U.S. to inspect spy plane

Some U.S. officials feel the move may signal an easing of tensions between the two countries.

By Scott Lindlaw
 Associated Press

WASHINGTON — China will allow U.S. personnel to inspect an American spy plane that made an emergency landing on Hainan Island on April 1, officials in both nations said Sunday. An American inspection team in Okinawa, Japan, awaited clearance to travel to China, hoping to depart as early as today.

The development raised U.S. hopes that the disabled aircraft will soon return home, and it seemed to signal an easing of U.S.-China tensions.

"I see it as an encouraging sign that they're willing to proceed," Vice President Dick Cheney said. The plane cannot be flown now and may have to be taken out on a barge, Cheney said.

At the same time, Cheney and top Bush administration officials reinforced President Bush's tough stand that a military response from the United States remains an option if China attacks Taiwan.

It has been nearly a month since a U.S. Navy EP-3E surveillance plane with a crew of 24 collided with a Chinese fighter jet sent to intercept it over the South China Sea, outside

UI expands Web access off-campus

While only 3,000 students use the free service, the UI will open it to faculty and staff — for a small fee.

By Andrew Bixby
 The Daily Iowan

Although fewer than 3,000 UI students a month are taking advantage of free, off-campus Internet access, the university has pushed ahead with plans to offer the service to faculty and staff.

In a memo to department heads, Information Technology Services announced last week the free Internet access that became available to university students last August is now available to faculty and staff — but for a fee.

The dial-up remote access will cost university employees $5 per month if accessed with one of the service's local phone numbers. Long-distance service is available to students and faculty in all 50 states for 10 cents per minute through an 800 number.

The new service is nearly identical to the one UI students have been using for nine months. Both services were designed to facilitate access to Web-based resources for academic- and work-related purposes, said Steve Fleagle, the UI director of telecommunications and networking.

The service, however, can be used to access anything on the Internet and could replace an employee or student's current Internet service provider, he said.

Students' computer fees and the new $5 subscription fee for employees covers all costs of the remote access, which neither makes a profit nor costs the university additional money, Fleagle said.

University students will pay a $135 computer fee next academic year.

The number of students who use the service — fewer than 3,000 students a month — is much smaller than ITS expected and has officials puzzled on how to reach students, Fleagle said.

Former UI Student Government President Andy Stoll, who noted that there was a large demand for the free

criterium wheels through downtown

The 24th annual bike race draws hundreds of bicyclists and fans.

By Mary Johnson
 The Daily Iowan

The 24th annual Old Capitol Criterium invaded downtown Iowa City Sunday, as hundreds of bicyclists and cheering fans enjoyed warm weather and several close bicycle races during the eight-hour event.

The highlight of the series of races was the Chris Lillig Memorial Cup, a competition in which the cyclists grouped as professional or near-professional riders competed for a $650 prize. The race was renamed this year in honor of Lillig, an Iowa City cyclist who was killed by a drunk driver during a training ride.

Kenny Labbé of Mount Prospect, Ill., beat out 63 competitors to finish first in the Lillig race. Labbé, who joined the U.S. Postal Service Professional Cycling Team in 2000, which is the team of two-time Tour de France champion Lance Armstrong, has participated in five of the last six Criteriums.

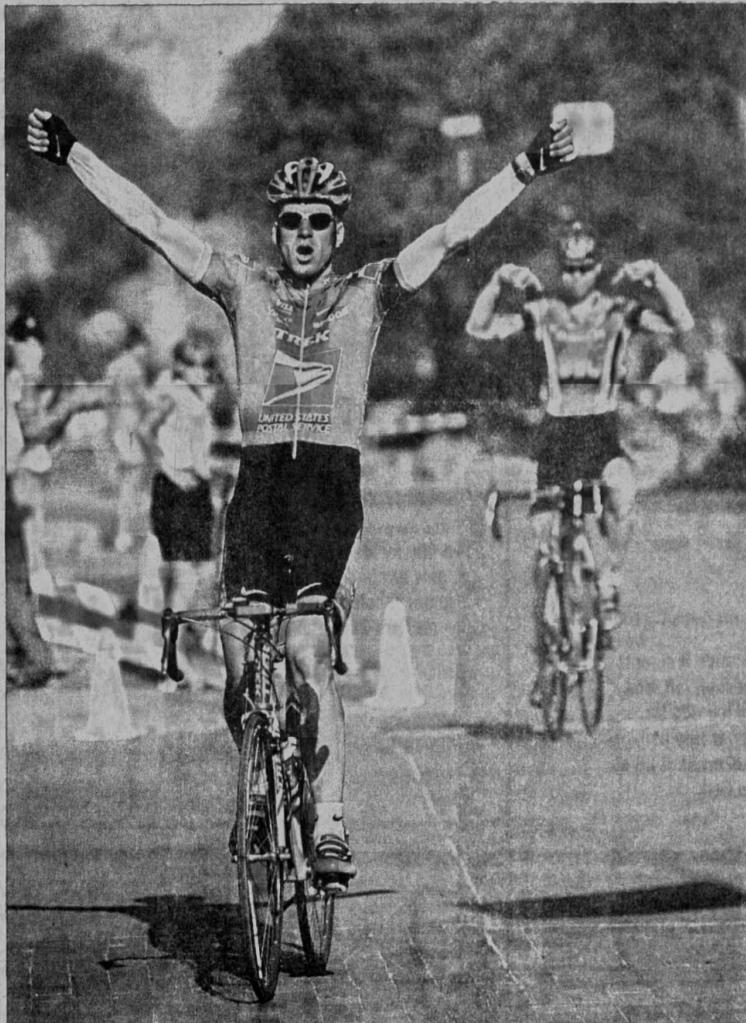

"I had to be conservative (with energy) and make sure I didn't drop the ball and get second place," he said. "I've been here before and raced it. To win this event is very special to me."

Participants in eight events raced to win a total of $6,500. All participants were encouraged to ride competitively until the end of their races, as money was awarded in some events down to 20th place. Throughout the day, the 241 bicyclists also won such items as caps, T-shirts and restaurant gift certificates.

Cycling supporters seated themselves along the one-kilometer track, which looped around the Pentacrest and Dubuque and Washington streets in downtown.

A small number of spectators gathered along Jefferson Street between Calvin and Gilmore halls, sitting on lawn chairs and handing out

Despite protests, M.D.s to build office

The city's zoning laws will allow two doctors to put up an office and parking lot across from Mercy Hospital.

By Michael Poe
 The Daily Iowan

Because of zoning laws, citizen protests will not be able to do anything to stop two physicians from building an office across from Mercy Hospital.

Dr. Gene Lariviere and Dr. Rick Shelman purchased two house lots, at 510 and 512 E. Bloomington St., across from the hospital. The city's Board of Adjustment has ruled that the two can build their office on the house lots.

The physicians want to build an office in the back of the lot and a parking lot in the front, which neighborhood residents say "disrupts the flow of the neighborhood."

The flow will be disrupted because a parking lot will be in front of the office, accessible from Bloomington Street, said Darlene Clausen, who lives next door to the proposed building. The street is designed for vehicular access from the alley at the back of the lots and not the street, she said.

Led by Clausen, members of the Northside Neighborhood Association started a petition to "preserve the friendly streetscape of the neighborhood," which Doug Boothroy, the director of Housing Inspection Services, received last fall.

Meanwhile, Lariviere and Shelman took the standard steps for building on a site. They applied for a site-plan review, which helps a business to fit in a neighborhood. Boothroy did the review and found it in violation of several codes.

"We reviewed the plan and found it did not comply with the objectives and requirements of the city's site-plan ordinance," he said. "The proposed site plan had several

This week, the play's really the thing for the theater dept.

The Iowa New Play Festival will offer more productions and readings than in recent years.

By Becca Sutlive
 The Daily Iowan

Under a new name and boasting more premiere theater productions and readings than in recent years, the annual Iowa New Play Festival promises to be an intensely full week of original works by graduate and undergraduate playwrights.

Previously dubbed the Iowa Playwrights Festival, the new name reflects the festival's commitment to and presentation of all areas of the UI theater department, including playwrights, directors, designers, actors and technical resources.

"It's not just about the playwrights," said Alan MacVey, the chairman of the theater department. "The festival surely showcases them, but we want as a department to recognize everyone's contributions."

Showcasing new work by students is a staple in the department, drawing students from across the nation. First-year graduate student Andrew Golla left a career in Minneapolis, where he had been directing semi-professional theater for the past six years, to attend the Iowa program.

"The strength of the program at Iowa is new work," he said. "I like working with playwrights and being involved in the whole process — that's why I came here."

Aside from presenting their work to one another and the public, all productions and readings are presented in front of a guest panel consisting of critics, directors and writers from across the country. Readings receive feedback from the panel immediately following the performance; full productions are critiqued the morning after performances.

"Plays presented in front of professional writers help create not a direct line but a network," MacVey said. "It's this network, as an artist, that you're trying to create."

Todd Ristau, who graduated from the UI in 1991 with an M.F.A., cites the network he

UI's mail wizard leaves a legacy

■ Lou Eichler has retired, but his accomplishments won't soon be forgotten.

By Sara Faiwell
The Daily Iowan

The manager of UI Central Mail has retired after a 19-year career, leaving the university with a more-centralized mail system that has saved the school thousands of dollars.

Originally, Lou Eichler managed the Publications Order Department, which is in charge of book distribution for the university. While there, he realized that the UI was not participating in bulk discounts the U.S. Postal Service offered because almost every department had its own postage meter. By combining several of them, it would reduce costs, he noted.

"This was really a drain," said Eichler, 57.

So he wrote a letter to then-UI President Hunter Rawlings in 1991, explaining that an opportunity was being missed to save on bulk discounts because of the large number of meters scattered about campus.

He had asked some people in the mail department if they were going to do anything about the matter, he said, and got the impression that not a lot was going to happen. The only sure way for the university to save money was to write the letter, he said.

Shortly after his letter, the university appointed a 40-member task force to study the matter. It eventually decided to change the system and asked Eichler to be the mail manager. He declined.

But after a third offer, in

Eichler
ex-UI mail manager

1993, Eichler decided to accept the job and set about to centralize the system in order to reduce the number of postage meters on campus. Currently, the UI has approximately 15 meters; in the early '90s, there were approximately 80. Every postage meter on campus costs approximately $10,000 annually to run, depending on various factors, he said.

"Overall, I am happy that I took this job," Eichler said. "I wasn't looking for any mountains to climb, and I didn't want all the stress, but there were people who helped to make my life easier."

But centralizing the mail systems was not his only accomplishment. Eichler designed CUNIMAIL, an e-mail service linking college and university systems through the Internet, after noting there was no organized e-mail connecting people involved in the U.S. mail industry. Currently, there are more than 600 colleges and universities linked in the program.

"I figured that all of us working together was smarter than one of us," he said. "You find that a lot of people have the same problems in common."

The U.S. Postal Service awarded Eichler two awards in 1995 and 2000 for excellence in the service industry. But, he said, he wasn't acting alone.

"I ended up getting a lot of credit for work that a lot of other people did," Eichler said.

The National Association of College and University Mail Systems established the Lou Eichler Award of Excellence in 1999, with Eichler as its first recipient. He is also a founder of the association.

Eichler traveled often within the college community, teaching staff-development courses on mail systems. He also wrote articles for various industry magazines.

Phyllis Reelfs, a central mail administrative assistant, said that as the department manager, Eichler gave a lot of support to those he worked with.

"He saw everyone as having such an important part in the system," she said. "From the custodians emptying the trash to the mail carriers going out in 20-degree weather, everyone was equal."

Eichler will spend his free time pursuing his golfing and fishing hobbies as well as spending time with his grandchildren, he said. He will not be traveling much, because that had been a regular part of his job over the years.

Before coming to the UI, he owned an advertisement magazine called The Interstate Shopper, which familiarized him with the mail system.

"It was just the natural thing for me to be interested in mail," said Eichler, who never attended college.

RiverFest draws in Iowa City community

"Feel the Flow," this year's RiverFest theme, perfectly described the atmosphere this weekend as students gathered in Hubbard Park for the annual event. With a lineup including such diverse activities as hypnotism, carnival rides, punk rock and ballroom dancing, old and young Iowa City residents alike took advantage of the festival. When students were tired of the rides and music, they could buy food from local businesses such as Pizza on Dubuque. The more laid-back attendants simply plunked down in the grass and enjoyed the sun.

Conference looks at transportation

Participants hope to affect the city's future decisions about the town's modes of transportation.

By Megan L. Eckhardt
The Daily Iowan

Approximately 100 Iowa City residents and visitors gathered over the weekend to compose a city vision statement concerning transportation options at a first-of-its-kind conference.

The statement, a product of the "Alternative Transportation Solutions for Today & Tomorrow" conference, is still under development by members of the community.

It states that Iowa City should be "a lively place whose seamless, interconnected transportation modes enable all people to thrive."

After completion, the statement will be given to local officials in an effort to influence their future decisions on transportation issues, said organizer Alisa Meggitt.

"We will use this as an organizing tool for smart growth, transportation for people with disabilities and increased transportation options," she said.

Experts from all over the country joined in discussion sessions on subjects ranging from alternative transportation options and urban growth to modes of transportation for disabled persons.

Author and journalist Jane Holtz Kay began the conference with slides taken from her book, Asphalt Nation, which discusses urban growth, the history of transportation and America's obsession with the car.

"This is the largest, most deadly artifact in our lives," Kay said in her keynote speech about the use of the car. "We are addicted, and in fact dependent, on the automobile."

Two University of Northern Iowa students attended the conference to exchange ideas and communicate their plans for increasing and promoting alternative transportation in Cedar Falls.

Lewis Benedict and Chia-Chi Kuo are part of a group of students working with Cedar Falls to obtain a $7,500 grant from the Iowa Energy Center, a organization based in Ames that gives funding to educational projects promoting energy conservation. The funding will allow the group to promote riding bicycles around town, specifically to work, instead of driving.

The group has surveyed community residents on transportation preferences, and it is planning to increase bike routes and signs for riders, Benedict said.

"We have a great trail system, but it doesn't take you to work," he said. "Bikers don't feel safe. This is a way to increase signs for drivers to beware of bikers."

The pair said they received a lot of information from the conference and had the opportunity to speak with many different people.

"There were a lot of neat people here whom I learned a lot from," Kuo said.

The event's organizers said they believed the conference ran smoothly and was very informative and helpful for its participants.

"It was absolutely a smashing success, and we're thrilled by the results," Meggitt said. "Not only by the participation but also the diversity of the participants."

Simon: Be wary of Chinese abuses

The NPR radio host speaks to a UI audience, covering everything from China to "Pie Shakes."

By Peter Rugg
The Daily Iowan

More than 500 people gathered in Macbride Auditorium Sunday to hear National Public Radio journalist Scott Simon talk about his life as a reporter, U.S. relations with China and "Pie Shakes."

When Simon took the stage, he began by telling the crowd how he had been drawn to Iowa because of its world famous Pie Shakes.

"I was in New York, and I saw this travel guide article about something called a Pie Shake and how it was famous in Iowa," he said. "After years of searching and research, I've come to the conclusion that there's no such thing, and it's probably a hoax perpetrated by someone in your Writers' Workshop."

Pie Shakes aside, his main point of interest was the United States' relationship with China.

"It hasn't been on my mind so much because of the situation with our plane," he said. "My problem is that their economic rise and our ties with them is something that may eventually affect our personal sense of decency."

It is good that Americans seem more open to Chinese culture in recent years, Simon said, but too many of China's inhumane practices have been overlooked. He urged the audience to find out more about how products are made before buying them.

He condemned Chinese labor practices including the use of long-term women prisoners and school children as unpaid labor and referred to them as forms of slavery.

"More than half of the fireworks in America are made in China," he said. "I find it ironic that we'll be celebrating our independence this Fourth of July by setting off products made by unpaid children."

John Monick, the director of UI broadcasting services, summed up the feelings of many long-time NPR listeners as he spoke about Simon.

"It's my theory that he likes to masquerade as a journalist," Monick said. "But he's more than that. He's a story-teller."

Iowa City resident Tom Goldsborough, who attended the speech, said he had been listening to Simon for years.

"I've always thought he was one of the few people on the radio with a sense of passion and integrity," he said. "I was very impressed by what he said."

Simon, the host of National Public Radio's "Weekend Edition Saturday," has won prestigious awards throughout his career such as the Alfred I. Du Pont-Columbia University award, and the George Foster Peabody Award.

Black Student Union looks to future

■ The group readies itself for events aimed at unifying the black-student community.

By Peter Boylan
The Daily Iowan

Aiding in the adjustment of minority students to the university and promoting positive relationships among black students are among the top priorities of the UI Black Student Union heading into the 2001-02 school year.

The planning and promotion of events aimed at unifying the black-student community will be at the forefront of the union's end-of-the-year meetings, say the group's newly elected officials.

The UI Black Student Union held its elections last week in an effort to solidify leadership for the fall 2001 event-planning period. Gia Mason was elected president and Juanita Greer vice president. Exactly 100 students voted in the election.

The group on April 26 also appointed Marc Wallace secretary, Guinevere Banks treasurer, Antonia Craig vice president for programming and Cheree Rawlins UI Student Government representative.

"We've got a lot going on this year," Mason said. "We're having a black-student conference at the beginning of November. We're hoping to bring all the black UI students on campus

Mason
new president

together."

The Black Student Union considers itself an informational group for all UI students.

"The [group] helps them to network among other black students," Mason said. "Through those relationships and the atmosphere of the Afro-American Cultural Center, we try to keep black students focused toward academic goals."

The group has a variety of programs and events planned for the 2001-02 school year. In August, it will work with the university's Special Support Services in assisting with the integration of new minority students to the university community.

"I'm very positive for next year," Banks said. "I'm very happy to see the things that are happening and very pleased to be working with the great group that I am."

In December, the union plans to hold its annual Kwanzaa celebration, which spans seven days. The events include a nightly candle-lighting ceremony and poetry readings. Students mingle with each other in a festive setting, sharing their holiday experiences and partying well into the night. Unity however, is something that the union would like to see happen year-round.

"The UI is a predominantly white school," Mason said. "We need that homestyle atmosphere. We need incoming students to connect with juniors and seniors. That way we can support each other through this wonderful experience called college."

After flood, flood-wall debate to crest

■ Once again, talk of building a flood wall surfaces in Davenport.

Associated Press

DAVENPORT — City leaders are getting ready to dive into the flood-wall debate again.

As Davenport keeps watch on the sandbag levees holding back the slowly falling Mississippi River, the City Council will take up flooding, flood walls and its own flood history, the Quad City Times reported in Sunday's edition.

On Sunday, the river was at 21.18 feet, down from 21.33 late on April 28. The slow fall was expected to continue.

At today's City Council meeting, aldermen were to hear from Dee Bruemmer, the city public-works director. She plans to tell them what she has been telling the Federal Emergency Management Agency and the media for days.

While Davenport doesn't have a permanent flood wall, it has for the past 17 years been practicing flood control, she said. That control stresses removal of homes from flood-prone areas, better flood plain management and some reclamation of wetlands.

"With every flood, there is less and less in the flood plain and less and less that we have to protect," she said. "It's a matter of educating the community on what we've been doing to deal with the problems we have here."

At the height of the flooding last week, the spotlight was on a 1984 decision by the City Council not to build a permanent flood wall.

Davenport is the only major city on the upper portion of the river without such protection.

The federal government would have paid 65 percent of the estimated $33.9 million cost for a combination of earthen levees, collapsible flood walls and floodgates along a five-mile section of riverfront. In some places, the levees would have been 14 feet high.

With the old debate renewed, Mayor Phil Yerington crossed swords with the director of FEMA, Joe Allbaugh, who said the liability of American taxpayers to communities that are repeatedly flooded should be limited if they refuse to build permanent dikes and levees.

"If we build it, whom are we going to hurt?" Yerington said after Allbaugh toured the city's riverfront on April 26. "What's causing our problem now is the flood walls that have been built up and down the river."

That was the sentiment of many who opposed the project in 1984.

They say proliferation of permanent flood walls, along with building in wetlands and increased drainage of farm fields in Minnesota, Wisconsin and northern Iowa have turned the Mississippi into little more than a channel that shoots water down the river.

Kathy Wine, the executive director of River Action Inc., which works for improvements on the riverfront, opposed construction of a flood wall in 1984 in favor of better management of the flood plain, buyouts of homes prone to flooding and restoration of wetlands.

"Davenport should look at itself as being ahead of the curve," she said.

As Bush touts civility, Dems take aim

■ The administration says the president has changed the attitude in Washington; Democrats strongly disagree.

By Scott Lindlaw
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Top aides to President Bush marked his 100th day in office Sunday by declaring he'd brought new civility to policy debates in Washington. Democrats dismissed the claim and aired ads bitterly attacking Bush as a captive of special interests.

"We don't talk, we don't negotiate, we don't really collaborate and work together on these policies," said House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt, D-Mo. "It's really been more of the same — my way or the highway, in the Congress every day on every issue."

Bush aides faced tough questioning on Bush's policies on the environment and consumer-protection laws, and even Sen. John Breaux, a Louisiana Democrat who has emerged as a Bush ally, was critical of Bush's leadership on the environment.

"I think they've handled it fairly badly," Breaux said. "I think they scared a lot of American people, and that's certainly not good for anyone."

Democrats pounced on those issues in their TV ads, timing them to air just as Card and Rove were touting Bush's achievements on Sunday news shows.

One ad criticized the administration for attempts to roll back regulations, showing a little girl asking for more arsenic in her water and a little boy asking for salmonella on his sandwich.

High-ranking administration officials took to the airwaves bearing a different message: that Bush had delivered on his promise to improve the tone in the nation's capital.

"The president has changed the way Washington talks about its job," said White House Chief of Staff Andrew Card on ABC's "This Week." "Civility is back in Washington, and Democrats and Republicans can have a disagreement without being disagreeable, and that means that we can get work done for the American people."

As evidence, Bush political adviser Karl Rove said the president had successfully pushed for a major tax-cut package.

"The support is growing for the president's initiative, and it's growing in the halls of Congress and across the country," Rove said on NBC's "Meet the Press."

Asked why the Senate had approved a tax cut of $1.2 trillion over a decade, far short of Bush's proposed $1.6 trillion plan, Rove said: "We're going to get a significant tax cut, a big tax cut, when a year ago people said we ain't going to get it, and three months ago, 97 or 98 days ago, people were counseling us to toss it overboard."

beers to thirsty riders. One man from the Des Moines, who called himself, "Lucifer, the devil" wore a red devil costume while watching the cyclists. After competing in the masters' criterium race earlier in the day, the man sat with his friends and attempted to pass beer to the racers as they finished riding the uphill portion of the course. Some bicyclists could not resist the temptation to stop and drink with the man.

"Our group is here to tease the bikers," said Bill Musgrove of Solon, a former cyclist and acquaintance of the costumed man. "We welcome anyone who stops here and heckles the riders. Our location is also a convenient place to come and sit with your kids."

UI sophomore Lindsey Wetzel joined the crowd of fans after she raced in her first women's open at the criterium Sunday afternoon. The downtown course provided many obstacles for her and other racers, she said.

"I hate the downhill on this course. My friend crashed here when he hit a tree and broke his collarbone," said Wetzel, the co-president of the Iowa City Cycling Club. "The uphill is challenging because the climbing up with the bicycle separates the physically tough bicyclists from the rest of the race. The second accident occurred about two hours later, when a participant lost control on Washington Street.

code deficiencies, including vehicular circulation, the number of parking spaces and building location in the lot."

Boothroy said it was a special case because of the location of the neighborhood, which is a "buffer area," meaning it has both residential and commercial purposes.

"It is an area intended for physicians to put in offices, but it is also expected that those offices use existing structures," he said.

Not happy with the decision, in December 2000, Lariviere and Shelman appealed to the Board of Adjustment, a group of citizens appointed by the City Council who hear appealed cases. The board ruled in favor of the physicians in March.

T.J. Brandt, an assistant director of the board, said the site plan did fit into all the criteria of the zone.

The reason board had a different interpretation from Boothroy's, Brandt said, is Boothroy used the purpose of the ordinance (to keep businesses from changing the landscape of the neighborhood), rather than the actual ordinance, which legally allows business to change things because it is a residential and commercial district.

"The ordinance is not meant to hold legal context in the design process," he said.

Lariviere said having access from Bloomington Street was important because 40 percent of the office's clientele is from outside of Johnson County and may have trouble with alley access. He also cited an elderly client-base as another reason Bloomington Street access was important.

"We tried hard to make things work, but this is a commercial zone," he said. "The building looked a lot better to us to have the parking lot in front, and that will be easier for our patients to find." Clausen, whose home was just named to the historic preservation society and is located next door to the lots, is concerned because the lots are in the middle of the block. She also worries about the safety of exiting onto the side of the street where cars park.

"To me, it's not hard to find the alley at all," she said. "Parking is always on that side of the street, so it will be hazardous for those patients pulling out. It disrupts the feel of the neighborhood as you walk along the residential street."

The doctors currently are working out of 1040 Williams St., in the southeastern part of town, approximately two miles from the hospital. They hope to start building the new office in July, and they would like to have construction finished by the end of the year, Shelman said.

China's 12-mile territorial sea and airspace.

The plane made an emergency landing on a military airfield on Hainan Island, and the crew was detained for 11 days. They were released after Bush said he was "very sorry" for the loss of the Chinese pilot and for the U.S. plane's unauthorized entry into Chinese airspace to make an emergency landing.

At the April 18-19 talks in Beijing, American negotiators presented a written proposal for U.S. experts to inspect the plane to determine whether to repair and fly it out or ship it out in pieces.

"Having completed its investigation and evidence collection involving the U.S. plane and in view of international precedents in handling such issues, the Chinese side has decided to allow the U.S. side to inspect its plane at the Lingshui Airport," the official Xinhua News Agency said Sunday.

UI to extend cheap Internet access

INTERNET ACCESS

Internet access when the service was created, said he feels students aren't using it because they don't know about it.

"I would like to see a marketing campaign to let (students) know that they have free dial-up access," he said.

ITS has tried to inform students about the Internet service by placing advertisements and sending e-mails but so far has had little luck, Fleagle said.

"I'm not sure why we're not able to inform them," he said. "It's been a little surprising to us."

Despite the small percentage of students who are using the free service, Stoll said, he thinks the computer fees used to fund the service are well-spent.

"It's the equivalent of getting a service like AOL, which charges $20 a month, for a significantly smaller amount," he said.

The service for faculty and staff is still in a "pilot" phase, which means that ITS can fix problems and change the service as it sees fit until July 1, when the pilot is scheduled to end, Fleagle said.

"We could find out that it isn't meeting people's needs or isn't working right," he said. "If people like it, we'll probably just change the name from pilot to regular."

Free Internet

The following is information regarding the free Internet access offered by the UI.

- Purpose: To facilitate off-campus Internet access for academic or work-related purposes. The service supports 56Kb connections and full Web browsing and could replace a current Internet-service provider.
- Sign up: UI students are automatically registered to use the service. Faculty and staff sign up by using a subscription form on the ITS home page.
- Cost: Free for students, $5 per month for faculty or staff. (The $5 service charge occurs only if the service has been used during any given month.)
- How to use: Local dial-up phone numbers, configuration directions and help are available on the ITS home page. Students and faculty use their HawkID and their ISIS passwords.
- Long distance: Remote access is available in all 50 states and Puerto Rico for 10 cents per minute by dialing 1-866-759-IOWA.

New Play Festival saunters on to the stage

created through his participation in the festival as key to his success in theater.

"I either had a play or a reading in the festival every year between 1986 and 1991," Ristau said. "All my professional success, including my West End production of my play about Jerry Lee Lewis, grew directly out of contacts made at the festival."

Ristau's play, Great Balls of Fire: The Jerry Lee Lewis Story, ran from 1999 through 2000 at Cambridge Theatre in London. Cambridge Theatre is located in the West End, London's equivalent of Broadway.

Of the 10 years that MacVey has been with the department, this year's festival is the biggest in terms of number of productions and actors, he said.

"We're bursting at the seams," he said.

Eight full-fledged productions, all written by UI graduate students, and four graduate playwright readings will start today and run through Saturday. Saturday will also feature an afternoon of undergraduate playwright readings.

Highlights include: Jeremy Frey Kicked a Hole in the Sky, by Kara Hartzler, Tuesday 5:30.

The play centers on 7-year-old Jeremy Frey and his best friend and the problem that arises after Jeremy kicks a ball too high and tears a hole in the sky. Although Jeremy Frey director Andrew Golla was reluctant to reveal the adventures that ensue, he did say the play is about friendship and what being a good friend means.

"It's playful and fun but also serious at points when it looks like things aren't going to turn out well," Golla said. "The audience is anyone who would be tempted to play on the equipment when walking by a playground."

Jeremy Frey will be followed by The Donkey Play by Mark Perry.

The Last Scene, by Victoria Stewart, Thursday, 5:30, and 9 p.m.

Based on the true story about the filming of a 1949 Humphrey Bogart movie, this play revolves around the fact that two endings were shot for the movie.

"It's about all the things that go into making that last shot," Stewart said. "It's about what you sacrifice for art and what you give up to have immortality."

Missed America, by Joseph Ferron Hiatt, Saturday, 5:30 and 9 p.m.

Mortals and immortals meet in Hiatt's play. Scheduled as the last full production of the festival on Saturday night, Missed America is the largest play being staged in the festival, with a cast of 35. Mixing Greek mythology with 30 modern-day beauty queens, the play follows a dysfunctional family in Atlantic City on its trek to a convention hall where a beauty pageant is being staged. At times on its journey, the family is aided and at other times attacked by the various beauty queens/goddesses. Hiatt explained the play as a commentary on American myth-making and society's obsession with beauty.

"The feeling of the play is that whole laughing-through-tears thing," Hiatt said. "It's the humor at what we hold up and value as a society, but at the same time, it's what can crush us as well."

Bombs dim hopes for Mideast peace

■ The Israeli foreign minister travels to Jordan and Egypt to discuss a peace deal, but violence persists.

By Greg Myre
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israel's Foreign Minister Shimon Peres traveled to Jordan and Egypt Sunday, seeking to forge the outlines of a Mideast cease-fire, but bomb attacks, mortar fire and gun battles at home cast a long shadow over the latest peace initiative.

Peres presented Israel's reservations to a peace deal put forward by Egypt and Jordan for ending seven months of Israeli-Palestinian fighting. But he said there were hopes for a deal that could lead to resuming peace negotiations.

After meeting in Cairo with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, Peres said the sides were coming together around the basis that violence must stop before negotiations resume. "I see the beginning of a possibility of getting out of the present deadlock," he said in an interview with Israel television.

Jordan's King Abdullah II told Peres when they met later in the day that "ending the aggression and the use of force against the Palestinians and lifting the siege" is the only way to make progress, according to a statement from the king's office.

In the West Bank and the Gaza Strip, the violence persisted.

Palestinian militants set off two bombs targeting Jewish settlers in the West Bank, and Israeli police located a third bomb and set off a controlled explosion in the coastal city of Netanya.

In one of the West Bank explosions, a car bomb went off not far from an Israeli school bus outside Nablus, killing a Palestinian suspected of setting it off and injuring a second Palestinian.

Also, Palestinians fired mortars at the Jewish enclave of Kfar Darom in the Gaza Strip, but no one was injured. Israeli troops and Palestinian gunmen traded fire at two locations in Gaza, wounding at least three Palestinians, according to hospitals.

The Egyptian-Jordanian peace plan calls for the two sides to declare a cease-fire, and if the calm holds for four weeks, then negotiations would resume on a political settlement. However, Israel has expressed opposition to a number of the plan's details.

A statement issued by the office of Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon said the Israeli leader would "not hold any negotiations under fire and stressed that there must be a total halt to terrorism in all its forms."

Also, there must be a "trial period for the cessation of violence," Sharon's office said. Israeli media reported Israel wanted it to be longer than the four weeks in the Arab proposal.

Sharon has also said repeatedly that he would seek an interim agreement with the Palestinians to be implemented over an extended period of time and not a sweeping final peace deal.

However, the Palestinians say that after seven years of on-and-off negotiations, they are not interested in any more interim arrangements.

Senators rally behind Kerrey

■ A uproar surrounds the ex-Nebraska senator after he admits civilians were killed during a Vietnam War mission.

By Brigitte Greenberg
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Some of Bob Kerrey's former Senate colleagues who served in Vietnam said Sunday they have little desire for a Pentagon investigation into his recent admission that civilians were killed during a mission for which he won the Bronze Star.

"To now talk about an investigation, it seems to me, is just the wrong way to go," Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., told ABC's "This Week." "If the Pentagon asked me, I'd say no."

Kerrey, the former Nebraska governor and senator, and five other former members of his Navy SEAL team said in a written statement released over the weekend that what happened on the night of Feb. 25, 1969, at Thanh Phong "was a defining and tragic moment for each of us."

"We regret the results of this night. We might do things differently if we could do it over. But we cannot be certain. We were young men then and did what we thought was right and necessary," they said in the statement issued to the Washington Post.

Kerrey's admission came as another former SEAL member, Gerhard Klann, claimed in interviews that civilian women, children and elderly were herded into a group and killed on Kerrey's order. Two Vietnamese women who said they were witnesses gave a similar account.

Kerrey and the five squad members said they fired after being fired upon.

open the possibility of investigating the award of a Bronze Star to Kerrey. Rear Adm. Craig Quigley said he did not believe Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld was reviewing the matter, and the Pentagon spokesman said he could not say whether the Pentagon would look into it.

The citation for the combat medal says 21 Viet Cong were killed, and enemy weapons were captured or destroyed. Kerrey said he told his military superiors his Navy SEAL squad killed civilians.

Asked whether it was possible that the matter would be investigated, Quigley replied: "Sure."

Sen. Max Cleland, D-Ga., a member of the Armed Services Committee, told ABC he does not think an investigation is warranted, as did Sen. Chuck Hagel, R-Neb. "There's no point in it, I don't believe. ... Let it play out, but I don't think we need an investigation here," Hagel said.

In an editorial in Sunday's Washington Post, Kerry, Cleland and Hagel said Kerrey's admission "demonstrates the courage we all have known in him for years."

"Many people have been forced to do things in war that they are deeply ashamed of later. Yet for our country to blame the warrior instead of the war is among the worst, and, regrettably, most frequent mistakes we as a country can make," they wrote.

Cheney rejects mercy for McVeigh

■ The vice president rejects the pope's request for clemency for the Oklahoma City bomber.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Vice President Dick Cheney rejected Pope John Paul II's request that President Bush spare Timothy McVeigh's life, saying Sunday that the Oklahoma City bomber should be put to death.

"I think if there was ever a man who deserves to be executed it's probably Timothy McVeigh," Cheney said on "Fox News Sunday."

McVeigh, 33, is scheduled to be executed by lethal injection on May 16 in Terre Haute, Ind., for the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City. The blast killed 168 people, including 19 children.

Bush received a letter last week from John Paul in which the pope made his clemency request. Legal scholars said it appeared the president had no way to intervene in the execution even if he were inclined to. Bush supports capital punishment.

A White House spokeswoman said on April 27 that Bush had no intention of trying to grant clemency.

"The president has great respect for the pope, and this is a tragic situation. The president also has deep compassion and sympathy for the 168 victims of the Oklahoma City bombing and their families," spokeswoman Claire Buchan said.

Cheney went further Sunday. "I think that'd be a mistake," he said when asked about the administration's view on the pope's request.

McVeigh allowed a Feb. 16 deadline to pass without filing a request for clemency.

SAS MAKES ITS 'TRIUMPHANT' RETURN ...

Style, but no substance

Students Against Sweatshops is back and has the support of UI Student Government. Thank god it's back, because things were getting dull without it.

The group's April 26 "Sweatin' for Madison Avenue," a fashion show on the Pedestrian Mall showcasing companies that use sweatshops to produce their products, drew the spotlight back onto SAS. It seems to have been a while since the group last was the center of attention on campus. It seems as though SAS had disbanded or had given up for a while.

Last year, a person on campus could not go a day without running into the members of SAS or hear about their latest protest. This year's social movements are far fewer and less showy. Perhaps this lack of public demonstrations has even made people feel less passionate about the issue. If the people on campus aren't aware of the sweatshop problem, then they won't support and help SAS achieve its goals.

Where has SAS gone? What happened to the protests at the Pentacrest and in Mary Sue Coleman's office? This is what made people aware of SAS and the issues surrounding the treatment of workers. SAS needs to get back out raising awareness.

Meghan Bruno/The Daily Iowan

They can dress it up however they want, but if this is the best SAS can do to raise awareness, then the anti-sweatshop movement is dead.

Though SAS had a momentary step towards a victory when the UI started making companies responsible for the treatment of their workers, it did not get what it really wanted. Out of the 520 companies with which the UI has a contract, only five have not signed the contract.

One of the companies is Nike. Though this was a step in the direction of a victory for

SAS, it seemed to have stopped putting in as much of an effort. Sure, some of its protests and ways of raising awareness may seem wacky, but it made the group the center of attention. Last year, everyone knew what SAS stood for, but does everyone this year know? Probably not.

If SAS really wants to eliminate apparel that was made in sweatshops from being sold, then maybe it should put in effort as it did last year. Its relaxed and non-publicized approach is not effective.

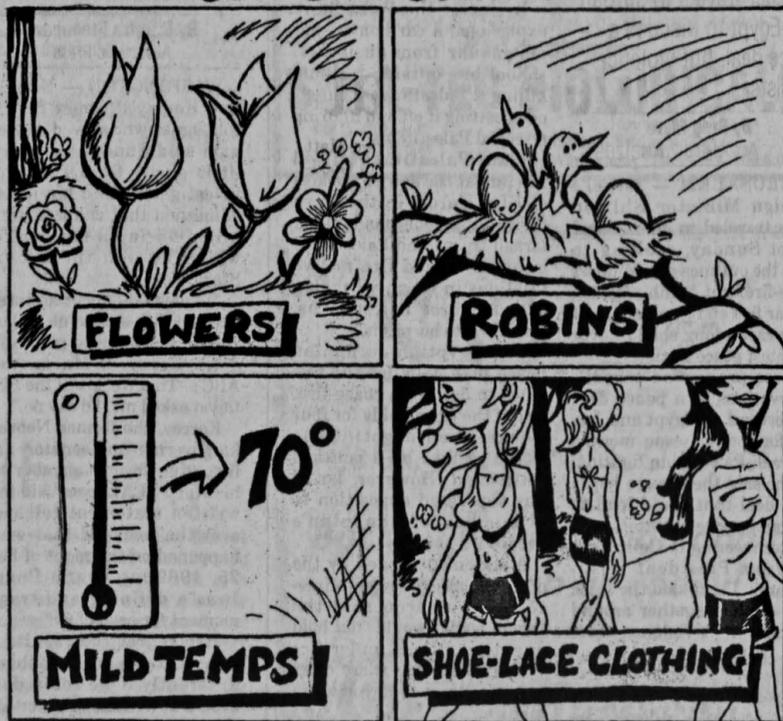

SAS needs to start getting out on campus more, raising awareness, or it should just give up. Half-measures such as "fashion shows" do not cut it.

THE PUBLIC REACTS TO THE UGLY TRUTH ...

Innocents dead for no reason

America learned two things last week.

First, former Nebraska Sen. Bob Kerrey's announcement about his raid in Vietnam showed that war results in collateral damage in the form of murdered women and children. Second, the CIA-assisted murder of missionaries in Peru demonstrates that accepting such collateral damage may also be a consequence of the war on drugs.

One thing that America must accept is that interventionist war ignores civil rights. This is true whether we intervene in foreign conflicts or private commerce. That is why the differences between Vietnam and the war on drugs are rapidly diminishing.

The war on drugs is an assault on the Bill of Rights. Innocent people are killed in the battle. Today, no-knock searches are conducted based on sketchy drug evidence. Police kick down doors, shove people to the ground, and tear apart people's living spaces. When regular people do this, we call it home invasion.

Interventionist war ignores civil rights ... the differences between Vietnam and the war on drugs are rapidly diminishing.

This is not the end of it. Drug dealers can be put to death under federal law. The military can be used against civilians when police show there is a drug nexus. Increasingly, anti-drug units resemble special-operations forces more than police forces. This is all happening inside our country.

Outside America, it gets worse. We actively involve our military in anti-drug efforts and send military "advisers" to Colombia. The situation is very similar to Vietnam under JFK.

Southern Colombia is effectively run by drug cartels, which are protected by military forces. Civilians in the area support the drug cartels because they farm illicit crops. In southern Colombia, broad civilian opposition to the drug war exists. As our involvement escalates, civilians will increasingly be staring down the barrel of American M-16s. Bob Kerrey's butchery will look trivial in comparison.

The question is, "Are we prepared to fight this war?" Are we prepared to slaughter Colombian citizens? Are we prepared for the de facto repeal of major portions of our Bill of Rights? If you are prepared to accept this collateral damage, march forward. However, if you think that "collateral damage" is a disgusting way to describe the destruction of human life and human rights, oppose the war on drugs.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Planet-X scheme outrageous

Students should be outraged that Phillip Jones, the UI vice president for student services, wants to use $50,000 in student fees to buy tickets at Planet X ("UISG frets about Planet X-type deals," DI, April 25). The plan is to buy the tickets (normally $12) at a discounted rate ($8), then sell them to students for no profit.

The goal of this venture is to encourage students to find non-alcoholic alternatives in the downtown area. It is a laudable goal. Unfortunately, you would have to be drunk, stoned or both to pay twice for a ticket. Remember, Mr. Jones proposes to use money that comes from fees that students have already paid to the university. At a time of budget cuts and tuition hikes, the office of Student Services will be doing a disservice to the students if it goes through with this plan. The $50,000 should be given to the UISG to distribute to student groups.

Stallone back in the driver's seat

■ Driven opens and seizes the top spot in the Hollywood box office.

By David Germain
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Sylvester Stallone's car-racing thriller Driven coasted to a first-place finish at the weekend box office, debuting with $13.1 million.

Driven bumped off Bridget Jones's Diary, which slipped to second place with $7.5 million in ticket sales, according to studio estimates Sunday.

Three other new films — Town & Country, One Night at McCool's and The Forsaken — had dismal openings.

Driven reunited Stallone with director Renny Harlin, who made Cliffhanger, Stallone's last big hit, in 1993.

"It's nice to see him back on top," said Dan Fellman, the head of distribution for Warner Bros., which released Driven.

Town & Country, a long-delayed romantic comedy starring Warren Beatty, Diane Keaton, Goldie Hawn and Garry Shandling, bombed with a seventh-place opening gross of $3.1 million.

Begun nearly three years ago, Town & Country was plagued by delays, with its release date pushed back 12 times since New Line first put the movie on its schedule for release in April 1999. The budget also increased by a third to approximately $80 million.

The black comedy One Night at McCool's also bombed, opening at No. 12 with $2 million.

The movie stars Liv Tyler, Matt Dillon, Paul Reiser, John Goodman and Michael Douglas.

"We believed it was a commercial film. This is disappointing," said Jack Foley, the head of distribution for USA Films. "Maybe it's because it was a black comedy, and black comedies can be a difficult sell."

The box office overall took a big dive. The top 12 movies grossed $55.2 million, down 20 percent from the same weekend a year ago.

But Hollywood's revenues so far in 2001 are 14 percent ahead of last year's record pace and heading into a summer that's crowded with potential hits, including Pearl Harbor, Planet of the Apes, Rollerball, Tomb Raider and Jurassic Park 3. Summer blockbuster season gets an early start next weekend with The Mummy Returns, the sequel to the 1999 hit.

Estimated ticket sales for April 27 through Sunday at North American theaters, according to Exhibitor Relations Co. Inc.

1. Driven, $13.1 million.
2. Bridget Jones's Diary, $7.5 million.
3. Spy Kids, $5.7 million.
4. Along Came a Spider, $5.65 million.
5. Crocodile Dundee in Los Angeles, $4.7 million.
6. Blow, $3.3 million.
7. Town & Country, $3.1 million.
8. The Forsaken, $3 million.
9. Joe Dirt, $2.7 million.
10. Freddy Got Fingered, $2.5 million.

Gigs Weekend Music Reviews

Dave Zollo and the Body Electric, Kelly Pardekooper and the Devil's House Band, the Diplomats
RiverFest, Hubbard Park, April 27
Strollers and hackey sacks outnumbered adults on April 27, when instrumental rock band the Diplomats delivered the first musical performance of RiverFest 2001.

The Diplomats' happy-go-groovy music complemented the beach-movie atmosphere created by carnival rides and families lounging on blankets. A young boy wearing a Band-Aid and adult-sized baseball cap danced to the music in a circle around his parents.

As the evening grew older, so did the audience; as it grew darker, so did the music. Kelly Pardekooper and the Devil's House Band followed the Diplomats with music as full of superstitious dread as the band's name suggests, like a slower, bluesier Credence Clearwater Revival.

Dave Zollo and the Body Electric headlined, performing songs of longing and lost love beneath the few scattered stars bright enough to pierce Iowa City's helmet of ambient light. For a moment, I wasn't certain whether I was hearing a concert or the sad, sweet soundtrack to life in the state of Iowa.

RiverFest made that life a bit sweeter. Congratulations to SCOPE for an excellent show.

The Schwag
The Q Bar, April 27

Jerry Garcia's alive, and he played at the Q on April 27. At least that's how it sounded, as the Schwag played through two enjoyable sets of energetic music. The Grateful Dead cover band out of St. Louis has devoted its playing days to honoring the band it admires.

The band got off to an early start that, to the delight of the fans, led to a more-than three-hour show. Each member of the band took a turn leading the crowd through familiar lyrics of treasured songs. With his scruffy beard and frail hair, guitarist Shawn Guyot led the charge on many drawn-out instrumental explosions as the band laid its focus on jamming out each song to the max. Jack Kirkner was also in his prime; his B3-esque keyboard solos were a definite highlight on the night. The rhythm section, featuring dreadlocked bassist Jimmy Tebeau and fun-loving drummer Dave Klien, kept the band in line with its tight and cohesive beats.

If a show's quality is judged by the enjoyment of the fans, then the hundreds of twirling dancers would lead me to believe that the Schwag deserve a 10.

Neverland never ends

NEW YORK (AP) — Former child star Macaulay Culkin says Michael Jackson is one of his "very best friends in the world" and the two formed a bond over what it was like to grow up in the spotlight.

"We had very similar experiences in childhood," Culkin told New York magazine in its May 7 issue. "We're both going to be 8 years old forever in some place because we never had a chance to be 8 when we actually were."

Culkin, now 20, is starring in the play Madame Melville in New York, his first work as an actor in six years. He is best known for the 1990 hit Home Alone.

Culkin told the magazine that he first became friends with Jackson when he was 9.

Jackson's sprawling home, Neverland was a child's dream, with "every kind of soda in the world there, every kind of candy. A two-floor arcade, a carnival and a movie theater," said Culkin.

Uganda pulls out of Congo pact

■ The Ugandan president denies that his country has been plundering Congo's minerals.

By Geoffrey Muleme
Associated Press

KAMPALA, Uganda — Uganda's president withdrew Sunday from a peace accord designed to end Congo's 2½-year civil war, infuriated by a U.N. report accusing his nation and other parties in the conflict of plundering Congo's vast natural resources.

The United Nations is helping broker an end to the war, which now involves five foreign armies and has left the Congolese government holding just 40 percent of a country the size of Western Europe. Aid workers say the conflict is indirectly responsible for the deaths of at least 1 million Congolese and the displacement of 2 million more.

Uganda's withdrawal could give the Congolese rebels it backs less incentive to stick to the peace agreement, reached in Lusaka, Zambia, in 1999 by all warring sides. It could also enable Uganda to arm those rebels, unrestrained by the accord's prohibition on further military aid.

But Ugandan President Yoweri Museveni also reiterated his commitment to pulling his troops from neighboring Congo, saying now that they have defeated Ugandan rebels operating there, it was time for his forces to leave.

Some participants appeared unconcerned that Uganda was pulling out of the peace agreement and were pleased that Museveni would still withdraw his troops.

"If the government decides to withdraw its forces from the Congo, it's always favorable. This is in line with the Lusaka agreement," said Kamel Morjane, the U.N. special representative for Congo. "If all parties show their goodwill, there is no risk."

Uganda and Rwanda both sent troops into Congo in 1998 to back Congolese rebels seeking to overthrow former President Laurent Kabila. Both countries were also acting to secure their borders from attacks by Rwandan and Ugandan rebels operating from within Congo. Angola, Zimbabwe and Namibia sent in troops to support Congo's government.

Despite the 1999 accord, sporadic fighting has continued.

Kikaya Bin Karubi, the Congolese information minister, welcomed the promised troop withdrawal and said his country would stick with the Lusaka peace agreement no matter what.

The leader of the Ugandan-backed rebels, Congolese Liberation Front Chairman Jean-Pierre Bemba, said the decision would have little effect on the war because Ugandan troops had not been involved in the fighting. Uganda is estimated to have had at least 10,000 troops in Congo at the peak of the war.

Museveni said his decision was motivated by an April 16 U.N. report that implicated his country, members of his government and his family in the alleged plundering of resources from Congo. The report called for sanctions against Uganda and Rwanda and the prosecution of their leaders and rebel leaders for economic crimes.

"The U.N. report does not only distort the source of the conflict in the Great Lakes region and malign us, but they also seek to destroy the Lusaka peace agreement. The report is in the main, shoddy, malicious and a red herring," Museveni said in a statement in the government-owned New Vision newspaper.

WORLD BRIEF

In Macedonia, ethnic violence flares anew

SKOPJE, Macedonia (AP) — Macedonia sent reinforcements Sunday to the border region with Kosovo a day after a rebel ambush killed eight government commandos and raised fears of renewed ethnic violence.

The attack on April 28 near the village of Vejce, on the border with Kosovo, was the deadliest incident since clashes between government troops and ethnic Albanian militants began in February.

Six members of the elite "Wolves" security unit also were wounded in the ambush, which occurred in a gorge near Vejce. The militants fired mortar rounds and rocket-propelled grenades, a military spokesman said.

The attack shattered hopes of lasting calm in the wake of a government offensive last month that appeared to have dispersed the rebels.

Ethnic Albanian militants want the Macedonian Constitution rewritten to guarantee their equal status with the majority Slavs. This is unacceptable to the government, which argues it would lead to a de-facto division of Macedonia. Ethnic Albanians make up approximately one-third of the country's 2 million people. So far, the ethnic violence has been relatively contained, with the militants failing to win wide support.

Passions ran high at Sunday's funeral of 25-year-old Igor Kosteski, one of those killed in the April 28 ambush.

"This was murder. They killed eight young people for nothing," said his father, Milivoj.

Though no new violence was reported, police re-imposed a 10 p.m. to 5 a.m. curfew for Tetovo. Security forces battled insurgents for weeks on the outskirts of Macedonia's second-largest city before pushing them back last month.

11 p.m. last call all wet, Britain says

■ If, as expected, Labor wins the elections in June, one of the first things to change will be last call.

Associated Press

LONDON — Britain's tradition-soaked pub culture is set to see its biggest change in decades — an easing of the nation's strict 11 p.m. last call for alcohol, a government minister said Sunday.

The long-debated licensing change to allow pubs, bars, restaurants and stores to sell alcohol later — and perhaps around the clock — is slated to be one of the first acts of Prime Minister Tony Blair's government if it wins a second term of office this summer, officials said.

While it may seem counter-intuitive that keeping pubs open longer will minimize problems with drunkenness, the Home Office argues that the current limit encourages binge drinking before closing and causes chaotic crowds of revelers to spill into the streets all at once, straining nighttime law enforcement.

"Our proposals will deal with the antiquated and bureaucratic licensing system and modernize it," said Home Office Minister Mike O'Brien. "They will give business greater freedom, protect local residents, help the police deal with law and order, and give the public more opportunities to socialize."

Blair's chief political rival, the Conservative Party, decried the announcement as a cheap attempt to grab votes ahead of the national election, planned for early June.

"How typical and opportunistic of Labor to revisit this in the run-up to the election," said Ann Widdecombe, a senior Conservative lawmaker.

Blair's Labor Party holds a commanding lead over the Conservatives, according to independent polls, and is widely expected to win re-election.

Proposals examined in a recent Home Office report include staggering closings from 11 p.m. until the early morning hours or lifting national restrictions altogether to allow local communities to determine closing times.

A change would "end the unnaturally early race to drink as much as possible before closing time, when many are not yet ready to go," the report said.

Mark Hastings, a spokesman for the Brewers and Licensed Retailers Association, applauded the announcement, saying that the current closing time — one of the earliest in Western Europe — treats Britons "like children."

SPORTS BRIEF

Wrigley may get restaurant

CHICAGO (AP) — Even bleacher burns deserve a good meal. That seems to be the sentiment of the Tribune Co., which wants to convert a closed-off bleacher area of Wrigley Field into a restaurant. The restaurant, which would be called the "Batter's Eye," is part of an effort by the Cubs' owners to keep the team economically competitive by increasing revenues. City Hall has been briefed on the plan and has not voiced any early objections. The restaurant is part of a package of proposals that includes a 2,500-seat bleacher expansion, new washrooms and a brick entrance to the bleachers.

Hawkeyes back in title hunt after sweep

Iowa sweeps first place Michigan to move into a tie for the Big Ten lead.

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

Iowa softball coach Gayle Blevins has said the key to success is not allowing one game to become more important than another.

However, in order for the No. 15 Hawkeyes to catch No. 21 Michigan in the conference race, her Iowa team needed four road victories over the weekend.

The focus had to remain game by game. Iowa could not afford to look past Michigan State in anticipation of the series with first-place Michigan. One loss may have eliminated the Hawkeyes' chances for a regular-season Big Ten title repeat.

Apparently Iowa's mindset worked. After sweeping Michigan State, 3-0 and 4-1, on April 27, the Hawkeyes traveled to Ann Arbor, Mich., and promptly took care of the Wolverines, 1-0 on April 28 and 1-0 on Sunday, boarding the charter bus back to Iowa once again in a tie for first in the conference.

"We had a really good series on the road," Blevins said. "We came in confident and relaxed with good energy the entire time. These were great team wins."

The steadiness in Blevins' voice indicated that she had no desire to over-emphasize any one win, even if two came against the Wolverines, Iowa's only challenger for a Big Ten crown.

The Hawkeye pitching staff and defense shut down the most productive offense in the Big Ten. Michigan entered the two-game series on April 28, batting a collective .300, but Iowa junior Kristi Hanks and freshman Sarah Thomson combined to throw 15 scoreless innings, holding Michigan to eight hits between the two games.

One run was all the Hawkeyes needed to come away victorious in both contests against the Wolverines.

On April 28, Iowa got its game-winning run in the top of the eighth when sophomore Jessica Bashor's single to center field plated senior Erin Doud.

In Sunday's triumph, sophomore Kristin Johnson led off the game with a double to center field. Junior Liz Dennis laid down a sacrifice bunt, moving Johnson to third with no outs. She came across and score after senior Katy Jendrzewski put a ball in play that Michigan first baseman Marissa Young mishandled.

"Typically, against good defense and good pitching like

Cleveland aces Big Ten honor

For the second year in a row, Iowa's Tyler Cleveland is named Big Ten Player of the Year.

By Nick Firschau
 The Daily Iowan

Tyler Cleveland was honored with the most prestigious award of his tennis career on April 26, but he wasn't even at the banquet to receive it. He had something a little more important to do.

Iowa's Cleveland became the first player in history to receive the honor of Big Ten Player of the Year two years in a row on April 26, but he was serving in his brother's wedding in his hometown of Fairfield, Iowa.

The award was announced at the annual Big Ten banquet, held after the first round of the Big Ten Tournament in Madison, Wis.

"I hadn't even heard about it," Cleveland said from Fairfield. "I'm sure Coach Houghton called me after he found out, but it's been completely hectic around here. I had to call Jake Wilson on Saturday morning, and he told me about it."

The award comes on the heels of a 19-3 campaign during his senior year, which served as the final chapter for Iowa's winningest men's tennis player in history. Cleveland was also named to the All-Big Ten team for the fourth-consecutive season. He boasted a 9-2 conference record, with his final Big Ten match ending with a 6-3, 6-3 straight-set win over Indiana's Milan Rakvica in the Hawkeyes' first-round loss to the Hoosiers.

Minnesota's Harsh Mankad had the conference's next best conference record at No. 1 singles at 6-4. "This award means a little more than it did last season," Cleveland said. "The No. 1 singles' spot has been a lot tougher this season, and it's so balanced. And I've had a few more things going on in my life outside of tennis."

Cleveland will now await his draw for the NCAA Tournament, which he expects to learn on May 4. Regardless of his seeding and eventual finish in the tournament, Cleveland will finish his career with Iowa's all-time winning percentage record in spring dual competition at .786 (66-18). "He's definitely the greatest player I have coached in 20 years of coaching," Iowa coach Steve Houghton said. "By winning it this year, he's going to go down as one of the top players in Big Ten history."

Cleveland said he can't be sure if he'll get selected for the NCAA Tournament, partly based on the fact that national rankings play a vital role in the selection process. Cleveland is ranked 70th in the nation because he posted no record in the fall while he was playing in entry level tournaments for the ATP Tour. "Right now, I'm hoping I'll get in," Cleveland said. "Some of the same people that voted for this award will vote for the tournament bids, so hopefully I'll get ranked in the top four in the region. But you never know."

Team Target crew member Francis O'Riley loads up one of its cars after the Firestone Firehawk 600 CART race was postponed Sunday.

CART drivers refuse to race

In an unprecedented display, racecar drivers cancel an event due to safety concerns.

By Stephen Hawkins
 Associated Press

FORT WORTH, Texas — With drivers worried they could pass out at speeds of more than 230 mph, CART took the extraordinary step Sunday of calling off its inaugural race at Texas Motor Speedway.

Some drivers were dizzy and disoriented after practicing for the Firestone Firehawk 600. CART medical officials found G forces were almost twice as high as normal on the high-banked track.

After meeting with the drivers, CART postponed the race just before it was scheduled to begin.

"The G forces were beyond what I could have ever imagined," said Michael Andretti, the biggest winner in CART history. "You feel very compressed when you get down in the corners. Everything is just compressing your body. It's a feeling I've never felt before."

This was the first safety related postponement by CART since 1985, when tire concerns delayed a race at Michigan International Speedway for six days.

This time, series officials were caught off guard by the impact of the 24-degree banking at Texas. By comparison, the banking at Indianapolis is just 9 degrees, and no other track in the CART series is steeper than 18 degrees.

Dr. Steve Olvey, CART's medical director, said extended exposure to the G force felt in practice could have caused some drivers to lose consciousness during the race, which was scheduled for 250 laps on the 1.5-mile quad-oval.

"This is a situation that in my 25 years involved in motorsports I've never heard of or seen," Olvey said.

The track had no input into the discussions Sunday morning, general manager Eddie Gossage said. He was critical of CART for its dealings with the track.

Gossage said safety questions were raised by track officials as recently as 10 days ago. There was no open testing, however, and the standard accepted by CART was the 220-224-mph range established by Kenny Brack during a private test in December.

Brack earned the pole at 233.447 mph during qualifying Saturday. During practice sessions with most of the cars on the track, some drivers were turning speeds as high as 236.9 mph.

"It should have been sufficiently tested months and months and months ago," Gossage said. "Both TMS and the fans are frustrated by what has happened."

Teams said the G forces were above 5, when a range in the 3s is generally considered as

Postseason hopes look dim for Iowa baseball

The Hawkeye baseball team's split with Northwestern may not be good enough.

By Todd Brommelkamp
 The Daily Iowan

There may be two weeks remaining on the schedule for the Iowa baseball team, but time may already have run out on their hopes of making the postseason.

The Hawkeyes avoided a weekend sweep at Northwestern by winning their final two games against the Wildcats, but they did not get the sweep they needed to bolster themselves in the standings.

The split moves the Hawkeyes to 16-23 overall and 7-14 in the Big Ten. Iowa now sits in ninth place with the top six teams going to the conference tournament. Iowa does not have any conference games until the final week of the season, when it traveled to first-place Purdue on May 12-14.

If there was any pressure on the team heading into the Northwestern series, it showed in the first two games, as Iowa's losing streak reached a season-high nine games.

April 27 appeared to be a bad omen for Iowa, as the series began with a 13-2 drubbing by the Wildcats. Iowa scored its only two runs in the top of the first, when Toby Humes was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded. Brian Burks added a sacrifice fly to plate the other run.

Wildcat batters racked up 19 hits in the offensive outburst against four Iowa pitchers, including starter Steve Sharpe, who held his ground until the seventh inning, when Northwestern put up seven runs on the board.

Iowa pitching shut the Wildcats down for the remainder of the series, but with the exception of Sunday, received very little help in the final three games of the series.

Game one of the April 28 double-header saw freshman Ryan Mentkowski allow just six hits in a complete-game effort, but Iowa fell, 3-1. The Wildcats scored all three of their runs in the third inning, when they collected five of their hits off the lefty. Following the third, Mentkowski did not surrender a hit and at one point retired nine consecutive batters.

Despite the fine effort on the mound from Mentkowski, Iowa could muster just one run, which came when Alex Dvorsky singled home Ian Mattiace following a lead-off double.

The pendulum finally swung in the right direction for the Hawkeyes beginning in the second game. Chad Blackwell and Reed Pawelk combined to shutout the Wildcats on four hits. Blackwell evened his record at 3-3, while Pawelk nailed down his fifth save.

Brad Carlson provided the offensive spark Iowa had lacked in its previous games with a two-run homer in the second.

Starter Nick Jensen combined with Humes to salvage the series with a 9-2 victory Sunday. Jensen hurled five

Johnson ends U.S. career with a flourish

Michael Johnson wins the 1,600-meter relay at the Penn Relays.

By Bert Rosenthal
 Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Michael Johnson ended his gold-plated career in the United States with a fitting finish.
 The 33-year-old Johnson, who is retiring from track at the end of the season, showed in his final race the same competitive drive that has helped him to five Olympic gold medals, nine world championships and world records in the 200 and 400 meters.
 Taking the baton about even with Jamaica's Michael Blackwood on the anchor leg of the Olympic Development 1,600-meter relay at the Penn Relays on April 28, Johnson fell behind briefly, eliciting a roar from the raucous Jamaican fans in the meet-record crowd of 49,922 at Franklin Field.

Then, after running alongside Blackwood or off his right shoulder, Johnson went into overdrive with just over 150 meters remaining. He easily swept past Blackwood, wheeled around the final turn and pounded down the stretch to a 12-meter victory in 2 minutes, 58.60 seconds.
 "I let him set the pace for a while," Johnson said. "The anchor leg is usually boring because when I get the stick we're about five, six or seven meters ahead."
 Johnson's split of 44.2 — he eased up just before the finish line — matched that of Olympic 400-meter hurdles champion Angelo Taylor, who ran the second leg. Leonard Byrd ran 45.4 on leadoff and Olympian Jerome Young ran 44.8 on the third leg.
 Johnson, who is not running any individual races during his farewell tour, savored the moment.
 He jogged counterclockwise around the track in a victory lap, vaying to the crowd and high-fiving spectators, a huge smile crossing his face. He said he wanted to enjoy this year, and not have to worry about the pressure of running individual races, especially in high-caliber international competition. He wanted to interact more with the fans, and now he was getting that chance.

 As Johnson loped around the track, public address announcer Jack O'Reilly said, "Thanks for the memories," and the crowd, which already was giving him a standing ovation, applauded with extra enthusiasm.
 Johnson glowed.
 Afterward, he was praised by his fellow athletes.
 "I wouldn't have missed that race for the world," said Marijon Jones, winner of five Olympic medals last year, who anchored the U.S. women's team to victory in the 1,600 relay. "I was teasing him after my race ... asking him if he was going to get emotional. He said no.

 "Now, I can tell my grandchildren that I saw one of the best athletes in the world compete."
 Latasha Colander-Richardson, a member of winning women's team who ran with Jones on the winning team at the Sydney Games, also relished watching Johnson run.
 "He's a 400-meter runner with the essence and beauty of running the quarter-mile," she said. "He has the beauty to turn it on and overcome. He has a beautiful talent ... just incredible."
 Johnson's relay teammates echoed the praise.
 "He's a great athlete," Byrd said. "The opportunity to run a relay with Mike — my first one — has always been a dream of mine. It's sad to see him go."
 Taylor said, "I grew up watching Mike run. I've learned a lot from him. It's always an honor to run with him."

Stern says Vancouver not a mistake
 TORONTO (AP) — David Stern insists the league did not make a mistake expanding into Vancouver even though the Grizzlies hope to move to Memphis, Tenn.
 "Absolutely not," the NBA commissioner said Sunday before the Knicks-Raptors playoff game. "The ownership in Vancouver, and the Vancouver business community didn't hit it off the way I would have hoped."
 "But we did our part. I still think Vancouver is a world-class city, and perhaps we didn't have the right mix of timing and ownership, and perhaps we couldn't identify in Vancouver the right mix of corporate resolve."
 The Grizzlies finished their sixth season with a franchise-high 23 wins. Owner Michael Heisley says he incurred losses of $46 million this year, his first with the team.

Jagr likely to sit again tonight
 PITTSBURGH — Jaromir Jagr, still bothered by a couple of injuries he doesn't want to detail, said there is little chance he will play in Game 3 Monday against Buffalo.
 The Penguins' star sat out Pittsburgh's 3-1 victory on April 28 in Buffalo with what was described as a charney horse, a bruised muscle that results in bleeding.
 Jagr skated by himself during a 45-minute practice Sunday, then said he would only hurt the Penguins by returning too soon from injuries that had not fully healed. The five-time NHL scoring champion would not say what the injuries were.

 "It's playoff time and I'm not going to tell," Jagr said. "I know it might look funny to people, that it's a charley horse. There are some other things beside that, but I'm not going to tell anybody."
At least 7 killed in crush at Congo soccer stadium
 LUBUMBASHI, Congo — Panicked crowds crushed at least seven people to death Sunday in a riot at a match between two of Congo's top soccer teams.
 Another 51 people were injured, Congo Information Minister Kikaya Bin Karubi said.
 "This is the worst football disaster in memory" in Congo, Karubi said.

Ken Griffey Jr. placed on disabled list
 CINCINNATI — Ken Griffey Jr., who has been unable to do anything but pinch hit because of a hamstring injury, was placed on the 15-day disabled list Sunday.
 The Cincinnati Reds finally made the move prior to Sunday's game at Colorado. But they don't plan to make a corresponding roster move until Tuesday, when they open a series at home against the Los Angeles Dodgers.
 That is when Deion Sanders becomes eligible for promotion from Triple-A Louisville. Sanders, 33, has not played in the major leagues since 1997, when he quit baseball to concentrate on football.

Lakers give Blazers early exit in round 1

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — It's difficult to believe that, at one time this season, the Los Angeles Lakers actually feared the Portland Trail Blazers.

Shaquille O'Neal had 25 points and 15 rebounds, and Kobe Bryant added 22 points as the Lakers completed a three-game sweep of the Trail Blazers with a 99-86 victory on Sunday.

The Lakers, who began their drive to repeat as champions by winning the final eight games of the regular season, will play the Sacramento-Phoenix winner in the second round.

Portland, meanwhile, lost for the sixth-straight time and 17th time in 25 games. The team with the highest payroll in NBA history — $89.7 million — faces an offseason of uncertainty. Coach Mike Dunleavy could be fired, some players could be traded, and even general manager Bob Whitsitt's job isn't safe.

Damon Stoudamire and Steve Smith each scored 25 points for the Blazers, and Rasheed Wallace had 13 rebounds but was a major disappointment on offense, missing 15 of 19 shots.

The Lakers beat the Blazers the same way they did the first two games — by getting the ball to O'Neal, although he didn't see it much early on. O'Neal had just two shots in the first quarter — nine fewer than Bryant — and three rebounds.

O'Neal returned to dominance in the second half, however, and the Blazers — without suspended Dale Davis and Stacey Augmon — couldn't handle him.

A hook shot by Arvydas Sabonis a minute into the fourth quarter got Portland within 79-74, but O'Neal made two-straight hooks to push the lead to nine. The Blazers missed six of their first seven shots and started to hear boos from the Rose Garden crowd.

Derek Fisher's 3-pointer made it 87-74 with 9:01 left. O'Neal, who in his recent biography said he "owns" the 7-foot-3 Sabonis, provided the icing with a dunk that bounced off Sabonis' head.

Bryant added a playoff career-high nine assists, and Fisher had 17 points.

Davis was suspended for throwing an elbow at the Lakers' Robert Horry in Game 2, and Augmon was punished for coming off the bench during the altercation.

The Lakers kept Portland from reaching the NBA finals last year by rallying from a 15-point deficit in the fourth quarter to win Game 7 of the conference finals. But the Blazers took two of four games from L.A. in the regular season, and until their slump, Portland seemed a good match for the Lakers.

Kings 104, Suns 96

PHOENIX — There is more to the Sacramento Kings than flamboyance and razzle-dazzle.

Old-fashioned basketball virtues — rebounding and free-throw shooting — have the Kings within one victory of their first playoff series triumph in 20 years.

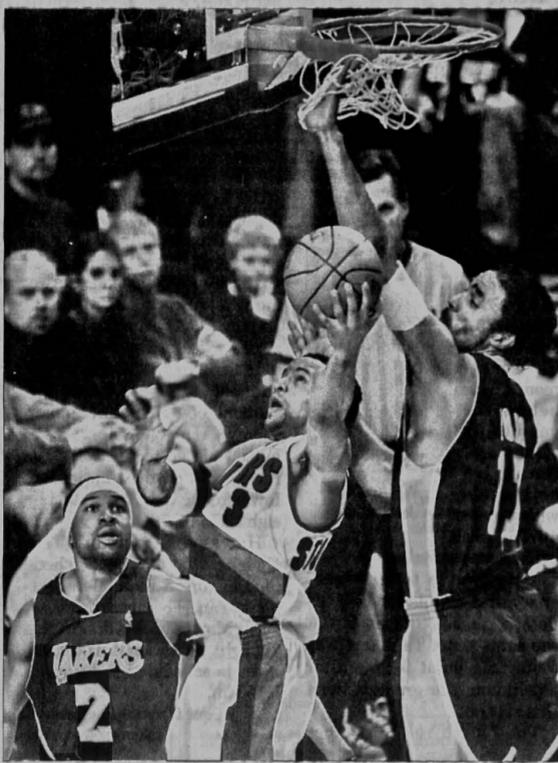

Sacramento wrestled the home-court advantage back from the Phoenix Suns Sunday with a 104-96 victory.

Chris Webber, smothered by defenders much of the game, scored 23 points for the Kings, while Predrag Stojakovic added 21, and Jason Williams had 14, including nine in a row in the third quarter on two 3-pointers and a three-point play.

Sacramento leads the best-of-five series, 2-1. Game 4 is Wednesday night in Phoenix.

Doug Christie added 17 points, including a crucial 3-pointer that put Sacramento up 97-92 with 1:03 remaining. Six Kings, including all five starters, scored in double figures.

After Phoenix had rallied to tie it 90-90, Sacramento outscored the Suns 14-6 over the final three minutes.

Portland's Damon Stoudamire puts up a shot between Lakers Derek Fisher and Rick Fox during the first half of their NBA playoff game in Portland, Ore., Sunday.

Jason Kidd had 19 points and 16 assists for the Suns, who had taken the homecourt edge with an 86-83 victory in Game 1 a week earlier.

But the Suns were in foul trouble almost from the start in this one, and the Kings rallied from 17 points down after one quarter to get within two at halftime.

Tony Delk scored 18 points for Phoenix, while Shawn Marion added 14 points and 10 rebounds but shot just 4-for-15.

Knicks 97, Raptors 89

TORONTO — Resilient as ever, the New York Knicks didn't even need Marcus Camby to beat the Toronto Raptors.

Allan Houston, Latrell Sprewell and Charlie Ward hit several clutch shots in the fourth quarter Sunday as the Knicks shrugged off the absence of their leading rebounder and shot blocker and defeated Toronto 97-89.

The Knicks made up for their lack of height by making the most of every possession. They shot 53 percent from the field, held the lead for all but a few moments and performed down the stretch like a play-off-tested team.

After Toronto pulled within two points with 1:46 left, the Knicks scored the next six points — two each by Sprewell, Houston and Ward — to lock up the victory and a 2-1 lead in the best-of-five series.

Game 4 is Wednesday night.

Houston finished with 24 points, Sprewell had 20 and Glen Rice 18. Ward scored all nine of his points in the fourth quarter for the Knicks, who always seem to play their best when the circumstances are most dire.

This time, they had to overcome the absence of Camby as he continues to try to recover from the trauma of having his mother and two sisters held hostage last Monday. A suspect has been charged with sexually assaulting one of Camby's sisters.

Rescuer: Earnhardt's seat belt was intact

■ The first emergency technician who reached the racers' car first said his seat belt was not broken.

Associated Press

ORLANDO, Fla. — Dale Earnhardt's seat belt was intact after his fatal Daytona 500 crash, said one of the first rescuers on the scene, who said he had problems unbuckling it. The emergency medical technician's recollection contradicts NASCAR's claim that the belt was broken in the crash.

Tommy Propst, an Orange County firefighter and emergency medical technician who was one of the first on the scene after the accident, said in an interview with the Orlando Sentinel that he struggled to pull open the seat-belt buckle before finally releasing it.

NASCAR claims that Earnhardt's left lap belt broke when his No. 3 Chevrolet crashed into the track wall in the final lap of the Feb. 18 race.

"Somebody hollered, 'I'll cut it.' I said, 'No, let me try it.' I reached over, pulled, and I had to really jerk. I pulled hard, and that's when it come open," Propst said. "If it would have been broken, the whole thing would have come open because I was jerking. ... It was in one piece at the time."

Propst, a 24-year veteran of the Orange County Fire Rescue, said no one from NASCAR has yet questioned him about what he found when he reached Earnhardt's car less than a minute after the 4:39 p.m. crash.

"If they're doing this big investigation and they wanted to know the truth, why wouldn't they interview the one that took the seat belt off?" he said in the interview, published Sunday.

Efforts by The Associated Press to reach Propst were unsuccessful. A telephone operator said Propst's number was unlisted and unpublished.

Winston Cup director Gary Nelson disagreed with Propst's account.

Nelson said that to his knowledge, the only person in the car was a female rescue worker. A male rescue worker was kneeling and leaning in the other window, he said.

"When the woman tried to unhook his belts, she said she didn't find the buckle in the usual place," Nelson told the Associated Press Sunday. "They searched for it and found it wedged over at one side. They said the buckle was out of place and the belt seemed loose."

NASCAR has refused to display the seatbelt and is conducting its own investigation by unidentified experts expected to continue throughout the summer. NASCAR officials have not said whether the details of the investigation would be made public.

"I don't know of anybody that does a big investigation and tells the world their conclusions on a daily basis until the investigation is concluded," NASCAR Chairman Bill France told the AP.

Earnhardt's autopsy found that the base of his skull was cracked, causing massive internal injuries and resulting in an almost instant death from the impact of the crash.

Similar injuries caused the deaths of three other drivers last year, causing some to question whether NASCAR should require drivers to wear safety devices that restrain the head and neck and keep them from being jolted forward.

At a news conference a week after the fatal crash, NASCAR officials said the seven-time Winston Cup champion's seat belt was broken.

Steve Bohannon, an emergency-room doctor who worked on Earnhardt after the crash, said he thought the faulty belt allowed Earnhardt's head to strike the steering wheel of his Chevrolet.

St. Louis jumps out to 2-0 lead over the Stars with a 2-1 victory

DALLAS (AP) — The St. Louis Blues are starting to look like the team that was so dominating early this season.

Scott Young scored a short-handed goal, Marty Reasoner tapped in another goal, and Roman Turek made 28 saves as the Blues beat the Dallas Stars, 2-1, Sunday night to take a 2-0 lead in the second-round series.

Dallas played without center Mike Modano, who sprained his left ankle in the opener, and in the first period lost center Shaun Van Allen after he took a puck to his mouth. Forward John MacLean was lost to a bloody nose in the third period.

The best-of-seven series will shift to St. Louis for Game 3 Tuesday night, and the Blues will have history on their side.

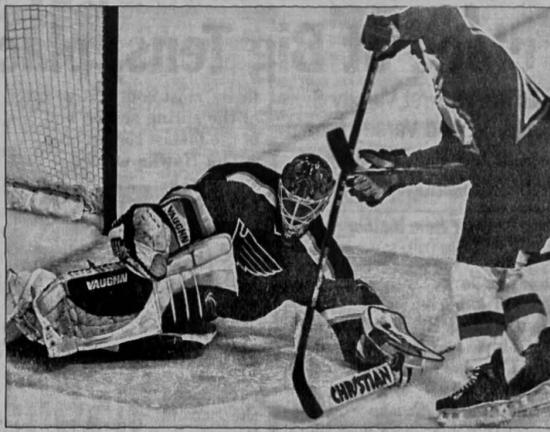

They've won all nine series when winning the first two games, while the Stars haven't overcome an 0-2 hole since 1968 in the franchise's first-ever postseason series.

St. Louis also is playing at the same high level it enjoyed before injuries to several top players. Now healthy and having adjusted to several newcomers, the Blues have won four straight playoff games and not allowed a power-play goal in eight postseason games.

Reasoner, the surprise hero of Game 1 with two goals and an assist, scored easily 85 seconds into this game after Keith Tkachuk stole the puck from Dallas' Darryl Sydor and pulled goalie Ed Belfour out of position.

Belfour was out of position again on Young's goal midway through the first period, but this time it was his own fault.

Having overplayed Young's rush to his left, Belfour was slow to set himself when Young — St. Louis' leading goal-scorer this season — came from behind the net and fired on goal. The puck went in off Belfour's leg.

The Blues' goals came on their first and third shots. They wouldn't beat Belfour again as he made some spectacular saves in snuffing their next 21 attempts on goal.

Dallas came out firing at Turek, getting off more shots in the first 15 minutes than in the first two periods of Game 1 combined. Turek handled them all, then saw only five shots in the second — none for the first 8 minutes.

Joe Nieuwendyk redirected a pass from Brett Hull to spoil Turek's shutout with 52 seconds left and Dallas playing with an empty net. The Stars got three more shots off in the closing seconds, but couldn't convert as Turek responded to 5-0-2 against his old team.

The game was much more physical than the opener, putting lots of blood on the ice.

Van Allen was hurt when he blocked a shot by Al MacInnis with his stick and it ricocheted into his mouth.

St. Louis defenseman Bryce Salvador didn't return after cutting his head against the boards on a check by Dallas' Benoit Hogue. No penalty was called.

2001 DRAKE RELAYS

Hawks happy with Drake performances

■ Freshman Adam Kunkel has a big weekend for Iowa.

By Julie Matolo
The Daily Iowan

Iowa coach Larry Wieczorek had an endless list of good things to say about his Hawkeyes, following three days of successful performances at the Drake Relays.

Standing alone, the accomplishments of the Iowa men's track and field team at the enormous national meet speak for themselves.

Five bronze medals, two NCAA provisional qualifying marks, personal-best and season-best performances highlighted the Hawkeyes' version of the 92nd annual Drake Relays in Des Moines.

"We didn't get any gold like last year with Stetson Steele," Wieczorek said. "We came home though with a bundle of bronze, a better track team, and we are peaking at the right time before our Twilight meet and Big Tens."

Freshman Adam Kunkel helped the Hawkeyes earn two NCAA provisional qualifying marks. Competition began on day one of competition when he provisionally qualified for the championships after winning his heat in the 400-meter hurdles with a career-best time of 51.19. Kunkel went on to place fourth (51.89) in the finals of the same event on day two of competition.

"It is hard to say enough good things about Adam Kunkel," said Wieczorek. "As a freshman, he has done awesome."

In the same day, Kunkel went on to help the 4x400 relay squad earn a NCAA provisional qualifying time of 3:07.00 and qualify for the finals. This is the ninth-fastest time in school history.

"We have been focusing on performing well at Drake," Kunkel said. "I am ecstatic that I did well. I had six good races and no disappointment. I had never been to a meet like that with such an intense atmosphere and so many track fans."

Russell Peterson also ran both the 4x100 and the 4x400 in the prelims and the finals. The sophomore helped the quad to its third-place finish in both events with times of 40.75 and 3:07.36, respectively.

"That was a tough weekend, and I am glad it is over," Peterson said. "It was fun at the same time. The meet was a starting point for me after not having the greatest start this season."

The fourth relay member who ran the lead leg of the 4x400 and brought home the 4x100 was Tim Dodge. The senior also ran a personal best of 10.53 to advance to the finals and later place fifth in the 100-meter finals, after running a season best of 10.49.

The thrower force added two more third places to the list. Jeremy Allen earned one in the discus with a distance of 179-01. Allen finished eighth in the hammer (191-0) and 10th in the shot put (55-05). In the hammer throw, Arno van der Westhuizen placed third at 212-10. Freshman Ken Kemeny led Iowa in the shot put, placing eighth (56-01).

Hawkeye legend Tim Dwight, who had been scheduled to run in the 200-meters, had to cancel because of illness.

On May 5, Iowa will host the Twilight Invitational. The co-ed meet is scheduled to begin at 5:15 p.m.

Hawkeyes find Drake competition tough

■ However, Iowa did have good performances in their heats.

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

Despite five season-best times, it became apparent quickly that it was not going to be the Hawkeyes' weekend at the Drake Relays.

Still, the team members were in good spirits because, with a home meet Saturday followed by the Big Ten championships, there are bigger battles to be won down the road.

Although the Iowa athletes did well in their individual heats, they for the most part failed to qualify for the finals, often just missing the cut-off time. The competition was unlike anything team members had previously seen.

"It was an eye-opener to show us track is a tough sport," said freshman sprinter Tamara Dixon. "It makes you want to train harder and keep focusing

All in all, it was not a bad weekend. While we missed the finals, we had some season bests.

— James Grant,
Iowa coach

on getting better."

The team had a mixed reaction to competing with the nation's best. An easier field might have led to some top-three finishes.

"All in all, it was not a bad weekend," said Iowa coach James Grant. "While we missed the finals, we had some season-bests. When you have season-bests, you can't get down on them too much."

The 4x200-meter relay preliminaries might be the perfect example of how the weekend went. Iowa's team of Dixon, Colleen Prendergast, Kristen Knight and Jiselle Providence recorded a season-best time of 1:38.73. That mark was the second-best time in their heat and ninth-best time overall. The bad news was only the top eight qualified for the finals.

"It was disappointing just missing finals by a couple of seconds, yet I would rather have us cut down our scores," Dixon said. "Not making the finals shows how competitive it really was."

Grant also thought the competition at Drake was even better than usual.

"The competition was extraordinary," he said. "I can't remember a time when our 4x200 and 4x400 relay teams got that fast of times and didn't make it."

Iowa was expected to make a run at the 4x100-meter finals, but Prendergast pulled a hamstring on the first leg of the event and pulled up.

Sarah Steffen clocked a personal best (60.37) in the 400-meter hurdles prelims but didn't qualify for the final of that event. Sarah Arens finished a somewhat lackluster ninth in the 5,000-meter run.

Despite the disappointing places, the Hawkeyes seemed to enjoy the atmosphere at arguably the most prestigious event in track.

"The crowd was great. I was surprised how everyone was into everything," Dixon said. "When Colleen went down, they were really supportive. The crowd made it fun to race."

Iowa will now host the third annual Musco Twilight Invitational Saturday at the Francis X. Cretzmeier Track. Minnesota, Wichita State and Illinois State will be among the schools sending teams for the evening event.

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Injury-plagued Hawks lose Big Ten opener, wait for NCAA bid

■ Iowa drops a 4-2 loss to Ohio State and will find out if it makes the NCAAs Thursday.

By Nick Firschau
The Daily Iowan

Just when it seemed as if the Iowa women's tennis team couldn't possibly take another lump, the battered Hawkeyes were forced to grin and bear an early exit from the Big Ten Tournament.

The depleted Iowa squad could only muster two doubles wins and a win at the sixth singles spot in a 4-2 loss to Ohio State at the Stickney Tennis Center in Columbus on April 27.

The Hawkeyes (12-9, 6-5 in the Big Ten) entered the tournament already facing an injury that had sidelined their most consistent player in lineup.

We were just too thin. We were playing without Jennifer, and Steffi couldn't play. We just couldn't win with those matches in the lineup.

— Paul Wardlaw,
Iowa coach

freshman Jennifer Hodgman. Along with Hogman, a migraine headache suddenly put sophomore Steffi Hoch out for the quarterfinal meet. The Iowa lineup was altered on the spot, and the Hawkeyes found themselves on the losing end in the majority of the matchups.

"We were just too thin," coach Paul Wardlaw said. "We were playing without Jennifer, and Steffi couldn't play. We just couldn't win with those matches in the lineup."

The Hawkeyes' doubles teams managed to overcome the injuries and grab wins in two of the three matches. Senior Megan Kearney and freshman Jody Scheldt were 8-4 winners at the No. 2 spot, while senior Erica Johnson teamed up with freshman Pascale Veraverbeke to earn an 8-4 win at the team's third spot.

Scheldt was the only Hawkeye to earn a singles win after being inserted in the lineup because of Hoch's migraine. Scheldt dominated OSU's Lindsay Williams at the No. 6 spot, 6-0, 6-0.

Kearney was the only other Hawkeye to win a set in a singles match, but her No. 4 matchup was abandoned while up a set and locked 5-5 in the second set.

The loss of Hoch was a sudden and costly one for the Hawkeyes, Wardlaw said.

"We played at 2 p.m., and we had a hit-around session earlier that morning," he said. "Steffi was fine. But then as it got closer, she was having trouble seeing, and she said she could feel a migraine coming on."

The Hawkeyes will now anxiously play the waiting game until Thursday, when the NCAA announces the selections for the national tournament. Until then, the Hawks will spend the majority of the week resting and healing the injuries to Hodgman and the other Hawkeyes, Wardlaw said.

"I couldn't get through the selection process and figure out exactly how they'll pick the teams," he said. "We have a clean record, but there are a number of teams just like us. Right now, we could be the last team in, or we could be the top alternate. We'll just have to find out Thursday."

Young Iowa squad struggles on difficult course at Big Ten meet

■ The Hawkeyes take 10th place at the Big Ten Championships.

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's golf team has no love for Minnesota's Les Bolstad Golf Course.

The difficult course caused Iowa's young golfers problems twice this year and contributed to the Hawkeye's 10th place finish at the Big Ten championships, which ended Sunday.

Iowa did defeat Illinois and came within three strokes of catching Penn State, but the Hawkeyes' bad start impeded their chances of a higher finish.

"The course is very tough to begin with, and 30 to 40 mph winds don't help matters," said Iowa coach Diane Thomason. "There are tough par threes, which are really difficult with severe penalties. It's not fun to play there."

Michigan State won the tournament with a score of 1,219. Mollie Fankhauser of Ohio State won the individual title with a four-round total of 301, 13 strokes over par. Iowa's highest finisher was freshman Laura Holmes (321).

The Hawkeyes played poorly most of the spring season, but they showed some promise on April 14-15, finishing tied for third at the Hawkeye Invitational. The Hawks easily outplayed Minnesota and Wisconsin, giving them an abundance of confidence heading into the Big Ten meet.

That confidence quickly eroded after back-to-back rounds of 324 to sink Iowa into last place. Only sophomore Leslie Gumm broke under 80 in round one.

"It's not how we wanted to start, with only one score under 80," Thomason said. "It was hard to get going."

The third round wasn't any prettier, as windy conditions made a challenging course just plain brutal. All 11 teams had worse scores than they had the previous day.

Iowa finished off its season on a good note Sunday. A sparkling 75 by Holmes and a 77 by senior Meghan Spero highlighted the Hawkeyes' morning. Iowa final round was actually better than many of their conference foes.

It did not help matters that Iowa had to start two freshmen on such a demanding course. Holmes and Maggie Gabelman had never experienced the flavor of a major competition.

"It was kind of a battle by fire for them," Thomason said.

Before the championship began, Spero and Gumm both voiced their dislike for Minnesota's course but said they would try to do their best.

"I'm not really fond of it personally," Gumm said on April 24.

Although the course was not to their liking, Thomason refused to use it as an excuse.

"I'm not making excuses, because everyone had to play there," she said.

IOWA WOMEN'S ROWING

Hawks find themselves in familiar place at Big Tens, place fifth

■ Iowa's First Varsity 8 and Second Varsity 8 boat both finished fourth over the weekend.

By Julie Matolo
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's rowing team experienced some déjà vu at the Big Ten championships over the weekend.

The Hawkeyes placed fifth at the conference championships for the second-consecutive year. The host team, the University of Michigan, took four first-place finishes in the six events and went on to capture the team title for the second year in a row.

Michigan totaled 56 points, leaving Ohio State in second with 43. Iowa dominated Minnesota and Indiana, totaling 32 points.

Top national teams made up the competition on April 28. With three teams ranked in the top 13, Iowa hung on in its most competitive meet of the spring season and one of the fastest conferences.

The Hawks earned a pair of fourth-place finishes with their Varsity 8 boats.

After qualifying for the finals in the First Varsity 8 race and the Second Varsity 8 race, the Hawkeyes' First Varsity 8 boat placed fourth in 6:27.03, while the Second Varsity 8 boat landed fourth in 6:40.96 in a close race.

"My feelings are mixed because the team wanted to medal, and the Varsity boats wanted to medal," said Iowa coach Mandi Kowal. "But they raced well, had a clean race, and shifted well. I feel good about their racing, but to come short of a medal is frustrating."

Iowa's top finisher was in the First Varsity 4 competition, finishing strong behind Michigan for second at 7:14.97.

"The First Varsity 4 raced very well and earned a Big Ten medal," Kowal said. "They had a great performance, and I am happy for them."

In two weeks, the Hawkeyes will travel to another critical meet, competing in the Central Regional Championships in Oakridge, Tenn., on May 12. The championships will be the last meet of the season to leave an impression on the selection committee that will choose the NCAA championship qualifiers for May 25-27. Iowa will aim for a top-three finish on May 12.

Hoch ends winless streak at Greater Greensboro

■ The 45-year-old won his first meet in 94 tries.

By David Droschak
Associated Press

GREENSBORO, N.C. — Scott Hoch broke a 94-tournament winless streak on the PGA Tour, shooting a final-round 69 Sunday to win the Greater Greensboro Chrysler Classic.

Hoch, 45, won his ninth career event and first since the 1997 Greater Milwaukee Open with a 72-hole total of 16-under 272 at Forest Oaks Country Club.

Hoch started the day leading by one shot and ended up beating Brett Quigley and Scott Simpson by one despite a bogey at No. 18.

Quigley, who shot a 67, was attempting to become only the second player to win in consecutive weeks on the Buy.com and PGA tours. Paul Stankowski did it in 1996, winning the Louisiana Open on what was then the Nike Tour, and the next week at the Bell-South Classic.

Simpson, who missed all of last season after major surgery on his right ankle, had his best finish since 1998, shooting a final-round 68.

Hoch started the day without much of a putting touch and netted six straight pars before his first birdie on No. 7 after sticking it within 3 feet.

The veteran then made his move on the back nine as more than a half dozen players were within range of the lead over the final nine holes.

He birdied three of his first five holes after making the turn to take command of the $3.5 million event. He sank a 4-footer on No. 11, had a sand save from 8 feet for birdie two holes later, and then went to 17-under when he made a 12-footer on the next hole.

Hoch, who was born in Raleigh and attended college at nearby Wake Forest, had only played in this tournament once (1999) in the last decade.

And he almost didn't come this time, committing late and then checking the weather on his computer before heading north from his home in Orlando on Monday to join a field that had just 17 of the top 50 money leaders.

Once at the course, Hoch complained that the rough was 3 inches shorter than normal, saying he would have stayed at home if he knew it had been cut.

SPORTS BRIEF

Hawks suffer poor final round in Mich.

The Iowa men's golf team continues to have trouble finishing what it starts.

After its best round of the spring in round two, the Hawkeyes sat in fourth place at the Bruce Fossum Invite in East Lansing, Mich. However, a poor final round score of 303 dropped Iowa into sixth.

The silver lining was that the Hawkeyes did finish ahead of Big Ten foes Michigan, Illinois and Indiana. They also were fewer than six strokes behind Wisconsin and Ohio State. With the Big Ten championships beginning Friday, it appears the Hawkeyes are right in the middle of the pack, and if they can play consistently, they have a good shot at the top four.

Senior Matt Stutzman and sophomore Mike Tapper tied for 27th with a 221. Senior Jason Wombacher, junior Tyler Stith and sophomore Bo Anderson all shot 222. Stutzman actually was at even par the first two rounds before a 79 Sunday.

Northwestern won the Big Ten preview with a 851, and Wildcat golfer Luke Donald earned the individual crown.

The Big Ten meet will be held in Champaign, Ill., Friday through May 6.

Safety increasingly under fire in racing

high as drivers can endure on most race tracks. Olvey said all but four of the 25 drivers on the starting grid experienced some sort of inner ear or vision problems after running more than 10 laps at time. The others, including Andretti, did not go those distances.

Bryan Herta, who qualified fourth at 232.663 mph, likened driving at Texas to the flight he once had in an F-16 aircraft. The high banks allow drivers to race at full throttle all the way around.

"It's the fastest I've ever felt in a race car," Herta said. Olvey said the first indication of a problem came on April 27 when two drivers — he didn't name them — pulled off the track after long stints at over 230 mph and said they were dizzy and disoriented.

Widespread problems were discovered when Olvey met with all drivers after qualifying on April 28.

CART CEO Joseph Heitzler said the sanctioning body was considering rescheduling the race for later in the year. He said there was no opportunity to make immediate changes to the cars or the racing surface.

"We are in uncharted waters," he said. The postponement comes at a time when safety is a top concern in racing, the attention heightened after the death two months ago of NASCAR star Dale Earnhardt in the season-opening Daytona 500. Four NASCAR drivers have been killed in the last 11 months, including truck series driver Tony Roper in a race at Texas last October.

Roper was killed when he lost control of his truck in traffic on the frontstretch and slammed into the wall head-on. That is the only fatal record at the Texas track since it opened in 1997.

Heitzler refused to blame the track for Sunday's action.

"This is not an issue of safety at this track," he said. "This was safety of the drivers in their performance of their skills."

The Indy Racing League has competed at Texas Motor Speedway since the track opened and plans to return June 9 for the Casino Magic 500. Billy Boat set the IRL qualifying record of 225.979 mph in 1998.

Mauricio Gugelmin and series points leader Cristiano da Matta were the only drivers to have accidents in practice for the CART race. In separate sessions, their cars spun out of control coming out of Turn 2 into the backstretch.

Kirk Russell, CART's chief steward, said there appeared to be no mechanical problems with either car and believes the accidents were caused by the stress on the cars and drivers.

"In theory, the incidents occurred because of the heavy G-loading in the turns and coming into the transition onto the backstretch, with turbulence of another car affecting it," said Russell, who talked to both drivers.

Gugelmin was stiff and had withdrawn from the race, apparently ending his streak of 130 CART starts, the longest active streak. Da Matta had qualified 11th in a backup car.

At first, most drivers thought they were alone in their feelings about racing Sunday, but began a dialogue that grew into virtual unanimity.

"When you saw 24 hands go up, everyone was silent," Herta said.

strong innings before giving way to reliever Andrew Hansen. Humes drilled his second homer of the season en route to driving in four runs and going two for three at the plate.

The Hawkeyes have a busy week of nonconference action ahead, beginning with the final home game of the season Tuesday with Truman State. A single game at Bradley Wednesday and three with Illinois-Chicago this weekend are also on tap.

Michigan has, you don't get a lot of opportunities to score," Blevins said. "We were able to get some runners in scoring position. The good thing is we kept them under pressure."

The pressure won't lessen for Iowa. The Big Ten race will once again come down to the final weekend for the Hawkeyes.

Iowa (39-10, 15-3) hosts Northwestern on May 5-6, while the Wolverines (32-14, 15-3) travel to East Lansing, Mich., to face their intrastate rival Spartans. Last season, Iowa beat out Michigan for the regular season title with a 4-1 win over Northwestern on the final day of competition.

"We need to keep the focus on our ourselves and that will be our focus in practice this week," Blevins said.

SPORTS BRIEF

Rosie Jones wins one-hole playoff

AUSTIN, Texas (AP)—Rosie Jones had said the Americans vs. the World hype on the LPGA Tour was a media myth.

On Sunday afternoon, she was waving the American flag.

Jones birdied the first playoff hole in the Kathy Ireland Championship to beat South Korea's Mi Hyun Kim and became the first American to win this year on tour.

It was the 41-year-old Jones' 11th career victory and ended a streak of 10 straight tour wins by international players, the longest stretch without an American winner in LPGA history.

And when it was over, Jones walked into the interview room waving Old Glory.

"There's been a lot of hype. We as American players take a lot of heat for it," said Jones, who won $135,000.

"I take a lot of pride in that win," she said.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Expand your horizons. Take trips that will provide you with adventure and cultural knowledge. Social gatherings will open doors to love connections. It's time for you to make positive changes in your life.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your family will be angry if you make changes that they can't relate to. Be careful not to offend individuals who are established in your field. Get the OK before you go ahead and do things.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Do a bit of traveling today. You can meet new mates or friends while en route. You may want to become involved in activities that require stamina and endurance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don't take things the wrong way. Extravagance will be a key issue. Refrain from trying to buy friendship. You can't alter the way other people feel. It's time to make some changes to yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You'll drive your lover crazy today. Don't be too pushy or demanding, or you may find yourself all alone. It is best to do something energetic with friends instead.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take time to visit an old friend. Do not let money slip through your fingers. Anger involving a co-worker will make you look bad and stand in the way of advancement.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not spend money on friends or luxury items. You will not prosper if you lend money or possession to others. Insincere gestures of friendliness are apparent. This is not the time to trust others.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Your change in attitude is probably upsetting those who love you. Verbal abuse may lead to walk-outs or making rash statements that you'll regret later.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Grab any opportunity to travel. The ideas and concepts that you discover will lead to prosperous ventures. Different perspectives can be gained by observing foreign cultures.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You will probably feel compelled to sort through the personal papers of elders in your family. Set things in order for them and take care of any legal matters that have been left dangling.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Problems with partnerships will be confusing. Try to deal with them reasonably. Think things through before you make a decision. You need time and space for yourself.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You can make extra cash if you put in overtime. Don't let anyone you work with take advantage of your empathetic nature. You can give your peers suggestions, but don't do the work for them.

Things to do during your last week of class

- Show up.
- Turn cash into credit! Ask your professors if they accept Visa or Mastercard.
- Burst into tears at opportune moments. Explain that end-of-the-semester review sessions always get you choked up.
- Ask general questions about the syllabus and act stunned by the responses.
- Mention to your teachers and classmates that those textbooks are not only reliable sources of information but aerodynamic flying objects as well. Open a window and demonstrate.
- Ask questions from other classes, just to shake things up a bit.
- Tell your professor of your deep, forbidden love for the course material.
- Whenever a test is mentioned, flop to the floor and feign a coughing attack. This will remind the professor of your aversion to exams and might get you off the hook.
- Get on up, and dance, sister!
