Man's death sparks probe

■ The death of Timothy Becker will be treated as a homicide for now, authorities say.

By George Pappas
 The Daily Iowan

The body of a man found three miles southeast of Iowa City Sunday has been tentatively identified as that of Timothy Allen Becker.

Preliminary autopsy results show that Becker, 42, died from blunt trauma, according to the Johnson County Sheriff's Office. Reports did not specify where the trauma occurred, and identification of the body needs to be completed with fingerprint analysis following the autopsy conducted Monday.

Although the death has not been ruled a homicide, officials are treating the case as such until results of an investigation by the sheriff's office and state Division of Criminal Investigation can prove otherwise.

The sheriff's office responded to a call placed by a neighbor Sunday regarding an "unresponsive subject." Officers arrived at 4494 Taft Ave. S.E., Lot C29 and discovered Becker's body. Sheriff Robert Carpenter would not comment on the case.

County Medical Examiner David White said that determining the victim's identification, cause of death, and whether the case is a homicide could take between a few days and six weeks.

White was not able to comment further on the case, saying the investigation is still in its early stages.

Becker was known to have had a history of health problems for which he took medication. Some residents of Breckenridge Estates, a mobile-home park, said Becker's medical history may have contributed to his death.

Other people have died around here, and they haven't done anything like this.

— Dennis Ryan, Breckenridge Estates resident said they suspect foul play in his death.

"It's just weird [if it was a homicide] that no one had seen or heard anything, because they practically live right on top of each other," said Kendra Wieditz, a resident of Breckenridge Estates.

Other residents were left wondering why the death attracted news crews, criminal-investigation units, and police officers if there was no suspicion of criminal behavior.

"Other people have died around here, and they haven't done anything like this," said resident Dennis Ryan.

The manager of Breckenridge Estates said he was unaware of the incident.

Breckenridge Estates resident Lisa Alderman said that the incident may cause her to take more precautions in the usually peaceful neighborhood.

"If it was natural causes, then that's all right. But if it was murder, that's something else," she said. "It would definitely make me lock my doors at night."

Anyone with information concerning Becker is asked to contact the sheriff's office at 356-6020.

Union down for the 21-day count

■ The bar will serve a liquor-license suspension until July 15.

By Kellie Doyle
 The Daily Iowan

One of the participants in the Union Bar's controversial bikini contests says she's happy that the Union Bar is serving a 21-day liquor-license suspension, even if the penalty is being carried out during the summer, when the downtown Iowa City scene is less congested with students.

UI sophomore Jen Ripka said she is glad the Union, 121 E. College St., is at least acknowledging its mistake in permitting underage women to drink free alcohol and, in some instances, expose their breasts and genitals.

Lynn Walding, the administrator of Iowa's Alcoholic Beverages Division, accepted a recommendation June 29 to suspend the bar's license for three weeks and fine owner Jim Pohl $2,000 for incidents that occurred during the contests.

The recommendation stemmed from an agreement between the Iowa attorney general's office and Pohl. Signs posted in the bar's windows last month announced that it would be

Every UI apparel licensee has now signed the university's Code of Conduct, but some students and community leaders still criticized the school's officials Monday for giving Nike what they contend is special treatment.

Over the weekend, Nike became the last licensee to sign the conduct code, which governs the labor practices of university-apparel licensees, after twice asking for revisions to the code and extensions, said Dan Teets, a member of the advisory committee overseeing the code.

The university revised the code after Nike expressed dissatisfaction with two stipulations regarding the definition of a living wage and the requirement of a 48-hour workweek. Nike only agreed with the living-wage provision in principle, and the company will be allowed to use 60-hour workweeks, the industry standard.

Changes to the code had been made by the university in order to "clarify" the two stipulations to encourage six remaining companies to sign. Nike failed to sign the code on June 29, when the only other hold-out, Russell Athletics, agreed to join the university's

■ All indications are the cease-fire will not hold, says a U.N. envoy.

By Greg Myre

JERUSALEM — An unstable Mideast truce teetered near collapse Monday after an Israeli was shot dead at point-blank range, Israeli forces killed a Palestinian whom they mistook for a terrorist, and a pair of car bombs rattled a town in central Israel.

The attacks on Israeli targets were apparently in retaliation for the killings of five Palestinian militants Sunday, and the two days of unrest marked the worst spasm of violence since the cease-fire was declared June 13.

Israelis, Palestinians, and even U.N. Mideast envoy Terje Roed-Larsen all offered gloomy assessments, warning that daily violence was rapidly undermining a truce that has never fully taken hold.

Gene Zdrzil's private Fourth of July fireworks show isn't so private anymore.

Zdrzil and the Stump Town Shooters, a group certified to teach individuals how to shoot off fireworks, entertained approximately 400 people June 30 during their seventh annual celebration, which doesn't always coincide with the Fourth of July.

"It's a private party, but a lot of people come if they hear about it," Zdrzil said. "Each year it grows bigger."

People can't seem to get enough of fireworks, he said. He would appear to be right.

The number of Johnson County residents who want to put on private displays has increased, and Iowa City and Coralville have scheduled their holiday celebrations around each other, allowing their residents to enjoy both shows.

By late last week, 40 people had applied to the Johnson County Board of Supervisors for

Milosevic to eschew counsel

■ The ex-dictator maintains that the U.N. war-crimes tribunal is part of a Western conspiracy against Serbs.

By Robert H. Reid
Associated Press

THE HAGUE, Netherlands — Slobodan Milosevic will refuse legal representation when he appears Tuesday before the U.N. war-crimes tribunal, maintaining that the court is part of a Western conspiracy to exterminate the Serb people, his lawyers said.

In a landmark move, Milosevic will appear Tuesday before a three-judge panel to answer charges that he was responsible for the murders and expulsions carried out by his forces during the brutal crackdown against Kosovo Albanians two years ago.

Milosevic, who was transferred here June 29 by the pro-democracy government of Yugoslavia's republic Serbia, will become the first former head of state to a U.N. tribunal for alleged crimes committed during his rule.

On the eve of his appearance, Milosevic conferred for three hours with two Yugoslav lawyers at the Dutch prison where he and the 38 other Yugoslav war-crimes defendants are being held.

Afterward, lawyers Zdenko Tomanovic and Dragan Krgovic told reporters that Milosevic refuses to accept the validity of the court, established in 1993 by the U.N. Security Council to prosecute those believed responsible for crimes committed during Balkan wars, which the United States and its allies believe he instigated.

"Mr. Milosevic does not recognize The Hague tribunal," Tomanovic said. Milosevic believes the tribunal "is part of a mechanism to commit genocide on the Serb people."

"He is not going to appoint any lawyer," Tomanovic added. He said Milosevic would refuse legal representation during the arraignment and the trial, which is expected to begin next year.

Tomanovic said Milosevic would appear in court for the arraignment — although he has the right not to do so under tribunal rules. The lawyers said Milosevic would try to make a public statement but if the judges cut him off, they would release a text "of what he wanted to say."

It appeared that Milosevic intends to argue that his only crime was to stand up against NATO, a defense unlikely to win points with the court but one he believes will bolster his reputation among his own people.

The U.S. has provided evidence concerning Milosevic to the U.N. War Crimes Tribunal, and it is prepared to provide additional information, the U.S. State Department said.

Tribunal spokesman Jim Landale confirmed that Milosevic, himself a lawyer, had refused his right to counsel.

"He has advised us he does not wish to have defense counsel present tomorrow," Landale said. "We have advised him against this, but it's his right."

Tomanovic would not say whether Milosevic intended to enter a plea. Landale said that if a defendant refuses to enter a plea, the court will wait 30 days and then enter a "not guilty" plea for him.

Protesters demanded new elections, hoping they would unseat the pro-democracy government of Serbia, the main Yugoslav republic, whose leaders handed Milosevic to the tribunal.

Woman held for burglary, forgery

■ Mary Luarks of Coralville is accused of stealing checks from a local elderly man.

By Grant Schulte
The Daily Iowan

A Coralville woman accused of breaking into the apartment of her former neighbor, an elderly man, and stealing his checks two years ago was arrested again for the same offense June 30.

Mary Luarks, 51, was arrested outside of an Iowa City Hy-Vee and charged with three counts of second-degree burglary and eight counts of forgery, according to Johnson County District Court records.

Luarks allegedly entered the Coralville apartment of 83-year-old Kenny Thomas three times between June 28 and the early morning hours of June 30. According to court records, Luarks took several of Thomas' checks as he slept and forged his signature without consent.

Luarks then allegedly cashed several checks at the Lantern Park Plaza Hy-Vee as well as the Coralville Hills Bank and the Hills Drive-in Bank, 1401 S. Gilbert St., court records said. The amount she allegedly stole totaled $3,395.

After police read Luarks her Miranda rights, she admitted to taking several checks from Thomas' residence, according to court records.

Police arrested Luarks for stealing checks from Thomas in 1999, said Coralville police Detective Rob Swank, and she was still serving probation for that offense at the time of her arrest. He added that police don't know what Luarks did with the money.

"She wasn't his care provider or anything, just an acquaintance," Swank said. "We're conducting an ongoing investigation to see if she has done this to anyone else."

Thomas, who has lived in his apartment for 31 years, said

"After I got to know her, I decided I didn't want to have anything to do with her," he said.

Iowa City and Coralville bank officials say that although such crimes aren't common, they pose a legitimate threat to consumer safety.

"Every financial institution probably has a handful of incidents like this," said Hills Bank spokesman John Benson, who declined to elaborate on the bank's forgery-protection policies or the case. "Forgeries can sometimes be detected through audit processes, but the best thing a customer can do is to check their statements when they get them."

Luarks was released to the Department of Correctional Services June 30. Her preliminary hearing is set for July 20 at 2 p.m.

NATION BRIEF

Pacemaker and all, Cheney promotes energy plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Dick Cheney waded back into energy policy, national security, and U.S.-China relations Monday, undaunted by the new pacemaker in his chest. He flashed an "OK" sign when asked how he felt two days after it was implanted.

Cheney said in an Oval Office session with President Bush he was "a little tender in the shoulder," but added, "It'll pass."

The vice president said little with reporters present, but at midday he took to the nation's airwaves to defend the administration's energy strategy, conducting a series of radio interviews meant to boost its prospects in Congress. "Our way of life depends on having adequate supplies of energy and affordable energy," Cheney told WHAM in Rochester, N.Y.

"We think with coal as abundant as it is in the United States, there's enough here to last us several hundred years," he told WWVA in Wheeling, W. Va. — a major coal-producing state.

Cheney quarterbacked the administration's development of a national energy strategy, which the White House released in May.

The vice president has refused to divulge to congressional investigators the identities of those who attended the dozens of meetings that helped his energy task force formulate the strategy.

"We've refused to do that on the grounds that people ought to be able to talk to their government without having their names appear in the newspaper simply because they spoke to their elected officials," Cheney said on WHAM.

He rejected comparisons with Hillary Rodham Clinton's health-care task force, which received fierce GOP criticism for meeting in secret. "She was not a government employee, and a lot of the people involved in the task force — that is, actually sitting in the meetings and making decisions — were not government employees," he said.

Asked to characterize China's relationship with the United States, he said, "We're not enemies at this point, probably not friends either."

"Unfortunately, it's still a communist regime," Cheney said. "They still govern themselves in a manner that we think is unfortunate, in part because we don't think they have due regard for the rights of their citizens."

Merger skies not so friendly for United

■ Chances seem dim for a United/US Airways deal.

By Dave Carpenter
Associated Press

CHICAGO — United Airlines is pulling the plug on its $4.3 billion purchase of US Airways — a deal that has been in trouble for months because of a weakened economy, industry woes, and antitrust concerns.

While stopping short of declaring the deal dead, the two airlines said Monday they are talking about scuttling it.

United is convinced the deal will not win regulatory approval, said a person familiar with the matter who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

Transportation Secretary Norman Mineta said last month he expected the government to reject the merger.

The deal would have been the biggest airline merger in history. But both airlines have problems of their own to sort out — United has slipped to No. 2 behind American Airlines and US Airways has shaky finances.

Some experts see the long-expected collapse of the deal as good news for everyone.

"It's good for United because it can focus on its real business challenges. It's good for US Air because it can focus on being a stand-alone carrier. And it's good for the consumer, who won't lose a lot of competition because of the merger," said Michael Boyd, an industry consultant in Evergreen, Colo.

United unveiled the merger plan in May 2000, hoping to increase its presence in the lucrative East Coast market and nearly triple its daily flights to more than 6,400 a day.

It quickly ran into opposition from rivals, unions, Congress, consumer groups, and state attorneys general, many of whom complained it would reduce competition, particularly in the Washington area.

To try to ease antitrust concerns, United agreed in January to sell some US Airways assets to American Airlines, including half of US Airways' Washington-New York-Boston shuttle.

But experts said a complicated, costly deal no longer made financial sense for United.

The airline reported a worse-than-expected first-quarter loss of $313 million and said it expects a double-digit decline in revenue for the second quarter. United also signed a contract with its pilots last year,

Downtown gets its groove on — really on

■ In its 10th year, the Iowa City Jazz Festival is a community jewel.

By Maggie Campbell
The Daily Iowan

Downtown played host to an abundance of jazz fans, festival lovers, and vibrant rhythms over the weekend.

The 10th annual Iowa City Jazz Festival enjoyed a mixture of sweltering and idyllic weather and a bevy of animated and engaged listeners, as several different interpretations of jazz rang through the central business district throughout the weekend.

This year's festival brought a range of performers into downtown, including high-school students from Iowa City, Independence, and Chicago on June 29.

Mainstage headliners Carla Bley and Steve Swallow were featured on June 30, and the festival closed with the exuberant fused-jazz, Caribbean, and big-band sound of Cubanismo on Sunday evening.

M.C. Ginsberg, the co-founder and current sponsor of the festival, praised the festival as an event capable of presenting a variety of valuable opportunities to the community.

"You can never anticipate the type of growth this kind of thing can have. By crossing cultural and generational lines, and because it is free of cost, this festival is without prejudice and is a focal point of this community," he said.

Ginsberg, who dreamed up the fest with current director Steve Grismore in 1991, said their intention was to bring new traffic and vivacity to the downtown area.

Musicians' intriguing rhythms, food vendors' delectable culinary aromas, and responsive listeners saturated Dubuque and Washington streets throughout the weekend and appeared to satisfy Ginsberg's and Grismore's initial desire to re-energize downtown Iowa City.

Escaping happiness with a smile

■ Escape from Happiness will make you laugh and smile about your family.

By Jen Brown
The Daily Iowan

"Family, love, fear, betrayal, violence, chaos, and dread. Apparently, I think all these things are funny."

A copy of a handwritten note bearing this assertion appears next to the table of contents in this year's Iowa Summer Rep program. The statement is signed, after a salutation of "Good Luck," by George F. Walker, a Canadian playwright featured on the UI stage this summer.

Each year for the past 15 years, Summer Rep has chosen a playwright and has spotlighted three works by her or him. This year's selection of Walker seeks to introduce the audience to a playwright with whom few Americans are familiar.

It is unfortunate that so many people aren't acquainted with Walker, because Escape From Happiness, the play that kicks off this year's Iowa Summer Rep, is exactly what an American audience looks for in stage drama: an edgy, humorous, thoroughly modern, and entertaining play.

The story revolves around a family — a mother and three daughters — in a crime-ridden neighborhood in a large city and how they find themselves drawn into the criminal mischief taking place around them. The family could be called anything from quirky to completely dysfunctional, and as the plot plays out, these traits become increasingly potent.

While the story probably isn't one your family could tell, the way in which the characters relate to one another may feel very familiar. Walker uses humor masterfully, creating a bizarre world just a few degrees removed from most people's reality. This makes the audience feel it's OK to laugh, while recognizing many similarities between the staged relationships and their own quirky families they have known and loved.

While the actors had an amazing script to work from, the acting is top-notch and vital to the success of the piece. The actors must be able to walk the same line as the playwright in entertaining the audience, while also reminding them of the darker issues involved in the play. All of the actors in Escape from Happiness do this as though it was as easy as breathing.

The casting is dead-on; every actor is perfectly suited for her or his role. The play as a whole — acting, script, and set design — is very engaging. This is accentuated by a small, intimate theater that allows the viewer to feel involved in the action of the play. For these reasons, the play, which runs almost two and a half hours with an intermission, kept the audience's attention the entire time, earning the actors enthusiastic applause at every scene change and emphatic cheering at the end.

While Walker's note at the front of the program in many ways epitomizes the overtones of the play, the audience members walk away with more than just a smile. They leave the theater with a richer sense of what family can mean. And maybe with a nagging urge to call their mothers.

IOWA CITY'S CULTURE DISAPPEARS AFTER SUMMER ...

A cultural chameleon

The difference between Iowa City during the three short months of summer and the academic year is almost incomprehensible. During the summer, Iowa City lives up to its cultural-artsy-world claims. However, at some point in August, all creative doors in the downtown area fly shut in the face of the UI's returning students.

Throughout the summertime in Iowa City, there are a plethora of municipal activities in and around the downtown area. The Art Festival showcases many local artists, while the Jazz Festival brings in musicians from around the country. During these festivals, businesses open their doors to welcome the crowds that flood the Pedestrian Mall.

On any other given weekend, other varieties of entertainment can be enjoyed downtown.

If Iowa City would offer year-round the mature, cultural atmosphere it offers during the summer, the students would likely act more mature and cultured.

One day, an area high-school performance group may dance or act for the people passing by. Another evening, an intense chess tournament may take place with the oversized chess pieces on the Ped Mall.

Unfortunately, several thousand UI students miss these activities if their lives take them away from Iowa City for the summer. Even more regrettable, however, is that upon their return to school, none of the same types of events are offered. It seems the Iowa City Council and other organizations that sponsor such activities worry about providing entertainment to students who appear unable to control a growing alcohol problem.

But the problem is precisely this: No alternative entertainment is offered once school is underway. Thus, the alcohol problem that emerges during the academic year is only the result of a lack of choices. If Iowa City would offer year-round the mature, cultural atmosphere it offers during the summer, the students would likely act more mature and cultured.

Iowa City can be a wonderful place to live. It can offer its residents so many activities and forms of entertainment. It can be the center of Iowa's art and creativity. This happens three months out of the year, but it needs to be an everyday occurrence.

TAX CUT

Praise the lord and pass the fossil fuels

Tower Place clock watch: After 17 days of being five minutes slow (some observers were beginning to think the new municipal slogan was "Paris of the Slow Prairies," which, you have to admit, sounds a bit redundant), the city of Iowa City learned how to tell time.

It's hard to tell which is more amazing: That it took the city almost three weeks to figure out what time it was — or that it only took the city almost three weeks to figure out what time it was. So, several million dollars later, we can all rest easily, knowing that the city's new parking ramp can tell time. Of course, it's still a parking ramp hunkered down under that clock.

Which is symbolic of all that's wrong with environmental and energy policy in this country. In an era in which the planet is facing an environmental crisis called global warming, brought about in large part because human beings are burning fossil fuels, it is insanity to encourage people to drive. Which is exactly what building parking ramps does. It is the ostrich-like equivalent of burrowing your head deep in the sand and saying, "No warming here. No pollution, either."

Governmental bodies should be doing everything in their power to discourage driving. Instead of building parking ramps (there's another one scheduled to be built on Burlington Street), this town should make all of downtown a Ped Mall. The federal government should raise the fuel tax so that gasoline goes for $5 a gallon (which is about the price in Germany). For the privilege of being a major polluter, people who buy SUVs should be forced to pay an excise tax equal to the value of the vehicle.

Every year. Never happen, of course. When it comes to environmental policy, this country passes gas. Nowhere is this clearer than in Stealth President Cheney's environmental policies, which look as if they've been carved out by the oil industry. Of course, Cheney used to be an oil honcho (as did his mouthpiece, the Fraudulency in the West Wing). Wonder if there's a connection.

Oh, I know; the administration tries to be a little bit touchy-feely about the environment. Cheney trots his Shrubness out to do photo ops in Yellowstone and the Everglades. On June 28, the administration restored some of the funding it had originally cut for energy conservation and alternative fuels.

The key word there is "some." It's all window-dressing, bits of cosmetics trying to cover up the wart that is the Stealth President's environmental policy, done only because the administration's popularity is plummeting like a stone through a still pond. And, as the New York Times points out, it's not only that the approval ratings are down, it's why they are down: Moderate Republicans and independents are turning their thumbs down on Cheney and his Shrubness, largely because their stance on energy and the environment coddles Big Oil.

It's not just their pulling out of the Kyoto Protocol, flawed as it is, though it is not flawed for the reasons his Fraudulency gave. It is flawed because, through the trading of pollution credits, the United States (and other rich, industrialized nations) can continue to do business as usual.

And it's not just Cheney yanking the chain on his Shrubness' campaign promise to cut carbon-dioxide emissions, which are contributing mightily to global warming.

There are so many other things. Take Yellowstone, just for one example. The Clinton administration supported a rule banning snowmobiles from the park. In the winter, 1,000 snowmobilers cruise through the park everyday, creating, to quote the Times, "ear-shattering noise, nauseating air pollution, and havoc among the wildlife." On June 29, the Stealth President's administration announced it had agreed to delay the snowmobile ban while it conducts new studies.

New studies. How odd. That's exactly what the Stealth President wants to do on global warming: new studies.

Even though every reputable scientist who is knowledgeable about the subject agrees that global warming is caused in large part by human beings burning fossil fuels and that the only way to check it is to cut down.

So let's see. On the missile-defense system, which keeps failing its tests, we should push ahead full bore. On the environment, where we know what's going on, we need more studies.

In this country, environmental policy is a lot more than five minutes slow.

CHARTER AMENDMENTS GOOD FOR ALL ...

Amend the charter, improve I.C.

A progressive group in Iowa City has initiated efforts to hold the Iowa City municipal government responsible for its actions. Citizens for Accountable Local Government has proposed three amendments to the Iowa City Home Rule Charter to improve residents' ability to call into question the actions of the government.

Right now, the city manager and chief of police are appointed. Citizens can do nothing about this decision, regardless of their feelings about these people. The first amendment puts the people in these positions up to a retention vote starting in 2003 and every four years after that. If the citizens are dissatisfied with either official, they can express that. Further, favor will be known by a positive retention vote.

Citizens should also be able to voice their opinions concerning the Iowa City police. In consideration of this, the Police Citizens Review Board was established four years ago. However, a sunset clause is scheduled to go into effect in Overall, these amendments are best for everyone involved, from the officers to the citizens.

August. Any resident who would even consider calling into question the actions of the police must vote for this amendment.

The amendment not only establishes a permanent police board, it also gives the board specific powers, including holding at least one community forum each year, investigating claims of misconduct by officers made by citizens, and subpoenaing witnesses. The purpose of the community forum is to hear citizens' views on policies, practices, and procedures of the police and make recommendations to the City Council. Further, investigations conducted may result in independent reports to the council.

The police board may seem unimportant, but it is one of the greatest tools the Iowa City residents have in reaching the council regarding police practices and policies. Both good and bad are reported.

The third amendment goes along with the police efforts in community policing. With this legislation, the citizens of Iowa City declare that the department is a peacekeeping force, as opposed to a hostile, reactive power. This includes the citation-in-lieu-of-arrest clause, which protects nonviolent petty offenders. Further, this amendment shifts the priority of the police to focus on violent and destructive crime rather than on otherwise law-abiding citizens who have possession of small amounts of marijuana with no intent to traffic or distribute.

Overall, these amendments are best for everyone involved, from the officers to the citizens. Certainly, we are lucky to have such an opportune solution.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Police board: worth the money

As a resident of the downtown area, I'm grateful to my neighbors, the Iowa City police, for helping to make my neighborhood a safe and orderly place to live. I'm glad they're here, and I value the friendliness and approachability of the officers I've met. But I am also deeply concerned about the future of our Police Citizens Review Board.

When it comes to law enforcement, one crucial difference between a just, democratic society and an authoritarian police state is accountability to the people. A police board that can review police practices only at the direction of the city government or the department itself can hardly be effective in a democratic system of checks and balances.

Disbanding the committee would serve the community still less.

Currently, our police, in order to collect considerable Drug-War funds, are in the process of adopting more aggressive and intrusive policies and practices, including garbage searches, random "knock & talks," and arrest quotas for minor, nonviolent drug offenses. Many citizens have expressed grave concerns. At a time such as this, it is vital to the police-civilian relationship, the social well-being of our community, and the fundamentally democratic nature of our municipal government that citizens have a meaningful hand in determining how our neighborhoods are policed.

I appreciate that it costs money for the police board to do its job, just as it costs money for the police to do their job, yet I feel the expense is more than justified. Both are tremendously important; if only it were as easy to finance civilian review bodies such as the police board as it is for police to obtain grant money in the name of prohibition.

I sincerely hope the City Council will not choose to damage police accountability further. I hope I'll always be able to think of my police department as a valued public service, not an antagonistic occupying force. I hope that when I look at a police officer, I'll see a neighbor who's looking out for me, not a hired gun who's only interested in arresting somebody — anybody — just to meet a quota.

If the people are denied a role in the policing of their community, justice is compromised, and intimidation takes its place. I would rather work with the police than fear them.

Offshore drilling gets green light

■ The United States will offer the first new oil leases in the Gulf of Mexico in more than a decade.

By John Heilprin
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Bush administration is proposing the first new offshore drilling in the Gulf of Mexico in more than a decade with plans to offer new oil and gas leases in an area covering 1.47 million acres, Interior Secretary Gale Norton announced Monday.

The lease area along the Outer Continental Shelf — at least 100 miles from the shorelines of Florida, Alabama, and Mississippi — has enough oil to run a million families' cars for six years and enough natural gas to heat the homes of a million families for 15 years, she said.

"Clearly, development of resources in the [area] is an important part of our national energy strategy," she told reporters. "My decision today represents a very reasonable compromise."

A final decision on the sale will be made in October and, if approved, an auction for the leases would take place in December, Norton said.

Interior officials said they expect the auction to raise $136 million. Since 1982, the government has collected $110.4 billion from its oil leases. Drilling could begin in the next two to 10 years, officials said.

White House spokesman Ari Fleischer said President Bush listened to the people of Florida and worked with governors of states adjoining the Gulf of Mexico to "come out with a plan that is environmentally sensitive and balanced."

The area, known as Lease Sale 181, originally covered 5.9 million acres when it was proposed by the Clinton administration in 1997 after consultations with then-Florida Gov. Lawton Chiles.

Opposition from Florida's tourist industry and environmentalists delayed the sale. Bush revived the plan when he took office, but it met with immediate opposition from his brother, Jeb Bush, who succeeded Chiles as Florida's governor.

Speaking from his parents' summer home in Kennebunkport, Maine, Jeb Bush said the compromise "reflects significant progress in Florida's fight to protect our coastline."

"Any lease sales that do occur in the 181 area will occur off the coast of Alabama, not Florida," he said. "Floridians have spoken loud and clear, and their voices have been heard by President Bush."

Charles Lee, the senior vice president of the Florida Audubon Society, said the proposed sale "sounds like a big improvement over what was put on the table in Lease Sale 181."

"I think most of us would prefer to prevent drilling anywhere in the eastern Gulf of Mexico, but it sounds like it's moving in the right direction, and the right direction is as far away from Florida as we can get it," he said.

Some environmental groups were still upset.

"More rigs mean more pipelines and tankers, and thus a higher risk to Florida and Alabama's coastal economies and fisheries," said Frank Jackalone, the Sierra Club's Florida staff director.

The House, with Florida Reps. Jim Davis, a Democrat, and Joe Scarborough, a Republican, leading the effort, voted last week to block the sale as part of an appropriations bill for the Interior Department. The Senate has not acted on the legislation, and it could be September before any ban could become law.

While the decision reduces the size of the leasing area, Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla., expressed worry that it also might foreshadow more drilling and exploration.

"Now is the time to begin serious consideration of a national energy policy that doesn't put sensitive coastlines or other environmental systems at risk in order to drain America first," he said.

Sen. Bill Nelson, D-Fla., called the proposal "the proverbial camel's nose under the tent — to allow big oil companies into the rest of the Gulf of Mexico."

The sale area originally came as close as 17 miles to Pensacola in Florida's Panhandle. The area being offered for lease was reduced to one-fourth its original size in response to widespread opposition in Florida and from environmentalists nationwide.

The new lease area would begin 285 miles west of Tampa and would be at least 138 miles from Panama City, Fla. It also is 146 miles from Port Fourchon, La., but only 64 miles from Venice, La., Interior Department officials said.

Oil and gas rigs now dot the western and central waters of the Gulf of Mexico, but no federal lease has been offered in the eastern gulf since 1988. Officials estimate that the new, reduced lease area contains at least 185 million barrels of oil and 1.25 trillion cubic feet of natural gas.

All but one of Florida's 23 House members voted against offshore oil drilling. Many said they now support the administration's proposal, partly because Florida risked infringing on neighboring states that want the oil-leasing revenues.

"There's only so far we can push our sovereign rights," said Rep. Mark Foley, R-Fla. "It's only so long before the state's going to look a spoilsport in the equation."

closed from June 24 to July 10. Pohl has consistently declined to comment on the bar's legal troubles.

"There was apparently some confusion as to whether it would be 15 or 21 days," Walding said. "I insisted it serve the standard 21 days."

"Twenty-one days is heavy time ... I'm sure they won't do it again."

Three charges — two for selling alcohol to already intoxicated customers and one for selling to a minor — were dropped as part of the agreement.

The state requires that penalties of this nature be served within 60 days of the judgment or settlement between the bar owner and the state, Walding said. The June 24 through July 15 dates enable the bar to meet the 60-day guideline and come at a time when it may be affected financially — the summer school session.

"I wasn't willing to let them do it when school was not in session," Walding said. "The punishment had to have some meaning."

In February, the attorney general's office charged the Union Bar with five counts of indecent exposure, serving alcohol to minors, and knowingly giving alcohol to intoxicated contestants. During two of the contests, police officers observed as some of the nine participants exposed themselves, according to police reports.

Police forewarned Pohl by requesting that he post signs discouraging nudity, but no signs were ever posted, police reports said.

Since its closing, the Union Bar has been advertising for Malone's Irish Pub, 121 Iowa Ave., which is also owned by Pohl. Walding said the advertising is permissible because the two businesses are separately licensed. Although the Union did not have to shut down completely, because most of its income is derived from alcohol sales, there is little purpose in remaining open, he said.

Restaurants will usually stay open under similar circumstances because most of their income is derived from food sales.

Locals getting fired up for the Fourth of July

permission to shoot off fireworks, which is otherwise illegal, according to Iowa state law. The figure increases every year, said Carol Peters, the administrative assistant to the board.

The fireworks application asks for such specifics as the planned location of the display and the qualifications of the individual in charge. It also contains questions on applicants' experience and whether they have been certified by the Pyrotechnic Guild International — meaning they have gone under instruction by a group such as Stump Town Shooters to learn basic fireworks standards, including safety precautions.

The supervisors generally never turn down applications, Peters said, adding that most are for family and neighborhood celebrations. Individuals must apply seven days before they plan to use the explosives, so it's too late now to be approved by the board for the Fourth, she said.

"It's a whole different feel," Zdrzil said of private shows. "We don't spend nearly the amount of money [as public shows], and you feel much more a part of the show because the fireworks are closer."

But whether fireworks are showcased in a private or public display, the same patriotism is celebrated, he said.

For the past few years, Iowa City and Coralville have planned their fireworks shows for separate evenings. Coralville's display will take place on Wednesday in Morrison Park, and Iowa City's festivities will start at 3:30 p.m. Saturday in Lower City Park. Both events will feature a variety of activities, including bands and games, before the fireworks commence at dusk.

"We didn't want to compete with Coralville," said Iowa

City Jaycees President Ellen Twinam, regarding the city's decision to push back the show until the weekend. The Jaycees has coordinated Iowa City's Fourth of July activities — which will cost approximately $50,000 this year — for the past 40 years.

Other Iowa City events taking place around the same time as the Fourth of July, including the jazz fest, also indicated a need to delay the show, said some city officials.

Having the towns' events on different dates makes the holiday last a little longer, and people can enjoy more than one show, City Manager Steve Atkins said.

For the first time, this year's fireworks display will be choreographed to music.

Mideast truce on verge of collapse

MIDEAST

"The events of the last couple of days show how fragile the cease-fire is, and all indications are now that it will not hold," Roed-Larsen said as he emerged from a meeting with Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat in the Gaza Strip. "It's now incredibly important for all parties concerned to hold back."

Meeting in Washington with Israeli military chief of staff Lt. Gen. Shaul Mofaz, Secretary of State Colin Powell pressed Israel to act with restraint, but Mofaz emerged defiant.

"We will not give up; we will not be defeated by Palestinian terrorist activity," he said.

The Palestinians had not made enough of an effort to implement the cease-fire arranged three weeks ago by CIA Director George Tenet, and no truce was in effect, Mofaz said.

The State Department agreed the Palestinians had not done enough to fight terror and end violence. But spokesman Richard Boucher also said "we remain opposed to Israel's policy of targeted killings."

Israeli and Palestinian security commanders met in Israel late Monday at the request of the United States, Palestinian officials said. They said a CIA official also attended. The meetings are a key element of the cease-fire program.

Palestinian officials, requesting anonymity, said the meeting was stormy, and no progress was made.

Palestinian security chief Amin el-Hindi blamed Israel for the escalation and said the Palestinians had carried out their obligations.

Yarden Vatikay, a spokesman for Israeli Defense Minister Binyamin Ben-Eliezer, said the meeting was called because of the violence and the "very, very, very unsatisfactory situation." He said Monday's Palestinian attacks showed that there is no effort to stop the violence.

"What cease-fire?" Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon said. "There still has not been a day of quiet."

Aharon Abidian, 41, from the northern Israeli city of Zichron Yaakov, was shot and killed at point-blank range while shopping at a group of market stalls near the Arab village of Baka al Gharbieh in Israel, close to the West Bank, the army said.

In the working-class town of Yehud, two car bombs exploded simultaneously in parking lots about 500 yards apart Monday morning.

The explosives, placed in the back of trucks, ignited small fires, blew out car windows, and damaged at least one building. One bomb went off near a kindergarten, and both were detonated by a bomber using a cell phone. No one was hurt.

The Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, a radical Palestinian group, claimed responsibility, saying the blasts were revenge for the deaths of Palestinians on Sunday.

Later, an Israeli motorist was shot and seriously wounded in the West Bank, near the Palestinian city of Nablus, the military said. Israeli settlers said a Jewish shepherd was missing in the Hebron region of the West Bank.

Also Monday, Israeli soldiers fatally shot a Palestinian taxi driver, Radwan Ishtayeh, 32, near a military checkpoint in the West Bank, according to a Nablus hospital. The Israeli military said soldiers thought the man was planting a bomb, but he was just unloading produce.

After a visit from Powell last week, Israelis and Palestinians went to work for one week of calm, followed by a six-week "cooling off period." However, Israel says the clock has yet to start ticking because of the violence.

"What does Nike have that we are willing to prostitute ourselves for? I want to ask President Coleman — why are you selling out so cheap?" said Iowa City City Councilor Irvin Pfab to a group of approximately 30 students and community members holding signs that read, "Don't change the code, dump Nike's load."

"All the corporations had to say [to be heard] was, 'We object to this,'" Killmeier said, adding that students have to work much harder to reach the administration. "Dialogue hasn't historically made a difference — it's top down. The president [of the university] is the one making all of the decisions."

SAS members said their efforts have been undermined by university deadline extensions and revisions of the code.

But the executive director of the Worker Rights Consortium, Scott Nova, has said that while the clarifications and extensions are not ideal, they will not impede the effectiveness of the code. The real question, he said, will be how the university deals with a licensee that violates the agreement.

SAS members want to make it clear that exceptions were made for Nike and that, symbolically, the university shouldn't have a relationship with it, said UI graduate student and SAS member Laura Crossett.

"We're going to continue to raise the issue that the decision wasn't made democratically," said UI senior and SAS member David Burnett.

SAS members say their next efforts will target sports contracts — especially basketball coach Steve Alford's contract with Nike — because such contracts are not covered in the conduct code.

Karen Kubby, speaking on behalf of Human Rights Iowa City and the Emma Goldman Clinic, used a sports analogy to more clearly communicate to "Hawkeye fans" who might not understand the implications of the university's adaptation of the original code.

A basketball court is demarcated by a thick black line around the edge, she said, "... if they step over the line, they should lose the ball — they should lose the contract."

Speakers at the rally also included Sen. Joe Bolkcom, D-Iowa City, Councilor Steven Kanner, UI classics Assistant Professor John Garcia, and Sara Quigley, a representative of the National Interfaith Committee for Worker Justice.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You will be tempted to spend money you don't have. Be careful if you are forced to deal with people who are promising you the world. You need to do a little research before you make a decision.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Family get-togethers will not turn out as planned. Don't let things frustrate you. You will meet romantic possibilities if you get out with friends. Your ability to be mysterious and enticing will make you difficult to resist.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your best bet will be work today. You can make your point heard if you voice your opinion to superiors. Advancement can be yours for the asking. Don't be afraid to speak your mind.
CANCER (June 21-July 22): You will want to exploit your creative talents. Don't worry if someone doesn't like your style. You have to please yourself when it comes to artistic ventures.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Don't let someone you live with ruin your mood or your day. Stay calm and focus on getting your chores done. Plan to get together with friends who won't provoke you.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You will want to get out with your friends. You need to spend some quality time just reminiscing. You may even want to plan an outing that will include your mate. Travel for pleasure should be on your agenda.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Insincere gestures of friendliness are likely at social functions. Be careful of empty promises concerning business. Avoid joint financial temptations. You would be wise to work on your own.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Don't be too quick to judge others. You may have invalid information that will cause you to make wrong choices. Self-improvement projects will be successful and satisfying.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Uncertainty regarding your direction is likely. Look into career choices and courses being offered. Beware of individuals who are not reliable or well-known to you. Keep your patience. Sometimes, that's the only thing you've got.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Sudden romantic infatuations could lead to a serious and prosperous connection. If you join intellectual or cultural groups, you will meet individuals who stimulate you. Be understanding of those who are in circumstances less fortunate than yours.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Business trips will appear to be fruitful; however, watch out for empty promises that could end up being quite costly. Don't celebrate before you sign the deal. Keep track of your finances.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Travel plans should be made. You can start self-improvement projects that will enhance your appearance. Avoid letting others influence your decisions. You have to follow your intuition.

quote of the day

I never got hugs before. Now the public shows me so much love. Women are my biggest defenders. It's that bad-boy syndrome. Now girls chase me.

— O.J. Simpson, on his relationships with women since being acquitted of the murder of his ex-wife, Nicole Brown.

4th of July fun & safety tips

- Insects can have a way of really "bugging" a person when outdoors. Protect against mosquito bites by locking yourself inside for days.
- When lighting firecrackers, do not point them directly at your brother — no matter what he just called you.
- Before hosting a picnic, make sure that all mayonnaise and meat products were made after 1979.
- As soon as the fireworks display starts, act startled and run.
- July weather can at times be dangerously hot. Keep your cool by removing all clothing.
- Tasty as they might seem, fireworks do not make healthy snacks.
- Seriously, buddy, nobody wants to see your "4th of July spectacle."
- Commemorate the American Revolution by waving your musket and tracking down some of those damned redcoats.
- Loudly declare independence from your boss — especially if you suspect that he's a redcoat.
- When watching fireworks, remember that you're not obligated to cheer along with everybody else. Boo and heckle as you see fit.

Ramirez

TORONTO (AP) Ramirez hit his 25th homer and runs during Boston's scoring game of leading the Red Sox to a 3-1 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays Tuesday.

Ramirez's three-run homer in the fifth inning gave the Blue Jays a 3-1 lead. Esteban Loaiza (5-1) pitched five innings, striking out six batters. Brian Daubach (1-1) pitched four innings, striking out four batters. Nomo allowed four hits in six innings, striking out five batters.

The Red Sox beat the first on Ramon and Lou Merloni double.

Loaiza allowed four hits and three getting only one came on a caught ball to 1-8 in his last.

Yankees 7, De

NEW YORK — Choke an 0-for-16 slugger in the seventh inning, and the Yankees beat the Tampa Bay Rays, 7-1, Monday night.

Mike Mussina (1-0) pitched four straight innings, snapping a 1-1 tie with Albie Lopez, who became the first AL pitcher to go 10 consecutive days without a hit.

Roenicke sign with Flyers

VOORHEES, N.J. (AP) The Philadelphia Flyers signed Philadelphia Phillies pitcher Roenicke to a one-year contract Monday.

"I just can't wait to be happier than any of the six-time All-Star conference."

"You will not, will you be pointed," he told Flyers manager Lonn Loney. "And all you get going! I want to be the Flyers and Roenicke agreement on the days before he was unrestricted free agent. Coyotes allowed the talk, which Roenicke move."

BASEBALL ROUNDUP
Ramirez, Red Sox hammer Blue Jays by 12
 TORONTO (AP) — Manny Ramirez hit his AL-leading 25th homer and drove in four runs during Boston's highest-scoring game of the season, leading the Red Sox over the Toronto Blue Jays, 16-4, Monday.
 Ramirez's three-run shot off Esteban Loaiza (5-9) keyed a five-run first inning. It was his fifth homer at SkyDome this season, tying the record for most homers by an opponent shared by Jose Canseco (1991) and Brady Anderson (1996).
 Boston built an 11-0 lead in the third inning for Hideo Nomo (7-4).
 The Blue Jays lost three times to Boston and dropped six games below .500 at 38-44. Before the series, manager Buck Martinez had hinted that Toronto would dump salary if they lost the four-game set.
 Brian Daubach added a two-run homer for the Red Sox. He went 8-for-15 with 10 RBIs in the series.
 Nomo allowed one run on four hits in six innings. Nomo struck out five and walked four.
 The Red Sox broke loose in the first on Ramirez's homer and Lou Merloni's two-run double.
 Loaiza allowed five runs on four hits and three walks while getting only one out — which came on a caught stealing. He fell to 1-8 in his last 12 starts.
Yankees 7, Devil Rays 1
 NEW YORK — Chuck Knoblauch broke an 0-for-16 slide with a three-run homer that capped a six-run seventh inning, and the New York Yankees beat the Tampa Bay Devil Rays, 7-1, Monday to complete a four-game sweep.
 Mike Mussina (9-7) won his fourth straight start and Luis Sojo snapped a 1-1 tie with a two-run single off Albie Lopez (3-11), who became the first AL pitcher to lose 10 consecutive decisions since

Roenick signs deal with Flyers
 VOORHEES, N.J. (AP) — His deal with the Flyers complete, Jeremy Roenick slipped a No. 97 jersey over his black shirt sleeves and hugged the team chairman.
 The new Philadelphia center couldn't contain his enthusiasm after signing a five-year, $37.5 million contract Monday.
 "I just can't wait to get going. I am happier than any of you guys know," the six-time All-Star said at a news conference.
 "You will not, will not, be disappointed," he told Flyers Chairman Ed Snider. "And all you Flyers fans, let's get going! I want to win! Let's go!"
 The Flyers and Roenick reached agreement on the deal June 29, two days before he was to become an unrestricted free agent. The Phoenix Coyotes allowed the two parties to talk, which Roenick called "a classy move."

couple of days. The Mariners, with the best record in the majors, also will have first baseman John Olerud, second baseman Bret Boone, and designated hitter Edgar Martinez in the starting lineup July 10 in their home ballpark. "I think a lot more guys deserve to be in there, like some of our pitchers," Martinez said. "They all deserve to be there, too. So many guys have done such a great job." The last team to have four elected starters was Cleveland in 1999 — Roberto Alomar, Manny Ramirez, Kenny Lofton, and Jim Thome. Had Bell beat out Ripken, the Mariners would have become the first team with five elected starters since Cincinnati in 1977. "It would have been great to see David in there, but Cal is not a surprise because of what he means to this game," Olerud said. Ripken finished with 1,108,383 votes, beating out Bell's total of 1,063,772. There were 716,325 online ballots cast in the final week after stadium voting closed, and a total of 2,231,137 ballots cast online. "It's pretty special any time you're on the same team as Cal Ripken, any time you're on the same field," said AL manager Joe Torre of the New York Yankees. "I know the people of Seattle will give him his due."

Barry Bonds, leading the majors with 39 home runs, drew an NL-leading 2,140,315 votes. The San Francisco outfielder will be making his eighth start and his 10th All-Star appearance. Giants second baseman Jeff Kent and shortstop Rich Aurilia also drew starts. They are the first NL middle infielders to be elected from the same team since Ozzie Smith and Tommy Herr of St. Louis in 1985. Alex Rodriguez, who left the Mariners after last season as a free agent and signed with Texas, drew his fourth start at shortstop. Rangers catcher Ivan Rodriguez earned his ninth consecutive start and 10th appearance overall. Also starting for the AL are outfielders Juan Gonzalez of Cleveland and Ramirez of Boston.

Martin or Tim Henman in the quarterfinals. "This match will give me as much confidence as I can get," Federer said. "This is the biggest win of my life." Sampras' ability to win already was in doubt because he hadn't captured a tournament since last year's Wimbledon. Now he's even struggling on grass, his favorite surface. He had problems in the second round here against the world's 265th-ranked player, Barry Cowan, before winning in five sets. The tournament goes on without either of the top seeds. Martina Hingis lost on opening day last week. The matchups for today's women's quarterfinal matches were set after seven straight-set matches Monday. Australian Open and French Open winner Jennifer Capriati faces Serena Williams, defending champion Venus Williams meets Nathalie Tauziat; 1999 winner Lindsay Davenport plays Kim Clijsters, and Justine Henin takes on Conchita Martinez. The men's quarterfinals, scheduled for Wednesday, include Andre Agassi, the 1992 champion, against Nicolas Escude, ranked 38th in the world. Escude upset Lleyton Hewitt, ranked fifth. Other pairings are Goran Ivanisevic vs. Marat Safin, and Pat Rafter vs. Thomas Enqvist. Agassi won his fourth consecutive straight-set match, beating Nicolas Kiefer, 6-3, 7-5, 7-5, then talked about Sampras. "You've got to give the guy a lot of credit for what he's done," Agassi said. In the fifth set, Federer and Sampras held their serves through 11 games. Then Sampras, who had won his previous serve without allowing a point, faltered. He went down 0-30 before hitting a service winner. But that was his last point. Federer returned the next serve, and Sampras hit a forehand volley into the net. Then Sampras hit a hard deep serve, but Federer was ready. He drove a forehand down the line, and Sampras couldn't get over in time. His racket didn't even touch the ball. Sampras' Wimbledon winning streak began in the first round in 1997 with a straight-set victory over Mikael Tillstrom.

and rookie camp. On June 27, Oliver watched the 58 names called in the NBA draft. But Oliver was not extremely disappointed when his name was not included. "It was something I prepared myself for," he said. Oliver said he fits into a large group of borderline players who will try to make it in free agent camps. If the Warriors don't bite, there is still a chance for him to spark enough interest by another team when he plays on a summer league team in Los Angeles.

Oliver said he was going to have to prove himself in the camp after not being taken in the draft. "I've got to prove I can play good defense and knock down the NBA [3-pointer]," he said. In the second game of the evening, Reggie Evans, who scored a personal Prime Time-100 20 points, and the rest of I m p r i n t e d Sportswear/Goodfellow Printing teammates scrapped their way to a 95-87 victory over Lepic-Kroeger Realtors/Active Endeavors. UNI player Aaron Mittendorf led all scorers with 27 points and seven rebounds.

Lepic-Kroeger was led by Hawkeye sophomore Courtney Scott's 24 points and 8 rebounds. His teammate, Jared Reiner, had 11 points and 8 rebounds in the loss. Community Motors/Goodfellow 92, HawksNestOnline.com 84. Duez Hendersson led the Community Motors team with 25 points and 12 rebounds. Closely behind was David Willock with 21 points and 4 rebounds. Craig Callahan led HawksNestOnline.com with 21 points and 13 rebounds, with the help of Brandon Sain, who chipped in 19 points and 5 rebounds. Iowa City Ready Mix/Deli-Mart 127, Fitzpatrick's, 113. The duo of Acie Earl and Donald Stokes led Ready Mix to victory. Both scored 34 points. Earl also grabbed 10 rebounds. Incoming Iowa Pierre Pierce was the leading scorer for Fitzpatrick's with 33 points on 10 for 15 shooting. Sean Sonderleiter teamed up with his future teammate in the losing effort, scoring 28 and notching 5 rebounds. Prime Time League action resumes Thursday. ## Sampras falls in round 4

Sampras' Wimbledon mastery ends in a fourth-round loss to teen.

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Pete Sampras' masterful run at Wimbledon ended stunningly Monday, his bid for a record-tying eighth title stopped by teenager Roger Federer.

The defending champion and winner of seven Wimbledon titles since 1993, Sampras was upset 7-6 (7), 5-7, 6-4, 6-7 (2), 7-5 in the fourth round.

It's his earliest exit at the grass-court event in 10 years.

"It was his moment," Sampras said. "It's grass-court tennis. One minute you feel like you have it, the next minute you're walking off the court."

The loss ended Sampras' 31-match Wimbledon winning streak and his chance to match Bjorn Borg's five consecutive titles from 1976-80. And Willie Renshaw's record of eight overall championships, set in the 1880s, is still safe.

All at the hands of the 19-year-old Federer, who lost in the first round in both of his other appearances at Wimbledon and has one career title to Sampras' 63.

"I fought from the first to last point," Federer said. "It's a great feeling I've never had before."

He never lost his composure and used a strong serve to keep Sampras off-balance.

When Federer hit a forehand on a return to break Sampras' serve and win the match, he dropped to his knees, rolled on his side, and put a hand over his face. Then he stood and shook Sampras' hand.

Federer raised his arms and blew a kiss to the crowd, then cried as he collected his equipment. Sampras sat down briefly before the players walked off together.

Federer, a Swiss player seeded 15th, is one of the best young talents on the tour. He was the Wimbledon junior champion in 1998 and won his first ATP title in Milan last February.

At the French Open last month, he lost to eventual runner-up Alex Corretja in the quarterfinals.

The 29-year-old Sampras has a record 13 Grand Slam championships and was seeded first here. He won Wimbledon from 1993-95 and 1997-2000, losing to eventual champion Richard Krajicek in the 1996 quarterfinals.

Sampras is ranked only sixth, partially because he played only 10 tournaments this year before Wimbledon — and won none.

He was unbeaten in his five other five-set matches in his Wimbledon career.

"I didn't know Pete's record in five sets," Federer said. "I felt in five sets I was really good."

Ichiro gets most All-Star votes

Cal Ripken rallies from 44,000-vote deficit to earn the start at third base for the 17th time.

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Seattle outfielder Ichiro Suzuki became the first rookie to draw the most votes and was among four Mariners elected by fans Monday to start next week's All-Star game at Safeco Field.

"Of course I was surprised. I did not expect or imagine that I would be the starter in the All-Star game," Ichiro said through an interpreter before Seattle's game Monday night at Texas.

Cal Ripken, who will retire after this season, overtook Seattle's David Bell in the final week to earn his 17th start and 19th appearance. The Baltimore third baseman rallied from a 44,000-vote deficit to pass Bell and Anaheim's Troy Glaus and win by 45,000 votes.

Boosted by paper ballots cast in his homeland for the first time and Internet support worldwide, the Japanese-born Ichiro received 3,373,035 votes.

The 27-year-old right fielder leads the majors in hits and stolen bases.

"Major league baseball fans know baseball talent. I try to play better for them. I appreciate that I got so many votes," he said.

"This is my first year in the major leagues and the All-Star game is in Seattle, so it means a lot to me," he said. "I have been here for only three months, but the people here appreciate my talent."

Ichiro was the first rookie to be elected since Sandy Alomar Jr. for Cleveland in 1990. Hideo Nomo was a rookie when he was selected by NL manager Felipe Alou as the starting pitcher for the 1995 All-Star game.

Ichiro was picked on 682,815 of the 835,000 paper ballots cast in Japan. The seven-time batting champion from the Orix Blue Wave got a total of 1,217,680 online votes — the commissioner's office was still counting how many of them came from Japan, and was not expected to know for a

PRIME TIME LEAGUE

Dean Oliver scores 45 points in PTL

Oliver, although overlooked by the NBA draft, overshadows competition in the PTL.

By Tyler Lechtenberg
The Daily Iowan

Dean-o did it again. Former Hawkeye guard Dean Oliver, who was not selected in the NBA draft, scorched the nets with a game-high 45 points as Merrill Lynch/Nike topped Mike Gatens Real Estate/Highland Park Development, 104-96.

After scoring 51 points in earlier Prime Time League action, Oliver added nine assists and hit 7-9 free throws in Monday night's win. Ex-Southern Illinois player Monte Jenkins added 16 points for Merrill Lynch.

Former Hawkeye Darryl Moore led Gatens with 39 points and 9 rebounds. Ex-

Briar Cliff player Jeff Werning chipped in with 19 points, and ex-Drake player Kevin Samms contributed 14 points and 14 rebounds in the loss.

But these performances were not enough to overcome the determined Oliver.

He attacked all night long, especially outside the 3-point arc, where he was 10-22. He said he is using the league to work on his outside shot.

"There are not a whole lot of NBA centers here — no 7-footers who can jump two feet above the rim — so I'm taking a lot of outside shots," he said.

Oliver may be lighting up the scoreboards in Prime Time, but on Friday, he's going to see a completely different breed of competition as he heads out to California to take part in the Golden State Warriors' free-agent

Recker will be fine by season's start

Hawkeye basketball fans can breathe a sigh of relief because Luke Recker's knee should not be an issue when the season begins, the Hawkeye shooting guard said Monday.

"I've made quite a bit of progress," he said. "I'll be 100 percent when the season starts."

Recker fractured his kneecap in the Jan. 27 home game against Indiana and did not play for the rest of the season.

Recker feeling fine

Doctors are happy with the way his knee is healing, Recker said, but they are still going to take his rehabilitation slowly.

"It's something that just takes time," he said.

He said he's going to make sure he gets in good shape and regains all of his quadriceps strength before he tests the knee in a game situation.

Recker attended last night's Prime Time League action to watch his four newest teammates play; he said he will not join them on the court in any PTL games.

Will Barry Bonds beat McGwire's home-run record?

Barry Bonds is an enigma. He's known as one of the most arrogant baseball stars, yet now, when the public is most in awe of his skills, he's apathetic.

Bonds has said all along that he doesn't want to have Mark McGwire's home-run record. And that's precisely why he'll get it — he's more focused on a loftier goal.

In Bonds' mind, the most important honor is wearing a World Series ring, not garnering another individual accolade for himself.

Bonds is a team player who would rather hit a single and drive in a couple of runs rather than swing for the fences on every pitch, à la Jose Canseco. Bonds' situational hitting is what makes him more dangerous than McGwire ever was; pitchers can't make a mistake and then on the pitch instead of just being able to stay away from his power zone.

Doubters say Bonds won't get the record because he doesn't have anyone to push him, as McGwire had Sammy Sosa. Even though Bonds may be going solo on this one, don't expect him to crack under the nation's magnifying glass, because, honestly, the man just doesn't care about getting the record.

Still, the only thing that stands between Bonds and the record is not his nerves, it's the nerves of his opponents — he's been walked 78 times through Sunday, 21 more than the next National League player.

Don't let his facade fool you. Barry Bonds may act like he doesn't give two hoots about breaking the single-season home-run record, but any red blooded American would love to say he or she hit more home-runs in one season than anybody else.

Bonds is no different.

He wants this record, and while he is a more dangerous all-around batter than McGwire, he still swings for the fences on occasion. The number of to-the-fence swings could increase with all the hoopla surrounding him and the record.

To say that the media pressure won't get to Bonds is foolish. Nobody, not even Barry Bonds, can avoid the possible media barrage that awaits him down the road as he nears 70. The only difference is that when Mark McGwire and Sammy Sosa were doing it, everybody wanted them to. The media and public ate up the two heroes. With Bonds, both media and fans are a little more skeptical. I'm not saying people don't want him to hit more than 70, but they will likely be more hesitant to rally around him than they were with Sosa and McGwire. If Bonds keeps his interview-dodging antics up, he could antagonize the media and public and turn them against him.

It's hard to hit 71 home-runs when nobody wants you to.

Not to mention it's just hard to hit 71 home runs period. Bonds could hit a major slump in August. He could get injured. He could run into even more pitchers who won't throw to him, especially if the Giants are in the playoff hunt, which they very well could be come September.
