UI apparel-licensee companies and what they produce

Vision Embroidery	jackets, windsuits
RUSSELL ATHLETIC	assorted apparel
Jostens	diplomas, class rings, announcements, awards
Nike	assorted apparel
Imagewear	headwear, fleece embroidery, jackets, knits

These five companies will be given additional language to the UI Code of Conduct to "clarify" the code and given 10 more days to sign before their contracts are canceled. Here are the additions to each company's contract:

- company acknowledges the code and "confirms a shared commitment to improve working conditions."
- Additional for Nike, VF Imagewear, and VESI:
 - these companies' practice of using up to 60-hour work weeks will be treated as "substantial compliance" to the code. Otherwise, the UI code limits work weeks to 48 hours with no mandatory overtime.
 - Additional for Russell and Jostens:
 - monitors will be able to conduct announced and unannounced checks as long as the companies have "notice sufficient to permit its regional manager to be on site to facilitate access and to debrief the monitoring team."

Panel: Extend sweatshop deadline

The UI should give Nike and four other licensees 10 more days, officials say.

By Gian Sachdev
The Daily Iowan

UI officials Thursday recommended that Nike and four other apparel companies be given 10 more days to sign the university's License Code of Conduct before facing termination of their contracts with the school.

In addition, the recommendation would revise the code to allow Nike, Vision Embroidery, and VF Imagewear to use 60-hour workweeks and would cancel the university's contract with Haddad/Apparel Mighty Mac.

A five-member advisory committee outlined the recommendations in a letter to university President Mary Sue Coleman, who was out of town Thursday. She will make a decision by early next week.

Today was the original deadline for the six licensees — the only companies of the university's 384 licensees not to agree to the code — to sign or request additional information, according to a letter sent last month.

Haddad, the children's apparel company, failed to respond and therefore should be terminated, according to the recommendation.

The committee recommended that the university make additional contract clarifications for Nike, Russell Athletics, VF Imagewear Inc., Jostens Inc., and VESI Inc. The panel met with a representative from Nike and corresponded with other company officials during the last month.

"The addenda were in response to the issues of concern raised by the companies towards our Code of Conduct," said Dan Teets, the chairman of the advisory group.

Clarifying provisions in all of the addenda of the Code of Conduct will ask the licensees for a "shared commitment" with the university to improve working conditions in the licensees' factories.

New clarifications for Nike, VF Imagewear, Jostens, and Vision Embroidery state that "although committed in principle to requiring wages sufficient to meet the basic needs of workers," the companies would

Allies spar with Bush on global warming

The Swedish leader tells the president that he is pushing the wrong policies on the environment.

By Ron Fournier
Associated Press

GÖTEBORG, Sweden — President Bush sparred Thursday with European leaders over climate change, unwavering in his opposition to a global-warming treaty. Sweden's prime minister accused Bush of pursuing "wrong policies" that endanger the environment.

Emotions ran high in this quaint seacoast city, as thousands of demonstrators hurled bottles and cobblestones to protest globalization, the European Union, and Bush policies. Police arrested more than 200 as the president met with EU leaders at the midpoint of his first overseas trip.

At the meeting behind metal barricades, Bush sought to minimize differences with EU Commission President Romano Prodi and Swedish Prime Minister Goeran Persson, whose nation holds the organization's rotating presidency.

"We don't agree on the Kyoto Treaty, but we do agree that climate change is a serious issue, and we must work together," Bush said at a news conference with Prodi and Persson. It was the second day of U.S.-European discord after a breach among NATO allies Wednesday over Bush's plans for a missile-defense system.

On global warming, Bush dismayed governments and environmentalists worldwide when he announced in March that he was abandoning the

By a wide margin, Senate passes education bill

The passage follows a bitter debate over the Boy Scouts and homosexuality.

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a triumph for President Bush, the Senate overwhelmingly passed groundbreaking education legislation Thursday that requires annual math and reading tests for millions of schoolchildren as part of an effort to improve the nation's public schools.

The vote was 91-8, and it set the stage for a summer of negotiations on a final compromise among the White House, the GOP-controlled House, and the Senate, newly under Democratic management.

President Bush, traveling in Europe, issued a statement that hailed the vote and said it meant "we are close to a monumental achievement with bipartisan support. As a result of our efforts, we have wide agreement on the principles of education reform."

Senate passage came after a bumpy, last-minute detour into the emotionally charged issue of the Boy Scouts and homosexuality.

On a vote of 51-49, the Senate approved a proposal by Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to strip federal funding from any school district that discriminates against the Scouts or similar groups that "prohibit the acceptance of homosexuals."

But opponents countered by winning swift approval of a proposal barring schools from denying access to any youth group. Boy Scouts included, on the basis of their views on sexual orientation.

The clash over the Scouts provided a noisy conclusion to seven arduous weeks of debate on the issue atop Bush's agenda — and a bill that senators in both parties agreed would mark a fundamental shift in the federal government's role in education.

"What we passed today is not a Democratic bill or a Republican bill — but an education bill," said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., the chairman of the Education Committee.

Republicans sounded pleased as well. "A lot of his (Bush's) agenda is in this bill," said the GOP leader, Sen. Trent Lott of Mississippi.

Fed board shrinks student-loan rates

UI officials say now is an "excellent time" to consolidate loans.

By Lisa Kanning
The Daily Iowan

UI students will benefit when the federal government cuts student-loan interest rates to a historic low on July 1.

The Federal Reserve Board has decided to drop the interest rates, which change every year, by 2.2 percentage points.

Currently, students must pay an 8.2 percent interest rate on subsidized loans after finishing college. Next month, that rate will drop to 6 percent. Students paying off unsubsidized loans while still in college or six months after graduation will see their 7.6 percent interest rate drop to 5.4 percent.

Subsidized loans are granted on basis of need, whereas unsubsidized loans are given to students that are ineligible for the former.

The decrease is very significant, said Beth Ingram, a UI associate professor of economics. A student who borrows $50,000 over four years would save $1,000 over that time with the new interest rates, she said.

"Now would be an excellent time to consolidate loans," said Beth Oakes, an assistant director of financial aid at the university.

By consolidating their loans, students will receive a fixed

The average need-based debt of the graduating senior borrower in May 2000 was $9,691. Using that data, here's how an average UI student could benefit from the lowest-ever student-loan interest rates during the fiscal year that starts July 1:

Subsidized loans
Old 8.2 percent rate	would accrue $794.66 in interest
New 6 percent rate	accrues $561.46 in interest
	Savings = $213.20
Unsubsidized loans
Old 7.6 percent rate	accrues $736.52 interest
New 5.4 percent rate	accrues $523.31 in interest
	Savings = $213.21

interest rate at the new, lower percentage rather than one that changes every July 1, she said.

Consolidating loans allows a borrower to combine several types of federal education loans into one, despite possible differences in terms or repayment schedules. According to the U.S. Department of Education, a consolidated loan's monthly payment amount is typically lower, and the repayment period may be extended, resulting in a more manageable debt.

The interest rate decrease will directly affect all graduated and enrolled students who have unsubsidized loans,

County jail repair bill will exceed $700,000

The high costs are due to inadequate facilities and high levels of security.

By Libby Tucker
The Daily Iowan

The roof is leaking, water pipes are corroded, and the air is heavy at the Johnson County Jail, and officials say the facility needs repairs. Last fall, area voters rejected a proposal to build a new jail.

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors had estimated the repairs would cost $500,000 when the budget was proposed in March, but the supervisors now expect the project to cost another $200,000, based on bids received from three contractors. Plans call for a new roof, a new heating and cooling system, an upgraded air handling system, and the removal of broken solar panels.

Costs for the project exceed the expected amount mainly because of security issues. "Working around prisoners increases the cost," said Mark Bulechek, the county facilities manager.

Although construction won't interfere with the inmates, every worker will wear a badge for identification and will be strictly monitored by sheriff's deputies, he said.

A month of diversity, community, & pride

■ Saturday's Gay Pride Festival will be a chance for fun and "visibility," organizers say.

By Peter Boylan
The Daily Iowan

A month-long series of events aiming to raise awareness of gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender issues will culminate Saturday with the 17th annual Iowa City Pride Festival in College Green Park.

The festival, which celebrates gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender pride, will begin at noon with a parade including floats and hundreds of marchers. The parade route will run through downtown Iowa City and return to College Green Park for the festival, which will last until 4 p.m.

"This is a festival that works on several levels," said Laurie Haag, a program assistant at the Women's Resource Action Center. "We want to raise community awareness on GLBT issues. It also gives members of the GLBT community and its allies the opportunity to spend the day together."

The theme for this year's festival is "Embrace Diversity." The rally after the parade will kickoff with a number of speakers from the UI and Iowa City community, which will be followed by music and various entertainment at the park.

Musical acts will include the Quire and Kathryn Musilek. Dreamwell Theatre Company and Graffiti Theatre will perform excerpts from their current shows.

June is officially recognized as National Pride Month.

"This is a great opportunity for visibility in the community," said Iowa City resident Eric Coyne. "There is a strong gay community in Iowa City, and it's important once a year to let people know that we are here."

There are a lot of stereotypes associated with homosexuality, and the festival hopefully will educate people that being anti-gay is completely ridiculous, he said.

"When people see the pride parade, they will realize that it's not a bunch of outrageous drag queens or leather-bound lesbians," Coyne said. "While that element does exist, they are definitely in the minority."

The festival kicks off under the shadow of recent federal legislation that creates yet another obstacle in the path to acceptance of gays, lesbians, and transgendered people. On Thursday, the U.S. Senate approved a proposal by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., to terminate federal funding to any school district that chooses to prosecute or discriminate against the Boy Scouts or similar organizations that prohibit the acceptance of homosexuals.

"This proposal says that groups can be as discriminatory as they want to be," Haag said. "Oppression is our underlying concern that guides all of the issues. GLBT members feel that they can't walk down the street without people believing that they can take their rights away from them. Today, the U.S. government affirmed that fear."

The Iowa City community is more open than most regarding the acceptance of the community, Haag said. Still, she says, there is a lot of work to be done.

The Vogel House, located at the intersection of Iowa Avenue and Linn Street, is slated for demolition.

No future for this old house, panel decides

■ A 103-year-old house will not become a local historic landmark.

By Casey Wagner
The Daily Iowan

The bulldozer that sat in front of the Vogel House Thursday may not have to travel far to find another job after its work is done on the Iowa Avenue streetscape project.

The Iowa City Historic Preservation Commission Thursday night voted 2-2, with one member abstaining, to reject a motion to nominate the house for landmark status.

That clears the way for developer Marc Moen to demolish the house and build a multi-story commercial/residential building on the land where the 103-year-old house stands, 229 Iowa Ave.

Moen, who is also an attorney, bought the property earlier this year for $350,000. He applied for a demolition permit from the city last month.

The house, originally built for Herman Vogel in 1898 and owned by the Vogel family until 1957, has been vacant for five years and has not complied with local building codes for more than a decade.

"Right now, the house is not usable in its current state," Moen said. "I love historic houses, but I just don't have the resources or money to restore it."

Moen said he is not interested in the property unless it can be developed, saying "the house sits on an incredible corner for commercial development."

"Things are being developed all around it," he said. "But if the house is there, nothing can be done."

However, the corner the house sits on is also considered historic by some. Neighboring the Vogel House are two designated local landmarks, the Van Patten House, 9 S. Linn St., and the Hohenshuh Mortuary, 13 S. Linn St.

"To lose a building like that on such a corner would damage [the corner's] historic significance," said preservation commission member Richard Carlson, who voted in favor of making the house a landmark.

Commission chairman Mike Dunn said he voted against the landmark motion because Moen's demolition application had already been approved. Consequently, he said, it would be almost impossible for the city government to suspend the permit or delay the demolition.

After a recommendation from the commission, the Iowa City Planning and Zoning Commission and the City Council would have to vote again on the matter after numerous public hearings.

"It's not like we can vote and make it a landmark," Dunn said. "It might have just been a waste of everybody's time."

Moen has set no date for the demolition.

Commission members also discussed plans for a proposed downtown historic district, saying it will meet with downtown business and property owners at a public hearing sometime in early July.

Accused I.C. bank robber pleads not guilty

The man accused of holding up an Iowa City bank pleaded not guilty to charges of first-degree robbery Wednesday.

Sean Cavanaugh, 19, of Ankeny filed a written arraignment through attorney Quint Meyerdirk, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Court records claimed Cavanaugh walked into the Farmers & Merchants Savings Bank, 1550 S. Gilbert St., May 17 and handed a note to a bank teller stating that he had a gun and wanted all of the bank's bundles of $100 bills. He allegedly walked out with a little more than $5,000.

Two witnesses claimed to have seen Cavanaugh climbing into a green Ford Mustang, the records said. One of the witnesses wrote down Cavanaugh's license-plate number, according to the records. Iowa City police arrested Cavanaugh May 20.

The bank teller allegedly identified Cavanaugh in a photo lineup.

Cavanaugh, who has no previous convictions, is in custody at an undisclosed holding facility on a $50,000 cash bond.

Police foil alleged bar break-in attempt

Iowa City police arrested a man accused of an attempted break-in at a downtown bar early Wednesday morning.

Police spotted and approached Justin Jones, 28, of 502 N. Dodge St., who was walking in an alley behind Gabe's, 33 E. Washington St., around 5:30 a.m., according to Johnson County District Court records.

Jones was allegedly trying to gain access to the establishment with a tire iron and large screwdriver, police reports said. Officers noticed large marks on the establishment's back doors consistent with the size and shape of Jones' tools, the reports said. When confronted by police, Jones allegedly admitted to tampering with the door.

Police charged Jones with attempted burglary and possession of burglar's tools. Both charges are pending.

Jones is being held at the Johnson County Jail on $12,500 bond.

2 teens arrested in connection with purse snatchings

An Eagle Grove, Iowa, teen is accused of stealing two purses at Iowa City stores Wednesday after allegedly ramming a shopping cart into two women in what police say is a rare case.

Margaret Pepples, 18, is charged with two counts of second-degree robbery in connection with the incidents at Cub Foods and Kmart. Her alleged accomplice, Justin Morris, 18, faces a second-degree robbery/joint criminal conduct charge.

"We get a lot of reports of purse snatchings after the victim has been distracted," Iowa City police Sgt. Mike Brotherton said. "This is the first time we've had a forcible theft of a purse like this, though."

The two suspects were apprehended by Des Moines police Wednesday evening after their car's description and license plate matched what a witness had reported to Iowa City police. Iowa City police had sent out the vehicle's description after searching the area.

The alleged thief and accomplice are being held in Des Moines, Brotherton said, and will be transferred to Johnson County Jail as soon as possible.

A witness followed their car after a 6:30 p.m. incident at Kmart, 901 Hollywood Blvd., police said. Pepples allegedly smashed her cart into a woman, stole her purse, ran off, and drove away, police records said. Pepples is accused of doing the same thing two hours earlier at Cub Foods, 855 Highway 1 W., according to police.

Police found personal belongings of the two Iowa City women in the car, the records said. Neither was injured, Brotherton said, and police do not yet know why the suspects were in Iowa City.

School officials to sue state

DES MOINES (AP) — Dissident school officials plans Thursday to sue the state, saying that its method of schools is inequitable.

Approximately 100 school-tendents and school-board members came to the consensus meeting in Indianola.

"We will be filing suit, Sextro, the superintendent of Monroe County School District."

Sextro said the group organized, elected an executive board of directors, and retained a law firm to prepare suit. The group adopted a Coalition for Community Solutions.

The officials, largely from smaller schools, said their patience with lawmakers officials say they held back year to give the Legislature to fix the problem.

"We tried to keep the issue on it and give them a chance to straighten out," said Sextro, the superintendent.

When nothing happened support for the lawsuit grew. At issue is a disparity between urban and rural schools, blamed on the increase of the local-option sales tax.

Lawmakers several years ago school officials the ability to raise taxes in the county, if voters in approved.

Lawmakers believed almost impossible to persuade to raise their own taxes, 17 counties proved wrong.

Vieques cleanup could take decades

■ The end of the Navy's Vieques bombing leaves many questions about the island's environment.

By Lilliam Irizarry
Associated Press

VIEQUES, Puerto Rico — Even if the U.S. Navy ends six decades of bombing practice on Vieques in 2003, environmentalists say, it could take decades to remove unexploded ammunition and clean up the battered reefs.

Responding to President Bush's announcement Thursday that the Navy would stop exercises on Vieques in less than two years, critics said much work remains to prepare the Puerto Rican island of thick scrub bush and white sand beaches for a future without the military.

"The cleanup of Vieques is going to take decades," said anti-Navy activist Robert Rabin. "It must begin immediately, and that's one of the demands that has not been met."

The Navy has used the island to train troops for major conflicts from World War II to Kosovo, and it says the island's terrain and location uniquely allow for simultaneous mock assaults by air, sea, and land.

In 1940 the Navy took over two-thirds of Vieques — an island slightly larger than Manhattan — though its bombing range covers only 900 acres — less than 3 percent of the island.

Troops had used live bombs until two went astray during training for the Kosovo conflict in 1999 and killed civilian guard David Sanes on the bombing range, prompting protests to demand the military leave.

Israeli police and army investigators examine evidence at the site of a shooting on a West Bank road outside Jerusalem Thursday. A Palestinian fired from close range at an Israeli car, killing an Israeli intelligence official, along a major West Bank thoroughfare and jeopardizing a new, U.S.-mediated cease-fire agreement.

Israeli killed on first day of truce

■ Israel stops military pullbacks in areas where violence persists.

By Susan Seavareid
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — A Palestinian shot and killed an Israeli army-intelligence officer Thursday, marring the first day of a truce worked out by CIA Director George Tenet.

Israel's military received orders to begin implementing the truce, but it stopped pullbacks in places where violence persisted, including the road leading to the southern entry of Jerusalem, the site of the shooting.

Israeli tanks on carriers rumbled back from forward positions in Gaza. At the Netzarim junction, a flash point throughout more than eight months of fighting, Palestinians threw rocks at Israeli soldiers after a tank was withdrawn.

Elsewhere, Israeli soldiers dismantled roadblocks, with forklifts hauling concrete barriers onto trucks. Israel allowed some Palestinians to leave through the Rafah crossing point to Egypt for the first time since June 2, after a Palestinian suicide bomber struck Tel Aviv, killing 21 people, most of them Israeli teenagers. Also, Israel allowed the reopening of the Allenby Bridge between the West Bank and Jordan.

Israeli and Palestinian security commanders met in the Gaza Strip to coordinate implementation of the truce.

However, incidents of violence on both sides threatened the cease-fire.

Lt. Col. Yehuda Edri, 45, a plainclothes army-intelligence officer, was killed in a shooting attack on a main West Bank road. Israeli military sources said he apparently had been meeting with a Palestinian informant.

After killing Edri and wounding one of his guards, the Palestinian was shot and killed by an Israeli soldier, the military said.

The Palestinian was identified as Hassan Abu Shaireh, 30, from the Azza refugee camp in Bethlehem. Activists said he wanted to avenge the November 2000 death of Hussein Abayat, Abayat, of Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat's mainstream Fatah organization, was killed by Israeli helicopter rocket fire.

At the refugee camp, Abu Shaireh's relatives opened their house to mourners.

"Hassan sacrificed himself for Palestine," his 51-year-old sister, Fatimah Abu Shaireh, said, crying. "He will not be the last martyr... All of us are ready to sacrifice until we achieve all our rights."

A leaflet signed by the Hussein Abayat Brigade claimed responsibility for the shooting. A man, with face covered by a checked kaffiyeh headdress and identified as a member of the Fatah military wing, told Abu Dhabi Television that his group took "full responsibility for this act of heroism."

He also said the cease-fire applies only to areas under Palestinian control. The road where the shooting took place is under Israeli control.

Headlines around the world give travelers fresh incentive to keep alert for warnings before venturing off to distant lands.

In the past three weeks alone, the State Department has issued 17 new or updated travel warnings and other statements to advise Americans of concerns in countries from A to Y — Algeria to Yemen.

One was a "worldwide caution" that Americans abroad may be the targets of extremist groups tied to bin Laden's organization. Another warned about the dangers of travel in certain areas of the Philippines, where Muslim rebels last month abducted 20 tourists, including three Americans, one of whom they claim to have beheaded.

The advisories are monitored by travel agents and tour companies, which combine that information with their own feedback from abroad in deciding whether to cancel or alter trips.

But ultimately, individual travelers make the final call.

"The world is a very, very big place, and if you feel uncomfortable with the notion of going to Nepal suddenly, it's OK," said Don George, the travel editor of Lonely Planet guidebooks. "You should look around and choose Thailand or France or someplace else."

Washingtonian Leslie Morgan, who is planning a three-week trip to China and Hong Kong with her 85-year-old father, jokes about ending up in a Chinese prison camp, but she shows no qualms about making the trip despite recent tensions between Beijing and Washington.

"Most of the world is pretty friendly," Morgan, 50, said after visiting a passport office. "But you check out the tours, and you check out the warnings that the government puts out."

College student Brian Wendroff, who is planning visits to Europe and South America, said he'd think twice about going to a country the State Department warned against.

"I'd just kind of balance them and see if it's worth it," said Wendroff, a student at George Mason University in northern Virginia.

Tour company Saga Holidays, which has a tour of Nepal scheduled for September, says it hasn't gotten any calls from concerned travelers, despite recent violence there sparked by a murderous royal rampage.

STATE, NATION, & WORLD BRIEFS

School officials ready to sue state

DES MOINES (AP) — A group of dissident school officials announced plans Thursday to sue the state, arguing that its method of financing schools is inequitable.

Approximately 100 school superintendents and school-board members came to the consensus during a meeting in Indianola.

"We will be filing suit," said Dave Sextro, the superintendent of the Monroe County School District in Albia.

Sextro said the group formally organized, elected an eight-member board of directors, and retained a Des Moines law firm to prepare the lawsuit. The group adopted the title Coalition for Common Cents Solutions.

The officials, largely from rural and smaller schools, said they had lost patience with lawmakers. The school officials say they held back earlier this year to give the Legislature a chance to fix the problem.

"We tried to keep the cooler heads on it and give them a chance to get it straightened out," said Sextro, one of the leading activists.

When nothing happened, he said, support for the lawsuit grew.

At issue is a disparity in funding between urban and rural schools blamed on the increasing popularity of the local-option sales tax.

Lawmakers several years ago gave school officials the ability to impose a 1-cent boost in the sales tax for a county, if voters in that county approved.

Lawmakers believed it would be almost impossible to persuade voters to raise their own taxes, but voters in 17 counties proved them to be wrong.

Columbine victim's father arrested at anti-NRA protest

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — The father of a victim of the Columbine High School shooting massacre was arrested during a demonstration outside the National Rifle Association headquarters.

Thomas R. Mauser, 49, was charged with trespassing after approximately a dozen people demonstrated Wednesday, Fairfax County police said.

When the protesters were asked to leave the driveway, Mauser repeatedly refused and was the only one arrested, police said.

Workers at the NRA called police after seeing Mauser pacing outside the headquarters and carrying a sign with a photo of his slain 15-year-old son, Daniel.

He was released from jail after two hours; he is scheduled to appear in court Aug. 22.

Mauser said he was protesting because NRA President Charlton Heston hadn't responded to a letter he sent about the massacre in Littleton, Colo.

The letter asks why the NRA opposed a ban on the type of assault weapon that Columbine seniors Eric Harris and Dylan Klebold used in the April 1999 massacre, in which they killed 13 people before committing suicide.

NRA spokesman Bill Powers said he was not familiar with the letter, but he acknowledged it might have been better for the NRA to respond. "A kind of courtesy could be expected, yes," he said. Powers said the NRA had no problem with Mauser so long as he did it on public property.

Whiskey, hashish blamed in royal slaughter

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Investigators on Thursday blamed the late Crown Prince Dipendra for the massacre of Nepal's royal family, saying he had drunk whiskey and smoked hashish before gunning down his parents and seven others.

The much-anticipated probe said that just before shooting his family, Dipendra spoke several times by mobile phone with the young woman he wanted to marry — but whom his parents, King Birendra and Queen Aiswarya, opposed.

The report of the two-member probe came after Birendra's brother and successor, King Gyanendra, ordered an explanation for the killings to an outraged Nepalese public.

Many Nepalese have doubted witness accounts that Dipendra committed the massacre, and some have even speculated that the unpopular Gyanendra — who was not present at the time — or his son were somehow behind it. After the massacre, thousands of angry mourners rioted in Nepal for several days.

The panel was made up of Supreme Court Chief Justice Keshav Prasad Upadhyaya and House Speaker Taranath Ranabhat. Its findings were given out by Ranabhat at a news conference in Katmandu.

The investigators did not say whether Dipendra then shot himself after slaying his family, as claimed by witnesses. But Ranabhat said the panel found no cartridges at the scene of the crime other than those used by Dipendra. The crown prince died several days afterward from gunshot wounds suffered during the massacre.

APPAREL-LICENSEE COMMITTEE DROPS THE BALL ...

UI all bark and no bite

Instead of working to make positive changes on the apparel-licensee front, the UI is simply paying lip service to Students Against Sweatshops and the workers on whose behalf SAS fights.

The Special Committee to Oversee Process of Securing Compliance for the university's Licensee Code of Conduct has dropped the ball. While it should be commended for recommending dropping Haddad from the list of the university's business partners, it regrettably has recommended granting extensions to the other five companies that have yet to sign on to the Code of Conduct. The timing of the recommendations is disappointing; UI President Mary Sue Coleman is currently unable to approve the recommendations because she is absent, thus essentially guaranteeing that, despite the passing of the apparel companies, the corporations will remain in partnerships with the UI.

Furthermore, after granting the corporations a month to voice their concerns, namely in the areas of work hours, notification of monitoring visits, and the definition of a "living wage," the committee has failed to adequately address the problems the companies raised. The committee spent its time creating proposed additions to the Code of Conduct that merely mention the problems raised by the corporations, rather than looking for and implementing real answers.

According to a press release from university spokesman Steve Parrott, the companies are unable to agree to the university's living-wage provision because they believe it is not defined with "sufficient precision."

So, the companies told the committee they didn't think "living wage" was adequately defined. And in response, instead of defining a living wage with "sufficient precision" (a phrase that will no doubt lead to future loopholes), the committee spent its time merely documenting the corporations' concerns — hardly the way to solve a problem. Instead of researching what "living wages" might be (and there are organizations out there calculating such numbers for varying countries, most notably the Olympic Living Wage Project), the committee spent its time creating legalese that effectively buys the corporations more time, time during which sweatshop workers will continue to be abused and exploited.

In addition, the committee has created other addenda that simply have no teeth. Nike, VESI, and VF Imagewear all expressed concern about working-hours provisions. But rather than drop the corporations, or even give them more time to conform to our standards, the language in the committee's additions simply lets the companies remain where they stand by "treating compliance with [the companies'] standards as substantial compliance" with the university's code.

So, the companies stay where they're at, and we just say they've changed? Makes perfect sense. And this helps sweatshop workers how?

Such bending on the university's part is unacceptable. It's time to stop paying lip service and force companies to start paying their laborers.

THE BUSH ADMINISTRATION IS MOVING TOO FAST ...

Allies are important for SDI

How many hostile nuclear warheads have ever been detonated over American territory? The answer, of course, is zero. Is this because we destroyed the incoming aggressors before they exploded? Is it because of space-based laser systems that zapped the missiles before they even got off the ground? No, the answer is much simpler: The threat of massive retaliation made it too costly for any aggressor nations, namely the Soviet Union, to attack us. Our lack of useful defense probably saved millions of lives. Without a defense against retaliation, it was too costly for us to launch our missiles against our enemies.

Now, however, the Cold War is over, and the Soviet Union is non-existent. Are we safe from nuclear annihilation? President Bush says no. He says we need a missile-defense system to shoot down warheads from "rogue nations." While such nations may be a threat in the future, for now, the true threat is alienation from our allies and Russia.

Since the first announcement of the proposed missile-defense system, Russia has stood in strong opposition. Bush, however, has turned a deaf ear to Russia's protests. This is ridiculous, considering Russia still has nuclear missiles aimed at the United States. Is it sensible to anger a recognized nuclear superpower such as Russia in order to defend against phantom nuclear threats such as Iraq? Furthermore, the United States signed a treaty with the former Soviet Union in 1972 prohibiting missile-defense systems. Russia has been very firm in its correct stance that our new defense system would violate the treaty.

Even our closest allies in NATO are unhappy with the proposed system. They, like Russia, are unconvinced that the threat exists or that our system would even function. This is interesting, because our allies in Europe are much closer to rogue nations such as Iraq than we are. If the Europeans are not scared of being hit with Iraqi missiles, then why are we?

Building the system is a much greater danger to our safety and world stability than are the phantom missiles it is meant to protect us from. The Bush administration is spitting in the face of our allies in Europe and our former enemies in Russia by not taking their objections seriously. Bush may not be a genius, but anyone knows it is definitely not good foreign policy to break treaties, anger allies, and antagonize nuclear superpowers.

If you see him, say hello

He might be in Ljubljana. At least that is the news I've heard from back home: that the news is coming to me, here in Europe, in the form of a great American president.

I think that George W. Bush and I have a lot in common. For this week at least, we are both strangers in a strange land. We don't speak the languages. We don't know the Histories. We have decided to bypass a land they call Montenegro, which, in combination with some other country, is a land they call the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia. Or something. Bush and I are like two peas in a pod, a couple of bumbling wonderkids who happened to be born in the right country at the right time, smiling their jolly ways through Life and Ignorance, acting like they've stayed a few hours too long in the cafés of Amsterdam.

Really, the only difference is that I am not in charge of a relatively large and relatively important country. But in an effort to change that, I am hoping to get on the president's good side by offering one small, but extremely crucial, piece of advice to a fellow European sightseer: Learn how to say hello in the local language. If Bush does not already have a whole team of Cheneys working around the clock on this seemingly trivial point, he should get one. He should at least have a brief written up on the subject. For instance:

Buon giorno = good day in Italy, but you must say it more like "bone jernoh," Mr. President. Also, hello sounds like "yah-sooh" in Greece, but don't worry yourself about the spelling because it is a different alphabet that looks like the one you used in calculus.

I'll bet that Bush is better at calculus than a lot of people over here in Europe give him credit for. Europeans, I've noticed, also tend to be wary of some of Bush's policy decisions that they believe, for some strange reason, will somehow affect them, on account of the world becoming a much smaller place and all nowadays. But he shouldn't let that worry him. What he should do is just kick back, let that toothy grin work its charismatic magic, and concentrate on learning how to say hello in five different languages.

And not execute anyone. And not speak too much Spanish while in Madrid. And not do hard drugs in Amsterdam on his way from Brussels to Sweden. (Hard drugs, contrary to some stupid peoples' opinions, are neither legal nor socially tolerated in the Netherlands.)

And not worry if the weather in Poland is a lot warmer than he packed for, because it's just the whole world that's doing that warm-up thing.

And not drill for oil in the olive trees of Slovenia, despite what he may have heard about olive oil being POSSIBLY EVEN MORE being how to say hello. Those will get him through, I think. I know they've worked for me.

And maybe when I return, George W. Bush, that wild and crazy ramblin' man of an American president of ours, can teach me how to run a country.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Stronger pedestrian laws needed

I was hit by a car May 21 while walking on the sidewalk along MormonTrek Boulevard. The driver was leaving a service-station parking lot and had stopped. I was directly in front of his car when it hit me. Because he was looking straight ahead, I judged that he saw me, but he apparently would only have seen cars in the street, not persons on the sidewalk. He drove into me, and I fell into the street, where his car or any other car could have run over me and killed me. I was treated in an emergency room for multiple injuries.

I learned on June 12 that the policeman who filed the accident report has not charged the driver. I don't see how the driver can fail to be criminally culpable, for I was right in front of his car on the sidewalk. I could not possibly have gotten out of the way, contrary to what the policeman has now told me. The policeman's supervisor informed me that under Iowa law, the decision whether to charge the driver is entirely at the officer's discretion.

In the absence of a stronger law (or better police officers, or both) to protect pedestrians, there is insufficient deterrence in Iowa for this kind of careless driving. The officer's police supervisor courteously urged me to pressure my state representative and senator to strengthen Iowa's law, and that is what I intend to do. But I must hereby ask my readers to do the same, or nothing will change, for I am just one citizen. I have learned that numerous states (e.g., California and Massachusetts) have much stronger pedestrian-protection laws than does Iowa, laws whereby the driver of a hard, heavy, fast car is automatically criminally at fault when he or she hits a pedestrian. Iowa is a very dangerous place to live so long as laws against this kind of careless driving are weak.

Jail repairs may top $700,000

Every piece of equipment will have to be accounted for to ensure that none falls into the hands of inmates. Earlier this month, three prisoners tried to slit their wrists using razors; they received stitches at the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

"You had a problem with razors in the past. Imagine what they can do with a scrap of sheet metal," Bulechek told the supervisors.

The independent bids were "all legitimate," falling within $20,000 of each other, Supervisors Chairman Mike Lehman said. The board will consider its options to ensure that all repairs are completed, which are necessary to protect the safety of the building, said

Supervisor Terrence Neuzil.

"If we do the project now, it will be the least expensive way for the county to do it," Bulechek said. If the project is delayed two to three years, it could cost as much as $150,000 more, he said.

The supervisors will draw on capital funds or taxpayers' money to pay the bill, if all repairs are made at once. Otherwise, the board will "prioritize according to our dollars" and the most pressing needs of the jail, Lehman said.

If the project is done in "piecemeal" fashion, priority will be given to building a new roof and fixing the air-cooling tower, Bulechek said. The county still runs the risk of the other systems breaking down completely before they can be replaced, he said.

"We are facing the consequences of not having an adequate facility because people didn't support the jail referendum" last November, Neuzil said. If the new jail had been approved, repairs would have been an unnecessary expense, and "these expenses don't solve our jail overcrowding," he said.

The jail is currently holding twice its capacity, and this is exacerbating the problem, Lehman said. Air circulation is less than adequate because of the number of people held in the facility.

Neither the board nor the public were aware of the necessary repairs when they voted on the bond issue this fall, Lehman said.

Senate passes education measure on the Helms amendment demonstrated the Senate's fracture lines.

Michael Resnick, the associate executive director of the National School Boards Association, said the Helms measure means school districts could lose the right to decide who uses their facilities.

"Now we have a piece of legislation in which the Congress is dictating to school districts and school principals all across the United States which groups should have access to their campus," he said. "That should be a locally determined decision. This is congressional micro-management at its worst."

Helms said his amendment was meant to combat "the organized lesbians and homosexuals in this country of ours." Democrats angrily denounced it, saying it would bind the hands of school boards trying to juggle access and scout sponsorship with their states' anti-discrimination laws.

"Think of the situation we are creating here," said Sen. Richard Durbin, D-Ill. "I have to tell you: As I consider this amendment, it is a complete disaster."

"I believe this amendment is unnecessarily gratuitous," said Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif. "It's hurtful to a group of people — it divides us again in this country."

Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle of South Dakota said the amendment would force school districts to make "a terrible choice."

"They could either disregard their own conscience or they could follow their conscience and lose millions of dollars that their schools and their children need," he said. "We believe in principled compromise, but we cannot compromise on the fundamental issues of civil rights."

In a remarkable moment, Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., speaking, he noted, as a former member of the Ku Klux Klan, said that as drafted, the amendment would require schools to allow even that racist organization to use school facilities. At his request, the proposal was modified to prevent that, and he was one of eight Democrats who joined with 43 Republicans in voting for the Helms proposal.

Shortly after passage, Boxer succeeded in adding her own, different provision to the bill. It would prohibit discrimination against any youth group, including the Boy Scouts, on the basis of the organization's "favorable or unfavorable position concerning sexual orientation." Boxer said the amendment was intended to write into law the high court's ruling in the Boy Scouts case.

After the Senate passed the complete bill, maneuvering began in advance of House-Senate negotiations. Lott said the funding in the measure "got out of control." Bush said that "additional spending on education surely is justified." But, he added, "In the past, increased spending and the creation of multiple new programs have not improved student achievement."

Daschle said there wasn't enough money. "We can't have reform without resources and that's the next step," he said.

In all, the Senate-passed measure called for roughly $15 billion more spending than Bush has proposed for next year alone. The companion House-passed measure calls for funding between the White House and Senate levels.

The Senate measure is a bipartisan culmination of Bush's campaign pledge to fix the nation's public schools. It would require states to administer annual math and reading tests to students in grades three through eight. Schools with low test scores would receive additional aid, but if a school failed to show enough progress after two years, low-income students would be free to transfer to another public school. After three years, the same students would be permitted to use federal funds for tutoring or transportation to another public school.

All schools would receive some additional flexibility in their use of federal funds as part of the effort to improve. In addition, a small number of states and school districts would qualify for an experimental program with far fewer restrictions on the use of federal funds, part of an effort to see whether that could raise student performance.

The framework of the measure was fixed during weeks of negotiations involving the White House, Senate Republicans and Democrats led by Kennedy.

All sides gained concessions in some areas, and gave them in others, but the bill contains far more money than any Republicans favor.

The average graduating senior in May 2000 was almost $9,700 in debt, according to the Student Financial Aid Office. Sixty-five percent Kyoto Protocol. The treaty marked the first time that the world's industrialized nations had committed to binding limits on the heat-trapping gases that many scientists say threaten catastrophic changes in the planet's climate.

Persson withheld criticism of Bush during the news conference but said afterward that his position is a heavy blow to the international effort against global warming.

"It will have a tremendous impact, sorry to say, because it would have sent an extremely strong signal if the U.S. had stuck with the Kyoto protocol," Persson said.

The United States is the world's largest producer of heat-trapping gases, and Persson said its leadership would have prodded developing countries to join the cause.

"I think he has the same strong commitment to going ahead with the climate change" fight, the prime minister said of Bush. "The problem is we think that he chose the wrong policies, and I have the impression that he thinks the same way about Europe."

Indeed, the president jumped at the chance to highlight the fact that Europe has not rushed to ratify the four-year-old treaty. It came when he was asked why the action of European leaders has not been as forceful as their rhetoric.

"I think that's a good question for President Prodi," Bush replied with a smile. Turning to Prodi, he mischievously added, "I would be interested in your answer."

Prodi's reply was terse: "There is not one single country who has declared not to ratify it."

Afterward, at a private dinner with presidents and prime ministers of 15 EU nations, Bush was pointedly told that the global-warming treaty "was the only show in town," according to Persson's spokesman.

While Bush held to his view that he's starting to win over skeptical European allies, those allies criticized him and his agenda with striking candor.

On missile defense: "An incredible invitation to proliferation," chided French President Jacques Chirac.

On Bush administration moves to restrict steel imports: "Bad news ... it smells potentially, possibly, of protectionism," sniffed European Union trade commissioner Pascal Lamy of France.

And when it came to Bush voicing support for an expanded European Union, another top EU official essentially told the American to mind his own business.

Q: In the silent film The Gold Rush, Charlie Chaplin eats a pair of shoes. What material were the shoes made out of?

"Freakylinks"
8 p.m. on FOX

Ethan Embry (Can't Hardly Wait, Empire Records) stars in this show about conspiracies and the paranormal. Tonight's episode features a mythical creature at a retirement community.

Swordfish literally steals the scenes

Watching Swordfish is like flipping through an album of old photos — it's nice to revisit familiar moments, but not so nice as when you experienced them for the first time.

It would be a stretch to call Swordfish a complete film.

The finished product is more of a pastiche of thinly disguised moments from other films. Speed, The Usual Suspects, and The Matrix are just a few of the recent successes that Swordfish liberally borrows from. Unlike movies that pay homage to the work of other filmmakers, Swordfish is a crime film in content as well as form.

Stanley Jobson (Hugh Jackman), one of the world's pre-eminent computer hackers, is lured back into action by shadowy super-thief Gabriel Shear (John Travolta) and his seductive assistant Ginger (Halle Berry). Stanley hopes the job will pay enough to regain custody of his daughter, but things get complicated when the FBI and CIA get involved.

Swordfish starts promisingly by throwing us into a tense bank robbery and hostage situation. The suspense is palpable when FBI agents try to rescue a young hostage who has made her way outside, not knowing she will die if she strays too far from the bank. However, the film just as quickly grows tiresome when the resulting explosion is filmed in the freeze frame, a 360-degree technique pioneered by the Wachowski brothers in The Matrix.

The cinematic thievery keeps on coming when FBI agents led by A.D. Roberts (Don Cheadle) detain a high-profile hacker (Rudolf Martin) trying to enter the United States. The hacker claims to have no knowledge of the employer he is coming to meet, only that he has nearly limitless power. The entire sequence smacks of The Usual Suspects and its creation of the enigmatic Keyser Soze.

Not to give too much away, but the Usual Suspects references come full circle when Gabriel's ominous mantra — "What the eyes see and the ears hear, the mind believes" — leads Stanley to an epiphany à la Chazz Palminteri near the end of the film.

A bus chase lifted from Speed and unintelligible hacker sequences reminiscent of such films as WarGames and Sneakers round out the wholesale heisting Swordfish perpetrates.

Adding injury to insult, Halle Berry manages to take a backward step in her career with an embarrassingly gratuitous topless scene and a performance that is pure objectification.

On the up side, Swordfish is able to piece together the better parts of other films into a movie that plays surprisingly Gabriel (John Travolta) and Ginger (Halle Berry) watch over Stanley (Hugh Jackman) as he attempts to hack into a government database using an elaborate computer network. This scene, like many in Dominic Sena's film Swordfish, is reminiscent of scenes in other, better films, such as The Usual Suspects, Speed, and Sneakers, says DI film reviewer Aaron McAdams.

well. The marquee sequences are entertaining, but only because they are familiar and comfortable. Basically, Swordfish makes you nostalgic for films you've seen and enjoyed. It's a frustrating thing when you're sitting in the theater wishing for The Usual Suspects but settling for Swordfish instead.

Getting very, very twangy with it

An absent George Strait and Alan Jackson waltz away with the latest set of country-music awards.

By Jim Patterson
Associated Press

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — George Strait, who was absent, was named the top entertainer in country music Wednesday, and he shared three fan-voted awards with Alan Jackson for their duet, "Murder on Music Row."

Strait and Jackson won best single, song, and collaborative event for at the TNN & CMT Country Weekly Music Awards. The song decries the lack of support for older country-music styles.

"This song probably rubbed a few people wrong, but I'm glad there's still a lot of people out there that still like what it says," Jackson said. "I don't mean everything on country radio has to sound like Hank Williams, but maybe some now and then."

Strait also won the Impact Award for expanding the influence of country music in other media. He has done a series of commercials for Chevrolet trucks.

Jackson was the top award winner, winning six of the eight categories in which he was nominated. He was named best male vocalist and won best album for When Somebody Loves You and best video for "www.memory."

"It's been a pretty good night so far," Jackson said. "I wish George was here to say something."

Kathy Mattea won an award for charitable work named after late country humorist Minnie Pearl. She was one of the first country-music artists to speak out about AIDS.

"I really don't know what to say except to dedicate this to my friends who've died and my father, who is battling cancer now," said a tearful Mattea.

Vince Gill was also emotional as he received the Country Weekly Career Achievement Award, established by Country Weekly magazine last year to honor an artist who has made a lasting contribution to country music over 15 years or more. The first one went to Kenny Rogers.

"I was given some godly gifts," Gill said. "And I thought the only righteous thing to do with them was to share them. And I have for 44 years."

Faith Hill won for best female vocalist. The Dixie Chicks, which wasn't present, won best duo/group.

Pop singer Jewel sang along with John Michael Montgomery on his hit "The Little Girl," and young performer Jessica Andrews gave an impassioned performance of her breakthrough ballad "Who I Am."

Cowboy singer Chris LeDoux made his first television appearance since a liver transplant in October 2000, performing "For Your Love" with fellow singers Charlie Daniels and Keith Urban in the backup band. LeDoux demonstrated his fitness by riding a mechanical bull as part of the performance.

The event is one of three major awards shows featuring country-music stars and the only one in which fans vote for the winners. Thousands of fans in Nashville for the annual Fan Fair country music festival cheered on their heroes.

"It's fun," said singer Phil Vassar. "It's a lot more fun when you have a bunch of fans out there, instead of a bunch of music people in tuxes."

Princeton gets to keep painting

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — The Princeton University Art Museum has reached an agreement allowing it to keep an Italian Renaissance painting that was taken from the collection of a Jewish resident of Nazi-occupied France during World War II.

The university announced the agreement with the heirs of Frederico Gentili di Giuseppe on Wednesday. Financial terms were not disclosed.

The circa-1500 painting, St. Bartholomew, has been in the Princeton collection since 1994. The university acquired it from French and Co., a New York art dealer, which also took part in the compensation agreement with the family.

Gentili di Giuseppe died of natural causes in 1940. In 1941, a French court ordered his art collection sold at public auction in Paris.

In 1998, his heirs brought legal action to nullify the auction sale. The Court of Appeals of Paris held that the then-living heirs of Gentili di Giuseppe had been prevented from attending to the administration of his estate and voided the sale of five paintings.

After the court's ruling, the Princeton museum and the heirs began discussions about St. Bartholomew, which came from the family collection but was not one of the five paintings involved in the French court decision.

Price is still right

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Pearson Television wanted to honor game show host Bob Barker with an endowment fund that would be named after him. Harvard University decided the price — $500,000 — was right.

Barker visited Harvard Law School Wednesday and presented officials with a $500,000 gift that will establish the Bob Barker Endowment Fund for the Study of Animal Rights.

The 77-year-old Barker has agreed to remain as host of "The Price Is Right" through 2006, the durable game show's 34th season on CBS.

He's signed a new five-year contract with the daytime program he took over in 1972 and for which he's won 14 Emmys.

The show, which started in 1957 on NBC, is among the highest-rated on daytime television.

Throughout his television career Barker has been known as an advocate for animals, even encouraging viewers to spay and neuter their pets at the end of each episode of "The Price Is Right."

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Business opportunities will develop through individuals you meet at work. Concentrate on your professional rather than personal life. Your creative talent will bring positive results.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Instant romance will develop through educational pursuits, friends, or travel. Be open and aware of someone who mentally stimulates you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Someone is watching you from a distance. Keep your eyes peeled for romantic opportunities. Try to become involved in worthwhile groups, but watch that these organizations don't cost too much.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your interest in foreign cultures will open doors that lead to different philosophies. Your partner is not likely to be pleased with your changing outlook.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Children will make a big difference, helping you view life's little problems in a more humorous, positive manner. If you can laugh at yourself, you can cope with any setback.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Consider the future. Establish your direction and prospective accomplishments. Sit down and come up with the formula that will work best for you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Don't let the disharmony around you cause ill health. If you can't handle the heat, get out of your kitchen. You don't have to put up with an unpleasant situation, but it's up to you to move on. Golden financial opportunities are right around the corner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Don't let anyone in on your plans. Secret information may be revealed accidentally, so don't give even best friends any information about your intentions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You and your mate really need to get away. Find a way to improve your looks; it's time that you brought yourself up to date. Change your hair or buy some fashionable clothes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You'll have the energy to put the house in order and make positive changes. Don't let anyone stand in your way. The more you accomplish, the better you'll feel.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You'll be annoyed if someone is spreading rumors about you. Try to ignore it. The best revenge is doing well and being successful in your ventures.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Open your home for group meetings. If you assume a leadership position, you will earn support. Express your ideas and thoughts regarding future meetings. Think before you act and stay alert.

Miami tops Tennessee, makes title game

■ The Hurricanes had a big fourth inning to lift them into Saturday's championship game.

By Dennis Waszak Jr.
Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — Kevin Howard and Danny Matienzo hit back-to-back home runs to spark a seven-run fourth inning, leading Miami to the College World Series championship game, 12-6, over Tennessee on Thursday.

Kevin Brown also homered for the Hurricanes (52-12), who are in the title game for the second time in three years and sixth overall. Miami won during its last championship game appearance in 1999, and also won in 1982 and '85.

Miami, which has won 16 consecutive games, will play Stanford (51-16) in Saturday's title game. The Cardinal beat Cal State Fullerton, 4-1, on Wednesday night. Neither team has lost in this year's College World Series.

The Hurricanes, who beat the Volunteers 21-13 on June 9, used a combination of power hitting and aggressive baserunning to erase an early deficit against the Volunteers (48-20).

Howard had four RBIs, Mike Rodriguez was 3-for-5 with three RBIs, and Matienzo 3-for-5 with two RBIs. Charlton Jimerson also tied a single-game series record with four stolen bases.

Reliever Dan Smith (6-0) allowed one run and three hits in three innings, as Miami took control in the fourth, when it sent 12 batters to the plate.

Mike Rodriguez and Javy Rodriguez hit consecutive singles to lead off the inning, and Howard followed with a home run off Brian Gates (6-5) to make it 4-3. Two pitches later, Matienzo homered over the left-field wall to tie it.

Kevin Mannix was hit by a pitch, Brown doubled, and Kris Clute had an RBI groundout to give Miami a 5-4 lead. One out later, Jimerson singled and scored from first on Mike Rodriguez's two-run single to center to make it 7-4.

Devon Nicholson came in and walked Javy Rodriguez before getting Howard to ground out to end the inning.

Gates, the first of six Vols pitchers, allowed seven runs and eight hits in 3½ innings.

Brown hit a two-run homer off Nicholson in the fifth for the 9-4 lead, and Mike Rodriguez's RBI single off Will Curtiss four batters later made it 10-4.

The Vols got a run in the fifth when Ryan Moffett hit a leadoff triple and scored on Jeff Christensen's RBI groundout.

Miami added two more runs in the seventh when first baseman Dennis Gomez couldn't handle Howard's grounder, allowing Jimerson to score, and Matienzo's groundout gave the Hurricanes a 12-5 lead.

Javi Herrera's RBI single in the eighth made it 12-6.

Tennessee scored two runs each in the second and third innings to take a short-lived 4-0 lead.

Herrera walked with two outs in the second and scored on Dan Wilson's double. Wilson came scored on Ryan Case's single to make it 2-0.

Hurricanes starter Kiki Bengochea gave up a leadoff double to Stevie Daniel in the third, a single to Brandon Hopkins and consecutive walks to Christensen and Kris Bennett to force in a run. Bengochea was replaced by Smith, who gave up a sacrifice fly to Justin Parker to make it 4-0.

There he was again Thursday, his hair more salt than pepper but the enthusiasm and desire unchanged.

He pumped his fist and mouthed "Wow!" to his caddie when he holed a momentum-saving 25-foot par putt on the 16th.

And when his 2-iron from 198 yards shot like a rocket beneath the fierce winds, bounced up the steep slope and stopped 2 feet away from the hole on No. 18, he waved his cap around and whipped the gallery into a frenzy.

Those were the shots that Woods has made look routine during his unprecedented sweep of the majors.

He couldn't find them Thursday.

With a 2-iron that sailed over the bunker into the right rough on the opening hole, Woods struggled from the start. He had to save par on the first two holes, and when he finally had a birdie putt he wound up with a bogey.

His 45-foot putt on No. 3 came up about 15 feet short. Woods walked slowly, the kind of gait expected out of a Senior Tour player like Irwin, until he reached the ball and slammed his putter into the ground. He wound up with a three-putt bogey, then plodded along with pars until disaster struck on the ninth hole.

With about 90 yards to the green, Woods hit his wedge fat and out to the right. It clipped a branch and plugged into the bunker, and he could do no better than blast out over the green into the thick Bermuda rough.

His pitch for par rolled 8 feet past the hole, and he lipped that out for double bogey.

Perhaps the storms were a blessing. Woods hung another shot out to the right and into the bunker on No. 10, blasting out to 8 feet when he hurried off the course.

With more storms coming and Southern Hills already soaked, the U.S. Golf Association called it a day after a delay of 90 minutes.

Asked to comment as he climbed into a waiting car, Woods said, "I'll talk to them tomorrow."

Woods was on the other end of the weather a year ago at Pebble, squeezing in his opening 65 before a series of fog delays. This time, he will have to play 26 holes on what figures to be a muggy, draining afternoon today.

He's not alone.

Jim Furyk was at 1 under through 10 holes, while Mike Hulbert, St. Jude Classic winner Bob Estes, and David Toms were at 1 under and still on the front nine.

Ernie Els was even par through eight, while David Duval was even through 10.

guys is to really blow them out to have a chance. And the way things are going, that's just not going to happen."

The Lakers hold a 3-1 lead tonight to finish with a postseason record of 15-1, which would be the best in NBA history.

They also would become the first team ever to go through the playoffs undefeated on the road.

Although the task at hand is winning one more game, the Lakers allowed themselves to look at the bigger picture.

Bryant admitted that he goes to bed at night wondering whether this Lakers team could become a dynasty. Coach Phil Jackson discussed O'Neal's desire to leave a legacy as one of the game's best big men, and Harper and Grant — who each won three championships with Michael Jordan during the last decade — gave their unique takes on how history will judge this team.

"I think in terms of running through the Western Conference like we did and winning two on Philly's court, it puts us among the best teams ever," Grant said. "But in order for us to rank up there with those best Bulls teams, we have to win more than two championships."

The Sixers now have to win the final three games of the seven-game series, a feat no team has ever accomplished in the finals.

They are beaten up, mentally and physically, practically running on fumes.

"I have enough in my gas tank to keep going, but I don't know when it's going to run out," Iverson said. "Hopefully we'll win this game, and I'll find out in L.A."

Asked if he could remember the last time he lost three consecutive games, Jackson pondered the question for a moment and answered with a simple, "No."

For the record, the Lakers haven't lost three straight since Jackson took over as head coach two seasons ago, and a Jackson-coached team has not had a three-game losing streak since December 1994, during Jordan's first retirement.

The Lakers held a 3-1 lead over the Indiana Pacers last season but fell behind by 20 points at halftime and lost Game 5 by 33 points.

The Pacers, however, had more offensive weapons and were healthier than the 76ers, who have received little from anyone other than Iverson and Dikembe Mutombo.

Further decreasing their chances, the 76ers are facing a team that is 3-0 in elimination games this season. A year ago, Los Angeles was 4-6 in elimination games.

"We put ourselves in this situation last year and got blown out in Game 5, but we've matured so much this season that it's very difficult for us to imagine coming in to Game 5 and having a letdown like we had last year," Bryant said.

The Lakers are playing with a level of confidence that would have been foreign to last year's team. Actually, it would have seemed foreign to this year's team just a few months ago, when Bryant and O'Neal were taking potshots at one another and the team was infected with finger-pointing, internal discord, and pettiness.

Back in late March and early April, there were serious doubts about whether the Lakers would even have the homecourt advantage in the first round.

threw part of Piazza's shattered bat in front of the All-Star catcher, one of baseball's more bizarre moments.

Torre said pitching Clemens at Shea would have led local newscasts to promote the matchup as "World War III."

"Who cares? I could care less," Piazza said. "We've got our own problems. I'm not even thinking about it. It's irrelevant to me. I don't even think about it."

After Pettitte (7-4) pitches against Leiter (3-4) in the opener, Mike Mussina (5-7) will go for the Yankees on Saturday against Kevin Appier (4-5), and rookie Ted Lilly (2-1) will pitch Sunday night against the Mets' Rick Reed (7-2).

"We want to win, but we have to win all our games right now, because we've been struggling," Mets third baseman Robin Ventura said.

The Yankees won four of the six regular-season meetings last year and they lead the regular-season series, 11-7, including 5-4 at Shea.

"A lot of the feeling you get out on the field before the game that the guys really talk about, a lot of it comes from the crowd," Valentine said. "They're really into it, and they stand during the game — every pitch they're ranting and raving. I think that creates a wonderful environment."

U.S. to stop Jamaica's home unbeaten

By Ronald Associated
Jamaica is not friendly tourist destination. The U.S. soccer team will stop Jamaica's home unbeaten record when they play the Jamaicans at National Stadium in Kingston for Saturday's first round of the World Cup qualifier, the Jamaicans played a home game with a home addition to headwind, and a bump.

"I never played that bad since I Harkes said for after the American Jamaicans played in the same stadium. Jamaica has a 50-game unbeaten record at National Stadium. "The Office," includes 44 games. Jamaica's national team's last loss was 3-0 in States in an exhibition game on Nov. 22, 1994.

"The field is eroded by grass this time. I don't think it's our team experience. U.S. coach Bruce Arena said Thursday as they prepared in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. "It's not the

U.S. to face Jamaica in World Cup qualifier

■ The U.S. is trying to stop Jamaica's 50-game home unbeaten streak.

By Ronald Blum
 Associated Press

Jamaica is not exactly a friendly tourist destination for the U.S. soccer team.

When the Americans arrive at National Stadium in Kingston for Saturday's World Cup qualifier, they expect to be greeted with a hostile crowd, in addition to heat, humidity, wind, and a bumpy field.

"I never played on a field that bad since I was 12," John Harkes said four years ago after the Americans and Jamaicans played a qualifier in the same stadium.

Jamaica has a seven-year, 50-game unbeaten streak at National Stadium, nicknamed "The Office," a run that includes 44 games against national-team opponents. Its last loss was 3-0 to the United States in an exhibition game on Nov. 22, 1994.

"The field is entirely covered by grass this time around. I don't think it's the same field our team experienced in '97," U.S. coach Bruce Arena said Thursday as the Americans prepared in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. "It's not the greatest field, but the field is adequate."

While the Americans are 1-0-3 in qualifiers against Jamaica, both games at Kingston — the first was in 1988 — wound up scoreless. The Reggae Boyz, who made their first World Cup appearance in 1998, beat Trinidad and Tobago, 1-0, and tied Honduras, 1-1, in their two previous home qualifiers this year.

"The atmosphere on Saturday should be tremendous," Arena said. "It's obviously going to be a sold-out stadium. We expect a bright, yellow crowd in the stands and a very enthusiastic following. Jamaica has stated publicly it needs to win, and it's going for three points. The Jamaicans have a lot of pressure on them."

The United States (3-0) is trying for its first five-game winning streak in World Cup qualifying. It appears to be in good shape to get one of the three berths to the North and South American and Caribbean region.

Jamaica is tied with Mexico and Costa Rica at 1-1-1 in the regional finals but is fourth on goal difference.

"The weather is going to be tough, but it is going to be five times worse for the opponents," Jamaica coach Clovis de Oliveira said Wednesday.

Phil Coale/Associated Press

But forwards Brian McBride and Joe-Max Moore, the starting duo when the year began, are back after missing the last two qualifiers. McBride sprained his right knee against Mexico, and Moore tore a left calf muscle.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Four Hawkeyes will compete at track and field's national level

Iowa Seniors Jeremy Allen and Jim Costello are scheduled to compete at the 2001 GMC Envoy USA Outdoor Track and Field Championships, June 21-24.

Their teammates, freshmen Ken Kemeny and Chris Voller, will compete at the 2001 U.S. Junior National Championships.

Allen, Iowa's only five-time All-American in the throwing events, will compete in the shot put June 22 and the discus on June 23. Costello will compete in the hammer throw June 21.

The meet will serve as the trials for the 2001 World Outdoor Championships to be held Aug. 3-12 in Alberta, Canada.

Kemeny will compete in the shot put, and Voller in the hammer throw June 23.

The top two finishers in each event will be eligible for a meet in England and Scotland this summer and for the Junior Pan American Games to be held in October.

"Anytime you that you can extend a student-athlete's season and provide them with an opportunity to compete against the best in the country, it is a plus for both the competitor and for our track program," Iowa coach Larry Wiecezorek said.

Two Hawkeye rowers chosen second team All-American

The College Rowing Coaches Association announced Katie Garrels and Megan Martin as second team All-American selections on June 13.

The two women were chosen using six different criteria: Varsity 8 record, strength of schedule, nomination rank, coaches recommendation, 2K org score and membership on an all-region team.

The two Iowa rowers were both members of the Varsity 8 boat that received Big Ten Boat of the Week on April 4. Garrels and Martin also helped lead the Hawkeyes to their first-ever team section to compete in the NCAA Championships.

Thunder Collins is accused of assaulting girlfriend

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Backup Nebraska running back Thunder Collins has been accused of assaulting his girlfriend.

Collins, 21, was cited late Tuesday for misdemeanor domestic assault, the Lincoln Journal Star reported Thursday. Police said he lives with the 19-year-old woman, Shannon Howell, who is a sophomore on the Nebraska women's basketball team.

Coach Frank Solich said the team was evaluating the situation. A June 27 court date was set.

It is Collins' second brush with the law in less than three months. He was accused of holding a loud party in April, then was arrested for failing to appear in court before he pleaded guilty March 31 to maintaining a disorderly house and was fined $100 plus court costs.

Haston decides to remain in NBA draft

INDIANAPOLIS — Kirk Haston, the Big Ten's second-leading scorer last season while leading Indiana to the NCAA tournament, has decided to stay in the NBA draft rather than return to school for his senior year.

A statement from coach Mike Davis said Haston had made up his mind to leave for the draft, set for June 27.

"Playing the NBA is a lifelong dream of any basketball player. We support Kirk in his decision," Davis said from his home state of Alabama. "We certainly would have been a very good team with Kirk next year, but we're very excited about the players we have returning."

Rockies win first of doubleheader

DENVER (AP) — Shawn Chacon shut down the league's hottest team and also got his first major league hit as the Colorado Rockies beat the Seattle Mariners, 8-2, Thursday in the first game of a day-night doubleheader.

Ben Petrick added two hits and two RBIs for the Rockies, who ended Seattle's six-game road winning streak.

The Mariners, who had won 17 of 18, fell to 49-14. Seattle tied the 1939 New York Yankees for the second-best 63-game start since 1900 after the 1912 New York Giants (52-11).

Chacon (4-3), a rookie who grew up in Greeley, about an hour northeast of Denver, gave up an unearned run and two hits in seven innings. He struck out six and walked three.

Padres 6, Athletics 4

SAN DIEGO — Phil Nevin hit a grand slam with one out in the eighth, his second homer of the game, and the San Diego Padres rallied to beat the Oakland Athletics, 6-4, Thursday to avoid a three-game sweep.

It was just San Diego's fourth win in 19 games.

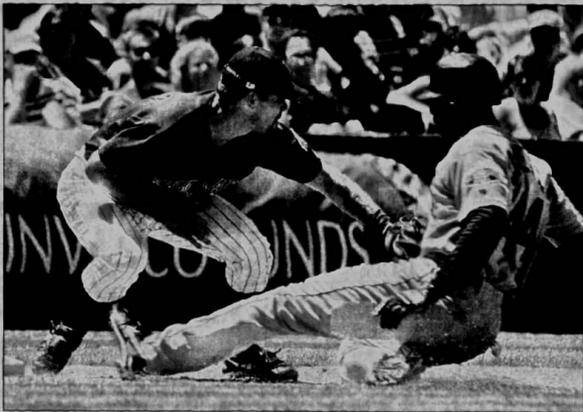

Trailing 4-2 in the eighth, the Padres loaded the bases on consecutive singles by pinch-hitter Dave Magadan and rookie Cesar Crespo, who replaced the badly slumping Rickey Henderson in the leadoff spot.

After Mark Kotsay's sacrifice, Oakland manager Art Howe had reliever Jim Mecir (2-6) intentionally walk Ryan Klesko to load the bases, then brought on sidearmer Chad Bradford to face Nevin.

Diamondbacks 3, Cubs 2

PHOENIX — Randy Johnson struck out 11 to move into 10th on baseball's career strikeout list Thursday as the Arizona Diamondbacks beat Chicago, 3-2, to take two of three from the Cubs. Johnson (8-4) raised his total to 3,199, seven more than Ferguson Jenkins.

The Big Unit shut out the Cubs for seven innings, then left after walking Eric Young and giving up a single to Miguel Cairo to start the eighth. When he reached the dugout, Johnson slammed his fist into the bullpen telephone in disgust.

Giants 10, Angels 4

SAN FRANCISCO — Barry Bonds hit his 34th homer, and Jeff Kent had a bases-loaded triple as the San Francisco Giants swept a three-game series from Anaheim on Thursday with a 10-4 victory over the Angels.

Benito Santiago drove in three runs, and Rich Aurilia went 3-for-5 with a homer and two RBIs as San Francisco pounded Ismael Valdes (4-4) to win for the seventh time in 10 games.

Bonds' 528th career homer, on a 2-1 pitch from right-hander Lou Pote in the sixth inning, was a late flourish on a powerful game by the entire Giants' lineup.

Devil Rays 6, Phillies 3

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Fred McGriff homered and drove in three runs Thursday as the Tampa Bay Devil Rays beat the Philadelphia Phillies, 6-3, to complete a three-game sweep of the NL East leaders.

The victory was the fifth in six games for the Devil Rays and left Pittsburgh as the only team in the majors that has not won three straight this season.

The Phillies have lost nine of 11 games and watched their lead in the NL East shrink to two games over the Atlanta Braves.

Red Sox 6, Marlins 4

BOSTON — Brian Daubach hit the first grand slam of his career, and David Cone's comeback progressed with seven strong innings as the Boston Red Sox beat the Florida Marlins, 6-4, Thursday night.

Daubach's 11th homer of the season erased a 3-0 lead Florida had taken in the second on Mike Lowell's solo homer and Derrek Lee's two-run shot.

That was the only inning in which Cone (2-1) struggled, as he allowed just two runners on a walk to Lowell and a single by Kevin Millar in his last five innings. Rich Garces replaced Cone to start the eighth.

Cone retired 13 of the last 14 batters he faced. In his previous appearance, a 3-2 win over Philadelphia on June 8 that was his first victory in nine starts, he retired 12 of the last 15 hitters.

David Kruse first player taken in PTL draft

Iowa star Reggie Evans is picked second in the summer league.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

David Kruse, an Iowa City High graduate who plays pro ball in Sweden, was the top pick of the Prime Time League draft Thursday night. He was selected by Merrill Lynch/Nike coach and league founder Randy Larson. Larson, who passed on Iowa star Reggie Evans, says he has a good personal relationship with Kruse, who led Larson's team to the league title last year. "We won the title last year," Larson said. "We approach the game the same way, he plays ball in Sweden, and I just like him a lot."

Evans was taken as the second pick in the draft by Goodfellow Printing/Imprinted Sportswear. The senior-to-be led the nation in rebounds last year. Former Iowa player Darryl Moore was the third pick, and Jared Reiner was fourth. Glen Worley, Troy Washpun, Sean Sonderleiter, and Duez Henderson rounded out the first-round picks.

Iowa guard Brody Boyd the first pick of the second round, and forward Courtney Scott was the 12th overall pick.

All of Iowa's four incoming recruits will participate in the league. Chauncey Leslie, Pierre Pierce, Marcellus Sommerville, and Erik Hanson were all selected in the second round.

Evans second draft pick

Larson said it was crucial for Iowa's recruits to be involved because that draws the most fan attention. "We've got all the recruits coming in, which is nice, because the crowd really likes to see the new faces," he said. Missing from this summer's action will be Luke Recker, who averaged 18 points per game for the Hawkeyes before injuring his knee midway through the season. His is still recovering from the injury. Teammate Ryan Hogan will also be recovering from a knee injury and also will not participate.

Larson said it is a loss to not have those guys around, but, he said, the league still has lots of talent.

"We still have lots of talent left without him," he said. "It's would be nice to have a great player who will be playing in the NBA, but he needs to get back to 100 percent."

Another familiar name that will compete this summer is

Prime Time League first-round draft picks

2. Reggie Evans Imprinted Sportswear/Goodfellow Printing
3. Darryl Moore Mike Gatens Real Estate/Highland Park Development
4. Jared Reiner Lepic-Kroeger Realtors/Active Endeavors

6. Troy Washpun Deli-Mart/Iowa City Read Mix
7. Sean Sonderleiter Fitzpatrick's Brewery and Steakhouse
8. Duez Henderson Community Motors/Goodfellow

Dean Oliver, the former Hawkeye point guard. Oliver was a late-round pick by Larson and will only compete for a few early games because of his attempt to play pro ball. Former Iowa star Acie Earl was selected in the third round.

Prime Time League actions will kick off June 18 at 4:30 p.m. in the North Liberty Community Center. Admission to games is free, and the facilities are air-conditioned.

U.S. OPEN

Hale storms Southern Hills

The 56-year-old shot a 67 for a first round lead.

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press

TULSA, Okla. — Tiger Woods never said winning another U.S. Open would be easy. He also never envisioned chasing a man more than twice his age.

Eleven years after becoming the oldest U.S. Open champion, 56-year-old Hale Irwin showed he has plenty of game left Thursday with momentum-saving pars and an unlikely birdie on the tough 18th hole for a 3-under 67.

"My purpose here this week is not to be ceremonial. It's to be competitive," Irwin said. "And I think today established those bona fide credentials."

All Woods established was that he was human.

After chopping his way to a double bogey on No. 9 — his first in a major since the third round of the PGA Championship — Woods fell to 3-over par and was in danger of dropping another shot when heavy storms swamped Southern Hills and suspended the first round.

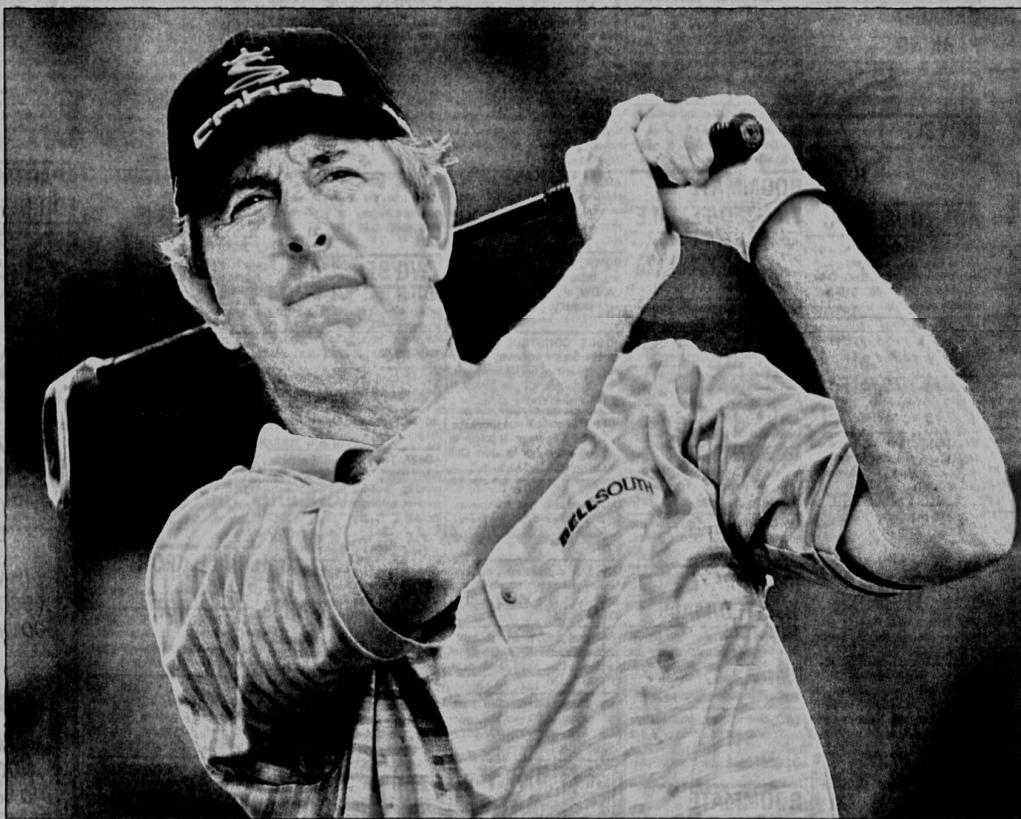

Only 66 players in the 156-man field managed to complete their rounds.

When play resumes at 7 a.m. Friday, Woods will face an 8-foot par putt on No. 10 and a long day of trying to make up for the lost time.

Retief Goosen of South Africa birdied the seventh hole just before the sirens sounded and was tied with Irwin at 3 under. Toshi Izawa of Japan was at 2 under after four holes.

Loren Roberts and Stewart Cink were the only other players who finished their rounds under par, both at 69.

Phil Mickelson made back-to-back bogeys on the back nine to finish at 70, along with Sergio Garcia, Angel Cabrera, and Matt Gogel.

Suzanne Plunkett/Associated Press

Hale Irwin watches his tee shot on the 11th hole during the first round of the U.S. Open golf championship at Southern Hills Country Club in Tulsa, Okla., Thursday.

Davis Love III, playing for the first time in two months because of neck and back injuries, bogeyed the last two holes for a 72.

Irwin, who qualified by winning the Senior Open, can become the oldest first-round leader of the U.S. Open since World War II if his lead stands. Where he goes from there is anyone's guess, but he won't rule himself out yet.

"It's not like I've never been here before," he said. Irwin has won the U.S.

Open three times, one fewer than Jack Nicklaus and Ben Hogan and two more than Woods. His last title came in 1990 at Medinah, when he was given a special exemption to play and beat unheralded Mike Donald in a playoff.

Who can forget Irwin prancing along the ropes slapping high-fives with the gallery after a 45-foot putt on the 72nd hole to get into a playoff?

PHILADELPHIA — Kobe Bryant was dreaming of a dynasty, Shaquille O'Neal was pondering his legacy, and Ron Harper and Horace Grant were making comparisons with the Chicago Bulls of the 1990s.

The Los Angeles Lakers were getting a little ahead of themselves Thursday on the eve of Game 5 but with good reason.

There was a sense pervading the First Union Center that the NBA Finals are all but over. Even the Philadelphia 76ers seemed ready to succumb to the inevitable.

Subway series loses its flare with both teams struggling

The Mets are 8 1/2 games out of first place, and the Yankees trail Boston by two games.

NEW YORK — Andy Pettitte vs. Al Leiter. Sound familiar?

It's the same matchup as in Game 5 of last year's World Series, only the stakes will be a lot lower when the Yankees and Mets play at Shea Stadium tonight in their first meeting this year.

The Subway Series has veered off track.

"They have struggled, and you know their players are better than that," Yankees manager Joe Torre said. "It's one of those things you have to fight your way through."

The Mets were 29-36 entering Thursday night, 8 1/2 games behind NL East-leading Philadelphia. The Yankees, who have their own problems, were 35-28 going into their series finale against Montreal, trailing first-place Boston by two games in the AL East.

The Mets still think about last year's five-game loss to the Yankees, and manager Bobby Valentine remembers that the Yankees were cheered in Shea Stadium.

"Maybe because it isn't a World Series, that it's only a Subway Series, we'll have all of our fans in our ballpark," he said.

Last year, they were two of baseball's most exciting teams and gave New York its first Subway Series since 1956.

This year, they're giving their fans mostly grief.

"It won't be quite the same because it isn't the World Series," Mets first baseman Todd Zeile said. "But it's something that everyone will be excited about. I think there will be some kind of a playoff-type atmosphere, and the fans will be fired up."

They'll be a little less fired up than they would if Roger Clemens was pitching.

Torre managed his rotation to ensure the five-time Cy Young Award winner wouldn't pitch — and bat — at Shea Stadium.

The Mets and their fans have been angry since Clemens beaned Mike Piazza at Yankee Stadium last July. Clemens raised the level of ire during the World Series when he
