek Boulevard.

"It is fun to get out there and get in touch with nature," he said.

STATE BRIEF

Most Democrats support redistricting; GOP leery

DES MOINES (AP) — Democratic legislative leaders said a majority of their members back a proposed new map of legislative and congressional districts, but majority Republicans were increasingly leery.

"At first blush, I always think it gives the minority party an advantage," said Senate Majority Leader Stewart Iverson, R-Dows.

Iverson and House Majority Leader Chris Rants, R-Sioux City, both argued that no final decision has been made on what to do with the proposed new map, but there were clear signs it was in deep trouble.

"It's on life support," said Rep. Janet Metcalf, R-Urbandale, who heads the House State Government Committee which must deal with the proposal.

Iverson has argued that population variations in the map are greater than one approved 10 years ago, and many Republicans worry that rural interests lose clout because the western third of the state would be lumped together in one giant district.

While legislative leaders have maintained official neutrality during public hearings held this week, the state's Republican Party has not. Party officials have been recruiting loyalists to attend the public hearings, providing them with "talking points" of what's wrong with the map.

Coleman sets guides for cuts

The president's principles stress layoffs would only be used if necessary.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

UI President Mary Sue Coleman released her guidelines for cutting expenses at the university Thursday evening, leaving the door open for possible layoffs and the deferral of campus improvements.

In an e-mail sent to UI students, faculty and staff, Coleman provided a framework for how the university plans to cope with a 6 percent — $18.8 million — budget cut as proposed by Gov. Tom Vilsack on March 28. Coleman's guideline say, in part, "Layoffs/furloughs will only be implemented to the degree necessary," and the UI's focus is to preserve and support "the most vital missions of the university."

"They're guidelines, general principles," said David Skorton, the interim vice president for university relations. "If the cuts would end up being more severe, then we very well may have to rethink the principles."

In addition to Vilsack's proposed cuts, Republican legislative leaders have proposed cutting the $285,000 Agriculture Health and Safety program, and they are considering reducing the state employees' salary budget from $91 million to $55 million. As a result, the university could potentially face a cut of approximately $9 million in salary funding. The cuts would go into effect for fiscal year 2002, which will begin on July 1.

"We're going to have to make some tough choices," Coleman said. "The area we're very concerned about is the salary bill. If we don't get the salary money, our situation will be much, much worse."

The UI president made the first cut in mid-March, suspending the search for a full-time vice president for university relations. She declined to say whether a reduction in salary funding would result in layoffs, the suspension of raises or both.

Individual department heads are currently finding ways to cut their expenses in light of the largest budget cut the university has seen in years, said Doug True, the university's vice president for finance. Definite actions will be taken once Vilsack has approved a state budget, Coleman said.

The university must present its budget to the state of Iowa Board of Regents in mid-May, June and July.

Approximately 61 percent of the UI General Education Fund is composed of state appropriations, True said. Tuition accounts for 30 percent of the $414 million fund, which could lose $15.3 million in state funding if GOP legislative leaders have their way.

The state of Iowa Board of Regents has already set tuition for fiscal year 2002. Coleman said it is too early to determine how the proposed budget cuts could affect tuition, which increased by 7.2 percent from 2000 to 2001.

"I don't think we can say anything about (tuition) right now," she said. "I don't know. I just don't know."

Local activists head to D.C. to back abortion rights march

A number of UI students go east to rally against stifling a woman's right to choose.

By Pam Dewey
The Daily Iowan

In an effort to make a return to activism, a local abortion-rights group is scheduled to leave Saturday and join the Emergency Action for Women's Lives march that will be held in Washington, D.C., the following day.

The group, the Women's Rights Coalition, is a local ad-hoc organization of the National Organization for Women, the primary sponsor of the march. The coalition, which plans to take a bus to Washington, has been trying to raise money for people who can't afford the trip. Currently, 35 out of 43 seats are filled.

The march will kick off a four-year campaign by NOW and more than 100 other organizational and congressional sponsors; it comes on the heels of two weeks of state lobbying, according to the NOW Web site. The event is slated to begin in Upper Senate Park at 11 a.m.

Margaret Loose, an organizer and member of the International Socialist Organization, said that although she is not sure of the march's exact route, she knows the group will pass the Supreme Court building.

"With the Bush administration committed to limiting reproductive rights and rumors that U.S. Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor may retire at the end of this term, the National Organization for Women has declared a state of emergency," wrote NOW President Patricia Ireland on the group's Web site. "Reproductive-rights supporters from across the country will converge in Washington, D.C., on April 22 for the Emergency Action for Women's Lives, targeting the Senate to prevent the packing of the Supreme Court with anti-abortion-rights justices."

UI graduate student Douglas Anderson, who will attend the march, thinks recent legislation, such as parental-consent laws, waiting periods and partial-birth-abortion bans, demonstrate why the march is so vital to maintaining abortion rights.

"The right to an abortion is really essential to women's equality," he said. "And the right is being chipped away."

The Bush administration doesn't have a mandate to abolish these rights because most Americans support the right to choose, Anderson said.

Mitchell Day, a UI junior and member of the International Socialist Organization, said he attended a protest against Bush's inauguration in Washington in January and noted that the administration has caused a resurgence in activism.

"I see (this rally and similar events) as a new surge of activism, an awakening of the American public," he said.

UI sophomore Valerie Wild, who will attend the march,

I see (this rally and similar events) as a new surge of activism, an awakening of the American public.

— Mitchell Day,
UI junior

said she has never participated in anything like this before, but after hearing about the march and bus trip in a women's studies class, she decided to go.

"I thought it sounded like a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity," she said. "I think in cases like this, we can't count on legislation."

Wild said she encourages any supporters who can't attend the trip to get out and do some local protesting.

"Power in numbers is the only way to get our voices heard," she said.

NATION BRIEF

Teen indicted in Dartmouth-professor killings

HAVERHILL, N.H. (AP) — One of two Vermont teen-agers accused of stabbing two Dartmouth College professors to death was indicted Thursday on first-degree murder charges.

A grand jury charged Robert Tulloch, 17, with two counts of murder in the Jan. 27 deaths of Half and Susanne Zantop in their Hanover home. An arraignment date was not immediately set.

Prosecutors are trying to certify his co-defendant, James Parker, 16, as an adult before seeking an indictment against him.

"In my experience, it could be a number of months before that takes place," prosecutor Kelly Ayotte said.

Investigators said they were unsure of a motive for the killings or a possible connection between the German-born professors and the Chelsea, Vt., teens.

Court documents say police found two military-style knives in Tulloch's bedroom with Susanne Zantop's blood on them. They say Parker bought similar knives on the Internet several weeks before the murders, a purchase that led investigators to fingerprint the teens.

Bloody footprints found at the scene also link Tulloch to the crime, according to the documents. A fingerprint found on a knife sheath left at the scene matched Parker's, the documents say.

Prosecutors are seeking blood and handwriting samples from Tulloch to match with evidence found at the scene and in his home.

Tulloch and Parker left home in the days after the murders, telling friends they were going rock-climbing in Colorado. They turned back because Tulloch had a gash on his knee that became infected. He said he injured himself while walking through woods.

THE FREE-TRADE DEBATE CONTINUES, UNDERCOVER ...

Board rooms and backrooms

Remember NAFTA? It's making its way back into the limelight, and it's pregnant with a bigger, badder version of American free trade.

In the battles a few years ago over NAFTA, Democrats and Republicans bickered seemingly forever over the positives and negatives of a tariff-free North America, while labor and environmental advocates decried the agreement's anti-democratic provisions. After the dust settled, labor's weakened ability to flex its once-mighty muscles was all too apparent.

However, after the pro-democracy demonstrations that rocked Seattle, D.C. and Prague, the progressive left seemed to experience a rebirth. One might think that labor and environmental supporters would be riding this wave of anti-globalization sentiment, staging protests across Canada and the United States against today's meetings designed to establish NAFTA's baby, the Free Trade Area of the Americas.

The hidden leaders of the trade regimes ... learned well how to deal with pesky calls for democracy.

But we haven't heard much about this free-trade area, have we?

And that's the way organizers want it. The hidden leaders of the trade regimes that dominate our current economic system learned well how to deal with pesky calls for democracy outside their closed-door meetings. They keep adversarial groups from knowing when things are happening. They try to hold meetings in difficult-to-reach locales. They keep the text of their agreements top-secret, so that only negotiators and corporate lobbyists have access.

But the UI Progressive Coalition is undaunted in its opposition. The group disagrees with all kinds of the treaty's aspects. The ability of corporations to sue nations and ultimately negate trade restrictions they disagree with undermines democracy in all the nations involved. NAFTA's — and the free-trade area's — investor protections allow giant, faceless companies to destroy labor movements in our more-lenient neighbors' backyards.

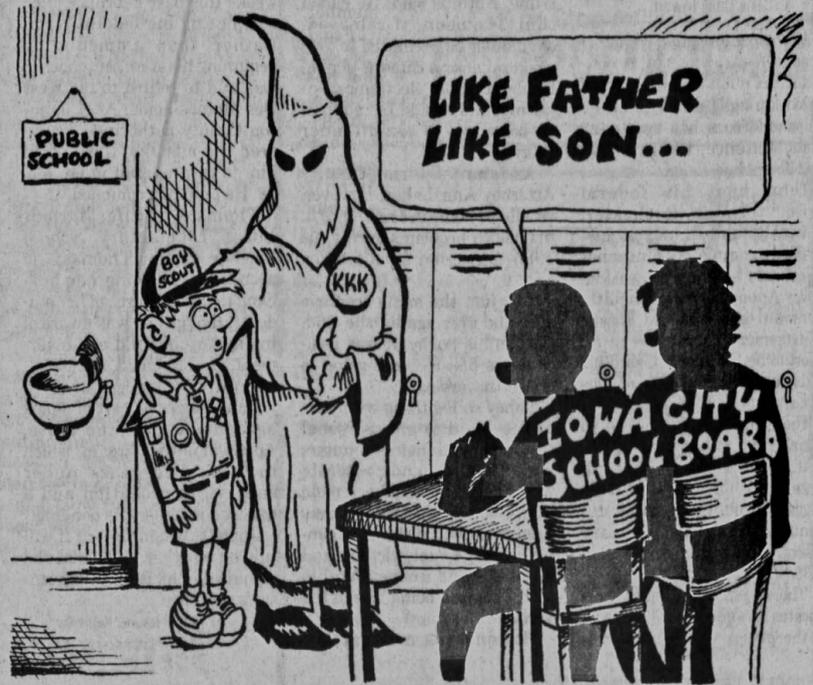

That's why the Progressive Coalition will protest today on the Pentacrest. If nobody knows NAFTA is pregnant, no one do anything to stop its expansion.

But if people stand up for democracy, they might just get what they wish for.

Get Real

by Bill Penisten

The helping hands that make life a little less taxing

Christine Remmert, are you out there? This column is my thank-you note to you.

Why? Let me begin, dear readers. Monday night at 10:45, I hurtled through the falling snow and whipping winds, my recycled-paper pink envelope clutched in my hand and song in my heart en route to my car.

The song sounded like this: "I'm getting money back! I can't believe it! Actual money!"

Yes, the federal government has bestowed upon me a token of its munificence. And I felt joy. When I calculated my taxes in January, I thought I would only be receiving $30, so I decided not to file too early. But ... I figured my deduction incorrectly!

Seeing that it's standard and hasn't changed in all the time I've been doing my taxes, and seeing that I'm reasonably intelligent, wouldn't you think I'd know my deduction? No, no. I'm too busy filling the crevices of my brain with memories

I greeted my fellow procrastinators — some of whom had neither envelope nor stamp with them and frantically trolled the postal machines for any sign of aid — with a sheepish grin and a word or two, then sunnily returned to my little old car. Well, old, anyway. And flaking. And with a bashed-in trunk. But reliable, and sporting several Dar Williams bumper stickers to show off my fandom.

All seemed well in Suziland. That is, until I came to the intersection of Linn and Burlington, where I glanced down and noticed the "Charge Battery" light all fired up. Then not so fired up as the car quietly died into deep, deep dimness and silence.

I'm not a physically strong person. As loyal readers know, I've had carpal-tunnel surgery on both hands, and I'm finally up to lifting four-pound weights — but my upper-body strength is about equivalent to that of my cat

(and when Linus doesn't want to get into the cat carrier, the power in one of his paws alone overbalances all my shoulder lifts and bicep curls). And my car is heavy.

I looked around. Cars approached in my lane, the light was green, I couldn't move — but I had no hazards! No, my battery was so utterly drained that the automatic locks failed to operate. Now in this type of situation, I'm embarrassed to say, my first thought is, "Ooh! I can write about this!" (And see! I can!)

My second thought was unprintable. My third thought propelled me out of the car, now in neutral.

Adrenaline flooded my body as I attempted to walk my Oldsmobile toward the bright lights of Kum & Go. 'Twas a lovely experience. Cars whizzing past me as I tried to push and steer into the right-hand lane, wind whistling snow around my wide-eyed mug.

Then, miraculously, I spotted a friendly face half a block ahead. A woman pulled into the gas station, jumped out of her car, and ran towards me, saying, "I live by you! I'll help you with your car!"

Usually I'd be a little freaked out by the "I live by you" comment, but let's face it, the silver-and-rust mottling, the bashed-in trunk and the bumper stickers make the car conspicuous.

My neighbor/rescuer helped me push the car into the parking lot. She pulled out jumper cables and calmly jump-started my freak of a car, while hordes of people in search of alcohol and cigarettes sniggered as they walked by. But my new-found neighbor stayed focused, and eventually I was able to drive home. I now know my tax return will be put to good use — a new alternator and battery. Oh joy.

My neighbor sported a name tag, luckily, so I can say thanks for your timely late-night lifeline, Christine Remmert! May all your days be filled with kindness. And may your alternator never burn out.

BEFORE THE FDA STEPS ON THE CONSTITUTION ...

You can't regulate freedom

Early this week, the Consumer Federation of America came out in support of legislation that would make the Treasury Department responsible for firearm regulations in the same manner that other products are regulated for safety by other governmental agencies. Under the proposed legislation, the Treasury would have the power to set standards for gun locks, restrict the size of guns, and ban certain types of guns.

Susan Peschin, of the consumer organization, said, "We see guns as the last consumer product that's been exempt from health and safety legislation in America." She went on to compare a semiautomatic weapon to a stuffed animal, saying that the latter was subject to four health and safety standards, while the former was subject to none.

The consumer group is either manipulative and unscrupulous — or completely missing the point. It makes no sense for a governmental agency to set regulations regarding firearms. For one, guns are different from other consumer products, both because they are mentioned in the Constitution and because they are designed to kill.

Sure, it sounds ridiculous that more safety regulations apply to teddy bears than to firearms. However, a teddy bear is meant to be played with by a child; guns are not. Guns are meant to propel deadly bullets at lethal speeds. Why would we expect a regulatory agency to make rules concerning gun safety? If smoking crack were covered by the Second Amendment, would we expect the FDA to make it safer?

The Second Amendment guarantees the right to bear arms. This means different things to different people, and it is the job of Congress, the Supreme Court and the people to apply it to today's technology. A bureaucratic agency has no place interpreting the Constitution.

If the consumer group does see that guns are not like any other product, then it is using underhanded methods to achieve its own agenda. This legislation would, in effect, turn the Treasury Department into a legislative body, the function of which is to make laws about guns. We probably do need stricter rules concerning firearms, but turning guns into just another consumer product by turning the Treasury Department into Gun Congress is not the way to do it.

UI owes Leslie Sims a debt of gratitude

Leslie Sims is retiring, and I must say I will miss him. A sensitive and intelligent ally for the Writers' Workshop, as well as for other artistic and scholarly programs, Les Sims acted from the administrative side with more alacrity, energy and vision than any of us could reasonably have hoped for. He was a wonderful surprise. If the search going on now for his replacement can find anyone with half his talents, the UI will be lucky. We owe him our thanks.

13). It was titled Easter Fun Tips. I hope you will take my comments respectfully. I thought the things Jesse Ammerman said were inconsiderate. I realize he was writing in good fun — at least I hope so. He basically made fun of Jesus in everything he did. I think that he has the freedom to say his thoughts, but would he have taken a similar tone of sarcasm with celebrating Passover, or any other non-Christian holiday. Or how about the National Coming Out Day? Would he have had his fun tips for us to do on that day? It is interesting in our day and age that there is a call for tolerance and respect for other's beliefs, and yet the Christians' beliefs are either not tolerated or they are made fun of. I would love to see

Jesus taken seriously, even the historical nature of his resurrection. Now that would be a good story. I would love to help someone do an investigative article that looks into the resurrection being a historical event, as opposed to something we can just make fun of and not take seriously.

I'm not looking for a big apology. I just hope my voice can be heard in a rational way. I'm not trying to come off as some fanatic or that I'm hacked off. I just want honest and open dialogue about how the media portray various things. I don't know if this will get passed on to Jesse or not, but I am open to any honest feedback that you have.

Glimpsing supreme reality

Tomaz Salamun and Ales Debeljak will display their poetic magic at Prairie Lights tonight.

By Tracy Nemitz
The Daily Iowan

Unless you are a fan of Balkan poetry, or just a well-read poetry buff, chances are you are not familiar with Tomaz Salamun's and Ales Debeljak's work. If this is true, tonight is the perfect opportunity to open yourself up to the works of two of the most influential and important poets of the Republic of Slovenia. Both Salamun and Debeljak will read from their poetry at 8 p.m. at Prairie Lights Books.

Even though the meaning and flow of poetry depend greatly on the language in which it is written, Salamun's poetry translates easily from Slovenian into English, said Christopher Merrill, the director of UI International Writing Program. The process is made easier because Salamun focuses more on images than on the musical nature of language, he said.

"Nothing is lost in the translation," said Merrill. Tomaz feels his poetry does not begin to breathe until it is rendered in English.

Salamun has had more than 30 of his books translated into English, including The Four Questions of Melancholy: New and Selected Poetry (1996), which was translated by Merrill, The Selected Poems of Tomaz Salamun (1998), which was translated by former Writers'

Workshop faculty member Robert Haas, and Feast (2000).

"Salamun's tradition has been the disruptive, visionary side of European experimental art," Haas said. "Poetry is an instrument for glimpsing supreme reality and ... the scattered bits and pieces of that larger vision."

A former writer in the IWP, Salamun is a visiting professor in the English M.F.A. program at the University of Massachusetts.

"Tomaz's work is wild, exuberant, always surprising," Merrill said. "The freedom and buoyancy of his work is tremendously compelling and influential to young American poets."

Debeljak has also had much of his work translated from Slovenian into English. His books include Anxious Moments: Prose Poems by Ales Debeljak (1994) and The City and the Child (1999) both of which were translated by Merrill, and The Dictionary of Silence (1999).

"Ales is the best of the younger poets in the Balkans," said Merrill. "His work is musically centered; it was a tricky task to translate it."

In addition to being a poet, Debeljak also writes cultural criticism and political commentary and teaches sociology at the University of Ljubljana, Slovenia.

"Where Salamun is a pure poet, Debeljak is more measured, more direct and accessible," Merrill said. "Ales has a very active life in the intellectual and cultural world of Slovenia. He is very much in the thick of the political and cultural events of the day. Both Debeljak and Salamun come from a country that prides itself on poetry. There are no monuments to military heroes; there are monuments to poets."

READING

Tomaz Salamun & Ales Debeljak

When: 8 p.m. today

Where: Prairie Lights, 15 S. Dubuque St.

Admission: Free

In addition to tonight's reading, Debeljak and Salamun will hold a roundtable discussion on the culture and cultural politics of former Yugoslavia at 2 p.m. Saturday in Room S401, Pappajohn Business Building.

Sponsored by the Center for Russian, East-European and Eurasian Studies, the discussion will center on what Russell Valentino, an associate professor of Russian, called the "the history of the idea of Yugoslavia, where it came from, how it was built, how it was destroyed."

Participants will also talk about the challenges associated with writing on a subject audiences do not know much about.

"It is a shared difficulty to try to convey ideas about a country such as Yugoslavia, a country many people are unfamiliar with," Valentino said.

Both the discussion and the reading are free and open to the public.

GOP leaders go after work-study

WORK-STUDY

The elimination of state funding would mean that the 2,000 UI students who share state and federal funding for the program would have to compete for the $1.6 million in federal funding, said Cynthia Seyfer, an assistant director in the financial-aid office.

"The downside is that there might be fewer student employees if there isn't enough work-study money to go around," she said.

Coleman, speaking directly to the state of Iowa Board of Regents Thursday, said the program has an "incalculable value" because it provides a service to the university, presents students with educational tools and opportunities, and offers financial assistance.

"This is a huge, huge program that affects our neediest students," she said. "Many students who have just entered the university have already made plans for (the money)."

Regents said they worry that eliminating work-study could have a negative effect on enrollment and could force the UI to hire outside employees to fill positions.

"This is two-sided," said Regent Ellengray Kennedy. "It not only affects students trying to pay their way through college, but it also affects a service to the college."

UI Student Government President Nick Klenske said that by cutting work-study funding, the Legislature is

UI Work-Study Program

- Current state funding: $614,120
- Current federal funding: $1.6 million
- Approximately 2,000 students participate in the program, 585 of whom are funded by state appropriations.
- Only need-based students are eligible. Need is based on the FAFSA.
- State and federal funding pays for 65% of the student's wage.
- Departments pay the remaining 35%.
- Students are limited to working 20 hours a week during the academic year.
- Average wage is $7.03. Students can make a maximum of $3,000 in one academic year ($2,000 for freshman and transfer students).
- Work-study earnings are taxable but do not affect a student's ability to receive future financial aid.

continuing to make it increasingly difficult for students to afford higher education.

"(The legislators) keep making budget cuts that are going to raise tuition," he said. "How do they expect students to pay for college if they keep cutting jobs?"

Psychiatry Professor Nancy Andreasen told the regents she has 15-20 work-study students in her lab, and she said they are incredibly important to her program.

"We value these kids tremendously, and we want them to be the best and brightest," she said. "Some of them come for the aid, and I'm extremely concerned about the burden of debt these students are carrying out into the world."

"And Burn Disco Burn is coming up."

"The greatest thing about this town is how all the local bands support each other, go to each other's shows and whatnot."

"I don't want to extend too far."

I might strain something."

National trees:

"So call in to help select a national tree," says Ingle, finishing up one of the required hourly Public Service Announcements. "What is a good American tree?" he continues off air.

"Why does it have to be American?"

"Because it's the national tree of the United States, ass."

The secret to success:

"You have to be willing to take the 4-7 (a.m.) your first shift," muses Hamilton.

And so it goes, late into the night. Or early into the morning, depending on which listeners you ask. At 6:05 a.m., with the black sky fading slowly into blue through the panes of the windows of the old house at 129 Grand Ave. Court, Ingle and Hamilton greet the transition with their favorite Built to Spill tune — "In the Morning." Behind them, a poster announcing the official KRUI employee haiku contest hangs from the bulletin board. The scribbled three-line vignettes nail down the feeling of the station and its DJs more concisely than any stinger ever could: I love music, Like/Pelican with big ears and/Headphones, flying well.

Republican cuts irritate regents

BUDGET CUTS

Regents meeting Thursday, Regent David Fisher of West Des Moines said the debate is about more than just budget cuts.

"Regardless of how severe these cuts are, we'll deal with it," he said. "But if someone is coming over our shoulder and telling us to use our money here and here ... I just don't think it's (the Legislature's) job to come in and micromanage it for us."

Although it is the constitutional right of the Legislature to dictate specific budget cuts, the regents historically have been granted the authority to make cuts as they see fit. The Republican plan would leave the regents with little say in how the shortfalls will be accounted for, said Frank Stork, the regents' executive director.

"The governor wanted to allow the board and the institutions to make those decisions, but the Legislature has done that for us," he said.

Regent Ellengray Kennedy of Bancroft, Iowa, said she is concerned that Republican legislators think they know better than regents how to make up for budget cuts.

"A 6 percent cut is bad enough, but at least the governor respects the fact that we have done extensive strategic planning," she said.

By not allowing the regents and institutions to make their own cuts, the Legislature is endangering the quality of education that schools can provide, said Regent Roger Lande of Muscatine.

"This will have adverse effects on the number of classes that can be offered, and it will affect the four-year graduation contracts that we have made with students," he said. "Constituent students will take longer to get through school and will have larger class sizes."

Poppin' the pills to shed pounds

DIET PILLS

The pill is geared toward athletes because it does not burn muscle mass.

Schrock said Xenadrine is now the most popular pill sold in his store because people are looking for a quick-fix. The pills can be a good idea if people know what they are doing, he said.

"They are designed to help people lose weight, not lose it instantly. It is important to exercise and take vitamins while taking the pills," he said.

Another well-known pill is Metabolife, he said, which basically has the same effects as Xenadrine but is geared more toward women, especially middle-aged women.

Metabolife "definitely helps"

because the people she worked with told her it was the best way to lose weight and that it had worked for them.

She has been taking the pills on and off for approximately four months, and she has noticed that she has definitely lost weight.

Thiesse said that if the dietary supplements are taken properly, there is nothing wrong with them.

While she's aware that the pills aren't regulated by the FDA, she says it doesn't bother her and that she is just taking them for what they are called — a supplement to her exercise.

"I know pills like this aren't an absolute end-all to losing weight," Thiesse said. "But it is definitely helping me."

An educated point-of-view
Registered nurse Jan Crist, who also owns Weight and Wellness Management, a nursing clinic that counsels people on how to lose weight at 1018 Pheasant Valley Street, said she does not recommend diet pills to people because they are not necessary. She said it is possible to get all nutrients from eating correctly.

"They just are taking money out of your pockets," she said.

Supplements are not regulated by the FDA because they are classified as food supplements, which do not require testing, Crist said.

"This is basically taking your health into your own hands," she said.

The first step in losing weight, Crist said, is to choose a well-balanced diet consisting of all the basic food groups. It is also important to increase exercise and put the two together to see real results, she said.

know who it is, we just need to catch him," Green said.

Iowa City police Sgt. Doug Hart said Foster has been known to hang out in Iowa City, and all the department's officers are aware of the arrest warrant.

"It's hard telling if he is still in the area or not, but we will be patrolling the areas where he has been seen until we catch him," he said.

Foster was first arrested at Field House for criminal trespassing on April 10 and sent to the Johnson County Jail. He was later released.

One day after his release, Coralville police received a report from Barnes & Noble Booksellers in the Coral Ridge Mall that a man matching Foster's description allegedly exposed himself and touched a woman near her buttocks. After the woman confronted him, he apologized and left.

Following the bookstore and hotel incidents, police started to compile photographs matching the descriptions of the alleged assailant. Law-enforcement officers said he was later identified by both women in a photo lineup. Foster is a 6-foot, 175-pound black male with a scar on his forehead.

Police advise anyone who recognizes Foster not to take action but to call the Public Safety at 335-5022.

SPORTS BRIEF

Malone resigns as Dodgers GM

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Kevin Malone resigned Thursday as general manager of the Los Angeles Dodgers, ending a 2½-year tenure in which his mouth and questionable baseball decisions kept embarrassing the team.

Malone quit five days after threatening a Padres fan who heckled Dodgers outfielder Gary Sheffield in San Diego. "I absolutely refuse to allow myself to become a distraction," Malone said at a news conference, reading from a letter addressed to Dodgers Chairman Bob Daly. "He really believed he was a distraction, and we agreed with that," Daly later told reporters.

Hawkeyes face crucial Big Ten weekend

Iowa needs wins over Purdue and Indiana to stay in contention for a Big Ten title.

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

Following two mid-week nonconference games, the Iowa softball team's focus will shift back to Big Ten play this weekend.

The No. 12 Hawkeyes are 31-10 overall, 7-3 in the conference, placing them in a tie for second with Ohio State at the midway point in the Big Ten season. Today, they face Purdue in a double-header set to begin at 2 p.m. at Pearl Field.

A two-game series against Indiana will follow on Saturday and April 22. Saturday's first pitch is slated for 6 p.m., and the April 22 games starts at 1 p.m.

Prior to the opening of Big Ten action, the predictors picked Michigan and Iowa to duke it out for the regular-season title, much as they did last season, before the Hawkeyes won the crown outright with a 3-1 victory over Northwestern.

Both teams have met their expectations. The Wolverines and Hawkeyes sit in first and second, respectively. But the race isn't as close as Iowa might want and some expected. After struggling through a tough nonconference early season schedule, Michigan —10-0 in the Big Ten —has vaulted ahead, opening a three-game lead over the Hawkeyes, which makes this weekend's four-game home stand critical.

Iowa coach Gayle Blevins said her team doesn't carry losses from one day to the next. Junior Alicia Gerlach said the only thing to take from a loss is a lesson for the future. Both hope the stagnant offense, which had gone 21 innings without scoring a run, was refreshed against Iowa State

Wednesday, despite a 6-4 setback.

"We just had one tough inning," Gerlach said. "We'll learn from it."

While the Hawkeyes gave up five runs in the seventh inning, handing the Cyclones the win, they did have 10 hits. The four runs were the most Iowa scored since defeating Wisconsin, 8-3, on April 6.

"We did better (Wednesday) than we have been," Blevins said. "But we had chances to

HAWKEYES IN THE DRAFTS

Kasper leads crop of former Hawks

Four Iowa seniors are hoping to be drafted this weekend.

By Jeremy Schnitker
 The Daily Iowan

Imagine being on the verge of having your childhood dream, and the dream of just about every other kid in America, come true — yet not having a clue how or when it will happen.

What former Iowa football players Jason Baker, Kevin Kasper, LeVar Woods and Anthony Herron have been going through in the last five months in preparation for this weekend's NFL Draft is not for the faint of heart.

They've been poked, prodded, told they were good enough to be a third-round pick, told they were only going to be free agents. They don't know where they'll be living in two months and don't know who their coach will be.

Herron said it's been exhausting.

"It's like a five-month long interview," Herron said. "It's a tough class."

However, they hope it will pay off. They await that phone call from their agent, which all four will likely get, validating their entire football careers, and all the sweat and anticipation of the past five months will be forgotten.

These four former Hawks are a typical class of Iowa possible draftees — none will likely go in the first two rounds, but after that, anything could happen.

Kasper, Iowa's leading career receiver, who, at the NFL's official draft combine ran a blitzy agility test and 40-meters time (4.37) to go with his unbelievable hands, represents the best chance of the four to be drafted.

According to the Burr Ridge, Ill., native, he's heard he'll go anywhere from the third through sixth rounds.

"I really don't know," Kasper said. "I could go from anywhere in round three to round six, or free agency."

"Whatever the case, I'll be in a mini camp somewhere

Consuegra not done playing

The former Hawkeye wants to further her career in the WNBA.

By Roseanna Smith
 The Daily Iowan

Beginning at 10:30 a.m. today, Cara Consuegra will be glued to a phone, waiting for the call that will give her an invitation to continue playing basketball.

While she hasn't yet decided with whom she'll watch the televised WNBA draft on April 20, whoever it is will be seated next to an anxious basketball player.

"I am really nervous now," she said. "I'm trying not to think about it, but it will probably get worse as it gets closer.

The worst part is that I'm not much in control of it."

The senior went through four seasons of ups and downs as a player, from her freshman year of success to back-to-back losing seasons, followed by the resignation of coach Angie Lee. The fiery, four-year-starting point guard brought it all together in her final season as a Hawkeye.

For Consuegra, there was no better way to cap off her collegiate career than with a Big Ten Tournament crown.

"It was just an incredible season, and I keep playing those memories back in my head over and over. It's not something that you'll ever forget," she said.

Consuegra also received accolades from the conference; she was chosen as the tournament's Most Outstanding Player before

Hawkeyes play host to Minnesota

Iowa is riding a current 19-game losing streak against the Gophers.

By Todd Brommelkamp
 The Daily Iowan

Forget about the past and focus on the present. That's the message of Iowa baseball coach Scott Broghamer as the team prepares to meet Minnesota this weekend.

But it's hard to forget about a 19-game losing skid no matter how hard you try.

The Gophers will travel to Iowa City for a four-game series this weekend, the last home stand of the Big Ten season for the Hawks, beginning with a 3 p.m. showdown today. The Hawkeyes will meet the Gophers for a double-header Saturday at 1 p.m. and then wrap up the series with another single game on April 22 at 1 p.m.

The Gophers own the longest current winning streak of any opponent against the Hawkeyes, a mark that dates to 1994. While the Hawks look to snap the skid, they also want to solidify their standings in the race for the final postseason spot in the Big Ten Tournament. With a record of 5-8 in the Big Ten, Iowa is in seventh place.

"We need to shore things up this weekend," Broghamer said.

After Wednesday's 10-6 loss to Northern Iowa, it appears there is a lot of work to be

Hawks face off with Minnesota and Wisconsin

■ Success this weekend is crucial for Iowa to get a good seed at the Big Ten tournament.

By Nick Firchau
 The Daily Iowan

After over two months of drudging through a difficult Big Ten schedule, the best teams are the ones who come out clean at the end.

At least that's Iowa women's tennis coach Paul Wardlaw's theory about how the Hawkeyes (10-8, 4-4 in the Big Ten) could vault into the NCAA Tournament if they post two conference wins this weekend against Minnesota and Wisconsin.

"From a national standpoint, they're going to select teams who have a clean record," Wardlaw said. "Being clean means you don't have any bad losses. And we're clean. We haven't lost to a team that's ranked below us all season."

Iowa hopes the trend of getting "clean wins" continues this weekend as they play host to the Minnesota and Wisconsin, with both matches taking place at the Klotz Tennis Courts. The meet against the Gophers will take place Saturday at 1 p.m., while the Hawkeyes will wrap up the regular season against the Badgers on April 22 at 11 a.m.

Both Minnesota (11-6, 3-5 in the Big Ten) and Wisconsin (7-14, 2-6 in the Big Ten) are below the Hawkeyes in the conference standings heading into the weekend, but Wardlaw said he's slightly wary of the Gophers. With a Minnesota win this weekend, it could potentially drop Iowa into a three-way tie with the Gophers and Penn State in the conference, which is a spot the Hawkeyes don't want to be in.

"We don't want the fifth seed in the tournament," senior Megan Kearney said. "If you're fifth, you have to play the sixth seed right off. But if you're the fourth, you get a bye in the first round."

If the Hawkeyes hope to earn that fourth seed by winning both meets this weekend, they'll need to look to their veterans for a boost. For Kearney and fellow senior and roommate Erica Johnson, this weekend will mark the last home meets in the black and gold.

"I can't believe it's over," Kearney said. "We're excited about the weekend, and I hope we can get some fans. We've put in a lot of time and hard work into playing tennis, even way back before college. But I guess it does feel like it's over." Kearney and Johnson have served as a strong backbone for the Hawkeyes in numerous key dual-meet wins this season, including key conference wins over Penn State and Michigan and a 4-3 win over William and Mary. In all three meets, both seniors notched singles wins.

"It feels good, because Megan and I weren't in the lineup all the time earlier in the season," Johnson said. "I think we just used our experience from all those matches we've played in, and that's helped us. It feels good to go out on a high."

Both Kearney and Johnson said they haven't thought extensively about their last meets; wrapping up their academic careers at Iowa is plenty to grapple with.

"I just want to graduate," Kearney said with a laugh. "And I have so much stuff left to do." E-mail DI reporter Nick Firchau at: nicholas-firchau@uiowa.edu.

IOWA BRIEFS

Men's golf

This weekend: The Hawkeyes will travel to Ravenna, Ohio, to compete in the First Energy Collegiate. The 54-hole tournament will be held Saturday and April 22 at the Windmill Lakes Golf Course.

Last week: Iowa finished a rather low 11th at the Kepler Intercollegiate. The Hawkeyes did pass Bowling Green and Illinois with a well-played final round. Sophomore Bo Anderson lead the Hawkeyes, finishing in a tie for 35th.

Lineup shakeup: Unhappy with his starters' play, coach Terry Anderson might give some of the younger golfers a chance to play in Ohio. A qualifying round could be used to determine who stays in the lineup.

Fledgling postseason hopes: Anderson said the Hawks probably will not earn an at-large NCAA berth. Their best hope will be to win the Big Ten championships on May 4-6. The goal is now to use the next two meets as preparation for the Big Ten meet.

Coach's comment: "This weekend is a good field with many teams from our district there. If we play our A game, I think we can win the event. But if we play like we've been, we'll finish somewhere in the middle of the pack." — by Jeremy Shapiro

Men's tennis

This Weekend: The Hawkeyes will hit the road for their last and most important weekend of the regular season as they meet up with Minnesota and Wisconsin. The Hawkeyes (11-8, 3-5 in the Big Ten) will travel to Minneapolis to match up with the Gophers (10-10, 5-4 in the Big Ten) on Saturday and then to Madison, Wis., to finish the regular season against the Badgers (11-9, 4-5 in the Big Ten).

Last weekend: Iowa had its most successful weekend of the year at its most crucial point to date, earning 5-2 dual meet wins over Michigan State and Michigan in Iowa City. The MSU win was fueled by a combination of three doubles wins, the consistent play of senior Tyler Cleveland and solid singles victories by sophomores Stuart Waters and Hunter Skogman and senior Jake Wilson. The win over the Wolverines broke a seven-meet winning streak for Michigan over Iowa.

Iowa's Keys: If the Hawkeyes hope to win both meets and earn as high as a fifth seed in the Big Ten Tournament, they'll need to continue the momentum the doubles teams established last weekend. And while a victory at the top singles spot for Cleveland has become almost automatic, wins in the other slots have been much less secure. Coach Steve Houghton recently praised the singles players of Waters, Skogman and Tom Buetikofer, who have all earned hard-fought conference wins in the last month. Wilson had a successful return to action against the Spartans.

Coach's Comment: "Our guys have a lot riding on this weekend," Houghton said. "I've stressed to them that this weekend will determine their Big Ten finish, and then how things will sort out in the tournament." — by Nick Firchau

Men's track

This week: The Iowa men's track and field team will take to two locations this weekend, sending half to the Mt. Sac Relays in Walnut, CA and half to the UNI Open in Cedar Falls. The Mt. Sac Relays is a three-day national meet on Friday through April 22. On Wednesday, UNI will host a one day competition with field events starting at 1 p.m. and running events starting at 4 p.m.

Last week: On April 14, the team split by sending Hawkeyes to two different meets. Junior Shaun Allen led the Hawkeyes at the Lee Calhoun Invitational after his win in the 800-meters with a season-best 1:53.1.

Two Hawkeyes produced runner-up performances after freshman Juan Coleman running the 400-meters in 48.04, and junior Joe Welter finished the 3,000-meter steeplechase in 9:37.37. In Phoenix, Ariz., Hawkeye sophomore Russell Peterson also earned runner-up honors in the 400-meter hurdles at the Sun Angel Classic.

NCAA Qualifiers: Two Hawkeye throwers have qualified for the NCAA Outdoor Championships. NCAA Jeremy Allen provisionally qualified in the shot put with a mark of 60-4 1/2 on March 17 and in the discus with a throw of 192-0 on March 31. Senior Arno van der Westhuizen provisionally qualified in the hammer throw with a school record mark of 222-11 on March 17. Nationally, van der Westhuizen is ranked seventh in the hammer throw, while Allen is ranked eighth in the shot put and ninth in the discus.

Coach's comment: "We are splitting up our team and sending each group to two quality meets," said Wiecek. "We will also welcome our football players back to the squad. We are ready to step up and turn out some big performances this weekend." Next Week: On April 27-28, the Hawkeyes will travel to Des Moines, to compete in the Drake Relays. — by Julie Matolo

Questions loom after first pick

Michael Vick will likely be the No. 1 pick in the Draft, but after that, no one knows.

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

NEW YORK — First comes Michael Vick. After that, intrigue.

That seems to be the scenario for Saturday's NFL Draft, where the Virginia Tech quarterback, who played only 20 games, is almost sure to be taken by the San Diego Chargers with the first pick.

Negotiations already have taken place between Vick and the Chargers, but whether he's signed or not, he's almost certain to head to San Diego.

Then come the questions:

- Will Cleveland, which has the third pick, trade down with Green Bay, which has the 10th, and use the pick on linebacker Dan Morgan, whom new Cleveland coach Butch Davis coached in college at Miami? The glitch: San Francisco, which picks ninth, may want Morgan.

- If that's the case, would the Packers, who want defensive tackle Gerard Warren of Florida, trade with Arizona, which has the second choice? Or will the Cardinals take offensive tackle Leonard Davis of Texas and allow Green Bay to deal with Cincinnati, which chooses fourth?

- Will St. Louis and Kansas City finally make the deal that will send quarterback Trent Green to the Chiefs? About all that seems to be holding up that trade, which would give the Rams Kansas City's first-rounder and 12th overall, is the antagonism lingering from former St. Louis coach Dick Vermeil's return after one year of retirement to coach the Chiefs.

- How many more trades will there be in a draft in which almost everyone from 15 to 45 is relatively equal?

"There are probably as many good players from 15 to 25 or 30 as there are from 5 to 15," says Marty Schottenheimer, the Redskins' new GM and

Mary Ann Chastain/Associated Press
N.C. State's Koren Robinson is a possible first round draft pick in the 2001 NFL draft.

coach, who would like to trade down from the 15 spot, in large measure to alleviate cap problems inherited from owner Daniel Snyder's futile spending spree last season.

"A very deep draft, from top to bottom," says Gil Brandt, the NFL's draft consultant.

It starts with Vick, who is leaving Virginia Tech after his sophomore season because, frankly, he discovered he was the clear No. 1 pick.

"I realize that I still have a lot to learn," Vick said when he announced for the draft after twice saying he would return to school. "But the opportunity was presented for me and I just said to myself, 'Be a man, not a boy, and take advantage of the opportunity.'"

It's also taking advantage of the money — the first pick in the draft, particularly if he's a quarterback, should be set for life with a contract that this year will probably run between $50 million-$60 million over six years or so. The two sides are currently haggling over where in between the number will fall.

After Vick come a dozen or so topflight prospects, led by Warren, a 325-pound tackle who played at Florida; Davis, a 370-pound offensive tackle from Texas; Kenyatta Walker, a 311-pound offensive tackle from Florida; and Justin Smith, a 267-pound defensive end from Missouri.

The top skill players are running backs LaDanian Tomlinson of TCU and Deuce McAllister of Mississippi, and a flock of wide receivers — the deepest position this year — led by Koren Robinson of North Carolina State, Nate Gardner of Clemson and David Terrell of Michigan. The Wolverines also have three offensive linemen who could be taken in the first round — guard Steve Hutchinson and tackles Jeff Backus and Maurice Williams.

The only other quarterback who's a potential first-rounder is Drew Brees of Purdue. Heisman winner Chris Weinke of Florida State probably will be picked later, and Josh Heupel, who led Oklahoma to the national title, is projected as a late-round pick if he's drafted at all.

But much of the intrigue centers on Morgan, a middle linebacker who has moved from a late-round pick to a top-tenner. Davis compares him with Ray Lewis, the 2000 season and Super Bowl MVP.

"Their careers are strikingly similar," says Davis, who says Morgan is worthy of being the third player taken. "His grade was as high as anyone at all the other positions."

Most other teams, however, don't consider Morgan a top-three pick. So the Browns, in hopes of obtaining an extra draft pick in the second or third round, are trying to go down to take him.

One possibility: Green Bay, which picks 10th, but only if the Browns are sure that San Francisco, which has the ninth pick, won't take Morgan. The Packers and Cardinals, who have the second choice, might also work out a deal so Green Bay can get Warren.

More than ability figures into this.

With most of the 31 teams close to the salary cap, the higher the pick, the more cap room that has to be made. Washington, at 15, might get the receiver it needs in Clemson's Rod Gardner, but they also would have to pay him more than a collection of lower picks.

Gonzalez on fire with 10 homers

Arizona's Luis Gonzalez is off to one of the best starts in baseball history.

By R.B. Fallstrom
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — On the list of fastest home-run starts in major league history, one name doesn't seem to belong.

Mike Schmidt, Willie Stargell, Barry Bonds, Gary Sheffield and Larry Walker all have hit 11 home runs in April, tied for the NL record. Luis Gonzalez, never known as a slugger, is one long fly ball away from joining that group.

In Arizona's first 14 games, Gonzalez connected 10 times. That's only two games slower than Schmidt's 1976 record. In his record 70-homer season in 1998, Mark McGwire didn't hit his 10th homer until his 23rd game.

Three more homers in the next 10 games, and he'll tie the major league mark for April set by Ken Griffey Jr. for Seattle in 1997.

"It's been fun for us to watch," Diamondbacks first baseman Mark Grace said.

As recently as 1997, Gonzalez totaled 10 homers in 550 at-bats in an entire season with the Astros. He says going to an open stance a few years ago is a big factor in his increased production, but he also knows he can't possibly keep at his present pace of one homer every 5.7 at-bats.

"I'm not trying to figure it out," Gonzalez said. "I'm just having fun."

For now, National League pitchers beware.

"I don't see anything different in his swing," said the Cardinals' Dustin Hermanson, victimized by a two-run homer on Tuesday. "He's just on fire."

Gonzalez, 33, is a late bloomer, having found stardom in Arizona after knocking around for years with the Astros, Cubs and Tigers. He's coming off the first two 100-RBI seasons of his career, and he batted .336 and .311 the last two years.

"For some guys, the light bulb just goes on a little bit later," manager Bob Brenly said. "He's gotten to a stage in his life where he's very comfortable with his approach."

Before, Gonzalez was more of a gap hitter. Last year he hit a career-best 47 doubles, but he didn't hit his 10th homer until May 27. He finished with a career-high 31 homers.

"He doesn't have a typical power hitter's swing," Brenly said. "Mark McGwire, you can tell. Matt Williams, you can tell. They're trying to generate power."

"Other guys do it very smoothly, very naturally, almost effortlessly, and that's what I would say about Gonzo."

Why is this happening? For one thing, Gonzalez said hitting third behind Jay Bell and ahead of Williams, both of whom have gotten off to good starts, is a factor. He also said it helps that he's not swinging for the seats.

"Something like this, you just try to kind of ride the wave as long as you can," Gonzalez said.

horoscopes

Friday, April 20, 2001 by Eugenia Last

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You'll feel anxious if someone you trusted has not been completely honest with you. Channel your energy into hobbies and personal interests. It's time to do things that make you happy.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A secret love affair will play havoc with your heart. Think before you jump into a situation that is emotionally devastating. Save your heart and put your energy into self-improvement.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't let your peers talk you into spending more than you planned. Catch up on correspondence that is long overdue. Make sure that the groups you join have the same beliefs.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You aren't seeing your position clearly. Step back and reassess your motives and your direction. It's time to consider your future plans and exactly who and what fits into them.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can sell your ideas to those who can supply the financial backing that you need. Small-business projects will turn into a worthwhile venture as long as you don't try to expand too quickly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Make changes to your environment. You need to focus on what will bring you the satisfaction you require. Rid yourself of bad habits and nonproductive people.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Choose your activities carefully. If you take part in intellectual games, you will meet individuals who can entice you. You're in the mood for love, so set the stage and be prepared to play.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Make plans to do things with children or to be involved in outdoor activities. Travel will be in your best interests, but be careful not to overspend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Someone you live with will be impossible to get along with. Don't try to deal with important issues or make changes that will upset your household. Make plans to go out with friends.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Changes in your home will be hectic but beneficial. Don't count on much help from those you live with. Too much stress will result in disagreements. Do the work yourself.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Group activities will lead to romantic opportunities. Don't let relatives know your intentions. They are not likely to agree with your plans and may even cause delays or setbacks.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Visit friends or relatives who have been confined. You need time to think about your future direction and to make both professional and personal changes. Don't be afraid to make moves.

How to celebrate Earth Day this weekend

- Finally tell your spouse about your forbidden love for those backyard shrubs.
- Remind children that the Earth Day Bunny is on its way and is much cooler than its Easter rival.
- Light up the traditional Earth Day tree.
- Build a new pond on the Pentacrest — after drinking, at 2 a.m.
- Ratify the Stockholm Convention of Persistent Organic Pollutants to show those PCBs and dioxins what you're all about.
- Replace your apartment's carpet with some rich, hearty soil.
- Put on your Earth Day costume and go trick-or-treating.
- Save a tree — chop it down and keep it in your basement.
- Stick up for Earth by addressing obnoxious insults to Venus and Saturn.
- Take the weekend off from work. Slaughtering animals and emitting toxic chemicals from your factory can wait until Monday.
