Pentagon reviews China contact

■ The Pentagon
withdraws a directive to suspend all contacts.

By Robert Burns
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Pentagon said Wednesday that future contacts with the Chinese military are under review, but it withdrew a directive from Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld to suspend all contacts.

Rear Adm. Craig Quigley, speaking for Rumsfeld, told reporters that the Rumsfeld aide who wrote the memo had "misinterpreted the secretary's intentions" by declaring a suspension of military-to-military relations.

"His actual intention is for all elements of the military-to-military program to be reviewed and approved on a case-by-case basis by the Department of Defense," Quigley said several hours after the memo was leaked to reporters.

Quigley declined to say who wrote the memo. He said Rumsfeld had not seen it before it was sent to the military service secretaries, the office of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and senior civilian officials in the Pentagon.

The memo said Rumsfeld was directing "the suspension

Union Bar takes Etc.'s first step

■ The new bar is expected to open this weekend in Iowa City.

By Tony Robinson
The Daily Iowan

Employees of the Union Bar turned themselves into the Iowa City police Department
early Wednesday morning, completing the first step in an attempt to obtain a liquor license for another downtown bar, local officials say.

Owner James Pohl, 23, and manager Nicholas Wernimont, 27, will plead guilty to two counts of public indecent exposure in connection with two bikini contests held at their bar in February.

According to Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick
White, Pohl and Wernimont turned themselves over to the authorities about 4 a.m.
Wednesday. The two were briefly booked at the Johnson County Jail before being released on their own recognizance.

White said he advised the two to plead guilty to the charges or face the possibility of not receiving approval for a liquor license for Etc., a new bar at 118 S. Dubuque St., from the Iowa City City Council. The bar is set to open this weekend, pending council approval at a meeting this morning.

White also advised the two to plead guilty to providing alcohol to minors and have its liquor license revoked for a period of at least 15 days, which the two agreed to,
White said. The state's Alcoholic Beverage Division will decide on June 4 the specifics of the penalties, which could include revoking
the Union's license and issuing a $3,000 fine.

"I was not willing to recommend a new license to the council unless they took responsibility for these violations of the law, and they have now done that both institutionally and personally,"
White said.

White's memo states that the new bar be a "21-only" establishment and that he will have the authority to revoke the license if the bar allows underage drinking.

"I've had ongoing concerns

Endangered species may face loss of funds

■ An anti-environmental rider would limit the number of species placed on the endangered species list.

By Nick Narigon
The Daily Iowan

Some environmentalists say federal funding to preserve threatened species found in parts of Johnson County may be in jeopardy if Congress passes a bill this summer.

A portion of the interior appropriations bill, still in the drafting stage, prohibits the government from funding protective measures for species that are placed on the endangered species list by private organizations or citizens through legal action, said Liz Godfrey, a northland organizer with the Madison, Wis.-based Endangered Species Coalition.

Most endangered species are recognized because private citizens have sued the government, she said. The bill, however, would place the decision of whether to fund habitat preservation for endangered species into the hands of Gale Norton, the Secretary of Interior. As an attorney in Colorado, Norton once argued that the Endangered Species Act, which guarantees federal funding for habit preservation, was unconstitutional.

Consequently, some fear the habitat for local endangered species, such as the prairie ornate box turtle, the pistol-grip mussel and the prairie-fringed orchid, would not receive federal funding if they are placed on the national endangered species list.

The bill would be a way for the government to avoid lawsuits from private organizations, said Doug Jones, UI professor and former president of the Iowa City chapter of the Sierra Club.

"The scheme is to limit citizen groups' right to intervene,"

Declining sales force Peaceful Fool's closing

■ The store will shut its doors in June after nine years of offering an array of merchandise.

By Kathryn Anderson
The Daily Iowan

The owner of the Peaceful Fool announced Wednesday that the store will close because of a lack of profit partly caused from competition with the Coral Ridge Mall.

The store, a longtime staple of downtown Iowa City, will close between June 10 and June 15, owner Kevin Perez said.

Perez, who has owned the Peaceful Fool, 10 S. Clinton St., for nine years, said the store is not making money anymore. He noticed a significant decrease in business when the mall opened in July 1998, he said.

"It used to be great," he said. "Now, it's not that crowded as before. People just don't come downtown anymore."

The store carries an array of merchandise, from wool gloves and sun dresses to candles, cards and incense. Perez said that several years ago the store was geared toward a "hippie lifestyle" but has branched out since then.

Going-out-of-business sales began Wednesday, with 30 percent off everything in the store. They will continue to get progressively bigger

Mini-mall to provide jobs for disabled persons

■ The new mall, set to open this summer, will house a tea shop and graphic-design office.

By Natasha Lambropoulos
The Daily Iowan

The UI School of Social Work and a UI business class have joined together to form a five-company mini-mall that will provide employment opportunities for persons with disabilities.

Uptown Bill's Small Mall,
401 S. Gilbert St., will open on July 1 and will include a coffee shop, a tea shop, a used-book store, a used-furniture store, a graphics-design service and a student community center all in one building.

One of the businesses will be Mr. Ed's Super Graphics Designing and Multimedia Service, a business started four years ago by Ed Gaines, 50, a part-time UI student.
The business features resume, brochure and business card design and art graphics.

"[The mall] will provide employment opportunities for persons with disabilities and will increase public awareness of the kinds of work people with disabilities can do," said Salome Raheim, the director of the UI School of Social Work.

"With the general public interacting with persons with disabilities, it will increase awareness and understanding of their abilities."

Approximately 45 people are expected to be employed at the mall.

The 3,500-square-foot
mall is an extension of Wild Bill's Coffee Shop, Room
308, North Hall, which is

Driving simulator nears completion

■ The National Advanced Driving Simulator will be up and running soon.

By Pam Dewey
The Daily Iowan

After years of delays and ballooning costs, a state-of-the-art driving simulator is now scheduled for completion in late May or early June.

The National Advanced Driving Simulator, which is being developed at the UI Oakdale Research Campus, imitates the real-world driving experience so that researchers can focus on the behavior of drivers and their safety and driving ability. The simulator, said L.D. Chen, a UI professor of mechanical engineering and director of the project, is basically a car cab housed in a four-story dome without an engine.

"The computer-generated environment can be used to provide a safe way to test driving safety," Chen said. "[Providing a safe atmosphere] is very difficult to do in the real world."

Though the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration awarded the UI the project in January 1992, a contract wasn't signed between the university and the administration until February 1996.

Since then, the undertaking has met with a series of other delays, resulting from technological glitches and growing costs that have pushed back the original expected completion date from 1998 to no more than two months from now. The delays have raised the estimated cost from $34 million to what some sources say is now more than $80 million.

UI Assistant Vice President for Research Derek Willard said even though the UI is the site for the simulator, the UI is involved in little of the increasing costs. The state of Iowa was in charge of funding the dome; the NHTSA paid for the rest of the work that was contracted through the TRW Co. of California, he said.

The UI contributed some of the software, Willard said, and is also in charge of the operation and maintenance of the simulator once it's fully functioning.

Chen said the simulator will be available for auto companies to rent for part of the time, so he thinks these contracts and grants will cover the operation and maintenance fees.

"I'm really excited about the prospects for the university," he said.

Sales manager Doug Hass of Community Motors, 1911 Keokuk St., said although he thinks the project seems kind of costly, it's worth it if it ultimately improves driver safety.

Another reason the project is so important, Willard said, is because driver behavior is the leading factor in car accidents, but it's also the least studied of the areas.

"[The project] is the world's most advanced driver-in-the-loop motor-vehicle simulation dedicated to highway safety and motor-vehicle design," he said.

Pat Lind, general manager of Carousel Motors, 809 Highway 1 W., said he thinks that auto companies will be interested in using the simulator because safety has become such an important issue.

"The biggest problem with safety in cars today isn't the cars. It's the drivers," Lind said. "One of the biggest benefits of this simulator is they will be able to figure out how to [improve driver behavior]."

Iowa Child Institute to lessen costs

■ The Iowa Child Institute is slated to have a five-acre rain forest and an aquarium.

By Kellie Doyle
The Daily Iowan

Experts involved with the Iowa Child Institute expect to make recommendations by June 1 on how to trim the cost of the group's $293 million project, a representative said Wednesday.

But this possible cut will not impede the goals the institute set out to fulfill when it first proposed the idea of an 85-acre complex, said David Oman, the Iowa Child chief administrative officer.

Oman did not say if any components of the complex would be eliminated or how much money the group looks to trim.

"The state of Iowa needs to take some bold steps to enhance our future," he said. "The Iowa Child project ... personifies many of the bold action steps needed to build towards that better future."

The complex, to be located at the intersection of interstates 80 and 380 in Coralville, will feature an enclosed five-acre rain forest and an aquarium. Organizers predict it will draw up to 1.5 million tourists each year.

Oman said he hopes to have an independent consulting firm use the recommendations made by architects, consultants and the rest of the "team" to conduct an economic study. The study, expected to be completed by early July, will focus on the local, regional and statewide impact of the project.

The institute then plans to submit a formal application for funding to the Vision Iowa Board by September in hopes of receiving the maximum $75 million grant. The Vision Iowa Board, which will disperse $180 million for various community attractions, has already awarded money to projects in Dubuque and Council Bluffs.

But Oman said he anticipates that the far-off deadline will not harm the project's chance of receiving a large sum of money or cause major delays in its construction.

"I'm confident we will get this done well," he said, adding that the group will hire more staff members shortly. "It's a project that has a lot of great content. We have a vision that people really seem to like."

The Iowa Child Institute has also submitted an application for financial support with the United States Department of Education, and it will travel to Washington, D.C., this week in an effort to gain additional federal assistance, Oman said.

Oman emphasized his desire to hear community input on the project and said the institute will take suggestions via its Web site, www.iowachild.org. Also, he said, he will schedule a town meeting within the next several weeks to gain more insight from as broad a group as possible.

He also urged people to visit The Eden Project Web site, www.edenproject.com, to observe the success the recently opened environmental complex of the United Kingdom has experienced.

"We're very impressed by this project and the excitement it has generated there," he said.

Robert Sayre is a member of Iowa Citizens Against CHILD-ishness, a group that recently formed in opposition to the Iowa Child project. He said he hopes the institute will eventually eliminate the rain forest and change the aquarium from its proposed tropical theme to one more relevant to the area. For example, he said, there is a real need to better understand local river and stream systems.

"I think it's good news that they're waking up to reality," he said. "But [the project] is unrelated to our environment. Good tourist attractions, for the most part, are related to the places you find them in."

Police go after meth suspect

Iowa City police issue an arrest warrant for the man three weeks after his release from jail.

By Kellie Doyle
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City police issued a warrant Tuesday in an effort to re-arrest a man accused of running a meth lab within city limits.

The warrant comes almost three weeks after Donovan Wyse, 31, was released from the Johnson County Jail because police missed the deadline to file necessary paperwork that would have kept the man behind bars.

As of Wednesday, Wyse had not been taken into custody. Upon arrest, he will be placed under a $130,000 bond, according to court reports.

Iowa City Police Sgt. Doug Hart said the arrest warrant — called a bench warrant — picks up the suspect's original charges. Wyse, therefore, still faces a May trial for possession and manufacturing of methamphetamine, which is a class B felony punishable by up to 25 years in prison.

Hart said judges make rulings on whether to re-arrest a suspect if there is a risk of the person fleeing or if he or she is a threat to the community.

Assistant Johnson County Attorney David Tiffany, who was out of town and unavailable for comment Wednesday, previously told The Daily Iowan that he was not concerned that the unsupervised Wyse would flee.

Wyse was freed on April 13 after the police reports did not reach the Johnson County Attorney's Office. Tiffany needed the reports to prepare trial information, but did not receive them until 10 days after Wyse was released.

District Judge Douglas Russell ordered the release because the delay resulted in Wyse not receiving a probable-cause hearing within 10 days of his arrest.

Wyse was arrested March 29 after neighbors complained about odors seeping from his 2017 Keokuk St. residence, according to court and police reports. After investigating the apartment, police arrested him for allegedly manufacturing meth. His alleged lab is the first to be located within Iowa City limits.

Because Wyse was evicted from his apartment following his arrest, his whereabouts upon release were unknown.

Schools want 'dirty' out of dancing

Suburban schools struggle with how to restrict certain dance moves.

By Jennifer Brown
Associated Press

NORRISTOWN, Pa. — Teenagers slip their hands down one another's waistbands. Hips grind together. Guys lie on the floor with girls straddling them.

High-school students call it dirty dancing, freaking, booty dancing — or just dancing.

School officials say it's sex with clothes on. And some schools around the country are cracking down.

"It's simulated sex on the dance floor," said Miles Burrell, 45, a school dance chaperone at Norristown Area High School, outside Philadelphia. "Anybody with morals, who brings their kids up in any Christian family, would stop that kind of thing."

Some schools have canceled all dances except the prom. Others have issued strict rules. One school required students to pass a quiz about dance-floor behavior before allowing them to attend a dance.

Suburban schools especially are struggling with how to restrict dance moves that are common on television and in dance clubs and movies.

"They emulate the MTV and dance videos, and we feel that's not appropriate," said development director Kathy Leboeuf at Gabriel Richard High School in Riverview, Mich., which instituted the quiz.

At Leboeuf's school, three teen-age girls at a chaperoned school dance jokingly stuffed dollar bills in their shirts and gave their boyfriends lap dances. Since the school required students to pass a quiz, there have been fewer incidents, Leboeuf said.

A high school in Brown Deer, Wis., has thrown students out of dances, sent letters home to parents and threatened to suspend youths caught dirty dancing.

Dances have been canceled altogether at a few schools in suburban Los Angeles; Iowa City, Iowa; Anchorage, Alaska; and Bethany, Ky., among others.

"Basically it's just grinding, bumping, imitating some sexual behavior," said Emily James, a sophomore at Norristown Area High. "It's not as bad as they make it sound. I don't think it leads to sex. We're just trying to have fun."

At least three large suburban Philadelphia high schools have struggled with bump-and-grind dance floor displays. Lower Merion High canceled dances beginning next fall until students can propose rules.

SAS confers with UI Human Rights Committee

The group drafts a letter recommending compliance or loss of contracts.

Regardless of whether companies sign the UI Code of Conduct, endorsement deals such as basketball coach Steve Alford's with Nike will not be affected, UI officials said Wednesday.

In a meeting Tuesday night, the UI Human Rights Committee met with UI Students Against Sweatshop members to discuss the six apparel companies that have refused to sign the university's code of conduct. The committee, made up of several UI officials, decided to draft a letter for UI President Mary Sue Coleman that will recommend the UI give these companies 30 days to sign the agreement or lose their contracts.

Mark Schantz, a committee member and the UI General Counsel, said the Code of Conduct only refers to the apparel the university sells.

"Regardless of what happens with their apparel contract, [coaches] will be able to keep their endorsement deals," he said.

Among the six companies refusing to sign the code is Nike, which has an apparel licensing contract with the UI and a $150,000 endorsement contract with UI men's basketball coach Steve Alford.

SAS member David Deifell said allowing the endorsement deals would be almost worse than the licensing.

"If we don't allow them to make clothing for us, why would we allow them to gain more visibility using our athletics?" Deifell asked. "The fact

Nike would use the UI basketball team to promote itself is a definite concern for students against sweatshops and should be for the university as a whole."

Committee chairman and UI staff member Dan Teets said at this time the recommended letter is the best course of action.

"These companies all contacted us with complaints about how clear the code of conduct was," he said. "Over the next 30 days we're going to try and keep an open dialogue to work out the problems."

Committee members say the companies' main complaint was the code's section specifying that workers must be paid a living wage. Living wages vary from region to region.

Worker Rights Consortium business and finance manager Erin McGrath said that a living wage can be hard to determine.

"We're actually doing a research project to develop a formula for determining the living wage for a particular country," she said. "As of now, we're trying to get a team of economists together."

McGrath said a schedule for the project had not yet been set.

As a member of the consortium, the UI had to submit a list of licensee factory locations by Feb. 1. The worker consortium plans to investigate labor practices at these locations.

The UI has already canceled 176 apparel licenses due to refusal to sign the code or failure to submit a list of factory locations. The licenses were worth $34,805 in royalties.

CITY BRIEF

Tiffin man faces two counts of third-degree sexual assault

A 20-year old Tiffin man accused of having sexual relations with an intoxicated girl five years his junior was released from the Johnson County Jail Wednesday after posting bail.

Nicholas Anderson, 20, who faces two counts of third-degree sexual assault after an alleged April 22 incident at 609 Bowery St., posted the $7,500 cash bond.

According to Iowa City police records, Anderson allegedly performed sexual acts with the victim, who was mentally incapacitated because of alcohol and marijuana consumption. Anderson allegedly told police that he knew the victim was under the influence at the time of the incident.

The 15-year-old girl told police she was temporarily incapable of controlling her conduct because of the substances.

Anderson faces a maximum prison term of 10 years and a fine of at least $500 but no more than $10,000. Third-degree sexual assault, a class C felony, applies when the perpetrator is five or more years older than the victim.

White House examines missile defense system

■ Critics call the approach a "scarecrow" defense.

By Robert Burns
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration is considering a missile defense system that might be rushed into operation as early as 2004, possibly relying on weapons aboard ships or planes as well as on land. Critics call it a stopgap approach, a "scarecrow" defense based on a bluff.

President Bush said in outlining his vision of a new U.S. security strategy that anti-missile weapons based at sea or in the air "could provide limited but effective defenses." He gave no timetable but said that "when ready," missile defenses would be deployed.

The Clinton administration focused its missile defense efforts on a land-based system of 100 interceptors that would be based in Alaska and guided by a long-range radar stationed in the Aleutian Islands. It intended to wait until the system was proven effective before deploying it. After an intercept test failure last July, then-President Clinton announced that the technology was not ready.

The Bush administration, however, has made clear it is considering a multifaceted approach, including an airborne laser weapon that would destroy a missile shortly after it lifted off, as well as sea-based missiles that might share with a land-based system the task of shooting down missiles in mid-flight.

Bush said Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld has identified "near-term options" that could allow the United States to deploy an "initial capability" against limited missile attacks.

Pentagon officials speaking on condition of anonymity said advisers to Rumsfeld are exploring the prospect of having at least a partial missile defense ready for use by the end of Bush's term, although it is generally believed that a complete and fully tested defense is a decade or more away.

Jan Lodal, a former Pentagon official who favors missile defense, said Wednesday he hopes Bush does not accept the notion that a partial defense — or a bluff, in Lodal's words — will enhance security.

"How does that make sense? It doesn't," Lodal said. He said he was encouraged that Bush's speech on Tuesday struck a relatively cautious tone, emphasizing the technological and diplomatic difficulties and making no specific commitments other than to deploy a system at some point.

At a Capitol Hill gathering of missile-defense critics, Roy Danchick, a mathematician who used to work for defense contractor TRW on anti-missile projects, said the aerospace industry lacks the purpose and expertise to develop missile defenses anytime soon.

"There is no hope for effective, affordable missile defense unless there is a tectonic shift in the aerospace industry," he said.

Rumsfeld was asked by a reporter Wednesday why Bush's speech did not refer to the use of space as part of a missile shield.

"His remarks properly reflected the fact that the goal during this period is to explore a variety of ways that missile defense can conceivably evolve, without prejudging exactly which ones will be most fruitful," Rumsfeld replied. "There is no question but that the use of land and sea and air and space are all things that need to be considered if one is looking at the best way to provide the kind of security from ballistic missiles that is desirable for the United States and for our friends and allies."

Slayings of '64 garner new attention

■ The killing of three civil-rights workers could be the next old case presented to the Mississippi grand jury.

By Emily Wagster
Associated Press

JACKSON, Miss. — With a former Klansman now behind bars for a 1963 Alabama church bombing, the next major piece of unfinished business from the South's segregationist past may be the murder of three civil-rights workers in Mississippi during the Freedom Summer of 1964.

Mississippi Attorney General Mike Moore and local prosecutors say they have interviewed hundreds of people and pored over more than 40,000 pages of transcripts and other documents to build the state's first murder case against the killers of James Chaney, Andrew Goodman and Michael Schwerner.

The slayings were the basis for the 1988 movie Mississippi Burning and are easily Mississippi's most infamous unresolved civil-rights-era case.

Prosecutors have not decided when to present their evidence to a grand jury, Moore said Wednesday.

"We've had a couple of pretty significant setbacks in the past month or two," he said. "A couple of witnesses died on us and that's hurt us."

On Tuesday, a jury in Alabama convicted former Ku Klux Klansman Thomas Blanton Jr. in the 1963 bombing of Birmingham's Sixteenth Street Baptist Church that killed four black girls. He was sentenced to life in prison.

Moore said such courtroom successes should encourage prosecutors to revisit decades-old cases where justice has not been done.

"I know we are very serious about this investigation," he said.

The three civil-rights workers disappeared on June 21, 1964, from the red clay hills of Mississippi's Neshoba County. They had just visited the site of a firebombed church in the community of Philadelphia when they were arrested for speeding by members of the sheriff's department. They were attacked after leaving jail.

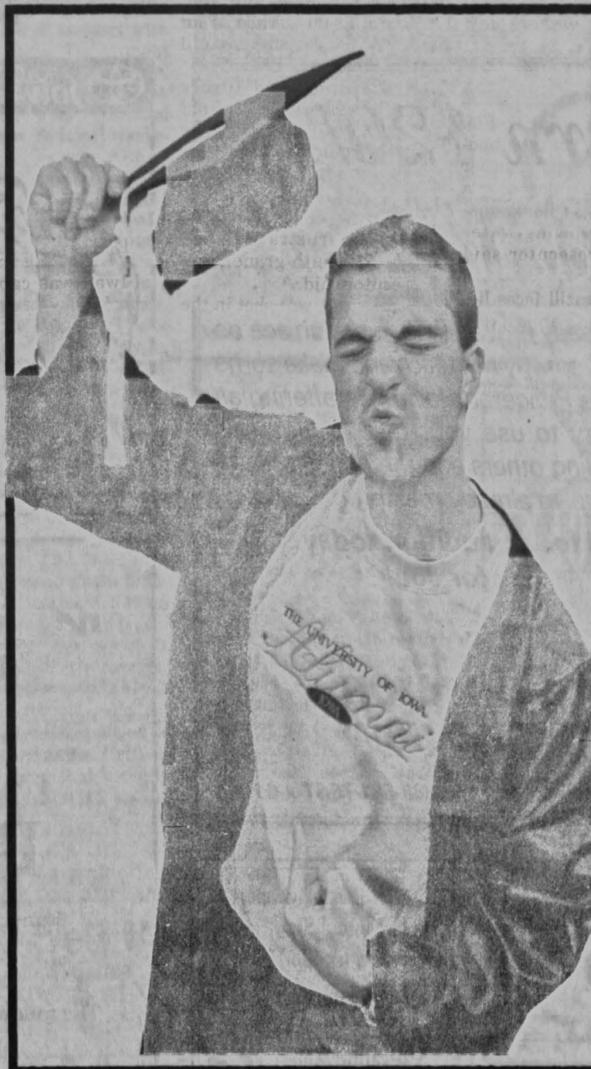

Their bodies were found 44 days later in an earthen dam. They had been shot, and Chaney, who was black, had also been severely beaten.

No one has been tried in the killings in state court. A sheriff's deputy and six other Klansmen were convicted on federal charges of conspiring to violate the men's civil rights.

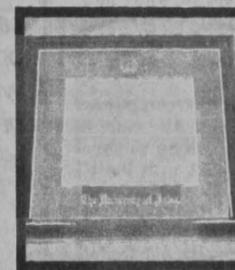

Chaney's brother, Ben Chaney, said he believes prosecutors have no intention of presenting the case to grand jurors.

He said in earlier cases where civil-rights prosecutions had been successful, prosecutors were pressured by strong, middle-class black communities. He said that is not the case in rural Neshoba County.

GOP strikes budget deal

■ The deal was reached Wednesday and embraces most of the president's tax and spending goals.

By Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush and Republican congressional leaders clinched a budget deal Wednesday that embraces most of the president's tax and spending goals while underlining the ability of moderate lawmakers to limit his agenda.

Congressional leaders planned to push a budget for 2002 embodying the pact through the House and Senate today. Passage would help GOP leaders toward their goal of shipping Bush a major tax bill by Memorial Day.

Wednesday's deal was brokered only after Bush gave ground to a cadre of moderate senators — mostly Democrats — who demanded shallower tax cuts and more spending than the president preferred. The lawmakers' clout derived from the precariously balanced Senate, which is split evenly between the two parties.

Bush portrayed the deal as an illustration of his desire to end Washington's political strife.

"It couldn't have been done without the cooperation and work of some of our Democrat friends ... who realized that it was time to come together to put a good budget together on behalf of the American people," Bush said.

Under the agreement, taxes will be cut by $1.35 trillion over the next 11 years — a reduction from the $1.6 trillion, 10-year tax cut that has been Bush's trademark issue since he was battling to win the GOP presidential nomination in 1999. Spending for many programs would grow next year by 5 percent, exceeding the 4 percent increase he had insisted was enough.

Though final decisions would have to be made in later bills, the budget would set aside up to $300 billion over the next decade to overhaul Medicare and commence new prescription drug benefits. Bush's own budget called for $153 billion. Democrats deride both figures as too low.

"It's an agreement that makes a lot of sense," Bush said in announcing the budget deal at the White House, sitting among Republican leaders and six moderate Democrats who support the package. "In the agreement is the largest tax cut in a generation and reasonable levels of spending."

Among the centrist Democrats at the White House were Sen. John Breaux, D-La. He led the 14 Democratic and two Republican senators who refused to move any closer to Bush's tax figure despite weeks of lobbying by the president and others.

"It's been an opportunity in a 50-50 Senate obviously to be able to make sure everybody's voice is heard," Breaux said of the power his group demonstrated on fiscal issues.

Illustrating the difficulties of satisfying all the factions in Congress, some conservatives were angered as the tax and spending numbers were adjusted to attract moderates' votes. Among them was Rep. Tom Tancredo, R-Colo., who said he would oppose the budget and blamed the Senate.

"That place is just a nut-house when it comes to spending," he told reporters. "I cannot get over their lack of fiscal discipline."

Bush assembles new Social Security commission

■ Democrats charge the commission was created to give President Bush some political cover.

By Leigh Strope
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush on Wednesday assembled a new Social Security commission friendly to the idea of investing in the stock market, saying younger workers "might as well be saving their money in their mattresses" with the current plan's structure.

"And the return will only decline further, maybe even below zero if we do not proceed with reform," Bush said.

Democrats charge the commission of eight Republicans and eight Democrats was created to give Bush political cover with a predetermined outcome and a bipartisan label.

"The panel members on this Social Security commission would be the equivalent of oil companies on a commission on ANWAR," which is Alaska's Arctic National Wildlife Refuge, said Senate Democratic leader Tom Daschle. Oil companies favor drilling in the refuge while environmentalists want to preserve it untouched.

Bush's panel is the eighth special council created in the past 20 years to study Social Security. Only one resulted in any major changes.

In Washington, "commission" often is code word for delay. Bush said he wants his to be different, to make good on his campaign pledge to allow voluntary private-investment accounts.

The makeup of the Social Security commission was by design, said White House spokesman Ari Fleischer.

"It's been too often, not always, but too often in the history of Social Security that commissions did gather dust or they did create gridlock," he said. "The president wants to break that pattern this year."

Co-chairmen are former Democratic New York Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, who supports private-investment accounts, and Richard Parsons, AOL Time Warner's co-chief operating officer, a Republican.

The commission is to present its findings in the fall, and should include a plan for private accounts, Bush said. Any recommendation would be subject to congressional approval, though Congress isn't likely to tackle the issue next year — an election year.

Of the seven special councils or commissions on Social Security since 1981, only the 1982 National Commission on Social Security Reform headed by Alan Greenspan resulted in changes to the plan, according to the Social Security Administration.

That commission expanded the plan to cover federal employees and instituted a gradual retirement age increase from 65 to 67.

Social Security is expected to start paying out more than it collects by 2016 because of an influx of baby-boom retirees. The fund will run out of cash after 2038.

Bush has proposed shoring up the program by letting younger workers voluntarily invest some of their payroll taxes in private accounts, arguing that the stock market will provide a much greater return over time.

The AARP condemned Bush's plan and the commission.

Teen-ager goes to trial for murder

■ The student was allegedly upset over a failing grade and being suspended.

By Amanda Riddle
Associated Press

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — A 13-year-old boy intentionally killed his English teacher because he was angry over a failing grade and being suspended for throwing water balloons, a prosecutor said Wednesday.

Nathaniel Brazill faces life in prison without parole if convicted of first-degree murder in the killing of Barry Grunow at Lake Worth Middle School on May 26, 2000, the last day of classes.

Brazill was angry because a school counselor suspended him and sent him home earlier in the day, Assistant State Attorney Marc Shiner told jurors.

But the defense in its opening statements repeated what it has maintained for months, that Brazill pointed the gun at the teacher only to force him to let him talk to two girls in the classroom. Then the gun went off accidentally, said defense attorney Lance Richard.

"As he's holding the gun up to Mr. Grunow, he's overwhelmed with tears," Richard told the jurors. "His hand begins to shake and the gun discharges. The gun discharged in the hands of an inexperienced 13-year-old with a junk gun."

But Shiner told jurors Brazill was receiving a final "F" grade in Grunow's class and also was angry he wasn't being allowed to talk to the girls. Grunow "had no idea of the rage, hate, the anger, the frustration" filling the seventh-grader, the prosecutor said.

Grunow, 35, was shot in the head with a .25-caliber semi-automatic pistol stolen from Brazill's grandfather's house days earlier.

"He pulled the trigger. He pulled the slide back," Shiner said of Brazill. "He made the conscious decision to kill."

Police have reported that Brazill told a classmate he was going to return to school and shoot the counselor who suspended him. He told the girl he'd be "all over the news."

The shooting in an outside hallway was captured on a school surveillance camera.

House raises IRA and 401(k) limits

■ The bill would allow people to put more money into their pension plans.

By Curt Anderson
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House overwhelmingly passed legislation Wednesday to increase the amount of money Americans can put in IRAs and 401(k) plans and to give companies greater incentive to offer traditional pensions to workers.

The lopsided 407-24 vote — a rarity on a tax bill in a Congress narrowly divided between Republicans and Democrats — should send a strong message to the Senate, where a nearly identical bill died last year, sponsors said. President Bush has expressed support for the approach but did not include retirement measures in his package of tax cuts.

At an estimated cost of $52 billion over 10 years, the bill gradually would raise contribution limits for tax-preferred traditional and Roth individual retirement accounts from $2,000 to $5,000 by 2004 and for tax-deferred 401(k)-type plans from $10,500 to $15,000 by 2006.

People age 50 and older would get special provisions raising their contribution limits more quickly. The legislation would not, however, change the income limits that prevent some middle-to-upper-income people from participating.

Supporters said the bill would boost a U.S. savings rate now at the lowest level in 67 years and supplement Social Security, which faces an uncertain financial future just as 76 million baby boomers begin to retire.

"Social Security isn't enough. It's hard to live on," said Rep. Rob Portman, R-Ohio, the main sponsor along with Rep. Ben Cardin, D-Md. "People need to have increased savings."

The measure contains more than 50 provisions intended to prompt more companies to offer pensions, enhance those pensions and simplify the system, from faster vesting requirements to greater portability of pension plans for employees who change jobs.

About 70 million American workers are not covered by a pension plan. While 401(k) plans are increasingly popular, the Employee Benefits Research Institute estimated that the average account balance is only about $37,000 — and half of all 401(k) participants have saved less than $10,000.

A study released by the Financial Services Roundtable, which represents 100 major financial companies, found that the increased limits will not only boost savings but also cut taxes for millions by deferring more of the taxes owed.

A family of four with $50,000 in income and a 401(k) plan, for example, would see a 28 percent tax-rate cut when the measure is fully implemented in five years. The same family with $75,000 in income would see a 13 percent cut.

"This bill provides individual tax relief," Cardin said.

Despite its popularity, many Democrats say the bill does little for lower-income people who have the most trouble saving for retirement.

"The problem isn't what's in the bill. It's what is left out," said Rep. Earl Pomeroy, D-N.D.

But the House voted 223-207 to defeat an amendment by Rep. Richard Neal, D-Mass., to create maximum $1,000 tax credits for lower-income people to invest in an IRA or 401(k) plan and provide credits for small businesses that offer retirement plans.

The issue is likely to resurface in the Senate, where a similar bipartisan bill includes more limited credits for lower-income people.

The House also voted 276-153 against an effort by Rep. Bernie Sanders, I-Vt., to require companies to give workers a choice when changing from a traditional pension plan to a cash-balance plan, which critics say can sharply reduce benefits.

Senate Finance Committee Chairman Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, said the retirement measure was not likely to be included in the compromise 11-year, $1.35 trillion version of Bush's tax cuts. That means it must win at least 60 votes to avoid delaying tactics in the Senate.

Still, Sen. Pete Domenici, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, predicted the legislation would clear the Senate this year, perhaps attached to unrelated legisla-

Not all bombing victims to view death for closure

■ Timothy McVeigh, the Oklahoma City bomber, is scheduled to be executed on May 16.

By Jennifer L. Brown
Associated Press

OKLAHOMA CITY — Not all of those who were injured or lost loved ones in the Oklahoma City bombing will wake before dawn on May 16 to watch Timothy McVeigh die.

Athena Roy will kneel in church to pray for the man who murdered her mother.

Rob Roddy, a survivor of the Oklahoma City bombing, will get ready for work the same as he does every weekday.

Deloris Watson will take her scarred grandson to a park, where they will eat ice cream straight out of the carton and watch the sky.

They are victims of the April 19, 1995, blast who think it is easier to heal if they try to go on with the lives they had before McVeigh parked a truck bomb in front of the federal building and killed 168 people.

They don't attend every anniversary ceremony or volunteer at the memorial site. They don't tell their stories to tourists from all over the world. They don't like to talk to reporters.

"You can never forget it, but you move on," says LaVerne McCloud, whose 10-year-old daughter, Nekia, was injured in the Alfred P. Murrah Building day-care center. McCloud rarely goes to the memorial.

Nearly 300 people have told the government they want to watch McVeigh's execution. To accommodate them, Attorney General John Ashcroft has agreed to the largest closed-circuit TV broadcast of an execution in U.S. history.

Roy gets angry when she hears someone say bombing survivors and victims' families want to watch McVeigh die. She doesn't want to see it.

"We're not all the same person," says Roy, whose mother worked in the U.S. Housing and Urban Development office. "Some of us don't need to go out and get the support of the public. I can keep that to myself."

Roy, who is Roman Catholic, believes the death penalty is wrong. She says McVeigh's execution will not help her family heal.

Roy, who was 22 when her mother, Diane Hollingsworth Althouse, was killed, says it is time people stop dwelling on the bombing. She worries that some bombing survivors and victims' families are downplaying other people's losses.

"There are people that die every day in tragedies," she says. "There are all kinds of horrific things that have been happening everywhere."

Roddy is one of the few who walked out of the federal building without a scratch. He will not do anything out of the ordinary on McVeigh's execution day. He hopes other bombing survivors do the same, leaving the metal folding chairs facing the execution viewing screen empty.

"Boycotting it would be a much stronger statement they could send him," he says. "I wish they would realize that."

Roddy did not support capital punishment before the bombing and still doesn't. He thought for the first couple of months after the blast that maybe McVeigh could be an exception.

"After the shock wore off, I came to my senses," he says. "I started realizing that it was so self-serving of me. I could never begin to forgive McVeigh, but I don't want him killed."

Dennis Hodges, who lost a sister, a great-niece and a great-nephew in the bombing, has kept to himself so much in the past six years that he is not on a U.S. Attorney's list of bombing victims' relatives. That means he cannot attend the closed-circuit broadcast, even though he has tried to register.

Hodges and his family plan to spend May 16 carrying on with their daily lives. They will turn on the news, waiting for word McVeigh will no longer disrupt their days by spewing his views in the media.

Watson will try not to think of McVeigh on his execution day. She will spend it with her grandson, P.J. Allen, who breathes through a tube in his throat and has two bare spots on his scalp where rocks lodged in his head.

P.J. is one of six children who survived in the day-care center on the second floor of the federal building.

His grandmother recalls a day not long ago when she had a headache. The 7-year-old boy kept asking her to help him pick out shapes in the clouds, but she wouldn't open her eyes. "You know why your head hurts? You're not looking at the clouds," he said.

That's what they will do on May 16.

"I am going to take P.J. and make sure he has one of the most fun-filled days ever — a celebration of life," Watson says. "We're going to spend some time looking at the clouds."

By John Lee

PYONGYANG — Kim Jong Il, leader, agreed Wednesday with visiting EU officials about his cloaked missile tensions between South Korea.

Kim said he would talk today with Union delegations Prime Minister of Sweden, the rotating EU leader, and Western European leaders to visit North Korea Wednesday to a come by Kim's go-

"We have conducted frank discussions on challenges and prospects for the Korean peninsula," said a government spokesman. "We would like to provide ideas as to how we can contribute to resolution, possibly of an assistance."

Persson said the summit would cover the serious human-rights and widespread food and economic reforms.

No breakthroughs are expected. But the North's ties with Korea and the U.S. seem to have soured.

Last year, the two Koreas held their first ever summit in Pyongyang. Their breakthroughs allowed, among other things, reunions of families who have lived on opposite sides of the world since the 1950-53 Korean War.

But recently, Pyongyang abruptly pulled out of the South: a round level table, the joint table-tennis world championship, Japan, and a series of talks. Korea is rethinking a crossway also has stalled. Since Pyongyang's office in January, the administration has voiced about the North.

Bush would have a policy of "Pyongyang re-energizing anti-nuclear and canceling a nuclear profile contacts with the North."

The North has called for the U.S. troops stationed in Korea as well as Washington's missile defense system.

Swedish diplomat Persson stressed that U.S. interests in official ties between Pyongyang and Seoul.

Persson stressed that North to represent the 15-nation group.

Persson told reporters that people should not rush into the Bush administration reviewing U.S. relations with Pyongyang, which has a natural procedure.

"That doesn't mean there will be a rupture on the peninsula," he said. "We think, overstimulation generate that policy."

Visits to Pyongyang by Western leaders are rare but not unusual — Fidel Castro, communist Cuba, North Korea in 1994.

However, it is the European Union's role in the absence of that is building reactors in North Korea as part of a 1994 Pyongyang's suspension of its weapons program.

Also, the European Union is not part of earlier efforts to curb the North's nuclear program and export technology.

Kim opens talks with EU officials

■ The North Korean leader meets with the current EU president

By John Leicester
Associated Press

■ PYONGYANG, North Korea — Kim Jong Il, North Korea's leader, agreed to hold talks with visiting European officials about his mystery-cloaked missile program and tensions between North and South Korea.

Kim said he would hold the talks today with the European Union delegation, led by Prime Minister Goeran Persson of Sweden, which holds the rotating EU presidency.

Persson, the first EU chief and Western European leader to visit North Korea, arrived Wednesday to a warm welcome by Kim's government.

"We have come here for frank discussions on the challenges and prospects for the Korean peninsula," Persson said in a speech at a formal government dinner. "We would like to put forward ideas as to how the EU could contribute to reducing tension, possibly offering advice and assistance."

Persson said the talks also would cover the North's notorious human-rights record, its widespread food shortages and its cautious interest in economic reforms.

No breakthroughs were expected. But the talks come as the North's ties with South Korea and the United States seem to have soured.

Last year, the leaders of the two Koreas held their first-ever summit in Pyongyang. Their breakthrough discussions allowed, among other things, reunions by families who have lived on opposite sides of the world's most heavily armed border since the 1950-53 Korean War.

But recently, the North abruptly pulled out of three reunification initiatives with the South: a round of Cabinet-level talks, the fielding of a joint table-tennis team for the world championships in Japan, and a round of Red Cross talks. Cooperation on relinking a cross-border railway also has stalled.

Since President Bush took office in January, his administration has voiced skepticism about the North and said Bush would hold off talks pending a policy review.

Pyongyang responded by cranking up anti-U.S. rhetoric and canceling a number of high-profile contacts with Seoul.

The North has stepped up calls for the withdrawal of U.S. troops stationed in South Korea as well as criticism of Washington's plans for a missile defense system.

Swedish diplomats in North Korea have long represented U.S. interests in the absence of official ties between Washington and Pyongyang. But Persson stressed he was in the North to represent the interests of the 15-nation EU.

Persson told reporters that people shouldn't read too much into the fact that the Bush administration is reviewing U.S. relations with Pyongyang, which he called a natural procedure.

"That doesn't mean that there will be a reversal policy on the peninsula," he told reporters. "We should not, I think, overestimate or exaggerate that policy review."

Visits to Pyongyang by Western leaders are extremely rare but not unprecedented — Fidel Castro, president of communist Cuba, came to North Korea in 1986.

However, it is doubtful the European Union can fill the void in the absence of dialogue between Washington and Pyongyang.

The EU has only a minor role in a U.S.-led consortium that is building two nuclear reactors in North Korea as part of a 1994 deal to end Pyongyang's suspected nuclear weapons program.

Also, the Europeans were not part of earlier U.S. efforts to curb the North's development and export of missile technology.

"We don't have any intention to interfere with the discussions between the United States and North Korea," Persson said.

The visit, covered by 75 foreign reporters, has given the world its first close look at Kim and the totalitarian North since former U.S. Secretary of State Madeleine Albright visited in October 2000.

Alan Garcia rises in Peruvian elections

■ Peru's businesses are jittery as the Alan Garcia nears the presidential palace.

By Rick Vecchio
Associated Press

LIMA, Peru — After a decade reviled by most Peruvians as the president who drove their economy into the ground, a slick orator returned from exile appears near to completing a remarkable electoral comeback that has left business leaders shaken.

Alan Garcia, 51, has risen in the polls ahead of a presidential runoff against Alejandro Toledo. Garcia stunned Peruvians by finishing second in the first round of voting on April 8, topping six other candidates with promises to open the state's purse-strings to help the poor.

"I'm going to vote for Alan," said Arturo Zelala, 33, who lost his job at a government-run fertilizer factory during former President Alberto Fujimori's term. Garcia "left things in bad shape, but I think we should give him another chance."

Just months ago, few would have believed it possible, especially businessmen who remember four-digit inflation, collapsing production, surging guerrilla violence and a failed attempt to nationalize the banks during his 1985-1990 administration.

"Every day was a day of anguish," recalls insurance broker Jaime Andrade. "One thing is for sure, I'm not going to vote for Alan."

Economists say Garcia has assembled many people from his previous administration and fear another exodus of capital from Peru should he win.

Polls show Garcia trailing Toledo by about 10 percentage points, but nearly a third of those questioned say they are either undecided or are considering casting spoiled or blank ballots. The vote likely will be held in early June.

The tall, handsome Garcia was swept into office in 1985 as Latin America's youngest president at age 36, hailed in Peru as "the president of hope" and abroad as "Latin America's Kennedy."

Albanians face counter-rebellion

■ The latest violence raises fears that clashes could affect other ethnically mixed areas.

By Konstantin Testorides
Associated Press

SKOPJE, Macedonia — Rioters outraged by the slaying of Macedonian soldiers in an ambush by ethnic Albanian rebels killed one person and destroyed dozens of shops in a fresh round of violence, police said Wednesday.

Masked assailants armed with automatic weapons and baseball bats broke into an ethnic Albanian pizzeria late Tuesday in a suburb of Skopje, the capital, and shot and killed a man identified as Ismet Hoxha, police said.

Restaurant owner Ramadan Nuredini and his grandson were beaten by the attackers. Moments later, four masked assailants burst into a nearby ethnic Albanian shop, pummeling three workers, police said.

The attackers fled before police arrived.

The rioting began early Tuesday, hours after a funeral was held for eight government commandos slain in a rebel ambush last week near the border with Kosovo.

Macedonian Slavs destroyed some 40 Albanian-owned stores and businesses in the city of Bitola, about 105 miles southwest of Skopje, throwing rocks, smashing goods and setting fire to the rubble. Bitola is about 15 percent ethnic Albanian.

The violence subsided for a time before resuming late Tuesday or early Wednesday, Macedonian state radio reported. Rioters destroyed and looted at least 10 ethnic Albanian and Muslim shops in the overnight melee.

Bitola's mayor, Zlatko Vrsakovski, appealed to residents to avoid "any new escalation of violence" as police imposed a six-hour-long curfew that went into effect at 11 p.m. Wednesday.

"The outrageous murders of our eight commandos are no reason to victimize innocent civilians," said government spokesman Antonio Milososki, promising to punish "all culprits."

Ethnic Albanians comprise at least one-third of Macedonia's 2 million people. They say they are treated as second-class citizens and are demanding that the Macedonian constitution be rewritten to upgrade their minority position to equal status with the majority Slavs. The government refuses, arguing that it would lead to a de facto division of the former Yugoslav republic.

In Washington on Tuesday, Macedonian President Boris Trajkovski won support from top U.S. officials who pledged solidarity and economic support to the Macedonian government.

Secretary of State Colin Powell called the ethnic Albanian insurgents terrorists, trying to subvert Macedonia's democratic process with "dastardly and cowardly acts."

Israel bulldozes Gaza homes

■ Settlers criticize Prime Minister Ariel Sharon for not doing enough to stop attacks.

By Greg Myre
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — Israeli bulldozers and tanks rumbled into a Palestinian refugee camp in Gaza on Wednesday, demolishing 20 houses said to have provided cover to gunmen and waging a nighttime fire fight that killed a teen-ager.

Still, Israel's Prime Minister Ariel Sharon came under sharp criticism that he's doing too little to halt Palestinian attacks as he visited a Jewish settlement where a resident was killed in a shooting.

Sharon traveled to the West Bank Jewish settlement of Ofra to pay condolences to the family of Assaf Hershkovitz, who was gunned down Tuesday while driving on a road repeatedly targeted by Palestinian militants. Hershkovitz's father was killed on the same road in January.

"Where's the peace?" said one placard brandished by residents at the settlement. "Prime minister, you promised security," said another.

Sharon told Hershkovitz's widow, Hila, that "people thought there was a solution that would take one day. There's no solution in one day."

She responded: "But there's not even a ray of light. We're in the same situation."

In Gaza, Israeli tanks fired shells and machine-gun rounds to cover the pre-dawn operation in Rafah, in southern Gaza along the border with Egypt, said Brig. Gen. Abdel Razeq el-Majaida, a Palestinian security commander. Doctors said Mahmoud Aqel, 17, was killed and at least 15 Palestinians were wounded in a shootout.

Five Israeli bulldozers leveled 20 houses, three chicken farms and greenhouses, the Palestinian Authority said. The Palestinians fired automatic rifles and anti-tank rockets at the Israeli forces.

Under existing agreements, Gaza is divided between Israeli and Palestinian control, and both sides claimed they were in charge of the area where the housing demolition took place.

Displacement norm in W. Africa

■ One million people cannot return to their homes because of continued fighting.

By Daniel Cooney
Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — Fighting in the West African nations of Liberia, Guinea and Sierra Leone has displaced more than 1 million people, many beyond the reach of international-aid organizations, a U.N. official said Wednesday.

While some of those who fled the fighting have begun returning to their homes in Sierra Leone, the situation in the other two nations was worsening, said Carolyn

McAskie, U.N. deputy emergency-relief coordinator.

About 500,000 people have sought shelter in neighboring countries, while 750,000 more were displaced within their own homelands due to long-running insurgencies, she said.

"It's not a happy state at all," McAskie told reporters after returning from a trip to the region.

Despite a lull in the fighting in Sierra Leone, many refugees were unable to return because the camps and transit centers that help repatriate displaced people were overflowing and "at breaking point," she said.

Security fears are keeping aid organizations from reaching many refugees, McAskie said.

The United Nations had appealed for $65 million for the region but only a few million dollars have been collected, she said.

Guinea, Sierra Leone and Liberia are caught up in a regional conflict, with each side saying the other is to blame.

On April 27, the U.N. Security Council voted to send more peacekeeping troops to Sierra Leone to help the government re-establish authority and end the country's nine-year civil war. The Sierra Leone mission, with a new maximum strength of 17,500 troops, is the largest U.N. peacekeeping operation.

Brady Dorman of Cedar Rapids was born without a complete esophagus. These days he's eating his parents out of house and home.

How far can we go?

Ever since one of our researchers developed the first antacids 50 years ago, we have been on a path of discovery up and down the human gastrointestinal tract.

For Brady Dorman, it's a journey that has led to a much healthier life. Brady was born missing most of his esophagus, unable to swallow food or liquids. Today he is a lanky 13-year-old eating three square meals a day, thanks to the discovery here of a new kind of reconstructive surgery.

As Brady grows, so does our body of knowledge. Today our researchers are looking into the causes of colon cancer and new ways to prevent it. Fiber optic technologies are making once major surgeries minimally invasive. Promising new treatments are helping our nurses and clinicians to better care for patients with inflammatory bowel disease, chronic heartburn and many other ailments.

Yet even after 50 years, when we see what medical discoveries can mean for a kid like Brady Dorman, we still get a lump in our throats.

programs, contacts and activities with the People's Republic of China until further notice." Several officials told reporters that the order took effect Monday, the day it was distributed inside the Pentagon. Later, Quigley said that a corrected version would be sent to make clear that military-to-military ties were not suspended. Monday's memo was quite detailed. It said Rumsfeld had directed that defense attaches abroad be permitted to attend special functions, as part of their usual activities, in which Chinese officials may be present. But there were to be no

Pentagon contacts with Chinese diplomatic representatives in Washington, it said. The confusion over the future of U.S.-Chinese military relations became public on the day that a team of U.S. civilian defense contractors arrived in China to assess what would be required to return the Navy surveillance plane that made an emergency landing at a military airfield on Hainan island on April 1 after colliding with a Chinese fighter jet.

The Lockheed Martin technicians spent about four hours aboard the Navy plane on Wednesday to begin their assessment. They were to return to the plane for a final day of work today. In a brief appearance before reporters earlier Wednesday prior to the leaking of the internal memo to the news media, Rumsfeld made no mention of his intentions regarding military-to-military contacts with China. He said it wasn't clear whether the Navy spy plane would be flown off the island or, alternatively, be disassembled and brought by ship or air.

"There's an assessment team on the ground at the present time," he said. "We've received some reports back, but there's nothing conclusive on that point." Quigley said there were no military-to-military contacts with China scheduled for May, and the Pentagon had said it was going to reconsider how to proceed with contacts beyond this month.

U.S.-Chinese military relations have traveled a rocky road. The Pentagon broke off ties after the Chinese military's deadly 1989 crackdown on the pro-democracy movement in Tiananmen Square, and contacts had just begun to grow again when they were halted in 1996 after China lobbed missiles toward Taiwan.

Beijing broke off military ties in early 1999 after U.S. planes bombed the Chinese Embassy in Yugoslavia during NATO's campaign against Slobodan Milosevic. The Chinese never accepted the U.S. explanation that it was an accident, and didn't resume defense relations for several months.

Endangered species funds may be cut

he said. "The Republicans [who sponsor the bill] say they don't trust government, but in fact they are taking away citizens' right to sue the government when they fail my trust." The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service representatives have said they do not have enough money or resources to implement the Endangered Species Act's policy of funding the habitats of endangered species. They said their entire listing budget goes toward lawsuits and court orders, so no money is left to help threatened species.

Two species in Johnson County, the prairie ornate box turtle and the pistol-grip mussel, are currently on the Iowa endangered and threatened species list, meaning they receive state money for preservation but not federal money.

If the current bill were to be passed, the prairie box turtle, which is a federally threatened species, will not receive federal funding if it is put on the endangered list unless Norton approves it.

The turtle is currently not at risk of being labeled as endangered, but habitat for the species is in decline in eastern Iowa, said Neil Bernstein, a professor of biology at Mount Mercy College.

The turtles live in sandy prairie areas, he said, and a lot of Iowa's sandy prairies have been developed or farmed. They are also in danger because the area around the sandy prairies is diminishing, and because the turtles tend to wander and are often hit by cars, or people take them as pets, Bernstein said.

Diana Horton, a UI professor of biological sciences, said placing declining species on the Endangered Species Act is critical to preserving nature. It is especially important in Iowa because virtually all of the native habitat has been destroyed, she said.

"People might emulate [the bill] here," she said. "If anything, there should be more and more species listed at the state level. To me, it's a no-brainer."

BUSH INTENDS TO SHRINK THE U.S. NUCLEAR ARSENAL ...

Adapt to threats

No longer can the United States hide behind the grim disdain of the extinct Cold War mentality. In a time of new conflict, reheated distrust and callous international strategic showmanship, the new missile-defense protocol indicates a crucial new age of security.

The 1972 Antiballistic Missile Treaty set a stringent limit on missile interceptors for the Soviet Union and the United States in order to prevent attacks. The treaty stood on the legs of international suspicion and needlessly exposed countries to rogue attacks, terrorism and accidental launches. As long as the United States has reason to be distrustful of international forces, the military should take strides to protect its citizens. It is not enough simply to cross fingers and hope that the likes of Iraq and China will abide by civil agreements. These countries have behaved capriciously toward the United

It is not enough simply to cross fingers and hope that the likes of Iraq and China will abide by civil agreements.

States; national security must shed its foolish vulnerability and adapt to the threat.

Under the new system, technology will theoretically destroy incoming missiles. While critics can argue that such missile-defense plans may instigate further tension and nuclear-arms production, President Bush intends to set an example and reduce the bulk. Previously, China has refused to consider participation in arms control unless the United States drastically reduced its arsenal. Now, the United States is slated to comply or at least begin to trim down the stockpile. While China holds fewer than 500 nuclear weapons, its ties and influences make it a force to acknowledge. In southern Asia, India and Pakistan consistently engage in a race to make nuclear weapons. North Korea is also capable of serious intercontinental damage. If the United States announces its plans to reduce nuclear arms and focus on defense measures, some of the nuclear-capable Asian countries, as well as Russia, may follow.

Along with security motives behind the high-tech satellite- and radar-based defense system, Bush hopes to team up with Russia in defense efforts and bring leaders together to protect against attacks. To build defense strategy and decrease weaponry improves upon harboring large quantities of nuclear arms and bleakly hoping that everyone proceeds fairly. In a time when nations maneuver irresponsibly and both flaunt and conceal nuclear arms, inactive optimism will not suffice to maintain security.

SOME SAY THE VIETNAM WAR HAD 'NO RATIONALE' ...

Vietnam all over again

The Bob Kerrey controversy has moved in its focus from the actions of the former senator in Vietnam and has become, for the media, a referendum on the validity of the Vietnam War itself. Much of the media discussion has shifted from any effort to understand the actions of Kerrey's Navy team and has become an excuse to criticize the war and the principles that led our country into the war.

The discussion began in the New York Times and the theme has caught on with many other publications, including The Daily Iowan, which on May 1 published a visceral column written by Beau Elliot that attacked the war and the reasons for which our country fought it.

The New York Times recently opined on its editorial page

It is completely correct to state that the Vietnam War was unsuccessful and poorly waged.

that "[The Kerrey incident] sums up the American experience in Vietnam and the madness of a war that then, as now, seemed to lack any rationale ..."

It is completely correct to state that the Vietnam War was unsuccessful and poorly waged. But to claim that the war had "no rationale" is a slap in the face to both the soldiers who fought in it and the patriotic Americans who supported it.

The "rationale" for the war was very clear and completely justified. After World War II, our country decided that resisting the spread of communism in the world was our moral responsibility. This is the "rationale" that stationed soldiers in Europe, fought and won a limited war in Korea, and fought a limited war again in Vietnam, to no avail. The sanity of this "rationale" is now seen in the results of our Cold War actions. Europe is free, Korea is partially free, and the world in general is more secure.

Those who criticize the intentions behind the Vietnam War would be well-served to remember that more people were killed in the last century by their own governments (especially communist ones) than were killed by either wars or plagues. Any effort to resist the spread of such tyranny can only be accurately described as completely "rational."

Derailing the J-Train

At some point, someone has to stand up to the mass hysteria and say "Enough is enough." Sometimes, for the sake of society, a legend has to be shattered. Today is one of those days. I hate to do this, Iowa City, but it's for your own good:

Jesse Ammerman is human. That DI columnist and Ledge writer Jesse Ammerman has amassed a following is no big surprise. After his exploits in the NFL Draft, his touching analysis of Britney Spears lyrics and his other insights, a dedicated apostolate is bound to form. Hell, after reading his columns for three years, I'm a fan myself. But things have gone too far.

I discovered this Sunday at a local bar. The name of the bar isn't important; I was just there enjoying $1.25 slices, looking at pictures of airplanes on the walls, when a server approached me and my friends, Eric and Luke. "Are you Jesse?" she asked Luke.

Confused, we wondered what was going on. She explained, "Well, I know you're Adam White, the DI guy, and that guy kind of looks like Jesse, so I figured that he was THE Jesse." She continued, "Jesse is sooooo funny, I think he'd be a really great guy to hang out with ... oh, and Adam, you're sort of witty, too ... man, Jesse is so cool! And so damn cute! I could just ..."

At this point, I returned to my pizza and ranch dressing, but not before I swore to myself that these unhealthy episodes of hero-worship would end. Before offering to birth his children, ladies ... consider the following: Jesse hates kittens. And ponies. I've never seen someone get so pissed off by God's creatures. Four-legged, furry or feathered, Jesse hates 'em.

Consider his championing of the local deer-reduction plan: "If we weren't meant to hunt deer, then God would have evolved 'em some guns." Or his sarcastic ramblings on Iowa's recently vetoed horse-protection plan: "Horses are the glue that hold society together ... or at least, they should be."

Beau Elliot writes his columns. Everywhere I go, people (OK, girls)

ask me, "Do you know JESSE? He's so witty!"

Well, I hate to break it to you, ladies, but Jesse is just the pretty face. While he racks up the accolades, Beau sweats it out in a dark room, trying to pound out 700 words of chick-magnet material before he even gets to consider the exploits of the Shrub for his own column. A damn crime, if you ask me. But you didn't. You're too busy asking me about JESSE.

Jesse is a 43-year-old deadbeat dad. Who's the daddy? Jesse's the daddy. Literally. He has a 16-year-old son named, surprisingly enough, Jesse. Jess the Less is a junior at City High, and he's looking forward to coming to the UI in a couple of years to hang with his dad and learn from "The Master." Jesse Jr.

mother ... well, no one's seen her lately.

Jesse still listens to MC Hammer. OK, so you wondered where he got his fly-to-the-max One-Eyed Jakes moves? From MC Hammer, that's where. And it shows. When he hits the floor with the flat-top, baggy pants and entourage shouting, "Please, Ammer, don't hurt 'em," it just wrecks the fun for the rest of us paying customers.

So next time you ask me about Jesse, just think about what he really stands for — pure, unadulterated evil.

In conclusion, Jesse bad. Adam good. And pay no attention to today's Ledge.

As soon as popular culture gives me bait, it quickly jerks it away

Once devoted an entire summer to He-Man only to have G.I. Joe or Transformers take my attention as another winter turned to spring.

As I grew older, baseball cards went from being lame to cool to lame before I ever collected any valuable players. Even now, pop culture dangles bait every spring, trying to catch my attention for the summer.

This cycle dominates our society, as people turn toward popular culture to forget mundane, ordinary life. Two years ago at this time, an entire nation of moviegoers awaited one of the biggest premieres ever, Star Wars Episode I: The Phantom Menace. A movie that promised to outdo Titanic as the largest-grossing film of all time, the fourth Star Wars movie built a legion of fans who slept out days in advance, including some who sat outside the Englert Theatre for more than 16 hours in anticipation. I admit it — I would have been in that collection of people had I not had the chance to see the movie early at work. I was pumped for the new Star Wars movie, and like most movies I cannot wait to see, I was disappointed when it arrived.

This time last year, a different segment of society awaited a huge event: the publishing of Harry Potter and the Goblet of Fire. One of the most anticipated books ever, the Harry Potter series had grown from a youth craze into a must-read phenomenon for children and adults alike. J.K. Rowling had created a sincere character, Harry Potter, who was fated at birth to fight for good despite his underdog status. Harry's fans can support his growth from a boy who lived with his aunt and uncle's family underneath the stairs to a full-fledged adult. The stories present a strong moral content with lessons that speak to people on more than one level. Rowling's books comment on all aspects of life. But this summer, Harry Potter fans are left waiting as the movie based on the first book is not slated to come out for another 202 days (counting from April 27), or Nov. 16 for those of you not counting. But the announcement that the next book, Harry Potter and the Order of the Phoenix, is not due in stores by its original publication date (rumored to coincide with the release of the movie) and that it will instead be released sometime during the summer of 2002 only adds more heartache to our longing. I discovered Harry Potter last summer and within weeks had devoured all of his books and even read the fourth book soon after publication.

Star Wars fans of the world have to wait another summer as well, according to Internet rumors that claim the newest movie will be released in the summer of 2002. And so that leaves this summer open to the question of just who will reign in the adoring public? A.I., the new Stephen Spielberg movie starring that kid who can see dead people, is creating a buzz online. But without the legions of fans that both Harry Potter and

Star Wars have created through prior releases, one can only hope for so much from this movie.

Nobody knows what to predict; there are no true heavyweights fighting for America's attention. There is no big presidential election looming and no release of a huge movie sequel such as MI:2. I guess that leaves me hoping that the baseball gods grant good fortune on the world and help the Red Sox win the World Series. But just like always, I am sure, that come this fall, I will be disappointed.

Union Bar, Malone's, Etc., etc.

UNION BAR

about the number of underage possession charges at the Union," White stated. "It reflects, I believe, evidence of part of the problem — a lack of effort by license holders to monitor who drinks once inside an establishment."

White said he has reason to believe "there is a sufficient commonality of management and ownership between the Union and Etc."

The Pohls, who together own the Union Bar, Etc. and Malone's Irish Pub, 121 Iowa Ave., declined comment Wednesday. But close friend and manager of Malone's Irish Pub Ryan Rooney said the deal with White had nothing to do with securing an additional liquor license for Etc.

"Any agreement worked out with [White] was to get this behind them," he said. "Kip owns Etc. and Jim owns the Union. It's just that simple."

White's memorandum which he sent to the council Tuesday, prompted today's meeting between council members to review the application for a liquor license and make a final decision. Councilor Connie Champion said since the application has already received all required signatures, including that of White and other authorities, the councilors have no say in the outcome.

"[Etc.] will most likely be a bar tomorrow, because even if we wanted to say no, our choice has no validity," she said.

also run by persons with disabilities and supervised by a UI graduate student. Bill Sackter, a disabled person, opened Wild Bill's Coffee Shop in 1974.

The Extend the Dream Foundation, a new not-for-profit organization aimed at helping persons with disabilities find employment and improve public awareness and acceptance of these persons, oversees the existing coffee house and plans to assist with the new mini-mall.

Fifty-five students from the UI Entrepreneurship and New Business Formation course have worked together to develop strategies for making the mini-mall beneficial to the community.

The group of undergraduate, graduate and law students were placed into teams of 10 to develop real business plans, such as financial and marketing strategies to aid the mall, said Alan Hallene, the professor of the course. Tonight the students will reveal their final plans, which will go into effect this summer.

With the help of some UI law students taking the course, Iowa City awarded the project a $105,000 grant to help cover the costs of rent and utilities for the next five years until the businesses are self-supporting.

UI graduate student Greg Johnson, 23, is currently enrolled in the course and said it was a great hands-on experience. Johnson plans to stay on this summer as one of three interns who will help supervise the project and business decisions.

"The project opens minds to the social aspect of it and not so much about making a profit, but about helping the individuals involved," he said.

The Entrepreneurship and New Business Formation course will be offered this summer and next fall and will continue to aid the mini-mall project, Hallene said.

The class explores "a non-conventional way of business," he said, referring to the not-for-profit aspect. "The goal is for the students to see a lot of community involvement, learn business expertise and become familiar with persons with disabilities."

The UI School of Social Work also "provided lectures about social work and 'handi-capable' needs to the students involved," Hallene said.

Tom Waltz, the former director of the UI School of Social Work and a member of the Extend the Dream Foundation, said the mall is always looking for contributors and donations and also plans to apply for future grants.

until the last day of business, when everything will be marked 90 percent off, he said.

Unique merchandise is what manager Laura Evans said makes the Peaceful Fool different from other stores in the area.

"You could find a gift for anybody," she said. "That's what was nice about this place."

While shopping at malls and over the Internet may be convenient, Evans said, it is important to support local, downtown businesses.

"I don't think people realize that by going to Coral Ridge they're taking away from the town," she said. "People need to be more conscious of that. You can love a store, but you've got to support it, too."

UI law student Trang Mai said the closing of the business is sad and will leave a gap in Iowa City. She said she has bought clothing from the store because it is different from apparel she can find other places.

"The merchandise is unique, and it helped to diversify Iowa City," said Mai, who was shopping at the store Wednesday afternoon. "You can't find anything like this at the Coral Ridge Mall."

Perez said he intends to open another business in Iowa City, but plans for that remain a secret. He currently owns One Twenty Six, a restaurant at 126 E. Washington St., and said the business is doing well.

"If there's a store you like, support it," he said. "It's the best thing you can do. If you like a store, you can't always assume it's going to be there."

Mayor Ernie Lehman, who owns Enzler's, a downtown luggage store, said that while the effect of the mall varies from business to business, he has noticed a decrease in customers shopping at local stores.

"I don't think there's any question the mall has taken traffic away from downtown," he said.

STATE BRIEF

President issues disaster declaration for 13 Iowa counties

DES MOINES (AP) — President Bush issued a disaster declaration for 13 Iowa counties Wednesday, making federal aid available to help with local recovery efforts.

Gov. Tom Vilsack heard about the declaration in a phone call from Federal Emergency Management chief Joe Allbaugh, who visited the state last week to tour flood damage in the Quad Cities area.

"It's obvious this is an emergency situation, and I appreciate the president acting as quickly as he did on this application because it alleviates a lot of concern that folks had about whether or not there was in fact going to be assistance," Vilsack said. "It allows us to do better planning as the water recedes."

The Mississippi was receding slowly. By mid-afternoon Wednesday, it was measured at the Quad Cities at 20.5 feet, still more than five feet above its 15-foot flood stage, according to the National Weather Service.

"The clean-up hasn't even begun yet," Vilsack said. "We're looking at probably millions of dollars of damage, both to the public sector and to the private sector. We won't know for sure what the extent is to the roads and streets until after the waters recede."

SPORTS BRIEF

Pirates' Ramon Martinez retires

PITTSBURGH (AP)—Right-hander Ramon Martinez, one of the major leagues' top pitchers during the 1990s, has retired after making four ineffective starts for the Pittsburgh Pirates this season. Martinez was 0-2 with an 8.62 ERA with Pittsburgh, failing to last past the fifth inning in any start. He was shelled in an 11-6 loss to San Francisco Tuesday night. The Pirates signed Martinez late in spring training after three starters went down with injuries. He was 0-3 with a 5.83 ERA in five spring starts with Los Angeles, but was released after failing to win the fifth spot in their rotation.

Raptors stay alive with win over Knicks

After being called out by teammates, Vince Carter responds with a 32 point game.

By Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

TORONTO — Vince Carter threw down a windmill dunk the first time he got the ball, setting the tone for an inspired game by the Toronto Raptors as they defeated the New York Knicks, 100-93, Wednesday night.

Tying their best-of-five series at 2-2 and forcing a deciding fifth game Friday night, Carter and the Raptors looked nothing like the overanxious, poorly-executing bunch that withered in Game 3.

Carter scored 32 points, his most in seven career playoff games, and ex-Knicker Chris Childs added a career playoff-high 25 on 8-for-11 shooting as Toronto won a home playoff game for the first time in franchise history.

The Raptors controlled the offensive boards, played intense defense and broke the game open with a 12-1 run beginning late in the third quarter to send the series back to Madison Square Garden for one more game.

After being criticized by teammate Charles Oakley for failing to act like a superstar and deflecting criticism onto the team as a whole, Carter had a different look in his eye from the outset.

He drove right around Latrell Sprewell just over two minutes into the game for a thunderous, highlight-reel dunk, firing up the crowd, his teammates and himself, and looked to drive to the basket rather than continually settle for the type of outside shots that contributed to him shooting 31 percent in the first three games.

Carter finished 10-for-22 from the field and 10-for-14 from the line with seven rebounds and four assists. Alvin Williams bounced back from a poor Game 3 and added 18 points, while reserve Jerome Williams provided boundless energy and tight defense on Glen Rice to help shut down the Knicks offense.

Hanks, Hawks mow down Drake

Kristi Hanks strikes out 15, as Iowa sweeps a double-header

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

Kristi Hanks trotted off the field with a little grin and slapped a few teammates' hands, disguising her happiness in her performance well.

The junior pitcher was as scorching as her native Texas sun, striking out a career-high 15 hitters en route to Iowa's 6-0 victory over Drake in the first game of Wednesday's doubleheader with the Bulldogs. The Hawkeyes also took the second contest, 10-2, in five innings.

With the game one win, Hanks improved to 31-6 overall, setting a single-season victory record at Iowa. Debbie Bilbao, a 1997 graduate and three-time all-American, held the previous best with 30 wins.

Hanks said she wasn't aware of her running "K" count until after the game but admitted she knew it was high, as she watched one Bulldog batter after another unsuccessfully chase everything she threw.

Drake recorded three hits — two doubles and one single — on the afternoon but were unable to advance a runner past second versus Hanks.

"I don't feel it was one of my better games, even though my catchers will lie and say it was," Hanks said. "My ball did move well, but I wasn't hitting spots. I don't go out and think strikeout. I think 'Give it to the defense. Give it to the defense.'"

And with the way the

Charlie Curtin/The Daily Iowan

Iowa pitcher Kristi Hanks delivers the ball Wednesday against Drake at Pearl Field. Hanks threw 15 strikeouts in the Iowa win.

Hawkeye defense is playing right now, that is not a bad idea. Sophomore shortstop Kristin Johnson said you could actually see Drake coach Emily Rottinghaus' frustration as the Iowa gloves swallowed nearly every ball.

"Everyone on this team has the potential to make 'Sportscenter'-type highlight plays," Johnson said.

The Hawkeyes' offense, however, was not to be overshadowed by their defense or the pitching performances of both Hanks and freshman Sara Thomson, who notched her eighth win of the season in the bottom half of the doubleheader.

Streaking Iowa tops Bradley

Iowa wins its fourth game in a row, 6-5.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

Winning streaks have been few and far between for the Iowa baseball team this season. So when the Hawkeyes played in Peoria Wednesday night, they had a little something extra on the line.

Iowa extended its winning streak to four games with a 6-5 victory over the Bradley Braves, but it didn't come easily for the resurgent Hawkeyes.

Bradley had the tying run thrown out at the plate in the bottom of the ninth to end the game, giving Iowa its second win in as many days. The victory improves the Hawkeyes' record to 18-23 on the season with just seven games left to play.

"We did it when we had to tonight," Iowa coach Scott Broghamer said. "We came up with the plays when we needed them."

Trailing by one and down to their final out, Bradley's third-base coach waved home the potential tying run all the way from second base, but catcher Toby Humes was able to squeeze the relay throw to nail Rene Aqueron at the plate.

It was an ending the Hawkeyes might not have seen coming.

Benefit arm-wrestling tournament hits Iowa City

Arm-wrestlers prepare their muscles for this weekend's fund-raiser.

By Roseanna Smith
The Daily Iowan

There's something about arm wrestling that lures interest. It might be the sweaty straining of two people, each refusing to give an inch. Or is it the satisfaction of simply pinning an opponent's wrist for 10 seconds?

Whatever it is, Veterans' Affairs outreach social worker Brian Brooks hopes the Monster Arm Wrestling tournament, to be held Saturday at the Field House Restaurant & Bar, 111 E. College St., will help to "strong-arm homelessness." Sponsored by the Iowa City VA Medical Center, 609 Highway 6, the tournament is a benefit to support homeless-veteran outreach programs.

An Iowa State Fair arm-wrestling champion, Brooks said the fund-raising idea made sense.

"We had to be more creative to get funds," he said. "This kind of program takes a lot of dollars, and people don't realize the number of homeless in the community."

While Brooks does not know what to expect from the inaugural event, he said that when the competition took place at the State Fair, it was fairly fierce.

"We had a lot of farm boys who were pretty intense," Brooks said. "They would yell and carry on, basically whatever it took to win."

Brooks said he hopes to have at least 80-100 participants compete in the event.

The VA hospital program supports veterans who have served in a war for at least 90 days (before 1980) and those who spent at least two years in a branch of the armed forces. Programs at the center provide food, shelter, counseling, medical and psychiatric care, case management, substance-abuse counseling and help to those applying for government benefits.

Many programs at the center are focused on prevention. The program helps veterans find jobs and pay bills. An emergency fund — to which some proceeds from the tournament will go — helps veterans pay bills or find shelter until they can receive government benefits.

Much of Brooks' work is community outreach to homeless vets.

"It's a totally different kind of social work," he said. "You meet with someone five or six times to gain that. Most of the time, these people don't trust the government, and because of substance abuse or mental issues, they can't get the help they need."

VA public-affairs specialist Kirt Sickels said approximately 30 percent of the homeless are veterans, who often feel guilty about their involvement in a war or feel like outcasts,

Donahue, who has been training for his new job since Walsh brought him to San Francisco two years ago, agreed to a four-year contract. Walsh has a three-year deal as a vice president and consultant for the organization.

Emmitt Smith and the Cowboys turning into the NFL's 'Old Boys'

■ The NFL's active career leading rusher will be 32 this month.

By Stephen Hawkins
Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — Emmitt Smith wants to set the record straight. He's not old, he's just the longest-tenured member of the Dallas Cowboys.

"When you look at it from that perspective, I am the oldest," said Smith, who will be 32 this month. "So that's cool, but it's not cool because you see guys retiring... guys you wanted to finish up with and ride out in the sunset together."

As the NFL's active career rushing leader prepares for his 12th season, Smith sees the obvious changes — missing teammates and missing friends — every time he walks into the Cowboys locker room.

Quarterback Troy Aikman was the latest in a series of longtime teammates to leave Dallas, following Michael Irvin and Darryl Johnston into retirement last month. Chad Hennings and Erik Williams are gone after the Cowboys released them this spring because of salary cap issues, as they did Aikman.

"That is reality change has come," Smith said. "You don't see Troy in here, you don't see Daryl here, you don't see Michael. So change has come. With change comes great opportunity, and great challenges."

While transition is part of

—Emmitt Smith,
Cowboys running back

every offseason, especially for a team coming off a 5-11 record that was its worst since 1989, this week's minicamp for veterans is the most telling of the ongoing changes for Smith.

Smith and 10-year defensive back Darren Woodson are the only players remaining from the Cowboys' three Super Bowl-winning teams in the 1990s. Only center Mark Stepnoski, who arrived in Dallas a year before Smith but went to the Oilers from 1995-98, has been in the NFL longer.

"You see guys come, and you see them go, and that's always a hard transition," Smith said. "You constantly have an emotional in and an emotional out, so you learn how to deal with those emotions and learn how to play with them."

"When the downtime comes is when the sad time comes, when you reflect on all of those things and you look back at all of the guys, great players and great people."

Smith also realizes that his departure is getting nearer. But he's still healthy, still loves football, and is within reach of an impressive record.

After posting his 10th straight 1,000-yard season last season (1,203 yards), Smith has 15,166 career rushing yards. That puts him within 103 yards of Barry Sanders for No. 2 on the NFL list, a position he should reach shortly after the season starts.

"I think Emmitt is better right now than he was three years ago," Cowboys coach Dave Campo said. "He has a work ethic that allows him to surprise people. Everyone knows he's a great player, but I think it shocks some people the quickness he still has."

Walter Payton's NFL record of 16,726 yards probably won't be within reach until 2002. The last time Smith had at least 1,560 yards — what he needs to equal Payton — was the 1995 season when the Cowboys won their last Super Bowl.

Smith hasn't missed a drill in minicamp, even though just two weeks ago he had eye surgery to correct a muscle imbalance in his left eye, which still is red in one corner. The problems he had with the eye were while reading, not playing football.

"I went to one guy when it first happened [about 18 months ago], and he told me I needed to quit playing football," Smith said. "I laughed in his face. It must have been a Redskins fan."

Browns draft-pick Jeremiah Pharms arrested for drug-related robbery

■ The former Washington Huskie was allegedly the triggerman for an armed robbery in Seattle.

By Janie McCauley
Associated Press

SEATTLE — Cleveland Browns draft pick Jeremiah Pharms was arrested on charges he was the triggerman in a drug-related robbery last year.

The former Washington linebacker was released Wednesday on $250,000 bail in his hometown of Sacramento, Calif., where he was arrested Tuesday night by detectives from Seattle.

Prosecutors said Wednesday that his blood was found in a car used in the robbery near the Washington campus in March 2000.

If convicted of first-degree robbery, Pharms, a father of three, could be sentenced to up to 8 1/2 years in prison. King County prosecutor Norm Maleng said Pharms could face additional charges because he was the triggerman.

The arraignment was scheduled for May 9 in Seattle. Pharms' lawyer, John Wolfe, did not immediately return a phone call for comment.

Browns coach Butch Davis said he called Washington's coaches, Pharms' agent and mother after hearing of the arrest.

"This was kind of a shock to everybody," Davis said. "But one of the most horrible things you can do is jump to a conclusion."

Pharms, a 6-foot-1, 250-pound outside linebacker, played on the Huskies' winning Rose Bowl team last January. He was taken by the Browns in the fifth round of the draft last month, 134 overall.

Pharms is accused of pistol-whipping and shooting a man while robbing him of a quarter-pound of marijuana, worth about $1,500, at a home near campus.

The man was hit in the leg and the bullet lodged in his chest.

Pharms' blood was found with the victim's blood in a car at the scene, court papers say. Pharms, who wore a mask during the crime, and an unidentified accomplice changed clothes in the car, which was registered to Pharms' ex-girlfriend, and walked away, the documents say.

Investigators say they also found in the car a bloody glove issued by the Washington football team. DNA tests completed recently show the blood on the glove belonged to Pharms and the victim, Maleng said.

Washington coach Rick Neuheisel and Athletics Director Barbara Hedges were in Phoenix for Pac-10 meetings. Both declined to comment.

Browns owner Al Lerner said the team's background check on Pharms was not as thorough as it would have been if he were picked in the first or second round of the draft.

Third-period goals pull Sabres even

■ Buffalo nabs Game 4 in Pittsburgh to make the series 2-2.

By Alan Robinson
Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — Mario Lemieux had no shots, Jaromir Jagr had no impact. Everything went right for the Buffalo Sabres in Pittsburgh, and now it's the Penguins who are trying to figure out what's gone wrong.

Stu Barnes had two goals in the third period and Vladimir Tsyplakov added another as the Sabres, trying to rally from a 2-0 playoff deficit for the first time in their history, beat the Penguins 5-2 Wednesday night to even their series.

Jean-Pierre Dumont scored 1:28 into the game and Curtis Brown also had a goal as the Sabres won twice in Pittsburgh after being dominated in two games at home by the Penguins. Just as in their 4-1 victory Monday in Game 3, the Sabres won it with a three-goal third period. "We were trying to force things at home, and you can't be playing run and gun with these guys," Jason Woolley said. "We were much more patient here and relied on our defense. At home, you're always trying to put a show on for the fans."

Game 5 of an Eastern Conference semifinal series in which the home team has yet to win will be Saturday in Buffalo, where the Penguins outscored the Sabres, 6-1, in two games last week.

Martin Straka had a goal for Pittsburgh, but was stopped easily by Dominik Hasek on a penalty shot at 8:07 of the third that would have tied it at 3-3.

"What did I do wrong? I should have let Mario (Lemieux) take the shot," Straka said.

Maybe not — Lemieux, shadowed as closely as he was in a scoreless Game 3, didn't manage a shot, though he assisted on both Penguins goals.

Sixers close out Pacers with last-second win

■ Philadelphia will play the winner of the Knicks-Raptors series.

By Steve Herman
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Allen Iverson scored 33 points and Aaron McKie came up with a big rebound and two free throws in the closing seconds as the Philadelphia 76ers beat the Indiana Pacers 88-85

Wednesday night to win their first-round Eastern Conference playoff series 3-1.

Philadelphia advanced to the conference semifinals against the winner of the New York-Toronto series, which is tied 2-2.

Iverson led the league in scoring this season and averaged 31.5 for the four playoff games against the Pacers, who eliminated the 76ers each of the past two years.

A 3-point basket by Travis Best gave Indiana an 85-82 lead with just over two minutes to go, but McKie pulled the 76ers within one and Dikembe Mutombo gave Philadelphia the lead with a hook shot with 1:09 remaining.

After an exchange of possessions with no scoring, Reggie Miller missed a 3-pointer and McKie pulled down the rebound with 5.8 seconds to go. He was immediately fouled and hit both free throws. Jalen Rose then missed a 3-pointer for Indiana as the game ended.

Miller had 32 points for Indiana and Rose finished with 18.

The Pacers had complained the 76ers and Iverson were getting favorable treatment from the officials earlier in the series, and Philadelphia hit 24-of-29 free throws to just 9-of-10 for Indiana.

Iowa jumped to an early lead, giving starter Cory Hollenhorst some offensive support with three runs in the second inning. Brian Burks recorded an RBI double, and Humes and Brian Bucklin each had run-scoring singles in the frame.

Bradley countered with two in the bottom of the second, but Iowa notched another two runs in the third. With two outs, Alex Dvorsky brought home Ian Mattiace, and then scored on a base hit by Burks. Burks was thrown out at the plate trying to score on a double by Humes.

The Hawks added what would prove to be the game-winning run in the sixth, when Jim Reid hit a slow roller to third base with runners on the corners. Bradley's third baseman chose to peg Dvorsky at home, but his throw sailed off Dvorsky's helmet, allowing him to score easily and giving Iowa a 6-2 lead.

Bradley added a single run in the sixth and two in the seventh to account for the final margin.

"Mentally, for the last three or four innings, we lost our focus at times," said Broghamer. "But it was a good win for our kids."

Hollenhorst picked up his first victory of the season with 6 1/3 innings of work before giving way to Reed Pawelk, who nailed down his sixth save of the season.

Iowa's offense accounted for 11 hits in the game. Dvorsky, Burks, Humes and Reid each led the attack with two hits and an RBI apiece.

Iowa did not let up in game two, surging ahead of Drake early by putting three runs on the board in the first inning and four in the second.

"Our hitters did a nice job adjusting," said Iowa coach

Gayle Blevins. "They did a good job of pushing runners around and just getting quality at-bats."

Blevins has said all year that her team's depth may be its biggest asset. To back up their coach's words, four different Hawkeye batters notched two hits or more in the second game.

Senior Lisa Rasche went 3-4 from the plate with one RBI. Junior Liz Dennis also had three hits on the afternoon. Senior Katy Jendrzejewski finished with three hits and a game-high two RBIs.

In addition, Jendrzejewski, as a catcher, doesn't see much time on the base paths. Her career-high for stolen bases in a game was one. Wednesday she had two, but she was also hit twice by the softball while on the base paths, resulting in automatic outs.

"I'm a liability," Jendrzejewski said laughing. Not taking all the credit for her first stolen base, she admitted it was actually a running play. The Hawkeyes host

he said.

"It's very common to speak to vets, and when I say, 'Thank you,' it is shocking to them," he said. "Some of them have never been told [that]."

Brooks said he has seen more than 145 homeless veterans in Iowa City, Cedar Rapids, Waterloo and Dubuque in nine months. He estimated another 100-120 live in the Quad Cities area.

While Brooks has an office in the VA Center, he spends most of his time out in the community.

"Brian works under bridges, alleys, soup kitchens," Sickels said. "It's not a typical seek-and-find mission. He has to make contact and bring them in off the streets."

While Brooks' meetings are not always successful, he said, the best part of his job is finding others who want to help.

"One of the very first guys I was able to help was a Vietnam vet who decided to volunteer with me. He brought in 30 or 40 vets because he was able to break that barrier between the homeless and me."

Weigh-ins for the arm-wrestling event will begin at 10 a.m. at the Field House Restaurant & Bar. The event will start at noon, with men's right- and left-hand classes and an open women's class. Competitions will be held in a wide range of weight classes. There is a $20 entry fee; prizes will be awarded.

Deion in prime shape for big league debut

■ The outfielder was overwhelmed in his big league return, and the Reds were invigorated.

By Joe Kay
Associated Press

CINCINNATI — A day later, Deion Sanders was still overwhelmed.

By going 3-for-3 with a homer in his return to the majors, the NFL cornerback and Cincinnati Reds outfielder became the talk of baseball and the biggest star in town.

Better yet, he saved the Reds from a potentially awkward situation and gave himself one of the best moments of his two-sport career — a curtain call for 30,000 fans that brought tears to his eyes.

"It was wonderful," Sanders said Wednesday, sitting on a folding chair in front of his locker. "In sports, it's moments for me. Last night probably was the best I've ever had for the simple fact that I think these fans understand the type of affair that I have with the city.

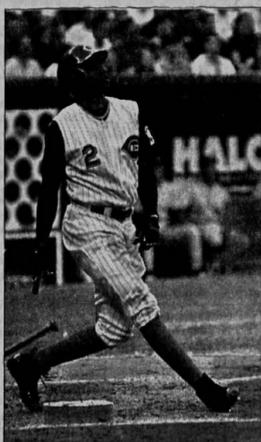

"Just to feel appreciated for those 30 seconds — I've never felt like that in my life."

No one expected such a sensational comeback by Sanders, who hadn't played in the majors since 1997 and had to talk general manager Jim Bowden, his biggest fan in baseball, into letting him try again this year.

Bowden took a lot of criticism for even considering Sanders, who refused a promotion to the majors last year because he wanted to play football. During spring training, Bowden became defensive when anyone asked why the 33-year-old outfielder was around.

By delivering in his big league return, a 7-6 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers, Sanders took the heat off Bowden, gave the Reds another outfielder while Ken Griffey Jr. recovers from a torn hamstring, and made Cinergy Field rock like it hadn't all season.

"Nothing surprises me with Deion," Bowden said. "He's one of the greatest athletes in the world. I'm not going to be the one to bet against Deion Sanders."

Sanders showed he was serious about a baseball comeback when he hit .459 for Triple-A Louisville. He had to bid his time until May 1, when baseball's rules allowed him to rejoin the Reds.

Had Sanders flopped at Louisville, Bowden would have had a difficult time justifying his promotion. By leading the International League in hitting, Sanders showed he deserved it.

The 30,000 fans who showed up for his return Tuesday gave Sanders the loudest ovation during pregame introductions and another warm ovation before his first at-bat. Sanders singled to center on the first pitch from Eric Gagne, the Dodgers' fifth starter.

"Going to the plate for the first time, I had to look up and see if it was me hitting or Griffey," Sanders joked. "I didn't know what was going on — you're cheering for me?"

"I think people understood that it took a lot of hard work to get back. It took a lot of determination to come back, and I think people honor and respect that."

Point Given favorite in 17-horse Derby field

■ Trainer Bob Baffert has the two top horses in the race.

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Point Given will be outside looking in when he tries to give trainer Bob Baffert a third Kentucky Derby victory in five years.

The strapping chestnut colt, winner of the Santa Anita Derby, will start from the No. 17 post in a 17-horse field.

He was made the 9-5 favorite Wednesday, while Baffert's second starter, Wood Memorial winner Congaree, was made the second choice at 5-1.

Co-third choice at 6-1 were Monarchs and Millennium Wind. The front-running Balto Star was next at 8-1.

Point Given drew the 14th pick in the selection process Wednesday and his owner and trainer chose the outside post. That way the versatile colt, who figures to lay off the pace, can stay out of trouble at the start.

"I had an argument with Bob," joked Prince Ahmed Salman of Saudi Arabia, Point Given's owner. "He wanted 19 and I wanted 17."

Asked what made Point Given so good, Salman said, "Don't ask me now, I'm a nervous wreck."

Baffert and owner Robert McNair got the second pick for the speedy Congaree and chose the No. 8 post.

Front-running Millennium Wind, winner of the Blue Grass Stakes, will start from the No. 2 post. Monarchs, winner of the Florida Derby and second in the Wood Memorial, will start from the No. 16 hole. Balto Star, wire-to-wire winner of the Spiral and Arkansas Derby, will start from No. 3 post.

Another stretch-runner Dollar Bill, listed at 10-1, will start from the No. 10 post. He won the Risen Star, was fourth in the Louisiana Derby and third in the Blue Grass.

Dollar Bill and stretch-runner Invisible Ink, who drew No. 13, are trained by Todd Pletcher. Invisible Ink finished third in the Florida Derby and fourth in the Blue Grass.

There are no couplings for betting purposes in the Derby because of a recent Kentucky racing rule. It states there will be no entries in an event worth at least $1 million. The Derby purse is $1,112,000.

Also entered were Express Tour, Thunder Blitz, A P Valentine, Songandaprayer, Fifty Stars, Jamaican Rum, Keats, Talk Is Money, Startac and Arctic Boy.

Express Tour was bought in November for $1 million by the Godolphin Racing Stable of Sheikhs Mohammed and Maktoum al Maktoum of Dubai after he won three straight races at Calder. In his only start this year, he won the United Arab Emirates Derby on March 24 at Nad al Sheba by a head over stablemate Street Cry, who was kept out of Saturday's race by an injury.

Frank Stronach's Thunder Blitz charged into the Derby with a 6 1/2-length victory in the Flamingo for his first win in four starts this year in his stakes debut April 7.

A P Valentine, co-owned by Rick Pitino, the new basketball coach at Louisville, beat Point Given in the Champagne on Oct. 14, but then finished 14th in the Breeders' Cup Juvenile on Nov. 4 in which he bucked his shins.

Dazy Head Mazy 'chooses' I.C.

■ Fresh off MTV's "Choose or Lose" campaign, Dazy Head Mazy comes to Iowa City

By Mark Wilson

publicity photo

Dazy Head Mazy, which played in MTV's "Choose or Lose" tour, will make a stop in Iowa City Saturday night.

If you choose to not see this band, you will lose out.

Dazy Head Mazy, the five-piece pop-rock band out of Minneapolis, will play the Q Bar at 9 p.m. Saturday. The group's sound is a refreshing mix of electric and acoustic — a direct result of instrumentation including an acoustic 12-string guitar, mandolin, electric guitar and bass. The group's bright pop sound is completed with traditional folk-narrative lyrics and multi-layered vocals.

Since its emergence in 1995, the band has put out three CDs and has gained recognition on college charts while playing an average of 250 shows a year. Perhaps it is this heavy load of performing and recording that helped this young band land a spot on MTV's 2000 "Choose or Lose" tour, a national campaign featuring live-band performances and guest-star appearances encouraging youth to "rock the vote" in the presidential election.

"We got hooked up with an agent out of Minneapolis who used to do some local booking around there, and he had ties," said band drummer and back-up vocalist Andrew Clark. "It was a pleasant surprise."

During the tour, the band performed all over the country and met MTV hostess Friday — whom lead-vocalist Will Bauermeister called "a doll" — but its real fulfillment lay in promoting young.

"It was great, and we got to do it for a cause," Bauermeister said. "MTV doesn't provide a bus, but it provided all the materials the students needed for voting."

Throughout the "Choose or Lose" tour, Dazy Head Mazy performed alongside up-and-coming indie band the Push Stars, which has been featured in numerous movie soundtracks. The group also played Iowa City earlier this year.

"You always learn from every band you see," Clark said. "It's always a learning process."

Despite the rigorous touring of the "Choose or Lose" campaign, Dazy Head Mazy still had time to release its third album, Shift, and the band members look forward to sharing their new songs with Iowa City.

"Give us a shot," Bauermeister said. "We've got new music and a new album, and we just want to keep on doing this as long as we can."

While the goals of the group members are playing the best they can as long as they can, they acknowledge smaller accomplishments they would like to make on the way.

"One of my personal goals is to learn to play the harmonica," Bauermeister said. "I'm having such a blast with it. I've just got to buy more harmonicas."

All For You Janet Jackson

Virgin

What do Janet Jackson, Howard Stern and Temptation Island all have in common? They all prove that sex sells.

On her latest album, All For You, Jackson's lyrics are so sexually explicit that they give the impression that she's been hanging out with Ron Jeremy on a regular basis. Even sex specialists R. Kelly's and D'Angelo's lyrics seem like children's stories when put up against All For You. Lyrics such as "I feel your touch/as your hands move slowly/up my thighs/you taste the honey" on the cleverly titled "Love Scene (ooh baby)," are just a hint of what's on this album. Instead of risking my job and printing the lyrics to "Would You Mind," I'll just say that the song ends with Jackson passionately moaning for the last two minutes.

The style of the CD closely resembles that of Jackson's previous albums. Longtime collaborators James Harris and Terry Lewis join forces with Janet to produce straight-ahead pop music with just enough surprises to keep it interesting. A variety of string arrangements, percussion instruments and electric guitars add just enough spunk to the danceable songs to push them ahead of pop failures such as Vitamin C and Angie Martinez. The only complete bomb on the album is the ex-lover rant "Son Of A Gun (I betcha think this song is about you)" with Carly Simon, which doesn't hold a candle to the original.

The bottom line on All For You is that it closely resembles Jackson's other discs, so if you liked them, you'll like this, but if you didn't like releases such as The Velvet Rope and Janet, then stay away. Little kiddies should be advised as well; this album skipped right over the R rating of Janet's previous albums and went straight to the XXX level.

Electric Mile G. Love and Special Sauce

Epic

Although G. Love and Special Sauce's new album, Electric Mile, travels past a variety of different neighborhoods, in the end it ends up back at G. Love's home in Philadelphia. Because while the band splashes in tastes of ska, reggae and country, the main groove on Electric Mile is still G. Love's sittin'-on-the-back-porch-blues style. This should make many dedicated fans happy because after G. Love and Special Sauce (bassist Jim Prescott and drummer Jeff Clemens) gained popularity with their 1999 release Philadelphonic, many feared that the group would move towards a more catchy, Sugar Ray-esque pop sound.

Although Electric Mile remains true to the group's previous style, it's a bit mellower than its four previous albums. Songs such as the Southern-twined "Sara's Song" and the laid-back "Shy Girl" show that G. Love has more to offer than just his fast-reeling rap delivery. The up-stroked, Sublime-influenced "Unified" is a pleasant surprise, providing an upbeat, world-peace-type message. The album doesn't have any stand out sing-alongs like Philadelphonic's "Kick Drum," but the upcoming single "Free At Last" does have quite a catchy chorus. Legendary organist John Medeski and percussion extraordinaire Jamie Janover also appear on the album, giving a few songs added depth.

Electric Mile is refreshing and unique compared with the majority of current releases. If you're looking for an album to sit down and relax to, check out this latest release from G. Love and Special Sauce.

Film: One Night At McCool's
Director: Harald Zwart
Writer: Stan Seidel
Starring: Liv Tyler, Matt Dillon, Paul Reiser, John Goodman and Michael Douglas
Length: 93 minutes
Rated: R

One Night At McCool's is a product of clashing agendas. The debut feature from Michael Douglas' production company Furthur Films, McCool's is saddled with the self-serving posturing of its cast and a first-time writer/director team left to deal with the mess.

In one night's time, a seductive bombshell named Jewel murders her low-life boyfriend, gets a hapless bartender Randy (Matt Dillon) to take the rap, and catches the eye of Randy's cousin Carl (Paul Reiser) and investigating detective Dehling (John Goodman). From this convoluted opening, McCool's spirals into a jumble of cinematic clichés, crude comedy and tasteless laughable performances.

The most obvious trouble with McCool's is its stars' insistence to play against type. The primary offenders in this indulgent experiment are Liv Tyler and Douglas.

Seeking to shake the good-girl image she forged in such films as Inventing The Abbotts and Empire Records, Tyler dons a closet full of mini-skirts and push-up bras to play femme fatale Jewel. Too bad dangerous sexuality requires more than a revealing wardrobe. The little heat Tyler radiates couldn't melt a snowflake.

While Tyler's decision to explore her edgier side is certainly a career-motivated move, Douglas treats his role as the slimeball hitman Mr. Burmeister as more of a joke. Annoying and arrogant is the best way to describe Douglas' performance. Apparently, the humor lies in a self-perceived great actor lowering himself to playing a polyester-clad thug with a bad haircut. Douglas' vulgar dialogue and smug manner are as offensive as they are unfunny.

FILM REVIEW
By Aaron McAdams

Strike two against Douglas comes for making McCool's such a pre-scripted affair. Furthur Films enlisted first-timer Stan Seidel to write and fellow freshman Harald Zwart to direct. The result is a film that bears the mark of its producers, not its creative team of writer and director.

Zwart's style of direction is an amalgam of conventional genres. The film begins with a mock film-noir feel, with shots of a bingo parlor's tacky clientele captured through a pasty-blue filter. But soon after, McCool's morphs into a romantic comedy, as Jewel and Randy stroll through the deserted city streets, complete with a melodramatic score to punctuate the emotional moments.

Seidel did manage to concoct an interesting structure for the film. Randy, Carl and Detective Dehling all tell their stories in flashback; Randy to Mr. Burmeister, Carl to his shrink and the detective to a priest. Unfortunately this structure builds toward a moronic ending that plays like a sour mixture of There's Something About Mary and Reservoir Dogs.

It's not a good sign when a film's only redeeming quality is the presence of Johnny Cash's "Wanted Man" and Ween's "Take Me Away." When you begin to notice a soundtrack that's supposed to be unnoticeable, the content on the screen certainly isn't getting the job done. One Night At McCool's is guaranteed to make you laugh, but it's funny for all the wrong reasons.

ARTS BRIEF

Hollywood producers, writers resume talks; strike looms

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Hollywood writers and producers resumed negotiations Wednesday, nearly 12 hours after their contract for movie and TV work expired.

Fears of a walkout have gripped the industry for months, but the Writers Guild has yet to call for a strike authorization vote from its members.

Progress has been difficult to gauge because both sides have maintained a strict news blackout since negotiations resumed April 17.

A work stoppage would delay the fall TV season and reduce the number of movies produced. It could also cost the Los Angeles area economy nearly $6.9 billion in lost revenue.

Negotiators for the Writers Guild had a 17-hour bargaining session Tuesday with the Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers, which represents all the major networks and studios.

Before the news blackout, the two sides had yet to bridge a $100 million gap between their respective demands.

A half-hour before the contract expired at 12:01 a.m. Wednesday, a small group of screenwriters gathered for a candlelight vigil in front of guild headquarters, where the negotiations were being held.

The group had hoped for a progress report.

"We're also here to show we trust them," said Ali Rushfield, a writer for the upcoming Fox television show "Undeclared."

Meanwhile, the contracts with the two performer unions, the Screen Actors Guild and the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists, end on June 30, just two months after the writers' contract deadline.

John Wells, the president of the Writers Guild's western unit, has demanded an average annual raise of approximately 3 percent for the organization's 11,500 members, amounting to $99.7 million over three years. The producers' alliance has said it cannot afford to meet all the writers' demands.

The last writers' strike occurred in 1988 and lasted 22 weeks, stretching from mid-March to early August. Afterward, both sides said they weren't sure the damage it caused was worth the gains they made.
