Shaky budget may crimp arts

Liberal arts educators worry about the quality of education at the UI in coming years.

By Jen Brown
The Daily Iowan

Creativity may take the brunt of the UI budget-cut blows if a slowing economy and fewer resources drive students away from the arts.

Between 1997 and 2000, the university's theater department nearly doubled its enrollment of undergraduate majors, growing from 150 to 285.

"When the economy is good, more students and parents feel a degree in the arts is a viable option," said Alan Macvey, the theater department chairmen.

Several departments in the College of Liberal Arts recorded marked enrollment increases during the 1990s.

But with the largest budget cuts in the university's history looming, some departments are scrambling to find enough teachers and classes to accommodate their students.

The budget cuts will cause fewer classes to be offered, larger class sizes and the possibility of hiring freezes in some positions. Some of departments already are understaffed.

"We can't offer the full range of our undergraduate degree next year, that I can see," said Alan Nagel, the director of undergraduate studies for the recently created cinema and comparative literature department.

"The budget cuts in the short term for us are devastating," he said, noting a shortage of faculty to teach the needed classes in the growing department.

FBI error clouds McVeigh case

The agency mistakenly withheld documents from the Oklahoma City bomber's defense team.

DENVER — In an astonishing disclosure just six days before Timothy McVeigh's scheduled execution, the Justice Department handed his lawyers thousands of FBI documents Thursday that it said were mistakenly withheld from his trial in the Oklahoma City bombing.

An attorney for McVeigh said the materials may prompt a request for a stay.

"We're considering all our options," McVeigh lawyer Nathan Chambers said after the documents were delivered to his office in Denver.

Chambers said he had spoken to McVeigh about the development, but declined to reveal what was said. "Mr. McVeigh is going to think about it and

1 Ballot issues key in 2000 elections

Voters in the 2000 elections decided the fate of three projects that will play an important role in Johnson County's future.

Voters turned down the proposed $19 million bond referendum to build a new county jail in November 2000. Despite a year of warnings from Johnson County officials that the facility is overcrowded, the referendum fell 26 percent short of the necessary 60 percent it needed to pass.

The referendum provoked a group of area residents to form Citizens for Alternatives to the New Jail, saying there are more socially sensitive solutions to crime than building a larger facility. Officials are still scrambling to find ways to deal with current overcrowding, and they may have to begin transporting inmates to other jails.

Residents overwhelmingly voted to expand the Iowa City Public Library

Hey will leave her home in Slater, Iowa, on June 13 for Moldova, a small Eastern European country wedged between the Ukraine and Romania. For the next two years, she will teach English to children ages 9-15 as a volunteer for the Peace Corps.

Tower Place won't ramp up parking

The city didn't gain a lot of parking spaces with its new $11.6 million parking ramp.

By Jason Hartwig
Special to The Daily Iowan

Slated to open sometime in the next week, the new $11.6 million Tower Place parking facility has the capacity to provide 550 new parking spaces.

But after the Iowa Avenue Streetscape project, and doling out spaces for employees of businesses in the ramp and the disabled, the total number of parking spots for the general public in that part of downtown will only increase by 105 spaces, from 240 to 345. Even fewer spaces will be available when the city decides how many permits to issue to residents, employees and visitors of the nearby Senior Center.

"We didn't come out with a lot of parking spaces," said Joe Fowler, the Iowa City parking and transit coordinator.

Nonetheless, Iowa City City Councilor Connie Champion still believes the ramp was a good investment.

New restaurant hopes Bob's Your Uncle

■ A new pizza cafe wants to offer fun, hassle-free dining.

By Jackie Hammers
The Daily Iowan

Golf is all business to Randy Larson, owner of Bob's Your Uncle, a new pizza cafe on Mormon Trek Boulevard that opened three weeks ago.

Larson, for eight and a half years the co-owner of the Airliner, got the name for the new establishment while golfing with an Australian friend who used "Bob's your uncle" to describe something that could have been difficult but turned out well. "The tie-in to the name thing is that we want it to be a comfortable place. I don't think eating out should be a hassle," Larson said.

He made several changes in February when he took over the site of Jimmy's Brick Oven Cafe, 749 Mormon Trek Blvd., including expanding a beer garden, reworking the menu and adding more booths.

"I think it made it a better place when we're full," he said of the changes.

Bob's Your Uncle closes earlier in the evenings than Larson's other establishment and does not allow smoking, either inside or out.

"There has been a continuous effort to try not to make them similar," Larson said.

Bob's Your Uncle offers nachos, buffalo wings and spinach and artichoke dip, as the Brick Oven did. It also adds the personal touches of Larson and chef Rich Grothaus. The menu ranges from salads and pastas to steaks and sandwiches in addition to pizza.

"I think we have a little bit of something for everyone," said Grothaus, a UI and Scottsdale Culinary Institute graduate. He said that he expects to see growth and changes in the menu over time.

"I look at the menu as a work in progress," he said. "We'll make changes as we see fit."

The theme of fun extends to every corner of the restaurant, including the specialty pizzas, which are named for basketball players. For instance, the Ryan Bowen is a vegetable pizza.

"Ryan Bowen plays basketball the way I think it should be played," Larson said. "It does not imply that Michael Jordan or Larry Bird (for whom pizzas are named) are endorsing our pizzas." Larson hopes that the restaurant's location, near a laundromat, drug store, grocery store and bank, will bring a lot of dine-in and carry-out business his way.

"People can pick it up on their way home from work and know they are only two minutes from home, and it will still be hot and fresh when they get home," he said.

Grothaus thinks one feature in particular will benefit the restaurant.

"The beer garden is obviously going to be a selling point in the summer," he said.

No bulldozer yet for old library

■ A city commission votes to make the old Public Library a historic landmark.

By Megan L. Eckhardt
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City's old Public Library will be saved — for now.

The Iowa City Historic Preservation Commission voted to designate the 98-year-old building a historic landmark at its meeting Thursday night.

The Iowa City City Council is scheduled to hold a public hearing on designating landmarks on June 12.

Attorney Joe Holland, who represents Jim Clark, the owner of AUR/APT Property Management and the old library, 307 E. College St., said the original plans to demolish the building have changed to accommodate development in the building. Builders now have tentative plans to remove the 1962 addition and build an apartment complex next to the old library. Apartments may also be included in the library, Holland said.

Most observers expect that the apartment building will be built on a smaller scale than the original proposal — no more than five stories — and contain one level of commercial development. Holland said the owners did not want to include a commercial area in the development but zoning regulations forced them to.

"Letting it sit there doesn't do anything," Holland said. "Cooperation is a two-way street. We need cooperation from the commission."

In order for apartments to be included in the library, it may have to be altered so that it meets fire codes and other building and zoning regulations, he said.

The commission was enthusiastic about continuing to make use of the old library, which is currently leased to the UI for office use. It will be in continuous discussion with builders, members said.

The building meets several of the city's criteria for historic landmarks, said Commissioner Richard Carlson, including historical and educational requirements, as well as having significant architectural designs. The library was one of many libraries across the country that was funded by the Carnegie Foundation. It was built in 1903.

"I'm delighted to hear about the change in plans," said Commissioner Ann Freerks. "[The library] does meet the criteria, and I believe it can be rehabilitated."

Commission Chairman Michael Gunn said tax exemptions and other financial benefits would be available for the historical preservation of the structure.

Iowa City resident Jeff Schabillon shared his support for the design plans.

"I'm pleased and relieved that Mr. Clark is thinking this is going to be a win-win situation," he said. "We would like to see Clark enterprises thrive, and the historic landmark preserved. I encourage the commission to cooperatively work on this and be proactive."

Raises for three top city officials

■ The City Council will approve modest salary increases for three key city employees.

By Mike McWilliams
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City City Council is set to approve modest fiscal-year 2002 salary increases for the city manager, city attorney and city clerk.

The salary adjustments came in a closed executive session Tuesday, in which the council evaluated the performance of the three city employees it can hire and fire. Each year, the council assesses the performance of City Manager Steve Atkins, City Attorney Eleanor Dilkes and City Clerk Marian Karr and gives them raises accordingly.

If the increases are approved, Atkins' salary will go from $125,008 to $129,064, improving his rank as the highest-paid city employee. Dilkes' salary will increase to $52,041 from $50,398, and Karr will earn $67,100 in fiscal year 2002, up from $63,003 this year.

Karr has served as city clerk since 1981. She said she is "very satisfied" with her raise. She said although the annual evaluations are routine, the compensation varies depending on the council's opinion of their job performances.

Iowa City Mayor Ernie Lehman said the salary increases for the three city employees generally follow the same standards each year.

"I think we have always had an increase that is equal to the cost of living," Lehman said. "Basically, everyone received at least a 3.25 percent increase."

In addition, Lehman said the city manager, city attorney and city clerk are the only three city employees that answer directly to the council.

"Generally speaking, the council is extremely pleased with the performance of all three," he said.

Atkins will also receive $4,808, the cash value of 80 hours of accrued vacation time, paid directly to his pension plan. Dilkes will receive a 3.25 percent increase on her fiscal year 2001 salary, or $1,638, to be paid directly to her pension plan along with her share of full-time health premiums. Karr will receive the cash value of 80 hours vacation time, adding more than $2,000 to her pension plan.

Like Lehman, City Councilor Connie Champion said she was pleased with the performance of the three city employees. She added that years of service was never really considered.

Because the evaluations took place at a closed session, Champion declined to say what specifically the council considered, but she said "it's very complicated."

"It's not a simple procedure," she said. "It's a merit raise."

UI clamps down on Ethernet use

■ The university has disciplined 38 students for inappropriate use of the high-speed connection.

By Mary Johnson
The Daily Iowan

With two days left before move-out day in residence halls, UI freshman Paul Chang was one of the students downloading last-minute materials from the Internet with a high-speed Ethernet connection Thursday.

After Chang leaves Friday, he will use a computer that is approximately 200 times slower at his family home in Ames.

Officials say students should be aware that their downloading activities in dorm rooms can be monitored by the university, and they can be punished for unacceptable use.

When Ethernet connections were wired into Rienow Residence Hall in January, Chang started copying PlayStation games off the Internet. His collection grew to more than 40,000 word-processing programs and movies from the last year. He copied files by leaving his computer on 24 hours a day.

"It's not like I'm invading other people's property," he said. "The Ethernet network is there for people to get information faster. A lot of the time I try to download material when people are sleeping or not using the system."

UI Residence Services and Information Technology Services work in conjunction to enforce the UI Residence Hall Network Acceptable Use Policy. The university shares a bandwidth of 100 megabytes per second with a portion going to the residence halls, said Jane Drews, an ITS senior systems programmer.

When ITS detects excessive amounts of bandwidth used or receives reports of illegal software downloading on campus, the office pinpoints the location of the computer to the exact residence hall room, Drews said.

According to Residence Services, 38 students were disciplined for violating the policy during the current school year. Out of those disciplined, none of the students have been repeat offenders, Drews said.

Once the computer and student are identified, Residence Services decides on penalties ranging from oral warnings to shutting off the connection for a specified amount of time.

"I've been pleased with the responsiveness and cooperation of students as they learned about the proper-use policy," Drews said. "Once the students have been educated about the issues, they are more willing to change their behavior."

Revised in May 2000, the policy discourages using Ethernet for non-academic activities and taking extra bandwidth space. However, some students wonder how the policy in the future will prevent others from not following the rules.

"One would assume not to run a business or modify their computer wiring without even being informed of this policy," said UI freshman Joe Engstrom.

ly," she said. "I just feel like it's a good time of my life to do something like this."

Hey has traveled to other parts of the world before — she spent last spring semester studying in the Netherlands and touring much of Europe — but she said this time she is leaving the United States for different reasons. Rather than just backpacking through the country, she is looking forward to immersing herself in the culture and serving the people who live there.

"This is something I can do for myself, but I can teach a lot of people a lot of things," said Hey, who studied elementary education. "It seems like everyone benefits from serving and helping people in some way."

The Peace Corps experience will begin with a two-day orientation in Chicago, where she will meet the volunteers who will accompany her to Moldova. When the volunteers reach the redeveloping country, one of the former Soviet republics, they will spend three months in the capital city of Chisinau, learning about the culture, the Romanian language and practicing the tasks they will be performing on their own.

"I'm really excited to learn the language," she said. "It'll be a challenge, but I kind of like that."

After orientation, Hey does not know what her exact assignment will be. All she knows is that she will be teaching, probably in a rural area of the country. She said she is unsure what to expect because all she knows about Moldova is what she has read in an information booklet prepared by the Peace Corps.

"I know what I read," she said. "But I don't know exactly what's going to happen. That's part of the excitement. I know it's going to be a complete shock when I get there."

The booklet has given Hey some idea of what she's in for. She knows she won't have all of her current luxuries in Moldova, a country that has suffered with a struggling economy since declaring independence from the Soviet Union in 1991.

"I'm picturing small towns that are poor with people who work really hard but are still struggling," she said. "Things are changing. They're definitely trying to turn things around."

Hey hopes that she will be able to help the people rebuild the country in whatever way she can, she said. She said her hard work and determination will help her make the most of the Moldovan classroom she will be teaching in, which she has been warned may lack heating and adequate supplies.

"Every little thing counts. Sometimes you feel like you're not doing anything, but you really are making a difference," she said.

The UI Peace Corps campus representative Shelby Contreras, who has served as Hey's adviser, shared her sentiments about making a difference. She said volunteers are often surprised by what they take from the experience themselves.

"You find reservoirs of confidence you never thought you had," she said. "Once you start volunteering, you see you're not the one who's giving. It's a continual reward for yourself."

Hey said she is aware that the experience will allow her to gain as well as give. She hopes her time in Moldova will provide a better understanding of herself and a better idea of what she would like to do with her future.

Because recent graduates are often like Hey — unsure about their futures and not tied down — it's a great time to join the Peace Corps, Contreras said. Hey agreed.

"I'm young, and I'm free. I can do this."

Solicitor General nomination delayed

■ A Senate committee puts off a vote on Theodore Olson because of his association with anti-Clinton groups.

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate Judiciary Committee put off a decision on the nomination of Florida recount lawyer Theodore Olson to be solicitor general as Democrats investigated his contacts with anti-Clinton groups.

Olson, in a letter Thursday to the top Democrat on the panel, Sen. Patrick Leahy of Vermont, denied any involvement in the "Arkansas Project," an investigation by the conservative magazine American Spectator into alleged criminal activities by then-President Clinton and Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Olson, who was a member of the board of directors of the American Spectator Educational Foundation, represented the magazine but insisted that he was not involved in the "inception, organization or ongoing supervision" of the "Arkansas Project."

He said he became aware of the project at some time in 1997 and that as a board member he participated in setting up an investigation into the funding of the project and establishing new guidelines for the magazine.

Leahy, in a letter to Olson last week, said he was troubled by Olson's responses to questions about his involvement with the magazine and efforts to dig up scandals on the Clintons, and his representation of Whitewater figure David Hale during Senate hearings into the Clintons' role in the Arkansas land deal.

"The credibility of the person appointed to be the solicitor general is of paramount importance," Leahy wrote.

The solicitor general is the administration's advocate before the Supreme Court.

Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said he would call for a vote on Olson on May 17 and "he will go through." He said Democrats "know he's a high quality person."

The nomination of Michael Chertoff to be assistant attorney general was also put off a week. The nominations of Daniel Bryant for assistant attorney general, Charles James for assistant attorney general and Larry Thompson for deputy attorney general were approved and sent to the full Senate. The Senate later confirmed Bryant and Thompson by voice vote.

Olson said that while he represented Hale in 1996 when he was called to testify to the Senate Whitewater committee, Hale never paid his firm, and the firm eventually wrote off the amount owed. He said the American Spectator Educational Foundation never provided money for the representation of Hale.

He said his firm's work for the foundation included legal research relating to subjects addressed in articles in the magazine and consultation with respect to the legal implications of articles.

Olson gained national prominence for his role in successfully arguing George W. Bush's Florida election case before the Supreme Court. He is also a former law partner and friend of former Independent Counsel Kenneth Starr, and he assisted Paula Jones' legal team in her sexual-harassment suit against Clinton.

Harkin wants energy-price probe

■ The Iowa senator says some prices are not responding to normal market forces.

By Mike Glover
Associated Press

DES MOINES — Sen. Tom Harkin called Thursday for a congressional investigation of energy prices that seemingly don't respond to typical market forces.

Harkin joined other lawmakers in calling for creation of a House-Senate panel with subpoena power to probe energy costs.

The move comes as gasoline prices are beginning to rise, with prediction of gas at $3 a gallon by the time the peak of the vacation season arrives. It also comes after a winter when soaring natural-gas costs hammered consumers.

Harkin said the gasoline price increase is particularly troubling because it doesn't seem to be justified.

"Crude oil prices have been stable for months," he said. "Despite the price of crude, we're seeing these huge spikes." Harkin urged President Bush to intervene, bringing pressure on oil companies to rein in price hikes.

"The White House has got to do some jawboning," he said. "The huge refiners are raking in the profits."

Harkin called for a probe of natural-gas prices last winter, coupled with a call for tax credits to help consumers being hammered by soaring utility costs. His latest proposal came during a conference call with Iowa reporters. In addition, Harkin announced plans to vote against Bush's proposed budget, which is working its way through Congress. Harkin said the final version crafted by a House-Senate conference committee eliminates new education spending he had pushed, diverting the money instead into tax cuts he doesn't favor.

"I'm going to vote against this budget because it's fiscally irresponsible," he said. "I am for tax relief, but those tax cuts should be targeted toward families and those who need it."

Deeply split Senate approves Bush budget

■ Five Democrats cross party lines, off-setting the defections of two Republicans.

By Alan Fram
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A fractured Congress approved a final budget for next year that promises deep tax cuts and trimmed spending, awarding a victory to President Bush, though there were signs the road to achieving those goals may be bumpy.

With centrist Democrats providing pivotal support, the evenly divided Senate cleared the $1.95 trillion budget

Thursday by a near party-line 53-47 vote. Defections by Republican Sens. James Jeffords of Vermont and Lincoln Chafee of Rhode Island were outweighed by five Democrats who backed the GOP-written plan.

"Now is not the time, with these circumstances, to figure out how we disagree," said Sen. John Breaux, D-La., who supported the budget after leading a bloc of 14 moderate Democrats whom the White House romanced with only partial success. "Now is the time to figure out how we can reach an agreement for the good of all the people we represent."

"The president views this as a very important day in his new presidency, and he is very pleased to thank the Democrats that helped make this possible," White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said.

The bulk of Democrats opposed the budget as clearing the way for an excessive tax cut that would siphon money needed to bolster Social Security, Medicare, schools, debt reduction and other priorities. They said GOP claims of forging good working relationships with Democrats were bogus.

"We have all heard the mantra that the tone of Washington is being changed," mocked Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W.Va. "When it was time for the rubber to hit the road, bipartisanship had a flat tire."

Further problems cropped up shortly after the budget vote. Senate Democrats meeting privately to discuss the tax bill raised questions about its contents and urged their chief negotiator, Sen. Max Baucus of Montana, the top Democrat on the tax-writing Senate Finance Committee, to slow down the GOP's rapid-fire schedule.

"We've got some time here," said Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., a member of the Finance Committee. "There are still some issues we haven't been able to vet yet."

Underlining the partisan tensions that the budget fight exacerbated, Senate Majority Whip Don Nickles, R-Okla., expressed unhappiness with 10 moderate Democrats who had supported an earlier version of the budget but voted no Thursday.

"It told me they don't want to participate in writing the tax bill," he said. Lawmakers who supported the budget "have a greater likelihood of being given some attention" as the Senate composes its tax bill in coming days, he said.

The budget would permit a tax cut of $1.35 trillion over 11 years, $100 billion of which may come this year and next in an attempt to boost the economy. Bush wanted a $1.6 trillion reduction over 10 years, but he was forced to settle for less by the Senate's narrow political balance.

"You didn't get everything you want, Mr. President," said the Budget Committee chairman, Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M. "You have made us change direction. You have moved us in the direction of giving back taxes to the American people, rather than giving them the last cut of the deck."

Most importantly for Bush and his GOP allies, budget passage means the $1.35 trillion tax bill cannot be filibustered, a procedural delay that take 60 votes to halt. Republicans say they will pursue even deeper tax cuts, but those won't have the budget's protection.

Man says last name impetus for gay-bar shooting spree

■ A Virginia man says being razed about his name — Gay — led to slaying at a gay bar.

By Chris Kahn
Associated Press

ROANOKE, Va. — A man who told police he was angry over being teased about his last name — Gay — pleaded guilty to murder and other charges Thursday for killing one person and wounding six others in a shooting rampage at a gay bar.

Ronald Edward Gay, 55, faces a maximum of four life terms plus 60 years in prison for the Sept. 22, 2000, shooting.

Gay pleaded guilty to first-degree murder and six counts of malicious wounding. In return, prosecutors dropped eight firearms charges, reducing the maximum penalty by about 33 years.

Gay has condemned homosexuality, and he told police he was upset that his last name made him the victim of jokes. He also said that he was humiliated that three of his sons changed their last names.

The day before the shooting, Gay checked into a hotel. According to police, he began asking where the gay bar was and telling people he wanted to shoot gay people. Someone gave him directions to the Backstreet Cafe and called police.

Danny Lee Overstreet, 43, died at the scene.

Gay called himself a "Christian soldier working for my Lord." He denounced homosexuality in a letter he mailed to the Roanoke Times in March.

"Jesus does not want these people in his heaven," Gay wrote.

who was shot in the left hand said the penalty wasn't enough.

"What would have been enough would be to allow us to shoot him the way he shot us," Kathy Caldwell said, pulling back a bandage to show the stitches in her palm.

House votes to withhold U.N. dues

■ The vote is in favor of making only one payment of back dues.

By Carolyn Skorneck
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — House members angered by the ouster of the United States from the U.N. Commission on Human Rights exacted some revenge Thursday by voting convincingly to withhold some back U.N. dues until America is restored to the panel.

The Bush administration opposed that action, but GOP leaders championed the fight to punish the international organization. The most visible backers of the White House position were Democrats.

"I implore my colleagues," said Majority Leader Dick Armey, R-Texas. "If you believe in the cause of liberty, freedom, safety, security, respect and decency, vote yes for this amendment. Send the world a message: America cares and America dares to stand up for any lost soul beleaguered and tortured in any part of this world at any time."

The vote was 252-165 for the measure, which would allow one payment of $582 million in back dues but holds back an additional $244 million until the United States is back on the human-rights panel. An initial $100 million back-dues payment occurred last year.

The provision was attached to the State Department spending authorization bill for 2002-2003. A House vote on that bill is expected next week, and the Senate Foreign Relations Committee is still writing its version.

In other amendments Thursday, the House:

- Showed it was not wholly opposed to the United Nations by voting 225-193 to support a return to the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization and pay it $65 million. The United States left UNESCO in 1984, upset by management problems and what was perceived to be an anti-American bent.
- Voted 282-137 to keep the United States out of the International Criminal Court. Majority Whip Tom DeLay contended it could be used against U.S. military personnel overseas and that by endorsing the court, "we would be abandoning the sacred covenant between the Congress and our men and women in uniform."

As for the U.N. back dues, several lawmakers citing the U.S. ejection from the human-rights panel had sought to block the $582 million payment.

That prompted the International Relations Committee chairman, Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., and Rep. Tom Lantos of California, the panel's top Democrat, to offer the compromise saving the immediate $582 million payment despite their own anger at the U.N. action.

"This is a deliberate attempt to punish the United States for its insistence that we tell the truth about human-rights abuses wherever they occur, including in those countries represented on the commission, such as China and Cuba," Hyde said, calling on Congress to send a return message.

Elmer Greiner of Kenta has happily returned to farming following an innovative bladder reconstruction surgery developed at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics.

Isn't that amazing?

When Elmer Greiner learned he had bladder cancer in 1994, his greatest fear was that he'd have to give up farming.

Elmer's cancer was so severe, his bladder had to be removed. That meant he would be dependent upon a urine bag for the rest of his life. No more long days out in the fields.

Fortunately 1994 was also the year a physician at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics began to perform a new kind of surgery to reconstruct the human bladder using part of the small intestine. Elmer had the surgery. Twelve weeks later he was back on the farm picking corn and feeding hogs.

Elmer is not the first patient to benefit from one of our medical breakthroughs. Nor will he be the last. Today we are using electrical impulses to reduce incontinence and microwaves to operate on enlarged prostates. One day, we hope to know how to keep tumors like Elmer's from forming.

Which explains why, every day, we keep caring, trying and searching for the discoveries that change medicine. And change lives.

In high court, the center does hold

■ Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor staunchly maintains the middle ground.

By Anne Gearan
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Sandra Day O'Connor is holding her center ground.

The Supreme Court has issued approximately half the roughly 75 decisions expected this term, and the panel's pivotal moderate has been among the majority in all but two.

O'Connor

That places her squarely at the court's center, frequently leading the crucial fifth vote to break the nine-member court's tie votes.

"She is often a voice of caution, and she moderates the conservative side," said University of Chicago law Professor Cass Sunstein. "She is not an ideologue."

In one busy week at the Supreme Court last month, O'Connor was the tie-breaking vote in cases on both sides of the court's ideological gap and the voice of vigorous opposition to a decision she saw as a potential invitation to police abuse.

That is familiar territory for the center-right O'Connor, an abortion-rights supporter who has seen the court grow more conservative in the 20 years since President Reagan named her as the court's first female justice.

O'Connor's voting pattern is under scrutiny this year, in the wake of the court's unprecedented involvement in the presidential election and in anticipation of possible court retirements this summer.

Retirement announcements typically come at or near the close of the court term in June, but an apparently exasperated O'Connor short-circuited the rumor mill by saying publicly that she has "no present plans to retire."

"I just have no other plan," she told her home-state newspaper, the Arizona Republic, last week.

O'Connor did not immediately respond to an interview request from the Associated Press.

Before her statement, it seemed plausible that O'Connor would take her leave this year secure that a Republican president would choose her replacement on the court.

"We know justices generally prefer to retire when the person appointing their successor is somebody whose views they approve of. That's a pretty important condition, but it is not a sufficient condition," by itself, said UCLA law Professor Eugene Volokh, a former O'Connor law clerk.

O'Connor was reportedly dismayed on Election Night, when initial news reports projected Democrat Al Gore the winner in decisive Florida because she had wanted to retire under a GOP president.

A little more than a month later, she was part of the five-member Supreme Court majority that ended the ballot recounts Gore sought, and effectively decided the election for Bush.

"It may be that she wanted to put some distance between herself and that highly controversial ruling," said George Washington University law Professor Mary Cheh. "Because of the appearance of a quid pro quo, it might put her in an awkward position if she retired now, and she is doing what she can to separate the two events."

'Get-tough' drug czar steps in

■ Bush plans to keep the position at Cabinet-level.

By Sonya Ross
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush chose John Walters, a get-tough figure from the drug war of his father's presidency, to lead a renewed narcotics battle that he promised would be sensitive to the "human tragedy" of drug addiction.

Bush's announcement Thursday drew immediate objections from several groups that contended Walters cares little about drug treatment and will return to the lock-'em-up policies of the 1980s.

Advocacy groups were deeply suspicious. They noted that the drug-policy office oversees more than $19 billion in anti-drug programs, working with dozens of agencies, while Bush's budget proposal for fiscal 2002 seeks $1.6 billion for treatment programs.

"Everything about John Walters' past record suggests that he believes drug policy has nothing to do with science or public health. It's all about punishing people for their sins," said Ethan Nadelmann, the director of the Lindesmith Center, a New York-based drug-policy research institute.

And that, in turn, annoyed Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson, who said Bush fully intends "a total frontal assault against drug abuse" through a combination of rehabilitation, education and interdiction.

"I'd tell those cynics out there, look at what the president has been trying to do. Listen to what's said. And just get out of our way if you're going to be a cynic, and let us do our job," Thompson said.

Bush announced his selection of Walters as the director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy during a Rose Garden ceremony and said he would keep the post Cabinet-level. In a tacit rebuke of his predecessor, Bill Clinton, the president said too little had been done lately to curb the drug use that declined among high-school students in the 1980s and early 1990s.

"We had made tremendous strides in cutting drug use. This cannot be said today," Bush said. "We must do, and will do, a better job."

Walters pledged to protect children, help drug addicts, and "shield our communities from the terrible human toll taken by illegal drugs."

Walters was the drug-policy office's deputy director for supply reduction when it was headed by William Bennett during the administration of former President Bush.

Walters has stressed the importance of criminal penalties for drug users and opposed the use of marijuana for medical purposes. He also has favored the drug-certification program, in which nations are judged by their anti-drug efforts, a sore point in U.S.-Mexican relations.

Pregnant governor causes ruckus

■ Massachusetts Democrats object to the governor running the state from a hospital bed.

By Steve LeBlanc
Associated Press

BOSTON — Under a doctor's orders to rest while awaiting the birth of twins, acting Gov. Jane M. Swift is getting grief from Democrats, who question whether she can legally run the state from her hospital bed.

After Swift convened a meeting of the Governor's Council by telephone Wednesday, the panel voted 5-3 to ask the state's highest court if the practice is constitutional for official meetings. A hearing date has not been set.

Swift Chief of Staff Peter Forman dismissed the move as "political gamesmanship." The council is an elected board that approves judicial appointments, gubernatorial pardons and bond issues. All eight members are Democrats; Swift is a Republican.

Swift said she has no plans to relinquish authority to Secretary of State William Galvin, a Democrat who is next in the line of succession. She is expected to give birth in the next week or two.

Swift, at 36, is the nation's youngest governor and the first known to be pregnant in office. Her attempts to balance motherhood and career were a long-running political story even before she took over as governor on April 10, when Gov. Paul Cellucci resigned to become ambassador to Canada.

She announced she was pregnant when running for lieutenant governor in 1998, delivering a girl three weeks before she was elected. An ethics panel later fined her $1,250 for allowing aides to baby-sit the child, now 2½. She was also criticized for using a state helicopter for a trip home on Thanksgiving.

Don't look for female voters in this heavily Democratic state to rush to her defense.

Jill Ness, a 31-year-old mother, said Swift may regret spending too much time on the political stage when her children are young.

"It may be satisfying for her now to hold such an important office, but later on she's going to miss those precious moments," Ness said.

Swift's job approval has inched up recently, to 41 percent in a Boston Herald poll last month, from 25 percent in February. Swift has not said whether she will run for a full term in 2002.

Swift is not the first chief executive to conduct official business while not physically present: In 1947, Boston Mayor James Michael Curley conducted official business for five months while in jail for fraud.

by 67.4 percent, 7.4 percent more than was needed. The $18.4 million, 20-year bond referendum calls for the library, located at 123 S. Linn St., to expand westward. It will increase from 47,000 square feet to 83,745 square feet. The city purchased the Leno & Cilek building, 130 S. Dubuque St., with plans to demolish it to make room for the expansion later this year. Leases of the remaining tenants in the Leno & Cilek building will expire on Aug. 1.

Residents also voted to keep the extension of First Avenue in the city's Capital Improvement Project. The extension will connect First Avenue to Captain Irish Parkway, linking the northern and southern areas of Iowa City.

A total of 15,577 voted in favor of the extension, while 11,959 voted against it. Members of Citizens for Common Sense Growth lobbied in opposition to the extension, saying it would jeopardize the protection of natural areas, neighborhood preservation and traffic safety.

Proponents of the extension, Citizens for the Future of Iowa City, say it represents a step forward for Iowa City and will make transportation easier.

2 City continues fight against alcohol

After more than a year of discussions and public hearings, the Iowa City City Council has yet to reach consensus on how to solve the perceived alcohol problem.

The first attempt included a proposed ordinance banning out-of-sight-sales, "happy hours" and drink specials, such as two-for-one and all-you-can-drink. The proposal also placed city administrative penalties, in addition to state penalties such as fines and revocation of liquor licenses, on establishments found selling or distributing to minors. The council initially passed the ordinance on its first reading, but voted to revise it at its May 1 meeting.

The revisions came after city officials met with several bar owners to answer questions and clarify interpretations of the regulations. The current ordinance now limits pricing and servings of drinks — two beverages may be delivered to a person at a time. The proposal does not restrict happy hours but continues to fine establishments.

Two more majority votes are needed before the ordinance can be passed. The last vote was 4-3, continuing the city's effort to reduce the amount of excessive and underage consumption of alcohol.

3 Budget cuts hit UI

Every facet of the university was dealt a blow in March, when the state announced a slowing economy had caused a $300 million shortfall in next fiscal year's budget. The inevitable cuts that ensued would turn out to be the largest the university has ever seen.

Lawmakers put the finishing touches on the budget this week, cutting $14.3 million from the UI's general operating appropriations and $550,000 from the work-study program, among other programs. Despite some requests, lawmakers declined to dip into the so-called "rainy-day" fund, set up for economic emergencies, in an effort to soften the blow.

Gov. Tom Vilsack still has to sign the bill, which will take effect on July 1.

The cuts will have a severe effect on the university. Although tuition/fee rates have already been set for next academic year, they are expected to rise anywhere between 10-20 percent for 2003-04 school year in an effort to make up for lost funds.

The university announced Thursday that central administrative units will be hit harder than the university's academic departments. Officials say class sizes will increase and some smaller classes will be cut. The university will only replace employees if it is absolutely necessary, and some officials worry that recruiting and retaining employees will become increasingly difficult.

4 Iowa Child Project comes to Coralville

Directors of the much sought after Iowa Child Institute announced in December 2000 its home would be Coralville, pleasing some city officials and worrying other local residents.

The estimated $293 million, 85-acre complex would include a five-acre indoor rain forest (the world's largest), an aquarium, a theater and a teacher-educational facility. The complex would sit at the intersection of Interstates 80 and 380.

Officials estimate that more than 1 million people will visit the project annually, boosting the local economy. Further, they hope it will be a place in which science, culture and art will come together to provide a unique educational experience.

Two local citizens groups have formed as an effort to keep the project out of Coralville. Both groups, Stop-A-Vast Error and Iowa Citizens Against CHILd-ishness, share similar concerns: The increased traffic will be bad for the environment, and an artificial rain forest is a foolish investment for Iowa.

David Oman, who was named the project's chief administrative officer last month, has asked the project's architects to find ways to "right-size" the project, possibly trimming the $293 million price tag. The project will apply for $75 million from the Vision Iowa Board, which plans to give $180 million for various community attractions in September.

to be magical for both the Iowa men and women's basketball team.

The upstart women's basketball team went from near the bottom of the Big Ten to conference champions under the guide of first-year coach Lisa Bluder. The Hawkeyes beat eventual Final Four participant Purdue to capture the tournament crown.

"Winning the Big Ten NCAA Tournament and going to the NCAA Tournament was the high point [of my career]," former Iowa point guard Cara Consuegra said.

One week after the women brought Big Ten glory to the Hawkeye State, the Iowa men duplicated the feat.

Led by the rebounding of junior forward Reggie Evans, Iowa blazed through the tournament, winning four games in four days to capture the Big Ten Tournament and an automatic bid in the NCAA Tournament.

The Hawkeyes won the tournament after losing six of its last eight conference games.

Both Hawkeye teams advanced to the second round of the NCAA Tournament, where the women lost to Utah and the men lost to Kentucky.

Funding ax could hamper liberal arts

ENROLLMENT

alone. In the past 10 years, the English department has seen a four-fold increase in majors, with 1,647 majors this semester. The number of art majors has grown to more than 700, an increase of more than 100 from five years ago.

The lack of faculty members will make it tough to offer the courses that put the university on the map, such as literary translation, an area in which the UI has led the country for 35 years, Nagel said. The budget cuts could make it difficult for the university to remain competitive, he said.

Bittersweet sentiments were on the lips of many department faculty members.

Phillip Round, the undergraduate chairman in the English department, said the department has made a concerted effort for many years to respond to the increasing interest without sacrificing the quality of education.

"We haven't responded with giant lectures," he said, noting that many English courses cap the class size at 32-35 students. But the current faculty-student ratio is in what he calls a "delicate balance."

Round said the department has also tried to provide diverse courses that recognize a growing interest in cultural study, something he hopes can continue.

David Klemm, the chairman of the School of Religion, says the interest in cultural study is exactly why so many students are majoring in and taking religion courses.

"To understand the world we live in, people are studying religion," he said. "Every seat in our courses is virtually sold out." Klemm cited lecture courses with huge enrollment, such as The Bible and the Holocaust, taught by Professor Jay Holstein — the single-largest course taught on the Holocaust in the country.

But Klemm said he worries about future retirements leading to long-term vacancies.

While Klemm credits the popularity of his department to students searching for meaning, Dorothy Johnson, the director of the art department, says students in her department feel a need to find personal expression. In response to the growing interest, she said, the department has incorporated a digital component into major areas. Digital-arts is very popular, she said.

This comes as no surprise to Steve Bruell, the chairman of the computer-science department. Computer science is a department within liberal arts and is very popular, he said, with approximately 600 students this semester.

"Over the past five years, we've seen a 20 percent increase in enrollment every year, except this year, which seems to have leveled off," he said.

"Our majors get job offers with high salaries. They can go anywhere in the country and get a job," he said, but he added that the recent technology-stock upset has caused a decline in the job market. And though his field has always received the support it needed in the past, Bruell said, he can only hope that support will continue in the future.

unfortunate ... but it's out of our control."

The Iowa legislative session ended on May 8 with cuts in state funding to the UI, Iowa State University and University of Northern Iowa for fiscal year 2002, which starts on July 1. A $12 million shortfall in the state's salary bill holds uncertain consequences for the university as it searches for a new director of the UI School of Journalism and Mass Communications, registrar and associate vice president for Human Resources, among other vacancies.

The College of Liberal Arts, the UI's largest undergraduate college, will not fill vacant positions because of the cuts, said Dean Linda Maxson.

"I think it's very serious," she said. "We just can't function this way if some of the cuts aren't repaired."

Class sizes will increase, and classes with low enrollment will be eliminated all together, Maxson said.

Approximately 61 percent of the UI's General Education Fund is composed of state appropriations. Tuition accounts for 30 percent of the $414 million fund, which will be reduced by $14.7 million because of the budget cuts.

In light of the cuts, some state lawmakers are calling the 2001 session a "failure" for education. Others are predicting more budget troubles for the UI and Iowa's public universities in years to come.

"I saw a dumbing down of education in the Iowa Legislature," said House Minority Leader Dick Myers, D-Coralville. "We accepted mediocrity ..."

Gov. Tom Vilsack was critical of the 121-day session and has yet to sign the $4.9 billion state budget. However, some lawmakers are doubtful whether Vilsack will call a special session in an attempt to reinstate more funding for the public universities.

"There's a real stalemate between Republicans ... and the governor," said Sen. Robert Dvorsky, D-Coralville.

Funding for programs such as work study and the Agricultural Health and Safety Department were eliminated because of the budget cuts. Vilsack proposed a 6 percent reduction in state allocations to Iowa's regents' institutions in late March as the result of a $300 million shortfall in state revenues. Republican lawmakers proposed to further reduce funding and recommended a $55 million salary budget for state employees, which includes the UI, but compromised at $79.3 million — $12 million less than Vilsack's proposal.

"The prediction is the budget will be as bad next year," said Rep. Vicki Lensing, D-Iowa City. "It could, at one point, be difficult for Iowans to send their kids to college."

Sen. Richard Drake, R-Muscatine, said Republican lawmakers acted fairly in their actions and that Iowans were unwilling to make the necessary sacrifices to fund education.

"I think the cuts were too severe," he said. "Not one person this year asked me to increase taxes. In order to put more money into the regents and budget, you're going to have to put a good-sized tax on immediately."

A UI committee is looking for ways to trim the university's expenses under principles outlined last month, and department heads and deans will be key in finding ways to reduce their expenses, Parrot said. Details of the university's budget will be communicated to students and faculty through e-mail as they are known, he said.

decide how he wants to proceed," he said.

McVeigh, 33, is scheduled to receive a lethal injection at a federal prison in Terre Haute, Ind., on Wednesday.

In a recently published book, he claimed sole responsibility for the April 19, 1995, bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, which killed 168 people and injured hundreds of others. He has not shown any interest in appealing his conviction or death sentence.

However, legal experts said the Justice Department miscue could delay what would be the first federal execution since 1963, though it was unlikely to overturn McVeigh's conviction.

"The issue really is whether McVeigh is going to decide whether to challenge this," said Andrew Cohen, a legal analyst who has followed the case. "The FBI through its negligence or whatever has given McVeigh the opportunity to control his immediate future."

Despite new ramp, parking space at a premium

PARKING

"A ramp became necessary," she said. "What you first have to understand is that ramps are self-supporting."

"I don't know what's going to happen — that is a good question. But, however many spots we get is more than we have now."

Permits for parking spots have been issued for the employees of eight businesses that will be housed in Tower Place. Approximately 20 have been issued so far, and possibly four or six more permits may be given out, Fowler said. Sixteen will be reserved for disabled people.

Further, plans call for the removal of 164 of 240 one-hour metered parking spaces along Iowa Avenue as part of the streetscape project, which is scheduled to be completed in November.

Dave Ricketts, the UI director of transportation, said the university has requested parking spaces in the ramp for faculty and employees. The city has not yet replied.

"The city will probably use it for its own needs, then give us what is leftover," he said. "Perhaps we'll have to wait until fall to see what happens."

"I am appalled at the 105 (new spaces), given the gigantic size of the structure," said Sue Otto, a UI staff member for 23 years. "I am surprised that the city is not collaborating with the university in issuing permits. It would certainly be good if parking would investigate that."

Parking permits will also be issued to members of the Senior Center, 28 S. Linn St., based on an agreement with the city, Fowler said.

The center used to lease 78 spaces in a parking lot where the new ramp now stands. In order to build the new parking facility, an agreement between the city and the center was needed, Fowler said.

The Senior Center will purchase 1,200 hours of parking per week in the new facility at a cost of 35 cents an hour. The total annual cost of the agreement will be $21,840 — nearly four times the center's current parking budget. Parking rates for the public will be 50 cents per hour.

Linda Kopping, one of the center's coordinators, said she does not know how many permits it will sell for the parking facility. Last year, the center issued 300 parking permits for the Chauncey Swan Ramp, 415 E. Washington St.

"I would be surprised if we sold 300 permits this year because the price is five times as they once were," she said.

Permits last year were $10; for the new parking ramp, they are $50 apiece. Price increases this year are due to the inflated budget and the construction of a skywalk connecting the Senior Center and the parking facility.

RALPH NADER'S ASSAULT ON MOTHER NATURE ...

The Green-louse effect

Now that the United States is facing an energy crisis, the Bush administration wants to begin drilling for oil in our national preserves. Because the Republicans control the White House and Congress, there is a good chance that these new oil-exploration initiatives will pass, even though the damage to the environment would be unimaginable. However, do not blame Bush and Cheney for this; there is someone else we can thank for the current environmental crisis. This man's complete disregard for reality has placed us in a position where our national wildlife refuges have become a viable target for exploitation. Who is this person who has such disrespect for our environment? This poster boy for environmental corruption is none other than Ralph Nader, the leader of the Green Party.

This poster boy for environmental corruption is none other than Ralph Nader, the leader of the Green Party.

Why is Nader responsible for all this? It was his careless indifference to the political situation during the 2000 presidential election that put George W. Bush in the White House. If Nader had been as committed to the environment as he claimed, he would have sacrificed his presidential bid and thrown his support behind Gore in order to help elect an environmentally friendly Democrat. Instead, Nader split the liberal vote and helped elect Bush. In Florida alone, nearly 100,000 people voted for Nader. By contrast, the margin between Bush and Gore was less than 10,000. If only a tenth of those Florida Nader supporters had voted for Gore, we would have an environmentally friendly president right now. Instead, we have a figurehead for big business.

Although he is not a charismatic man, Al Gore is a defender of the environment. He has been praised by various environmental organizations for his dedication to land conservation, fighting global warming and improving air and water quality. However, with Bush, everyone knew he was in big oil's back pocket. We all knew that if he were elected, the environment would take a distant back seat to all of his special interests. Now, he has been elected, and we are getting exactly what the oil companies paid for. Bush and Cheney are throwing the doors wide open on our national preserves, and Ralph Nader gave them the key.

Some forever, not for better

After four years at the UI, most of my friends are packing up their college apartments and preparing to move off to new careers and nicer apartments in bigger, more exciting cities. I'm quietly trying to decide what fraction of my belongings will fit in a 9-by-12 law-school dorm room.

ning all over a campus. Then again, it's all fun until someone loses an I. Just ask Eric Shaw. Or the cop that killed him.

UI professors profess well. And a couple of them can TEACH, too. I have benefited from the care and concern of several excellent teachers — my thesis adviser, a good chunk of the Econ department, and even a quasi-Marxist poli sci professor. But I can't help but wonder why most of what I've been taught came outside of the classroom, away from research professors, belligerent ranters and other peddlers of fast-food academia.

Messrs. Barker, Paine, Thoreau, Galt, Sosnik, Ellison et al., some of my preferred teachers, never got tenure. Holstein did. Good for him — he can call students expletives until the end of time, on the state's dime. And he might think that we, his targets, actually took him seriously.

There is reason for hope in the student body. A couple of times, when I went out on a limb and called for a basic re-evaluation of the UI lifestyle, I expected to be hit with a barrage of angry responses. Instead, I found that there is a large segment of students at the UI who are tired of watching a few thousand drunken losers define the UI Student. I hope that the silent majority will find its voice soon enough, before they are further punished for the idiotic antics of ignorant, lazy, Animal House wannabes.

I'm not good at goodbyes. I would have just written "In My Life," but Lennon and McCartney beat me to it. So I'll close with this:

In just under four years, I lost my friends, my politics, my religion, my dreams ... and I reconstructed them anew. The price tag: Four years of tuition, a couple of headaches and a pound of flesh in AUR rent. Not a bad deal. Not a bad deal at all.

STUDY SHOWS THAT GAYS CAN CHANGE ...

Truth need not be PC

A new study led by Columbia psychiatry Professor Robert Spitzer contends that some gay people can turn straight if they really want to. This conclusion has psychologists debating and homosexuals in an uproar.

Critics of the study site that 43 percent of the participants had been referred to Spitzer by organizations that offer programs to gay people who seek change and that these are sponsored primarily by religious conservatives. "The sample is terrible, totally tainted, totally unrepresentative of the gay and lesbian community," said David Elliot, a spokesman for the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force.

Elliot and other critics need to keep a more open mind about this study. So what if a large number of participants were referred by religious groups? Does that make the change in their sexual orientation any more or less real? Of course the sample is unrepresentative of the gay and lesbian community, but this just means that most homosexuals are uninterested in becoming heterosexual.

This study was not conducted by someone who is biased. In fact, Spitzer was part of the 1973 decision to remove homosexuality from the American Psychological Association's list of mental disorders. He began this recent study quite skeptical of any ability to change sexual orientation.

We, as a country, need to be more open to the idea of homosexuality as a psychological disorder. Just because the idea isn't politically correct doesn't mean that it is false. Our society needs to acknowledge the fact that not everybody considers homosexuality to be normal behavior. People who believe that homosexuality is immoral are just as entitled to their viewpoint as anybody else is.

From now on, our society needs to allow for a more open exchange of scientific and ethical ideas without automatically criticizing and shutting off our minds from views that disagree with the mainstream. Perhaps homosexuality is a psychological disorder. Won't we look stupid if we take 50 years longer than we need to figure it out, just because we didn't even listen to all of the information out there?

This is America. Let's consider the possibility of the validity of Spitzer's findings before we haul him before the Inquisition.

Finding Danish treats in literature

Law Professor Marc Linder overcomes several obstacles in translating and publishing Hans Kirk.

By Tracy Nemitz
The Daily Iowan

When Marc Linder was first handed a copy of Hans Kirk's The Fishermen as a birthday present from a student at Roskilde University Center in Denmark in 1975, he was initially less than enthusiastic about the book. After reading 50 pages, he set the book aside and tried to forget about it, but in the end, he could not.

"I don't like to be defeated by a novel," said Linder, a UI professor of law. "So I picked it up again later, and it became my favorite Danish novel."

The book will one day be considered a classic, he said.

"It has a unique existence. It talks about a part of Danish history and a social group that no longer exists," Linder said. "It is the sociological, anthropological study of a group of holy rollers whose pious, rigid mores were disliked by the remainder of the resident population."

When Linder returned to the United States in 1977, one of his priorities was to translate The Fishermen, Denmark's all-time best-selling novel, into English. When he contacted Penguin Publishing, which held the publishing rights of the book, he discovered that would be difficult to accomplish.

"I guess I was too insignificant," Linder said. "They just wouldn't answer me, so I let it go, put it in the back of my mind."

Twenty-two years later, Linder happened upon The Fishermen again and decided it was time to try again.

"I just saw the book on my bookshelf, and it occurred to me that this was a loose end in my life I needed to deal with," Linder said.

So he contacted Penguin Publishing again, but the company said it no longer held the rights to the book. He proceeded to contact the Danish publishing company that held the rights, Gyldendal Publishing, and worked out a deal. At the same time, Linder began contacting publishers in the United States, but none expressed interest in publishing an English translation of The Fishermen.

Linder said the general reaction of the publishing companies was: "Here's a guy who's been dead for 40 years; no one has heard of him in the U.S.; the book was published 70 years ago. This is exactly what we need. Thanks a lot. Goodbye."

After he gained little ground, he decided to take matters into his own hands and publish the translation himself.

"I had already translated a great deal of the book, and I'd be damned if I did all that work and nothing came of it," Linder said.

Besides the difficulties with publishing companies, he found the translation process problematic as well. The original book contained a great deal of regional dialect that Linder did not understand, as well as hymns that he said did not sound authentic when translated. To overcome these obstacles, he contacted a rhetoric professor in Cedar Falls who was knowledgeable in Danish. The book was published by Linder's publishing company, Fanpíhuá Press, in December 1999.

After completing The Fishermen, he set out to translate Kirk's other works. In March 2001, he published translations of The Day Laborers and The New Times, from which he will read on June 7 at Prairie Lights Books, 15 S. Dubuque St.

In addition to the translations, Linder also added extensive historical notes to the text.

"These stories were drenched in political, historical and economical themes," he said. "There are references to institutions, cultural events, history and political events that while you don't need to understand to enjoy the book, the notes will enrich it."

In addition, Kirk, who held a degree in law, included some aspects of labor law, as well as property law in The Fishermen, The Day Laborers and The New Times.

Linder said he enjoys translation because of he is interested in exploring the differences the process brings to the surface.

"It is challenging and puzzling," he said. "They make me more aware of my language as well as the languages, perceptions and conditions of others."

Although Linder did receive some subsidy from UI for the publishing of The Day Laborers and The New Times, he completed the publishing process himself.

"There is a strong gatekeeper function publishing companies work under," he said. "There was not much to publishing the book myself, just some bureaucratic details, and it was really cheap. Publishing the book myself helped move me beyond the restrictions, escape the tyranny of incompetent publishers."

ARTS BRIEFS

Stop in the name of education

NEW YORK (AP) — Despite being a member of one of the most-successful female groups of all time, ex-Supreme Mary Wilson always felt like an underachiever because she never went to college.

"We've hobnobbed with the rich and famous all our lives ... and they are so well educated, and sometimes you might feel a little inadequate," Wilson told the Associated Press.

Wilson no longer has reason to feel that way. On Thursday, the singer donned a blue cap and gown and got her associate's degree in arts from New York University, becoming a college graduate at the age of 57.

"It's a personal achievement, and I'm very proud of myself," she said.

Really Insane Clown Posse

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — The road manager for the rap group Insane Clown Posse was arrested after being accused of choking an audience member until he passed out.

William Dail, 27, was arrested Tuesday on suspicion of misdemeanor assault and battery. He was released after posting a $1,000 bond.

Thomas Goonan, 23, told police he held up a T-shirt featuring rival Detroit rapper Eminem in front of Insane Clown Posse's Violent J and Shaggy 2 Dope during Tuesday's concert.

Goonan also said he threw M&M candies on stage.

According to police reports, Dail escorted Goonan outside the concert site and "physically grabbed him by the throat and threw him against a fence barricade."

Goonan also claimed Dail choked him until he passed out, said Sgt. Dan Cisar.

Cisar said the investigating officer noted that Goonan's neck and throat were red.

Last month Grammy-winning rap star Eminem pleaded no contest in Pontiac, Mich., to a felony weapons charge in an incident involving associates of Insane Clown Posse.

Eminem, 28, was accused of pulling out a 9mm semiautomatic weapon in a parking lot during a June argument with them.

Making The Rules, but not playing by them

NEW YORK (AP) — Ellen Fein still plays by The Rules, even though she's getting a divorce.

The co-author of the Rules books, which teach women to snag men by playing hard to get, is splitting up with her husband of 15 years, just as The Rules III: Time-Tested Secrets for Making Your Marriage Work, is hitting bookstores.

"I don't think it ruins my credibility at all," the 43-year-old Fein said during an interview on ABC's "PrimeTime Thursday," in which co-author Sherrie Schneider also appeared.

"I totally 100 percent believe in The Rules," Fein said. "And I believe in The Rules for marriage ... and I did them all for many, many years."

The original 1996 book, The Rules: Time-Tested Secrets for Capturing the Heart of Mr. Right, was a huge hit, with more than 2 million copies in print. The sequel, The Rules II: More Rules to Live and Love By, came out in 1997.

Judge gives classic punishment

COVINGTON, Ky. (AP) — A judge ordered four teen-agers to read classics and write book reports for their "incredibly dangerous" stunt of trying to jump over a moving car.

Police said the MTV show "Jackass" inspired the teens, but the cable music channel said it has never aired a stunt in which someone gets hit by a car. The boys, ages 16 and 17, maintained they were copying no one.

Kenton District Court Judge Martin Sheehan Wednesday ordered the Independence, Ky., boys to read 12 classics each and turn in a book report every two weeks. He said that for six months, the only television shows they may watch are nightly news programs.

They also must perform 50 to 100 hours of community service, and their drivers' licenses were suspended for a year.

On April 23, a 16-year-old boy broke his leg and ankle trying to jump over a car that his friend was driving, while another teen videotaped the action from the passenger's seat. A tape of the stunt aired on national television.

"What they did was stupid and incredibly dangerous," Sheehan said. "I felt like there should be a consequence for their action, but that it should be tempered because the boys didn't intend for anyone to get hurt."

If the boys don't meet the terms, they could be prosecuted on felony charges of wanton endangerment, punishable in adult court by up to five years in prison.

The stunt prompted Reebok International Inc. to pull a television commercial showing a pro basketball star leaping over an oncoming car.

On "Jackass," which airs late at night on MTV, Johnny Knoxville performs stunts in which he gets banged up in myriad ways. Several young people have been injured in the past few months trying to copy acts they saw on the show.

MTV runs a disclaimer, both orally and in print, at the beginning of each "Jackass" episode, telling viewers not to re-enact the show's stunts. MTV also says it does not accept tapes submitted by viewers who want to be on "Jackass."

Ex-FL — football league folding

Low ratings are partially to blame for the demise of the XFL.

By Howard Fendrich
 Associated Press

NEW YORK — X-it, stage left.

The XFL folded Thursday after one season that was a critical and TV ratings disappointment for the football league founded by the World Wrestling Federation and jointly owned by NBC.

The WWF said its share of after-tax losses will be about $35 million. NBC's loss should be similar. "Despite where our heart was, we just couldn't make it work from a financial standpoint," WWF Chairman Vince McMahon said. "We tried to figure out every conceivable way to make this work."

Even with many adjustments during the season, very little worked for the XFL between the much-hyped and well-rated season opener and the April 21 championship game, which was watched by about 75 percent fewer people than the debut on NBC.

The final game's national rating was a 2.1, tying for 93rd place among prime-time shows that week and lower than anything else on the four major networks. Each rating point represents a little more than 1 million TV homes.

"It was a risk we all thought was a smart one in this wildly escalating TV rights scene," said NBC Sports chairman Dick Ebersol, who had hoped to provide his network with football after it lost its NFL contract after the 1997 season.

NBC hoped to parlay McMahon's promotional skills to draw the young male viewers that advertisers crave and air games on Saturdays, which generally have poor TV ratings.

In the end, the XFL lasted two years fewer than another outdoor spring football league — the USFL, which started airing on ABC in 1983 and folded after three seasons.

"We knew it wasn't going to work (in prime time) from early March on," Ebersol said. "The launch worked, the people were there, and we didn't answer their expectations, I guess."

In addition to Saturday nights on NBC, XFL games were shown on UPN and TNN. McMahon indicated the death

Sports, media can get along

Because some of the folks who write opinion pieces for The Daily Iowan have already written self-indulgent finales, I figured, I might as well follow suit. Sort of.

For two years, I have gone to football and basketball games and received payment for writing what happened at them. Not a bad job for college; it beats working some of the other jobs that the budget cuts may eliminate in the future.

This is likely to be my last journalistic endeavor for a long time, because I do not know what my future holds, but I do know that working until midnight during the basketball season will not sit well with my future family. That is one of the biggest reasons why I am announcing my retirement.

The reason I am explaining my future is to establish that I have no pretext with what I am about to write. I am not writing from the standpoint of a journalist; rather, I am writing as an appreciator of sports who understands the relationships between athletics and the media.

And members of the sports media are not the enemy. For every Jim Gray, there are 10 other people whose careers are based on their respect for sports and their ability to write.

For whatever reason, an antagonism between athletes and writers exists in certain circumstances. Too often, an athlete will slip into sports-writer-speak when getting interviewed and come across as robotic, almost programmed into saying the same clichés because that is what they are conditioned to do.

The media are not entirely off the hook in this case. Some of my former colleagues are well-versed in taking comments out of context and molding them into stories that are not really there. So it is simply safer sometimes for the athlete to say something mundane.

But most stories about sports are not confrontational, and a good-working relationship between an athlete/coach and a reporter benefits everyone with a vested interest in the team or athlete. When athletes, coaches and reporters treat each other well, everyone benefits.

The team gets portrayed positively, which will ensure more loyal fan support, the reporter gets a better story, which will ensure praise from a superior, and the fan gets to read a more interesting story, which will ensure a more enjoyable 15 minutes reading the newspaper.

It is that simple, but all sides manage to bungle it up in their own way. A reporter performs an undesired hack job on a team or asks an inappropriate question that leads to increased tension between the team and the press. An athlete refuses to talk to the media after a loss, which leads to increased tension between the press and the team. The fans take the coach's word as gospel and hold the media in contempt for anything negative written about the team, regardless of truth.

Making matters worse for reporters covering Iowa is the inaccessibility of coaches and athletes. Reporters are

Penguins advance with 3-2 win

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — Darius Kasparaitis kept Mario Lemieux's Stanley Cup hopes alive.

Kasparaitis scored his first goal of the playoffs 13:01 into overtime, lifting the Pittsburgh Penguins to a 3-2 victory over the Buffalo Sabres in Game 7 Thursday night.

"The guy is not known for his offensive talent, but he made a great play," said Lemieux, the Penguins' owner who ended a 3 1/2-year retirement in December.

"I feel great, a little bit tired the last two or three games. We've got to regroup and get some rest and think about the next series."

The Penguins advanced to the Eastern Conference finals against the defending Stanley Cup champion Devils, in a series that begins at New Jersey on Saturday night.

The Devils eliminated Toronto with a 5-1 victory in Game 7 on Wednesday night.

Kasparaitis, a defenseman, scored only three goals in the regular season and had one assist in this year's playoffs before his game-winner.

"I was saying, 'Oh, no, it's Kasparaitis — oh, yes!'" forward Kevin Stevens said. "He can't score anywhere, that guy. It was a close series, but we have Kaspar."

Lemieux, already a Hall of Famer, has a chance to win the third Stanley Cup of his career.

The Penguins, who carried much of the play in the overtime session, finally capitalized on one of their many odd-man breaks.

Robert Lang carried the puck up the right wing and fed a pass to Kasparaitis, who ripped a shot from the top of the left circle that beat Buffalo goalie Dominik Hasek just inside the far post.

"I just joined the rush, and I don't really know what happened," Kasparaitis said. "I didn't know what happened after it was over. We were

Hawkeyes top Wisconsin in round two, 8-0

The Iowa softball team advances to play Michigan in the Big Ten Tournament.

By Melinda Mawdsley
 The Daily Iowan

Softball is just the easy part. With another academic year behind the members of the No. 15 Iowa softball team, the Hawkeyes can focus solely on their sport.

And if No. 2 seed Iowa's 8-0 win over No. 6 seed Wisconsin — shortened to six innings because of the mercy rule — to open the Big Ten Tournament

Thursday is any indication of the business they wish to take care of, opponents should take note.

"All we have to do is put our cleats on and play softball," senior Lisa Rasche said, as she enters her final postseason go-around. "I'm just playing for the love of the game."

On Thursday, she tattooed her affection on the arms of Wisconsin pitchers with two singles and four RBIs.

Rasche was one of six players who combined for 10 hits against the Badgers.

"I thought we did a great job

(Thursday)," Hawkeye coach Gayle Blevins said. "We got good quality at-bats all through the line-up and off the bench."

Iowa's offensive barrage began with junior Alicia Gerlach's two-out double that ignited a two-run rally in the first inning and ended with senior Katy Jendrzejewski's two-run double in the sixth inning that put runs seven and eight on the score board, ending the game early.

"We had great energy," said Gerlach, who went 2-2 from the plate and scored three runs. "Coming off a loss, we were eager to play, and we just kept them under pressure."

The defeat Gerlach made reference to was Iowa's final game of the regular season — a 2-1 loss to Northwestern that eliminated Hawkeye hopes for a repeat Big Ten regular-season championship.

However, the 2001 version of the Hawkeye softball team has a chance to do what no other Iowa team before them has accomplished — win a Big Ten Tournament title.

1955 — Mickey Mantle hit three home runs — two left-handed and one right-handed — as the Yankees beat the Detroit Tigers 5-2.

1958 — Teammates Willie Mays and Darryl Spencer each had four long hits apiece as San Francisco beat the Dodgers in Los Angeles 16-9. Mays had two homers, two triples, a single and four RBIs, and Spencer had two homers, a triple, a double and six RBIs for a combined 28 total bases.

1958 — Stan Musial got his 3,000th hit with a pinch-double off Chicago's Moe Drabowsky at Wrigley Field. The Cardinals won 5-3.

1980 — Ray Knight of Cincinnati hit two home runs in the fifth inning — including a grand slam — to lead the Reds to a 15-4 rout of the New York Mets.

1982 — The Chicago Cubs won game No. 8,000 in their history with a 5-0 victory over Houston at the Astrodome.

1989 — Kirby Puckett of the Minnesota Twins tied a major league record with four doubles against the Blue Jays. He became the 35th player to hit four doubles in a game, the first since Toronto's Damaso Garcia in 1986.

1993 — George Brett hit his 300th career home run in the sixth inning of Kansas City's 7-3 victory over Cleveland. Brett joined Hank Aaron, Stan Musial, Carl Yastrzemski, Willie Mays and Al Kaline as the only players with at least 3,000 hits and 300 homers.

1998 — The Atlanta Braves set an NL record and tied a major league mark by hitting home runs in 25 straight games, doing it when Ryan Klesko hit a two-run shot in the sixth inning against St. Louis.

Ankiel struggles in Cards win over Pittsburgh

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Another shaky outing from Rick Ankiel couldn't prevent the St. Louis Cardinals from completing a four-game sweep of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Pinch-hitter Edgar Renteria had a two-run, tiebreaking single in the sixth inning and Jim Edmonds homered and had two RBIs in an 11-5 victory Thursday.

Ankiel left in the top of the fourth trailing 3-2, but the Cardinals (18-15) twice rallied to go three games above .500 for the first time this year.

Ray Lankford added two hits and two RBI for St. Louis, which outscored Pittsburgh 32-9 and allowed only 17 hits in its first four-game sweep of the Pirates at home since Aug. 12-15, 1985. The Cardinals swept three games from the Pirates last Sept. 11-13 at Pittsburgh.

It's the third time this season the Pirates have lost four straight, and they dropped a season-worst and NL-worst nine games below .500 at 12-21.

The Pirates managed four hits each on Monday and Tuesday, got five on Wednesday and had four on Thursday.

Ankiel threw five pitches to the backstop, including his fourth and fifth wild pitches of the season, in a three-inning, 76-pitch outing. He was taken out after throwing two pitches to the screen against Pat Mearnes leading off the fourth, and left trailing 3-2.

Ankiel, 1-2 with a 7.13 ERA, threw eight-straight balls starting the third. He gave up a two-run double to pitcher Omar Olivares in the second and a sacrifice fly to Enrique Wilson in the third.

Giants 13, Expos 0
 SAN FRANCISCO — Kirk Rueter gave up six hits over eight innings and Jeff Kent had a two-run double in an eight-run sixth inning as the San Francisco Giants routed the Montreal Expos 13-0 on Thursday.

Rueter (4-3) had lost three of his last four starts and began the game with an 8.55 ERA. He struck out one and walked two.

Chad Zerbe retired the side in the ninth, completing the Giants' second shutout of the season.

Brewers 11, Cubs 1
 MILWAUKEE — Jeremy Burnitz hit three home runs to drive in six runs, and Devon White added a grand slam Thursday as the Milwaukee Brewers beat the Chicago Cubs 11-1.

Burnitz is the fifth pitcher this season — and the second Brewers slugger — to homer three times in one game.

The fans gave Burnitz a standing ovation after his third home run, a solo shot in the sixth inning. They remained on their feet, clapping and yelling for the slugger until he popped out of the dugout, waving. He didn't get another at-bat and a chance for a fourth homer.

Rockies 8, Mets 2
 DENVER — Neifi Perez, Ron Gant and Todd Helton hit solo homers in a four-run sixth inning Thursday, and the Colorado Rockies routed the New York Mets 8-2.

Shawn Chacon (1-1) got his first major league win, allowing one run — unearned — and four hits in eight innings. Chacon, who struck out five and walked one, lowered his ERA from 17.55 to 7.98. He had given up 13 earned runs in his previous two career starts.

Tigers 6, Rangers 5
 DETROIT — Tony Clark drove in four runs, including a go-ahead solo homer in the eighth, as the Detroit Tigers beat Texas 6-5 Thursday to sweep the Rangers for the second time in a week.

Alex Rodriguez's throwing error allowed Detroit's first run to score and he struck out with a runner on to end the game, the Tigers' 10th victory in 13 outings.

Detroit's 3-2 victory over Texas on Wednesday ended with Rodriguez hitting into a double play with two men on.

The Rangers (12-22) have lost five straight games and 10 of 11. Their 12-22 record is their worst through 34 games since a 10-24 start in 1985, and tied their third-worst start ever.

Padres 6, Braves 5
 SAN DIEGO — Wiki Gonzalez's three-run home run capped the five-run sixth inning and the San Diego Padres rallied against Tom Glavine to beat the Atlanta Braves 6-5 on Thursday.

The Padres, who trailed 5-1 after 4 1/2 innings, took two of three from the Braves and have won 10 of 13.

San Diego had just six hits, scoring all of its runs on three homers. Mike Colangelo hit his first career homer, a two-run shot off Glavine in the sixth, and Bubba Trammell a solo shot in the second.

Gonzalez homered to left-center on the second pitch from Mike Remlinger (1-1), who relieved Glavine with two on and the Braves leading 5-3 with one out in the sixth.

Devil Rays release Castilla
 ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Vinny Castilla was placed on unconditional release waivers Thursday by the Tampa Bay Devil Rays, two days after the third baseman was taken out of a game for not advancing a runner.

"It was the right time," Tampa Bay general manager Chuck LaMar said. "I think he feels that in his mind, and we feel it in ours."

Castilla, who asked to be traded or released last month after being benched, was hitting .215 with two homers and nine RBI. Castilla, who was acquired in a trade with the Colorado Rockies in December 1999, was pulled from Tuesday's game after failing to advance a runner on second and no outs.

"Things just didn't work out for me here," Castilla said. "I couldn't get it going. Nobody is happy when you are released... maybe somewhere else things will work out."

LaMar said Castilla had "nil" trade value. Should another team sign Castilla, who will clear waivers Monday, the Devil Rays would be responsible for all but about $100,000 of Castilla's $7.25 million salary.

North Carolina's Forte turning pro
 CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — North Carolina All-American guard Joseph Forte will announce he's leaving the Tar Heels for the NBA on Friday, a university official said.

Forte was expected to make the official announcement after finishing an exam Friday morning, the official said on condition of anonymity.

Forte joins a long list of North Carolina players to leave school early for the NBA since Michael Jordan did it after his junior year in 1984. The list includes Jerry Stackhouse, Rasheed Wallace, Vince Carter, Antawn Jamison, Jeff McInnis and J.R. Reid, all of whom are still in the NBA.

Forte, a 6-foot-4, 185-pound sophomore, averaged 21.6 points, 6.0 rebounds, 3.6 assists and 2.0 steals this season. North Carolina finished 26-7 and was upset by Penn State in the second round of the NCAA tournament.

Forte was third behind Duke's Shane Battier and Jason Williams in voting for both the Associated Press All-American team and the Wooden Award, which is given to the national player of the year.

Underclassmen must apply to the NBA by Sunday to be eligible for the league's June 27 draft. Underclassmen can withdraw from the draft by June 20 if they don't sign with an agent.

Texas guard Maurice Evans to test draft
 AUSTIN — Texas guard Maurice Evans has declared for the June NBA Draft but said he'll likely stay in school if he's not projected as a first-round pick.

"I don't know what my chances are. That's what I'm curious to see by doing this," Evans said Wednesday. "Basically, I just want to see where I stand."

Evans said he has not signed with an agent.

The 6-foot-5 junior led Texas last season with 15.6 points per game.

Underclassmen who have not signed with an agent have until June 20, a week before the draft, to withdraw their names. Evans loses his final year of eligibility if he signs with an agent.

Solid return to Tour for Tiger

■ Tiger Woods shoots a 66, four strokes behind the leader, Scott Verplank.

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

IRVING, Texas — Tiger Woods returned to the PGA Tour with a 66 despite his first double bogey in 117 holes. Scott Verplank returned home with far less fanfare and had a little more to celebrate Thursday in the Byron Nelson Classic.

Verplank, who grew up in Dallas and developed his game in the hot Texas wind, was bogey-free in blustery conditions and matched the best score of his career with an 8-under 62 that gave him a two-stroke lead.

Masters runner-up David Duval, Chris Riley and Tim Herron were at 64.

No Dallas-born player has ever won this tournament, and Verplank had plenty of family and friends following him around the Cottonwood Valley course.

That was nothing compared with the throng that followed Woods in his first tournament since his historic victory in the Masters, which made him the first player to hold all four professional majors at the same time.

Woods didn't disappoint anyone, following up disaster and disgust on No. 8 with enough good iron shots and timely putts to carve out a 66 at Cottonwood Valley, which played nearly two strokes easier than the TPC at Las Colinas.

Tiger Woods points as his ball goes into the trees off the eighth tee Thursday.

"When you take that much time off, generally you don't have your touch; your short game is usually the last thing to come back," Woods said. "But I rolled it pretty good."

So did Verplank, who had only 23 putts.

Still, his biggest shot came on the 400-yard 7th after Verplank got too aggressive and wound up in a bunker with not much green between him and the hole.

"One of the few bad shots I hit today," Verplank said. "I was a little concerned whether or not I could even get it up-and-down, and I hit a nice shot and got lucky and it went in."

After turning a likely bogey into an improbable birdie, Verplank was on his way. He holed two more birdie putts over 20 feet, and hit a 6-iron on the par-3 17th to about 8 feet to wrap up his 62.

The score matched the one he had in the second round of the 1990 Greater Milwaukee Open (10 under), and was the second lowest score at the Nelson Classic.

The bunker shot was a big break, but so was the venue.

Vijay Singh was headed to the practice range after his 3-under 67, looking far from pleased until he was told that was the best score yet on the TPC at Las Colinas.

Penn State re-signs coach Jerry Dunn

■ After going to the Sweet 16, Dunn signs five-year contract with the Nittany Lions.

Associated Press

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Penn State men's basketball coach Jerry Dunn has signed a new five-year contract after guiding the Nittany Lions to their first NCAA Tournament bid since 1996 and an upset over top-seeded North Carolina in the South regional quarterfinals.

Dunn's agreement, the terms of which were not announced, ends speculation that the school would squander its recent postseason fame. The school already lost starter Jon Crispin — who had seemed the future of the team after the graduation of his brother, star Joe Crispin.

"Penn State always has been a special place," Dunn said in a statement released Thursday. "My family and I are extremely pleased by the opportunity to continue building on the basketball foundation and success that has been established."

Dunn, 47, led Penn State to a 21-12 record last season and has compiled a 103-79 record in six seasons as head coach. He joined Penn State in 1983, serving as assistant coach for 12 years before Bruce Parkhill unexpectedly resigned in 1995.

Last season, Penn State finished a disappointing sixth in the Big Ten Conference, but upset second-ranked Michigan State in the Big Ten Tournament quarterfinals. The Nittany Lions then surprised North Carolina in the NCAA Tournament, before losing to Temple in the South regional semifinals.

Under Dunn, Penn State reached the NCAA Tournament in 1996 and the NIT in 1998 and 2000. In the 1998 NIT final, Penn State lost to Minnesota, but the Gophers have since been forced to vacate the victory under NCAA sanctions.

Ecuador's coach says he won't quit national team after shooting

■ Hernan Gomez elects to stay with the team after being shot in the leg.

Associated Press

QUITO, Ecuador — The coach of Ecuador's national soccer team, shot in a leg during an argument earlier this week, intends to stay on the job.

"I love my boys a lot. I want to be with them and continue with the hope of a World (Cup)" Hernan Gomez said Thursday during a television interview with Ecuador's channel 10.

Gomez, a native of Colombia, was shot during a conflict with men who blamed him for excluding the former president's son from a youth squad.

"I don't want to leave this country, especially now that I have the support of the people," Gomez said.

The announcement came as some five thousand fans, referring to Gomez by his nickname, marched to the Government Palace in Quito, chanting "Bolillo, don't go!" and "Bolillo, in Ecuador's heart!"

"We all have the same heart's desire that the national team qualifies," President Gustavo Noboa said.

Ecuador is third in South American qualifying, with the top four teams advancing to next year's World Cup in Japan and South Korea. The No. 5 team goes to a playoff.

Witnesses said Gomez was shot in a restaurant at the Hilton Colon hotel in the coastal city of Guayaquil during an argument with Joselo Rodriguez, president of the second division Santa Rita soccer club.

Rahman may fight Tyson next

■ The WBC rules against a Rahman-Lewis rematch

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The WBC will not sanction an immediate rematch between Hasim Rahman and Lennox Lewis as a heavyweight championship fight.

Mike Tyson has dropped a suit he filed in Manhattan on May 4 against the WBC to make it enforce its rule against immediate rematches.

The WBC's decision also prevents Lewis from winning the WBC title should he fight Rahman next.

The decision was the result of Tyson dropping his suit, and it was filed in a stipulation in U.S. District Court in Manhattan on Thursday.

"I am grateful that the WBC is standing by its rules by not sanctioning an immediate rematch between Mr. Rahman and Mr. Lewis," Tyson said in a statement on the WBC's decision Thursday.

The WBC decision does not prevent a rematch, however, and if Rahman wins, he would still be champion. If Lewis wins, the title would be declared vacant and the two highest available contenders would fight for the championship. Tyson is ranked No. 1 by the WBC.

"I think it makes it a little more appetizing," said Shelly Finkel, Tyson's adviser who is trying to arrange a Rahman-Tyson match.

Reached at a hotel in Paris, WBC President Jose Sulaiman said his lawyers had urged him not to go into details because of the Tyson suit.

"The only thing I can tell you is that we were sued. The WBC, we will just respect what the rules state," he said. "We will just respect what the courts of law rule."

Dale F. Kinsella, an attorney for Tyson, said he spoke late Thursday afternoon to WBC attorney Gabriel I. Penagaricano, "who confirmed that Mr. Sulaiman had authorized this settlement yesterday and specifically confirmed the rule interpretation that Mr. Tyson urged upon the court."

"The action has now been dismissed in federal court, based upon the settlement," Kinsella said.

Rahman also won the IBF title when he knocked out Lewis in the fifth round on April 22 in South Africa.

David Tua, the top-ranked IBF contender, sued that organization in U.S. District Court in Newark, N.J., to force it to uphold its ruling that no championship contest shall contain an agreement for a rematch and that any violation of the regulation would make the title vacant.

There was a rematch clause in the Lewis-Rahman contract for the April fight. Lewis wants that contract enforced, but it is possible he could end up fighting for no title at all if there is an immediate rematch.

In getting Tyson to drop his suit, the WBC "announced, and hereby reaffirms, that in the event Rahman's next bout is against Lewis and Rahman loses such bout, the WBC shall, pursuant to WBC Rule 1.23(a), declare the WBC World Heavyweight Championship Title to be vacant, and shall put into effect WBC Rule 1.24 for the purpose of filling the vacancy," according to the stipulation.

That rule would set up a fight between Tyson and the next highest available contender.

HBO, which has a contract with Lewis, has offered Rahman a multimillion-dollar purse and a rich multiple-fight deal for a rematch. Showtime, which has a contract with Tyson, has offered Rahman similar conditions to fight the former undisputed heavyweight champion.

Tua is promoted by America Presents, which has one fight left on a promotional deal with Tyson.

SPORTS BRIEF

Devil Rays release Castilla

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Vinny Castilla finally got his wish.

The Tampa Bay Devil Rays released the third baseman on Thursday, two days after Castilla was benched for not advancing a baserunner.

"It was the right time," Tampa Bay general manager Chuck LaMar said. "I think he feels that in his mind, and we feel it in ours. I think it got to a point where Vinny wanted out of here and wanted a clean slate."

Castilla, who asked to be traded or released last month after being benched, was hitting .215 with two homers and nine RBIs.

Castilla, who was acquired in a trade with the Colorado Rockies in December 1999, was pulled from Tuesday's game after failing to advance a runner on second and no outs.

"Things just didn't work out for me here," Castilla said. "I couldn't get it going. I tried, and it just didn't happen here."

Iverson's night one for ages

■ Allen Iverson's teammates are amazed by his 54-point output against Toronto.

By Rob Maaddi
Associated Press

PHILADELPHIA — Allen Iverson slashed his spindly body through traffic, hurled himself into the lane, and tantalized helpless defenders with rainbow jumpers.

He toyed with Chris Childs on one play, jab-stepping and faking, before unleashing a 22-footer that beat the first-half buzzer and left the Raptors guard wondering which direction was the locker room.

The smallest player on the court — generously listed at 6-foot and 165 pounds — scored a career-high 54 points in an incredible display of penetrating drives and long-range shooting.

Iverson's performance Wednesday night tied for the fifth-highest in NBA playoff history, turned some of his teammates into cheerleaders. It electrified the fans and mesmerized a national audience.

Most importantly, Iverson single-handedly led the Philadelphia 76ers to a 97-92 Game 2 victory over Toronto that evened the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinals.

"I was watching a lot, watching and amazed," 76ers point guard Eric Snow said Thursday. "If anybody in that arena didn't believe I was giving him the ball, I don't think they know anything about basketball. If a guy is filling it like that, why would you go to anything else?"

Only five players had more points in a playoff game — Michael Jordan, Wilt Chamberlain, Elgin Baylor, Charles Barkley and Rick Barry. None was smaller than 6-foot-5.

But Iverson does it with lightning-fast quickness, boundless energy and an unyielding desire to win.

"I always feel the only person who can stop me is myself," Iverson said after shooting 21-of-39 from the field and 9-for-9 from the foul line.

On a night when the rest of the Sixers shot 13-of-40, Iverson just wouldn't let his team lose, wouldn't allow a dream season to slip away, wouldn't let down a sellout crowd of 20,870 frenzied fans that chanted "MVP, MVP," for half the game.

The NBA's scoring champion helped the Sixers overcome a 14-point deficit by scoring 20 points in the second quarter. Then, with the game on the line, he took control in the fourth, scoring 19 straight points for the Sixers before George Lynch got the last point of the game on a free throw.

Iverson nailed a 3-pointer with 8:52 left, beginning his run.

Payton's brother helps make history

■ Walter Payton's brother, Eddie brings Jackson State's golf team into national prominence.

By John Porretto
Associated Press

JACKSON, Miss. — For years, the names Payton and Jackson State University made people think of football.

And for good reason. The late Walter Payton was a star at JSU in the early 1970s before moving on to the NFL and becoming the league's career rushing leader.

These days, Jackson State and the Payton name are getting attention for another sport.

Eddie Payton, Walter's older brother, has built a top golf program at Jackson State and brought national prominence to his men's and women's teams.

On Thursday, the Lady Tigers made history when they teed off in the NCAA East Regional in Chapel Hill, N.C. — the first women's team from a historically black college to advance to the regional championships.

The men's team, which has won the Southwestern Athletic Conference championship the past 13 years, will make its third appearance in the regionals next week in Stillwater, Okla. Like the women, JSU became the first traditionally black school to play in the NCAAs when it qualified in 1996.

"Making the NCAAs was historic, but our goal is winning the championship," said Payton, who also played in the NFL. "We have dreams and aspirations of competing and winning. That's why we're here."

Payton took over as golf coach at his alma mater in 1986, two years after retiring from pro football. His knowledge and love of the game date back to his childhood in Columbia, Miss., where his mother worked at the local country club.

Blacks weren't allowed to play at the course, but Payton became a caddy at age 10 and continued through high school.

"I learned the etiquette — both good and bad," he said. "From there, I just developed a love and curiosity of the game."

In high school, Payton's athletic focus was on football, baseball, basketball and track, but he played golf a little in the summer and showed early talent.

"I couldn't understand the big deal about breaking 100," he said. "The first 18 holes I ever played — I had to drive 37 miles to Hattiesburg to a municipal course — I shot 86. After that, it was just downhill."

Like a lot of NFL players, Payton often found time to squeeze in 18 holes. He also enjoyed an occasional round with his famous brother, who died in 1999 of bile-duct cancer.

"Walter loved it," said the 49-year-old Payton. "He could hit it a mile — with every club. We had a lot of fun together."

Payton admits he was a little overwhelmed when he took over JSU's golf program.

Trinidad wants to win for mothers

■ Felix Trinidad is trying to be the first welterweight to win the middleweight title in 10 years.

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Felix Trinidad Jr. plans to send Mother's Day greetings with boxing gloves Saturday night.

"This fight is special because it will be my third title in three weight divisions," said the 28-year-old Puerto Rican, who will challenge WBA middleweight champion William Joppy at Madison Square Garden.

"It's also special because at 12 o'clock (midnight) it will be Mother's Day," Trinidad said. "I want to dedicate this fight to all the Puerto Rican mothers on the island and in New York City and all the Puerto Rican mothers in the world."

Trinidad and his wife, Sharon, have two small daughters. They live in Monte Hiedra, Puerto Rico.

A victory would cap a big three days for Trinidad, 39-0 with 32 knockouts, and make him the first former welterweight champion to become a middleweight champion since Roberto Duran in 1989.

On Thursday night, Trinidad was honored as Fighter of the Year for 2000 at the annual dinner of the Boxing Writers Association of America. His father was honored as manager and trainer of the year.

The former IBF and WBC welterweight champion won his award by scoring a one-sided decision over David Reid for the WBA super welterweight title on March 3 and by stopping Fernando Vargas in the 12th round for the IBF's 154-pound title Dec. 2.

Reid, 26 at the time, was in his 15th pro fight. Vargas was five days short of his 23rd birthday and was in his 21st fight.

"They've really put him on a pedestal since he went to the 154-pound division and beat David Reid and Fernando Vargas," said the 30-year-old Joppy of Silver Spring, Md. "Those guys were kids. Saturday night, he's dealing with a full-grown man."

Joppy has a 32-1-1 record, with 24 knockouts. He lost the WBA title on a 12-round decision to Julio Cesar Green of the Dominican Republic on Aug. 23 at the Garden. But a lot of ringsiders thought Joppy won.

"If this fight goes the distance and it's close, they'll give it to Trinidad, you know that," said Joppy, well aware that he will be fighting before a big pro-Trinidad crowd. "But I'm not going into the fight looking for a knockout. I'm going to be smart about it. Pick my shots."

Trinidad said Thursday that Joppy doesn't have to worry about losing a decision.

"I like the taste of knockout," he said. "In what round I cannot tell you, but the fight will be decided by a knockout."

The winner will fight for the undisputed middleweight title against Bernard Hopkins on Sept. 15 in the Garden. Hopkins defended the IBF title and won the WBA title on points over Keith Holmes on April 14 in the Theater at the Garden.

Saturday's pay-per-view match, which will start about 11:30 p.m. EDT, is just another step on a road mapped out by the Trinidads after the WBC welterweight title victory over Oscar De La Hoya on Sept. 18, 1999.

"We decided Felix should be moving up to fight junior middleweight, middleweight and then fight (undisputed light heavyweight champion) Roy Jones Jr.," the father said. "We are positive we can do this."

The father even said he believes the son can fight and win at 200 pounds. The son said nothing.

Before the final news conference Wednesday, Trinidad said he weighs a couple of pounds over the 160-pound middleweight limit, which is 13 pounds above the welterweight limit.

"I was not slaving in the welterweight division because I trained," he said, "But my body has asked me to go up to junior middleweight and now to middleweight. I feel better as a middleweight."

Joppy is a natural middleweight

The official weigh-in will be today.

They've really put him on a pedestal since he went to the 154-pound division and beat David Reid and Fernando Vargas. Those guys were kids. Saturday night, he's dealing with a full-grown man

Charlotte gets first win over Milwaukee

■ Jamaal Mashburn scored 36 to pace the Hornets.

By Jenna Fryer
Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — The Charlotte Hornets finally found their spark — and figured out how to slow Ray Allen — just in time to climb back into their playoff series against the Milwaukee Bucks.

Jamaal Mashburn scored a career-playoff high 36 points, and the Hornets held Allen to just six points in the second half in a 102-92 win over the Bucks in Game 3 of the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal series Thursday night.

Milwaukee still has a 2-1 lead in the series, but the victory showed that the Hornets, who were listless in the first two games, aren't going down without a fight. Game 4 is May 13 in Charlotte.

The Hornets were much more aggressive than they had been in the first two games, especially on the glass and in their drives to the basket. They outrebounded Milwaukee, 57-35, and scored 44 points in the paint.

And after falling into deep holes in the first two games, the Hornets stayed even with the Bucks until the second half. Then Charlotte shut down Allen and slowly pulled away.

Allen, who averaged 27 in the first two games, finished with 20 points on 7-of-18 shooting.

Mashburn, whose previous high in a playoff game was 29, finished 3-for-5 from 3-point range.

P.J. Brown had a career-playoff high 16 rebounds and Elden Campbell scored 17.

Mashburn twice hit consecutive turnaround jumpers to give the Hornets a 96-87 lead with 2:20 to play.

But the Bucks came back, getting a 3-pointer from Tim Thomas that made it 96-90. Thomas had a chance to cut the lead when he stole the ball from Mashburn and was fouled attempting to dunk.

But Thomas missed both free throws, and Charlotte got the rebound and made it 98-90 on a pair of free throws by Brown at the other end.

Allen finally hit a jumper to cut it to 98-92, but the Hornets answered with a slam dunk by Eddie Robinson that made it 100-92 with 42 seconds to play.

Glenn Robinson led Milwaukee with 23 points, Scott Williams had 13 points and 10 rebounds.

David Wesley scored 16 for Charlotte.

Baron Davis, who averaged 20.3 points in the first round of the playoffs but tailed off against Milwaukee and was held without a field goal in Game 2, got off to another slow start. He missed his first four shots and his first four free throws and had only two points at the half.

But Davis snapped out of his scoring slump near the end of the third quarter, scoring six of Charlotte's points in a 10-0 run. And he got more aggressive, lunging for a steal off Robinson and converting it into a fast-break two-handed dunk that ignited the Hornets.

The Bucks had a 10-point lead with 2:47 to play in the first half, but the Hornets closed the period with an 11-1 run.

Magloire was fouled on a slam dunk with 6.7 seconds left in the period but missed the free throw. Mashburn got the rebound and kicked the ball out to Wesley, who hit a 3-pointer that tied the game at 51 at halftime.

Charlotte then slowly built a lead in the third quarter while Milwaukee's big men got into foul trouble, allowing the Hornets to dominate the boards.

A crucial sequence came with 5:33 to play in the third when Campbell and Williams were called for double fouls for shoving each other. It was Williams' fifth foul, sending him to the bench with Milwaukee trailing, 62-60.

Iowa Rowers hoping for first NCAA bid

■ The Hawkeyes are competing at the Lexus Central Regional Championships.

By Julie Matolo
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's rowing team heads to the fourth Lexus Central Regional Championships on Saturday and on May 13, hoping to qualify for one last race on May 25-27.

Strong races this weekend could lead to the first-ever Hawkeye rowing team appearance in the NCAA Championships, which are in two weeks.

"It is a very fun regatta that is one of my favorites," said Iowa coach Mandi Kowal. "Hopefully, if we race well this weekend, we can get to the NCAA Championships, which would be an excellent accomplishment."

The Hawkeyes have had two individual boats at the NCAA Championships when their First Varsity 4 boat qualified individually in 1997 and again in 1998.

Iowa enters this weekend's competition, which will be hosted by the University of Tennessee, ranked third out of 18 teams. The Hawkeyes have done line-up shuffles, while Kowal has spent the last two weeks focusing on one-on-one boat practices in preparation for optimal performance this weekend.

"It should be fun because this is the biggest Central Regional Competition that we've had," she said. "It is very exciting, because there will be great competition. I love the sight of this competition, and the weather usually cooperates."

The 2,000-meter course is located on the Melton Hill Lake. Since 1997, the location has been the site of the regional meet because of its geographically centralized location and its recognition as one of the nation's best courses.

Iowa has enjoyed a week off from competition, after finishing fifth at the Big Ten Championships two weeks ago. Practices have shown signs leading to a successful meet this weekend.

"It seems like it has been so long since the Big Ten Championships," Kowal said. "We are very ready to go out and race again."

Kasparaitis ran a few steps before diving and sliding face first from center ice to the opposite blue line, where he was mobbed by his teammates.

The Sabres sat stunned on their bench, awaiting the official announcement of the goal. After shaking hands with the Penguins, the dejected Buffalo players headed off the ice.

Lang, who tied it 2-2 with nine minutes left in regulation, and Martin Straka had a goal and assist for the Penguins, who reached the conference finals for the fourth time in team history.

Andrew Ference also scored for the Penguins, and captain

Jaromir Jagr had three assists.

Jagr was challenged by Lemieux, also the Penguins' owner, to pick up his play in this series. A loss could have ended Jagr's career in Pittsburgh, as the Penguins might not be able to afford his salary.

tournament in 1995, Iowa has made the finals four times. Four times it has fallen to Michigan, including last season's 1-0 defeat in Coralville.

"Winning the tournament would be a great honor," Gerlach said. "That's our goal. That's what we are shooting for."

A Big Ten Tournament win would most likely ensure Iowa the chance to host the regional rounds of the NCAA Tournament, which will begin on May 17 and mark the first step towards the ultimate destination of the College World Series.

The Hawkeyes have not been to the World Series since 1997.

However, Iowa's focus will remain in Ann Arbor, Mich., for the remainder of the weekend. Today, the Hawkeyes take the field against No. 1 seed Michigan at 1:30 p.m. The game can be heard on KXIC-AM 800.

Iowa defeated the Wolverines twice during the regular season on the same Alumni Field it plays on today. Should the Hawkeyes lose, they would still be alive in the double-elimination tournament but would be forced to come through the elimination rounds.

Should Iowa emerge victorious, it would be guaranteed a spot in the championship game at 1:30 p.m. CST Saturday.

Thomas was off to a slow start before injury

with it. It's not the first time I've had disappointment. I've got to continue to overcome."

The 32-year-old Thomas will have surgery next week. He hurt his triceps diving for a ground ball against Seattle on April 27, when he was making a rare appearance at first base.

Thomas has not played since he was hurt; he returned to the team Wednesday after spending five days in Columbus, Ga., following the death of his father.

Thomas took batting practice Wednesday and an hour later his arm was swollen.

"The MRI done this morning showed a conclusive tear, although the size and the severity will only be determined and repaired by exploratory surgery," trainer Herm Schneider said. "The first MRI done the night of the injury did not show the damage as clearly or as definitively as today's because of trauma in the area. We expect this to be season-ending."

Thomas, a two-time American League MVP, played in 20 games this season, hitting with four homers and 10 RBIs.

His slow start followed a big 2000 season when he batted .328 with 43 homers and 143 RBIs, bouncing back from two sub-par years full of personal problems, including a divorce and the death of his agent, Robert Fraley, in a plane crash.

Schneider and Thomas said they were both confident he could return next season and be an effective player again.

"What I've heard is that this injury is similar to an Achilles, and it will take time to heal. I think they're saying seven or eight months," Thomas said.

Last week, teammate David Wells criticized Thomas for not playing hurt. "We talked a couple of times. Like I said, losing my father last week I wasn't hearing anything. It didn't bother me, just empty words," Thomas said of Wells' criticism.

"This time he was wrong, and he knew he was wrong. There are no hard feelings."

Changes didn't help in keeping league alive

blow for the fledgling league was that no deal could be struck with those secondary broadcasters.

The XFL, though, didn't seem to be able to decide whether it wanted to be more about sport or spectacle.

Early games had lascivious cheerleader shots, anti-NFL bluster from WWF types, sophomoric double entendres and screaming announcers — including Minnesota Gov. Jesse Ventura, a former WWF wrestler — who sounded more like skills than analysts.

By the end, most of that nonsense was gone.

The XFL even changed the on-field rules to speed up games after a double-overtime contest in Week 2 delayed "Saturday Night Live." Other rules changes came as late as the playoffs, and tinkering with the production side never ceased.

J.K. McKay, the general manager of the first and only XFL champion Los Angeles Xtreme, said the demise came as a surprise, especially because the league held meetings just a week ago in Connecticut.

"I feel very badly," McKay said. "It's been a lot of fun. We took a lot of heat in the media. We tried to put a good product on the field and allow people to come to football games who never could have afforded to."

Although the quality of the football might have improved during the season, it was telling that the league's MVP, Tommy Maddox, threw more than twice as many interceptions as touchdowns during a brief NFL career.

NFL spokesman Greg Aiello said the league would have no comment — a position the NFL maintained throughout the XFL's existence.

At stadiums, the eight-team league said it sold about 1 million tickets, but the championship game drew a crowd of only 24,153 to the 90,000-seat Los Angeles Coliseum.

But the television viewership plummeted after a promising Week 1, prompting the league to give away about 30 percent of its ad inventory for free to sponsors whose commercials weren't reaching as many viewers as they had been promised.

More player access would make better stories

allowed to talk to athletes and coaches at designated 15-minute increments of time once a week during the season and briefly after games. This is not enough time to facilitate trust between athletes and media. This is not enough time to get compelling interviews that lead to compelling stories for fans to read.

Sure, Mike, bitch some more. Let this self-indulgent rant masked as commentary on sports media stop. Let some personal vendetta you have against someone in authority cease. You sound juvenile.

No, not at all, Fan Skeptical. You are the loser in this whole ordeal. The stories you read do not have the sheer humanity that makes sportswriting good. When you feel like you know something personal about the players, the affinity toward them is greater when you see their heroics on the field or on the court. You like this team better because I have more access to them.

Yeah, but what about the scums of your profession who are out to get them?

First of all Fan Skeptical, if the teams are not doing anything wrong, there is nothing to hide. Also, it is Iowa, and if a reporter wanted to stir up controversy, the fans would blame the reporter. Just ask Mike Hlas, the Cedar Rapids Gazette columnist who drew the ire of Steve Alford in March, when Hlas asked him a non-threatening question about Indiana basketball.

Judging by the Letters to the Editor the Gazette printed, fans were far more supportive of Alford than Hlas. No reporters who like their jobs or their access (however limited) to Iowa athletics would insinuate something without using extreme caution.

So there is very little reason that athletes, coaches and members of the media cannot coexist nicely, because it is easier on everyone who cares about the team when they do.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don't forget about your lover; otherwise, deception and arguments will develop. Be accommodating. A night out on the town should keep the relationship harmonious.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your desire to travel will lead to your travel agent. Your second alternative should be attending cultural events that have a foreign flavor. Try to do something that will include the whole family.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You should be open to new people in your life and new adventures. Don't let old faces discourage you. You must seize the opportunity while it's there.
CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can expect your mate to be more attentive today. Be ready to reciprocate with equal affection, and your relationship will be passionate, stable and lasting. It's time to make future plans.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You will be surprised at just how successful you can be. Go for the gold, and don't let others stand in your way. You might want to look into a small-business venture of your own.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't let situations get out of hand. Make sure you have all the pertinent facts before you take action. False information from someone trying to start problems should be expected.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Friends will bring opportunities. Don't hesitate to ask for advice or favors. New love interests will surface if you get involved in groups. Your charm will entice possible mates.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may want to take special care of your luggage if you are traveling today. You will find yourself in a romantic situation. Be careful not to come on too strong.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Put some of your innovative ideas into your work. Changes are necessary to improve efficiency. Love interests will develop through work. Be discreet to avoid rumors.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Keep busy. Don't allow others to depress you or lower your self-esteem. You need encouragement from your emotional partner, not criticism.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): This will not be the best time to deal with authority figures. You will incur difficulties while dealing with institutions or government agencies. Patience will pay off.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You'll be drawn to group endeavors. Be careful not to let others cost you. Involvement in children's groups will certainly be an eye-opener. You should volunteer for fund-raising events.

The Ledge

This year's memorable moments

- That time you didn't vote in the presidential election. I mean, it wasn't like the entire race was going to be decided by just a few hundred votes or something.
- That time you got drunk, announced, "Omigod, I'm so drunk!" then screamed obscenities, spilled your beer down someone's pants, and fell to the floor. Yeah, that was pretty cool.
- Or so you heard.
- The bikini contest for which you worked so hard to enter and that your parents supported so adamantly, along with the hundreds of slobbering men who "appreciated" your talent.
- That enchanted evening at the Fieldhouse when the soft glow of the lights, the exotic rhythms of Jay-Z, and the 2-for-1 drinks stoked flames of passion from deep within your soul.
- The time when you re-joined the bandwagon long enough to watch both Hawkeye basketball teams win Big Ten Tournament titles.
- The time you re-joined class long enough to reassure your professor that you had not been abducted and sold into slavery in El Salvador (although that served so well as an excuse when the midterm came up).
- That time you found a parking spot.

MASKED DROPOUT by Bob Hewitt

IT'S OVER... I'VE BEEN DUMPED!
 IT MAY SOUND CORNY, BUT THIS GIRL WAS SPECIAL!
 I CAN'T STOP THINKING ABOUT HER... THINKING ABOUT THE LOVE WE SHARED!!
 HEY, NICE BOO-TAY!
 I'M SORRY...
 WHAT WAS I SAYING?
