Local community mourns Simpson

Bob Simpson speaks with Monticello residents during his campaign last fall for Iowa's 1st District congressional seat. The long-time political activist died on May 4.

■ Friends remember Bob Simpson as a man of courage, humor and intelligence.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

There was more to the late Iowa City activist Bob Simpson than just politics.

UI junior Scott Delgado, who worked on Simpson's 2000 campaign for the U.S. House of Representatives, said he'll remember the courage, youthfulness, humor and fierce intelligence behind Simpson's eyes. Simpson died on May 4 at 64.

"It was easy for a lot of people to pass him off as an old man in a wheelchair," Delgado said of Simpson, who became wheelchair-bound after suffering from polio as a child. "It was his youthfulness for me. He just had such a life."

"We loved each other."

Simpson and the 21-year-old finance student he would later come to consider the son he never had forged their friendship over almost daily cups of coffee and nightly dinners at the Mill Restaurant, 120 E. Burlington St. There they discussed everything from politics to music and movies.

"Surprisingly, he was well-versed in movies," Delgado said. "It was more than politics with Bob. Sure, it ran through his blood. He was an intellectual."

Ex-voice teacher is sentenced

■ A local music instructor pleads guilty to two counts of third-degree sexual abuse.

By Natasha Lambropoulos
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City private voice instructor who admitted to sexually abusing his teen-age students was sentenced to up to 10 years in prison on May 4.

Weyburn Eugene Wasson, 53, was sentenced on two of five counts of third-degree sexual abuse, under a plea agreement he reached with the state last month.

He pled guilty to touching the genital areas of two young male students during their lessons in his home, 414 Crestview Ave. The incidents occurred in 1998 and 1999.

His sentences will run together and will not exceed 10 years, said Wasson's attorney, Leon Spies.

Pending good behavior and work credit, Wasson could be eligible for parole in fewer than five years, Spies said.

One of his two adolescent sons wrote a letter to the judge, which Wasson read in court, expressing his love for his father and his desire for him to be back home.

"[Wasson] is a great father and teacher to me and my brother ... I miss him and want my dad back as soon as possible," said the letter his son wrote.

Although Wasson's sons were not at his sentencing, the two victims and their parents were present in the Johnson County court room along with other members of Wasson's family.

In January 2000, Iowa City police began investigating Wasson's sexual misconduct, which had been reported by some of his students.

According to his sentence, Wasson must register as a sex offender when he is released; he also must enroll in a sex-offender program while in prison.

Greens hold first convention, elect officers and state delegate

■ The Green Party plans to run a candidate in the 2002 gubernatorial election.

By Nick Narigon
The Daily Iowan

Members of the Johnson County Green Party elected their executive committee and state delegate and heard several local speakers during their first-ever convention over the weekend.

The focus of the convention, held on May 5 at the IMU, was to organize the party in order to prepare for the upcoming gubernatorial election. The Green Party recently received ballot status for the state elections after Ralph Nader received more than 2 percent of the county's vote during the 2000 presidential elections.

The party hopes to register more voters in Iowa to give voters a third-party choice.

The platform of the party highlights such issues as equal opportunity and environmental concerns. The party emphasizes ecological awareness, campaign-finance reform, monitoring of corporate power and respect for diversity.

Speaker Brian Davis, who will run for the Iowa City Council this year, said the Green Party is essential for voters not satisfied with the current two-party system.

"Democrats assume the votes of the liberals," he said. "So they've become more moderate to get more votes. So it's nice to have a third option for us liberals left hanging."

I look at the Green Party as a place for research and real action.

— Lucy Jeansson, Green Party treasurer

The values of the Green Party are important to politics in Iowa City, he said. There are too many business owners on City Council, he said.

Noting a recent heatwave in the Northeast, party Co-chairman Dan Eccher said carbon emissions need to be reduced to curb global warming.

Co-chairwoman Meg White said she will focus on fund raising for the party because it is going to need it to run a gubernatorial campaign. The party has yet to decide who its candidate for governor will be in the November 2002 elections.

The Greens elected Dawn Mueller to be their delegate at the state convention. Jacqueline Croat was elected as a co-chairwoman, Holly Hart was re-elected as secretary, and Lucy Jeansson was elected as treasurer.

Foldesi to jump to Notre Dame

The UI human-resources head will assume the same job in South Bend.

By Mary Sedor
The Daily Iowan

A UI administrator who would have played a key role in cutting $18.7 million from the university's budget during next fiscal year announced on May 4 that he will resign.

Robert Foldesi, the associate vice president for human resources, will leave his position to become the associate vice president for human resources at the University of Notre Dame on July 1.

The decision to leave the UI was a difficult one, he said, but it had nothing to do with state budget cuts. Last week, Foldesi sent his recommendations via e-mail to deans, directors and department heads on how to cut personnel costs, including guidelines for laying off employees.

"I love the university and have a deep respect for the leadership and people here," said Foldesi, who came to the UI in 1997. "I fully intended to retire here."

After Notre Dame officials approached him with an offer to be a part of a growing human-resources department, he said, it was difficult to say no. Foldesi has lived and worked in South Bend, Ind., before.

"The opportunity to participate in the growth and development process seemed like a good opportunity for me and my family," he said.

Doug True, the UI vice president for finance, said Foldesi cared deeply about the issues surrounding the wellness of UI employees, from recreation activities to dealing with conflict. In the next several days, True said he will choose an interim director.

"He has done a good job," True said.

In his four years at the UI, Foldesi said, he is proud of the development of the work-life program and the human-resource information system. The work-life program includes training, counseling and other methods to help faculty and staff solve their problems. The human-resources information system is Web-based software

STATE BRIEF

2nd crest expected on Mississippi

DAVENPORT (AP) — Cities along the Mississippi River are monitoring weather reports and preparing for a second flood crest early next week.

The National Weather Service says the river is expected to re-crest at 15.8 feet in LeClaire by late today and at 21 feet by Tuesday in the Quad-Cities.

Flood stage is 11 feet in LeClaire and 15 feet in the Quad-Cities.

The second crest is a result of heavy rainfall over recent days north of the Quad-City region.

Rain before or after the crest will probably prolong the flood level rather than add to the height of the crest.

The river originally crested on April 24-25 in the Quad-Cities at 22.32 feet, just shy of the 1993 record.

The Davenport public-works director, Dee Bruemmer, said the city has canceled clean-up efforts for now and has stopped picking up sandbags. She said the city is working with the National Guard and the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to gauge what the second crest will mean for Davenport. She anticipates flood levels could reach anywhere from 21 to 21.5 feet by Tuesday.

City workers reinforced dikes on May 4 along Federal Street as well as piling sandbags on the dike surrounding John O'Donnell Stadium.

Some street detour signs that had been removed are back up in Davenport and Bettendorf.

The Latino/Native American Cultural Center is a haven for UI Latino and Native American students alike. It has been in existence for nearly 30 years, and it has seen its share of Cinco de Mayo celebrations.

"It's someplace where we can go and hangout, study, and get together," said Felipe Tovar, a UI senior. "It's helpful to have a location like that."

Latinos constitute a small amount of the overall UI population, but their ties to each other, and their pride in themselves, is far greater than their numbers.

"We have a home away from home here," said Inez Cruz. "We need to have celebrations that celebrate the day but also to celebrate Mexican culture."

A festive, familial feel radiated throughout the UI Latino/Native American Cultural Center on May 5, as members of the Latino community celebrated Cinco de Mayo — one of the biggest holidays of the year.

Various Mexican dishes were served to everyone in attendance, and the event was complete with piñatas and dancing until 2 a.m.

"We're showing pride for our race," said UI senior Ana O'Donnell. "We're making ourselves known and our pride be known. We need to be visible, and people need to see what we're doing in a positive light."

The dark before the dawn

Film: Before Night Falls
Director: Julian Schnabel
Writers: Cunningham O'Keefe, Lazaro Gomez Carilles and Julian Schnabel
Starring: Javier Bardem and Olivier Martinez
Length: 135 minutes
Rated: R

Before Night Falls is a film about the beauty and power of words — how the artist can inspire, infuriate, and transcend even the most oppressive conditions.

Based on his own memoir, the film chronicles the life of Reinaldo Arenas, the Cuban poet and novelist who was persecuted under Castro for his homosexuality and counter-revolutionary writing. Only one of his 20 books, which include 10 novels, was published in his native country. Many manuscripts had to be smuggled out of Cuba because of the government's relentless crackdown on artists and homosexuals throughout the 1960s and '70s. The persecution was so severe that Arenas spent two years in prison, where he was ultimately given a choice between renouncing his work and being released, or being killed.

Director Julian Schnabel (Basquiat) employs a number of documentary techniques to present Arenas's turbulent tale. The film's grainy, saturated images add to its realism, while the handheld camera-work is subtle enough to provide a sense of intimacy and immediacy without jarring the audience. At the end, when Arenas is suffering from AIDS — he died in New York City in 1990 — the camera work is so piercing that it feels as though we shouldn't be allowed this close, as if we are getting a glimpse of his own home movie.

Schnabel also uses voice-over narration effectively throughout the film. Some of the film's most-engaging scenes are the lyrical montages in which Arenas' poems and short stories are combined with actual (stock) footage of Cuban life during the Castro revolution.

Javier Bardem earned a well-deserved Best Actor Oscar

The first 45 minutes of local DJ Jake Reif's set fed the speaker's high and lows with soul-glow House and funky Disco records. But by 12:28 a.m., the dance floor was empty, and Reif did not appear pleased. He turned his back on the crowd and shuffled through his crate of records. Reif turned and faced the crowd with an evil smirk on his face while he caressed the chosen record. You could feel the temperature rising.

Two minutes later, a five-second, beatless interlude quickly expired as Reif faded into the chosen record. The tune's murky ambiance surged

In Congo, horror trickles in to hospital

■ The country's civil war may have killed 3 million civilians in the interior, observers say.

By Ellen Knickmeyer
Associated Press

KABINDA, Congo — Parents reaching a front-line hospital this weekend with stick-thin children in their arms told of countless civilians succumbing to disease and hunger in burned, looted villages cut off throughout Congo's 2½-year-old war.

The hospital at Kabinda — where 185 emaciated children lay on and under the 60 available beds, with a 2-week-old measles epidemic raging — provided a first look at a hidden death toll that one international aid group has estimated in the millions.

"I came because I wanted to save them," said Ntambue Ntambue, who arrived at Kabinda with two starving, sick children, after seeing two of his other children die untreated during a year of hiding in the bush. "Now I must go back and get the rest."

"We knew if we didn't come, we would lose everyone," said Ntambue Ntambue, who walked two days through rebel-controlled territory to reach Kabinda with his 5-year-old daughter, leaving his five other children behind.

The girl — weighing 17 pounds — slumped with a feeding tube in her nose on May 5, eyes rolling in her sockets and the frail bones of her skull sharp.

The Associated Press was the first news organization that Congo's government has permitted to cross to the front line at Kabinda, a southeastern hilltop city of 140,000. The AP spoke to parents and workers at the hospital on May 5.

Kabinda was under siege for two years during the war, surrounded by Rwanda-backed rebel forces who hoped to seize the city and its airstrip and push on to nearby diamond fields.

Now a cease-fire has started to gel, and rebel fighters have begun withdrawing from land around the government-controlled town. The 300 adults and children at the hospital are the first to trickle in from the surrounding countryside.

Syrian mosque has first papal visit

■ John Paul II stops by a Syrian mosque Sunday in his campaign for better relations with Muslims.

By Victor Simpson
Associated Press

DAMASCUS, Syria — John Paul II became the first pope to enter a mosque Sunday, calling for brotherhood between Christians and Muslims and stepping across a sensitive line in his campaign for better relations with different faiths.

Vatican and Syrian flags decorated the Umayyad Mosque in the old walled city at the heart of modern Damascus as the 80-year-old pontiff slipped off his shoes as tradition requires and entered the mosque.

Leaning on a cane, he stumbled slightly at the threshold and while crossing the carpeted floor of the vast, white-columned hall glittering with chandeliers. The visit to the mosque lasted one hour and 35 minutes.

He walked with Syria's top Muslim cleric, Sheikh Ahmad Kuftaro, who is in his late 80s and also walked with a cane. Papal aides quoted John Paul as telling Kuftaro: "I can say I am very happy."

The visit was also a natural step in John Paul's longtime campaign to heal the wounds separating Christians, Muslims and Jews. In 1986, he became the first pope to visit a Jewish synagogue.

After leaving the mosque, the pontiff urged Muslims and Christians to "turn to one another with feelings of brotherhood and friendship, so that the Almighty may bless us with the peace which heaven alone can give."

The mosque visit pointed out some of the friction. Plans for a joint Muslim-Christian prayer at the mosque were dropped — apparently to avoid hurting Muslim sensitivities. And since the mosque stands on the site where a church was located 12 centuries ago, some Syrians questioned whether the pope was trying to claim the site back for Christianity.

The pope's visit to Syria, which began on May 5, has also brought him into the ripples of Arab-Israeli rivalries.

In his speech welcoming the pope, President Bashar Assad urged the Vatican to side with Arabs in their dispute with Israel and referred to what he described as Jewish persecution of Jesus Christ.

Bush religious plan raises concerns

■ The government cannot deny any religious groups the right to apply for federal contracts.

By Laura Meckler
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sending taxpayer dollars to the neighborhood church or synagogue sounds like a great idea to many Americans. But what about government money for the Nation of Islam, Scientologists, Hare Krishnas or Wiccans?

The question is asked repeatedly in the debate over President Bush's plan to open federal programs to religious groups. Both sides agree there can be only one answer: Yes — all religions are eligible to apply for government contracts because to bar certain faiths from competing would amount to an unconstitutional government establishment of religion.

"It's a settled issue of constitutional law," said John DiJulio, the director of the White House Office of Community and Faith-Based Initiatives.

"The Constitution requires equal treatment," said the Rev. Barry Lynn of Americans United for the Separation of Church and State. "If you fund the Methodists, then you've got to fund the Muslims and the Mormons, too."

Still, the issue will not go away, partly because opponents such as Lynn are doing what they can to highlight the unpopular aspects of Bush's plan, and partly

Death Penalty Representation Project. "What are the reasons for that? The system is broken, and the only way to ensure that it gets fixed is to stop it."

The last federal prisoner executed was Victor Feguer, who was hanged in 1963 for kidnapping and murdering an Iowa doctor.

His was the last of 34 federal executions from 1927 to 1963. The others, including two women, were of inmates convicted of rape, murder, spying and sabotage.

BIKINI-CONTEST CROWD DENIED A LIQUOR LICENSE ...

Stripped of their pretenses

The new bar Etc. was denied a liquor license last week. Right now, laughing would be a suitable response. The city councilors who voted against the request for a liquor license deserve a pat on the back for doing the right thing, which may not have boosted their popularity in a college town.

Kip Pohl, the owner of Etc., should not be too surprised that the liquor license was denied. Pohl's problems started when the Union Bar, owned by his children and for which he is a consultant, held bikini contests that resulted in charges of serving alcohol to minors and public indecent exposure. The situation grew considerably worse in time, and now his liquor license has been denied — for good reason.

The charges filed against the Union Bar aren't the only reasons that Etc. should not be given a liquor license. The actions of the manager and owners at the Union Bar also make it obvious they are not responsible enough to run a business with a liquor license.

After two women came forward and spoke out about the events that occurred at the bikini contest, they were allegedly denied access into the bars. Though it is legal to forbid them from coming into the "establishment," it is sleazy. The bars are only admitting guilt. These women did nothing wrong and should not be punished for the manager's and owner's problems. The women aren't the ones with the legal problems.

State law requires that applicants for liquor license must be of "good moral character." It doesn't appear as if the owner and manager of the Union Bar have demonstrated any of these qualities in their recent scandal.

City Councilor Irvin Pfah spoke out best against granting the liquor license: "I think you talk a good talk, Mr. Pohl. But in the Bible, it says, 'You shall know a tree by the fruit it bears,' and the incidents you're involved in don't speak of a moral character."

Though the Union Bar and Etc. are the only bars in trouble right now, they deserve all of it. It's a good thing that City Council denied the liquor license. It sends out a warning to all other bars: Act responsibly or be willing to suffer the consequences of your actions. The fools at the Union and Etc. were made the example of that.

AS MCVEIGH DISCLOSES HIS MOTIVES ...

No right to kill innocents

On Jan. 23, the DI ran an editorial by James Johnson, asking, "How many children and innocent bystanders were killed in Serbia or Iraq when our air raids demolished scores of buildings? Are their lives any less valuable than the Oklahomans killed by McVeigh?" Apparently, the critique was on target.

Since that article, a couple interviews with Timothy McVeigh have been released. "Bombing the Murrah Federal Building was morally and strategically equivalent to the U.S. hitting a government building in Serbia, Iraq or other nations," McVeigh recently said to Fox News.

McVeigh also pointed out that his attack was justified given the results of militarized law enforcement, particularly at Waco and Ruby Ridge. He correctly states, "At Waco, our government — like the Chinese — was deploying tanks against its own citizens."

McVeigh is right. The U.S.

government has perpetrated heinous crimes against Americans. The political process has given medals to killers at Waco and Ruby Ridge. Every day heavily armed, jackbooted government thugs storm into private homes without knocking. That is why McVeigh was justified in fighting back.

Unfortunately, he responded using the same rights-violating tactics that the government uses. McVeigh stated that he considered "a campaign of individual assassination." The targets included Lon Horiuchi, the sniper who killed Vicki Weaver while she, unarmed, carried her baby at Ruby Ridge, Janet Reno, who claimed full responsibility for Waco, and Judge Walter Smith, who exonerated McVeigh when we are not safe from our own government.

If violence is justified, McVeigh should have carried out this alternative strategy instead of killing innocents. The assassinations, while still a violent crime, would have targeted specific rights violators who acted above the law. When the political process lets such criminals literally get away with murder, then private enforcement of rights is justified. If you have any doubts, consider that the founders of this nation waged a war of independence against a government less tyrannical than this nation has become.

In nine days, the government will kill Timothy McVeigh. At least he, unlike many of the women and children at Waco and Ruby Ridge, committed a crime.

What is unfortunate is that the government has become too comfortable killing and violating the rights of innocents. It is difficult to imagine that we will be safe from people like McVeigh when we are not safe from our own government.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

UI cuts aren't funny

The Ledge has hit it right on the money ... well, almost. Among the humorous suggestions for dealing with UI budget woes (DI, May 4), the author has included "Reduce lecture times by 6 percent." In actuality, that should read "Reduce course content by 8 percent." Class sizes in several popular course offerings will jump (Issues in Human History, for example). Concurrently, the Office of the College of Liberal Arts has ordered graduate instructors to "dumb down" their syllabi to prevent overwork. Finally, graduate-instructor positions have been eliminated even though they are paid the lowest instructor salaries, bear the bulk of the teaching load at the UI, and teach some of the most popular courses.

Is this cost-effective or student-friendly? Didn't tuition just go up? Why is the College of Liberal Arts attempting to make up its admittedly substantial shortfall out of its educational-instruction budget rather than some other revenue stream? And most importantly, when was it planning to tell undergraduates exactly what they can expect to return to next fall? Pretty funny, huh?

Leave moral issues to the state governments

The editorial "Safe within their wombs" (DI, May 1) was woefully mistaken. In the first place, the intent of Congress through the passage of this bill is not to protect any woman's right but instead to establish the sanctity of human life while still in the womb. Personally, I think respecting unborn life is an extremely important goal. However, this sort of legislation has no business in the halls of federal government.

One of the reasons that Roe/Casey were such bad decisions is that they took an issue that was constitutionally noncognized and made federal law about it. Similarly, this fetus-protection bill is way beyond the scope of Congress' authority. Article I of the Constitution doesn't come close to granting any authority to Congress resembling this issue. It seems that the power addicts in D.C. didn't learn their lesson last year, when the court struck down the Violence Against Women Act on the grounds that it was beyond the scope of Congress' authority. In the unlikely event that this bill becomes law, it will be similarly dealt with.

The greatest aspect of this nation is the "federal experiment." It is designed precisely for the purpose of having a multiplicity of different laws in different states. That way everybody can find a place that best suits them. Instead, Congress feels that we all need to have the same values, beliefs and laws. It's time it learns to limit itself and allow the states to do what they do best.

On the SPOT

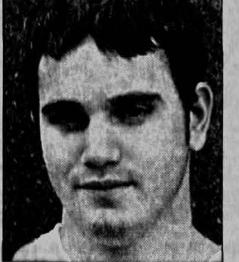

Was it fair for the City Council to deny a liquor license to Etc. after affiliated parties turned themselves in to the police for their involvement in local bikini contests?

"Yes, because the owners of the bars should be held to certain standards for their conduct."

"I think it's unfair."

"No; it isn't fair."

"The council had a right to question a license going to people affiliated with the Union Bar."

"I think it was a fair decision after they turned themselves in for indecent exposure."

Looking ahead and leaving it all behind

Well, it's over. There comes a time when a teacher must abandon the classroom, a football player must hang up his spikes and nurse his injuries, or a politician must leave office and experiment with honesty.

I am actually none of those. But I have been a columnist with this paper for a few years, and that must come to an end as well. Astute readers might recall that I wrote one of these farewell pieces at this time last year. That, loyal readers, was just practice. So I retired briefly and drifted back so I could give this another try. It is difficult, though, because I am usually out of my element when not simply gossiping about Britney, basketball or bikinis.

So there is not much to say, except that certain matters must continue to be critically analyzed in my absence. For instance, developments in Shaquille O'Neal's bright entertainment career must never be neglected. Word has it that his new hip-hop album is friend at a bar preface a conversation with two girls by asking them if they were lesbians. No! Have we made no progress? If such ludicrous tactics and comments are allowed to continue, I and my fellow males threaten to tear apart the very fabric of Western society. Lessons must be taught.

I, however, will not be around to help. This could very well be the last column I ever write for any publication, so I urge others to take up the cause and speak out.

Macedonian forces resume shelling of rebel strongholds

RECIKA, Macedonia (AP) — Macedonian forces lobbed shells into villages seized by ethnic Albanian rebels northeast of the capital Sunday, pounding militant strongholds just hours after the expiration of a deadline set for civilians to evacuate.

The fighting follows a pledge by the Balkan country's prime minister to pressure Parliament to declare a state of war — a move designed to give the government a freer hand in attacks against militants hunkered down near the border with Kosovo. "The integrity of our country is threatened," government spokesman Antonio Miloski told reporters at a news conference only a few miles from the site of recent attacks.

Bolstering his claims, rebels opened fire on soldiers near the country's second-largest city, Tetovo, the site of a massive government offensive in March. There were no reported injuries, but army officials pledged to respond in kind to prevent the creation of a second front-line.

The new spate of fighting underlined the government's increasingly tenuous hold on areas near the border with the southern Yugoslav province of Kosovo. It also raised international concerns about the prospect of another Balkan conflict. European Union officials urged Macedonia not to declare a state of war, sending their top envoy to push for an end to the fighting between the government and ethnic Albanian rebels.

Javier Solana, the EU's security-affairs chief, was to ask Prime Minister Ljubo Georgievski to work harder at creating peace and forestalling war with the rebels, who insist they are denied equal rights under the country's Constitution. Solana was to be joined today NATO's secretary-general, Lord Robertson.

Pop singer, ex-hostage taker among Iran's presidential hopefuls

TEHRAN, Iran — Dozens hoping to run for Iran's presidency added their names Sunday to a colorful cast that includes a pop singer, a former hostage-taker and a street peddler who wants to ban oil exports.

Even after registration officially closed at 4 p.m., about 80 people were still lined up at the Interior Ministry to sign up for the June 8 election. Officials said they started processing their papers before the deadline and would allow them to register.

The election pits a nation clamoring for greater freedoms against a hard-line clerical establishment bent on preserving its power and privilege. So far, more than 500 people have registered their names.

President Mohammad Khatami, a popular moderate cleric who swept some 70 percent of the 1997 vote, filled out an application form on May 4, ending months of suspense over whether he would seek another four-year term.

Since his landslide victory over hard-liners, Khatami has lost some popularity over his refusal to confront his rivals head on. But he is still nearly certain to win. With tears in his eyes as he registered his name, Khatami said he had considered not running but decided in the end to answer the "love and hope" of the people.

Damaged spy plane may be airworthy

■ The secretary of Defense says the damaged U.S. surveillance plane being held in China could fly.

By Brigitte Greenberg
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld said Sunday it may be possible to fly a damaged U.S. surveillance plane from the Chinese military base where it has remained since an April 1 collision with a Chinese fighter.

"The preliminary view is that it may be possible to repair it sufficiently to fly it out, but that's not clear yet. We'll know later this week," Rumsfeld told NBC's "Meet the Press."

He added that President Bush would make the final decision, "but I think that certainly it would be logical it would be flown out."

Before a team of technicians began inspecting the $80 million plane last week, it was unknown whether the Navy aircraft had sustained structural damage that would make it unsafe to fly.

The collision damaged two of the surveillance plane's engines and one of its four propellers. It also caused the plane's nose cone to break off, and pieces of metal punctured parts of the fuselage.

"It's an $80 million aircraft, and it's ours. One would think you'd want it back, and we do. And I would suspect we'll get it back," Rumsfeld said on CBS' "Face the Nation."

The inspection team reported on May 4 that it could be flown, although U.S. Defense officials said it was too early to know how extensive the repairs might be.

The EP-3E collided with the Chinese jet as the U.S. plane was conducting surveillance off China's southern coast. China held the 24-member U.S. crew for 11 days after the plane made an emergency landing on Hainan island in southern China.

The plane was packed with sensitive electronic eavesdropping equipment used to collect intelligence on China's military. U.S. officials have said they believe the EP-3E crew managed to destroy the most sensitive information and equipment before they left but that China probably has gained some valuable insights from examining the plane.

Also Sunday, Rumsfeld took the blame for confusion last week from a Pentagon memo that mistakenly called for the suspension of all U.S. military contacts with China.

"There's no question that I made a mistake. A mistake was made," he said on CBS. "To the extent there's any fault ... to be assigned, it's certainly as much mine as anyone else's and I'm in charge."

The memo from Rumsfeld's office to senior military and civilian officials in the Pentagon said the secretary had directed "the suspension of all Department of Defense programs, contacts and activities with the People's Republic of China until further notice."

Hours after the memo leaked and reported worldwide by U.S. news organizations, a spokesman for Rumsfeld said the memo was a mistake and that an aide had gotten it wrong.

Rumsfeld said Sunday that he had been examining U.S.-Chinese relationships almost from the moment he took office, but after the plane collision, he immediately suspended aircraft and ships from visiting China and limited all social contacts.

"We are reviewing all of the things that we are doing" on a case-by-case basis, he said.

The president's national-security adviser, Condoleezza Rice, said Bush believes a "productive and fruitful relationship with China" is still possible.

But, she said on "Fox News Sunday," "Clearly, the way that the Chinese handle the fact that we have a plane on the ground will have an effect on how we see U.S.-China relations."

For its part, China expressed displeasure last week with Bush's proposal for a national missile-defense program, warning that Bush could spark a new arms race.

The president said the United States would work with its allies and seek to protect them as well from ballistic missile attacks from rogue nations.

outside Moscow, they were whisked aboard a bus and taken to the facility where they trained for the voyage in nearby Star City. Greeted by a military band and a throng of clamoring reporters as they got off the bus, Tito made no remarks and appeared tired.

Tito and the cosmonauts blasted off from Kazakhstan on April 28 and spent two days in orbit before docking with the space station, where Tito's presence distressed the NASA.

The U.S. space agency complained that the station was no place for an amateur, even though Tito underwent extensive training as part of the trip, which reportedly cost him up to $20 million.

Even after NASA dropped its objections, agency head Daniel Goldin complained, saying last week that Tito's presence had put the space station under substantial stress.

Tito said the U.S. astronauts went out of their way to show him around. But before the return to Earth on Sunday, American astronaut Jim Voss gave Tito only a reserved handshake in contrast to the hug he gave Musabayev, a video hookup with Russian mission control showed.

"I learned that if I really put in the time, things would come easier and easier to me," Blair said.

It was never easy, though. But along the way she learned techniques and gained wisdom that helped her achieve being college valedictorian.

She has learned when to study and how to do it, but most importantly, she learned that humor is the key — not only the key to happiness, but the road to success. She said laughing has helped her through the worst times.

"As I get older, I find things funny instead of intensely scary," Blair said.

As her undergraduate schooling comes to an end, Blair looks forward to continuing school at the Georgia Southern University. She wants to study the environment, especially invasive alien plants that come to the United States from other countries and kill the native plants.

The university has been able to add the service from savings resulting in not mailing every student a grade report. Lopes said Campus Direct costs only a fraction of what the mailing expenses would be.

"I was glad when I learned that it existed," she said. "We have always been worried about students who don't have access to a computer."

Besides saving money on postage, Lopes said, mailing grades can be a very uncertain process.

"Each year, we have baskets and baskets of returned grade reports," she said. "We wanted to get rid of these wasted expenses."

UI Student Government President Nick Klenske said the phone service is a good idea because it's easier and quicker than receiving grades in the mail. He will use the Internet to get his grades, he said, but the phone service will be easier for students who do not have Internet access.

UI sophomore Jamie Stanfa said she is old-fashioned and would prefer that the grades come in the mail. In past semesters, she hasn't even checked her grades on ISIS but has waited for them to be sent to her.

"I will give the phone service a try this year because I don't have Internet connection readily available," she said.

Grades will be sent to those students who go to the Registrar's Office and request that they be mailed.

scholarship; otherwise, her family would not have been able to afford her schooling.

Eight months ago, Neykova thought she had it all figured out. She hoped to compete at the professional level, but if tennis didn't work out, she wanted to be a sports journalist.

But her course has shifted since then. She decided she did not want to play professionally because the amount of time, energy and money her dream would require. Now, Neykova said, she wants to focus on finishing school and has set a graduation date two years from now. Also, economics has replaced her previous interest in journalism.

"Journalism was really hard for me," she said, adding it was difficult for her to compete with other students in the major because she could not write in English as well as native speakers.

Her career interest is not the only thing that has changed. She now sees Iowa City as her home, not the far-off land she once considered to be filled with overwhelming differences.

"It's not that I like [Iowa City] more than home," she said. "I just got used to it. I stuck with it."

Also, Neykova no longer struggles to take notes in class because she cannot understand the professors. English rolls off her tongue as if it were her native language.

Neykova's schedule is just as busy now as it was eight months ago. Now that she will compete in nationals, the student-athlete has to reschedule her three finals for earlier in the week. She has to find a way to score well despite a compacted study time, she said.

"This is the first semester in my life I'm doing really, really well, but it's the first semester I really, really want to end," she said. "Usually, I'm more burned out from tennis, but now, I'm more burned out from school."

She said she is happy, however, to have found a little personal time now that UI freshman Deni Alexandrova has established herself after moving from Bulgaria to Iowa City this past winter. Alexandrova came to the UI to play tennis on full scholarship, like Neykova. Neykova, who was friends and former teammates with Alexandrova before her arrival, acted as Alexandrova's mentor in her adjustment to the unfamiliar environment.

"She does everything on her own now, and I'm very proud of her," Neykova said.

After the tennis season and finals, Neykova plans to work two jobs this summer: as a desk clerk in Quadrangle Residence Hall and as a staff member for the university's tennis camps.

But from Aug. 1-25, she'll finally get a long-deserved break and make a trek home. Though Neykova's tennis team has become a family to her in Iowa City, she misses her family and friends back in Plovdiv, Bulgaria.

"I'm very excited to go home. I haven't been home during the summer for two years," she said. "I'm going to go to the beach, and I'm going to party."

GRADUATE

Blair said, "I was a machine."

The last two years, though, she has learned to get her head out of the books and have a little fun in life, finding a nice balance between studying and relaxing. Once consumed by the fear of having to come back to Iowa City, as soon as Blair found balance, she dreaded leaving Iowa City.

Her sister, who graduated from the UI two years ago with a GPA of 4.17, helped her find that equilibrium. Although her sister had a GPA almost as high as her own, her sister also had a great social life. Seeing her sister's lifestyle helped Blair change her own.

She still had to put in time studying, though. Blair said she has never been naturally smart and has always had to work for her grades.

"I learned that if I really put in the time, things would come easier and easier to me," Blair said.

It was never easy, though. But along the way she learned techniques and gained wisdom that helped her achieve being college valedictorian.

She has learned when to study and how to do it, but most importantly, she learned that humor is the key — not only the key to happiness, but the road to success. She said laughing has helped her through the worst times.

"As I get older, I find things funny instead of intensely scary," Blair said.

As her undergraduate schooling comes to an end, Blair looks forward to continuing school at the Georgia Southern University. She wants to study the environment, especially invasive alien plants that come to the United States from other countries and kill the native plants.

Eventually, she wants to be a professor at a smaller college where she can have more contact with the students than she would at a larger university.

Although she once dreamed of going to medical school and making a lot of money, she realized that money isn't important to her and she would rather be happy with her job.

"I just have learned what I'm really interested in, and it's not money," Blair said. "If I'm happy, money is a secondary issue."

After four years of learning about who she is, what she wants in life and the ways of keeping laughter in her life, on Saturday Blair will walk across the stage, receive recognition for her efforts, and end this part of her life.

"It will finally be like all the hard work paid off," Blair said. "That's where I can finally sit back, relax, and be happy about the whole situation."

Iran soccer stadium roof caves in TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — The roof of a stadium grandstand caved in, killing several fans and injuring hundreds during a soccer game Sunday, the official news agency reported.

After the accident, fans clashed with police trying to make their way into Mottaki Stadium in Sari, 155 miles northeast of Tehran.

State-run television showed images of fans wielding metal poles locked in battle with anti-riot forces on the soccer field. One wall of the stadium was torn down, and iron fences separating the grandstand from the field had been rooted out.

Some rioters started fires on the field, said Ali Ansarian, a player with Persepolis, one of the teams in the game.

"We are trapped in the locker room," Ansarian told AP by phone. "There is such a thick crowd outside that we can't force open the door to the locker room."

Hawkeyes shine under the lights

Once again, Iowa's throwers came up big in its only home meet of the season.

By Julie Matolo
The Daily Iowan

The throwers lit up the track for Iowa once again.

Led by Jeremy Allen, the Hawkeyes came back to tie Wichita State (153.0) in their only outdoor home meet of the season.

Allen won the discus with a mark of 178-6, followed by sophomore Eric Rothwell, who threw a personal best for second (158-5).

"I didn't really know the team score at the time," Allen said. "I just concentrated on what I needed to do, and if I did that, then it would all work out."

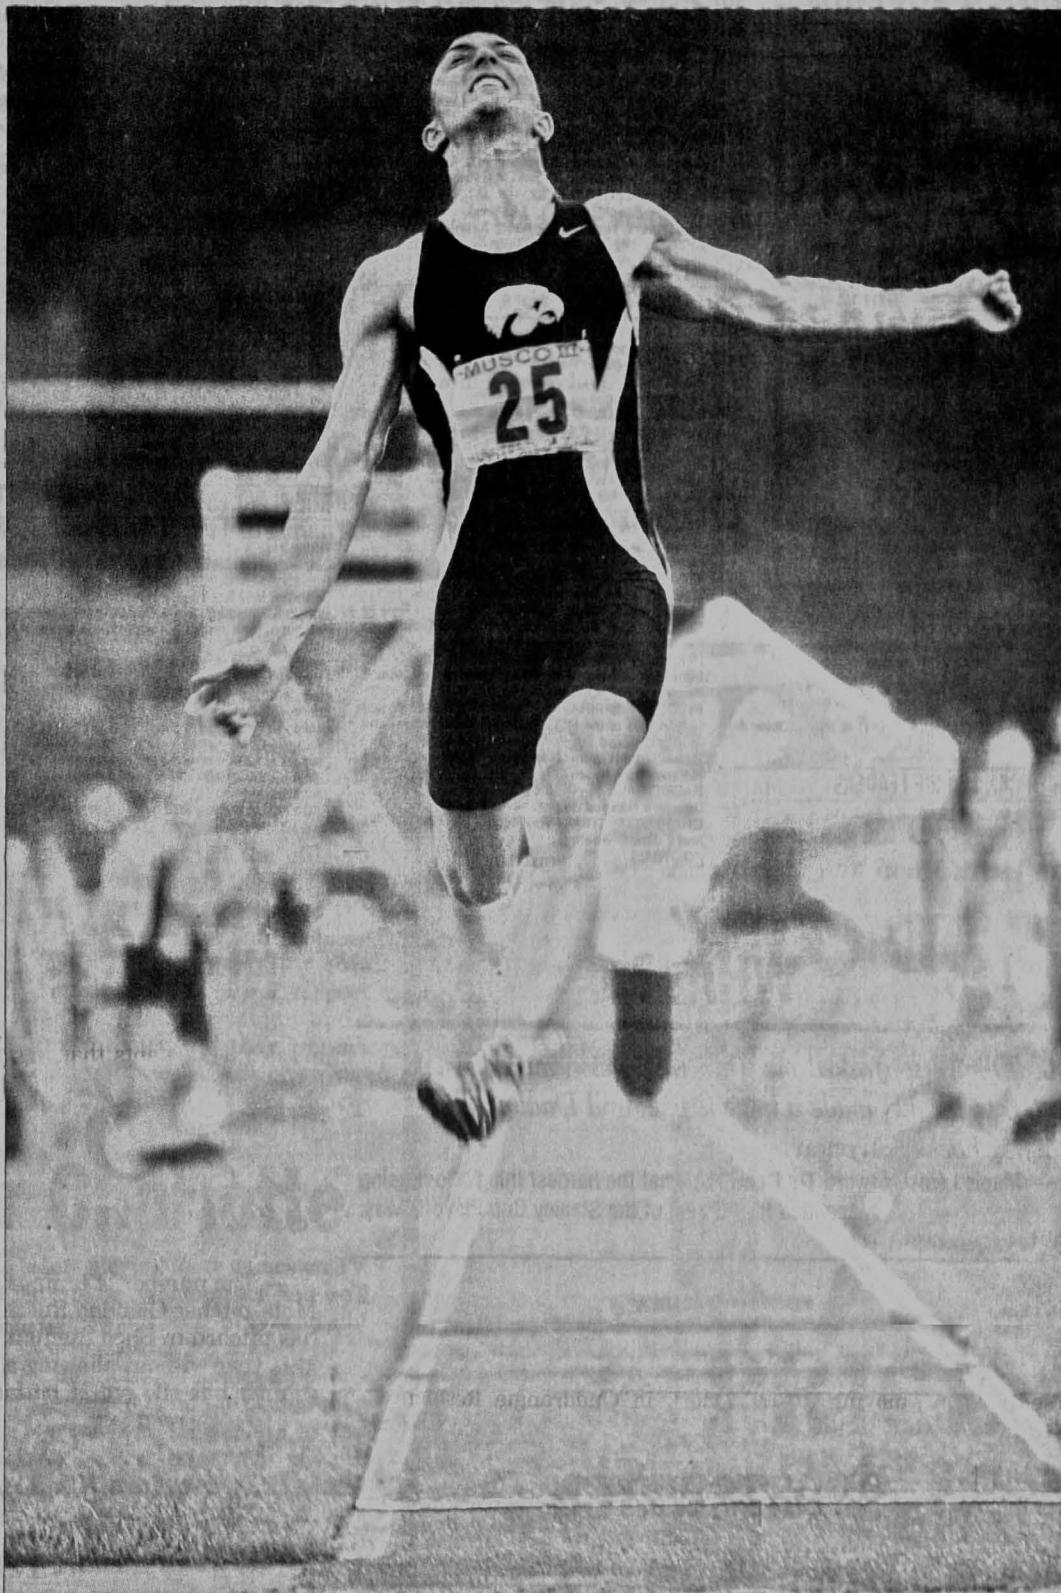

Allen also won the shot put in a triple Hawkeye sweep with his NCAA provisional qualifying distance of 59-10 1/4. Freshman Ken Kemeny threw a personal best for second and a NCAA provisional qualification (58-9 1/4), followed by Arno van der Westhuizen in third (57-3 1/2).

Iowa throwers completed their clean sweep in field events when senior van der Westhuizen won the hammer throw (227-5). Through the challenge of keeping warm and dry, Iowa throwers once again brought their consistency to the field.

"I was happy that I performed well in these conditions," van der Westhuizen said. "The throwers did great. Everything is coming together, and that is what we want at this point in the season."

Freshman Bill Neumann, who has been solid this season, won the javelin (204-11); sophomore Matt Stank came in second (169-3).

Loss nixes Iowa's chance at hosting conference tournament

Iowa finishes second in the Big Ten after losing to Northwestern.

By Melinda Mawdsley
The Daily Iowan

The No. 15 Iowa softball team fell to Northwestern Sunday, 2-1, eliminating its hopes for a second-straight Big Ten regular season title and the honor of hosting the Big Ten Tournament.

The narrow defeat dropped the Hawkeyes to 16-4 in the conference and a second-place overall finish.

Michigan's 2-1 victory over Michigan State Sunday improved the Wolverines' mark to 17-3, giving it sole possession of the Big Ten regular-season championship and the rights to host the conference's postseason tournament.

Iowa will travel to Ann Arbor, Mich., Thursday as the No. 2 seed. Hawkeyes defeated Michigan twice during the regular season.

"I'd be kidding if I told you we weren't greatly disappointed," Hawkeye coach Gayle Blevins said. "We wanted that title and to be able to host, but we've had a great year with more great things to come."

On Sunday, Northwestern pitcher Lauren Schwendemann held the Hawkeyes to just five hits, enabling her team to finish the year 20-25.

of the two-game series on May 5, the Wildcats' chances for any postseason play vanished.

Their attention shifted toward coach Sharon Drysdale. Northwestern wanted to send its coach of 23 years away from the college coaching ranks with a triumph in her final game.

Anderson finishes third at Big Tens

The Hawkeyes take fourth-place at the Big Ten Championships.

By Jeremy Shapiro
The Daily Iowan

Bo knows golf, too.

Iowa sophomore Bo Anderson unexpectedly took third place at the Big Ten championships, beating out 52 of the best golfers in the conference at Illinois' Stone Creek Golf Club over the past weekend.

The Dubuque, Iowa, native shot rounds of 71-69-71-71 to finish just three strokes off third place. Not bad, considering that the Hawkeyes were mired in ninth after the first day. Northwestern won the team title with a 1,132.

"He was just great," Iowa coach Terry Anderson said.

"That is what I expect him to do, and that is what he expects from himself as well."

Anderson's heroics helped to highlight Iowa's fifth-place finish. The Hawkeyes' final total of 1,153 was just two strokes off third place. Not bad, considering that the Hawkeyes were mired in ninth after the first day. Northwestern won the team title with a 1,132.

The Hawkeyes' round Sunday is a new team record.

Anderson's success came largely as a surprise. While he hadn't been playing badly, he hadn't exactly torn up the course, either. Last weekend at the Fossum Invitational, Anderson finished tied for 32nd. He is averaging 76.5 strokes per round during the spring.

After placing sixth, seventh and eighth most of the spring, the Hawkeyes actually had their highest finish in the biggest event of the year.

"Everyone I talk to all year long automatically asks how did you do at Big Tens," Iowa coach Terry Anderson said. "They base how good you are based on one tournament."

Iowa finished 10th a year ago, so moving up five spots shows the program is heading in the right direction.

The Hawkeyes immediately fell out of contention in round one, shooting an ugly 12 over par 300. One bad round had kept the Hawkeyes from seriously contending in tournaments all spring, and this time was no different.

The team played much better on May 5, shooting rounds of 292 and 284. Anderson continued his hot pace, while senior Jason Wombacher and junior Tyler Stith shot rounds of 70 in the third round.

On Sunday, everything finally clicked for the Hawks, and they shot their best round of the spring — an 11 under par 277, the lowest round of any team during the entire tournament.

Wombacher and senior Matt Stutzman each carded 68s in their final collegiate appearance.

"It was nice to see our two seniors go out with a round like that," Anderson said.

The Hawkeyes' final-round success allowed them to skip past Michigan State and Penn State into the top half of the Big Ten.

Louisiana native tops Mickelson

■ David Toms wins the Compaq Classic on his home turf.

By Mary Foster
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — It sounded more like Saturday night at Tiger Stadium than Sunday afternoon at a golf tournament.

David Toms, a Louisiana native who played for LSU, was greeted on the 18th hole with chants of "LSU! LSU! LSU!"

Toms rewarded his fans with a birdie to wrap up an 8-under-par 64 and a two-stroke victory in the $4 million Compaq Classic. He finished at 22-under 266 and earned $72,000.

Toms started the day at 14 under, in a tie for fourth. He birdied the first hole then finished the front nine at 2 under, offsetting a bogey on five with two more birdies. On the back nine, Toms birdied 10, 16 and 18 and eagled 11.

Phil Mickelson, the leader going into the final round, shot a 72 to finish second at 268. Ernie Els was another stroke back after a 68, and Harrison Frazar (71) was fourth at 270.

After a bogey on No. 3, Mickelson got in serious trouble on No. 5. He hooked his tee shot, then he tried to chip back to the fairway over a tree. The ball hit the tree and dropped straight down and Mickelson took a double bogey, dropping him to 16 under.

Mickelson fought back to take the lead with birdies on Nos. 6 and 7 and an eagle on 11. But he drove his tee shot into the water on 15, where the hold sets on an island, for a bogey that dropped him to 19 under. With Toms' birdie on 16, Mickelson fell two strokes back. He pulled within one stroke with his own birdie on 16 but could do no better than par on the last three holes.

The wind that had plagued golfers earlier in the tournament died on Sunday, leaving the 7,116-yard English Turn Golf and Country Club course at the mercy of a birdie-minded field.

The top-seeded Williams, ranked No. 2 in the world, needed just 54 minutes to win her 17th career title and finish her complete domination of the Betty Barclay Cup, which she also won in 1999. Williams dropped just 12 games in sweeping four matches and spent less than four hours on court against the overmatched competition at the $565,000 tournament.

"I think I had to play well here to have the scores I had, because I have played all of them before," said Williams.

HAMBURG, Germany — With her second consecutive title in hand, Venus Williams turned her attention to Martina Hingis and the No. 1 ranking.

Williams hammered fellow American Meghann Shaughnessy, 6-3, 6-0, Sunday to capture the Betty Barclay Cup in her first tournament since winning the Ericsson Open in Key Biscayne, Fla., a month ago.

Shaquille makes Kings pay

LOS ANGELES — The Sacramento Kings gave Shaquille O'Neal a little more room to roam than most teams do.

They wound up paying an expensive price.

O'Neal was at his dominating best with 44 points, 21 rebounds and seven blocked shots Sunday as the defending NBA champion Los Angeles Lakers held off the Kings 108-105 to begin their second-round playoff series.

Kobe Bryant added 29 points for the Lakers, meaning their teammates combined to score only 35.

In the end, though, it didn't matter, although the Kings were in contention all the way.

"They were staying with Foxy, they were staying with Fish," Bryant said, referring to Rick Fox and Derek Fisher. "That opened up the entire middle for Shaq to operate."

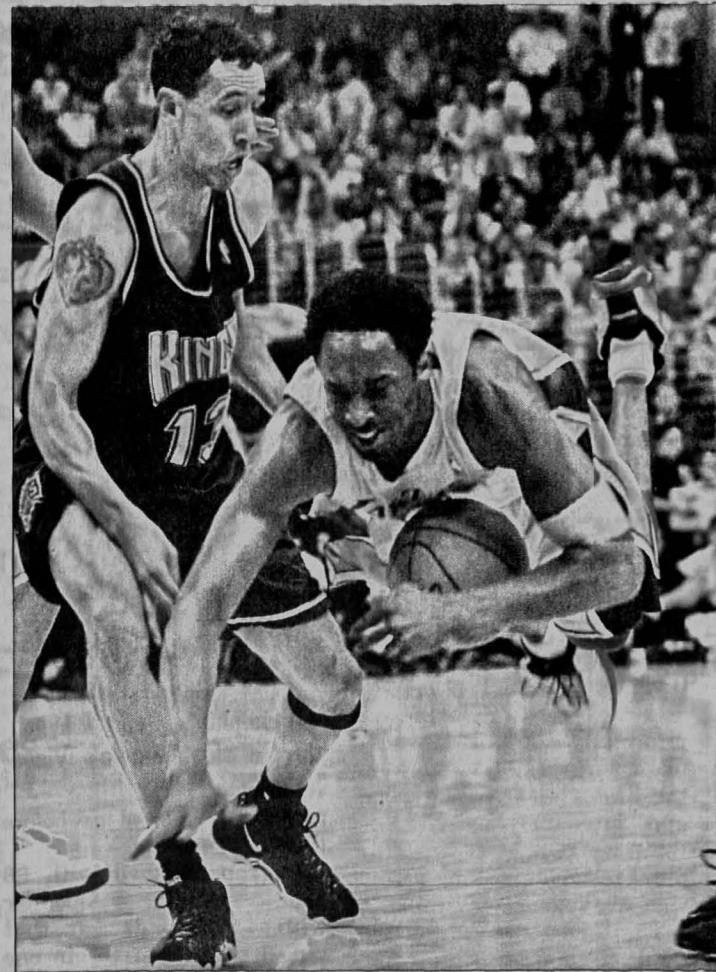

And operate O'Neal did.

O'Neal, who had 13 of his team's 24 points and nine of its 16 rebounds in the fourth quarter, said his teammates were looking for him.

"They were not doubling me, so I just tried to take the high-percentage shots," he said. "Close to the basket, I'm going to take those shots all night."

Whatever they throw at me, I'll be ready. They're probably going to double me a little more quickly."

O'Neal, who made 17-of-32 shots and 10-of-19 free throws, also had five of his 11 offensive rebounds in the final period.

Kevork Djansezian/Associated Press
Los Angeles Lakers' Kobe Bryant is tripped up by Sacramento Kings' Doug Christie as he tries to maintain possession of the ball during the first half of game one of the Western Conference semifinals Sunday, in Los Angeles.

Guarded mainly by Fox, Stojakovic made only 6-of-18 shots in scoring 20 points.

Fox reacted to Adelman's remark by saying, "Is he Dunleavy's brother or something?" referring to Portland coach Mike Dunleavy.

Divac criticized the officiating concerning O'Neal, saying: "They're going to change the rules next season, but I guess they changed them for this series. I have a lot of respect for Shaq, he's a great guy and a great player, but they weren't calling three seconds or swinging the elbows. It was ridiculous. Give me a break."

Allen helps Bucks over Charlotte

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Ray Allen, who starred with Denzel Washington in Spike Lee's movie "He Got Game," was a hit on the small screen Sunday.

Allen celebrated his first NBC appearance in a Milwaukee uniform by scoring 26 points in the Bucks' 104-92 victory over the Charlotte Hornets to open their Eastern Conference semifinal series.

Nine of his points came in the fourth quarter, when the Bucks saw their 22-point third-quarter lead whittled to four.

The Bucks hadn't been on NBC since Feb. 18, 1996, while Allen was still at Connecticut.

"You know that people around the world are watching," Allen said. "That's why we play basketball, to go out and play an afternoon game and have the rest of the day to enjoy and go watch the rest of the games."

The Central Division champion Bucks and coach George Karl were miffed that NBC snubbed them in their first-round series with Orlando. They were eager to display their high-flying style to a bigger audience, much the way the Sacramento Kings did with their exciting brand of basketball last year.

"We watched Sacramento turn it up for a while, and to be able to do that now we'll have a lot of new fans across the country," Allen said. "And we'll have a lot of free agents that way to play here as well."

Allen admitted he got the broadcast bug just before the game.

"I never care about being on TV because the game to me is the same," he said. "But being on TV is respect. I think every guy cares that we were on. Once we

Hawks drop three to Illinois-Chicago

■ The Hawkeyes move to 18-26 this year.

By Todd Brommelkamp

The Daily Iowan

The Iowa baseball team saw its four-game run of wins go up in smoke this weekend, as the Hawks were swept by the University of Illinois, Chicago, Flames in three games.

The Flames out-dueled Iowa, 11-6, on May 4 before taking a pair of tightly played games on May 5, 4-3 and 4-1.

The trio of losses brings Iowa's record to 18-26 overall as it prepares for the season finale with conference powerhouse Purdue this weekend. Carrying a string of seven wins into West Lafayette would have been nice, said Iowa coach Scott Broghamer, but he believes the team will still be able to finish strongly.

"We've got one last shot at things," he said. "Hopefully, our kids can go down there and make some noise."

The losses to the Flames were especially hard to swallow for the Hawkeyes because they swept the Flames in three games near the end of last season. Overconfidence was not a factor, Broghamer said, because Iowa knew UIC was a good team heading into competition. The biggest intangible in the weekend losses was fatigue, he said.

"Our kids were on a little bit of a roll," he said. "We played a lot of baseball last week, and they were a little tired."

The weekend got off to an auspicious start for the Hawkeyes, as they out-hit the Flames, 14-13, in their 11-6 loss but committed an abnormally high amount of errors. A defensively sound team, the Hawkeyes allowed three errors behind starter Ryan Mentkowski.

"Sometimes those things (errors) just happen," Broghamer said. "Throughout the year, we've been very consistent on defense."

After spotting the Flames a four-run lead in the third, Iowa battled back to take a 5-4 lead, scoring three runs in the fourth and a pair in the fifth. However, the Flames fought back with three in the sixth and a pair of runs in both the seventh and eighth innings. The Hawkeyes managed just one more run, in the top of the eighth.

Mentkowski allowed 11 hits and nine runs, six earned, while striking out six and walking none before giving way to reliever Andrew Hansen. Bryce Coppieters led the offensive attack, going 3-4 with two doubles and an RBI.

On May 5, Iowa played a pair of tighter ball games, with a chance of winning the first narrowly escaping the Hawkeyes. With two outs in the bottom of the seventh and the game tied at three all, starter Steve Sharpe gave way to Dyson Miguel with two runners aboard. Miguel promptly allowed a double to UIC's Chuck Peters to provide the Flames with the 4-3 victory.

The second game proved to be just as close, as starter Chad Blackwell kept Iowa in contention, allowing just four runs in a complete-game effort. The senior hurler struck out five and walked just one but received only one run of support.

Iowa's lone run came in the final frame, when Ian Mattiace crossed the plate following a Brad Carlson base hit to center. The single capped a strong performance by Carlson, who ended the day 4-6 with two RBIs and two runs scored.

Jim Reid also picked up single hits on both ends of the double-header, extending his hitting streak to seven games.

"We had two really strong pitching performances on Saturday, and our kids [Sharpe and Blackwell] came away with nothing to show for it," Broghamer said.

Secretariat record stays at Derby

■ Champion Monarchos was two-fifths of a second away from breaking the track record.

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Secretariat's Kentucky Derby record was challenged but not broken by Monarchos, and that pleased trainer John Ward.

"I hope it's never broken, I'm just glad we came close to it," Ward said after Monarchos won the Derby in 1:59 4-5, just two-fifths of a second off the track record set in 1973.

"The track was blazing fast," Ward said. "Earlier in the day I was concerned, but then I thought we all have to race across the same strip. So it made it more comfortable."

The racing surface was too fast to suit Todd Pletcher, trainer of Invisible Ink, who finished second 4 3/4 lengths behind Monarchos.

"Based on the way the track was playing, I thought there was a decent chance they would break the track record. My only beef is you come in for two weeks and train over a track that is different than the one you race on."

Ward said jockey Jorge Chavez told him, "John, I could have broken the record. I could have gone faster." I said, "Jorge thank goodness you didn't do that. You saved the horse."

As to whether Monarchos can join Secretariat and 10 others as Triple Crown champions, Ward said, "I'm cautiously optimistic."

He said he would go to Pimlico, site of the Preakness on May 19, on Monday or Tuesday to look things over and that he planned to send Monarchos there Wednesday.

"I want to get this horse over there as soon as possible," Ward said. "This horse does better in familiar surroundings."

Although no first-place finisher in a Derby has ever been disqualified, Ward said he was concerned when John Velazquez, Invisible Ink's jockey, claimed foul against Monarchos, contending the winner interfered with his colt passing the quarter pole.

SPORTSHoward won't be suspended for foul

■ The Mavs will have Juwan Howard in the lineup when they take on the Spurs tonight.

By Michelle Koidin
Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Juwan Howard will be back for Game 2 of the Dallas-San Antonio Western Conference semifinals, while Derek Anderson could miss the rest of the playoffs.

Howard, the Dallas starting forward, could have been suspended for his flagrant foul that left Anderson with a separated right shoulder in San Antonio's 94-78 win on May 5.

Dallas coach Don Nelson, who asked that the foul be downgraded from a flagrant 2 to a flagrant 1, said Sunday that the NBA let the call stand but did not suspend Howard. Game 2 in the best-of-seven series is Monday night at the Alamodome.

Anderson is expected to be out 3-to-6 weeks.

While the Spurs described the foul as out-of-line and more than a "playoff hard foul," the Mavericks insisted it was unintentional.

"Juwan made a play on the ball — he was being aggressive and protecting his basket," guard Steve Nash said. "Derek was being aggressive on the other hand going to the basket. They both did the thing they were supposed to do. It's just unfortunate the way they tangled and Derek hit the floor with his momentum."

The crash came with 2.5 seconds left in the first half. Anderson leapt high for a dunk, and at the peak of his jump, Howard flew in swinging at the ball. He caught part of it, but his arm came down across Anderson's right shoulder. Anderson fell hard and later staggered off the court wincing in pain.

"I've never gone after anybody like that," said Tim Duncan, who had 31 points and 13 rebounds for the Spurs. "I never go near somebody knowing they're in the air like that or knowing they're going to be in the air like that and hit them like that."

Duncan said the foul was "uncalled for."

"He said it wasn't intentional, and you've got to believe him," Duncan said. "I don't think he'd intentionally try to hurt somebody like that, but that's a tough situation."

Howard was ejected for the foul.

"I truly believe he didn't mean to hurt anybody — he's not that kind of an individual," Spurs coach Gregg Popovich said. "But that's not a typical hard foul. That's silly to even say that. It's disingenuous to think that that's a typical NBA hard foul."

Devils faced with another comeback

■ The defending Stanley Cup champions are on the brink of elimination.

By John Wawrow
Associated Press

TORONTO — Facing elimination against the Toronto Maple Leafs doesn't scare the New Jersey Devils.

The defending Stanley Cup champions were in a bigger hole last year in the Eastern Conference finals, and rallied from a 3-1 deficit to beat the Philadelphia Flyers.

So being down 3-2 heading to Toronto for Monday's Game 6 of the conference semifinal isn't daunting to a team that finished the regular season winning 19 of 21 games.

"We have the character in this room to do it," defenseman Brian Rafalski said. "We've been down before. It's not the end."

Almost every Devils player spoke similar words on May 5 after the Maple Leafs defeated New Jersey, 3-2, in Game 5 on a late controversial goal by defenseman Tomas Kaberle.

After saying those words, most of the Devils also admitted they can't win the way they are playing.

One of the NHL's most talented teams, New Jersey has been inconsistent since building a 3-0 lead over Carolina in the opening round of the playoffs. The discipline that has been the trademark of their success in the playoffs the last two seasons has been mysteriously absent during major portions of games.

That was evident in the opening 25 minutes on May 5. Trying to avenge Tie Domi's hit that knocked out Scott Niedermayer in Game 4, the Devils spent a lot of time in the penalty box.

Neumann said, "I have been doing a lot of technical work and have been trying to put it together. That has helped."

Allen was hoping for everything to be perfect in his final home appearance as Hawkeye. Though weather conditions left a lot to be desired, Iowa could not complain after crowning six champions, four of whom were seniors.

Senior Paul Sarris edged out a win in the 5,000 meters (14:50:35) after battling it out with fellow senior Nick Nordheim. Sarris earned the title by .01 seconds, with Nordheim placing second in 14:50:36.

"The seniors went out well," said Iowa coach Larry Wieczorek. "The main point of the meet was to create a great competition for the athletes and then a great setting for the fans."

While the rain persisted throughout the four-team competition, fire works and a smoke tunnel for introducing the relay squads provided the newest addition to the "crowd pleaser" list.

Another impressive performance was that of freshman Juan Coleman. After a close fight, he won the 400-meter event with a personal best (46.8).

"I am pretty happy," he said. "I ran a personal best, and that is a step in the right direction for the future."

Senior Tim Dodge and freshman Adam Kunkel were held out of competition to rest injuries. After adjustments in the relay line-ups, Iowa's 4x100-meter relay squad placed second (40.63), as did had a shot to end the regular season with a win and at least a share of the Big Ten title. Junior Amber Morrow brought freshman Christina Schmaltz across the plate with a grounder to the left side in the top of the second inning, but Schwendimann and the Wildcat defense shut down Iowa for the remainder of the contest.

In the bottom of the third, the Wildcats put two runs on the board, ending Hawkeye pitcher Kristi Hanks' 28-straight innings of scoreless ball.

Two Northwestern hits, coupled with an Iowa error, led to the game-winning runs.

"The Iowa lineup is strong all the way through," Schwendimann said. "I didn't have the option of working around them. (Sunday) was probably the best mix of pitchers I've thrown all year. Our getting the lead was a huge momentum shift."

Schwendimann's counterpart on the mound on both May 5 and Sunday was Hanks, and on May 5 Hanks had better results than the Northwestern hurler.

The junior from Santa Fe, Texas, struck out nine Wildcats and allowed one hit — a bloop single into shallow right field from the J.C. Kira — in the top of the fifth.

The Hawkeyes got three runs on nine hits. Schwendimann helped by walking six Iowa batters.

Senior Katy Jendrzejewski and Schmaltz paced the Hawkeye offense, going 2-3 from the plate and combining for all three RBIs.

While Northwestern may have stole a game from the Hawkeyes in Coralville, the Hawkeyes' season will roll on, beginning with the Big Ten Tournament at Michigan.

Last season, Michigan came to Pearl Field and won the title. The Hawkeyes will look to return the favor and win their first-ever tournament crown.

"We realize it's one game, and that's obviously depressing," Morrow said. "But we have to turn around and make this negative a positive."

Quick start helps Raptors stun Sixers

■ Toronto takes Game 1 on the road against Philadelphia.

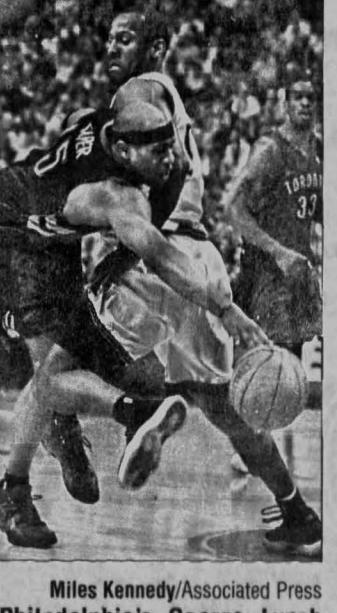

By Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Vince Carter and Allen Iverson were equally spectacular. The difference was that Carter consistently put on a show, and Iverson could only do it in spurts.

Carter scored 35 points, including Toronto's final four, as the Raptors stole home-court advantage from Philadelphia with a 96-93 victory Sunday in Game 1 of their second-round series.

"I can sense this team has grown up," said Carter, whose team surprised New York in the first round. "In a crucial and intense situation like that, we're able to run the plays instead of taking a wild shot. We've learned, I think."

The 76ers trailed for the final 40 minutes but came close to forcing overtime. Inbounding from midcourt with 5.8 seconds left, Iverson broke for the backcourt and Philadelphia got the ball to Aaron McKie for an open 3-pointer that missed just before the final buzzer.

Iverson finished with 36 points, including a 3-pointer with 7.8 seconds left that put the Sixers within one — the closest they had been since the first quarter.

Iverson said he was supposed to receive the final inbounds pass, but did not explain why he ran into the backcourt to receive it.

"We had about six options on that play. Aaron was the second option. Everyone on the bench was hoping we could get a shot like that," 76ers coach Larry Brown said.

Carter, who tipped in his own missed shot with 12.8 seconds left to give the Raptors a four-point lead, made two free throws with 5.8 remaining for the game's final points.

Carter shot 13-for-29 and had seven assists, while Iverson was 11-for-34 with eight rebounds, seven steals and four assists.

Iverson made three of his first four shots, then missed 11 of his next 13. He was 4-for-8 in the third quarter and 2-for-9 in the fourth.

"Allen was a little anxious today," Brown said. "Sometimes he wants to win so bad he doesn't wait for the game to come to him."

Aside from Carter, 14-year veteran Dell Curry made the difference for Toronto by scoring 20 points and hitting four 3-pointers. Alvin Williams added 15 and Charles Oakley had 13, including a jumper with 49 seconds left that gave Toronto some much-needed breathing room.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Drastic financial changes will occur if you are involved in a joint venture or if your bank goes out of business. Help an older relative update legal documents. You will be rewarded for your help.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): If you rely on others, you will find joy and fulfillment. Make an effort to go after your objectives. Delays in mail or communications will be annoying. Be persistent but diplomatic when relying on others.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Get on with your business plans. Time is money, and to reach your highest potential you must be ready to take action. Personal alterations will be in your best interests. Try a new hairstyle for the summer.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Travel and educational pursuits will enhance your own awareness. New relationships will open doors that have been closed in the past. Take care of small but important details, rather than unimportant ones.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): It's best to catch up on your household duties to avoid another disruptive encounter, as you had last week. This is not the best day to discuss your plans with loved ones. They aren't likely to understand. Keep things very, very secret.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You need to get out and rub shoulders with those in high places. You can receive help achieving your
